It was a happy day for music lovers when officials of the Berkshire Festival decided to move last Sunday afternoon's Mozart program from the Theater-Concert Hall into the big shed at Tanglewood. The popularity of so-called small concerts has been growing rapidly. What with the small hall seating only 1200, there have been as many as 5000 attentive listeners on the lawn for some of these programs. Hundreds more would like to have enjoyed these early Festival programs but stayed away because the Theater-Concert Hall was a sellout. So why shouldn't the affair be moved into the vast fan-shaped shed that can comfortably seat 6000 or better? George Judd, the manager, and Conductor Charles Munch are to be congratulated for their decision. This afternoon's program which is to be broadcasted to the world will also be heard in the shed. Orchestra and audience alike enjoyed the change in scene a week back and it is hoped that another season will find all concerts scheduled for the Music Shed.

Attendance figures should reach a new high at Tanglewood this week end. The third and final week end of the small concerts offers an excellent variety. Last night it was Haydn. This afternoon the concent will include the works of Strauss, Ravel, Prokofieff, Milhaud, and Foss. Following this afternoon's intermission, Lukas Foss will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in his own composition, "A Parable of Death," for narrator, chorus, tenor solo and orchestra. Vera Zorina will be the narrator.

Friday night the main portion of the Festival season gets underway. Thursday night concerts will be no more. Instead the management has scheduled the big week-end programs for Friday and Saturday nights, and Sunday afternoons. Series A will open Friday night with Dr. Munch conducting the works of Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Copland and Ravel. Soloist for Mendelssohn's violin concerto in E minor will be Zino Francescatti, summer resident of Monterey. The following night the program will feature the works of Schumann, Foss, Mendelssohn and Hindemith. Soloist for Foss' piano concerto No. 2 will be the composer himself, Lucas Foss.

The Tanglewood Tale

Howard S. Babbitt, Jr.

The Tanglewood Tale

Great music, played by a superb symphony orchestra, under the summer sky. What more could a music lover ask for?

BY GEORGE MAREK
Music Editor, Good Housekeeping

Most sequels do not turn out well. Nathaniel Hawthorne's did. The success of A Wonder-Book, a volume of classical legends retold for children, prompted him to write a second. To gain peace and quiet for this new work, Hawthorne sought the proper retreat, a gentlemanly, New England sort of retreat, which he found in a little red cottage on the grounds of an estate in the Berkshire Hills. This unspectacular and comfortable, verdant and restful countryside between Lenox and Stockbridge, Massachusetts, near the shores of Lake Mahkeenac, is called Tanglewood. Hawthorne's new book, published exactly a hundred years ago, was entitled Tanglewood Tales.

Today, at Tanglewood, one can see a new sequel to Hawthorne's A Wonder-Book, whose opening sentence reads: "Beneath the porch of the country-seat called Tanglewood, one fine autumnal morning, was assembled a merry party of little folks . . ."

Now, for nineteen seasons, a merry party of big and little folks has assembled annually at Tanglewood to hear music. For seventeen seasons that music has been played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The Berkshire Festival, inaugurated in 1934, has become our most important summer music event. It has grown steadily in several ways: in the number of people who come from near and far to listen, in the variety and richness of the repertoire they hear, and in the quantity of music played. Almost more significant than the main concerts in the Shed (now three series of three each) are the tributary functions of Tanglewood: its music school with its five departments of music studies. All over the estate music is being fiddled or sung or studied. Students rush around with an air of cheerful importance. Professionals are as enthusiastic as amateurs. The rickety old house on top of the hill spills over with young people carrying scores. The trees themselves seem to rustle to man-made rhythms.

The measure of the festival's strength was tested not early in the game but late, in 1951, when a crisis arose. The festival's dominant musical personality, Koussevitzky, had died. He, as inspired musician and shrewd impresario, had brought these summer meetings up from artistic insignificance to artistic and financial solvency. What would happen to the festival without him? What would happen to the school that had (Continued on page 236)

PROVIDENCE, R. I.
JOURNAL

JUL 10 1953

Tanglewood's First Concert Series Ends This Weekend

A HAYDN program next Saturday night and a miscellaneous program Sunday afternoon will bring to a close the series of three weekend concerts of the Berkshire Festival in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The following week the series of three weekend concerts in the Shed will begin.

Vera Zorina
Tanglewood narrator

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct both concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall. Each will feature a choral work. Saturday night's Haydn program will be the St. Theresa Mass, with chorus and soloists, Hugh Ross conducting; Symphony in C minor, No. 95, and Symphony in G ("Military"), No. 100. The concert will begin at 8:30 o'clock.

The first part of the Sunday afternoon concert at 2:30 o'clock will be broadcast and will consist of Divertimento (after Couperin), Op.86, Strauss; "Le Tombeau de Couperin," Suite, Ravel; "Classical" Symphony, Op.25, Prokofieff, and "La Creation du Monde," Milhaud.

After the broadcast, Foss' "A Parable of Death," Cantata with narrator, chorus, tenor and orchestra, will be performed under the direction of the composer. Vera Zorina will be the narrator.

Cir. (D 130,147)

This Clipping From
SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-JOURNAL
JUL 9 1953

THRONG NEAR 'TANGLEWOOD' SHED. July scene in Lenox, Mass., during the Berkshire Festival. Charles Munch directs Boston symphony concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall and in the larger hall, known as The Shed, July 11-Aug. 16.

This Clipping From
LOWELL, MASS.
SUN
JUL 9 - 1953

MUSIC

By ALFRED W. BURKE

LOWELL — It has been announced by John C. Ribner, director of the Boston School of Music, that Mr. and Mrs. Paul E. Bordeleau of this city have been named to membership on the faculty. Mr. Bordeleau will head the department of theory and composing and Mrs. Bordeleau will teach piano and English.

Both local teachers are widely known in the field of teaching and musical activity. Mr. Bordeleau recently received his BM degree at the New England Conservatory where he majored in composition. Mrs. Bordeleau holds a diploma in piano pedagogy from the New England Conservatory of Music and a BA degree from West Virginia Institute of Technology.

Wesley Boynton, formerly of Dracut, and Morse Haithwaite, formerly of this city, are among the leaders in establishing opera in English throughout the summer theatre circuit. Both artists are connected with the Arundal Opera theatre in Maine which presents opera exclusively in English.

Incidentally, the Lowell musicians founded the company several seasons ago and have brought it to leadership in this field. Mr. Boynton besides being stage director sings most of the tenor leads in the various productions.

Mr. Haithwaite is musical director. He serves as musical coach and conductor. While in Lowell he was prominent as an organist and choir director.

Davis Schuman of Lawrence, and one of the world's leading trombonists, spent a few days in Lowell last week while visiting his life long friend, Michalos Giangrasso. Mr. Schuman, who is a member of the Metropolitan Opera company orchestra, is also noted for his many trombone recitals throughout the United States.

Since his advent into the professional field of music he has not only been concerned with musical performance, but has through his experience and study perfected a trombone with a slide that moves to the side instead of in the regular straight line. Though this latest accomplishment has brought him new honors in his chosen art, his first interest is concert playing.

Music Festival Program

The Saturday evening performance at the Berkshire Festival will be an all Bach list. Charles Munch, director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will conduct. A chamber music program will be given Sunday morning at 10 o'clock, and in the afternoon Mr. Munch will conduct another all Bach program.

In this latter concert Doriot Anthony will be the soloist in the "Suite No. 2 in B minor for Flute and Strings" and Hugh Ross will conduct the chorus and soloists in the Cantata [illegible]

This year marks the [illegible] anniversary [illegible] famed German [illegible] of the "Student Prince" [illegible] music by a [illegible] Zimmer [illegible] lished in German by [illegible] Scheffel [illegible] it [illegible] became [illegible] translated into English [illegible] Gould [illegible] can ambassador to G[illegible]

Good Housekeeping Aug/53.

The Tanglewood Tale

Howard S. Babbitt, Jr.

Great music, played by a superb symphony orchestra, under the summer sky. What more could a music lover ask for?

BY GEORGE MAREK
Music Editor, Good Housekeeping

Most sequels do not turn out well. Nathaniel Hawthorne's did. The success of A Wonder-Book, a volume of classical legends retold for children, prompted him to write a second. To gain peace and quiet for this new work, Hawthorne sought the proper retreat, a gentlemanly, New England sort of retreat, which he found in a little red cottage on the grounds of an estate in the Berkshire Hills. This unspectacular and comfortable, verdant and restful countryside between Lenox and Stockbridge, Massachusetts, near the shores of Lake Mahkeenac, is called Tanglewood. Hawthorne's new book, published exactly a hundred years ago, was entitled Tanglewood Tales.

Today, at Tanglewood, one can see a new sequel to Hawthorne's A Wonder-Book, whose opening sentence reads: "Beneath the porch of the country-seat called Tanglewood, one fine autumnal morning, was assembled a merry party of little folks . . ."

Now, for nineteen seasons, a merry party of big and little folks has assembled annually at Tanglewood to hear music. For seventeen seasons that music has been played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The Berkshire Festival, inaugurated in 1934, has become our most important summer music event. It has grown steadily in several ways: in the number of people who come from near and far to listen, in the variety and richness of the repertoire they hear, and in the quantity of music played. Almost more significant than the main concerts in the Shed (now three series of three each) are the tributary functions of Tanglewood: its music school with its five departments of music studies. All over the estate music is being fiddled or sung or studied. Students rush around with an air of cheerful importance. Professionals are as enthusiastic as amateurs. The rickety old house on top of the hill spills over with young people carrying scores. The trees themselves seem to rustle to man-made rhythms.

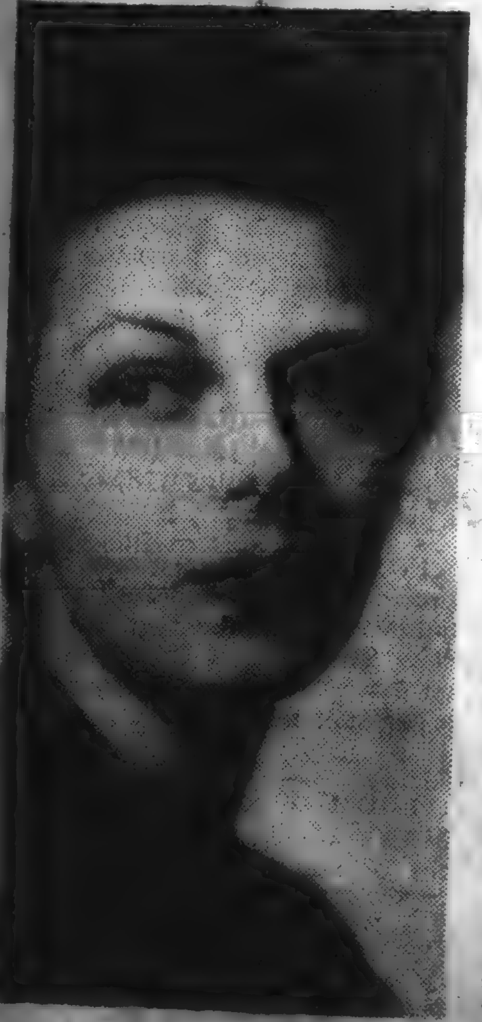
The measure of the festival's strength was tested not early in the game but late, in 1951, when a crisis arose. The festival's dominant musical personality, Koussevitzky, had died. He, as inspired musician and shrewd impresario, had brought these summer meetings up from artistic insignificance to artistic and financial solvency. What would happen to the festival without him? What would happen to the school that had (Continued on page 236)

PROVIDENCE, R. I.
JOURNAL

JUL 10 1953

Tanglewood's First Concert Series Ends This Weekend

A HAYDN program next Saturday night and a miscellaneous program Sunday afternoon will bring to a close the series of three weekend concerts of the Berkshire Festival in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The following week the series of three weekend concerts in the Shed will begin.



Vera Zorina
Tanglewood narrator

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct both concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall. Each will feature a choral work. Saturday night's Haydn program will be the St. Theresa Mass, with chorus and soloists, Hugh Ross conducting; Symphony in C minor, No. 95, and Symphony in G ("Military"), No. 100. The concert will begin at 8:30 o'clock.

The first part of the Sunday afternoon concert at 2:30 o'clock will be broadcast and will consist of Divertimento (after Couperin), Op.86, Strauss; "Le Tombeau de Couperin," Suite, Ravel; "Classical" Symphony, Op.25, Prokofieff, and "La Création du Monde," Milhaud.

After the broadcast, Foss' "A Parable of Death," Cantata with narrator, chorus, tenor and orchestra, will be performed under the direction of the composer. Vera Zorina will be the narrator.

Cir. (D 130,147)

This Clipping From
SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-JOURNAL
JUL 9 1953

THRONG NEAR 'TANGLEWOOD' SHED. July scene in Lenox, Mass., during the Berkshire Festival. Charles Munch directs Boston symphony concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall and in the larger hall, known as The Shed, July 11-Aug. 16.

This Clipping From
LOWELL, MASS.
SUN

JUL 9 - 1953

MUSIC

By ALFRED W. BURKE

LOWELL—It has been announced by John C. Ribner, director of the Boston School of Music, that Mr. and Mrs. Paul E. Bordeleau of this city have been named to membership on the faculty. Mr. Bordeleau will head the department of theory and composing and Mrs. Bordeleau will teach piano and English.

Both local teachers are widely known in the field of teaching and musical activity. Mr. Bordeleau recently received his BM degree at the New England Conservatory where he majored in composition. Mrs. Bordeleau holds a diploma in piano pedagogy from the New England Conservatory of Music and a BA degree from West Virginia Institute of Technology.

Wesley Boynton, formerly of Dracut, and Morse Haithwaite, formerly of this city, are among the leaders in establishing opera in English throughout the summer theatre circuit. Both artists are connected with the Arundal Opera theatre in Maine which presents opera exclusively in English.

Incidentally, the Lowell musicians founded the company several seasons ago and have brought it to leadership in this field. Mr. Boynton besides being stage director sings most of the tenor leads in the various productions.

Mr. Haithwaite is musical director. He serves as musical coach and conductor. While in Lowell he was prominent as an organist and choir director.

Davis Schuman of Lawrence, and one of the world's leading trombonists, spent a few days in Lowell last week while visiting his life long friend, [illegible]chalos Giangrasso. Mr. Schuman, who is a member of the Metropolitan Opera company orchestra, is also noted for his many trombone recitals throughout the United States.

Since his advent into the professional field of music he has not only been concerned with musical performance, but has through his experience and study perfected a trombone with a slide that moves to the side instead of in the regular straight line. Though this latest accomplishment has brought him new honors in his chosen art, his first interest is concert playing.

Music Festival Program

The Saturday evening performance at the Berkshire Festival will be an all Bach list. Charles Munch, director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will conduct. A chamber music program will be given Sunday morning at 10 o'clock. and in the afternoon Mr. Munch will conduct another all Bach program.

In this latter concert, Doriot Anthony will be the soloist in the "Suite No. 2, in B minor, for Flute and Strings," and Hugh Ross will conduct the chorus and soloists in the "Cantata No. 28."

This year marks the 100th anniversary of "Old Heidelberg," famed German song of the city of the "Student Prince." Set to music by a Mannhein conductor, Zimmermann, and originally published in German by Victor von Scheffel in 1853, it subsequently became world property and was translated into English by Jacob Gould Shurman, one-time American ambassador to Germany.

The Tanglewood Tale

(Continued from page 13)

produced Leonard B nstein and Mario Lanza? In 1951 Char Munch took over, and by the follow g season it was clear the public w willing to accept him. The impetus c he festival carried over. Munch had ved himself, and enthusiasm remain The result: The 1952 season had th largest attendance in the festival's hist , and 1953 is quite likely to top '52. school too is on its way under Mun

Why has Tangl od succeeded so well? Why does it tinue to succeed?
The answer is abs simple: quality.
Quality first in the estra itself. What we hear is really Boston Symphony Orchestra. No sub tions. The same men who play to in winter play together in sum Quality second in the sound. The c Shed, in which the major concerts given, is acoustically good. To be the Shed is no pleasure to the eye king as if someone had forgotten ver its ribs. But one can glance ou ard the summer sky and listen. Th no distortion of the brass tones, n oying echo, and except for the ch of sparrows or fast tremolos by g oppers, you hear as well as you wou a concert hall.

Quality there is in the program. The Boston Symph Orchestra does not subscribe to the lief that summer weather atrophies brains and people want nothing heavier than light "hammock reading." At Tanglewood it plays, as well as it can and with careful rehearsal, the same kind of program it would play in Boston in winter. In these respects Tanglewood differs from many other American summer music festivals, notably the Stadium Concerts in New York, which not only have to fight the noise of airplane engines but play under-rehearsed programs with an orchestra that can be called the New York Philharmonic-Symphony by courtesy only.

TANGLEWOOD has been called the American Salzburg. The comparison limps. Tanglewood, with its elms, pines, and birches, is a beautiful spot; but it is not nearly so beautiful or interesting as medieval Salzburg. Tanglewood is weak in opera presentation, which is Salzburg's strength. Tanglewood offers no plays, no art exhibits, no performances in ancient churches. On the other hand Tanglewood has more informal charm: Salzburg is a small festival for people with money. But Tanglewood serves thousands of people, many of whom can spend as little as a dollar and a half. You are quite welcome to dress in your summer tuxedo or your chiffon evening gown and sit in what are known as the boxes; but you are also quite welcome to dress in a sport shirt, to take your girl and a blanket, to sprawl on the lawn and perhaps do a bit of restrained love-making while the music is being played. You don't feel out of place if you aren't dressed up. The management does frown on girls in shorts and has even attempted to offer them paper skirts to cover their abbreviated costumes. But the skirts have been carried away as souvenirs, and the war on shorts has not been won. Aside from these eccentricities, the audience is one of the most attentive and well behaved in the world. What a pleasure to see so many young people there!

However, there is something amiss at Tanglewood, and the management should be farseeing enough to rectify it: Guests are far from comfortably housed and fed. At the height of the season many Berkshire hotelkeepers treat the public discourteously, do not respect reservations, serve bad food at ridiculously high prices. You can get something to eat on the estate in an open-air cafeteria, and these indifferent sandwiches and pallid coffee are preferable to battling your way into a restaurant where waitresses scowl. Every year hotelkeepers seem to be completely surprised by the avalanche of visitors. In fact Tanglewood works itself into such confusion that occasionally you can't see the wood for the tangle. Most people do not seem to mind. But if a festival is really to be a festival in which we can take pride, the physical well-being of its visitors must be considered. Hotels, restaurants, private boarding places, and tourist camps ought to be placed under a co-ordinating authority who would make sure you would be neither bilked nor pushed around.

SO THE success of Tanglewood is a triumph of music over matter. If you know what to expect, you won't be shocked. You will hear great music finely played in a romantic setting. The main event, the concerts in the Shed, begins on Friday, July 31. Herewith, the programs (unless otherwise noted, all concerts are conducted by Charles Munch; programs are subject to change):

Friday, July 31, 8:30 P.M.: Beethoven, Overture, "Leonore" No. 3; Mendelssohn, Violin Concerto (soloist, Zino Francescatti); Copland, "Appalachian Spring"; Ravel, "Bolero."
Saturday, Aug. 1, 8:30 P.M.: Schumann, "Manfred" Overture; Foss, Piano Concerto (the composer as soloist); Mendelssohn, "Italian" Symphony; Hindemith, Metamorphosis on Themes of Weber.
Sunday, Aug. 2, 2:30 P.M., Pierre Monteux, guest conductor: Tchaikovsky, Serenade for Strings; Symphony No. 5; Piano Concerto (soloist, Jorge Bolet).

Friday, Aug. 7, 8:30 P.M.: Berlioz, Dramatic Symphony "Romeo and Juliet."
Saturday, Aug. 8, 8:30 P.M., Leonard Bernstein, guest conductor: Haydn, Symphony No. 102; Mahler, Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection").
Sunday, Aug. 9, 2:30 P.M.: Schubert, Symphony No. 5; Barber, "Adagio for Strings"; Saint-Saëns, Cello Concerto (soloist, Gregor Piatigorsky); Strauss, "Don Quixote."

Friday, Aug. 14, 8:30 P.M.: Brahms, "Requiem."
Saturday, Aug. 15, 8:30 P.M., Leonard Bernstein, guest conductor: Sibelius, Symphony No. 4; Brahms, Symphony No. 2.
Sunday, Aug. 16, 2:30 P.M.: Chavez, "Sinfonia India"; Chabrier, "Bourrée Fantasque"; Schubert, "Unfinished" Symphony; Ravel, Piano Concerto for the Left Hand (soloist, Seymour Lipkin), Wagner, Prelude and Love-Death, "Tristan and Isolde"; "A Siegfried Idyll"; "Die Meistersinger," Excerpts from Act III.

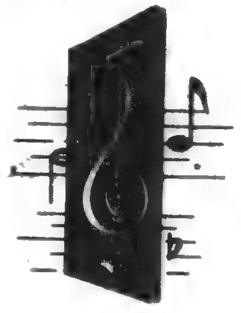
THE END

Advertising Guaranty—Page 6

Berk Coun. Post

VACATIONTIME IN THE BERKSHIRES

7/30



THE
TANGLEWOOD
STORY

Concerts in the Shed

Friday and Saturday Evenings at 8:30
Sunday Afternoons at 2:30

SERIES A

Friday Evening, July 31—CHARLES MUNCH

BEETHOVEN............Overture to "Leonore," No. 3
MENDELSSOHN............Violin Concerto in E minor
(Soloist: ZINO FRANCESCATTI)
COPLAND...................."Appalachian Spring"
RAVEL................................"Bolero"

Saturday Evening, August 1—CHARLES MUNCH

SCHUMANN.................Overture to "Manfred"
FOSS........................Piano Concerto No. 2
(The Composer as Soloist)
MENDELSSOHN............Symphony No. 4, "Italian"
HINDEMITH .....Symphonic Metamorphosis of Themes by Weber

Sunday Afternoon, August 2—PIERRE MONTEUX

PIERRE MONTEUX, Guest Conductor

TCHAIKOVSKY..................Serenade for Strings
TCHAIKOVSKY..........Symphony No. 5, in E minor
TCHAIKOVSKY....Piano Concerto No. 1, in B-flat minor (Soloist: JORGE BOLET)

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD

JUL 9 - 1953

$3,652,912 Estate Left by J. F. Moors

A Brookline investment banker has left approximately $1,250,000 each to Harvard University and Radcliffe College, according to an inventory of his $3,652,912 estate filed yesterday in Norfolk Probate Court in Dedham.

John F. Moors, who died March 23, also left $100,000 to the Boston Family Welfare Society, and $50,000 to the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He left 250,000 and their home at 150 Fisher Ave., Brookline, to his wife.

In his will, filed April 2, Harvard and Radcliffe were named residual legatees of the estate. Moors, a Harvard graduate, was a fellow of the Harvard Corporation from 1917 to 1929, served on the Radcliffe Council for 25 years.

Appraisers disclosed his interest in the firm of Moors and Cabot, stock brokers of 11 Devonshire St., Boston, was valued at $1,079,482. The inventory fixed the value of his real estate at $88,500, and his personal property at $3,564,412.

This Clipping From
HUDSON, N. Y.
REGISTER

JUL 10 1953

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL CONCERTS OPEN AT TANGLEWOD TOMORROW

The 16th Berkshire Festival since concerts were inaugurated in the hills of Western Massachusetts in 1934, the fourteenth since the Boston Symphony Orchestra participated, will commence its six week-ends of 15 concerts tomorrow night at 8:30 p. m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Charles Munch will conduct members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in two programs devoted to the music of Johann Sebastian Bach, the second concert to take place Sunday afternoon at 2:30.

General admission is sold on the day of each concert. Patrons are invited to take box lunches and picnic on the spacious lawns of Tanglewood; grounds are open to concertgoers at 6 p. m. for evening concerts and at 12:30 p. m. for afternoon performances. A cafeteria on the grounds also services patrons.

COPY

July 23, 1953

, Music Editor
g Magazine
th Avenue
York

n given a copy of the August issue of your magazine, g, I read with keen interest your article, "The ." Frankly, I am amazed that you would come away wood area with such impressions as you pass along to this article.

a music critic, nor a music editor, I shall not question you on your pithy, "At Tanglewood it plays as well as it can and with careful rehearsel---" (The Boston Symphony Orchestra), or "The comparison limps", (with Salsburg), or "---The public was willing to accept him" (Munch). The brilliant achievements and resounding acclaim this great conductor, Charles Munch, and his equally great orchestra, The Boston Symphony, have attained not only in this country, but in Europe as well, say far more than I could in their behalf.

However, I am qualified and do take issue with you on the content of that paragraph in your article as it appears on page 236-top right hand. As the director of an agency that yearly does an outstanding job in handling visitors'accommodations at NO COST to the visitors, I challenge you to substantiate the content of that paragraph. Further, I charge you with the ballooning of isolated cases as if they were the rule rather than the rare exceptions that they are. You have maligned some of the finest hotel men, innkeepers, restauranteurs, their staffs and their institutions. Not to mention the fine citizenry of this area which for the most part does an excellent job of handling the thousands of visitors it plays host to yearly.

In your conclusion of this paragraph you suggest a co-ordinating agency that would protect the visitors from being bilked or pushed around. While not agreeing that such "protection" is needed, I would point out to you that the organization I represent as well as various Chambers of Commerce in the area would welcome reports of any individual or establishment that indulged in such conduct as you portray.

COPY

MONSANT
CHEMICALS—PLAST

with an "I Lo made of Ul

Smart and handsome, styled by Harris with c weatherwise raglan sle wearing freedom.
And it's fashioned fro vinyl plastic—soft and extra long-wearing!
"I Love Lucy" rainwe
New York. In small, m red, or green check. In also made of Ultron. L
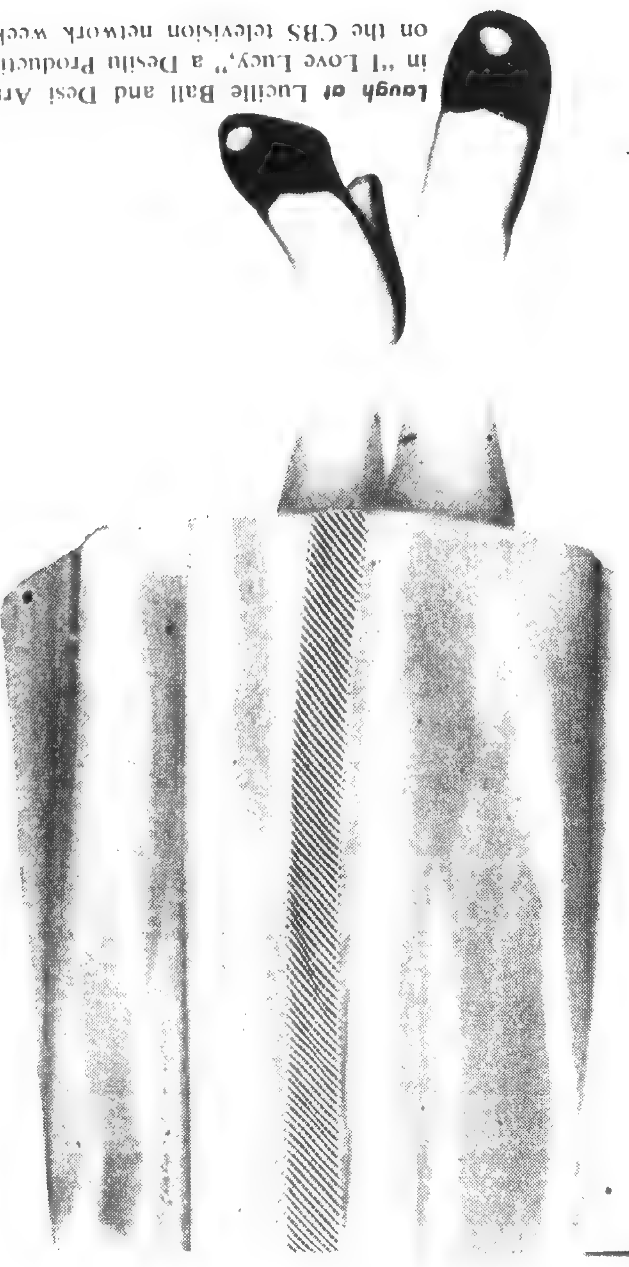
MONSANTO CHEMICAL C
Springfield 2, Mass.



Laugh at Lucille Ball and Desi Arnaz in "I Love Lucy," a Desilu Production, on the CBS television network weekly.

VACATIONTIME IN THE BERKSHIRES

THE TANGLEWOOD STORY

Concerts in the Shed

Friday and Saturday Evenings at 8:30
Sunday Afternoons at 2:30

SERIES A

Friday Evening, July 31—CHARLES MUNCH

BEETHOVEN	Overture to "Leonore," No. 3
MENDELSSOHN	Violin Concerto in E minor (Soloist: ZINO FRANCESCATTI)
COPLAND	"Appalachian Spring"
RAVEL	"Bolero"

Saturday Evening, August 1—CHARLES MUNCH

SCHUMANN	Overture to "Manfred"
FOSS	Piano Concerto No. 2 (The Composer as Soloist)
MENDELSSOHN	Symphony No. 4, "Italian"
HINDEMITH	Symphonic Metamorphosis of Themes by Weber

Sunday Afternoon, August 2—PIERRE MONTEUX

PIERRE MONTEUX, Guest Conductor

TCHAIKOVSKY	Serenade for Strings
TCHAIKOVSKY	Symphony No. 5, in E minor
TCHAIKOVSKY	Piano Concerto No. 1, in B-flat minor (Soloist: JORGE BOLET)

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD

JUL 9 - 1953

$3,652,912 Estate Left by J. F. Moors

A Brookline investment banker has left approximately $1,250,000 each to Harvard University and Radcliffe College, according to an inventory of his $3,652,912 estate filed yesterday in Norfolk Probate Court in Dedham.

John F. Moors, who died March 23, also left $100,000 to the Boston Family Welfare Society, and $50,000 to the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He left -250,000 and their home at 150 Fisher Ave., Brookline, to his wife.

In his will, filed April 2, Harvard and Radcliffe were named residual legatees of the estate. Moors, a Harvard graduate, was a fellow of the Harvard Corporation from 1917 to 1929, served on the Radcliffe Council for 25 years.

Appraisers disclosed his interest in the firm of Moors and Cabot, stock brokers of 11 Devonshire St., Boston, was valued at $1,079,482. The inventory fixed the value of his real estate at $88,500, and his personal property at $3,564,412.

COPY

July 13, 1953

Mr. Tom [illegible], Music Editor
Good Housekeeping Magazine
57th Street at 8th Avenue
New York 19, New York

Dear Sir:

Having [illegible] a copy of the [illegible] issue of your magazine, Good Housekeeping, I read with [illegible] interest your article, "The Tanglewood Tale." Frankly, I am [illegible] that you would [illegible] from the Tanglewood area with such impressions as you [illegible] to your readers in this article.

Not being a music critic, nor a music editor, I shall not question you on your pithy, "At [illegible] sounds as well as it can and with careful rehearsal---" (the Boston Symphony Orchestra), or "The comparison lines", (with Salzburg), or "---The public was willing to accept him" (Munch). The brilliant achievements and resounding acclaim this great conductor, Charles Munch, and his equally great orchestra, The Boston Symphony, have attained not only in this country, but in Europe as well, [illegible] far more than I could in their behalf.

However, I am qualified and do take issue with you on the content of that paragraph in your article as it appears on page 136-top right hand. As the director of an agency that yearly does an outstanding job in handling visitors' accommodations at [illegible] to the visitors, I challenge you to substantiate the content of that paragraph. Further, I charge you with the [illegible] of isolated cases as if they were the rule rather than the rare exceptions that they are. You have maligned some of the finest hotel men, innkeepers, restaurateurs, their staffs and their institutions. Not to mention the fine citizenry of this area which for the most part does an excellent job of handling the thousands of visitors it plays host to yearly.

In your conclusion of this paragraph you suggest a co-ordinating agency that would protect the visitors from being [illegible] or pushed around. While not agreeing that such "protection" is needed, I would point out to you that the organization I represent as well as various Chambers of Commerce in the area would welcome reports of any individual or establishment that indulged in such conduct as you portray.

COPY

This Clipping From
HUDSON, N. Y.
REGISTER

JUL 10 1953

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL CONCERTS OPEN AT TANGLEWOD TOMORROW

The 16th Berkshire Festival since concerts were inaugurated in the hills of Western Massachusetts in 1934, the fourteenth since the Boston Symphony Orchestra participated, will commence its six week-end of [illegible] concerts tomorrow night at 8:30 p. m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Charles Munch will conduct members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in two programs devoted to the music of Johann Sebastian Bach, the second concert to take place Sunday afternoon at 2:30.

General admission is sold on the day of each concert. Patrons are invited to take box lunches and picnic on the spacious lawns of Tanglewood. Grounds are open to concert-goers at 6 p. m. for evening concerts and at 12:30 p. m. for afternoon performances. A cafeteria on the grounds also services patrons.

Mr. [illegible] July 13, 1953

[illegible] Hills [illegible], is justifi[illegible] proud of its recommended list of hotels, inns, guest houses, etc., and the services and accommodations they provide for our visitors. Occasionally, as is the human part, there are unfortunate incidents that aggrieve all concerned. However, if we are informed of such incidents we bend every effort to effect a satisfactory solution. I can truthfully say that we [illegible] thousands of inquiries and reservations [illegible] the number of complaints are less than one percent, hardly justification for such an indictment as you present in your article.

[illegible] criticism [illegible], the inaccuracies contained in your article had to be answered. It is impossible to correct the very distorted picture you have given your readers and I trust no [illegible] will ever [illegible].

I am interested in hearing from you, either to substantiate your charges, or to let me know how you intend to correct this misrepresentation of the Tanglewood area, its citizenry and its institutions.

Very truly yours,

[illegible]

John F. [illegible],
Executive Director

JFD:bmh
cc: Mr. Herbert [illegible]. Hayes, Editor

This Clipping From
HUDSON, N. Y.
REGISTER

JUL 10 1953

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL CONCERTS OPEN AT TANGLEWOD TOMORROW

The 16th Berkshire Festival since concerts were inaugurated in the [illegible] of Western Massachusetts in 1934, the fourteenth since the Boston Symphony Orchestra participated, will commence its six week-end of [illegible] tomorrow night at 8:30 p. m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Charles Munch will conduct members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in two programs devoted to the [illegible] of Johann Sebastian Bach, the second concert to take place Sunday afternoon at 2:30.

General admission is sold on the day of each concert. Patrons are invited to take box lunches and picnic on the spacious lawns of Tanglewood. [illegible] grounds are open to concert-goers at [illegible] p. m. for evening concerts and at 12:30 p. m. for afternoon performances. A cafeteria on the grounds also services patrons.

[222]

Attendance Records Fall As 'Small' Concerts End

Eagle 7/22

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

YESTERDAY afternoon's audience of 4450 and 4400 for Saturday evening at Tanglewood brought the total attendance for the six "small" concerts over the three week ends to 26,150, the largest number ever to attend the early series and exceeding by more than 2500 the record year of 1950. Yesterday's concert, as on the preceding Sunday afternoon, was again shifted to the large Shed instead of being played in the theatre-concert hall where all the others had taken place. In addition to several other possible reasons, the Shed was used because the broadcasting facilities there were more advantageous and this concert was the first of four successive Sunday afternoons which will be broadcast, although they lose their chamber orchestra character in the larger hall.

Yesterday's program, for the first time in this kind of series, forsook the classics and chose only music written since the turn of the century. Saturday evening the program followed the scheme of the original plan by devoting the entire concert to Haydn, as the first week end had been Bach and the middle one Mozart. Charles Munch gave brisk and crisp performances of two Haydn symphonies, the C minor, No. 95, and the G major, No. 100, the "Military." There was vigor and animation in the swift movements and a pleasant atmosphere in the calmer ones. The cello solo in the trio of the No. 95 minuet was played with a lovely grace and satisfying inflection by Samuel Mayes.

* * *

HUGH ROSS conducted the "Theresa" mass, in B flat major, with the orchestra, the Berkshire Festival Chorus, recruited from the student body of the Berkshire Music Center, and, as soloists, Lois McCauley, soprano, Beatrice Krebs, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, and Lee Cass, bass. The whole performance was one of the most effective choral works presented in the smaller hall within easy memory. The chorus responded with alert discipline; the soloists, whose assignments were almost totally as a quartet and not as individuals, were excellent, and Haydn's manipulation of them as contrasts to the bolder statements of the chorus enlivened the whole performance. The restrained passages were sung with faithful observance of Ross' command and convictions. Haydn is far from solemn in this mass; rather, he is theatrical and florid.

Yesterday Mr. Munch listed four numbers in the chronological sequence of the composers' birth for the first part of the program. The first two took their inspiration or source in the early French composer Couperin. Both, too, were war-born. Richard Strauss wrote his "Divertimento (after Couperin)" in 1941 in Garmisch, below the ominous eminence of the famous "Eagle's Nest." Strauss, at the majestic age of 77, was evidently amusing himself with an exercise which must have been as easy to turn out for him as it was as easy for the audience to notice, or neglect. Ravel converted four sections of his six-movement piano suite, "Le Tombeau de Couperin," to a suite for orchestra to honor the memory of four of his World War I comrades who died in service. They are not sombre nor elegiac but more in the Greek spirit, gay and lively. Their special merit, however, lies in Ravel's delicate fashioning and deft spirit, in which, for instance, he gives the clarinet such lovely phrases as were played by the solo clarinet, [illegible] tional art and whom, through an unforgivable blunder last week, we deprived of his due and proper credit for his outstanding playing in the Mozart divertimenti for 13 wind instruments.

* * *

MILHAUD WROTE "La Creation du Monde" in 1922. It is pertinent to note that Gershwin wrote his "Rhapsody in Blue" two years later. Jazz and blues were uppermost in the minds of everyone early after World War I. It was the subject of innumerable articles everywhere, explaining how this was America's contribution to art and music. French composers, in particular, all made essays in this new path. Darius Milhaud came in contact with the music of the Americas first in Brazil where, as a very young man, he was on the staff of French Ambassador Paul Claudel, who, incidentally, also provided him with plenty of poetic material for later works. Milhaud there got his inspiration for his famous South American dances. In New York he heard and saw jazz being performed. Someone even said that, as the best Spanish music was written by Russians and French, the best American jazz was written by the French. There is no need to pursue that point, but Munch put pep into "La Creation." A stranger entering the hall in the midst of that particular piece may well have asked himself if he was in the right place. It was huge good fun and should inform any who may still think that so-called longhair music is always dignified that the limits of musical enjoyment are broad and wide and all-inclusive.

Prokofieff's "Classical Symphony" was an exercise in his youth something akin, in the actual writing, to the Strauss opus in his old age. It is carefree buffoonery at least part of the time and transparent cleverness at all times. Munch called oboist Ralph Gomberg to the front of the stage at the end of the performance to allow him to acknowledge personally the applause his beautiful playing aroused.

* * *

AFTER INTERMISSION came Lukas Foss' "A Parable of Death," an oratorio on a poem of Rainer Maria Rilka, Germany's foremost poet of the first quarter of the century, with the composer conducting. Foss has written for orchestra and mixed chorus, with tenor soloist John McCollum yesterday, and as narrator, Vera Zorina. The poem, as swift as possible, concerns Death's visit to a household dominated by love and his reception by the man and the woman.

Miss Zorina's diction was unforced and impressive but was not clearly heard under all conditions so that the thread of the story could not have been completely understood by a first-time hearer. Furthermore, Mr. Foss had let it be understood that he was not attempting to set every word or meaning to music, which would obviously have been without purpose with such a subject. The problem of listening, therefore, became confused. To try to catch every syllable of the narration, of the whole ensemble or of the component parts, needed a nimble-eared auditor.

* * *

THE SCORE did not require the narrator to speak continuously. In fact, she was silent most of the time, but when she had something to say, particularly when she spoke of "the pale blue flower" which came from the seed Death had planted, her costume and her comely person symbolized the poetic reference. John McCollum sang his several assignments beautifully. He put fervor into his resonant voice and into the effective parts Foss had written for him. The chorus sang with fidelity too, but Foss's music was simple and humble in the contemporary idiom. His heart was in his conducting. He established a mood with a very short orchestral prelude and immediately proceeded into vocal involvements. It was the work of a sincere, unpretentious, thorough musician and the ovation he received was a personal one.

Foss has expressed himself once before in this medium. "The Prairie," written when he was 22 (1944), was an oratorio also based on a poem, that time poetry of Carl Sandburg. Then he explained that the poetry offered "new possibilities in its earthy and almost religious ap-approach." Foss caught Rilke's mysticism well, it seemed, by confining himself, with musical self-abnegation to expression as intangible, and distance as his poetic source.

Union 7/30

TONIGHT
ON CHANNEL 61
Walter Alford
Public Relations Director
and Wolf Adler
Student Cellist
Both of
TANGLEWOOD
Guests of TOM COLTON
6:45 ON WWLP

PLANNING FESTIVAL BROADCASTS: Charles Munch, right, Boston Symphony conductor, and James Fassett, producer and commentator for CBS international series of World Music Festivals, plan final details for live broadcast of four Berkshire Festival concerts, the only American events to be heard in the Sunday broadcasts which will continue from Tanglewood Aug. 2, 9 and 16 from 2.30 to 4 PM. Mr. Fassett will return to Europe in late August to record portions of the famous festivals of Salzburg, Beirut and Edinburgh for the series which will continue through Oct. 4.

VETERAN CELLIST: Jean Bedetti, of the faculties of the Berkshire Music Center and Miami University, will play in the Music for Israel concert at 8.30 tomorrow evening at the Jewish Community Center. In a program composed of a Mozart sonata, Beethoven trio and Brahms quartet, he will appear with Leonard Bernstein, piano; William Kroll, violin; Joseph dePasquale, piano.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION

JUL 17 1953

Tanglewood

SCHEDULE FOR THE WEEK

Tonight
*8.30—Opera scenes. Th[illegible]

Wednesday
8.30 PM—Hungarian Q[illegible] of Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge. Theatre.

Thursday
*8.30 PM—Symphony concert [illegible] orchestra. Music Shed.

Friday
8.30 PM—Opening of [illegible] Berkshire Festival; Charles Munch conducting Boston Symphony Orchestra with Zino Francescatti, soloist. Music Shed.

Saturday
10.00 AM—Public rehearsal of Boston Symphony Orchestra for Benefit Pension Fund. Music Shed.
*3.00 PM—Organ Recital by E. Power Biggs. Music Shed.
8.30 PM—Berkshire Festival concert, Charles Munch conducting.

Sunday
*10.00 AM—Chamber music [illegible] Berkshire Music Center students. Chamber [illegible]
2.30 PM—Berkshire Festival [illegible] Pierre Monteux [illegible] all-Tchaikovsky [illegible] with Jorge Bolet [illegible] Music Shed.

*Open to Friends of Berkshire Music Center
Open to friends of [illegible] Berkshire M[illegible]

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
Orchestra
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
SHED CONCERTS
Tonight at 8:30 — Soloist, LUKAS FOSS
Sun. Aug. 2 at 2:30—PIERRE MONTEUX, Conducting a TCHAIKOVSKY Program; Soloist—JORGE BOLET, Piano
Reserved Seats available—General Admission $2
Address Box Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass

Berkshire Artists' Work Shown at Tanglewood

By WAYNE C. SMITH

Lenox, July 16—The second of the weekly series of exhibitions being presented in the reception hall at the main gate of Tanglewood is comprised entirely of the work of Berkshire artists and was arranged by Harry Lane of West Stockbride.

Realism to Abstractions

The paintings and sculpture in the exhibition runs the gamut from romantic realism to complete abstractions and are in keeping with the spirit of the musical presentations there. The single sculpture is a handsomely carved and polished wood sculpture by Homer Gunn of West Stockbridge entitled "Torso" in which parts of the body have been ingeniously abstracted and rearranged. Gunn is also represented by an oil entitled "Jumprope" painted with a liquid-like quality.

Also included is a fine drawing by Harry Lane and two music inspired abstractions by Stanley Bate of Claversack, N. Y., entitled "Allegro" and "Scherzo" in which the artist has graphically captured the tempo and spirit of the musical subjects, "Quarry Pool" by June Kimball of Pittsfield, a beautifully sketched portrait of his daughter Elizabeth by Stuart Henry, director of the Berkshire Museum at Pittsfield, a dramatically depicted "Storm" by E. Arnold Clark of Great Barrington, a characteristic portrait of "Stephanie" by John Carrol of East Chatham, N. Y., and "Shadow of the House" by Harry Lane, who next week is to have a one-man show in the reception hall.

Also in the reception hall is a portrait in oils of the late Dr. Serge Koussevitsky, founder of the Berkshire Music Center and summer school of music at Tanglewood. The portrait is by Nino Lipinsky of New York and is being exhibited at Tanglewood for the first time through the courtesy of its owner, Mrs. Koussevitsky.

In the formal gardens and apple orchard at Tanglewood there is currently being presented an exhibition of large scultptures by John Rood of Minneapolis whose work was introduced to this section last summer in a one-man show at the Lenox Library while he was at work on three large sculptures at Wellesley College.

Explanatory Notes

These sculptures are a new development in Rood's art and will be shown in New York [illegible] time following [illegible] play at Tanglewood. [illegible] was a writer and publish[illegible] turning to sculpture [illegible] explanatory notes for his [illegible] These notes, available [illegible] tell how water-worn [illegible] trees and bones were [illegible] tion for four of the sculptures [illegible] goes further and gives a [illegible] cal meaning to it all [illegible] not appreciate and [illegible] cast a shadow over [illegible] beauty of the two [illegible] apple orchard.

These two [illegible] "Seated Figure" a[illegible] gure," have bea[illegible] arrangements of [illegible] forms and concave [illegible] of Henry Moore [illegible] theus" and "W[illegible]" notable for th[illegible] space through branch-like [illegible] and the suggestion of wood [illegible] tured in the works.

The fifth sculpture is entitled "Homage to Igor Stravinsky" and it in the artist has captured a decorative, architectural beauty inspired by "Sacre de Printemps" which "to me has similar angularities, sharpness of color, broken rhythms."

World Music Festivals (Sun. 2.30 p.m., CBS). Berkshire Festival; Pierre Monteux conducting Tchaikovsky.

Rec

Attenda

Set

By WILLARD M.

Tanglewood, July 26—All have been broken at Ta for attendance at the six concerts devoted to the Bach, Mozart, Haydn and of 20th Century compose tal of 26,150 persons he six concerts, with 4450 p hand to hear the final this afternoon. The previou

Boston Post
Sun July 2

953

Music i Review

Tanglewood Con
BY TUCKER KEISE

TANGLEWOOD, July 2
all-Haydn program by the Symphony Orchestra brou series of chamber music c to a close tonight in the here. Tonight's audience bered 4400. Beginning w morrow afternoon's pr
these concerts will emplo full 104 pieces of the orc for programs.

Hugh Ross, conductor
Tanglewood Festival shared the podium with Munch, conductor of the Symphony Orchestra. M conducted the Theresa M
B-flat major in its first performance.

Mr. Munch contributed ings of Symphony No. 9
minor and Symphony No.
G major, commonly call
"Military."

The Theresa Mass, comp 1799, uses a quartet of antiphonally with the
The quartet last night wa
McCauley, soprano; Be Krebs, contralto; John lum, tenor, and Lee Cass, remarkably well-balanced quartet.

Haydn uses his quartet lyric passages and his cho the climactic effects. The must also exhibit the en qualities of a sensitive quartet. The quartet never once let Mr. Ross d

As is in the nature setting of the mass, the musically comes with the
This movement of the T
Mass is one of the most g choral compositions ever w and adds evidence that Ha is shown by the scores n coming available for stu performance, is one of the est choral writers in music tory.

Considering the mercuri
ducting temperament o
Munch, the performances
Haydn symphonies posse surprising amount of sty elegance. Only once or tw he rush the tempo, but large he kept himself and chestra under firm contr dynamics were well order presumably what the co intended.

If the first movement
C minor lacked the ne unity in conception, the movement was unexcepti Indeed, by the time the arrived, enough Laendler pah had been built up vision a Bavarian inn festive week end.

In the "Milita Symp
a term derived from the
the bass drum, triang cymbals in the second and movements, we have a firs ment built as a musical d between flute and oboe rest of the orchestra.
Anthony and Ralph played their flute and ob with such jolly humor mood was established rest of the symphony.

Record Crowds at Berkshire Music Festival

Attendance Record Set at Tanglewood

By WILLARD M. CLARK

was made in 1950 with a total of 23,500.

It seems to us that several factors were responsible for this record-breaking attendance. First of all, the devotees of Tanglewood have fully accepted Charles Munch. Secondly, the programs were varied and versatile, and finally, one heard superb performances, for the most part.

Continued On Page 3

Last night we listened to the music of Joseph Haydn, enjoying its wholesomeness, humor and sincerity. Today we jumped forward into the 20th Century and were treated to works by Strauss, Ravel, Progofieff, Milhaud and Lukas Foss.

True, two of these composers went back to the music of Francois Couperin for their inspiration and so Strauss was represented by his "Divertimenti, OP 86" drawn from harpsichord pieces by Couperin, while Ravel undertook a similar task, first as a suite for piano and then for orchestra.

Rich Program

The Strauss conception of the Couperin pieces was delightful. They were made richer through the orchestration which seldom was heavy or involved and which sustained the intimate, fragile quality of the original. Mr. Munch and his men played in distinguished manner.

It was common practice for the 17th Century composers to write collections of instrumental pieces in memory of their departed colleagues and the generic name for such collections was "Tombeau" which literally means tombstone. Ravel wrote his "Tombeau de Couperin" in 1947 as a piano suite in six movements, each of them dedicated to a companion who had been killed by Germans on the western front. The orchestras version consists of a prelude and three dance movements like those of the classic suite. Ravel the times which were precise, ordered and delicately tinted. It was interesting to note the variations in the handling of the music of Couperin by such different entities as Strauss and Ravel. One could not help but Germanize the music, while the other enriched it through the magic of his own wit and feeling for color and form.

Run of Mill

About all that one can say for Mr. Munch's reading of the Prokofieff "Classical Symphony" is that it was a run of the mill affair, quite devoid of any brio, and lacked luster from beginning to end.

Darius Milhaud is a man of many enthusiasms, so it was not surprising that during his first visit to the United States in 1922 he was delighted with the music he heard in New York's Harlem and drew upon his memory of it as he wrote his "Creation du Monde" composed for a ballet by Blaze Cendrar. However, what he remembered of the musical idiom of 1922 he used in conjunction with music strongly derivative from Stravinsky, Ravel and then mixed it up with a liberal dosage of Gershwin. The result is a mish-mash of sounds and rhythms which might belong to any era. Mr. Munch evidently enjoys conducting this work and his men played it with enthusiasm and it was so received by the audience.

Enchanting Work

The second portion of the program was given over to Lukas Foss, the 31-year-old American composer, pianist and conductor who directed his "A Parade of Death." This enchanting work calls for chorus, orchestra, narrator and tenor soloist. MME, Zorina wast he narratorand John McCollum the tenor. At the moment Tanglewood has in its midst the finest group of singers that the Berkshire Music Festival has had for years. They sang today with a clarity of enunciation, range of dynamics and purity of tone that was a revelation to this listener. Mr. McCollum is proving a serviceable and sturdy tenor and he sang the exacting measures alloted to him in fine fashion. Zrina's voice is beautiful and her delivery of the story of the man and woman and death was simple and affecting. The chorus comments on the words of the narrator. Mr. Foss has written beautiful music for this story and has succeeded in keeping the music an integral part of the story, rather than making of it a monologue with music.

Foss conducts easily and with entire confidence and he held the work together in masterful manner. Here is work which should grace the programs of many orchestras throughout the country; one of the truly fine American compositions.

Boston Post Sun. Jul 26/53

Music in Review

Tanglewood Concert

BY TUCKER KEISER

This Clipping From

HARTFORD, CONN.
COURANT

JUL 21 1953

2:15 WVDA—Serenade in Blue
2:30 WEEI—Music Festival
2:30 WEEI—Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood with Pierre Monteux, conducting

---

Music Center Students To Attend Concert Rehearsal At Tanglewood

The Summer Music Center will sponsor a trip to the Tanglewood Music Center in the Berkshire Mountains at Lenox, Mass., on Saturday, Aug. 1 for childrjn participating in Center activities, Frank H. Groff, director of the Center, said Monday. The children will hear and see the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Dr. Charles Munch at a concert rehearsal.

The rehearsal will begin at 10 a.m. and admission for children 12 years old or under is 25 cents. Those over 12 must pay $1. Parents and friends of the students are invited to accompany them.

Buses will leave Hall High School at 8 a.m. on Aug. 1 and return to the school about 5:45 p.m. The round trip fare is $2 a person. Parents who plan to take their children by car are asked to notify the Center of their plans.

Box lunches will be carried by the children. Refreshments may be purchased there. Beach wear, shorts and dungarees will not be permitted on this trip.

Registration forms for the trip are available at the Music Center and must be turned in to Miss Lauralyn Watson at Hall High School between 10:30 and noon Thursday or 8:30 to 11 a.m. on Friday.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
Orchestra
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
SHED CONCERTS
Open TONIGHT at 8:30
Soloist—ZINO FRANCESCATTI, Violin
Sat. Aug. 1 at 8:30—Soloist, LUKAS FOSS
Sun. Aug. 2 at 2:30—PIERRE MONTEUX, Conducting a TCHAIKOVSKY Program; Soloist—JORGE BOLET, Piano.
Reserved Seats Available—General Admission $2.
Address Box Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

[224]

This Week At TANGLEWOOD

Wed., at 8:30 p. m.: *Coolidge Concert. The Baroque Trio (Harpsichord, Flute and Cello) in the Theatre.

Fri., at 8:30 p. m. * Dept. 1 Orchestra in the Shed.

Sat., at 8:30 p. m.: Festival Concert. A Mozart program in the Theatre.

Sun., at 10 a. m.: *Chamber Music in the Music Hall.

at 2:30 p. m.: Festival concert. Program of Mozart, in the Theatre.

at 8:30 p. m.: *Composers Forum in the Music Hall.

* Events open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

E—MONDAY, JULY 27, 1953

Zorina Terrific

Berkshire Festival Hears Foss' "A Parable of Death"

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX, July 26—Lukas Foss' "A Parable of Death" was given its first Berkshire performance, this afternoon, at the final concert in the preliminary series of the Berkshire festival by the Boston Symphony orchestra. This unusual, deeply-felt and skillfully written score, the one new work of the preliminary series, is based upon verses of Rainer Maria Rilke which dwell upon two profound facts: the gaining by relinquishment, which is love, and the eternal continuity of life which grows out of death.

Foss' music calls for an extensive if not huge orchestra, chorus and tenor soloist. The text of Rilke (in an English translation which runs to some un-poetic and multi-syllabled words) was spoken at this performance as at the three previous in Louisville, New York and the Ojai festival in California, by Vera Zorina. The tenor soloist was John McCollum.

If you go back far enough, in tracing the ancestry of the general form, the harmonic idiom and the overall expressive style, you come to Gustav Mahler, and, chorally to Bach. Nonetheless, Mr. Foss has written in a contemporary if not indisputably personal manner, one in which his technic of orchestral and choral writing has grown perceptibly.

At first hearing I am inclined to sort out the choral writing from orchestra as less eloquent, and the tenor solo more stylized than emotional. That would be superficial judgment, however, for "A Parable of Death" is not completely absorbed at one performance. There are too many details, in rhythm, in color and patterns of orchestral usage, to warrant quick blanket opinion. The dominant impression, however, is one of power and beauty but sluggish motion.

Zorina Gorgeous

Miss Zorina, svelte and gorgeous in a pale blue gown, spoke with moving depth of voice and with a truly poetic style, lines which all too often, at least in English, are prose in effect. Occasionally, she had such heavy competition from the instruments that blurred her words, but mostly she was clearly understood. Mr. Foss conducted his own work and, seemingly, did it very well.

Mr. McCollum sang his relatively brief role with warmth of feeling and a fine ease of manner and technic.

Charles Munch had conducted the previous portions of the concert, which were broadcast over the C. B. S. network, and for that reason were played in the music shed instead of the smaller theatre-concert hall. The afternoon began with a superb account of Strauss' divertimento after Couperin, and included an equally superb one of "Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin;" Prokofieff's "Classical" symphony and Milhaud's youthful and masterful "La Creation du Monde."

It was interesting that Mr. Munch took the prelude and Forlane of Ravel's jewelled music much slower than most conductors do it, with increasing clarity of detail at a sacrifice of logical motion. Milhaud's music, between late ragtime and early jazz in spots, enjoyed the best performances of it this reviewer has heard.

The final Saturday evening of this preliminary series was devoted to Haydn of the symphony in C Minor, No. 95, the "Military" Symphony and the "Theresa" mass. Mr. Munch conducted the symphonies, of which the first named went reasonably well and the second in a glowing, absolutely exact fashion that was sheer genius of conducting and playing.

"Theresa" Mass Lovely

Haydn's "Theresa" mass, virtually unknown over here save for a foreign recording made a few years ago, is a lovely and noble score, if not one of the world's greatest masterpieces. For it, Hugh Ross had prepared the Berkshire Music Center chorus down to the last eighth note, and they sang with a really thrilling quality of tone and ensemble. The quartet of vocal soloists, also Berkshire Center students, consisted of soprano Lois McCauley, contralto Beatrice Krebs, Mr. McCollum in the tenor part, and bass Lee Cass.

For blend of voices and expert technic in style and keeping together they were, perhaps, the finest quartet I have heard in more than 20 years of music reviewing.

Mr. Ross conducted and the performance went admirably. But for the life of me, I can't see how the orchestra, which could not have had too many rehearsals for the mass, followed his peculiar (and sometimes non-existent) beat. But they were of the Boston Symphony, which is equipped to pass miracles.

The Saturday night attendance in the theatre-concert hall—and on the lawn outside—was 4400. Today's audience, 4450. That brought the total attendance for the entire preliminary series to 26,150, the biggest in Berkshire Festival history.

HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES

JUL 18 1953

MUSIC CALENDAR

Sunday

2:30 p. m. — Mozart Concert, Boston Syphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

4 p. m. — Berkshire Quartet concert, Music Mountain, Falls Village.

Tuesday

8:15 p. m. — Yale Bowl Pops concert, Tchaikowsky Night, Yale Bowl, New Haven.

Wednesday

3:30 p. m. — Faculty concert, Yale Summer School of Music, Norfolk.

Thursday

4 p. m. — Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, Iva Kitchell, Glenn Tetley, Jacob's Pillow, near Lee, Mass.

Friday

4 p. m. and 9 p. m. — Jacob's Pillow, as above.

Saturday

4 p. m. and 9 p. m. — Jacob's Pillow, as above.

8:30 p. m. — Haydn concert, Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

This Clipping From

ALBANY, N. Y.
KNICKERBOCKER NEWS

JUL 15 1953

SOLOIST — Joseph De Pasquale, viola, above, will be soloist with Isaac Stern in Mozart's Sinfonia Concertante for Violin and Viola, which will be performed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra Sunday afternoon at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood.

THE SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., WEDNESDAY, JULY 29, 1953

Three Evenings of Opera Scheduled at Tanglewood

Lenox, July 28—Three rarely-heard one-act operas by Gluck, Debussy and Chabrier will be performed by Students of Department 4, Berkshire Music Center, for a single performance at Tanglewood, Monday at 8.30 in the theater-concert hall. All seats are reserved. The performance is open to those who support the summer school of music of the Boston Symphony Orchestra by joining the Society of Friends of the BMC.

Gluck's "L'Yvrogne Corrige," (The Drunkard Reformed), of 1760 will have the English translation of Giovanni Cardelli, just published by G. Schirmer, Inc., of the libretto by L. Anseaume. So far as is known, this will be its first American production.

Debussy's "L'Enfant Prodigue" (The Prodigal Son) uses the composer's Prix de Rome score of 1884. It will be sung in French, to the libretto of E. Guinard.

Emmanuel Chabrier's "Une Education Manquee," (An Incomplete Education), of 1879, will be sung in the English translation of Henry Reese.

The three one-acters, all Tanglewood premiers, are produced by Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, staged by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell. Scenery is by John Blankenchip and costumes by Leo Van Witsen. They will be performed with student casts. Mr. Goldovsky will accompany the Gluck and Chabrier operas at the piano, and an orchestra of the school's department 1 students,—Samuel Krachmalnick conductor—will accompany Debussy. Leo [illegible] has vised choreography for [illegible] dancers in "Le Fils Prodigue." The program follows:

On Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 10 and 11, Mr. Goldovsky's opera department will perform Gretry's th[illegible] "Richard Coeur-de-Lion" (Richard the Lion-Hearted) [illegible] in 1784, given its first American performance in Boston in 179[illegible], subsequently heard in Philadelphia in 1798 and in New York in [illegible]. Alternating student casts will perform, with Mr. Goldovsky conducting a student orchestra. The [illegible] Sedaine text will be sung in [illegible] English translation of Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell with costumes by Leo Van Witsen and scenery by John Blankenchip employing the Paul Planer GKP projections. Like the evening of one-act operas these performances are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center and all seats are reserved.

BSO Organist Plans Recitals

E. Power Biggs

Brooks

E. Power Biggs, Boston Symphony Orchestra organist, will give a pair of organ recitals the coming two Saturday afternoons at 3 in the Tanglewood Music Shed. The concerts, which will be his first at Tanglewood in several seasons, will be open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Born in England, Mr. Biggs graduated with honors from the Royal Academy of Music, London, in 1929. He is an associate of the Royal Academy of Music. He has appeared with the Chicago, Philadelphia and Cincinnati Orchestras and at Coolidge festival concerts in the Library of Congress, Washington, D.C.

In addition to broadcasting every Sunday morning over CBS from the Germanic Museum at Harvard University, he records with the Boston orchestra and others, having played in the Walter Piston Concerto for Organ and Strings, the first recording of organ music by a major symphony orchestra in America. He was won "Musical America's" annual poll of organ music on the air every year since 1943. He has published various organ editions.

Saturday's program follows:

Concerto in A-minor	Vivaldi
A Lesson (Colonial American, 1750, Boston)	William Selby
Sonata for Organ No. 2	Hindemith
Prelude and Fugue in G-minor	Dupre

MUSIC

7/27

TANGLEWOOD, July 26 — With "A Parable of Death" Lukas Foss has begun to fulfill the great promise of his early years as a composer of contemporary stature.

The work, for speaker, tenor, chorus and orchestra, was given its New England premiere this afternoon before an audience of 4450 as the first of the four series of concerts came to a close in perfect summer weather.

Of about 28 minutes' duration, the parable, drawn from Rainer Maria Rilke's "Stories of God," was more effective for the mood and the atmosphere it elicited than from any real communication of the text, for the music shed here is too large to allow real comprehension of the words without a printed text in hand.

The spoken role by Vera Zorina, however, ennunciated with clarity, exquisite modulation and a most persuasive emotion conviction, was very effective, at least at close range.

It was the music itself, and the overall continuity of its means and expression, that allowed the observation of the first paragraph. For despite the less than perfectly communicative aspects of a performance under the circumstances, the composition revealed a sustained musical contemplation of Resurrection, a recurring theme in Mr. Foss' musico-dramatic works.

Between the brief recitations of the speaker, telling the universal legend of man and woman separated in the end by death, the composer employs the chorus in commentary, now fiercely confronting death itself, now reflecting poetically on the tender attachment of the protagonists. The tenor soloist, meantime, acts as a interlocutor, inspiring the choral responses, the whole reinforced and colored by the orchestral values.

Abandoning any attempt to outrun his audience's capacity to assimilate the musical narrative by effecting the more aggressive idioms of the day, the composer achieves his effects—and they are often powerful—with sustained and melodic choral lines rather than with the jagged unvocal intervals the contemporary composer finds so enchanting. He leaves the dirty work, so to speak, to the instrumentalists, who can achieve any outrageous interval by pushing buttons and things. This is a fairly new twist in contemporary choral writing, and it works surprisingly well, for it allows the orchestra to convey advanced harmonic and rhythmic devices to give the work strength and backbone while the chorus itself lends a spacious melodic sense to the whole. Not that the vocal line is vapid; on the contrary. But it at least conveys a sustained and emotional quality.

The only thing that flaws the work besides its length at least for this listener, is the use of fairly eccentric instrumental solos following or springing from a spoken word or phrase, as if in musical illustration of the word. I found this a little overdone, but all in all, the work proved to be a most effective and moving piece. That might stand some revision but is nonetheless a fine work as it is.

The highlight of the first half of the program, which offered Strauss' Divertimento, op. 86; Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin," Prokofieff's "Classical" Symphony, and Milhaud's "La Creation du Monde," was certainly the last-named, inspired by the composer's visit to Harlem in the roaring 20's, it was a patchwork quilt of the most blatant jazz breaks complete with the well-known phrase usually associated with "without a shirt," as well as echoes of Gershwin, and the Latin Quarter of Paris. Very entertaining it was, and it revealed in Mr. Munch a hitherto unsuspected ability to conduct a jam session with the best.

As the series of Bach-Mozart concerts came to an end to make way for the main events of the next three weeks, it seemed clear that Mozart is now box office. The concert of July 19 drew nearly 11,000, the second largest audience this special and expensive ($5 a seat) series. Of this number, however, only 1100 were seated; the others on a general $2 admission were scattered far and wide on Tanglewood's ample green lawns. For the entire series, held in the theater save in rainy weather, when concerts are given in the shed, the attendance now stands at the 26,000 mark to break the previous record of 1950 when 23,000 were attracted to these connoisseur chamber events.

ELIE.

Berkshire Fest Chamber Mark Set With 52G Take

Lenox, Mass., July 28.

Three weekends of Theatre-Concert Hall programs at the Berkshire Festival here, which ended Sunday night (26), broke all attendance records, with a total gross of $52,225 at a $5 top. Series of six concerts, two each weekend, is offered by the chamber [illegible] of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 1,150-seat hall, with overflow crowds sitting out on the lawn. New attendance mark was 26,150, or an average of 4,360 per concert. First weekend offered Bach music; second, Mozart, and last weekend a combination of Haydn and moderns.

Full 104-piece BSO is gathering here at Tanglewood this week for the three weekends of major concerts in the 6,000-seat Shed. Series A, this weekend, will have Charles Munch conducting Friday and Saturday nights (31-1) and Pierre Monteux as guest maestro Sunday afternoon. Advance [illegible] is good with Tanglewood expecting to better last season's b.o. and attendance, which averaged (in Shed and on the lawn) about 9,465 people per concert.

Dallas, Texas
Times Herald
7/14/53

On the Dial

James Fassett Travels Far To Obtain Music Information

By Jerry Hill

The Times Herald Radio-TV Editor

For the past four years James Fassett has been commentator and intermission host for KRLD-CBS' New York Philharmonic-Symphony broadcasts. For 28 intermissions each year his lively interviews with personalities in the music world and his word and sound pictures of musical events all over the country have given a warm, human background to the music which has been broadcast.

This summer, Fassett is using the same technique with seven major European music festivals and America's Tanglewood Festival in Massachusetts.

It was as assistant to the late famous Boston music critics, Philip Hale and H. T. Parker, that Fassett first started writing about music. Fassett, a Dartmouth graduate, with three years at Harvard in addition, cut his eye teeth in criticism under two of the best music critics this country has known.

At the same time, he worked in a Boston store, and used his spare time writing radio scripts. He never sold the scripts, but he did get a job as announcer. He progressed to the job as commentator on opera broadcasts and those of the Boston Symphony.

Fassett joined CBS in 1936 as an assistant music director on the New York Philharmonic-Symphony broadcasts. In 1942, he was made director and two years later supervisor of music for the network. He has been responsible for some of radio's outstanding musical programs, including "New Voices in Song," the Philadelphia Orchestra broadcasts from 1944 to 1950 and "Your Invitation to Music."

His approach to the musicians he interviews is informal. He has interviewed the pianist Rudolf Serkin, not as a virtu

JAMES FASSETT
Music Festivals Host

but as a Vermont farmer. He had tea with Lily Pons and got a recording of her and her parakeet whistling together. He compared musical notes with Jack Benny and found out about the great comedian's serious violin-playing ambitions.

Two years ago and again last year, Fassett took flying trips to Europe and brought back tape-recorded word and sound pictures for broadcast.

This summer again, Fassett is recording sights and sounds behind the scenes at the world's music festivals. That he brings an authentic bit of European life and music-making to his broadcasts at 2:30 p. m. each Sunday on KRLD-CBS is shown in a recent letter: "I wanted to go abroad this summer, but couldn't make it. But I listened to your talk on the Holland festival and for a brief time, I felt that I had been there."

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
Aug 1
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
Orchestra
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
SHED CONCERTS
Tonight at 8:30 — Soloist, LUKAS FOSS
Sun. Aug. 2 at 2:30—PIERRE MONTEUX, Conducting a TCHAIKOVSKY Program; Soloist—JORGE BOLET, Piano
Reserved Seats available—General Admission $2
Address Box Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Tanglewood Festival Still Best in Region

By ALLEN ERICSON

With summer theaters at every point of the compass, what chance has a music lover to hear good music during the warm months when travel is both pleasant and easy?

Our nearest opportunity is New Paltz, where a quartet series is being held at the college, the next program being tomorrow.

But for those who delight in listening to a full orchestra, a visit to the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. to hear the Boston Symphony Orchestra is a very worth-while effort.

What is the Festival?

It is a program of about six-weeks duration during which the Boston Symphony Orchestra gives a series of concerts at a lovely site known as Tanglewood in the Berkshire hills. Some of the concerts, in fact most of them, are given in the Shed, a large concert hall which has no sides. This permits the cool mountain breezes to come through. The acoustics are very good and for those who do not wish to buy a seat in the Shed, there is lots of room on the beautiful lawn around the Shed.

Picnic Is 'Must'

A picnic before the concert at Tanglewood seems to be a "must" for music lovers. A fine lake in the distant view, large surrounding forests and an audience devoted to music make the event outstanding.

This reviewer made the trip to Tanglewood last Sunday.

Friends of the Music Festival at Tanglewood will be glad to know that the food in the cafeteria on the grounds is as good as ever, the lake view just as amazing, the lawn just as clean and spacious and the music just as grand as can be.

It seemed perfectly unnecessary to use the [illegible] Shed to [illegible] the Ric[illegible] Ravel, Se[illegible] Milhaud [illegible] like a [illegible] dian [illegible] boughs [illegible] the [illegible]

Music in Review

BY TUCKER KEISER

Symphony, at Lenox

LENOX, July 25—This afternoon's program of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, given in the Shed to accommodate the large audience estimated at 8850 and to facilitate a coast-to-coast broadcast, moved from the era of knee breeches to that of [illegible]

Last night's concert was the first series devoted to 18th century composers; today's performance listed compositions by contemporary composers imitating their betters.

The first part of the concert, made up of imitations of the 18th century as studies in orchestration, was conducted by Charles Munch. Lukas Foss conducted the New England premiere of his own composition, "A Parable of Death."

In "Le Tombeau Du Couperin" Maurice Ravel resurrected the mannered elegance of a musical era that wore lace ruffles at its wrists. These musical tours d'addresse, which the French manage with a Gallic dexterity, are not handled with quite the same ease by the Teutonic mind. Richard Strauss' "Divertimento (after Couperin)" has the detailed authenticity but lacks the spirited delicacy with which Ravel evokes that bygone era.

Mr. Munch conducts Ravel as if Munch existed to conduct Ravel; he conducts Strauss as if Strauss existed to be conducted by Munch.

Again working in an idiom not essentially his own, Prokofieff produced the "Classical" symphony, classical to be sure in form but modernistic in vocabulary. Prokofieff speaks the classical language with a cosmopolitan lack of accent. The Boston Symphony Orchestra's reading of this score yesterday was marked by aristocratic dignity.

Ballet Score

After a visit to the United States in 1922, Darius Milhaud returned to France to compose a ballet score entitled "La Creation Du Monde." This composition reflected the composer's enthusiasm for "Le Jazz Hot," which he heard in New York's Harlem. Comparisons with Kurt Weill's "Three-Penny Opera" are inevitable.

Though the Weil score was composed some years later. Both are the works of European composers although with different training and traditions, and their conceptions of American jazz sound rather strange to 1953 ears.

Milhaud makes much use of piano, drums and saxophone to give the jazz flavor. Though the work is sectionalized, much of it evokes the atmosphere of smoke-filled dives. While "jazz at the Philharmonic" audiences would never mistake this for the real thing, this Gallicized Gershwin is a reasonable facsimile of the original.

Lukas Foss, who has been composer-in-residence with the orchestra for a number of years, has given us a great new composition in his "A Parable of Death." Using a text by Rainer Maria Rilke, Mr. Foss has cast his work in the form of an oratorio.

The part of the narrator, who tells the story of a man and a woman of love, and death, was movingly declaimed by Vera Zorina, whose training as a ballerina has given her a commanding stage presence which adds to her outstanding dramatic ability. There is a tenor solo, this afternoon sung by John McCollum (a singer unique among tenors in that he sings musically from the bottom to the top of his range). This musically underlines the emotional highpoints of the declamation.

The chorus has an integral part in the development of the work by commenting on the action in the classic Greek manner. Mr. Foss' music can be considered his finest composition so far. There is not one note too much and not one note is false in mood. The form is determined by the text, though a sort of leitmotif technique is employed.

From a purely audience standpoint this was by far the most noble music-making of the afternoon. The ecstatic applause was fully justified.

Widely-Varied Program Given At Tanglewood

Worcester, Gaz.

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., July 27 — Tanglewood listeners yesterday reacted with astonishment, resentment or delight, according to the range of their musical broad-mindedness, to the assortment comprising the final program of the Berkshire Music Festival's "little concert" series.

What they heard went from the vibrant harpsichord exercises of Richard Strauss' Diverimento (after Couperin), the butterfly delicacy of Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin;" to prokofieff's miniature satire in the traditional manner, his Classical Symphony; the strident, brassy syncopation of "La Creation du Monde," by Darius Milhaud; and Lukas Foss' dramatic "Parable of Death."

It was a program revealing a trend becoming evident at the Festival, that of replacing much of the Boston Symphony's solid, tried and true conventional concert menu with more challenging fare. Whether the audiences agree with this policy or not, they support it, and in constantly increasing numbers. Yesterday's 4,450 attendance at the concert, moved from the Theater Hall to the Shed to accommodate broadcasting demands, brought the six-concert series total attendance to 26,150, breaking the 23,500 record set in 1950.

It was the Milhaud "jazz poem," and Foss' choral work, which drew the most comment yesterday. The Milhaud carries familiar themes of American jazz, from blues on. If not for the fact that it was composed in the 20's, before inception of the "progressive jazz" era, one might attribute a be-bop echo to its more dissonant phrases.

Vera Zorina, Berlin-born ballet star, was narrator for the moving "Parable of Death," conducted by Mr. Foss. The young pianist composed this powerful choral recitative in Rome while studying there under a Fulbright Fellowship several years ago.

The major Festival concerts, three week-ends of Friday, Saturday and Sunday programs, will begin this Friday night. Charles Munch will conduct the Friday and Saturday evening concerts, with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor for an all-Tchaikowsky program Sunday afternoon.

FZ

---

le, Wednesday, July 29, 1953

Tanglewood

Tonight

8.30—Chamber music concert by Hungarian Quartet, gift of Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge. Theatre. Open to Friends of Berkshire Music Center and Mrs. Coolidge.

Golden Age News

Tanglewood Friends Issue Invitation To Concert Aug. 6

By GEORGINE ALCOMBRIGHT

Tickets to the concert at Tanglewood Thursday, Aug. 6, will be available to Golden Agers through the courtesy of the Friends of Tanglewood, it was announced at the meeting yesterday by Mrs. Charles R. Jordan. Those wishing to attend may make reservations with Mrs. Jordan at the meeting Tuesday. Members may carry their supper, or purchase it at the Tanglewood Restaurant.

A string quartet, consisting of Mrs. Harriet Vogt, first violinist, Mrs. Elizabeth Jayko, second violinist, Mrs. Pier A. Abetti, celist, and Mahlon L. Henderson, violist, entertained the 177 present. They were introduced by John S. Ross, president, and their services obtained through efforts of Mrs. Francis J. Sheran and Anthony Coli.

Visitors were Mrs. Elizabeth Dahlberg of Brooklyn, N.Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hart of Atlanta, Ga.; and Mrs. Lina Carini, Mrs. Rena DeGrio, and Mrs. Angelo Bertele, of this city.

Mrs. Mary J. McInerney was welcomed back afte a seven-month absence, and Mrs. Esther Heaney was welcomed as a new member. The birthday cake was awarded to Mrs. Mary G. White and Mrs. Leona Dunlap.

The meeting concluded with selections by Thomas F. Dumont on the harmonica, and Michael Dowd and the girls' choir, led by Mrs. Delia Noon.

Korean Conductor Appears Tomorrow At Festival Shed

John Kim of Pusan, South Korea, president and conductor of the Republic of Korea Symphony Orchestra and Chorus, will appear on the Tanglewood podium for the first time tomorrow evening, when he will conduct the symphony orchestra of the Berkshire Music Center in its weekly concert. He is a student of Leonard Bernstein, who also will lead the orchestra tomorrow evening in the program which follows:

Academic Festival Overture ...... Brahms
Mr. Kim conducting
L'Enfant Prodigue (Concert version)
Anne English, soprano; Robert Simpson, tenor; McHenry Boatwright, baritone Samuel Krachmalnick, conducting Symphony No. 5 .... Prokofieff
Mr. Bernstein, conducting

Room Demand Drops For the Week End

LENOX—A drop in the number of people attending Tanglewood concerts over the week end was reflected in the demand for room accommodations here.

Unlike the previous week, when all available rooms in town were taken by Saturday noon, there were still accommodations for about 26 more people at rooms registered with the Kiwanis Information Center when it closed Saturday night. A total of 170 rooms for about twice as many people are registered at the center.

This week end's drop in demand for rooms reflects the fact that attendance at Tanglewood Saturday and Sunday numbered 8850 people compared with more than 10,000 the week end before.

Rue To Sing At St. Stephen's

Robert Rue, a bass-baritone who is a second-year student at Tanglewood, will sing at the 10 AM worship in St. Stephen's Church on Sunday morning.

Mr. Rue received his first training at the University of Detroit, and later studied at the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston. He has appeared in opera recitals at Tanglewood a number of times this year.

Miss Betty-Lou Allen, a contralto, will sing at St. Stephen's next week. Mr. Rue is the third in a series of four Tanglewood guest artists who have performed in the local church.

9.15—News, World and Local.
9.30—The 850 Club, With Dan
10.15—Musical Moods.
10.30—Frank Singiser, News.
10.35—Dixie Four Quartet.
10.45—Helen Hall, Femme Fair.
11.00—Tanglewood Previews.
11.25—Holland Engle, News.
11.30—Ralph Fla[illegible]

2:30 [illegible] The [illegible] Festival in Tanglewood with Charles [illegible] conducting the Boston Symph[illegible] Orchest[illegible]

2:30 WEEI—[illegible] Festival

This afternoon at 2:30 Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of four live broadcasts from the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood. The program will be broadcast over WEEI from 2:30 to 4. James Fassett, who has just returned from visiting five European music festivals, will be the music commentator for the Tanglewood festival.

Works of Bengtz Presented at Gate To Tanglewood

By WAYNE C. SMITH

Lenox, July 28 The third of the season's weekly exhibitions in the reception hall at the main gate of Tanglewood, arranged through the co-operation of Stuart C. Henry, director of The Berkshire Museum, Pittsfield, comprises paintings, drawings and prints by Ture Bengtz.

Ture Bengtz, a summer resident of Stockbridge, is head of the Bengtz School of Art at the Lenox School. During the academic year he is head of the drawing and graphic arts department of the Boston Museum School. He became interested in the Berkshires when the Hub school held summer sessions at the Berkshire Museum several years ago.

A native of Finland Bengtz came to the United States in 1927. He began his art training in Finland and completed it at the Boston Museum School. Since he has become one of New England's most able and distinguished artists in the field of the graphic arts.

His awards have included the Paige Traveling Scholarship for European study, first prize in the New England competition sponsored by the Stewart Gallery, Boston; the Palmer Memorial Prize at the National Academy of Design, New York; and the Purchase Prize of the Library of Congress, Washington, D. C., in 1953.

"Cocoon," the winning lithograph in the Library of Congress show, is included in the Tanglewood exhibition. This is a picture of a man resting on the ground. Its contracted, contained quality makes it a most rewarding work. Also in the field of graphic processes is "Reverie," a lithograph burnt out with acid, a color lithograph, "The Fiddler" showing almost sculptural treatment of form; and "Drifting," a philosophical work in lithography showing a group of completely indifferent people crowded together in a boat drifting.

The canvas from which "Drifting" was taken is also included. It shows the artist's powers as a painter. This, as the other paintings, shows the artist's native influence in the character of the people, and the use of strong, expressive lines to accent the broadly painted areas. The paintings also characteristically show the figures accented against a geometrically designed background.

The paintings included are a sympathetic portrayal of "Children" at play and "Picnic." The remaining item is a powerful, but more conventional, head study in pen and ink and chalk.

Music

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
Charles Munch, Music Director
SHED CONCERTS OPEN NEXT FRI. EVE.
Soloist—ZINO FRANCESCATTI, Violin
Sat., Aug. 1 at 8:30—Soloist, LUKAS FOSS
Sun., Aug. 2 at 2:30—PIERRE MONTEUX Conducting. TCHAIKOVSKY Program. Soloist, JORGE BOLET, Piano.
Remaining Concerts Aug. 7, 8, 9; 14, 15, 16
Reserved seats available. General admission $2.00
Address Box Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Berkshire Festival Concert Tomorrow

Herald

Third and final of the Chamber Music concerts which Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge has generously donated to the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, and which are free to members of the Society of Friends of the School maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be held tomorrow evening at 8:30 p.m. in the Theater-Concert Hall.

The Hungarian Quartet, whose members are Zoltan Szekely and Alexander Moskowsky, violinists; Denes Koromzay, viola; Vilmos Palotai, cello, will give the following program:

Quartet in G major, Opus 77, No. 1 — Joseph Haydn
Quartet No. 4 .... Walter Piston
Quartet in B-flat major, Opus 130 — Ludwig van Beethoven

Three Clubs Join In Tanglewood Trip

The Business and Professional Women's Club for the first time organized a large group that went by two chartered busses last night to the Tanglewood concert.

Sixty-five members of the BPW and Soroptomist and Zonta Clubs made the trip, leaving from Old First Church.

The BPW is active in boosting Springfield's cultural life. It sponsors the Celebrity Series.

Boston Post Sun July 26/53

953

Music in Review

Tanglewood Concert

BY TUCKER KEISER

TANGLEWOOD, July 25—An all-Haydn program by the Boston Symphony Orchestra brought the series of chamber music concerts to a close tonight in the theatre here. Tonight's audience numbered 4400. Beginning with tomorrow afternoon's program, these concerts will employ the full 104 pieces of the orchestra for programs.

Hugh Ross, conductor of the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, shared the podium with Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Ross conducted the Theresa Mass in B-flat major in its first local performance.

Mr. Munch contributed readings of Symphony No. 95 in C minor and Symphony No. 100 in G major, commonly called the "Military."

The Theresa Mass, composed in 1799, uses a quartet of soloists antiphonally with the chorus. The quartet last night was Lois McCauley, soprano; Beatrice Krebs, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Lee Cass, bass, a remarkably well-balanced vocal quartet.

Haydn uses his quartet for the lyric passages and his chorus for the climactic effects. The quartet must also exhibit the ensemble qualities of a sensitive string quartet. The quartet tonight never once let Mr. Ross down.

As is in the nature of any setting of the mass, the climax musically comes with the Gloria. This movement of the Theresa Mass is one of the most glorious choral compositions ever written, and adds evidence that Haydn, as is shown by the scores now becoming available for study and performance, is one of the greatest choral writers in musical history.

Considering the mercurial conducting temperament of Mr. Munch, the performances of the Haydn symphonies possessed a surprising amount of style and elegance. Only once or twice did he rush the tempo, but by and large he kept himself and the orchestra under firm control. The dynamics were well ordered and presumably what the composer intended.

If the first movement of the C minor lacked the necessary unity in conception, the second movement was unexceptionable. Indeed, by the time the minuet arrived, enough Laendler oompah had been built up to provision a Bavarian inn for a festive week end.

In the "Military Symphony," a term derived from the use of the bass drum, triangle and cymbals in the second and fourth movements, we have a first movement built as a musical dialogue between flute and oboe and the rest of the orchestra. Doriot Anthony and Ralph Gomberg played their flute and oboe parts with such jolly humor that the mood was established for the rest of the symphony.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
Orchestra
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
SHED CONCERTS OPENS NEXT FRI. EVE.
Charles Munch will conduct, Beethoven's Lenore No. 3 Overture, Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto, Copland's "Appalachian Spring," Ravel's "Bolero"
Soloist—ZINO FRANCESCATTI, Violin
Sat., Aug. 1 at 8:30—Soloist LUKAS FOSS, Piano
Sun., Aug. 2 at 2:30—PIERRE MONTEUX Conducting
TCHAIKOVSKY Program, Soloist—JORGE BOLET, Piano
Remaining Concerts Aug. 7, 8, 9; 14, 15, 16
Reserved seats available—Gen. Adm. $2
Address Box Office Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

[226]

YONKERS, N. Y.
TIMES

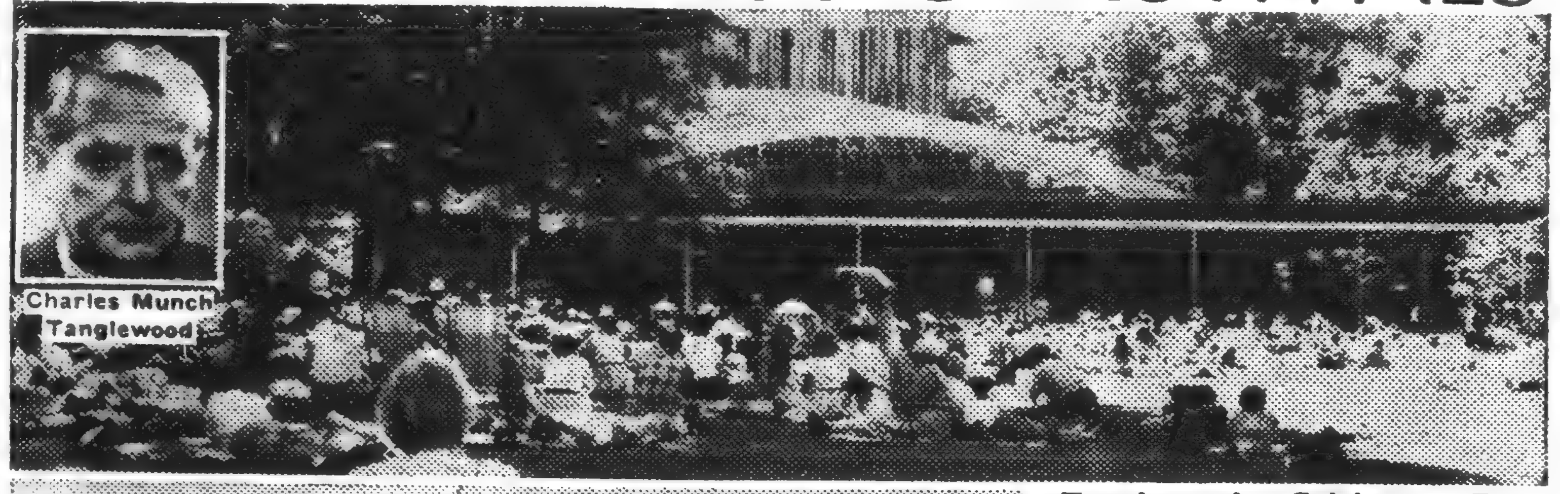
JUL 14 1953

BROOKLYN, N. Y.
BROOKLYN DAILY

JUL 16 1953

BROOKLYN, N.Y.
WILLIAMS[illegible]
8/7/53

BACKYARD MUSIC FESTIVALS



Charles Munch
Tanglewood

Bruno Walter
Salzburg

Malcolm Sargent
Edinburgh

Fassett

Tanglewood, Salzburg, Bayreuth, Edinburgh . . . music lovers the world over hold these names as magic. This summer everyone with a radio in his living room, in his garden or in his automobile can turn on CBS Radio's "World Music Festivals" on Sunday afternoons and, with a little imagination, make a tour of these music centers to hear the world's greatest orchestras, instrumentalists and singers.

Conducting this tour is James Fassett, who has been in Europe since May arranging broadcasts from Italy, Norway, Finland, Holland, Austria, Germany and Scotland. To the programs Fassett adds his colorful "sound and word pictures" of the places visited.

Beginning Sunday, July 26, Fassett returns for four broadcasts from America's own Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., three conducted by Charles Munch, one by Pierre Monteux.

On August 23 and 30, excerpts from the famous Salzburg Festival in Austria will include a concert by the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra, the world's oldest orchestra, conducted by Bruno Walter.

On Sept. 6 the CBS Radio series will present the Richard Wagner Festival in Bayreuth, Germany, featuring operas under the direction of the composer's grandsons, Wolfgang and Wieland Wagner.

For four broadcasts beginning Sept. 13, symphonic concerts, dramas, chamber music and operas will be heard from the Edinburgh, Scotland, Festival of Music and Drama under the direction of Sir Malcolm Sargent, Sir Adrian Boult and Bruno Walter.

HACKENSACK, N. J.
BERGEN RECORD

JUL 11 1953

Boston Without Munch?

By IRVING KOLODIN

THIS is the week-end when music-making begins in the spacious areas of Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., in the Berkshire hills, which the Boston Symphony has made famous as its summer home. As in the summer or two past, much of the music will be conducted by Charles Munch, music director of the celebrated orchestra; what the musically informed are wondering is: "How many more summers will Munch conduct in Tanglewood?"

That is related, of course to the question how much longer Munch conducts in Boston, for the two positions are very much interrelated. That, indeed, is the nub of the matter: for while Boston has been happy with Munch and Munch has been happy in Boston, it is a ground pattern of Boston activity that the winter music director take a prominent part in the summer doings at Tanglewood. And that is the point at issue, according to those who know. Munch finds the winter schedule a taxing one (he missed most of the season before last because of a breakdown incurred by overwork), and would prefer to rest in the summer. That is hardly possible as matters now stand.

This is admittedly a peculiar problem, one that could hardly have been anticipated when Serge Koussevitzky evolved the pattern of activity that has brought both honor and financial advantage to the founding fathers of Boston as well as the satisfaction of establishing an educational institution of the first importance. The Berkshire Music Center was a particular passion of Koussevitzky and in many ways his most durable monument. It doesn't appear to be the first for Munch, and it can't possibly be the second.

CHARLES MUNCH

What, then, if Munch and the Boston board come to an amiable settlement of this schism of interests and part with mutual expressions of regret, thoroughly sincere for once? That is a question that is agitating the minds of conductors from coast to coast and causing more restless tossing of nights than heat, humidity, and the high cost of living together. One mind that isn't agitated is that belonging to Guido Cantelli, who earned considerable favor during a guest tour in Boston last season, and might be considered ready by 1955.

If it worked out that way, it would be a singular instance of historical repetition, for it should not be forgotten that, in its last crisis (after the dismissal of Karl Muck in 1916), Boston had several years of stand-by administration under Pierre Monteux

---

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION

JUL 13 1953

Dr. Munch Waits for Planes For Flute Solo Feature

Lenox, July 12—Records fell this week end as the world famous Boston Symphony Orchestra launched the Berkshire Festival with two all-Bach programs. This afternoon's attendance was 3000, an even 500 above the corresponding program a year ago. Saturday night's record opening night audience of 4200 was 400 ahead of last season's initial program attendance.

Counting the 800 at this morning's session, Lenox saw a total of 8000 music lovers converge here in a 24-hour period.

Highlighting the afternoon was the flute soloist Doriot Anthony. During Bach's Suite No. 2, in B Minor, Conductor Charles Munch patiently awaited the passing of a squadron of planes before proceeding in order that Miss Anthony's beautiful solo would not have to compete with the drone of the motors overhead.

Attending the Bach cantata was Rev. Michael Palotau, a native of Hungary who is now professor at Mt. Joseph College in Lackawanna, N. Y. Before coming to this country he studied in Budapest and Salzburg.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.
MORNING TRIBUNE

JUL 12 1953

Rood Sculpture at Tanglewood

LENOX, MASS — An exhibit of stone sculpture by Mineapolis artist John Rood in the gardens of the Tanglewood estate is a feature of the 1953 Berkshire festival here this summer.The showing has been arranged with the help of the Berkshire museum, Pittsfield, Mass.

Artist-in-residence since 1945, author, lecturer in art education at the University of Minnesota, Rood has had more than 100 exhibitions in the United States, including 12 one-man shows in New York, since he turned his attention from writing and publishing to sculpture in 1936. He is currently associated with The New Gallery, New York, which will show these first examples of his new direction in sculpture in the autumn.

Tanglewood

Tonight

8.30—Berkshire Festival concert by Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting; Lukas Foss, soloist. Music Shed.

Tomrrow

*10.00 AM—Chamber Music concert by students of Berkshire Music Center. Chamber Music Hall.

Suite for Five Brass Instruments .... Monteverdi
Calvin Torrey and Paul Willwerth, trumpets; Raymond Orcutt and Russell Nahat, trombones; Cherry Beauregard, tuba

String Quartet, Opus 11 ... Samuel Barber
Stephen Elsaesser and Miriam Wexler, violins; Endel Kalam, viola; Martha Field, cello.

String Quartet in F-major, Opus 59 .... Beethoven
Barbara Lieberman and William dePasquale, violins; Barbara Kroll, viola; Uziahu Wiesel, cello.

2.30 PM—Berkshire Festival all-Tchaikovsky concert by Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux conducting; Jorge Bolet, soloist.

*Open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center whose voluntary contributions help to support the school.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
Orchestra
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
TODAY at 2:30
All-Tchaikovsky Program
PIERRE MONTEUX Conducting
Soloist—JORGE BOLET, Piano
Remaining Concerts, Aug. 7, 8, 9; 14, 15, 16
Reserved Seats available—General Admission $2
Special Event: TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE
Thurs. Aug. 13—Conductors CHARLES MUNCH, LEONARD BERNSTEIN; Soloists—ISAAC STERN, Violin LEONTYNE PRICE, Soprano, WILLIAM WARFIELD, Baritone.
Reserved Seats now—$3, $4, $5. General Admission $2.50. Address Box Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

NY[illegible] 8/2

"My prediction Tanglewood's opening big-shed concert last Friday evening would outsell any Thursday evening concert of any year to date, with new policy of three straight concerts on successive days—Friday night, Saturday night, and Sunday afternoon—indicating that Tanglewood's sixteenth season would break all records, is confirmed by N. Y. Times, Aug. 1, Page 8, Columns 5 and 6. Yah 8/6

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
Orchestra
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
SHED CONCERTS
Tonight at 8:30—Soloist, LUKAS FOSS
Sun. Aug. 2 at 2:30—PIERRE MONTEUX, Conducting a TCHAIKOVSKY Program; Soloist—JORGE BOLET, Piano.
Reserved Seats Available—General Admission $2.
Address Box Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

TODAY ON WTOP

Eddie Gallaher

Robert Q. Lewis

2:30 P. M. WORLD MUSIC FESTIVALS
Pierre Monteux conducts an all Tchaikovsky program from Tanglewood.

aug 2

[227]

LITTLE ROCK, ARK.
ARK. DEMOCRAT

Berkshire Music Fete To Be Broadcast Today

The famed Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., will be heard on KTHS at 1:30 p. m. today as a feature of the Columbia Broadcasting System's "World Music Festival" series, with James Fassett as producer and commentator. Fassett has just returned from festival broadcasts from Italy, Norway, Finland and Holland, and he will return to Europe at the end of a four-week period in Tanglewood. The Salzburg, Bayreuth and Edinburgh festivals will be broadcast later in the series.

The scenic wonders of western Canada will be described on "Vacationland, U. S. A." today on KGHI as an American Broadcasting Co. feature. Points of interest in the many national parks and at Lake Louise will be described. The broadcast is scheduled for 5:45 p. m.

The "Best Plays" version of "The Rose Tattoo," originally scheduled for July 5, will be heard at 7:30 tonight on KARK as a National Broadcasting Co. network feature. Maureen Stapleton and Eli Wallach will play the leading roles which they created in the Broadway run of the play.

Conductor Hugo Winterhalter will be guest on "Tony Martin Time" at 7 tonight, also on KARK, and his latest recordings will be played.

Symphonette Programmed.

The Little Rock Symphonette, under direction of Sidney Palmer, will be heard at 8 tonight on KLRA, in a 30-minute recording of rehearsals for concerts to be given by the group in August. Mr. Palmer and Joe Myers will handle the commentary.

Other programs scheduled on KARK today include "Confession" at 8:30 p. m., which has attracted attention because of the unusual musical instrument—the cymbalum—which provides musical background and sound effects on this program. The cymbalum is one of the most ancient of stringed instruments, predating the piano and even the clavichord.

Tomorrow evening's "Railroad Hour" at 7 p. m. on KARK will present Gordon MacRae and Dorothy Warenskjold in "Starlight," a musical romance of old vaudeville days and the early days of radio.

At 8 p. m. tomorrow, also on KARK, Eileen Farrell, American dramatic soprano, will be heard on "The Telephone Hour," accompanied by the Bell Symphonic Orchestra under direction of Donald Voorhees.

Billie Burke, veteran stage, screen and character actress, will be Bob Hope's guest on his daytime show at 9:30 a. m., Monday through Friday of this week. The program will be heard here on KARK.

Miller Music Slated.

Glenn Miller's music will be heard in favorite recordings at 6 p. m. tomorrow on KLRA. Also to be heard tomorrow are Ralph Flanagan recordings at 10:45 a. m. (Monday, Wednesday and Friday), "Stringing Along" (Monday through Saturday) at 5:30 p. m. and Johnny Argo's "Salute to Hits" (Monday through Saturday) at 4 p. m., all on KVLC.

The "Cities Service Band of America program on KARK at 8:30 p. m. tomorrow will feature a new march, "Safety First," by Paul Lavalle and Tom Glazer, which is dedicated to the Safety First Council of America.

Outstanding Monday-through-Friday shows of the week will include "Edward Arnold, Storyteller," at 2:55 p. m., and "The Jack Berch Show," at 11:25 p. m., both on KGHI as ABC network features.

Other programs scheduled for the week include:

KTHS: Wednesday, "Rogers of the Gazette," third in a series of weekly productions starring Will Rogers jr., 8:30 p. m.; Thursday, "Penny Serenade," starring Irene Dunne on "General Electric Theater," 7:30 p. m.

KLRA: Tuesday, 10:15 a. m., "Mescal Johnston Calling;" Wednesday, 12:15 p. m., Johnnie Holmes in "Farm Reporter;" Thursday, 6:55 p. m., "Pony League Game," with Herbie Byrd at the microphone; Friday, 6:40 p. m., "Arkansas Today," Mark Weaver's news report; Saturday, 6:45 a. m., "Arkansas Livestock" by Johnnie Holmes.

KGHI: Tuesday, 7:30 p. m., "Discovery," featuring Dr. Horace Byers of the University of Chicago's Department of Meterology; Wednesday, 8 p. m., "Mr. President," starring Edward Arnold.

KARK: Wednesday, 9:35 p. m., "Report From the White House," with presidential press secretary James C. Hagerty as guest.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE

JUL 22 1953

Tanglewood Concert on CBS

Special to the Herald Tribune

LENOX, Mass., July 21.—Sunday afternoon's Berkshire Festival concert at Tanglewood will be held in the large Music Shed, instead of in the smaller Theater-Concert Hall as originally scheduled, because the first ninety minutes of the concert will be broadcast by the Columbia Broadcasting System in its World Music Festivals series.

The part of the program to be played by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch which goes on the air includes Richard Strauss' Divertimento, Op. 86; Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin," Prokofiev's Classical Symphony and Milhaud's "Le Creation du Monde." Lukas Foss' "Parable of Death" will follow. The concert begins at 2:30.

At Berkshire Festival

ISAAC STERN, violinist, is soloist in the all-Mozart programs of Sat. eve. July 18 (8:30 p. m.) and Sun. aft. July 19 (2:30 p. m.), by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, of the Berkshire Festival, in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Mr. Stern performs the Concerto for Violin in G (K.216) on July 18; and with Joseph de Pasquale, viola, the Sinfonis Concertante, for Violin and Viola (K.364) on July 19.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE

JUL 13 1953

First of Tanglewood Programs Is Held

By D. E. RITZ

Five of the six Brandenburg concertos by J. S. Bach were presented at the Tanglewood Theatre-Concert Hall Saturday evening for the first program of the 1953 Berkshire Festival. Charles Munch conducted the picked group of Boston Symphony players with Lukas Foss, pianist, assisting soloists from the orchestra.

* * *

THE BRANDENBURG Concertos are amazing in the ingenuity with which Bach has contrived the ultimate in tonal delineation from a small orchestral body.

Soloists from the orchestra included Doriot Anthony, flutist, and the only woman ever to achieve first chair rank in the organization; Roger Voisin, trumpet; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Richard Burgin, concertmaster; and Mr. Foss.

The concertos are all so wonderful that to pick and choose one's favorites seems quite picayune.

Perhaps the most interesting contrast of the evening was between the concertos number 3 and 6, played immediately before and following intermission. Both are for strings but there the resemblance stops. Number three is made up of two Allegros with no intervening slow movement, which however, is replaced by a two-note bridge passage between the virile and vivid scoring for violins, violas and 'cellos. Number six gives the violinists a vacation and exploits the tone color of the violas and 'cellos.

* * *

MR. FOSS' MUSICIANSHIP was evident in the splendid example of ensemble playing with Miss Anthony and Mr. Burgin in the Concerto number 5. The trio have the "Adagio affettuoso" movement completely to themselves and it was true musicianship throughout. They were joined by the rest of the ensemble in the first and third movements. The amazing cadenza for harpsichord, which closes the first movement, was given with the lucidity and clarity which we have come to associate with Mr. Foss' playing.

Mr. Voisin and the special trumpet which he used for the concerto number 2 received the maximum of attention in that work, although the trumpet is only used in the final movement. Miss Anthony was acclaimed in both Concertos number two and five and Mr. Burgin had most trying and difficult parts in Concertos one, two and five.

The weather was ideal, the hall was filled and the audience overflowed onto the lawn in the traditional Tangelwood manner. The second Bach program was presented yesterday afternoon.

The next concerts in the series will be presented by the chamber orchestra on Saturday night and Sunday afternoon with Mozart pro-

TUNE IN AT 2:30

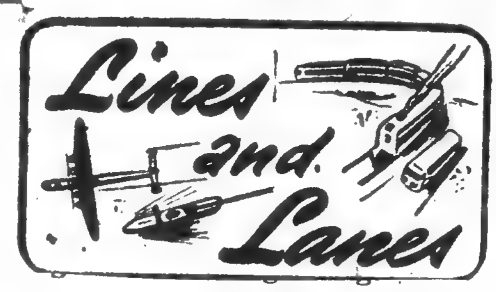
With the accomplished James Fassett, CBS radio director of music as commentator, the Berkshire Music Festival will be on the air July 26 in the first of four Sunday afternoon concerts scheduled to be broadcast from the Music Shed.

From Tanglewood at 2:30 exactly will come the following program:

Richard Strauss — Divertimento (after Couperin), Op. 86
Ravel—"Le Tombeau de Couperin, Suite
Prokofieff—"Classical" Symphony, Op. 25
Milhaud, "La Creation due Monde" (broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, James Fassett, commentator)
Foss—"A Parable of Death," cantata for narrator, tenor, orchestra and chorus.
(New England premiere)
Conducted by the Composer—Vera Zorina, narrator; John McCollum, tenor; Berkshire Festival Chorus.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
POST

JUL 21 1953



RAIL

Music lovers who wish to attend the Berkshire Festival Sunday afternoon concerts at Tanglewood will be interested in the arrangements announced by New Haven R.R. for special low round-trip fares including general admission to the concert, railroad fare and taxes, good on the train leaving Grand Central Terminal at 8:20 Sunday mornings.

The train arrives at Stockbridge at 12:15 p.m. where busses are available to transport the passengers to the music shed. Following the concert the buses return to Pittsfield in plenty of time for pasengers to have dinner before boarding the train at 7:30 p.m. for New York where it is due at 11:30 p.m.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES

JUL 26 1953

CAMP COURSE IN U. S. WAYS

50 Foreign Students to Sample Athletics and Square Dances

Fifty foreign students will begin a three-week stay at Camp Columbia on Bantam Lake, Conn., today for an intensive course in the language and customs of the United States offered by the American Language Center of Columbia University.

These students, most of whom will remain in the United States for two or four year college courses, will study representative neighboring towns and enjoy swimming, boating and athletics, square dances and dramatic performances and a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Music Festival.

This informal program will be the first introduction to the United States for many of the students, who have just arrived from their native countries. The group will return to the Columbia campus on Aug. 15 for three more weeks of the course before beginning regular univeristy study.

WORCESTER, MASS.
GAZETTE
JUL 17 1953

STUDYING AT BERKSHIRE MUSIC CENTER

LENOX, July 17—Miss Margaret Lynch (left) of 35 Castine street, Worcester, is studying at the Berkshire Music Center under direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of Tanglewood's Opera Department. Miss Lynch and another Massachusetts resident, Miss Nancy Pease of Springfield, are greeted by the dean of the center, Ralph Berkowitz. Miss Lynch, a mezzo-soprano, is enrolled in the opera department. A graduate of Ascension High School in Worcester, she will return to Syracuse University in the Fall. The Summer school is maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood in conjunction with the orchestra's Bekshire Festival.

ALBANY, N. Y.
KNICKERBOCKER NEWS

JUL 10 1953

Art on Display At Tanglewood

An exhibit of paintings by rea artists will be shown at 'anglewood beginning Sunday s the second in a series of veekly painting and sculpture isplays to be given during the lerkshire Festival concerts by ıe Boston Symphony Orıestra.

The exhibit will be on display ır concertgoers and visitors to anglewood at the reception all at the main entrance ırough July 18.

The group show assembled by 'arry Lane, West Stockbridge, epresents these artists: Stan-y Bate, Claverack; John Carill, East Chatham; Arnold lark, Great Barrington; Homer unn, West Stockbridge; June Kimball, New Ashford, Mass., nd Mr. Lane.

2:30 World Music Fes-
2:45 tivals: Boston
3:00 Symphony Orch.;
3:15 Berkshire Festi-
3:30 val; Pierre Mon-
3:45 teux, conductor.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN

JUL 19 1953

CHARLES MUNCH will conduct a Berkshire Festival Concert this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the Theater-Concert Hall in "Tanglewood." Isaac Stern, violinist and Joseph De Pasquale, violist, will play the Simfonia Concertante in the All-Mozart program. Tonight, there will be a Composers' Forum, open to members of the Friends of Berkshire Music Center, whose contributions help support the school.

CONCERTS IN The Shed in "Tanglewood" are scheduled for weekends of July 31, Aug. 1, 2; Aug. 7, 8, and 9 and Aug. 14, 15, 16. Charles Munch is conductor; Pierre Monteux and Leonard Bernstein, guest conductors. Choral concerts in "Tanglewood" are directed by Hugh Ross. Aaron Copland serves as moderator of Composers' Forums; Boris Goldovsky is in charge of several "Evenings of Opera." Chamber music concerts are presented by advanced students Sunday mornings, under supervision of Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and William Kroll. "Tanglewood" is the summer home of the Boston Symphony.

[208]

Red Hook Ad

Bard Prof. Has Work Performed At Tanglewood

7/16

MISS VERA ZORINA

Vera Zorina, noted ballerina, stage and screen star, will narrate Luka Foss' cantata, "A Parable of Death," which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform with the composer conducting, at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Sunday afternoon, July 26.

Anthony Hecht, Instructor of Literature at Bard College, is the translator of "A Parable of Death", which was set to music by Lukas Foss. The July 26 concert will be the first of four Sunday afternoon Festival performances to be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio from Tanglewood, as the only American event in the network's "World Music Festivals" program, which includes highlights from seven European summer festivals. The first portion of the program Tanglewood audiences will hear, from 2:30 to 4 p.m. EDT, will be heard on the air, with James Fassett, CBS radio director of music, as commentator.

A feature of the weekend will be the New England premiere of Lukas Foss' "A Parable of Death," which was commissioned for Vera Zorina by the Louisville Orchestra last season, which the composer will conduct with Miss Zorina as narrator, John McCollum as tenor soloist and the Festival chorus of Berkshire Music Center students participating. The cantata had its premiere in Louisville last March, and has since been heard in New York in April and at the Ojai Festival, California, in May. The text is translated by Anthony Hecht from "Stories of God" by the Austrian writer Rainer Maria Rilke. Miss Zorina, who has appeared in Max Reinhardt productions in Berlin, in ballet in London with Anton Dolin and in America with the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo, in many films, and on Broadway in "I Married an Angel," "Louisiana Purchase" and "The Tempest," will make her first appearance at Tanglewood. She has narrated Honegger's "Jeanne d'Arc au bucher" with the Boston and other orchestras.

Important novelties will be first performances at Tanglewood of the Haydn Theresa Mass and the Milhaud "La Creation du Monde," neither of which has been played before by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and of Richard Strauss' Divertimento (after Couperin), composed in 1941, which the orchestra played for the first time in the U. S. last season.

The Haydn Theresa Mass, composed in 1799, will have as soloists: Lois McCauley, Trenton, N. J., soprano; Beatrice Krebs, New York City, alto; John McCollum, Tuckahoe, N. Y., tenor; Lee Cass, New York City, bass. All are students in the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center. Darius Milhaud's orchestral composition was composed in 1923 following the French composer's first visit to the U. S., and reflects his enthusiasm for Harlem jazz.

DAYTON, OHIO
JOURNAL HERALD

JUL 20 1953

Like Tanglewood

Last Thursday evening the Chamber Music society assembled on the lawns of the Carrol I. Burtanger residence, 4334 Dorset drive. Members of the audience brought with them camp stools and blankets and seated themselves mainly after the manner of the audience at Tanglewood in the Berkshires when the Boston Symphony orchestra is heard in summer festival. Performers played in the living room whose wide doors open on terrace and garden.

These meetings are not social

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
EVE. NEWS

JUL 17 1953

No Politics Here

The Federal Communications Commission yesterday granted a permit to the Lowell Institute Cooperative Broadcasting Council for the operation of an educational television station, WGBH-TV, from Milton.

Construction of the transmitter in that town will begin within two months, and may cost as much as a half-million dollars. Funds for this first educational television station allowed in this state have been provided by the Filene Foundations, the Fund for Adult Education, and the Lowell Institute Cooperative Council.

The council is composed of representatives of Boston College, Boston University, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Boston Museum of Fine Arts, Harvard University, Lowell Institute, New England Conservatory of Music, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Northeastern University and Tufts College.

In short, this new station will be privately owned and privately operated. It will not be state subsidized, so it will not be state controlled. The state is not entering the television business.

Since the station will be privately owned, it will not have to allow political considerations to guide its decisions. It announced last night that it would not permit educators who have refused to answer Congressional inquiries to participate in its programs. Most of us will hail that decision as a wise one.

However, if the state had its hand in this station, we would also have misgivings. If the politicians were in a position to say what would and what would not be telecast, and who could participate and who could not, then we would certainly and rightly fear that politics would dominate the station.

The FCC has also granted educational outlets on Channel 82 in Amherst and Channel 80 at North Adams. The Western Massachusetts Educational Television Council is also planning to raise the necessary money for the stations by private solicitation and not by state appropriation.

If we need special television facilities to fulfill the educational and cultural needs of Western Massachusetts, certainly they should be as free from political support and control as is the station now being erected in Eastern Massachusetts.

This Week At TANGLEWOOD

7/

Wed., *8:30 p. m.—Theatre-Concert Hall. Coolidge Recital, by the Hungarian Quartet.

Thurs., *8:30 p. m.—Music Shed Orchestra Concert by students of Department I.

Fri., 8:30 p. m.—Music Shed. Berkshire Festival Concert — Charles Munch, conductor

Sat., 10:00 a. m.—Music Shed Boston Symphony Orchestra— Charles Munch, conductor. Public Rehearsal.

*3:00 p. m.—Music Shed Organ recital—E. Power Biggs

*4:00 p. m.—Barn Concert of Renaissance and Baroque Music by students of the Tanglewood Study Group.

8:30 p. m.—Music Shed. Berkshire Festival Concert — Charles Munch, Conductor

Sun., *10:00 a. m.—Chamber Music Hall—Chamber Music Concert by students of Dept. 1—2:30 p. m.—Music Shed. Berkshire Festival Concert, Pierre Monteux, conductor. (Broadcast coast-to-coast by CBS Radio.

* Events open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Score Cards

Berk Eagle July 14/53

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

The Eagle critics know the score, a most discerning bunch; with Junie scoring Rembrandt and Rosie panning Munch.

These connoisseurs of artistry are ever on the ball; and their erudite adjudgments often spell decline and Fall.

A breach of taste or subtlety The Eagle's quick to spy, and the self-annointed critic is the Happel of its eye.

ALBERT JACKSON.

Becket.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH
TRIBUNE

JUL 19 1953

Provoan Gains Music Honor

For the first time a Utah musician, Edward A. Sandgren, has received the Anne M. Gannet scholarship award to the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Mass., awarded ~~annually by the~~ National Federation of Music Clubs.

The scholarship is given each year to an outstanding musician in the United States, and is an outright award of $400 covering all expenses at the Berkshire Music Center for a period of six weeks.

Mr. Sandgren won the award this year as a result of his accomplishments in the field of choral music throughout the Utah valley area. Included in the choral organizations which he has organized and directed are the Master Singers male chorus of Cedar City, which toured Utah two successive years in concert; the Cedar City Lions quartet which won first place in New York City, with Mr. Sandgren as director

Edward A. Sandgren . . . Wins Berkshire Scholarship.

THE SALT LAKE TRIBUNE

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES

JUL 26 1953

CENTRAL CITY

Western Tradition Gives Color to Festival

By OLIN DOWNES

American Singers

All the operas are sung in English. Nearly all the singers are young Americans. Regardless, for the moment, of degrees of individual excellence in their parts, it may be said that on the basis of three performances heard by this writer at Central City a fortnight ago, there is not a really poor voice or dramatic dud or routinier among them. They come from beginnings in Broadway "musicals" and light opera, or the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, the Curtis Institute at Philadelphia, or the Manhattan School of Music in New York, the Hartt Opera Guild in Hartford, the Atwater Kent and Gainsborough Foundation Awards, the New York City Opera Company, the San Francisco Opera, and echelons of the Metropolitan. In variou

---

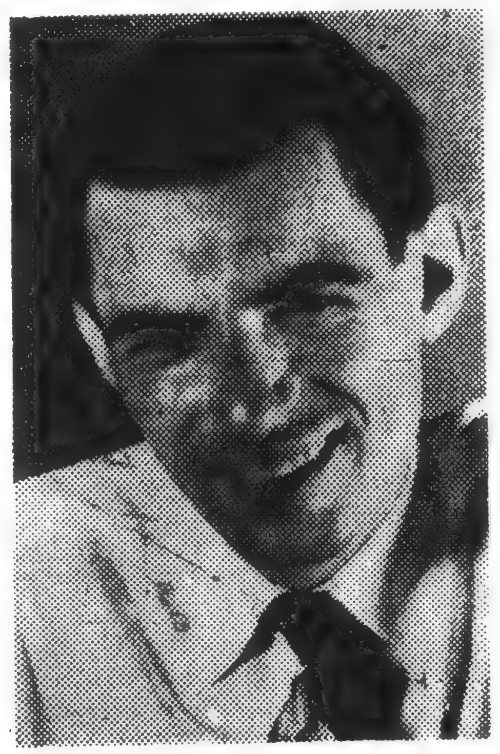
OAKLAND, CAL
TRIBUNE
7/19/53

Basses Needed

Dr. Hans Leschke would like to enroll more basses, and has openings for other voices, in the Municipal Chorus, which is rehearsing Lambert's "Rio Grande" for the Art Commission "pops" on August 25 and preparing Mozart's Requiem. Singers joining now are eligible for the $150 scholarship competition. Eastbay section rehearses Tuesday nights in Room 300, Oakland Technical High School, at 7:45.

Events at College of the Pacific Music Camp in Stockton include "Brigadoon" next Thursday and Friday nights, directed by Mischa Bakaleinikoff.

Leonard Rosenman, of New York, former Berkeley composer, has been awarded $750 by the Koussevitzky Foundation and a summer in residence at Berkshire Music Center, to compose a one-act opera for performance by the school's opera department next summer.



Leonard Rosenman, former Berkeley composer, has been awarded a Koussevitzky Foundation grant.

Mannes College of Music offers $1000 for a full-length opera of $600 for a one-act opera submitted before May 15. Information from Fred Werle, Mannes College of Music, 157 East 74th Street, New York City 21.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
EVE. NEWS

JUL 21 1953

To Broadcast Sunday Event At Tanglewood

Berkshire Festival Concert Slated to Go on National Network

Because Sunday's Berkshire Festival concert at Tanglewood, Lenox, will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, it will be given in the Music Shed instead of in the theater-concert hall.

The Sunday afternoon concert by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, will be the first of four Sunday afternoon Festival performances to be heard on the air, as the only American event in the network's "World Music Festivals" program, which includes highlights from seven European summer festivals. The first portion of the program Tanglewood audiences will hear, from 2.30 to 4 p. m. EDT, will be heard on the air, with James Fassett, CBS radio director of music, as commentator.

Broadcast exigencies which make the change of location necessary will necessitate a prompt start of the program at 2.30 p. m.; also will preclude any interruption of the opening orchestral selection on each of the Sunday programs to seat late-comers. Seatholders are cautioned they cannot be seated until after the conclusion of the entire opening number: July 26: "Divertimento (after Couperin), Op. 86, by Richard Strauss runs 20 minutes; Aug. 2; Tchaikovsky's "Serenade for Strings" runs 25 minutes; Aug. 9: Schubert's "Symphony No. 5, in G-flat" runs 21 minutes; Aug. 16: Schubert's "Symphony in B minor (Unfinished)" runs 21 minutes.

Patrons holding seats for the theater-concert hall on Sunday will be admitted to the reserved seat locations in the Music Shed marked in red on their tickets. General admission seat-holders will be seated in unreserved sections of the Shed.

Sunday's complete program is as follows:

Music Shed, Tanglewood, 2:30 p. m. promptly

Richard [illegible]
Ravel [illegible]
Prokofieff [illegible]
Milhaud [illegible]
Foss [illegible]

. . . Switching the Thursday night concerts to Friday may be a bad break for the county's innkeepers, who miss the extra day's spread of business, but the past week end's attendance record seems to prove that it makes sense at the Tanglewood box office . . . Abe

---

'Requiem' To Be Performed at Music Festival

Lois Marshall, soprano, and William Warfield, baritone, have been chosen by Charles Munch as the soloists [illegible] "Requiem" which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform for the Berkshire Festival concert of Friday, [illegible]

The 25-year-old Canadian soprano [illegible] winner made her American debut with a Town Hall recital and was chosen by Toscanini for his radio performance of Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis." She will make her debut at Tanglewood this summer, as will Mr. Warfield. [illegible] concert debut in 1950 he sung "Old Man River" in the latest filming of "Show Boat" and Porgy in Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess" in Vienna, Berlin, London and Paris.

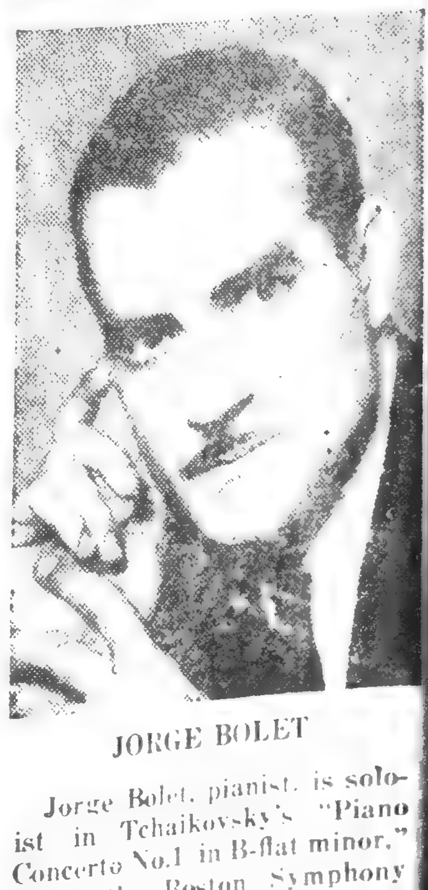
A change in the contribution of mezzo-soprano Jennie Tourel to this season's Tanglewood programs will find her also singing the contralto role in Berlioz' dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet" on Friday, August 7. The following night (Saturday, August 8), when Leonard Bernstein conducts a memorial to the late Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, Miss Tourel sings the Ravel "Sheherazade" and the Mahler Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection") with basso Nicola Mascona.

The Berkshire Festival opens at Tanglewood with two Bach concerts, July 11-12; two Mozart concerts, July 18-19; a Haydn program, July 25, and one devoted to 20th century composers, July 26, all preceding the major Festival in the Music Shed, July 31-August 16.

A change in the Sunday afternoon, August 9 Festival concert program will find Charles Munch conducting Albert Roussel's "Bacchus et Ariane" instead of Wagner's Overture to "Tannhauser."

EE HERALD—THURSDAY, JU

At Tanglewood



JORGE BOLET

Jorge Bolet, pianist, is soloist in Tchaikovsky's "Piano Concerto No.1 in B-flat minor," which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform in the Sunday afternoon, Aug. 2, concert of the Berkshire Festival. The program will be held in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., beginning at 2:30. Pierre Monteux will be guest-conductor of an all-Tchaikovsky program.

[229]

7/16

rin' To Be ned at Festival

rshall, soprano, and Wil-field, baritone, have been Charles Munch as the or Brahms' "Requiem," Boston Symphony Or-ll perform for the Berktival concert of Friday,
, at Tanglewood, Lenox,

-year-old Canadian sos last year's Naumburg ade her American debut wn Hall recital, and was , Toscanini for his radio ce of Beethoven's "Missa
She will make her deanglewood this summer.
r Warfield, who since his debut in 1950 has sung n River" in the latest
"Show Boat" and Porgy win's "Porgy and Bess" in Berlin, London and Paris.
ge in the contribution of prano Jennie Tourel to n's Tanglewood programs her also singing the com-le in Berlioz' dramatic
, "Romeo and Juliet" on August 7. The following aturday, August 8), when Bernstein conducts a methe late Dr. Serge Kous-Miss Tourel sings the "Sheherazade" and the Symphony No. 2 ("Resurwith basso Nicola Moserkshire Festival opens at ood with two Bach conly 11-12; two Mozart conly 18-19; a Haydn pro-ly 25, and one devoted to tury composers, July 26, ding the major Festival in c Shed, July 31-August 16.

nge in the Sunday after-ugust 9 Festival concert will find Charles Munch ng Albert Roussel's "Bac-Ariane" instead of Wag-erture to "Tannhauser."

for Strings" runs 2
g. 9: Schubert's "Sym
5, in G-flat" runs 2
Aug. 16: Schubert' in B minor (Unfin 21 minutes.
holding seats for th
ert hall on Sunday wil to the reserved seat n the Music Shed
red on their tickets dmission seat-holders
ed in unreserved se Shed.
complete program is

ed. Tanglewood, 2
ptly:
... Divertimento (af
Op. 86
ombeau de Couperin", Su lassical" Symphony, Op.
"La Creation du Mond ationally by CBS Radio Fassett, commentator)
... "A Parable of Deat
Narrator, Tenor, Orches England Premiere)
the Composer—Vera Zori n McCollum, tenor; Be Chorus.

LD—THURSDAY,

Tanglewoo

RGE BOLET

Bolet, pianist, is solo
Tchaikovsky's "Pian
No.1 in B-flat mino
e Boston Sympho will perform in t
fternoon, Aug. 2, co
he Berkshire Festiv
ram will be held
Shed at Tanglew
Mass., beginnin rre Monteux wi
ductor of an ky program.

Monterey Natives Keep Francescatti Happy As He Prepares for His Tanglewood Debut

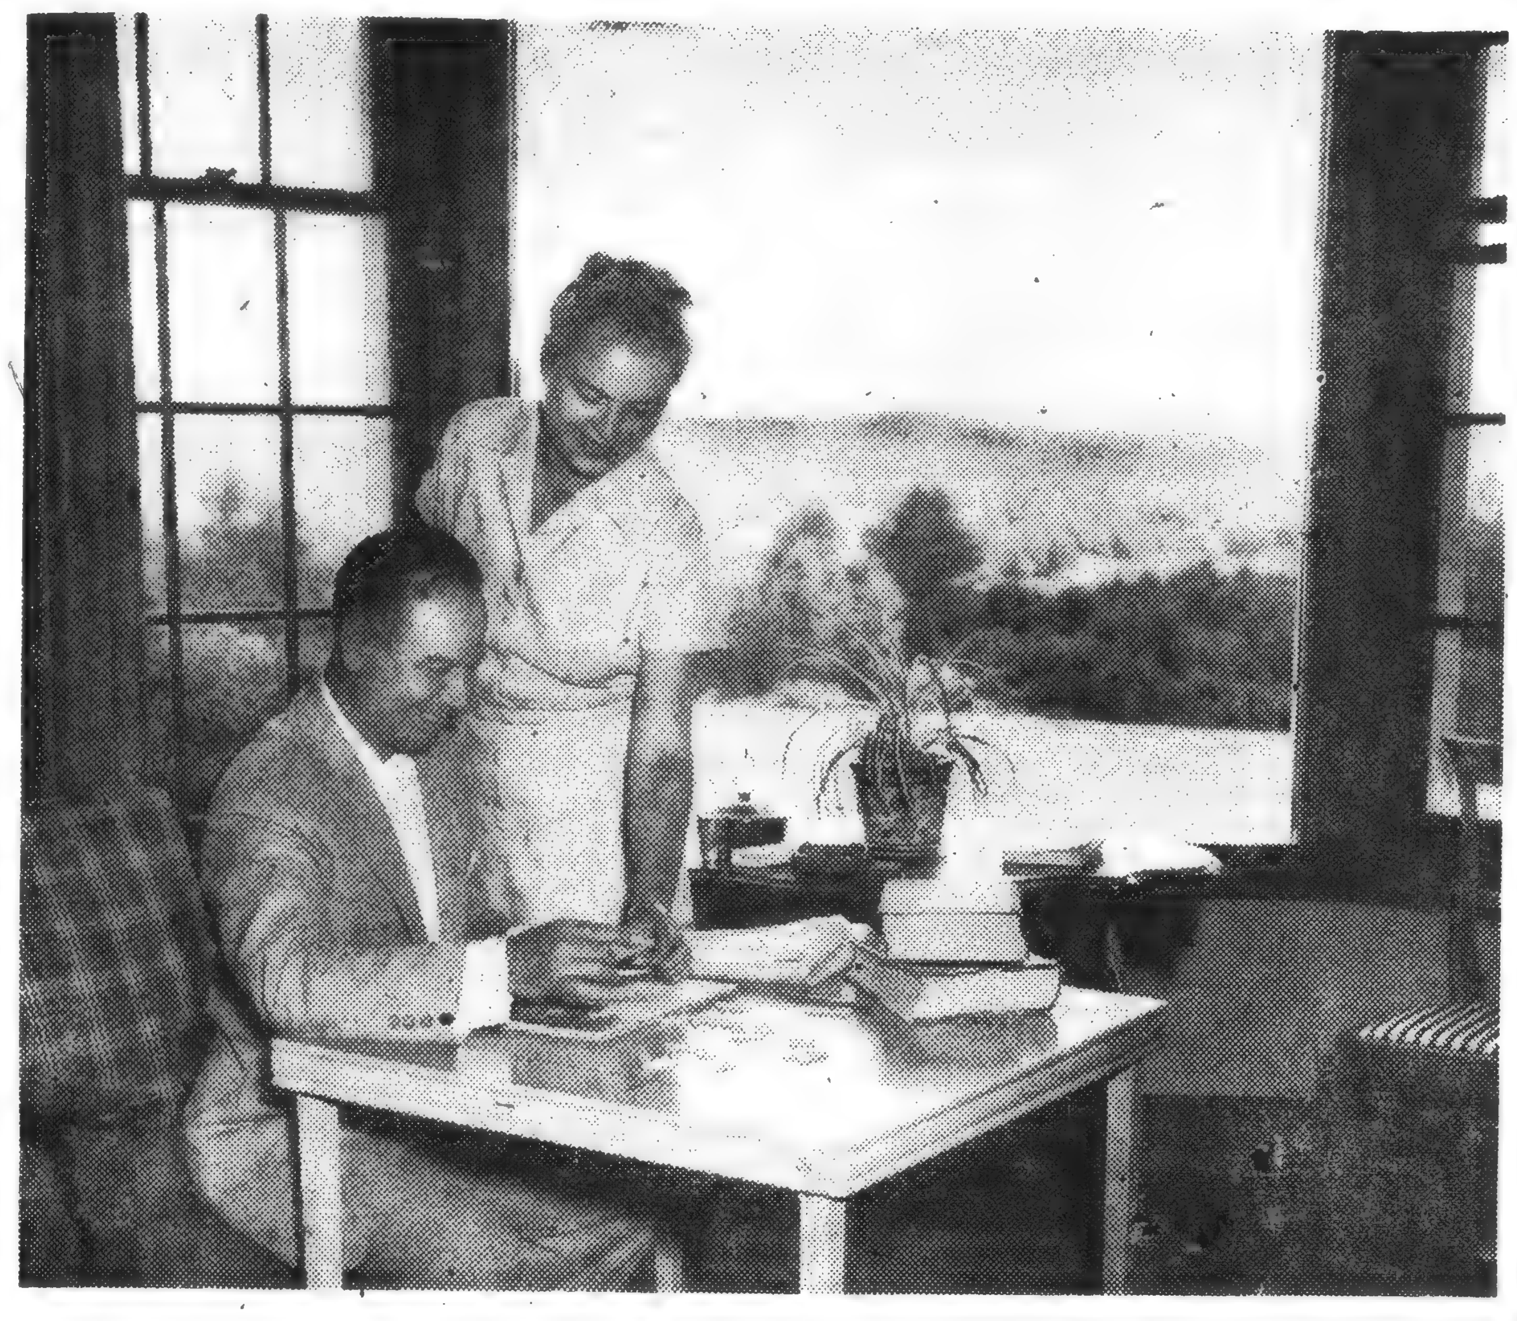
Famous Violinist Gets Bass, Venison At Fiddletop Estate

By ALICE GOULD EDMAN

Zino Francescatti, who will be soloist for the opening of the Berkshire Festival in the Tanglewood Music Shed July 31, will not be far. His 10-room house at Fiddletop, Monterey, is less than [illegible] miles from the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with whom he will play Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto in E-

Tanglewood Debut

The famous violinist, who will play at Tanglewood for the first time, was invited last season, but previous commitments prevented. He plans to spend four summer months at Fiddletop and go there as often through the year as he can break away. He and Mrs. Francescatti, a charming, pretty woman who wears her curly prematurely gray hair in an upsweep, leave their New York apartment, [illegible] in the country, where he reads, plays chess, does [illegible] and jigsaw puzzles, walks in the woods, works on his films and now and then shoots a woodchuck. In the summer he also arranges the music for his winter programs, and practices.



Mitchell

Zino Francescatti finds relaxation with jigsaw puzzles in his Fiddletop home at Monterey as Mrs. Francescatti offers her assistance. At other times he reads, plays chess, takes long walks and works his movie films.

Mitchell

The Francescattis start for a walk through their Monterey estate, formerly known as Overbrook. The [illegible]-year-old farmhouse was originally built on the old Wellman farm by Arthur Boyce, a New York businessman. The Francescattis bought the place on Christmas Day, 1951.

On Christmas Day, 1951, Mr. and Mrs. Francescatti bought Overbrook, as it was then called. The New England farmhouse was built [illegible] years ago on 80 acres of the old Clarence Wellman farm by Arthur Boyce, a New York businessman. The place was buried in snow, and they said it was about 10 degrees below zero, but they loved the house at first sight and they knew at once it was where they wanted to live. It has a garden on three levels, a pond with a fountain and even a concrete shuffleboard inlaid in the lawn. None of these features could they see, but they found them in the spring, after the snow had melted. The pond now is one of Mr. Francescatti's favorite spots where he keeps gold fish and turtles, which he visits every day he is there.

Like the Garden

The Francescattis are enthusiastic about the garden. "In the spring," they say, "we have beautiful lilacs and apple blossoms and flowering quinces. One day I took with the camera six humming birds all together in the quinces. I am not a good photographer myself," he added, "but my views are pretty. I take pictures everywhere I go on my travels. I took the midnight sun in Norway and the Mato Grosso in Brazil."

Continuing about the garden, the violinist said, "It is unfortunate. Weeds are growing all the time. The job is not to grow flowers. It is to keep out the weeds. Without weeds and woodchucks it would be very easy to grow flowers. I don't bother the rabbits. A small gray animal came down the chimney the other day. It was a squirrel. I didn't want to kill it."

In the past few weeks he has shot several woodchucks. He is proud of the fact that he killed them with the first pull of the trigger, but wanted it understood he isn't in the habit of shooting animals or birds. It is only woodchucks that he shoots, and only because there are many and they destroy the plants. "It is my dahlias," Mr. Francescatti said, and "my salads."

Can See Catskills

Before the house was built the top was blown off a hill, so that the house stands on a small plateau, from which one can see woods near by and mountains in the distance all around, including the Catskills on a clear day.

Inside, the rooms are large and light, with picture windows. The walls are mostly in pastels, and the ceiling of the living room is supported by old, hand-hewn beams. Many of the furnishings and decorations have been collected on their travels. Over the piano hangs a framed, illuminated scroll, which names the violinist an honorary citizen of Marseilles, where he was born in 1905. He wears the red ribbon of the French Legion of Honor in his lapel.

Their Berkshire neighbors believe the Francescattis to be Italian, because of their name, but he explained his mother's family had lived in Marseilles since the Phoenicians sailed there. His mother, who is at Fiddletop, also is a violinist. His father was a pupil of the Italian, Sivori, only pupil of the great Paganini. The son has a piece of music given to Sivori by his teacher, and signed by him.

Mother Was Father's Pupil

The elder Francescatti went to France at the age of 18 and was concertmaster in the orchestra of Lyons. He played in resort orchestras and finally went to Marseilles as concertmaster. Zino's mother, who was Ernestine Feraud, was his pupil.

The younger Mrs. Francescatti, before her marriage Yolande Potel de la Briere of Paris, studied violin at the Paris Conservatoire and was beginning to appear in concerts "when I met my husband, and that was the end of it." She runs his house and acts as his secretary—"marvelous secretary," he says.

At an early age Zino started to play the violin. "I don't remember when I started playing or working seriously," he said. "I play all my life the violin. There were always violins around our house and everybody played. My mother helped me very much." He made his first public appearance at the age of five and played the Beethoven Concerto at 10.

At 18 he went to Paris to study at the Conservatoire. He has appeared many times with the orchestras of Europe and America under famous conductors. Last summer he toured South America, and last fall the United States and Canada. His violin is the famous "Hart" Stradivarius, made in 1727.

Reads Mysteries and Travel

Asked what books he reads, Francescatti said, "I like mystery stories and travel. I have just read a book on the expeditions of Scott to the South Pole, which I like very much. Now I am interested in the American expedition to the Himalayas.

"I travel a lot and know a lot of places, but the two I like best in the world are Provence and the Berkshires. This hilly country is a great contrast to the south of France, but I like them both. Here everything is green. There it is dry."

The Francescattis spent nine summers in South Egremont and on Lake Buel, before finding Fiddletop. They looked at many places in Connecticut. Their friends helped, and finally found the Monterey estate, which wasn't advertised. "There is something always to do here," he said.

Neighbors Supply Game

The neighbors have been neighborly. One sent them a rabbit. "It came from Monterey and was absolutely delicious." The farmer gave them a bass. It was the first fish caught after the opening of the season. and was delicious too. Last winter they had venison, gift of another neighbor—"better than the chamois of the Alps."

While Francescatti has not performed at Tanglewood before, he has played with the orchestra in Boston. Next week he will go to Ravinia, to play with the Chicago Symphony. He was soloist at the opening of the season at the Lewisohn Stadium, New York, with Leonard Bernstein, in the same concerto that he will play with the Boston orchestra. He plans to attend as many of the Berkshire Festival concerts as he can.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
JUL 26 1953

it had last season.

The first of four "live" radio broadcasts of the Berkshire Festival concert at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be presented this afternoon from 2:30 to 4 o'clock by the C. B. S. network.

[230]

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION
JUL 20 1953

Moving of Concert Sets Precedent

Lenox, July 19—Another new chapter in the colorful history of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood was written this afternoon. For the first time one of the more intimate Mozart programs was transferred from the small theater-concert hall, with but a 1200 seating capacity, to the spacious music shed on the east end of the vast lawns of this symphony mecca.

For two years now tickets to these Bach and Mozart concerts have borne an alternative seat location for the huge fan-shaped shed in case of rain, when thousands of general admission audience on the lawn would be drenched. However, the downpour never arrived and neither could festival officials arrive at the decision to make the experiment of the transfer.

With the temperature hovering in the nineties this afternoon and reports from the Albany Airport indicating that the heavy electric storms in Utica were moving eastward rapidly, Manager George Judd gave the word to shift the site of today's concert an hour before the program was scheduled to get underway.

Next Sunday's concert, which is to be broadcast, will also be staged in the big music shed. And it is hardly likely that too many of these popular programs will ever be returned to the confines of the theater-concert hall.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION
JUL 20 1953

10,100 ATTEND TWO CONCERTS AT TANGLEWOOD

Mozart Program Attracts 4300 Despite Heat; Soloists Lauded

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 19—Following custom, two programs, last night and this afternoon, have been devoted to the music of Mozart. To these two concerts have come 10,100 people, approximately 4000 more than attended two similar concerts last year. There were 4300 people today who dared brave the heat and possible showers to revel in the glories of Mozart's music as played by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Charles Munch. In fact, the heat and rumors of showers prompted officials to open the big shed for the first time for one of these concerts.

For us the spaciousness of the shed spoiled the atmosphere of intimacy which we have associated with these concerts. In the front rows, one heard well enough, but it is doubtful that those in the rear rows got all the nuances and subtleties of expression that make Mozart's music so rewarding.

The program opened with a sparkling performance of the overture to "Figaro," probably Mozart's gayest opera. It was a crisp, urgent performance of true brilliance.

Highlighting a splendidly planned program was the "Onzertante Sinfonie" for violin and viola, K. 364, with Isaac Stern and Joseph De Pasquale, first violist of the orchestra, as soloists. This is one of the most substantial of all Mozart's compositions for solo stringed instruments and orchestra. It dates from 1777 and shows the full maturity of Mozart. The profoundly beautiful and somber slow movement alone would have stamped this work as great. One heard superlative playing from Messrs. Stern and De Pasquale. The instruments blended perfectly and there was a grace and elegance which only the most sensitive musicians can attain. Mr. Munch and the orchestra were expert collaborators, bringing a zest and vitality to the two end movements and sheer beauty to the Andante. One hears this work too seldom. One notes that Mr. Stern and Mr. Primrose, playing under the baton of Pablo Casals, have made a magnificent recording of this work.

In Mozart's time any musician was supposed to be able to write pieces for any occasion and Mozart was particularly adept at this; his serenades, Divertimenti and such are examples. "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik" is perhaps the finest example of his ability to write amusing and entertaining pieces of solid musical worth. The "Little Night Music" is a particularly lucid example of the form used; four movements with the usual contrasts of tempi and mood. It must be that Mr. Munch has a very special feeling for this music, for he provided an enchanting reading, one which was never over-sentimentalized or overdrawn.

"Jupiter" Symphony

The final number on the program was, appropriately enough, the so-called "Jupiter" symphony or "Symphony in C Major" K. 525. Just how the name "Jupiter" came to be associated with this music is not clear but as one feels its lofty thoughts and notes the relatively magnificent scope of the work, it demonstrates the appropriateness of its somewhat cryptic title.

The combined classical heroism and inner tenderness of this symphony is anticipated in peculiarly intense fashion by the "Prague" symphony, heard last night. Mr. Munch found little of the Olympian mood in the symphony, rather, he stressed its humanity, its loveliness and its gayety.

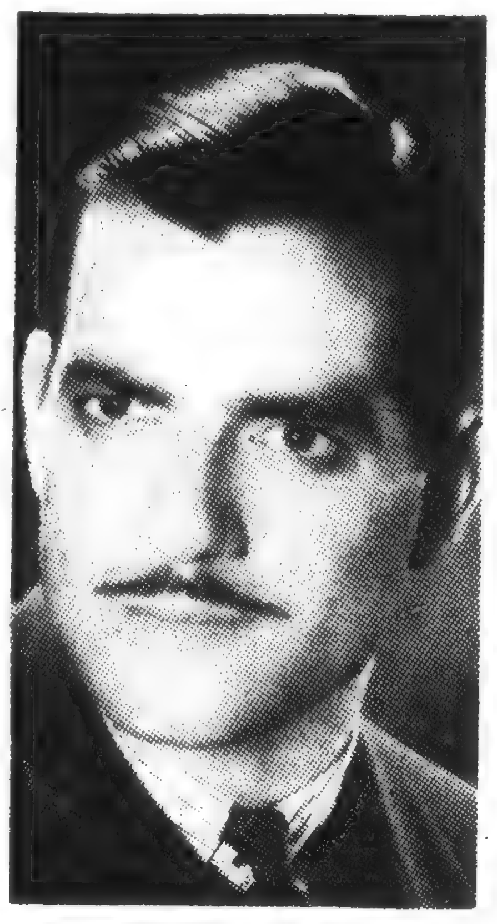
As usual there was much to admire in both the interpretation and the performance. The work is rich in contrasts and alive with color. Everything was revealed within a relatively small framework, one entirely suited to the picture.

The third and final series of week-end concerts opens Saturday with a program devoted to the music of Joseph Haydn. We shall hear the chorus, under the direction of Hugh Ross, sing the "Theresa Mass, in B Flat Major" and the orchestra will play two symphonies, "Symphony in C Minor, No. 95" and "Symphony in G Major, No. 100," as the "Military" symphony.

Sunday afternoon the program will offer works by Strauss, Ravel, Prokofieff, Milhaud and Lukas Foss.

Major Shed Concert Series Open Tomorrow at Festival

Munch To Conduct 104 Musicians of BSO at First Two Week-End Programs—Monteux, Bolet Featured Sunday



JORGE BOLET
Sunday Soloist

PIERRE MONTEUX
Guest Conductor

With Charles Munch conducting the entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra tomorrow and Saturday evenings at 8.30 and Pierre Monteux as guest conductor Sunday afternoon at 2.30, the major series of the Berkshire Festival will open this week end in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox. Nine concerts will be given on the coming three week ends.

The 70 musicians who played the last concert of the Boston season on the Charles River Esplanade last Friday evening to record audiences will join the 35 already at Tanglewood for the early concerts in the theatre and serving on the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center. Billeted at inns and private homes in Lenox and surrounding towns, they will remain in the Berkshires until the Festival's close Aug. 16, after which they will take a six-week vacation before opening the Boston season the first week in October.

16th Annual Festival

The 1953 festival, which is the 16th for the Berkshires and the 14th for the Boston orchestra, will epart from custom in two respects: he first program in each series ill be presented Friday evenings stead of Thursdays, and the inday concerts will begin at 2.30 stead of 3. Otherwise the schede will be as in former years. e orchestra rehearsals will be en to the public for the benefit the pension fund Saturday mornings at 10.

Beethoven's Overture to "Lenore" as been chosen by Mr. Munch for he opening number tomorrow ight. It will be followed by Mendelssohn's Concerto for Violin and Orchestra in E-minor, in which Zino Francescatti, Monterey resident, will play the solo in his first professional appearance in Berkshire County.

Saxophones for 'Bolero'

Aaron Copland, composer of "Appalachian Spring," the third number, will be in the audience, a he is assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center. Writte in June, 1943, on commission b the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidg Foundation, the music of the balle was composed for Martha Graham In 1945 it received the Pulitze Prize for Music and the award o the Music Critics' Circle of Ne York as the season's outstandin performance.

Ravel's "Bolero," the concluding piece, will be played in the complete version, seldom performed without cuts. Harold Farberman, percussionist, who will perform on the snare drum, will be seated in front of the orchestra, as for a concerto. The instrumentation also calls for two rarely-used instruments, the soprano-saxophone, and a tenor sax. Coming from Boston especially to play the former is Felix Viscuglia, pupil of orchestra personnel manager, Rosario Mazzeo. Rolland Tapley, at present an inactive orchestra member, also will come from Boston, to play the tenor instrument.

The Tanglewood grounds will open on concert evenings at 6 and Sunday afternoons at 12.30, when general admissions will be sold for listening from the lawn. Seats in the music shed are available at the box office at any time. Picnic parties are invited. The cafeteria is open before and after concerts and during intermission.

Week End Programs
Programs for the week end follow:

Tomorrow Night
Overture to "Lenore" .... Beethoven
Violin Concerto in E-minor .. Mendelssohn
Zino Francescatti, soloist
"Appalachian Spring" .... Copland
"Bolero" .... Ravel

Saturday Night
Overture to "Manfred" .... Schumann
Piano Concerto No. 2 .... Foss
Composer as soloist
"Italian" Symphony ...... Mendelssohn
Symphonic Metamorphosis of Themes by Weber .... Hindemith

Sunday Afternoon
Pierre Monteux conducting all-Tchaikovsky program.
Serenade for Strings
Symphony No. 5, in E minor
Piano Concerto No. 1, in B-flat minor
Jorge Bolet, soloist

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox Mans.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
Orchestra
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
TODAY at 2:30
All-Tchaikovsky Program
PIERRE MONTEUX Conducting
Soloist—JORGE BOLET, Piano
Remaining Concerts, Aug. 7, 8, 9, 14, 15, 16. Reserved Seats Available
General Admission $2

* * *

Special Event—TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE
Thurs., Aug. 13—Conductors CHARLES MUNCH, LEONARD BERNSTEIN; Soloist—ISSAC STERN, Violin; LEONTYNE PRICE, Soprano; WILLIAM WARFIELD, Baritone. Reserved Seats Now—$3, $4, $5. General Admission $2.50. Address Box Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

MUSIC FESTIVAL

World Music Festivals, with James Fassett, commentator

Tanglewood

Purcell Music Tomorrow

An informal program of 17th century music of Henry Purcell will be presented tomorrow afternoon at 4 in the Tanglewood Barn by the Tanglewood Study Group. Conductors will be Ingolf Dahl, director of the group, and Miss Florence A. Dunn of Williamstown, his assistant. Members of the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center are invited.

The program follows:

The Rival Sisters Overture
Incidental Music from The Double Dealer
In the Midst of Life We Are in Death
(Funeral sentence for voices and organ)
Two Catches: I Gave Her Cakes
Once, Twice, Thrice
Ode for St. Cecilia's Day: Welcome to All the Pleasures Symphony from The Fairy Queen

Tonight

8.30—Opening of major Berkshire Festival by Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, with Zino Francescatti, soloist. Music Shed.

Tomorrow

10.00 AM—Public rehearsal by Boston Symphony Orchestra for benefit of pension fund. Music Shed.

*3.00 PM—Recital by E. Power Biggs, Boston Symphony Orchestra organist. Music Shed.

*4.00 PM—Informal program by Tanglewood Study Group of 17th century music by Henry Purcell. Barn.

*Open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center whose contributions help to support the school.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
JUN 25 1953

Tanglewood Concert Tickets Sales Pass Record for Last Year

The sale of series tickets for the major 1953 Berkshire music festival concerts ~~by the~~ Boston Symphony orchestra in the music shed, at Tanglewood, Lenox, has surpassed that of the summer of 1952, Manager George E. Judd announced today.

Subscribers for the 1953 Berkshire festival purchased $59,000 in tickets for Series A, July 31 and August 1 and 2; Series B, August 7 8 and 9; and Series C, August 14, 15 and 16, an increase of more than $1,000 from last season's advance sale. The subscription sale, officially over June 1, was extended 10 days this year for the convenience of Berkshire county residents.

Remaining tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the boxoffice, which is open Monday through Saturday from 10 to 5 o'clock. Commencing July 5, when the 11th season of the Berkshire Music Center starts, the boxoffice also will be open on Sundays. Mail orders for single concerts are also received.

With Charles Munch, music director, conducting selected members of the Boston Symphony orchestra, the Festival opens Saturday evening, July 11, at 8.30 o'clock with the first of a week-end pair of Bach concerts in the theater-concert hall. On July 18 and 19 Mozart concerts, for which Isaac Stern is soloist, will be presented. The theater-concert hall preliminary concerts close July 25 and 26 with one program devoted to Haydn, and one to Strauss, Ravel, Prokofieff, Milhaud and Lukas Foss, with Vera Zorina as narrator of Mr. Foss' cantata "A Parable of Death."

With the full 104-piece Boston Symphony orchestra performing under Mr. Munch's direction, the week-end concerts in the music shed commence on Friday, July 31. They will run for three week-ends, on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons.

LIVINGSTON MANOR,
N.Y
TIMES
7/23/53

Charles Munch Conducts Mozart At Tanglewood

The second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Saturday evening at 8:30 P.M. and Sunday afternoon at 2:30 P.M. will be devoted to the works of Mozart. Charles Munch will lead members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Isaac Stern, violinist, as soloist.

Mr. Stern will be soloist in the Concerto for Violin, in G (K. 216) on Saturday evening, and will team with Joseph de Pasquale, violist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, on Sunday afternoon in the Sinfonia Concertante, for Violin and Viola (K. 364).

Another feature of the weekend will be the first performance anywhere by the Boston Symphony Orchestra of the Divertimento in D, for Strings (K. 136), with which Mr. Munch will open the Sunday afternoon program.

The final weekend of Theatre-Concert Hall performances is July 25 with an all-Haydn program; and July 26, featuring works of Richard Strauss, Ravel, Prokofieff, Milhaud, and the New England premiere of Lukas Foss' Cantata, "A Parable of Death", conducted by the composer, with Vera Zorina as narrator.

Tickets are available at the Tanglewood box office for all Festival concerts. Programs and a calendar of the more than 50 events at the Berkshire Music Center, with information on how to join the Friends' Society, will be mailed on request.

N.Y. Post 7/26

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Francescatti to Play in Berkshires

With Charles Munch conducting the 104-piece Boston Symphony, the Berkshire Festival opens its major series of concerts in the 6,000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Friday night. The initial event will feature violinist, Zino Francescatti, as soloist in the Mendelssohn E Minor Concerto.

Also to be heard are Aaron Copland's ballet suite, "Appalachian Spring"; Beethoven's Overture to "Leonore," No. 3, and Ravel's "Bolero."

The most provocative work of the second concert in the initial series, Saturday night, Aug. 1, will be the Piano Concerto No. 2 by the young American composer, Lukas Foss, with the composer as soloist. Mendelssohn's "Italian" Symphony and Hindemith's "Symphonic Metamorphosis of Themes by Weber" and Schumann's Overture to "Manfred" make up the rest of this program.

Pierre Monteux conducts the concluding concert Sunday, Aug. 2, at 2:30. This will be an all-Tchaikovsky program featuring Jorge Bolet, Cuban pianist, as soloist in the B-Flat Minor Concerto. The Fifth Symphony in E Minor and Serenade for Strings complete the evening.

The two remaining week-ends of music in the festival shed follow consecutively, each consisting of three concerts. Among the most important events of the Aug. 7th week-end is the performance of Gustav Mahler's "Resurrection" Symphony with chorus and soloists and with Leonard Bernstein conducting.

Brahms' "Requiem" with Lois Marshall, soprano, and with William Warfield, baritone, as soloists, will open the final week-end, Friday, Aug. 14.

This Clipping . . .
CHICAGO, ILL.
DOWN BEAT
[illegible] 1953

Bostonians also heard for free during the week several college and professional choral groups and members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

—Nat Hentoff

[23]

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
JUL 20 1953

BERKSHIRE BENEFIT AUG. 13

'Tanglewood On Parade' to Star Stern, Warfield, Miss Price

Isaac Stern, violinist; William Warfield, baritone, and his wife, Leontyne Price, soprano, will be the soloists for "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, to be held Aug. 13 at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass.

They will appear in a shed concert with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Stern will play Beethoven's Violin Concerto, with Charles Munch conducting. Mr. Warfield and Miss Price will appear in the second half of the program under the direction of Leonard Bernstein.

Other events on the program will be given in separate auditoriums on the estate. Every department of the center will participate. In addition, there will be a lawn supper and dancing after the final concert.

HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES
JUL 20 1953

All-Mozart Program In Tanglewood's Fourth Concert

By CARL E. LINDSTROM
Special to The Hartford Times

Lenox, Mass.—At about 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon a look of rain over the Berkshire Hills resulted in about as neat a maneuver as has been executed at Tanglewood—neater and smoother than most.

The grounds were already well populated and the lawns around the Theater-Concert Hall pretty well claim-staked for the fourth concert of the season, the second all-Mozart program.

A simple announcement sent the crowd streaming across the grounds to the Big Shed which with its 6,000-capacity was unable to shelter quite all of the customers. It was all right anyway because it didn't rain.

* * *

SOME CONCERN whether the Boston Orchestra, reduced to chamber proportions, would be able to project itself under these conditions was dissipated by the long-since proven acoustics of Saarinen pavilion and more particularly by the incomparably spun texture of the Boston strings. Without question the music was more advantageously heard by more listeners than would have been possible at the small hall. Listening from the lawn Saturday night for part of the program, I marvelled that so many thousand people would pay their money and miss so much of the music. Patently the beguilements of a Summer evening and a romantic setting were more than compensating.

In familiar pieces the Bostonians under Munch are without equal. The little serenade (Eine Kleine Nachtmusik) for instance was exquisitely turned out. These great string players perform with the homogeneity of a string quartet. The military precision of their bowing, which has been ridiculed by those who prefer the ripe stickiness of what for want of a better phrase might be called the "progressive" school, produces nevertheless, clean, sweet music. You got it, too, in the "Jupiter" Symphony which concluded the Sunday program and especially in the irrepressibly merry "Figaro" overture which opened it.

In the remaining number the orchestra's function in spite of the description "symphony concertante," was mainly the production of a flattering back drop for solo violin and viola, the first in the hands of Isaac Stern and the second played by the orchestra's first chair violist, Joseph de Pasquale.

The solo melodies are built almost entirely of echoing, imitative material. Echoing is perhaps the word because Mr. Stern's instrument seemed ever assertive to the point of brilliance and Mr. De Pasquale's tone docile and often pale. I would like to have heard them closer to dynamic parity. Perhaps the violist was nervous. Both were rousingly acclaimed by players and audience alike.

Saturday's Concert

The wilting heat of Saturday evening was proof against fans, iced drinks and dishabille. The Berkshires when hot are tropically [illegible].

There is no [illegible] except the music of Mozart.

When Charles Munch appeared before his [illegible] players (for the first time in Tanglewood memory in their shirt sleeves) there were 1,100 perspiring persons in the Theater-Concert Hall and a half-dozen thousand others on the humid lawn outside, looking for all the world like the fallen legion on a Biblical battlefield.

The crisply curling strains of the D major Divertimento breathed out into the heavy evening air. The tones were small but etched like the horns of the crescent over the pine tops. One drew breath sharply at [illegible] the prick of cool [illegible] and after that everyone breathed less heavily. Fans stopped [illegible]. The climate had changed.

The complete removal from terrestrial pressures was effected by Isaac Stern who, strange to say, did not play a cool Mozart (the G major Violin Concerto) nor yet an objective, classical Mozart. His whole concept was emotional and, in the microcosm, dramatic. His fiddle and bow—and there is not a more precisely masterful technique in the violin world—spoke a various language, startlingly expressive and far removed from the marmoreal monotony that even the biggest musicians resolutely associate with Mozart. The rapture was so swift and buoyant that all his listeners remained in the heady stratosphere till he finished. They applauded excitedly in spite of the enclosing heat and upon his third recall burst into typical Tanglewood shouts. Mr. Stern was a decided success.

By and large, this all-Mozart program, the second half of which comprised the B flat Serenade for 13 Wind Instruments and the "Prague" Symphony, had a gentle humanity rather than nobility, intimacy rather than bigness. Even the Symphony was not distinguished for sonority, but rather for sense and design.

They say Mr. Munch likes warm weather. That is easy to believe after the Saturday night concert and Sunday's too.

FORT W
EVENING STA
JUL 2

A Woman's

Music
In True

NEW YORK,
CBS network bro
which is annually chestra at Lenox
ducer and comm
CST) will be tha fellow from "do
England dialect.
Of this series o wood musical even will broadcast fou
sive Sundays thro
These are four out
23 Sunday broa which he will co
eight most import tivals in the world fied for this job than mere announ motive is to inst
serious music in American listener coast, and to ma
these "long-hair"
concerts and ope
"pop" songs are l
In true story-bo
sett, originally a Massachusetts use earned from selli chase Chopin rec loved. When he radio in 1936 as producer of the harmonic Symph six persons were duce, direct, scrip commentate this series. Nowaday
all these jobs, and of supervisor of besides. Still i duties are five a travel through Eu America, attend portant music f and one in this c to broadcast them
secutive Sundays sounds like und to travel and dis into broadcasts, old-style music does not merely but tells the hum people who make

A FEW TRICKS

To acquire this broadcasts inter mous musical p world over. The human backgrou played, and provi
within which eve serious music.
viewed in thei roundings talk charm. Therefo talked with Co Mitropoulos, it latter's favorite with the microph basket of bread.
did not know th
being recorded,
ers who tossed throughout the Rudolf Serkin an through the bar cian's farm in V sound of the an men made an ob terview.
While sipping
Pons, Jim Fassett to sing and whist parakeet. This aria, never befo
the famed colora
Benny, Jim Fass
latter's violin-pl and even had h heard radio che Bloom." For th broadcast Fasse
ers the sound of own piano.
Florence cricket good luck, brou composer Gian-C pulling strings,
first broadcast
Curtain of Prok opera "War and

LURES LISTEN

Fassett's proje to record the sou
Fountain of Tre soft splashing a clatter and hor cycles and truck set up his eq
3:15 a.m. B took him 60 m was able to reco uninterrupted fo

FORT WORTH, TEX.
EVENING STAR TELEGRAM
1953

A Woman's New York

Music Commentator's Climb In True Story-Book Style

BY ALICE HUGHES.

NEW YORK, July 22.—On Sunday you will hear the CBS network broadcast of the Tanglewood Music Festival which is annually conducted by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Lenox, Mass. The attractive voice of the producer and commentator of this radio show (2:30 to 4 p. m., CST) will be that of Jim Fassett, a tall, dark, handsome fellow from "down East" who speaks with a native New England dialect.

Of this series of six Tanglewood musical events, Jim Fassett will broadcast four—on successive Sundays through Aug. 19. These are four out of a group of 23 Sunday broadcasts during which he will comment on the eight most important music festivals in the world. To be qualified for this job requires more than mere announcing. Its real motive is to instill a love for serious music in the souls of American listeners from coast to coast, and to make them love these "long-hair" symphonies, concertos and opera as much as "pop" songs are loved and sung.

In true story-book style, Fassett, originally a farm boy in Massachusetts used the money he earned from selling eggs to purchase Chopin records which he loved. When he came to CBS radio in 1936 as assistant music producer of the New York Philharmonic Symphony broadcasts, six persons were employed to produce, direct, script, announce and commentate this one musical series. Nowadays Fassett does all these jobs, and holds the title of supervisor of music for CBS besides. Still included in his duties are five annual months of travel through Europe and South America, attending seven important music festivals abroad and one in this country, in order to broadcast them during 23 consecutive Sundays in America. It sounds like undiluted pleasure, to travel and distill big festivals into broadcasts. But Fassett, no old-style music commentator, does not merely dissect music, but tells the human side of the people who make it.

A FEW TRICKS.

To acquire this human side, he broadcasts interviews with famous musical personalities the world over. They give a warm, human background to the music played, and provide a framework within which everyone can enjoy serious music. Musicians interviewed in their familiar surroundings talk with ease and charm. Therefore when Fassett talked with Conductor Dimitri Mitropoulos, it was done in the latter's favorite Greek restaurant, with the microphone hidden in a basket of bread. The conductor did not know the interview was being recorded, nor did the waiters who tossed dishes loudly throughout the talk. Pianist Rudolf Serkin and Fassett walked through the barns of the musician's farm in Vermont, and the sound of the animals and hired men made an obbligato to the interview.

While sipping tea with Lily Pons, Jim Fassett encouraged her to sing and whistle along with her parakeet. This made a unique aria, never before recorded by the famed coloratura. With Jack Benny, Jim Fassett discussed the latter's violin-playing ambitions, and even had him play the oft-heard radio chorus of "Love in Bloom." For the Grieg Festival broadcast Fassett brought listeners the sound of Edward Grieg's own piano. He attended the Florence cricket festival and, for good luck, brought a cricket for composer Gian-Carlo Menotti. By pulling strings, he secured the first broadcast outside the Iron Curtain of Prokofiev's important opera, "War and Peace."

LURES LISTENERS.

Fassett's project in Rome was to record the sound of the famous Fountain of Trevi, to gather its soft splashing sounds free of the clatter and honks of taxis, bicycles and trucks. To do this he set up his sound equipment at 3:15 a. m. But even then, it took him 60 minutes before he was able to record 40 seconds of uninterrupted fountain splashing.

By including such charming bits as a street song in Naples or a column of bagpipes in Edinburgh to his festival music broadcasters, he lures listeners to his musical programs and makes music converts of them.

In New York, prior to broadcasting a Philharmonic concert, Fassett often hires a boat and rows vigorously for an hour on Central Park Lake as a means of relaxation. Most of his evenings are spent listening to music on records. His boon companion, on these occasions, is his black-and-white cat whose record production, to date, numbers 47 kittens.

(Copyright, 1953, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

NEW YORK, N. Y.
MIRROR
JUL 26 1953

Our America

★ By DR. RUTH ALEXANDER ★

FRANCE HAS the right idea. She has chosen the universal medium of music to unite a divided world. Perhaps if other countries would follow her example and share their artists the endless quarrels of a battle-scarred humanity would cease.

This is the story of a young violinist, Serge Blanc. Although he came to America on a full scholarship from the Koussevitsky Fund, he was actually sent on official business. The Fine Arts Department of the French Ministry of Propaganda chose him to represent France as Ambassador of Good Will.

Dr. Alexander

They could not have made a happier choice. Blanc has justified their faith. At the Berkshire Festival at "Tanglewood" in Lenox, Mass., he is dazzling critics and audiences alike as Concertmaster of the Young Symphony. His astonishing virtuosity, his mature musicianship, his devotion to France and, above all, unbounded enthusiasm for the United States are cementing Franco-American friendship no end.

Born in Paris, Serge Blanc began the study of violin at five. At 10 he entered the Paris National Conservatory and at 13 won Le Premier Prix de Violin, against all comers, old and young! He played with the Pasdeloup Concert Association at 14 and at 15 he concertized throughout a war-torn Europe. In 1949, Blanc was made a Laureate of the Great International Marguerite Long and Jacques Thibaud Concours—(he is called "le nouveau Thibaud")—and in 1952, he played sonata recitals with Georges Enesco in England and France.

Although the young violinist maintains a dignified reticence about his hardships, the sacrifices and terrors he and his parents endured during the Hitler occupation of France make a tragic story. But they played their part in giving him compassion and understanding—the very soul of music. He tears out his heart—and yours—when he plays.

The significance of Serge Blanc for readers of this column is that he is a living experiment in good international relations through the medium of art.

Like millions before him, Serge Blanc came to our country empty-handed but with eager spirit, inquiring mind and willing hands. We have taken him to our hearts and those thousands who hear him play are devoutly indebted to France for sending her treasure to us for safe keeping.

This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
JUN 29 1953

Omission

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

I'm enclosing a music column by Bruno Ussher from the San Diego Evening Tribune.

Suddenly I find that Lenox and Stockbridge are by-passed and that the Berkshire Festival is located in Tanglewood, Mass. I have written a note to Mr. Ussher setting him right and saying that as a former Berkshirite, I resent his omission of Lenox.

THURSTON (TED) HOLMES.
San Diego, Cal.

New Series Of Concerts At Tanglewood

7/31

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., July 31—Hundreds of music lovers from all parts of Western Connecticut will hear the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Conductor Charles Munch tonight at 8:30 o'clock open the first of the three week ends of concerts in the Music Shed at Tanglewood.

The concerts will get under way with the playing of Beethoven's "Leonore Overture." Zino Francescatti will be soloist for the Mendelssohn "Violin Concerto in E minor." Copland's "Appalachian Spring" and Ravel's "Bolero" will complete the program tonight.

Tomorrow evening's concert will be conducted by Charles Munch and on Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock Pierre Monteux, guest conductor, will conduct an all Tchaikovsky concert. Jorge Bolet will be the soloist in the "Piano Concerto No. 1, in B-flat minor."

Tonight's opening is the first of the new scheduling of concerts on Friday night during the three weeks of the shed series instead of on Thursday evenings as was done for many years.

On Saturday, Aug. 8, Leonard Bernstein will conduct the Koussevitsky Memorial Concert and Aug. 13 from 6 to 11 p. m. the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" program will be presented for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center which now has 400 music students from 41 states and 11 foreign countries enrolled for its six-week session.

The Concerts

TODAY

TANGLEWOOD SHED, Lenox, Mass. —Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux, conducting. All Tchaikovsky program. Serenade for Strings, Symphony No. 5 in E minor, Piano Concerto No. 1, Jorge Bolet, soloist. 2:30 p. m.

* * *

SOUTHERN VERMONT ART CENTER —Manchester, Vt. The Trapp Family Singers. 4 p. m.

* * *

MONDAY

TANGLEWOOD THEATRE, Lenox. Three One-Act Operas. "L'Yvrogne Corrige," Gluck; "L'Enfant Prodigue," Debussy; "Yne Education Manquee," Chabrier. 8:30 p. m.

* * *

TUESDAY

(No concerts.)

* * *

WEDNESDAY

(No concerts.)

* * *

THURSDAY

(No concerts.)

* * *

FRIDAY

TANGLEWOOD SHED, Lenox. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conducting. Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet"; Festival Chorus, Jennie Tourel, contralto; Micola Mascona, bass; John McCollum, tenor. 8:30 p. m.

* * *

CASTLE HILL, Ipswich, Mass. Beethoven, Bizet concert. Mme. Jean Madeira, mezzo-soprano, and Hungarian String Quartet. 8:30 p. m.

* * *

PLYMOUTH ROCK CENTER, Duxbury, Mass. Orchestral concert, George Poinar, conducting. Frederick Jagel, tenor, soloist.

* * *

SATURDAY

Tanglewood Shed, Lenox, Mass. Koussevitzky Memorial Concert. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein, conducting. Moussorgsky—"Khovanstchina" Prelude, Ravel—"Sheherazade," Jennie Tourel, soloist. Mahler—"Resurrection" Symphony No. 2, Festival Chorus, Jennie Tourel, contralto, and Theresa Green, soprano; 8:30 p. m.

* * *

Castle Hill, Ipswich, Mass. Same program as Friday.

* * *

Plymouth Rock Centre, Duxbury, Mass. Same program as Friday.

* * *

SUNDAY

Tanglewood Shed, Lenox, Mass. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conducting. Schubert—Symphony No. 5, Barber—Adagio for strings, Roussel—"Bacchus et Ariane," Strauss—"Don Quixote." Milhaud—Concert for Cello. Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist and Joseph De Pasquale, violinist.

* * *

Old Sturbridge Village. "The Devil and Daniel Webster," folk opera by Douglas Moore. Nightly except Monday.

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS.
Berkshire Festival
By the
Boston Symphony Orchestra
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
TODAY at 2:30
All-Tchaikovsky Program. PIERRE MONTEUX, Conducting. Soloist—JORGE BOLET, Piano. Remaining Concerts, Aug. 7, 8, 9, 14, 15, 16. Reserved Seats available. General Admission $2. Special Event! TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE.
Thurs., Aug. 13—Conductors CHARLES MUNCH, LEONARD BERNSTEIN: SOLOISTS—ISAAC STERN, Violin; LEONTYNE PRICE, Soprano; WILLIAM WARFIELD, Baritone. Reserved Seats Now—$3, $4, $5. General Admission $2.50. Address Box Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Berkshire Festival Shed Series Opens Friday At Tanglewood

7/30

With Charles Munch conducting the entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday and Saturday evenings, July 31 and August 1 at 8:30 P. M. and Pierre Monteux as guest conductor on Sunday afternoon, August 2 at 2:30 P. M. the major series of the Berkshire Festival opens this week in the 6,000-seat Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Nine concerts will be given over three weekends, until August 16.

Jorge Bolet

The sixteenth Berkshire Festival since summer concerts were inaugurated in the hills of Western Massachusetts, and the fourteenth since the Boston Symphony participated, has been drawing record crowds, what with the accessibility of Berkshire County from Vermont on the north, Massachusetts on the east, New York state on the west, and Connecticut on the south. Tanglewood concerts averaged a crowd of 9,500 in 1952. This season even larger crowds are anticipated, and concertgoers who do not have reserved seats may purchase general admission on the day of the concert and picnic on the grounds, which open on concert evenings at 6 P. M. and on Sundays at 12:30 P. M.

Three innovations mark the Shed series this season: the concerts commence on Friday evenings instead of the previous Thursdays, thus making it possible for music-lovers who travel some distance to concentrate the complete series in their weekend; the Sunday afternoon programs commence at 2:30 P.M. instead of the former 3 o'clock; and the first hour-and-a-half of the Sunday program will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio from Tanglewood as the only American event in the network's "World Music Festivals" program, which includes highlights from seven European summer festivals. The first portion of the Sunday program 2:30 to 4:00 P. M., will be heard on the air, with James Fassett, CBS Radio Director of Music, as commentator.

The weekend will introduce to Tanglewood audiences the noted violinist Zino Francescatti, soloist on Friday evening; and the first Eastern performance in its revised form of Lukas Foss's Piano Concerto No. 2, with the composer as soloist. Jorge Bolet will be soloist on Sanday afternoon.

The Series A programs are: Friday (tomorrow) night at 8:30, with Charles Munch conducting: Beethoven's Overture to Leonore No. 3; Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto in E minor, with Zino Francescatti as soloist; Copeland's Appalachian Spring; Ravel's Bolero.

Zino Francescatti

Saturday August 1, at 8:30 P M., with Mr. Munch conducting: Schumann's Overture to Manfred; Foss's Piano Concerto No. 2, with the composer as soloist; Mendelssohn's Symphony No. 4; Hindemith's Symphonic Metamorphosis of themes by Weber.

The all-Tchaikovsky program Sunday at 2:30 with Pierre Monteux conducting will include: Serenade for Strings, Symphony No. 5 and Piano Concerto No. 1, with Jorge Bolet as soloist.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
Orchestra
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
TODAY at 2:30
All-Tchaikovsky Program
PIERRE MONTEUX Conducting
Soloist - JORGE BOLET, Piano
Remaining Concerts, Aug. 7, 8, 9; 14, 15, 16.
Reserved Seats available - General Admission $2.
Special Event! TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE
Thurs. Aug. 13 - Conductors CHARLES MUNCH, LEONARD BERNSTEIN; Soloists - ISAAC STERN, Violin, LEONTYNE PRICE, Soprano, WILLIAM WARFIELD, Baritone.
Reserved Seats now - $3, $4, $5, General Admission $2.50.
Address Box Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Tanglewood Offers a Big Week's Program of Music

Almost Continuous Series of Events Arranged; Dr. Munch to Conduct 'Romeo and Juliet' On Friday; Bernstein to Lead Koussevitzky Memorial Program On Saturday

With Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 7 and 9, and with Leonard Bernstein as guest conductor on Saturday evening, Aug. 8, the Berkshire Festival concerts continue this weekend in the 6000-seat Shed at Tanglewood.

"Romeo and Juliet"

The Friday evening program will be given over in its entirety to Berlioz' dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," which the Boston Symphony gave in its complete version with chorus and soloists last winter for the first time, and which now has its first performance at Tanglewood. Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, will sing the alto role; Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone, will be the bass soloist; and John McCollum, of Tuckahoe, N. Y., a student of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra at Tanglewood, will be the tenor; and the Festival Chorus, composed of students of the Berkshire Music Center, will assist.

Mr. Bernstein's concert Saturday night will be a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky, for 25 years conductor of the Boston Symphony, and the guiding spirit behind the Tanglewood annual festival and school activities. The program opens with Moussorgsky's Prelude to "Khovanstchina," which Dr. Koussevitzky performed many times. Miss Tourel will be soloist both in Ravel's "Sheherazade" and in Mahler's Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection") with choral finale. The soprano role in the latter will be sung by Theresa Green, of Baltimore, a Berkshire Music Center student.

Gregor Piatigorsky will be soloist in Darius Milhaud's Concerto for Cello, No. 1 on the Sunday afternoon program, and will team with Joseph de Pasquale, violist of the Boston Symphony in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote." The portion of the Sunday concert, 2.30 to 4 p. m., will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as commentator.

One-Act Operas

Of special interest during the coming week is the three one-act operas by Gluck, Debussy and Chabrier announced for a single hearing tomorrow at 8.30 p. m. These rarely-heard works, produced by Boris Goldovsky, head of the Berkshire Music Center's Opera department, are open to those who help support the school by joining the Society of Friends all seats reserved. Gluck's "L'Yvrogne Corrige" (The Drunkard Reformed), will have the English translation of Giovanni Cardelli which G. Schirmer, Inc. is publishing; originally in two acts when it had its Vienna premiere in April, 1760, it has a libretto by L. Anseaume. So far as is known this will be its first American production.

Debussy's "L'Enfant Prodigue" (The Prodigal Son), to be given in French, had its premiere in operatic form at Covent Garden, London, February 28, 1910, with a libretto by E. Guinand; it was the composer's Prix de Rome cantata, published in 1884. Boston had the first American production, in 1910 in French. Chabrier's "Une Education Manquee" (An Incomplete Education) will be sung in the English translation of Henry Reese. With a text by Eugene Leterrier and Albert Vanloo, it was originally privately produced at the Cercle de la Presse, Paris, with piano accompaniment on May 1, 1879, given first with orchestra in the French capital in 1913. For their presentation in Tanglewood's Theater-Concert Hall the three one-acters will be staged by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell, performed by student casts with a student orchestra. Scenery will be by John Blankenchip and costumes by Leo Van Witsen.

The week at Tanglewood offers almost continuous music, with all departments: student orchestra, chamber music, chorus, opera, and Tanglewood Study Group in full operation. Friends of the Berkshire Music Center are invited to: informal chamber music concert (Department I students), Monday afternoon (Aug. 3), Chamber Music Hall; three one-act operas (Department IV students), Monday evening (Aug. 3), Theater-Concert Hall; small choir concert (Department II students), Tuesday evening (Aug. 4), Theater-Concert Hall; opera scenes by the Associate Division (Department IV students), Wednesday afternoon (Aug. 5,) Theater-Concert Hall; composer's forum (Department III students), Wednesday evening (Aug. 5), Chamber Music Hall; student symphony orchestra (Department I students), Thursday evening (Aug. 6), Music Shed; organ recital by E. Power Biggs; Saturday afternoon (Aug. 8), Music Shed; chamber music concert (Department I students), Sunday morning (Aug. 9), Chamber Music Hall.

Public Rehearsal

Festival patrons are also admitted, for the nominal charge of $1, to a public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Saturday morning (Aug. 8) in the Music Shed, for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund.

This weekend's opening of the Shed series A the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be conducted by Charles Munch, with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor on Aug. 2 afternoon. Zino Francescatti, violinist; Lukas Foss and Jorge Bolet, pianists, are soloists. For series C, which concludes the 1953 Berkshire Festival (Aug. 14-15-16) the podium will be shared by Mr. Munch and Leonard Bernstein, with Lois Marshall, William Warfield, Seymour Lipkin as soloists.

Two events of note in the final week of the Festival are performances Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 10 and 11, of August Gretry's three-act opera, "Richard the Lion-Hearted" by Boris Goldovsky's opera department; and the annual Tanglewood on Parade benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, on Thursday, Aug. 13, which features a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. On the all-Beethoven portion conducted by Charles Munch, Isaac Stern will perform the Violin Concerto. The second half, which Leonard Bernstein conducts, will consist of Act II, scenes 1 and 2 of the Gershwin opera, "Porgy and Bess," with Leontyne Price, the Bess of the current Broadway production, and her husband William Warfield as soloists, and the Festival Chorus.

Week's Program

The program for the week follows:

Monday, Aug. 3 4.30 p. m. - Chamber Music Hall, Informal Chamber Music Concert by Students of Department I; 8.30 p. m. Theater-Concert Hall (All seats reserved), three one-act operas by Students of Department IV, "L'Yvrogne Corrige" (The Reformed Drunkard) by Gluck, "L'Enfant Prodigue" (The Prodigal Son) by Debussy, "Une Education Manquee" (An Incomplete Education) by Chabrier.

Tuesday, Aug. 4 8.30 p. m. - Theater-Concert Hall, Small Choir Concert, Students of Department II.

Wednesday, Aug. 5 4.30 p. m.—Theater-Concert Hall, Opera Scenes by Students of Associate Division, Department IV; 8.30 p. m. Chamber Music Hall, Composers' Forum, by students of Department III.

Thursday, Aug. 6 8.30 p. m.—Music Shed, Orchestra Concert by Students of Department I.

Friday, Aug. 7 8.30 Music Shed, Berkshire Festival Concert B-1 Charles Munch, conductor, Berlioz, "Romeo and Juliet," Dramatic Symphony, with Festival Chorus and Soloists, Jennie Tourel, alto; Nicola Mascona, bass-baritone; John McCollum, tenor.

Saturday, Aug. 8 10 a. m. Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra- Charles Munch, conductor, Public Rehearsal (Benefit, Pension Fund); 3 p. m.—Music Shed, organ recital—E. Power Biggs; 8.30 p. m.—Music Shed, Berkshire Festival Concert B-2 - Leonard Bernstein; (Koussevitzky Memorial Concert), Moussorgsky, Prelude to "Khovanstchina;" Ravel, "Sheherazade" for Soprano and Orchestra, Soloist: Jennie Tourel; Mahler, Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection"), with Festival Chorus and Soloists, Jennie Tourel, alto; Theresa Green, soprano.

Sunday, Aug. 9 10 a. m. Chamber Music Hall, Chamber Music Concert by Students of Department I, 2.30 p. m. Music Shed; Berkshire Festival Concert B-3—Charles Munch, conductor; Schubert, Symphony No. 5, in B-flat; Barber, Adagio for Strings; Strauss, "Don Quixote" with Cello and Viola Solo; (Soloists: Gregor Piatigorsky, Cello; Joseph De Pasquale, viola; Broadcast coast-to-coast by CBS Radio, James Fassett, commentator); Milhaud, Concerto for Cello, No. 1, Soloist, Gregor Piatigorsky; Roussel, "Bacchus et Ariane" Suite No. 2.

---

by Pope Pius X.

2.30 to 4.00 WHYN Pierre Monteux will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in an all-Tchaikovsky program, the the second in a series of four given at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood near Pittsfield. The program will open with the Serenade for String Orchestra in C major and will close with the Symphony No. 5 in E minor.

5.00 WBZA WTIC—The

Soloists at Tanglewood

Jennie Tourel, left, will be the alto soloist and Theresa Green, right, will be the soprano soloist in the Mahler Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection") which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform with the Festival Chorus and soloists at the Music Shed at Tanglewood Saturday evening, Aug. 8.

MUSIC FOR EVERY-BODY
BY
SIGMUND SPAETH

George Gershwin's "folk opera," "Porgy and Bess," is one of the major musical phenomena of our time. This writer vividly remembers going over the score with its composer in a Boston hotel room, before it even reached Broadway.

When George played "Summertime," which the conductor Alexander Steinert called "the greatest song yet written by an American," its musical creator remarked with characteristic naivete, "Wait till you hear these harmonies, Doc." He was even more pleased when the moving "My Man's Gone Now" dissolved most of the audience in tears that afternoon.

Changes Made

"Porgy and Bess" has changed greatly since then. In those early performances it had a stylized opening, with Buck, of the vaudeville team of Buck and Bubbles, playing a hot piano in a second floor front, while a crap game went on below. There was lots of recitative, which inevitably sounded artificial, but the music in general seemed absolutely fresh, with frequent claims to actual inspiration.

Bubbles, the original Sportin' Life, played the part primarily as a dancer, without any real suggestion of villainy. The current interpreter, Cab Calloway, substitutes scat-singing for dancing and also seems to miss the evil implications of the role. Between them there was Avon Long, who could both dance and sing and made the character more convincing than either of the others.

The entire opera was streamlined later, under the expert musical direction of Alexander Smallens, who has been its chief conductor both here and abroad. Most of the recitative was eliminated and the pace became faster thoughout.

Today it seems almost too fast and loud, even to ears attuned to modern tempi and dynamics. One can easily understand, however, the terrific impact of the work on sophisticated European audiences last year and its continued success in New York.

"Busy" Stage

The direction of Robert Breen may seem to keep the stage a bit too "busy," apparently resenting the mere suggestion that anyone in the large cast should remain quiet for long. Such a solo as "I Got Plenty o' Nuttin'" is now shared by several voices, and Calloway oversells the humor of "It Ain't Necessarily So." But the impressive "Buzzard Song" has been restored after a long absence, and there are effective choral passages directed by the gifted Eva Jessye.

Nobody has quite come up to the initial performance of Todd Duncan as Porgy, although William Warfield probably has a more exciting voice. Leontine Price (Mrs. Warfield) is a far more seductive Bess than the original Anne Brown and also sings better. Ira Gershwin's words and the literary contributions of DuBose Heyward are as effective as ever.

"Porgy and Bess," as now played, is something quite different from what the Gershwins and the Heywards wrote in 1935. It still remains the greatest opera yet created by Americans.

Tanglewood

Tonight

8.30—Berkshire Festival concert by Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting; Lukas Foss, soloist. Music Shed.

Tomrrow

*10.00 AM—Chamber Music concert by students of Berkshire Music Center. Chamber Music Hall.

Suite for Five Brass Instruments .... Monteverdi
Calvin Torrey and Paul Willwerth, trumpets; Raymond Orcutt and Russell Nahat, trombones; Cherry Beauregard, tuba

String Quartet, Opus 11 ... Samuel Barber
Stephen Elsaesser and Miriam Wexler, violins; Endel Kalam, viola; Martha Field, cello.

String Quartet in F-major, Opus 59 .... Beethoven
Barbara Lieberman and William de-Pasquale, violins; Barbara Kroll, viola; Uziahu Wiesel, cello.

2.30 PM—Berkshire Festival all-Tchaikovsky concert by Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux conducting; Jorge Bolet, soloist.

*Open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center whose voluntary contributions help to support the school.

Music Students Soloists Tomorrow At Church-on-Hill

LENOX — Three Berkshire Music Center students from Tanglewood will be soloists at tomorrow's 11 AM service in the Church-on-the-Hill.

Helen Zimbler, soprano, will sing Mozart's "Ave Verum" and Bach's "Now With Rejoicing." A member of the choir at Emmanuel Church in Boston, Miss Zimbler has studied at the Cincinnati College of Music and the New England Conservatory of Music.

Bonnie Lake, flutist, from Cleveland Heights, Ohio, is a graduate of Oberlin Conservatory and is now a member of the faculty there.

Florence Dunn, organist, is a native of Williamstown now living in Boston. She is a former member and accompanist of the Berkshire Choral Association under the direction of Robert Barrow. At Tanglewood, she is assistant to Ingolf Dahl and also a student. Tomorrow, she will play the Prelude by Bach.

Marjorie Kembler of Pittsfield, the church's regular soloist, will sing Scott's "Come Ye Blessed." Mrs. Harriet Parsons Levinson is

---

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
Orchestra
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
SHED CONCERTS
Tonight at 8:30—Soloist, LUKAS FOSS
Sun. Aug. 2 at 2:30—PIERRE MONTEUX, Conducting a TCHAIKOVSKY Program; Soloist—JORGE BOLET, Piano.
Reserved Seats Available—General Admission $2.
Address Box Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

NYH

[233]

CROWD OF 10,800 AT TANGLEWOOD IS NEW RECORD

Second Concert of Shed Series Draws Overflow Audience

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. [illegible] become [illegible] to mention [illegible] audience records [illegible] at Tanglewood this season. [illegible] night 10,300 persons [illegible] first concert [illegible] the largest first [illegible] and tonight [illegible] persons turned out for this second concert [illegible] another record [illegible].

With due deference to Mozart, Schumann, Mendelssohn and Hindemith, whose works were played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch, we have a suspicion [illegible] the piano concerto of Lukas Foss, with the composer at the piano, that brought out many in the audience and the resultant [illegible] of applause. As we listened to [illegible] concerto, we wondered whether or not any other pianist would undertake to learn it. There are mighty few who could even approach [illegible] technically and one wondered if those few would take the trouble to learn it. Lukas Foss has tailored his concerto to his considerable pianistic talents. It is a show piece that shows him off in fine style.

(Continued On Page 10A)

The opening movement is a tour de force, a movement which is huge in scope; a [illegible] bellicose piece of music where pianist and orchestra engage in [illegible] tive conversations and cease only to engage in conversations less violent but always a bit malicious. The second movement, an adagietto, is the weakest of the three movements, [illegible] and shadowy in contrast to the heroics of the first movement and the [illegible] concise [illegible] of the finale.

The work is filled with provocative rhythms, some of which recall the early 30s and there is a wealth of invention manifested throughout. Mr. Munch and his men provided scintillating accompaniment. The audience [illegible] applause at every oppo[illegible] the young [illegible] Munch [illegible]

The [illegible] ling [illegible] to Byron [illegible] mann [illegible] ed other [illegible] to us that [illegible] ly caught [illegible] less [illegible] ality of [illegible] municat[illegible] than [illegible] lioz. Here [illegible] both [illegible] genius of [illegible] heard [illegible] ances [illegible] Munch [illegible] their [illegible] and [illegible] tive [illegible]

[illegible]

BERKSHIRE [illegible]

Music C[illegible] which [illegible] at least a we[illegible] shire Mus[illegible] Mass. The Festi[illegible]

Carlos Cha

By TU

Since the in connecti Symphony's cert series classes in c one of the students.
policy of b a guest com reputation Copland an ing duties l
partment.
keen for en group to le posers as P lav Marti
Arthur Hon
Olivier Mes piccola, a l veritable W porary mus
The gu
this year i tainly one musicians
Tanglewood
Chavez a his list of one-man p the fine ar
six newspa

Chavez
child; his from 1918.
he wrote sort of m
Early he ence of P
Manuel M.
mer he a form, and ably the g on his ca love for t
music of t
I had ma visit the morning t periences posers stu
summer.
was shown
I would recognizing sketch cap essential fe
It pictured one huge eye.
Behind
Hall I fou
the John L
the piercin hall sound Quartet N over the wooden be cent view Bowl, the l morning su shire Hills distance.

Mr. Cha view:
"Never tremely ta young com complete counterpoi of form. T ty of their how much
music.
"They co

RADIO DAIL
NEW YOR

JUL

ducational T Set For

Boston—A licens
first educational sta
2, has been granted
the Lowell Instit
Broadcasting Counc
Ralph Lowell, tru ell Institute and Boston Safe Deposit
pany, in making th said it was hoped be on the air by
He stated that $50
already available a annual operating c
The half-million
tion fund is being
Twentieth Century
Fund, the Lincoln
ene Foundation Foundation.
Institutions to p
of the station inclu
versity, MIT, Bosto
University, Tufts University.
In addition, the Orchestra, Museum
the New England
Music will also hav
in the use of the

Tanglewood Offers a Big Week's Program of Music

Almost Continuous Series of Events Arranged; Dr. Munch to Conduct 'Romeo and Juliet' On Friday; Bernstein to Lead Koussevitzky Memorial Program On Saturday

With Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 7 and 9, and with Leonard Bernstein as guest conductor on Saturday evening, Aug. 8, the Berkshire Festival concerts continue this weekend in the 6000-seat Shed at Tanglewood.

"Romeo and Juliet"

The Friday evening program will be given over in its entirety to Berlioz' dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," which the Boston Symphony gave in its complete version with chorus and soloists last winter for the first time, and which now has its first performance at Tanglewood. Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, will sing the alto role; Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone, will be the bass soloist; and John McCollum, of Tuckahoe, N. Y., a student of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra at Tanglewood, will be the tenor; and the Festival Chorus, composed of students of the Berkshire Music Center, will assist.

Mr. Bernstein's concert Saturday night will be a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky, for 25 years conductor of the Boston Symphony, and the guiding spirit behind the Tanglewood annual festival and school activities. The program opens with Moussorgsky's Prelude to "Khovanstchina," which Dr. Koussevitzky performed many times. Miss Tourel will be soloist both in Ravel's "Sheherazade" and in Mahler's Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection") with choral finale. The soprano role in the latter will be sung by Theresa Green, of Baltimore, a Berkshire Music Center student.

Gregor Piatigorsky will be soloist in Darius Milhaud's Concerto for Cello, No. 1 on the Sunday afternoon program, and will team with Joseph de Pasquale, violist of the Boston Symphony in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote." The portion of the Sunday concert, 2.30 to 4 p. m., will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as commentator.

One-Act Operas

Of special interest during the coming week is the three one-act operas by Gluck, Debussy and Chabrier announced for a single hearing tomorrow at 8.30 p. m. These rarely-heard works, produced by Boris Goldovsky, head of the Berkshire Music Center's Opera department, are open to those who help support the school by joining the Society of Friends, all seats reserved. Gluck's "L'Yvrogne Corrige" (The Drunkard Reformed), will have the English translation of Giovanni Cardelli which G. Schirmer, Inc. is publishing; originally in two acts when it had its Vienna premiere in April, 1760, it has a libretto by L. Anseaume. So far as is known this will be its first American production.

Debussy's "L'Enfant Prodigue" (The Prodigal Son), to be given in French, had its premiere in operatic form at Covent Garden, London, February 28, 1910, with a libretto by E. Guinand: it was the composer's Prix de Rome cantata, published in 1884. Boston had the first American production, in 1910 in French. Chabrier's "Une Education Manquee" (An Incomplete Education) will be sung in the English translation of Henry Reese. With a text by Eugene Leterrier and Albert Vanloo, it was originally privately produced at the Cercle de la Presse, Paris, with piano accompaniment on May 1, 1879, given first with orchestra in the French capital in 1913. For their presentation in Tanglewood's Theater-Concert Hall the three one-acters will be staged by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell, performed by student casts with a student orchestra. Scenery will be by John Blankenchip and costumes by Leo Van Witsen.

The week at Tanglewood offers almost continuous music, with all departments: student orchestra, chamber music, chorus, opera, and Tanglewood Study Group in full operation. Friends of the Berkshire Music Center are invited to: informal chamber music concert (Department I students), Monday afternoon (Aug. 3), Chamber Music Hall; three one-act operas (Department IV students), Monday evening (Aug. 3), Theater-Concert Hall; small choir concert (Department II students), Tuesday evening (Aug. 4), Theater-Concert Hall; opera scenes by the Associate Division (Department IV students), Wednesday afternoon (Aug. 5,) Theater-Concert Hall; composer's forum (Department III students), Wednesday evening (Aug. 5), Chamber Music Hall; student symphony orchestra (Department I students), Thursday evening (Aug. 6), Music Shed; organ recital by E. Power Biggs, Saturday afternoon (Aug. 8), Music Shed; chamber music concert (Department I students), Sunday morning (Aug. 9), Chamber Music Hall.

Public Rehearsal

Festival patrons are also admitted, for the nominal charge of $1, to a public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Saturday morning (Aug. 8) in the Music Shed, for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund.

This weekend's opening of the Shed series A the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be conducted by Charles Munch, with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor on Aug. 2 afternoon. Zino Francescatti, violinist; Lukas Foss and Jorge Bolet, pianists, are soloists. For series C, which concludes the 1953 Berkshire Festival (Aug. 14-15-16) the podium will be shared by Mr. Munch and Leonard Bernstein, with Lois Marshall, William Warfield, Seymour Lipkin as soloists.

Two events of note in the final week of the Festival are performances Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 10 and 11, of August Gretry's three-act opera, "Richard the Lion-Hearted" by Boris Goldovsky's opera department; and the annual Tanglewood on Parade benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, on Thursday, Aug. 13, which features a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. On the all-Beethoven portion conducted by Charles Munch, Isaac Stern will perform the Violin Concerto. The second half, which Leonard Bernstein conducts, will consist of Act II, scenes I and 2 of the Gershwin opera, "Porgy and Bess," with Leontyne Price, the Bess of the current Broadway production, and her husband William Warfield as soloists, and the Festival Chorus.

Week's Program

The program for the week follows:

Monday, Aug. 3—4.30 p. m.—Chamber Music Hall, Informal Chamber Music Concert by Students of Department I: 8.30 p. m.—Theater-Concert Hall (All seats reserved), three one-act operas by Students of Department IV, "L'Yvrogne Corrige" (The Reformed Drunkard) by Gluck, "L'Enfant Prodigue" (The Prodigal Son) by Debussy, "Une Education Manquee" (An Incomplete Education) by Chabrier.

Tuesday, Aug. 4—8.30 p. m.—Theater-Concert Hall, Small Choir Concert, Students of Department II.

Wednesday, Aug. 5—4.30 p. m.—Theater-Concert Hall, Opera Scenes by Students of Associate Division, Department IV; 8.30 p. m.—Chamber Music Hall, Composers' Forum, by students of Department III.

Thursday, Aug. 6—8.30 p. m.—Music Shed, Orchestra Concert by Students of Department I.

Friday, Aug. 7—8.30—Music Shed, Berkshire Festival Concert B-1—Charles Munch, conductor, Berlioz, "Romeo and Juliet," Dramatic Symphony, with Festival Chorus and Soloists, Jennie Tourel, alto; Nicola Mascona, bass-baritone; John McCollum, tenor.

Saturday, Aug. 8—10 a. m.—Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra—Charles Munch, conductor, Public Rehearsal (Benefit, Pension Fund); 3 p. m.—Music Shed, organ recital—E. Power Biggs; 8.30 p. m.—Music Shed, Berkshire Festival Concert B-2—Leonard Bernstein; (Koussevitzky Memorial Concert), Moussorgsky, Prelude to "Khovanstchina;" Ravel, "Sheherazade" for Soprano and Orchestra, Soloist: Jennie Tourel; Mahler, Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection"), with Festival Chorus and Soloists, Jennie Tourel, alto; Theresa Green, soprano.

Sunday, Aug. 9—10 a. m.—Chamber Music Hall, Chamber Music Concert by Students of Department I, 2.30 p. m.—Music Shed; Berkshire Festival Concert B-3—Charles Munch, conductor; Schubert, Symphony No. 5, in B-flat; Barber, Adagio for Strings; Strauss, "Don Quixote" with Cello and Viola Solo; (Soloists: Gregor Piatigorsky, Cello; Joseph De Pasquale, viola; Broadcast coast-to-coast by CBS Radio, James Fassett, commentator); Milhaud, Concerto for Cello, No. 1, Soloist, Gregor Piatigorsky; Roussel, "Bacchus et Ariane" Suite No. 2.

---

by Pope Pius X.

2.30 to 4.00—WHYN—Pierre Monteux will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in an all-Tchaikovsky program, the second in a series of four given at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood near Pittsfield. The program will open with the Serenade for String Orchestra in C major and will close with the Symphony No. 5 in E minor.

Soloists at Tanglewood

Jennie Tourel, left, will be the alto soloist and Theresa Green, right, will be the soprano soloist in the Mahler Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection") which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform with the Festival Chorus and soloists at the Music Shed at Tanglewood Saturday evening, Aug. 8.

MUSIC FOR EVERYBODY

BY SIGMUND SPAETH

George Gershwin's "folk opera," "Porgy and Bess," is one of the major musical phenomena of our time. This writer vividly remembers going over the score with its composer in a Boston hotel room, before it even reached Broadway.

When George played "Summertime," which the conductor Alexander Steinert called "the greatest song yet written by an American," its musical creator remarked with characteristic naivete, "Wait till you hear these harmonies, Doc." He was even more pleased when the moving "My Man's Gone Now" dissolved most of the audience in tears that afternoon.

Changes Made

"Porgy and Bess" has changed greatly since then. In those early performances it had a stylized opening, with Buck, of the vaudeville team of Buck and Bubbles, playing a hot piano in a second floor front, while a crap game went on below. There was lots of recitative, which inevitably sounded artificial, but the music in general seemed absolutely fresh, with frequent claims to actual inspiration.

Bubbles, the original Sportin' Life, played the part primarily as a dancer, without any real suggestion of villainy. The current interpreter, Cab Calloway, substitutes scat-singing for dancing and also seems to miss the evil implications of the role. Between them there was Avon Long, who could both dance and sing and made the character more convincing than either of the others.

The entire opera was streamlined later, under the expert musical direction of Alexander Smallens, who has been its chief conductor both here and abroad. Most of the recitative was eliminated and the pace became faster thoughout.

Today it seems almost too fast and loud, even to ears attuned to modern tempi and dynamics. One can easily understand, however, the terrific impact of the work on sophisticated European audiences last year and its continued success in New York.

"Busy" Stage

The direction of Robert Breen may seem to keep the stage a bit too "busy," apparently resenting the mere suggestion that anyone in the large cast should remain quiet for long. Such a solo as "I Got Plenty o' Nuttin'" is now shared by several voices, and Calloway oversells the humor of "It Ain't Necessarily So." But the impressive "Buzzard Song" has been restored after a long absence, and there are effective choral passages directed by the gifted Eva Jessye.

Nobody has quite come up to the initial performance of Todd Duncan as Porgy, although William Warfield probably has a more exciting voice. Leontine Price (Mrs. Warfield) is a far more seductive Bess than the original Anne Brown and also sings better. Ira Gershwin's words and the literary contributions of DuBose Heyward are as effective as ever.

"Porgy and Bess," as now played, is something quite different from what the Gershwins and the Heywards wrote in 1935. It still remains the greatest opera yet created by Americans.

Tanglewood

Eagle aug 1

Tonight

8.30—Berkshire Festival concert by Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting; Lukas Foss, soloist. Music Shed.

Tomrrow

*10.00 AM—Chamber Music concert by students of Berkshire Music Center. Chamber Music Hall.

Suite for Five Brass Instruments .... Monteverdi
Calvin Torrey and Paul Willwerth, trumpets; Raymond Orcutt and Russell Nahat, trombones; Cherry Beauregard, tuba

String Quartet, Opus 11 ... Samuel Barber
Stephen Elsaesser and Miriam Wexler, violins; Endel Kalam, viola; Martha Field, cello.

String Quartet in F-major, Opus 59 .... Beethoven
Barbara Lieberman and William de-Pasquale, violins; Barbara Kroll, viola; Uziahu Wiesel, cello.

2.30 PM—Berkshire Festival all-Tchaikovsky concert by Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux conducting; Jorge Bolet, soloist.

*Open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center whose voluntary contributions help to support the school.

Music Students Soloists Tomorrow At Church-on-Hill

Eagle Aug 1

LENOX — Three Berkshire Music Center students from Tanglewood will be soloists at tomorrow's 11 AM service in the Church-on-the-Hill.

Helen Zimbler, soprano, will sing Mozart's "Ave Verum" and Bach's "Now With Rejoicing." A member of the choir at Emmanuel Church in Boston, Miss Zimbler has studied at the Cincinnati College of Music and the New England Conservatory of Music.

Bonnie Lake, flutist, from Cleveland Heights, Ohio, is a graduate of Oberlin Conservatory and is now a member of the faculty there.

Florence Dunn, organist, is a native of Williamstown now living in Boston. She is a former member and accompanist of the Berkshire Choral Association under the direction of Robert Barrow. At Tanglewood, she is assistant to Ingolf Dahl and also a student. Tomorrow, she will play the Prelude by Bach.

Marjorie Kembler of Pittsfield, the church's regular soloist, will sing Scott's "Come Ye Blessed." Mrs. Harriet Parsons Levinson is

---

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
Orchestra
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
SHED CONCERTS
Tonight at 8:30—Soloist, LUKAS FOSS
Sun. Aug. 2 at 2:30—PIERRE MONTEUX, Conducting a TCHAIKOVSKY Program; Soloist—JORGE BOLET, Piano.
Reserved Seats Available—General Admission $2.
Address Box Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

night Aug 1

[233]

CROWD OF 10,800 AT TANGLEWOOD IS NEW RECORD

Second Concert of Shed Series Draws Overflow Audience

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 1. It will soon become trite to mention the audience records being broken at Tanglewood this season. Last night 10,300 persons turned out for the first concert in the shed, the largest first night audience in history and tonight 10,800 persons turned out for this second concert, another record shattered.

With due deference to Messrs. Schumann, Mendelssohn and Hindemith, whose works were played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch, we have a suspicion it was the piano concerto of Lukas Foss, with the composer at the piano, that brought out many in the audience and the resultant roar of applause. As we listened to this concerto, we wondered whether or not any other pianist would undertake to learn it. There are mighty few who could even approach it technically and one wondered if those few would take the trouble to learn it. Lukas Foss has tailored this concerto to his considerable pianistic talents. It is a show piece that shows him off in fine style.

(Continued On Page 10A)

The opening movement is a tour de force, a movement which is huge in scope; a roistering, bellicose piece of music where pianist and orchestra engage in vituperative conversations and cease only to engage in conversations less violent but always a bit malicious. The second movement, an adagietto, is the weakest of the three movements, pale and shadowy in contrast to the heroics of the first movement and the terse, concise termerity of the finale.

The work is filled with provocative rhythmns, some which recall the early 30s and there is a wealth of invention manifested throughout. Mr. Munch and his men provided scintillating accompaniment. The audience burst into applause at every opportunity and recalled the young composer-pianist and Mr. Munch many times.

The program opened with a sterling performance of the overture to Byron's "Manfred" by Schumann. The Byron poem has attracted other composers, but it seems to us that Schumann is most closely caught and communicated restless, brooding and tragic personality of Byron's hero, and communicated it with simpler means than either Tschaikowsky or Berlioz. Here is a work which has both intellectual grandeur and the genius of simplicity. We have heard more grandoise performances than that offered by Mr Munch and the orchestra, but their performance was orthodox and at times really communicative.

Memories can be pleasant and thoughts of travel can bring a rush of joyful memories. Thus is was with Mendelssohn following his return from a trip to Italy. The "Italian" symphony was the result and tonight we heard a performance of great charm and beauty. Mr. Munch let the music speak for itself and that was all it needed.

The past season has brought us three performances of Hindemith's Symphonic Metamorphosis of themes by Carl Maria Von Weber. Mr. Hindemith has taken some of the minor music of Weber, and arranged a suite which includes an allegro, Turandot, an andantino and march. This he has done with uncanny skill, bringing his tremendous craftsmanship to every phase, but when all is done one wonders if the original music was worth the trouble or has Hindemith bettered it. We do not find the work more listenable after repeated hearings. The performance tonight was variable, but the music did not suffer overmuch.

IN THE COUNTRY

Berkshire Festival— The Boston [illegible] Friday, July [illegible] Charles [illegible] ducting with Zino [illegible] urday, Aug. 1, at [illegible] ducting, with Lukas Foss [illegible] Aug. 2, at 2:30, Pierre Monteux [illegible] an all-Tchaikovsky [illegible] let, piano. Friday [illegible] Münch directing [illegible] and Juliet," with a chorus and [illegible] Saturday, Aug. 8 [illegible] directing, with [illegible] as well as other [illegible] Sunday, Aug. [illegible] Charles Münch [illegible] ducting, with Gregor [illegible] ¶ Monday and Tuesday, [illegible] Boris Goldovsky directing Gretry's "Richard the Lion-Hearted," presented in English [illegible] the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center. For information about tickets, which are very scarce and must be procured at least a week in advance, address the Berkshire Music Center, (Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The Festival will continue through Sunday, Aug. 16.)

Music

Carlos Chavez at Tanglewood

By TUCKER KEISER

Since the opening of the school in connection with the Boston Symphony's annual summer concert series at Tanglewood, the classes in composition have been one of the major attractions to students. Tanglewood has a policy of bringing each summer a guest composer of international reputation to share with Aaron Copland and Irving Fine, teaching duties in the composition department. Competition has been keen for enrollment in this study group to learn from such composers as Paul Hindemith, Bohuslav Martinu, Samuel Barber, Arthur Honegger, Jacques Ibert, Olivier Messiaen and Luigi Dallapiccola, a list which reads like a veritable Who's Who in contemporary music.

The guest composer-teacher this year is Carlos Chavez, certainly one of the most colorful musicians ever to teach at Tanglewood. Not only is Mr. Chavez a prolific composer, but his list of accomplishments as a one-man promoter of music and the fine arts in Mexico, would fill six newspaper columns.

* * *

Chavez began to compose as a child: his first symphony dates from 1918. Largely self-taught, he wrote voluminously for every sort of musical combination. Early he came under the influence of Pedro Luis Ogazon and Manuel M. Ponce. From the former he acquired his grasp of form, and from the latter, probably the greatest single influence on his career, he developed his love of the hitherto neglected music of the Indians.

I had made an appointment to visit the composer last Sunday morning to chat about his experiences with the budding composers studying with him this summer. In the press office, I was shown a caricature so that I would have no difficulty in recognizing him. This humorous sketch captured completely the essential features of the Mexican. It pictured a thick mop of hair, one huge eyebrow and a small eye.

Behind the Chamber Music Hall I found the mop of hair, the John L. Lewis eyebrows and the piercing dark eyes. From the hall sounds of Bartok's String Quartet No. 2 came sputtering over the lawn. We sat on a wooden bench facing the magnificent view of the Stockbridge Bowl, the lake shimmering in the morning sunlight, and the Berkshire Hills rising gently in the distance.

* * *

Mr. Chavez began the interview.

"Never have I seen such extremely talented and learned young composers. They have complete mastery in harmony, counterpoint, and a sure grasp of form. The quantity and quality of their compositions reflect how much each man loves his music.

"They come from all over the United States and from foreign countries. They come from various social and musical backgrounds, and they come for just one reason — to practice their craft. What talent! What technical craftsmanship!"

Mr. Chavez is the Cecil Sharp of Mexican and Indian music. His inclusion of these primitive elements in his writing has given his own music a ruggedly vigorous individual quality.

"No, my students here make little use of the American folk heritage. After all, American folk music has so many ties to European traditions.

"They seem to be interested principally in the larger forms. Some like the looks of oversize manuscript pages; it seems to be a personal challenge," he continued with a smile.

"Tanglewood is such a wonderful place to spend a vacation. And teaching this summer is a vacation for me. I am enjoying working with my students, and I am enjoying the constant round of concerts by the Boston Symphony and the student musical performances." The four string players brought the Bartok Quartet to its precipitous conclusion, and Mr. Chavez cast a paternal smile of approval toward the Chamber Hall.

* * *

"I have so little time for teaching in Mexico," he said, and obviously meant the traditional student-teacher relationship. For this mild-mannered musician has literally lifted Mexico City by the boot straps into the position of a major world music center.

It was in July 1928 that he accepted the post of conductor of what was then the orchestra of the musicians union in Mexico City. From an aggregation of uncertain power and vague character, he has transformed it into the major symphony it is. The Orquesta Sinfonica de Mexico gave its first concerts for workers and peasants in a park on the outskirts of the city with no admission and no ticket. Today it has a large subscription audience in the Palace of Fine Arts.

After 18 years he announced his resignation. He was himself the orchestra's conductor, artistic director, financial director, regisseur, general manager, advertising manager, publicity director. President Aleman asked him to remain titular conductor, and in 1946 appointed him Director of Fine Arts. He has since established Mexico's first official Museum of Fine Arts.

* * *

In the meantime Mr. Chavez continued to compose and conduct his compositions with every major symphony orchestra in the United States. He made his debut with the Boston Symphony in 1936, conducting two of his compositions, one of which, the "Sinfonia India," will be played at Tanglewood on Aug. 15. Only last February he conducted the first performance of his Symphony No. 4 with the Louisville Philharmonic.

The composer is now working on three large works. Mrs. Clare Boothe Luce, present ambassador to Italy, has commissioned a symphony in memory of her daughter, Ann Clare Brokaw. A large orchestral work has been commissioned by the Koussevitzky Foundation, and "The Tuscan Players," a three-act opera, has been promised to the New York City Center Opera Company. The libretto of this work is by Chester Kallmann, co-author of Stravinsky's "The Rake's Progress."

Several of Mr. Chavez' compositions will be performed at Tanglewood this season. They include, "Arbolucu," a setting for chorus of a Spanish folk song, "Soli for Oboe, Clarinet, Trumpet and Bassoon," which had just been played when we had our chat, "H. P." (meaning Horse Power), a violin concerto, and the aforementioned "Sinfonia India."

Tanglewood Soloist

7/30

ZINO FRANCESCATTI

Zino Francescatti, violinist, is soloist in Mendelssohn's "Violin Concerto in E-minor" which the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, will perform in the Friday evening, July 31, concert (8:30 p.m.) of the Berkshire Festival in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Shed Concerts for 2nd Berkshire Week

With Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon August 7 and 9, with Leonard Bernstein as guest conductor on Saturday evening August 8, the Berkshire Festival concerts continue this weekend in the 6,000-seat Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The Friday evening program will be given over in its entirety to Berlioz' dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," which the Boston Symphony gave in its complete version with chorus and soloists last winter for the first time, and which now has its first performance at Tanglewood. Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, will sing the alto role.

Mr. Bernstein's concert Saturday night will be a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky, for twenty-five years conductor of the Boston Symphony, and the guiding spirit behind the Tanglewood annual festival and school activities.

The Series B programs are:

Friday, August 7, at 8:30 p. m.—
Charles Munch
Berlioz .."Romeo and Juliet", Dramatic Symphony
Soloists: Jennie Tourel, Nicola Moscona, John McCollum and the Berkshire Festival Chorus
Saturday, August 8, 8:30 p. m.—
Leonard Bernstein
Koussevitsky Memorial Concert
Moussorgsky ..Prelude to "Khovanstchina"
Ravel .."Sheherazade" for Soprano and Orchestra
Soloist: Jennie Tourel
Mahler ..Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection")
Soloists: Jennie Tourel, Theresa Green and the Berkshire Festival Chorus
Sunday, August 9, 2:30 p. m.—
Charles Munch
Schubert ..Symphony No. 5, in B-flat
Barber....Adagio for Strings
Strauss .."Don Quixote" (with Cello and Violin Solo)
Soloists: Gregor Piatigorsky and Joseph de Pasquale

Berkshire Festival

Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Today, 2:30. Tchaikovsky program (Pierre Monteux conducting); soloist, Jorge Bolet, pianist; James Fassett, commentator). Serenade for Strings; Symphony No. 5 in E minor; Piano Concerto No. 1 in B flat minor.
Friday, 8:30 (Soloists, Jennie Tourel, Nicola Moscona, John McCollum and the Berkshire Festival Chorus.) "Romeo and Juliet" (dramatic symphony), Berlioz.
Saturday, 8:30. (Leonard Bernstein conducting); soloists, Jennie Tourel and Theresa Green and the Berkshire Festival Chorus. Prelude to "Khovanstchina," Moussorgsky; "Sheherazade" for Soprano and Orchestra, Ravel; Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection"), Mahler.
Sunday, Aug. 9, 2:30. (Soloists, Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist; Joseph De Pasquale, violist; James Fassett, commentator.) Symphony No. 5 in B flat, Schubert; Adagio for Strings, Barber; "Don Quixote" with cello and viola solo, Strauss; Concerto for Cello, No. 1, Milhaud; "Bacchus et Ariane" Suite No. 2, Roussel.

Berkshire Music Center, Opera Dept., Monday 8:30.

"L'Yvrogne Corrige," (The Reformed Drunkard), Gluck; "L'Enfant Prodigue," (The Prodigal Son), Debussy; "Une Education Manquee," (An Incomplete Education), Chabrier.

SS., AUGUST 2, 1953

Monteux at Tanglewood

Pierre Monteux, the celebrated French conductor, with his wife, Doris, relax at Tanglewood between rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Monteux will lead the orchestra this afternoon, in an all-Tschaikovsky program, as guest conductor.

N. E. Conservatory Faculty Members at Tanglewood

Nineteen members of the faculty of the New England Conservatory of Music are members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center this summer. They are Raymond Allard, Richard Burgin, Sarah Caldwell, Gino Cioffi, Joseph de Pasquale, Lorna Cooke de Varon, Georges Fourel, Fernand Gillet, Boris Goldovsky, Alfred Krips, Georges Laurent, SaAmuel Mayes, Rosario Mazzeo, Georges Moleux, William VAalkenier, Roger Voisin, Felix Wolfes, Alfred Zighera, and Bernard Zighera.

The Conservatory is offering, for the sixth year, several special scholarships to qualified students in violin, viola, violoncello, woodwinds, and French horn. The amounts of the scholarship will provide the entire tuition for the major instrument for students enrolling in the degree and diploma course for 1953-1954. Application should be made before Sept. 16.

As part of the artistic center at Castle Hill, Ipswich, Mass., this summer for the second time, the Conservatory is conducting two courses of musical instruction especially designed for children. The Conservatory is also offering a lecture course on music appreciation by Francis Judd Cooke of the faculty.

The 87th year of the Conservatory will begin Sept. 16. Registration opens on Sept. 8. Courses include the four-year bachelor degree course, the three-year diploma course, master's course, and artist's diploma. Special students are accepted in all branches of musical subjects.

SYMPHONY SERIES SATURDAY, SUNDAY

With Charles Munch conducting the entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday and Saturday evenings, at 8:30 and Pierre Monteux as guest conductor on Sunday afternoon, at 2:30 the major series of the Berkshire Festival opens this week in the 6,000-seat shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Nine concerts will be given over three weekends, until Aug. 16.

The sixteenth Berkshire Festival since summer concerts were inaugurated in the hills of western Massachusetts, and the fourteenth since the Boston Symphony participated, has been drawing record crowds.

This weekend's series will feature Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Copland, Ravel, Schumann, Foss, Hindemith and Tchaikovsky.

The annual "Tanglewood On Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, on Thursday, Aug. 13, will feature a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch and Leonard Bernstein, with violinist Isaac Stern, baritone William Warfield and his soprano wife Leontyne Price, the Bess of Broadway's "Porgy and Bess," as soloists.

RECORDS BROKEN FOR FIRST NIGHT AT TANGLEWOOD

Shed Series Draws 10,300 To Hear Violinist Francescatti

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 31—A perfect summer night, the lure of Zino Francescatti playing the Mendelssohn violin concerto and the Boston Symphony Orchestra directed by Charles Munch drew 10,300 people to Tanglewood tonight thus breaking all records for a first night of the shed series of concerts.

Friendly Feeling

There is something very friendly in this first night concert. Many people return to seats they have occupied for years and know those around them so the affair takes on the form of an old home week. Mrs. Koussevitzky was in her usual box and scattered throughout the audience were numerous musicians, composers and, of course, the students in the music school.

Zino Francescatti did not disappoint. He was in marvellous form and he received impeccable collaboration from Mr. Munch and his men, particularly in the tricky final movement. The concerto itself remains as fresh as the day it was written and the eminent violinist drew from his instrument the most beautiful tones, bringing to the andante just the right amount of feeling. The audience was rapturous in its applause.

Continued On Page 6

The program opening with the overture "Leonora," No. 3. The performance was spotty. At times the brasses went completely out of the framework and the off pitch trumpet call was no addition to the ensemble. There were moments of regal beauty in the performance, but the Boston players have done better by it.

Exquisite Tunes

Of the works by Aaron Copland, we have always found "Appalachian Spring" the most communicative. Mr. Munch's reading of the score tonight was a magnificent achievement in which he was seconded by the orchestra. Originally written for Martha Graham, the excerpts which Mr. Copland has made into a suite give one the essence and spirit of the work. He has woven exquisite mountain tunes, songs and dances, into the work and it is rich in contrast. Surely this is one of the most significant of works by an American composer.

The program concluded with a terrific performance of Ravel's "Bolero." This is one of the works which Mr. Munch has made particularly his own. Its force lies in its relentless repetition which tonight became almost unbearable in its intensity. There have been more electrical performances of this work here at Tanglewood, but for sheer bravado, audacity and relentless realism, that offered by Mr. Munch tonight will remain memorable.

Tomorrow night, the program will offer the first performance here of the second piano concerto by Lukas Foss, with the composer at the piano. Surrounding this opus will be Schumann's "Overture to Manfred"; Mendelssohn's "Italian" symphony and the Hindemith "Symphonic Metamorphosis of Themes" by Von Weber.

This Clipping From
RADIO DAILY-TV DAILY
NEW YORK, N. Y.

JUL 20 1953

Educationc 'V Station Set F Boston Area

—A

for this city's ition, on channel by the FCC to ite Cooperative il.
stee of the Low-resident of the
and Trust Com-announcement,
the station would
October 1, 1954.
00,000 in funds is and estimated the cost at $200,000. dollar construcprovided by the Fund, the Filene and Therese Fi-and the Ford participate in use ation include Harvard Uni-

MIT, Boston College, Boston
Tufts and Northeastern

ition, the Boston Symphony ra, Museum of Fine Arts and England Conservatory of will also have important roles use of the station.

Music

Aug 2

Carlos Chavez at Tanglewood

By TUCKER KEISER

Since the opening of the school in connection with the Boston Symphony's annual summer concert series at Tanglewood, the classes in composition have been one of the major attractions to students. Tanglewood has a policy of bringing each summer a guest composer of international reputation to share with Aaron Copland and Irving Fine, teaching duties in the composition department. Competition has been keen for enrollment in this study group to learn from such composers as Paul Hindemith, Bohuslav Martinu, Samuel Barber, Arthur Honegger, Jacques Ibert, Olivier Messaien and Luigi Dallapiccola, a list which reads like a veritable Who's Who in contemporary music.

The guest composer-teacher this year is Carlos Chavez, certainly one of the most colorful musicians ever to teach at Tanglewood. Not only is Mr. Chavez a prolific composer, but his list of accomplishments as a one-man promoter of music and the fine arts in Mexico, would fill six newspaper columns.

* * *

Chavez began to compose as a child; his first symphony dates from 1918. Largely self-taught, he wrote voluminously for every sort of musical combination. Early he came under the influence of Pedro Luis Ogazon and Manuel M. Ponce. From the former he acquired his grasp of form, and from the latter, probably the greatest single influence on his career, he developed his love for the hitherto neglected music of the Indians.

I had made an appointment to visit the composer last Sunday morning to chat about his experiences with the budding composers studying with him this summer. In the press office, I was shown a caricature so that I would have no difficulty in recognizing him. This humorous sketch captured completely the essential features of the Mexican. It pictured a thick mop of hair, one huge eyebrow and a small eye.

Behind the Chamber Music Hall I found the mop of hair, the John L. Lewis eyebrows and the piercing dark eyes. From the hall sounds of Bartok's String Quartet No. 2 came sputtering over the lawn. We sat on a wooden bench facing the magnificent view of the Stockbridge Bowl, the lake shimmering in the morning sunlight, and the Berkshire Hills rising gently in the distance.

* * *

Mr. Chavez began the interview:

"Never have I seen such extremely talented and learned young composers. They have complete mastery in harmony, counterpoint, and a sure grasp of form. The quantity and quality of their compositions reflect how much each man loves his music.

"They come from all over the United States and from foreign countries. They come from various social and musical backgrounds, and they come for just one reason — to practice their craft. What talent! What technical craftsmanship!"

Mr. Chavez is the Cecil Sharp of Mexican and Indian music. His inclusion of these primitive elements in his writing has given his own music a ruggedly vigorous individual quality.

"No, my students here make little use of the American folk heritage. After all, American folk music has so many ties to European traditions.

"They seem to be interested principally in the larger forms. Some like the looks of oversize manuscript pages; it seems to be a personal challenge," he continued with a smile.

"Tanglewood is such a wonderful place to spend a vacation. And teaching this summer is a vacation for me. I am enjoying working with my students, and I am enjoying the constant round of concerts by the Boston Symphony and the student musical performances." The four string players brought the Bartok Quartet to its precipitous conclusion, and Mr. Chavez cast a paternal smile of approval toward the Chamber Hall.

* * *

"I have so little time for teaching in Mexico," he said, and obviously meant the traditional student-teacher relationship. For this mild-mannered musician has literally lifted Mexico City by the boot straps into the position of a major world music center.

It was in July 1928 that he accepted the post of conductor of what was then the orchestra of the musicians union in Mexico City. From an aggregation of uncertain power and vague character, he has transformed it into the major symphony it is. The Orquesta Sinfonica de Mexico gave its first concerts for workers and peasants in a park on the outskirts of the city with no admission and no ticket. Today it has a large subscription audience in the Palace of Fine Arts.

After 18 years he announced his resignation. He was himself the orchestra's conductor, artistic director, financial director, regisseur, general manager, advertising manager, publicity director. President Aleman asked him to remain titular conductor, and in 1946 appointed him Director of Fine Arts. He has since established Mexico's first official Museum of Fine Arts.

* * *

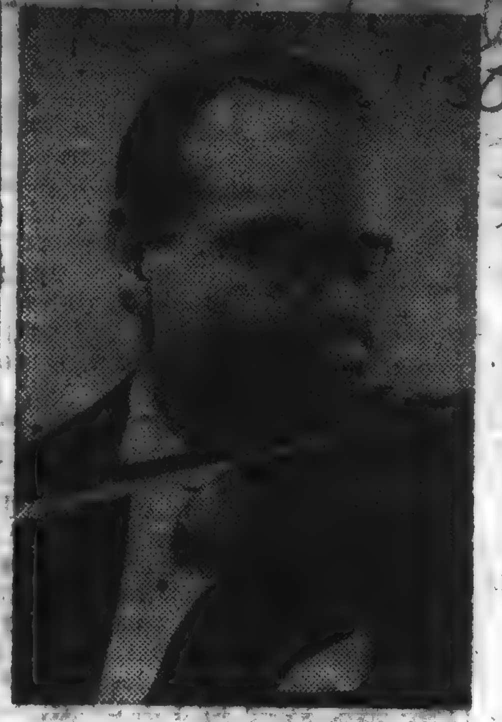
In the meantime Mr. Chavez continued to compose and conduct his compositions with every major symphony orchestra in the United States. He made his debut with the Boston Symphony in 1936, conducting two of his compositions, one of which, the "Sinfonia India," will be played at Tanglewood on Aug. 15. Only last February he conducted the first performance of his Symphony No. 4 with the Louisville Philharmonic.

The composer is now working on three large works. Mrs. Clare Boothe Luce, present ambassador to Italy, has commissioned a symphony in memory of her daughter, Ann Clare Brokaw. A large orchestral work has been commissioned by the Koussevitzky Foundation, and "The Tuscan Players," a three-act opera, has been promised to the New York City Center Opera Company. The libretto of this work is by Chester Kallmann, co-author of Stravinsky's "The Rake's Progress."

Several of Mr. Chavez' compositions will be performed at Tanglewood this season. They include, "Arbolucu," a setting for chorus of a Spanish folk song, "Soli for Oboe, Clarinet, Trumpet and Bassoon," which had just been played when we had our chat, "H. P." (meaning Horse Power), a violin concerto, and the aforementioned "Sinfonia India."

Tanglewood Soloist

7/30



ZINO FRANCESCATTI

Zino Francescatti, violinist, is soloist in Mendelssohn's "Violin Concerto in E-minor" which the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, will perform in the Friday evening, July 31, concert (8:30 p.m.) of the Berkshire Festival in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Shed Concerts for 2nd Berkshire Week

With Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon August 7 and 9, with Leonard Bernstein as guest conductor on Saturday evening August 8, the Berkshire Festival concerts continue this weekend in the 6,000-seat Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The Friday evening program will be given over in its entirety to Berlioz' dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," which the Boston Symphony gave in its complete version with chorus and soloists last winter for the first time, and which now has its first performance at Tanglewood. Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, will sing the alto role.

Mr. Bernstein's concert Saturday night will be a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky, for twenty-five years conductor of the Boston Symphony, and the guiding spirit behind the Tanglewood annual festival and school activities.

The Series B programs are:

Friday, August 7, at 8:30 p. m.—
Charles Munch
Berlioz . . "Romeo and Juliet", Dramatic Symphony
Soloists: Jennie Tourel, Nicola Moscona, John McCollum and the Berkshire Festival Chorus
Saturday, August 8, 8:30 p. m.—
Leonard Bernstein
Koussevitsky Memorial Concert
Moussorgsky . . Prelude to "Khovanstchina"
Ravel . . "Sheherazade" for Soprano and Orchestra
Soloist: Jennie Tourel
Mahler . . Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection")
Soloists: Jennie Tourel, Theresa Green and the Berkshire Festival Chorus
Sunday, August 9, 2:30 p. m.—
Charles Munch
Schubert . . Symphony No. 5, in B-flat
Barber . . . Adagio for Strings
Strauss . . "Don Quixote" (with Cello and Violin Solo)
Soloists: Gregor Piatigorsky and Joseph de Pasquale

This Clipping From
RADIO DAILY-TV DAILY
NEW YORK, N. Y.

JUL 20 1953

Educational TV Station Set For Boston Area

Boston—A license for this city's first educational station, on channel 2 has been granted by the FCC to the Lowell Institute Cooperative Broadcasting Council.

Ralph Lowell, trustee of the Lowell Institute and president of the Boston Safe Deposit and Trust Company, in making the announcement, said it was hoped the station would be on the air by October 1, 1954. He stated that $500,000 in funds is already available and estimated the annual operating cost at $200,000.

The half-million dollar construction fund is being provided by the Twentieth Century Fund, the Filene Fund, the Lincoln and Therese Filene Foundation and the Ford Foundation.

Institutions to participate in use of the station include Harvard University, MIT, Boston College, Boston University, Tufts and Northeastern University.

In addition, the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Museum of Fine Arts and the New England Conservatory of Music will also have important roles in the use of the station.

Berkshire Festival

Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Today, 2:30. Tchaikovsky program (Pierre Monteux conducting); soloist, Jorge Bolet, pianist; James Fassett, commentator). Serenade for Strings; Symphony No. 5 in E minor; Piano Concerto No. 1 in B flat minor.

Friday, 8:30 (Soloists, Jennie Tourel, Nicola Moscona, John McCollum and the Berkshire Festival Chorus.) "Romeo and Juliet" (dramatic symphony), Berlioz.

Saturday, 8:30. (Leonard Bernstein conducting); soloists, Jennie Tourel and Theresa Green and the Berkshire Festival Chorus. Prelude to "Khovanstchina," Moussorgsky; "Sheherazade" for Soprano and Orchestra, Ravel; Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection"), Mahler.

Sunday, Aug. 9, 2:30. (Soloists, Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist; Joseph De Pasquale, violist; James Fassett, commentator.) Symphony No. 5 in B flat, Schubert; Adagio for Strings, Barber; "Don Quixote" with cello and viola solo, Strauss; Concerto for Cello, No. 1, Milhaud; "Bacchus et Ariane" Suite No. 2, Roussel.

Berkshire Music Center, Opera Dept., Monday 8:30.

"L'Ivrogne Corrigé," (The Reformed Drunkard), Gluck; "L'Enfant Prodigue," (The Prodigal Son), Debussy; "Une Education Manquée," (An Incomplete Education), Chabrier.

SS., AUGUST 2, 1953

Rep

Monteux at Tanglewood

Pierre Monteux, the celebrated French conductor, with his wife, Doris, relax at Tanglewood between rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Monteux will lead the orchestra this afternoon, in an all-Tschaikovsky program, as guest conductor.

N. E. Conservatory Faculty Members at Tanglewood

Nineteen members of the faculty of the New England Conservatory of Music are members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center this summer. They are Raymond Allard, Richard Burgin, Sarah Caldwell, Gino Cioffi, Joseph de Pasquale, Lorna Cooke de Varon, Georges Fourel, Fernand Gillet, Boris Goldovsky, Alfred Krips, Georges Laurent, SaAmuel Mayes, Rosario Mazzeo, Georges Moleux, William VAalkenier, Roger Voisin, Felix Wolfes, Alfred Zighera, and Bernard Zighera.

The Conservatory is offering, for the sixth year, several special scholarships to qualified students in violin, viola, violoncello, woodwinds, and French horn. The amounts of the scholarship will provide the entire tuition for the major instrument for students enrolling in the degree and diploma course for 1953-1954. Application should be made before Sept. 16.

As part of the artistic center at Castle Hill, Ipswich, Mass., this summer for the second time, the Conservatury is conducting two courses of musical instruction especially designed for children. The Conservatory is also offering a lecture course on music appreciation by Francis Judd Cooke of the faculty.

The 87th year of the Conservatory will begin Sept. 16. Registration opens on Sept. 8. Courses include the four-year bachelor degree course, the three-year diploma course, master's course, and artist's diploma. Special students are accepted in all branches of musical subjects.

~~Newark News~~

SYMPHONY SERIES SATURDAY, SUNDAY

7/30

With Charles Munch conducting the entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday and Saturday evenings, at 8:30 and Pierre Monteux as guest conductor on Sunday afternoon, at 2:30 the major series of the Berkshire Festival opens this week in the 6,000-seat shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Nine concerts will be given over three weekends, until Aug. 16.

The sixteenth Berkshire Festival since summer concerts were inaugurated in the hills of western Massachusetts, and the fourteenth since the Boston Symphony participated, has been drawing record crowds.

This weekend's series will feature Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Copland, Ravel, Schumann, Foss, Hindemith and Tchaikovsky.

The annual "Tanglewood On Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, on Thursday, Aug. 13, will feature a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch and Leonard Bernstein, with violinist Isaac Stern, baritone William Warfield and his soprano wife Leontyne Price, the Bess of Broadway's "Porgy and Bess," as soloists.

RECORDS BROKEN FOR FIRST NIGHT AT TANGLEWOOD

Union Aug-1

Shed Series Draws 10,300 To Hear Violinist Francescatti

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 31—A perfect summer night, the lure of Zino Francescatti playing the Mendelssohn violin concerto and the Boston Symphony Orchestra directed by Charles Munch drew 10,300 people to Tanglewood tonight thus breaking all records for a first night of the shed series of concerts.

Friendly Feeling

There is something very friendly in this first night concert. Many people return to seats they have occupied for years and know those around them so the affair takes on the form of an old home week. Mrs. Koussevitzky was in her usual box and scattered throughout the audience were numerous musicians, composers and, of course, the students in the music school.

Zino Francescatti did not disappoint. He was in marvellous form and he received impeccable collaboration from Mr. Munch and his men, particularly in the tricky final movement. The concerto itself remains as fresh as the day it was written and the eminent violinist drew from his instrument the most beautiful tones, bringing to the andante just the right amount of feeling. The audience was rapturous in its applause.

Continued On Page 6

The program opening with the overture "Leonora," No. 3. The performance was spotty. At times the brasses went completely out of the framework and the off pitch trumpet call was no addition to the ensemble. There were moments of regal beauty in the performance, but the Boston players have done better by it.

Exquisite Tunes

Of the works by Aaron Copland, we have always found "Appalachian Spring" the most communicative. Mr. Munch's reading of the score tonight was a magnificent achievement in which he was seconded by the orchestra. Originally written for Martha Graham, the excerpts which Mr. Copland has made into a suite give one the essence and spirit of the work. He has woven exquisite mountain tunes, songs and dances, into the work and it is rich in contrast. Surely this is one of the most significant of works by an American composer.

The program concluded with a terrific performance of Ravel's "Bolero." This is one of the works which Mr. Munch has made particularly his own. Its force lies in its relentless repetition which tonight became almost unbearable in its intensity. There have been more electrical performances of this work here at Tanglewood, but for sheer bravado, audacity and relentless realism, that offered by Mr. Munch tonight will remain memorable.

Tomorrow night, the program will offer the first performance here of the second piano concerto by Lukas Foss, with the composer at the piano. Surrounding this opus will be Schumann's "Overture to Manfred"; Mendelssohn's "Italian" symphony and the Hindemith "Symphonic Metamorphosis of Themes" by Von Weber.

Tanglewood Tales

Zino Francescatti, soloist for the opening concert of the Berkshire Festival Shed series last Friday night did not have far to travel to Tanglewood. The noted violinist has a 10-room home at Fiddletop, Monterey, 20 miles away. He is an avid reader, a fervent chess player, an adept at cross-word and jigg-saw puzzles. He is a regular hiker, an addict of the 16 mm. movie camera and this summer has added a new hoby: gunning for woodchucks. After his performance of the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto in E minor which Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, he travels to Chicago to perform at Ravinia.

Lukas Foss played his own Piano Concerto No. 2 with the Boston Symphony last night at Tanglewood. The concerto had its first American performance at the hands of the Boston Symphony in Boston in November, 1951, and later it received the Horblit award. The 32-year-old composer, who is on the conducting staff of the Berkshire Music Center, has revised his score, and in its new form it was premiered at the Ojai Festival, Cal., in May, with Mr. Foss as soloist. The Tanglewood performance was its first. Since he came to the U. S. from his native Germany in 1937, he has studied at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia with Randall Thompson, Fritz Reiner and Paul Hindemith, was a conductor pupil of Serge Koussevitzky, and joined the Tanglewood faculty seven years ago.

Jorge Bolet, the handsome young Cuban pianist, soloist on this afternoon's all-Tchaikovsky program with Pierre Monteux and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, made his Tanglewood debut just a year ago, in Prokofieff's Second Piano Concerto. Havana-born (the final "t" of his name is pronounced), he served in both the Cuban and U. S. armed services during the war, and conducted the first performance ever seen in Japan of "The Mikado." He tours annually in North and South America, drives his own car, averaging 1500 miles a week, to concert engagements, with a trailer attachment carrying a Baldwin grand piano used at his performances, and his constant companion is a small pug dog, "Virtuoso."

Pierre Monteux, the distinguished French born conductor who led the Boston Symphony Orchestra from 1919-24, returns to Tanglewood this afternoon as guest conductor in an all-Tchaikovsky program. Mr. Monteux, who reached 78 last April, made his Tanglewood debut last summer. He is a guest at Elm Court this week end with his cohort and long-time friend, Charles Murch, with whom he shared the triumphal tours of the Boston Symphony in Europe in the spring of 1951 and across the U. S. last May. Mr. Monteux flew to Tanglewood, via Boston and Albany, from his summer home, "Le Domain", a summer school of conducting he runs at Hancock, Me. In November he has the signal honor of opening the Metropolitan Opera's season in New York, conducting a new production of "Faust": he was conductor at the opera house during 1917-18, before going to Boston.

Tanglewood's opera department, under Boris Goldovsky, will give the world premiere of a short opera, "L'Yvrogne Corrige" (The Drunkard Reformed) by Gluck, tomorrow evening in the Theater-Concert Hall. It had its premiere in Vienna in April, 1760. It will be sung in English, as will Emmanuel Chabrier's risque one-acter, "Une Education Manquee" (An Incomplete Education) of 1879. Also on the bill is Debussy's "L'Enfant Prodigue" (The Prodigal Son) 1884, sung in French, which uses a chorus of dancers, and choreography by Leo Kharibian.

When Hugh Ross' choral department of the Berkshire Music Center gives its next choir concert at Tanglewood next Tuesday evening one of the soloists, in the Magnificate by Johann Pachelbel, will be Miss Lillian Simmons, soprano, of Rock Hill, S. C., aged 20, a first-year Tanglewood student of chorus-leading. Miss Simmons will graduate from Winthrop College, Rock Hill, in 1954. In her spare time, in her native town of 2600, she is soprano soloist in St. John's Methodist Church, and plays the piano for the men's Bible Class of the church. When she announced her plan to summer at Tanglewood, the Bible Class presented her with a check. When the Elks' Club of Rock Hill heard of this donation, it also subscribed to her tuition and board, as did a committee of the town's merchants. After Tanglewood, she will go to Oglebay Opera Workshop in Wheeling, W. Va. August 16-29, to continue opera studies under Boris Goldovsky. She hopes to be back in Tanglewood after she has her sheepskin next summer.

An invitation has been extended, through Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, chairman of the ticket and publicity committee for "Tanglewood on Parade," the gala benefit for the Berkshire Music Center on August 13, to the two Royal Princesses of the Netherlands, who are summering on Cape Cod.

Fourteen journalists from nine of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization countries, now on a month's tour of the United States, will include a visit to Tanglewood on August 8 and 9. They will be guests of George Edman, of the U. S. International Information Administration, State Department, and Mrs. Edman at a picnic at Tanglewood before the Sunday concert.

A student at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood in Lenox

LEONTYNE PRICE

two seasons back, Leontyne Price will make a return as the star of the gala "Tanglewood On Parade" program on Thursday, August 13. She will sing Act II, section 1 and 2 of "Porgy and Bess" in which she is currently starring at the Ziegfeld Theatre in New York. The portion of the program in which she will appear will have Leonard Bernstein conducting the orchestra. Accompanying the singing star to Tanglewood will be her husband, William Warfield.

With the completion of the "small" concerts at Tanglewood all previous records were shattered. During the three week ends of siv progracs of Bach, Mozart, Haydn and 20th century composers' works the average attendance was 4360. The total attendance figure of 26,150 surpasses the previous record of 23,500 set in 1950.

So popular have these "small" programs become that two of the concerts were moved from the 1200-seating capacity Theater-Concert Hall to the music shed which seats 6000. Now the management of the BSO is faced with the question of whether or not to move all these concerts into the shed next season. From the approval of this season's experiment, Manager George Judd may not find the decision too hard to make. In the shed, the overflow crowds that hitherto had to sit on the sprawling lawns were able to hear every note in comfort.

With the beginning of the major concerts at Tanglewood last Friday night, it is safe to anticipate that Conductor Munch and his musicians will establish new all-time record for attendance at these three week-end series. All nine concerts are expected to surpass anything in the 16-year history of the Berkshire Music Festival of August 10 will f[illegible] that trouper, Anna Russell, at the Berkshire Playhouse in Stockbridge for matinee performances on Thursday and Friday, August 13 and 14. She directs her talents towards satirizing the pompous and pretentious so often seen and suffered on the concert stage. Her four Town Hall concerts in the past year attest to that fact. Next fall she will open at New York City in her own revue. While in the Berkshires, Miss Russell will also attend Tanglewood at Lenox where she will make the drawings at the "Tanglewood on Parade" program the night of August 13.

F. H. T.

N Y T

GLUCK AT TANGLEWOOD TOMORROW

Clemens Kalisher

Scene from "L'Ivrogne Corrigé," one of the three one-act works to be done by Berkshire Music Center students, Debussy's "L'Enfant Prodigue" and Chabrier's "Une Education Manquée" are the other two.

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

by the

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

TODAY at 2:30

All-Tchaikovsky Program

PIERRE MONTEUX, Conducting

Soloist—JORGE BOLET, Piano

Remaining Concerts, Aug. 7, 8, 9; 14, 15, 16

Reserved Seats available—General Admission $2

Special Event!

TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE

Thurs. Aug. 13 — Conductors CHARLES MUNCH, LEONARD BERNSTEIN; Soloists—ISAAC STERN, Violin, LEONTYNE PRICE, Soprano, WILLIAM WARFIELD, Baritone

Reserved Seats now — $3, $4, $5, General Admission $2.50

Address Box Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

by the

BOSTON SYMPHONY

Orchestra

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

SHED CONCERTS

Open TONIGHT at 8:30

Soloist — ZINO FRANCESCATTI, Violin

Sat., Aug. 1 at 8:30 — Soloist, LUKAS FOSS

Sun., Aug. 2 at 2:30 — PIERRE MONTEUX, conducting a TCHAIKOVSKY Program; Soloist — JORGE BOLET, Piano

Reserved seats available — General Admission $2

Address Box Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

At Tanglewood

LEONARD BERNSTEIN, who heads the orchestral conducting classes of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained in connection with the Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., is Guest Conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the Festival Concerts of Saturday evening, August 8 and for Saturday evening, August 15.

Tanglewood Premiere

A scene from Emanuel Chabrier's one-act opera, "Une Education Manquee," which is to have its Tanglewood premiere in the theater-concert hall Monday evening at 8.30. The story, to be sung in English translation, is about a young husband and bride on their wedding night. In the picture are John McCollum of Tuckahoe, N. Y., as the husband, Gentran de Bois Massif, and Sara Mae Endich of New York City as Helene, the bride.

BOSTON, MASS.
EVENING GLOBE

JUL 21 1953

Tanglewood Benefit

Tanglewood will be on parade Aug. 13.

The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, which includes afternoon festivities by every department of the Summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, a lawn supper and an evening concert by the orchestra, will last from 6 to 11 p. m., followed by dancing on the lawn.

Isaac Stern, violinist, will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D major with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, at the evening concert.

The second half of the concert program, to be conducted by Leonard Bernstein, will offer as soloists baritone William Warfield and his wife, soprano Leontyne Price.

Warfield will make his Tanglewood debut at the concert, and the following night will be Berkshire Festival soloist, with soprano Lois Marshall in Brahms' Requiem.

[illegible] on Bennington College; Paintings by Di Giovanni and prints by [illegible] TANGLEWOOD, LENOX: Exhibition of paintings and prints by Ture Bengtz [illegible] the reception hall [illegible]

Ture Bengtz [illegible] the reception hall at the [illegible] of Tanglewood [illegible]

weekly [illegible] through [illegible] co-operation of [illegible] Berkshire [illegible] Bentz is [illegible] Berkshire [illegible] Bengtz School of Art at [illegible] School.

During [illegible] Bengtz [illegible] graphic department of [illegible] Museum School [illegible] ing [illegible] Museum School [illegible] session [illegible] and Bengtz [illegible] he been [illegible] shires [illegible] important [illegible] there.

Native of Finland

Bengtz [illegible] coming to [illegible] began [illegible] country [illegible] Boston Museum School [illegible] ing here. He has [illegible] ber of major awards [illegible] is included [illegible] those of [illegible] Art Institute [illegible] of Congress [illegible] Fine Arts [illegible]

Bengtz' [illegible] the purchase [illegible] of Congress [illegible] year. "C[illegible] which he [illegible] cluded in [illegible] This print [illegible] the ground [illegible] describes the [illegible] position.

Others of [illegible] "Reverie," [illegible] out acid [illegible] titled "The F[illegible] graph, "Drift[illegible] for the latter work [illegible] and is one of the [illegible] guished items in the [illegible] philosophic in content and [illegible] display of technique [illegible]

Also being shown [illegible] casein, "Children [illegible] head study in pen and ink [illegible] chalk."

[335]

Broadcast at 2.30

Tangle Aug. 1

All-Tchaikovsky Program At Tanglewood Tomorrow

TANGLEWOOD — Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the all-Tchaikovsky program of the major Berkshire Festival tomorrow afternoon at 2.30 in the Tanglewood Shed. The concert will [illegible] broadcast from Lenox [illegible] CBS [illegible] Sunday "World Festivals" program. The orchestra will play the Russian composer's Serenade for String Orchestra, Fifth Symphony and First Piano Concerto for which Jorge Bolet will be soloist.

Mr. Monteux and Mr. Bolet are not new to Tanglewood. The former conductor of the Boston orchestra from 1919 to 1924, who many times guest-conducted it in Boston and shared the podium with Charles Munch in both the European tour of the spring of 1952 and the transcontinental tour last May, appeared in the same capacity at Tanglewood last season. Mr. Bolet was soloist in the 1951 festival for Prokofieff's Second Piano Concerto, conducted by Eleazar deCarvalho. He also is scheduled to appear at the Pittsfield High School in the 1953-54 series of the Community Concert Association.

Monteux Is 78

A native Parisian who has passed his 78th birthday, Mr. Monteux began his career as violist at the Opéra Comique and the Concerts Colonne. From 1912 he conducted Diaghileff's Ballet Russe, introducing such works as Stravinsky's "Petrouchka" and "Le Sacre du Primtemps," Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" and Debussy's "Jeux." He toured the United States with the ballet in 1916-17, and conducted at the Paris Opera and his own Concerts Monteux. He became conductor in 1917 at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, where he has been invited to open the season in November with a new production of "Faust."

In the 10 years following his stay in Boston he was a regular conductor of the Amsterdam Concertgebouw and the Orchestra Symphonique de Paris. He now is retired from the San Francisco Orchestra, of which he became leader in 1935. He recently filled a two-week engagement at New York's Lewisohn Stadium. He maintains his own summer school of conducting at Hancock, Me.

Mr. Bolet, who was born in Cuba, served in both the Cuban and United States armed forces during World War II, and conducted the first performance of Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Mikado" ever seen in Japan. His principal musical education was obtained at the Curtis Institute, Philadelphia, where he was a pupil of Isabelle Vengerova.

Tickets for seats in the shed are available at the box office for all festival concerts. The grounds will open at 6 PM tonight and 12.30 tomorrow, when general admission for listening from the lawn will be on sale. As before all concerts, picnic parties are invited.

VACATIONTIME IN THE BERKSHIRES

THE
TANGLEWOOD
STORY

Concerts in the Shed

Friday and Saturday Evenings at 8:30
Sunday Afternoons at 2:30

SERIES B

Friday Evening, August 7—CHARLES MUNCH

BERLIOZ	"Romeo and Juliet," Dramatic Symphony

(With Chorus and Jennie Tourel, Nicola Moscona)

Saturday Evening, August 8—LEONARD BERNSTEIN

Koussevitzky Memorial Concert

MOUSSORGSKY	Prelude to "Khovanstchina"
HAYDN	Symphony in B-flat, No. 102
MAHLER	Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection")

(With Chorus and Soloists)
(Soloist: JENNIE TOUREL)

Sunday Afternoon, August 9—CHARLES MUNCH

SCHUBERT	Symphony No. 5, in B-flat
BARBER	Adagio for Strings
STRAUSS	"Don Quixote" (with Cello and Viola Solo)
MILHAUD	Concerto for Cello, No. 1
WAGNER	Overture to "Tannhäuser"

(Soloist: GREGOR PIATIGORSKY)

South Berkshire Weekly

The Tangle in Tanglewood

By A. G. Rud

GREAT BARRINGTON—Without having to read Good Housekeeping, anyone who spends more than a few Festival week ends in the Berkshires soon learns that the permanent residents are split down the middle on the subject of the tourist trade. On one hand are the boosters with the chamber-of-commerce psychology, who believe any and all development of the area is progress. On the other are the conservatives who like things as they are, or as they were in their childhood.

* * *

AMONG THE BOOSTERS may be found innkeepers, gasoline station proprietors, real estate agents and other independent operators who actually pocket the visitors' dollars, plus a few other businessmen and tradesmen who understand that they will actually get some of those dollars. They are the ones behind the various promotional schemes for the county: Berkshire Hills Conference advertising, the Greylock tramway, the tent theatre-in-the-round.

Ranged against them are the farmers, retired couples, big estate owners and nature lovers, along with some industrial employes and white-collar workers who just want to be left alone to bring up their children in peace. They are the ones who call the tourist trade "a picayune business," who complain about the visitors' clothes and customs, who hark back to the days of Catherine Sedgwick and Nathaniel Hawthorne, who rise up at public hearings in Lenox to denounce the "get-rich-quick" innkeeping crowd.

Now which is right? Putting away immediate self-interest for the moment, where do you stand?

* * *

RIGHT OFF THE BAT it is clear that the boosters have the top hand and are likely to keep it. Money being useful as it is, there will always be powerful pressure to turn the county into a vast amusement park, where hordes of transients are entertained at a price. At the same time, a general rise in population is also working in the boosters' favor. Scientists compute that within 50 years another billion people will be added to the world's two and a quarter billion. Undoubtedly some of that extra billion—say 30,000 or so—will move to the Berkshires. Even more will vacation here.

This probability, by the way, is never mentioned by the really fanatical boosters who, while extolling the countryside, manage simultaneously to convey the impression that only an extraordinary combination of circumstances keeps anyone here at all. Pittsfield will turn into a "ghost town" if GE ever moves out, they caution. Lee will be a "ghost town" if the Berkshire Throughway bypasses it. Lenox will be a "ghost town" if the Berkshire Festival fails. And so on (if people are scared by enough ghosts they'll vote the right way).

But ghost towns are highly improbable in the cold light of the census figures. Just the increase in numbers of the elderly retired and the need for putting more of our land under cultivation to feed the exploding population assure Berkshire towns of more than a spectral existence.

* * *

NO. THE REAL danger is in exactly the opposite direction, and some stick-in-the-mud conservatives (or conservationists) have seen it coming for a long time. What they've been saying is that the ever-increasing numbers of visitors will eventually commercialize the Berkshires and turn the county into another Catskills, Poconos or Long Beach.

That it can happen here has already been proved by the Lenox-Pittsfield Road, now indistinguishable along one stretch from any highway in Bergen or Queens Counties. The same tasteless arrangement of billboards, gasoline pumps and neon lights bids fair to burgeon along the Great Barrington-Sheffield road; and it may be just a matter of time before the whole route is as despoiled as the Housatonic River it parallels.

Is this unduly alarmist? It's easier to think so. But wait a minute. Can you name any week-end vacation areas that retain their original character even though masses of tourists visit them every year? Neither can I.

* * *

WHAT HAS KEPT the Berkshires pretty much unspoiled up to now has been their distance from the metropolitan centers. Not long ago the four-hour train ride from New York was a heavy price to pay for a week-end visit. Now smooth highways and dependable cars put the area well within the radius of the week-ender, and every year more come up for one day of skiing or one night of music. One hundred and twenty miles are no barrier to the modern motorist; they're not even a challenge.

Because this is so, it makes sense to some, to loose a few blasts at the Berkshire Festival for drawing so many motorists here in the first place. If big crowds spoil the countryside and the Festival attracts big crowds, then down with the Festival!

It happens, however, that the Festival itself points toward a solution of the dilemma posed by expansion of the area and the laudable desire to preserve its best qualities. As a kind of musical pilot plant and TVA of the arts, it has succeeded in making excellent live music a real experience for thousands, and has encouraged a pile of summer events in other creative fields. It has not, as yet, spoiled anything except the tempers of some Lenox residents who object to the inconvenience.

* * *

NOW ISN'T this the direction in which the Berkshires should go? It isn't necessary to be an unrestrained booster of all development schemes, nor is it necessary to belittle every sign of change. It is possible to accept the area's growth as inevitable anyway, and help it continue along lines laid down long ago and re-discovered in recent years through the Festival, Jacob's Pillow, the playhouses.

That job of re-discovering good old ways of living in the county and developing good new ways can best be formulated, perhaps, by the Berkshire Hills Conference and carried out by the individual towns' planning boards. In any case it needs formulation, if only to show that there is still a choice between promoting the ruination of the countryside and retreating hopelessly into the billboard-less, traffic-less, infinitely sim~~pler~~ world of 100 years ago.

Franz Epping's Sculpture Work At Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD — Miss Franz Epping of Lenox next week will display her sculpture in the reception room at the main gate. In the showing, her first at Tanglewood, will be examples of her work in bronze, marble, sheet brass and woodcarving, as well as sculptor's drawings. The exhibit will open tomorrow and continue through Saturday, Aug. 8.

A private teacher and director of the Sculpture Workshop, Miss Epping is responsible for the annual exhibit of Berkshire sculptors in the Lenox Library gardens, which opened today. Trained at the Otis Art Institute, Los Angeles, and the Corcoran Art Gallery, Washington, D.C., she received advanced training in sculpture in Munich, Germany from Bernhard Bleeker and Joseph Wackerle.

American public buildings containing examples of her work include the post offices of Oakmont, Pa., Alexander City, Ala.; and the Institute of Science, Jackson Park, Chicago, Ill. Exhibitions in various sculptural media have been on view at the Metropolitan Museum, New York, the Pennsylvania Academy, Philadelphia, and the New York World's Fair. Included in the display will be "The Swimmer," a 42-inch figure, and "The Musician," both in walnut.

The exhibitions, changed weekly during the Berkshire Festival season, are arranged through the cooperation of Stuart C. Henry, Berkshire Museum director.

Brooks

BRIDE AND BRIDEGROOM: Sara Mae Encich of New York City and John McCollum of Tuckahoe, N.Y., rehearse Chabrier's one-act "Une Education Manquee," to be performed at Tanglewood Monday night by opera students, with two other rarely-heard French pieces.

Pierre Monteux Will Be Guest Tanglewood Director On Aug. 2

With Charles Munch conducting the entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday and Saturday evenings, July 31 and Aug. 1, at 2:30 p.m., the major series of the Berkshire Festival opens this week in the 6,000-seat Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Nine concerts will be given over three weekends, until Aug. 16.

The 16th Berkshire Festival since summer concerts were inaugurated in the hills of Western Massachusetts, and the 14th since the Boston Symphony participated, has been drawing record crowds, what with the accessibility of Berkshire County from Vermont on the north, Massachusetts on the east, New York state on the west, and Connecticut on the south. Tanglewood concerts averaged a crowd of 9,500 in 1952. This season even larger crowds are anticipated, and concertgoers who do not have reserved seats may purchase general admission on the day of the concert and picnic on the grounds, which open on concert evenings at 6 p.m., and on Sundays at 12:30 p.m.

Three innovations marks the Shed series this season: the concerts commence on Friday evenings instead of the previous Thursdays, thus making it possible for music-lovers who travel some distance to concentrate the complete series in their weekend; the Sunday afternoon programs commence at 2:30 p.m. instead of the former 3 o'clock and the first hour-and-a-half of the Sunday program will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio from Tanglewood, as the only American event in the network's "World Music Festivals" program, which includes highlights, from seven European summer festivals. The first portion of the Sunday program, 2:30 to 4:00 p.m., will be heard on the air, with James Fassett, CBS radio director of music, as commentator.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
Orchestra
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
FRI. (Aug. 7) at 8:30
(Berlioz—"Romeo and Juliet")
SAT. (Aug. 8) at 8:30
(Leonard Bernstein conducting, Soloist, Jennie Tourel)
SUN. (Aug. 9) at 2:30
(Soloist, Gregor Piatigorsky, Cello)
Reserved seats from $2.50; Gen'l Adm. $2

Thurs., Aug. 13
"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"
MANY EVENTS—Reserved seats $3, $4, $5. Unres. $2.50.

Broadcast at 2.30

Eagle Aug. 1

All-Tchaikovsky Program At Tanglewood Tomorrow

TANGLEWOOD — Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the all-Tchaikovsky program of the major Berkshire Festival tomorrow afternoon at 2.30 in the Tanglewood Shed. The concert will be the second broadcast from Lenox by CBS on its Sunday "World Festivals" program. The orchestra will play the Russian composer's Serenade for String Orchestra, Fifth Symphony and First Piano Concerto, for which Jorge Bolet will be soloist.

Mr. Monteux and Mr. Bolet are not new to Tanglewood. The former, conductor of the Boston orchestra from 1919 to 1924, who many times guest-conducted it in Boston and shared the podium with Charles Munch in both the European tour of the spring of 1952 and the transcontinental tour last May, appeared in the same capacity at Tanglewood last season. Mr. Bolet was soloist in the 1951 festival for Prokofieff's Second Piano Concerto, conducted by Eleazar deCarvalho. He also is scheduled to appear at the Pittsfield High School in the 1953-54 series of the Community Concert Association.

Monteux Is 78

A native Parisian who has passed his 78th birthday, Mr. Monteux began his career as violist at the Opéra Comique and the Concerts Colonne. From 1912 he conducted Diaghileff's Ballet Russe, introducing such works as Stravinsky's "Petrouchka" and "Le Sacre du Primtemps," Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" and Debussy's "Jeux." He toured the United States with the ballet in 1916-17, and conducted at the Paris Opera and his own Concerts Monteux. He became conductor in 1917 at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, where he has been invited to open the season in November with a new production of "Faust."

In the 10 years following his stay in Boston he was a regular conductor of the Amsterdam Concertgebouw and the Orchestra Symphonique de Paris. He now is retired from the San Francisco Orchestra, of which he became leader in 1935. He recently filled a two-week engagement at New York's Lewisohn Stadium. He maintains his own summer school of conducting at Hancock, Me.

Mr. Bolet, who was born in Cuba, served in both the Cuban and United States armed forces during World War II, and conducted the first performance of Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Mikado" ever seen in Japan. His principal musical education was obtained at the Curtis Institute, Philadelphia, where he was a pupil of Isabelle Vengerova.

Tickets for seats in the shed are available at the box office for all festival concerts. The grounds will open at 6 PM tonight and 12.30 tomorrow, when general admission for listening from the lawn will be on sale. As before all concerts, picnic parties are invited.

VACATIONTIME IN THE BERKSHIRES

THE
TANGLEWOOD
STORY

Concerts in the Shed

Friday and Saturday Evenings at 8:30
Sunday Afternoons at 2:30

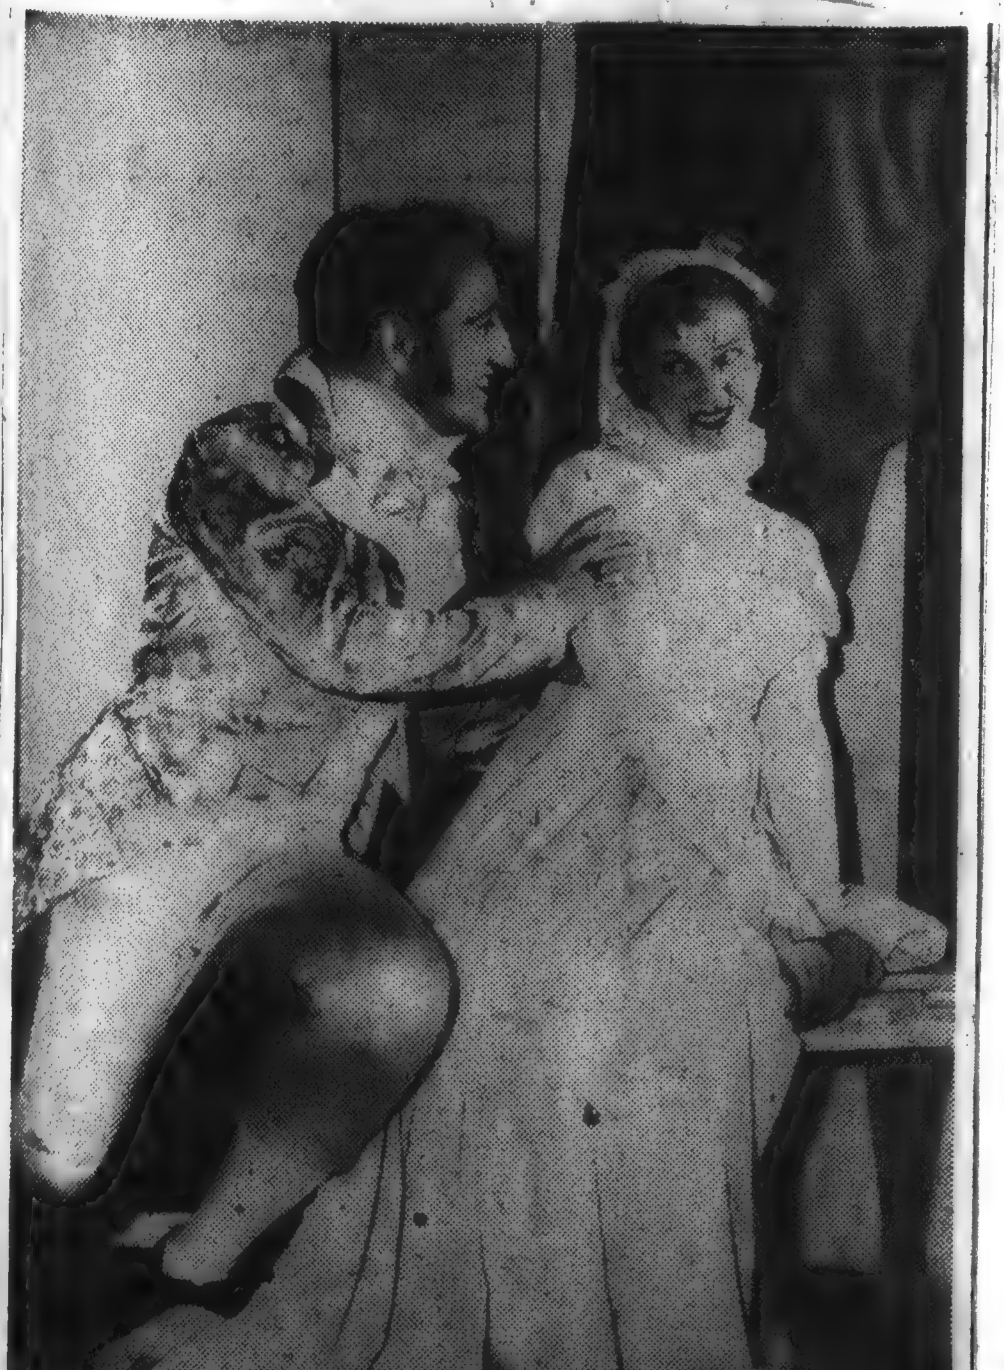
SERIES B

Friday Evening, August 7—CHARLES MUNCH
BERLIOZ....."Romeo and Juliet," Dramatic Symphony
(With Chorus and Jennie Tourel, Nicola Moscona)

Saturday Evening, August 8—LEONARD BERNSTEIN
Koussevitzky Memorial Concert
MOUSSORGSKY............Prelude to "Khovanstchina"
HAYDN..................Symphony in B-flat, No. 102
MAHLER..........Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection")
(With Chorus and Soloists)
(Soloist: JENNIE TOUREL)

Sunday Afternoon, August 9—CHARLES MUNCH
SCHUBERT................Symphony No. 5, in B-flat
BARBER..........................Adagio for Strings
STRAUSS..."Don Quixote" (with Cello and Viola Solo)
MILHAUD..................Concerto for Cello, No. 1
WAGNER..................Overture to "Tannhäuser"
(Soloist: GREGOR PIATIGORSKY)

Eagle



Brooks

BRIDE AND BRIDEGROOM: Sara Mae Encich of New York City and John McCollum of Tuckahoe, N.Y., rehearse Chabrier's one-act "Une Education Manquee," to be performed at Tanglewood Monday night by opera students, with two other rarely-heard French pieces.

South Berkshire Weekly

The Tangle in Tanglewood

By A. G. Rud

GREAT BARRINGTON—Without having to read Good Housekeeping, anyone who spends more than a few Festival week ends in the Berkshires soon learns that the permanent residents are split down the middle on the subject of the tourist trade. On one hand are the boosters with the chamber-of-commerce psychology, who believe any and all development of the area is progress. On the other are the conservatives who like things as they are, or as they were in their childhood.

* * *

AMONG THE BOOSTERS may be found innkeepers, gasoline station proprietors, real estate agents and other independent operators who actually pocket the visitors' dollars, plus a few other businessmen and tradesmen who understand that they will actually get some of those dollars. They are the ones behind the various promotional schemes for the county: Berkshire Hills Conference advertising, the Greylock tramway, the tent theatre-in-the-round.

Ranged against them are the farmers, retired couples, big estate owners and nature lovers, along with some industrial employes and white-collar workers who just want to be left alone to bring up their children in peace. They are the ones who call the tourist trade "a picayune business," who complain about the visitors' clothes and customs, who hark back to the days of Catherine Sedgwick and Nathaniel Hawthorne, who rise up at public hearings in Lenox to denounce the "get-rich-quick" innkeeping crowd.

Now which is right? Putting away immediate self-interest for the moment, where do you stand?

* * *

RIGHT OFF THE BAT it is clear that the boosters have the top hand and are likely to keep it. Money being useful as it is, there will always be powerful pressure to turn the county into a vast amusement park, where hordes of transients are entertained at a price. At the same time, a general rise in population is also working in the boosters' favor. Scientists compute that within 50 years another billion people will be added to the world's two and a quarter billion. Undoubtedly some of that extra billion—say 30,000 or so—will move to the Berkshires. Even more will vacation here.

This probability, by the way, is never mentioned by the really fanatical boosters who, while extolling the countryside, manage simultaneously to convey the impression that only an extraordinary combination of circumstances keeps anyone here at all. Pittsfield will turn into a "ghost town" if GE ever moves out, they caution. Lee will be a "ghost town" if the Berkshire Throughway bypasses it. Lenox will be a "ghost town" if the Berkshire Festival fails. And so on (if people are scared by enough ghosts they'll vote the right way).

But ghost towns are highly improbable in the cold light of the census figures. Just the increase in numbers of the elderly retired and the need for putting more of our land under cultivation to feed the exploding population assure Berkshire towns of more than a spectral existence.

* * *

NO, THE REAL danger is in exactly the opposite direction, and some stick-in-the-mud conservatives (or conservationists) have seen it coming for a long time. What they've been saying is that the ever-increasing numbers of visitors will eventually commercialize the Berkshires and turn the county into another Catskills, Poconos or Long Beach.

That it can happen here has already been proved by the Lenox-Pittsfield Road, now indistinguishable along one stretch from any highway in Bergen or Queens Counties. The same tasteless arrangement of billboards, gasoline pumps and neon lights bids fair to burgeon along the Great Barrington-Sheffield road; and it may be just a matter of time before the whole route is as despoiled as the Housatonic River it parallels.

Is this unduly alarmist? It's easier to think so. But wait a minute. Can you name any week-end vacation areas that retain their original character even though masses of tourists visit them every year? Neither can I.

* * *

WHAT HAS KEPT the Berkshires pretty much unspoiled up to now has been their distance from the metropolitan centers. Not long ago the four-hour train ride from New York was a heavy price to pay for a week-end visit. Now smooth highways and dependable cars put the area well within the radius of the week-ender, and every year more come up for one day of skiing or one night of music. One hundred and twenty miles are no barrier to the modern motorist; they're not even a challenge.

Because this is so, it makes sense to some, to loose a few blasts at the Berkshire Festival for drawing so many motorists here in the first place. If big crowds spoil the countryside and the Festival attracts big crowds, then down with the Festival!

It happens, however, that the Festival itself points toward a solution of the dilemma posed by expansion of the area and the laudable desire to preserve its best qualities. As a kind of musical pilot plant and TVA of the arts, it has succeeded in making excellent live music a real experience for thousands, and has encouraged a pile of summer events in other creative fields. It has not, as yet, spoiled anything except the tempers of some Lenox residents who object to the inconvenience.

* * *

NOW ISN'T this the direction in which the Berkshires should go? It isn't necessary to be an unrestrained booster of all development schemes, nor is it necessary to belittle every sign of change. It is possible to accept the area's growth as inevitable anyway, and help it continue along lines laid down long ago and re-discovered in recent years through the Festival, Jacob's Pillow, the playhouses.

That job of re-discovering good old ways of living in the county and developing good new ways can best be formulated, perhaps, by the Berkshire Hills Conference and carried out by the individual towns' planning boards. In any case it needs formulation, if only to show that there is still a choice between promoting the ruination of the countryside and retreating hopelessly into the billboard-less, traffic-less, infinitely sim~~pler~~ world of 100 years ago.

Fran Epping's Sculpture Work At Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD — Miss Fran Epping of Lenox next week will display her sculpture in the reception room at the main gate. In the showing, her first at Tanglewood, will be examples of her work in bronze, marble, sheet brass and woodcarving, as well as sculptor's drawings. The exhibit will open tomorrow and continue through Saturday, Aug. 8.

~~A private teacher and director~~ of the Sculpture Workshop, Miss Epping is responsible for the annual exhibit of Berkshire sculptors in the Lenox Library gardens, which opened today. Trained at the Otis Art Institute, Los Angeles, and the Corcoran Art Gallery, Washington, D.C., she received advanced training in sculpture in Munich, Germany from Bernhard Bleeker and Joseph Wackerle.

American public buildings containing examples of her work include the post offices of Oakmont, Pa., Alexander City, Ala.; and the Institute of Science, Jackson Park, Chicago, Ill. Exhibitions in various sculptural media have been on view at the Metropolitan Museum, New York, the Pennsylvania Academy, Philadelphia, and the New York World's Fair. Included in the display will be "The Swimmer," a 42-inch figure, and "The Musician," both in walnut.

The exhibitions, changed weekly during the Berkshire Festival season, are arranged through the cooperation of Stuart C. Henry, Berkshire Museum director.

Chicopee Herald

Pierre Monteux Will Be Guest Tanglewood Director On Aug. 2

With Charles Munch conducting the entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday and Saturday evenings, July 31 and Aug. 1, at 2:30 p.m., the major series of the Berkshire Festival opens this week in the 6,000-seat Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Nine concerts will be given over three weekends, until Aug. 16.

The 16th Berkshire Festival since summer concerts were inaugurated in the hills of Western Massachusetts, and the 14th since the Boston Symphony participated, has been drawing record crowds, what with the accessibility of Berkshire County from Vermont on the north, Massachusetts on the east, New York state on the west, and Connecticut on the south. Tanglewood concerts averaged a crowd of 9,500 in 1952. This season even larger crowds are anticipated, and concertgoers who do not have reserved seats may purchase general admission on the day of the concert and picnic on the grounds, which open on concert evenings at 6 p.m.. and on Sundays at 12:30 p.m.

Three innovations marks the Shed series this season: the concerts commence on Friday evenings instead of the previous Thursdays, thus making it possible for music-lovers who travel some distance to concentrate the complete series in their weekend; the Sunday afternoon programs commence at 2:30 p.m. instead of the former 3 o'clock and the first hour-and-a-half of the Sunday program will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio from Tanglewood, as the only American event in the network's "World Music Festivals" program, which includes highlights, from seven European summer festivals. The first portion of the Sunday program, 2:30 to 4:00 p.m., will be heard on the air, with James Fassett, CBS radio director of music, as commentator.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
Orchestra
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
FRI. (Aug. 7) at 8:30
(Berlioz—"Romeo and Juliet")
SAT. (Aug. 8) at 8:30
(Leonard Bernstein conducting, Soloist, Jennie Tourel)
SUN. (Aug. 9) at 2:30
(Soloist, Gregor Piatigorsky, Cello)
Reserved seats from $2.50; Gen'l Adm. $[illegible]
Thurs., Aug. 13
"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"
MANY EVENTS—Reserved seats $3, $4, $5.
Unres. $2.50.

[236]

Tanglewood Schedules Three French Operas

Scene from Gluck's one-act opera, "The Drunkard Reformed," which will be presented Monday night for first time in America by Berkshire Music Center students at Tanglewood. From left: Theresa Green as Julie; Beatrice Krebs, Jeannie; Robert Rue, Jasper; Paul Huddleston, Jules.

Three rarely-heard French operas will constitute the program of the first of two major opera performances this season by students of the Berkshire Music Center in the Tanglewood theatre.

Open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center who reserve their seats early, the operas to be presented are: Gluck's "L'Yvrogne Corrige" (The Drunkard Reformed), Debussy's "L'Enfant Prodigue" (The Prodigal Son) and Emmanuel Chabrier's "Une Education Manquee" (An Incomplete Education).

Staged by Goldovsky

Produced for the first time at Tanglewood, they will be staged by Boris Goldovsky, opera department director, and Miss Sarah Caldwell, his assistant. Scenery will be by John Blankenchip and costumes by Leo VanWitsen. Mr. Goudovsky will accompany the Gluck and Chabrier pieces on the piano. A student orchestra, conducted by Samuel Krachmalnick, will accompany the Debussy.

Written in 1760 with two acts, "The Drunkard Reformed" has been translated by Giovanni Cardelli, formerly of Great Barrington, from the libretto by Anseaume. Monday's production is believed to be the first in America. It was first performed in Vienna.

"L'Enfant Prodigue," which will be given in French, had its premiere in operatic form at Covent Garden, London, in 1910, with a libretto by Guinard, and later in the same year was given in Boston. The score won for the composer the Prix de Rome in 1884. It is a simple presentation of the Biblical episode. Choreography for 10 dancers has been devised by Leo Kharibian.

To Be Sung in English

"An Incomplete Education" will be sung in the English translation by Henry Reese. With a text by Eugene Leterrier and Albert Vanloo it was originally privately produced by the Cercle de la Presse, Paris, with piano accompaniment in May, 1879, and first with an orchestra in the French capital in 1913.

Members of the Friends society, whose voluntary contributions help to support the school, may choose to attend either Monday's performance or one of the presentations of August Gretry's three-act opera, "Richard, the Lion-hearted," the evening of Aug. 10 or 11. It is expected that the seats for the coming Monday will be exhausted by the week end. For the longer piece more seats remain. All seats for both operas are reserved, and should be procured through the Friends office at Tanglewood.

Tanglewood

Tonight

*8.30—Concert by Small Choir of Berkshire Music Center.

*Open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center whose voluntary contributions help to support the school.

Composers Forum

A composers' forum will be held in the chamber music hall tomorrow night at 8.30 with Aaron Copland, head of the department and dean of the school as moderator. The program is open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

String Quartet .... Robert Cogan
Brass Quartet .... Arno Lafian
Two Songs .... Philip Froedheim
Prelude and Fugue for solo violin .... Sarah Cunningham
Suite of songs by Shakespeare for instruments .... Albert Epstein Woodwind Quintet .... Emil Kalled

Ravel 'Bolero' and Copland Ballet Music Given Ovations as 'Big' Festival Opens

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE COMPLETE Boston Symphony Orchestra returned to Tanglewood last night under the direction of Charles Munch for the first concert of the big three-week-end series. Playing on a Friday night instead of the previously established plan of Thursday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons, a record audience, favored by ideally comfortable weather, filled the huge shed and covered the adjacent lawns.

It was a comfortable program to listen to, also, making no great demands but providing plenty of pleasure and, in the case of the Ravel "Bolero," some really thrilling moments. The orchestra played beautifully in the Beethoven overture to "Leonore," No. 3, except, possibly, for a little disagreement on pitch. Dissatisfied with earlier essays for his introduction to his sole opera "Fidelio," Beethoven tried again and wrote what has proved to be one of the mainstays of the orchestral literature. Its offstage trumpet calls announce the melodramatic salvation of the hero from the hands of the villain. The sudden dynamic changes were noticeably well-done, the softer ones especially, the bolder ones with a trifle of violence.

* * *

THE MAIN orchestral offering of the evening was Aaron Copland's "Appalachian Spring." It was the only music on the program which had real mood and depth and something to express. On the occasion of its first performance, as music for a ballet danced by Martha Graham, Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, who had commissioned it from Copland, sat in the front row in the Coolidge Auditorium in the Library of Congress in Washington on the evening of her 80th birthday. A smaller orchestra in the pit played it well but did not do it the justice the Boston men gave Mr. Munch last night.

Adler

Aaron Copland

Among the members of the Graham troupe that evening was Nina Fonaroff, who is now head of the dance department of the Pittsfield Community Music School. The subtitle of the piece is "Ballet for Martha." It takes its story from "a pioneer celebration in the spring around a newly built farmhouse in the Pennsylvania hills in the early part of the last century." The music has the elements of greatness which become more apparent on every rehearing. Mr. Copland gives credit for one of the themes he uses to the renowned Pittsfield-native Shaker authority Edward D. Andrews. Copland borrowed the melody "Simple Gifts" from the book "The Gift to be Simple" in which Dr. Andrews had the help, for the musical portions, of Conrad Held, at that time viola of the South Mountain quartet in Pittsfield. Mr. Copland, who was in the audience, was called to the stage to accept the ovation Mr. Munch's reading evoked.

* * *

MR. MUNCH brought snare-drummer Harold Farberman to the front of the orchestra, nearly directly before him, for the "Bolero." Young Farberman began his unique solo with only a wispy suggestion of the rhythmic pattern. By the time he had repeated the two-bar phrase some 170 times the tremendous but inexorable gradual crescendo had drained every instrument which had joined the procession en route of its last degree and fiber of potential sonority.

* * *

THE SOLOIST of the program was Zino Francescatti in the Mendelssohn concerto. It seemed strange that one who commands the resources of the instrument as superbly as does Mr. Francescatti should have raised his performance so little above the ordinary. Everyone who has had violin lessons sooner or later arrives at the Mendelssohn. To violin students it is the "Friends, Romans and Countrymen" of the aspiring orators. The marvel of the concerto is that it has withstood so many repeated assaults and maintained its popularity apparently perpetually. Mr. Francescatti was recalled many times by a wildly applauding audience.

Adler

Charles Munch

UST 2, 1953

Berkshire Festival

Sunlit Throngs See Foss, Composer-Soloist, Rehearse

By Arthur Berger

LENOX, Mass., Aug 1.—Clear skies, cool temperatures and a brisk breeze have, so far, favored the first of the three major week ends of the Berksshires Festival, which went into its second day on the attractive Tanglewood estate today. Some 3,000 persons poured into the grounds this morning, attending the public dress rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra or merely sampling it, and there were long lines at the food concession and many people sitting in small groups on the lawn in the sun.

Those who were under the shed for the rehearsal had the special experience of witnessing a composer go through the preparations of one of his own works in which he himself was the soloist. The composer-soloist was Lukas Foss, and the work was his second Piano Concerto, which had its first performance two years ago but has just been revised. Audible signs of interest and amusement rose from the audience whenever the composer stopped abruptly in the midst of a passage or at its close, and jumped up to consult the conductor, Charles Munch, or to point out something to him in the score.

"Appalachian Spring" Heard

Last night's concert in the shed under Mr. Munch's direction also included a contemporary American work, a far more familiar one, however—namely, Aaron Copland's "Appalachian Spring."

This score, which has to its credits both a Pulitzer Prize and a New York Music Critics Circle award, stands up superbly on rehearings. It was particularly pleasurable last night because it adapts itself so well to outdoor listening. True enough, the lovely and quietly eloquent prelude and coda did not, I suspect, carry too easily to those sitting at a distance. But the whole work is thoroughly invested with the spirit of the out-of-doors.

The Martha Graham Ballet, for which it was written, it will be recalled, has as its setting the Pennsylvania hills, and Copland's evocation of this setting is remarkably faithful, indeed. But even in general there is a spaciousness of sonority in Copland's recent music that embodies the feeling of the open air, and anyone interested in developing an idiom to meet the phenomenally growing demands of our summer festivals could scarcely find a better starting point than here—unless he chose to go back to Handel.

Francescatti Is Soloist

Despite the fact that "Appalachian Spring" ends softly, the composer received enthusiastic applause and was obliged to bow twice. The nostalgic spell of the coda, following the rousing climax of the variations, was quite irresistible.

Earlier in last night's program Zino Francescatti was heard as violin soloist in the Medelssohn concerto, which he had also played this season at the Lewisohn Stadium. Not having heard the previous performance, I cannot say how this one compared. But after taking some time in the first movement to warm up, the violinist achieved the breadth and directness which has brought him recognition as one of our foremost performers.

Boston Symphony At Tanglewood

By Arthur Berger

LENOX, Mass., July 31.—The Berkshire Music Festival entered its major phase here in the shed on the Tanglewood estate with the first of the series of week-end concerts by the full membership of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch.

Mr. Munch assembled for tonight a list that consisted mostly of standard repertory pieces, with the exception of Aaron Copland's music from the Martha Graham ballet, "Appalachian Spring," which, though not altogether unfamiliar, offered the fillip of music in a contemporary idiom. Zino Francescatti, violinist, was soloist in the Mendelssohn concerto and the program opened with Beethoven's "Leonore" overture, No. 3. The program closed with the popular "Bolero" of Ravel.

For those who came early and settled on the lawns behind the shed with picnic suppers the weather was ideal. By moving the opening concert of the week end from Thursday to Friday, the Berkshire Festival authorities have made it more convenient this season for week-enders to take in all [illegible] each week. Another feature of the concerts this season [illegible] regard has been the [illegible] of the Sunday concert [illegible] instead of 3. In this way [illegible] is more time for motorists to get home after the concerts.

Tonight's attendance of 10,300 demonstrated to all concerned with rescheduling the week-end concerts that the new plan is definitely rewarding since this figure sets a record for an opening night of the major concert series in the shed. A record was also established this season by the attendances at the concert eries by the chamber orchestra devoted mainly to Bach, Mozart and Haydn.

The total attendance for the six concerts given in three week-ends was 26,150. This marked an advance of almost 6,500 over last year's attendance at the series in the theater concert hall.

11

THE NEW YORK TIMES,

[From Late Editions of Yesterday's TIMES.]

BOSTON SYMPHONY HEARD AT FESTIVAL

Begins Friday Night Concerts in Shed at Tanglewood—Munch Conducts 'Bolero'

By ROSS PARMENTER

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LENOX, Mass., July 31—The Berkshire Music Festival moved into high gear tonight when the full Boston Symphony Orchestra gave its first concert in the great shed at Tanglewood. The program began the major innovation of the festival—Friday night concerts.

In the past, the first concerts of the week-ends have been on Thursday, leaving a day's gap before the second concert Saturday night. It was thought that eliminating the gap might be more convenient for persons attending the concerts and that more might come to the first of the triad.

Apparently the calculations were correct. The program attracted 10,300 persons, a larger audience than any Thursday concert drew. It meant that, in addition to the 6,000 listeners under the cover of the hangar-like roof of the shed, there were 4,300 on the lawns who had nothing above them but unusually bright stars.

The new record for the first night of the first big week-end indicated that, barring bad luck with the weather, this sixteenth festival is likely to be the largest to date. The smaller concerts in the theatre-concert hall of the last three week-ends already have surpassed previous figures. Altogether they drew 26,150, giving them an edge of almost 3,000 over Serge Koussevitzky's last chamber orchestra concerts in 1950.

Since the seating capacity of the theatre-concert hall is only 1,152 these earlier concerts, averaging 4,360 each, drew such great overflows that next year they may be moved to the shed.

Tonight's concert was one of superb quality. It opened with Beethoven's Overture to "Leonore" No. 3, and one immediately received a sense of Charles Munch's orchestral mastery. His wonderful opening measures induced such a hush in the huge audience that suddenly one could hear the rustling of the trees outside.

Then the Overture unfolded in all its drama, the sweetness of liberty, the happiness of husband and wife reunited and the feeling for nature being as fully evoked as the tension and excitement of the dramatic episodes.

Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto, with Zino Francescatti as the soloist, followed. As always, the violinist played with richness of tone and with his particular brand of headlong lyricism, which never loses its balance. Other interpreters have played the work with higher flights of ethereal grace, but his warmth gave his reading a quality of its own.

Following the intermission came what is perhaps Aaron Copland's most beautiful score, his "Appalachian Spring." For the finale Mr. Munch conducted a sure-fire work of a master for whose works his conducting is justly famous—Ravel's "Bolero."

MUSIC

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

Boston Symphony Orch.

The first in series A of the shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra took place last evening in the shed at Tanglewood; Charles Munch conducted, the soloist was Zino Francescatti, and the program was as follows:

Beethoven—Overture . to "Leonore," No. 3, Op. 72.
Mendelssohn—Concerto for violin and orchestra in 3 Minor, Op. 64.
Copland—"Appalachian Spring'
Ravel—Bolero.

By ELINOR HUGHES

LENOX, Mass.,—The seventh of the Berkshire Festival concerts of the 1953 season and first in a series of the concerts in the shed presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, took place last evening at Tanglewood before a crowd of 10,300 persons, the largest audience ever to attend the opening.

The weather was ideal, clear and cool with a gentle breeze, and the sky was no more thickly studded with stars than was the lawn with music lovers. A more auspicious start, could hardly be imagined, and if the concerts continue as they began, this should be a banner year for the festival.

The program chosen by Mr. Munch for the occassion was a pleasant combination of classical and modren favorites, includinng works by Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Copland Ravel.

Though there were no novelties, there was , none the less, a sense of freshness attending the presentation of the most redoubtable of war horses, such as Ravel's 'Bolero;" and Copland's ever fresh and delightful "Appalachian Spring" took on new beauty in this unique setting of lake, trees and not too distant mountains.

It is a never ending source of interest to discover how music performe din the shed, the next thing to being completely out of doors, takes on an added freshness and increased dimension.

The fireworks of the evening, though that is perhaps too showy a term for so lyrical and romantic a performance, took place in the Mendelssohn Concerto in which Zino Frannescatti made his first appearance at Tanglewood. He gave the familiar and charming work an interpretation that combined beauty of the tone with a spirit of devotion to the singing quality of the music. Always the musicianly interpreter, he seemed more intent throughout on illuminating the quality of the composition rather than exploiting his own talents. It is good to learn that he will appear with the Symphony in Boston during the coming season.

The concert opened with a fine, spirited rendition of the Leonore Overture No. 3, and the orchestra, under the authoritative direction of Mr. Munch, gave a splendid account of itself throughout the evening. The applause was vociferous and well deserved.

This Week At TANGLEWOOD

8:30 p. m.—Theatre-Concert Hall. Small Choir Concert, Students of Dept. II
*4:30 p. m.—Theatre-Concert Hall. Opera Scenes by Students of Assoc. Div. Dept. IV
*8:30 p. m.—Chamber Music Hall.
Composers' Forum, students of Dept. III.
*8:30 p. m.—Music Shed. Orchestra Concert by Students of Dept. I
8:30—Music Shed. Berkshire Festival Concert — Charles Munch, conductor. Berlioz, "Romeo and Juliet", Dramatic Symphony, with Festival Chorus and Soloists.
10:00 a. m. Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra — Charles Munch, conductor Public Rehearsal (Benefit, Pension Fund)
p. m. Music Shed. Organ Recital, E. Power Biggs.
p. m. Music Shed Berkshire Festival Concert — Leonard Bernstein, Conductor. Koussevitzky Memorial Concert.
*10:00 a. m.—Chamber Music Hall. Chamber Music Concert by Students of Dept. I.
2:30 p. m. Music Shed. Berkshire Festival Concert, Charles Munch, conductor.
— Concerts open to members of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center whose contributions help to support the school.

Music

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
Charles Munch, Music Director
SHED CONCERTS
TONIGHT AT 8:30
Soloist, LUKAS FOSS
SUN., AUG. 2 AT 2:30
PIERRE MONTEUX, Conductor
A TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
Soloist—JORGE BOLET, Piano
Reserved seats available. General admission $2.00
Address Box Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

7

tsfield, Massachusetts, Thursday, July 30, 1953.

Brook

BOW FROM STOCKBRIDGE: Mrs. John H. P. Gould presents honorary memberships in the Stockbridge Bowl Association to four of the principals in the informal concert to be given on the lawn of Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky's estate in Lenox, Aug. 11. Left to right, Richard Dyer-Bennet, Mac Morgan, Lukas Foss and Boris Goldovsky.

Tanglewood

Tonight

8.30—Concert by symphony orchestra of Berkshire Music Center, Leonard Bernstein and his students conducting. Music Shed. Open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Cir. (D 35,334)

This Clipping From
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
UNION-STAR
JUL 8 - 1953

Concerts Open At Tanglewood On Saturday

LENOX, Mass., July 8—First of this season's Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be held Saturday at 8:30 p.m., with Charles Munch conducting.

Munch has just returned from a month's vacation in France during which he gave five concerts.

Five of Bach's "Brandenburg Concertos" will make up the opening program of the festival Saturday. This will be followed by another all-Bach program Sunday at 2:30 p.m. which will include the "Cantata No. 28." "Suite No. 2" and "Suite No. 3."

The piano part in the "Brandenburg Concerto No. 5" Saturday will be played by Lukas Foss. Other solo parts for this program will be taken by members of the orchestra.

Soloists for "Cantata No. 28" Sunday will include Sara Mae Endich, soprano; Betty Allen, alto; John McCollum, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass.

The Berkshire Music Center opened its summer school Sunday.

Concert To Benefit Bowl Group

Informal Event Tuesday, Aug. 11, At Seranac, Lenox

An informal concert has been arranged for members of the Stockbridge Bowl Association, to take place on the afternoon of Tuesday, Aug. 11 at 3.30 on the front lawn of Seranac, the Lenox home of Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky. Leonard Bernstein and Lukas Foss will appear in a piano duet and Richard Dyer-Bennet and Mac Morgan will sing. Boris Goldovsky will be master of ceremonies.

Announcing that the concert will be for the purpose of broadening the membership of the association, whose aim is to "keep the Bowl unspoiled," Nathan Horwitt, president, said that the event will be in the nature of a party, "brief, intimate and delightful."

Each member and prospective member may invite two guests. Request for tickets and membership blanks should be mailed to Oliver C. Kempton, treasurer of the association. It is hoped, Mr. Horwitt states, that visitors to the county will wish to join the association. The membership is not confined to local residents, but is open to anyone interested in preserving the beauty of the lake.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT

JUL 6 - 1953

Tanglewood Opening Attended by 2,000; First Concert Near

An audience that overflowed the 2,000-seat theater-concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, participated yesterday afternoon in the opening of the 11th season of the Berkshire Music center, advanced summer school for serious students of music.

Dr. Lewis Perry, retired headmaster of Phillips academy, Andover, and chairman of the Friends of the Music center, welcomed the group, lauded the work of the late Serge Koussevitzky who established the center in connection with the Berkshire Music festival, and declared that one out of every 10 members of the major symphony orchestras in the United States is a graduate of the school. In its first 10 seasons, he said, more than 4,000 pupils have attended its sessions.

Introduced as the greatest living conductor, Charles Munch, Koussevitzky's successor as director of the center and music director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, welcomed the students. Henry B. Cabot, president of the trustees of the Boston orchestra, and Aaron Copland, assistant director of the center, also spoke and the ceremonies were concluded with the traditional singing by the student chorus of Randall Thompson's "Alluluia," written especially for the center.

The festival programs will open next Saturday evening when the first of the six preliminary concerts in the theater-concert hall on three successive week-ends will be presented by members of the Boston orchestra under Dr. Munch's baton. The programs Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon will be devoted entirely to the works of Bach.

UST 2, 1953

Boston Symphony At Tanglewood

By Arthur Berger

LENOX, Mass., July 31.—The Berkshire Music Festival entered its major phase here in the shed on the Tanglewood estate with the first of the series of week-end concerts by the full membership of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch.

Mr. Munch assembled for Friday night a list that consisted mostly of standard repertory pieces, with the exception of Aaron Copland's music from the Martha Graham ballet, "Appalachian Spring," which, though not altogether unfamiliar, offered the fillip of music in a contemporary idiom. Zino Francescatti, violinist, was soloist in the Mendelssohn concerto and the program opened with Beethoven's "Leonore" overture, No. 3. The program closed with the popular "Bolero" of Ravel.

For those who came early and settled on the lawns behind the shed with picnic suppers the weather was ideal. By moving the opening concert of the week end from Thursday to Friday, the Berkshire Festival authorities have made it more convenient this season for weekenders to take in all three events each week. Another feature of the concerts this season in this regard has been the earlier hour of the Sunday concerts—2:30 instead of 3. In this way, there is more time for motorists to get home after the concerts.

Friday night's attendance of 10,300 demonstrated to all concerned with rescheduling the week-end concerts that the new plan is definitely rewarding since this figure sets a record for an opening night of the major concert series in the shed. A record was also established this season by the attendances at the concert series by the chamber orchestra devoted mainly to Bach, Mozart and Haydn.

The total attendance for the six concerts given in three weekends was 26,150. This marked an advance of almost 6,500 over last year's attendance at the series in the theater concert hall.

TIGHT BINDING

Plouffe

PERFORMERS: Saxophone players, especially imported from Boston to play in Ravel's "Bolero," discuss their rarely-used instruments with Zino Francescatti, soloist in Mendelssohn's violin concerto: Left, Rolland S. Tapley, tenor sax; Mr. Francescatti; Felix Viscuglia, soprano sax.

GUESTS: Pittsfield's Mayor Robert T. Capeless, guest of honor, shares his box and neighbors: Left, Mrs. Capeless, Dr. Ralph D. Head, City Clerk John J. Fitzge Brugger, School Building Commission chairman for Pittsfield, the mayor, Mr

Plouffe
agues z X.

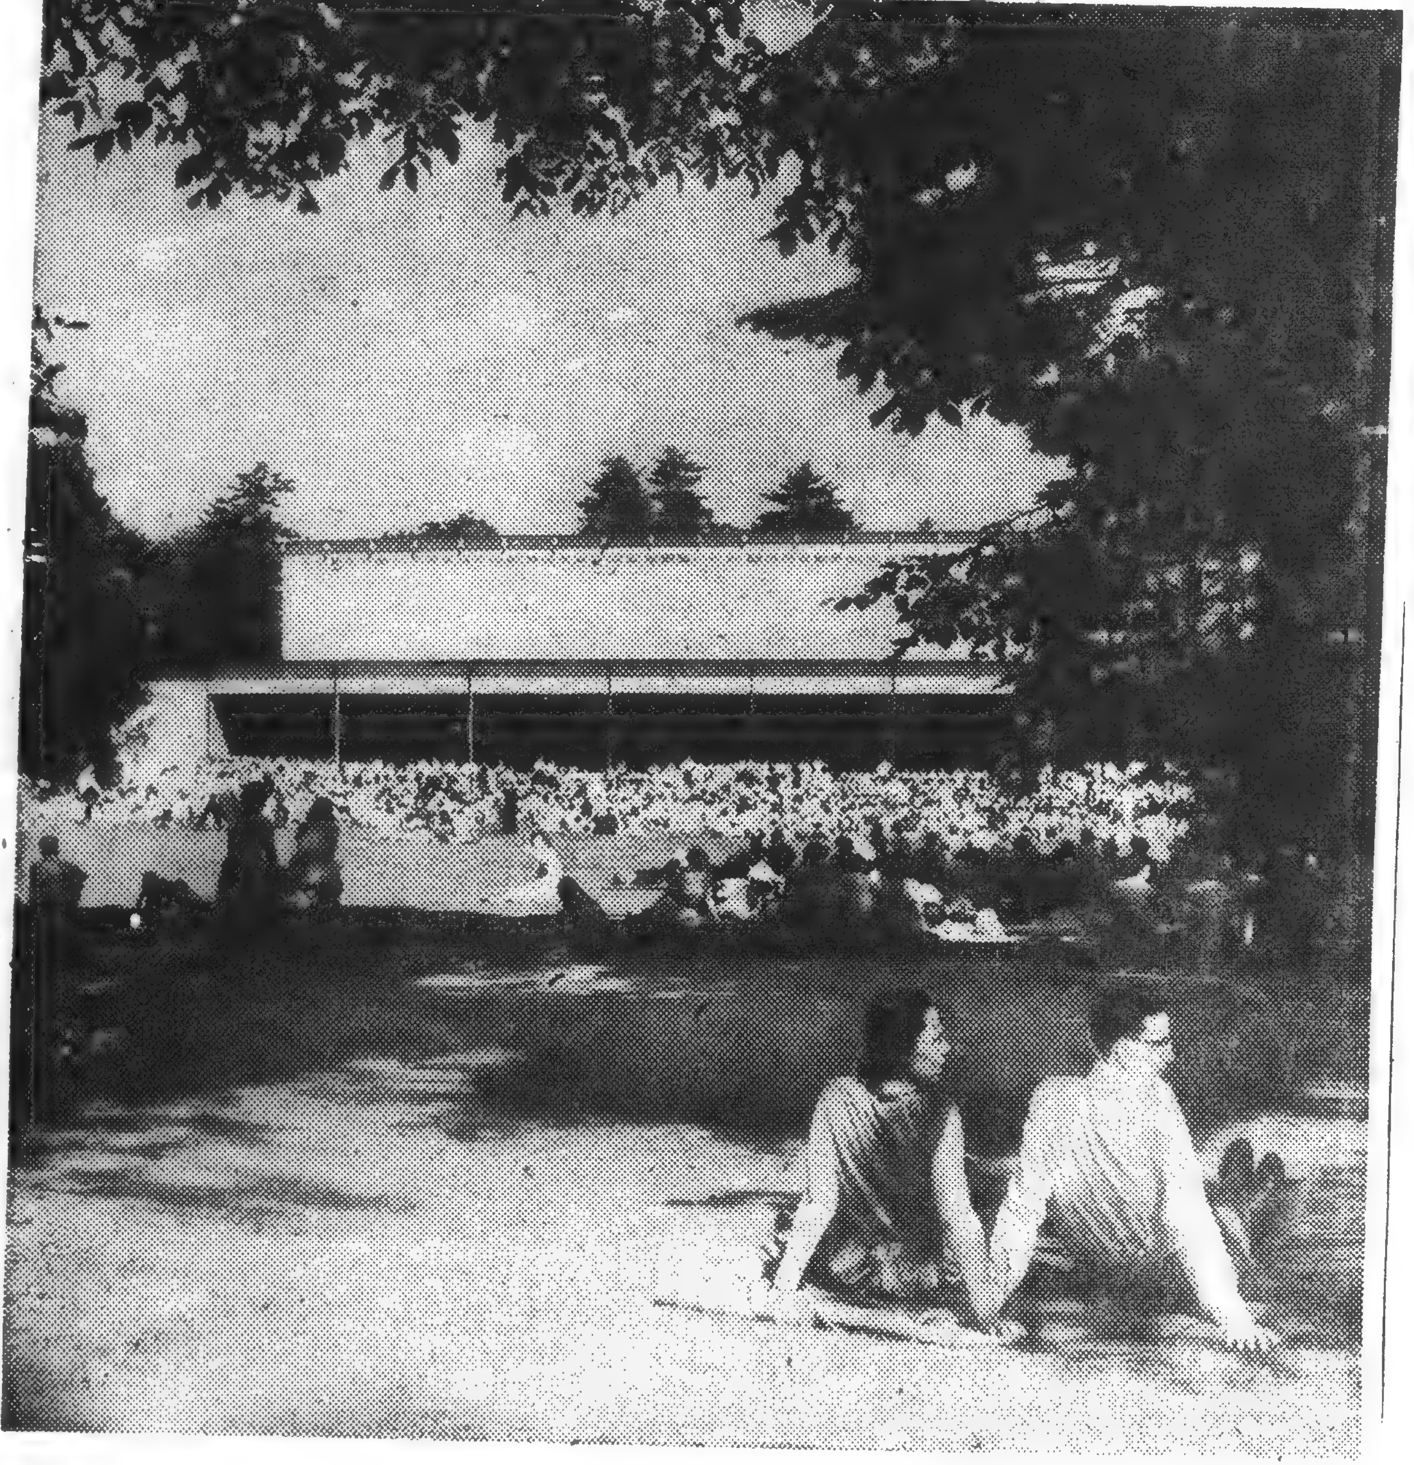
DIGNITAR
ter, Tomiko, re
With his son an



The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood is now in full swing. For the next two weeks concerts will be held on Friday, Saturday and Sunday in the big Music Shed. Today Pierre Monteux conducts Boston Symphony Orchestra in an all-Tchaikovsky program.

Foss To Appear as Soloist In His Concerto Tomorrow

TANGLEWOOD—For the second time this season the work of Lukas Foss will be represented on a Berkshire Festival program, when at tomorrow night's concert Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in his Second Piano Concerto. "Parable of Death" was on last Sunday's program. The concert will follow the opening of the major Festival tonight at 8.30 in the Tanglewood Music Shed.

The concerto, in which the composer will play the solo, had its first American performance by the orchestra in Boston in November, 1951, and later received the Horblit award. The 32-year-old composer, who is on the conducting faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, has since revised the score, playing it at the Ojai (Cal.) Festival in May.

Since coming to the United States from Germany in 1937, Mr. Foss has studied at the Curtis Institute of Music, Philadelphia, with Randall Thompson, Fritz Reiner and Paul Hindemith, and was a conducting pupil at Tanglewood of Dr. Koussevitzky before joining the faculty seven years ago. He won a Pulitzer scholarship, a Fulbright fellowship, the Prix de Rome, and the New York Music Critics' Circle citation for his cantata, "The Prairie." He was the youngest composer to hold a Guggenheim fellowship.

Tomorrow evening's program will open with Schumann's overture to Byron's "Manfred." The second half will be devoted to Mendelssohn's "Italian" Symphony and Hindemith's Symphonic Metamorphosis of Themes by Carl Maria von Weber. Mr. Hindemith also is a former member of Tanglewood's composition faculty.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
Orchestra
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
SHED CONCERTS
Tonight at 8:30 - Soloist, LUKAS FOSS
Sun., Aug. 2 at 2:30 - PIERRE MONTEUX, Conducting a TCHAIKOVSKY Program; Soloist - JORGE BOLET, Piano.
Reserved Seats availab'e - General Admission $2
Address Box Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS.
Berkshire Festival
BY THE
BOSTON SYMPHONY
ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
SHED CONCERTS
Open TONIGHT at 8:30
Soloist—ZINO FRANCESCATTI
Violin
Sat., Aug 1, at 8:30—
Soloist, LUKAS FOSS
Sun., Aug. 2, at 2:30—
PIERRE MONTEUX, Conducting
A TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
Soloist—JORGE BOLET, Piano
Reserved Seats Available
General Admission $2
Address Box Office
Tanglewood Lenox, Mass.

This Clipping
HOLYOKE, N
TRANSCRIPT-TE

JUL 9 - 1

Eventful Prog Slated For W At Music Fes

Musical events at in Lenox this weeke concerts by students shire Music Center Berkshire Festival co Theatre-Concert Hall

Friday evening th an orchestra concert sic Shed by students ter, open to those tributions have made bers of the Friends shire Music Center. ent events, open to a the same basis, will ber music concert S ing in the chamber and a composers' Sunday evening.

There will be two certs in the Theater- with Charles Munch over the weekend. T are as follows:

Saturday, at 8:30 p.
Bach ...... Brandenb tos
No. 1, in F
No. 2, in F (with trumpet and violin)
(Doriot Anthony, f Gomberg, oboe; Roger Voisin, trum Burgin, violin)
No. 3, in G (strin
No. 5, in D (with and violin)
(Lukas Foss, piano thony, flute; Richard lin)
No. 6, in B-flat (st
Sunday, at 2:30 p.
Bach ..... Can with chorus and solo (Conducted by Hug (Sara Mae Endic Betty Allen, alto; John McCollum, te Morgan, bass)
Bach ..... Suite minor, for Flute and (Soloist: Doriot Ant

Cir. (D 331,853) (S

This Clipping F
NEW YORK, N
HERALD TRIB

AUG 4-

At Music Mount

FALLS VILLAGE, C 3.—In the concert at Sunday at Music Moun the Berkshire Quartet sisting artists will play clarinet quintet, Be septet and a horn qu Bernard Heiden, winne American Broadcastin pany award for a string last year. Keith Wils inet; Sylvia Deutscher, John Barrows, horn, an Grodner, double-bass, the assisting artists. be the sixth concert Mountain's ten-week

Tanglewood's usual overflow audience takes to the lawns for listening pleasure. Together, shed and lawn accommodate 13,00 ee students of the Berkshire Music Center relax after class in one of the ny scenic spots that dot the Tanglewood grounds and campus.

TIGHT BINDING

INFORMATION OBSCURED

Plouffe

DIGNITARIES: Japanese Ambassador Eikichi Araki and daughter, Tomiko, read program notes while waiting for concert to begin. With his son and daughter-in-law they are attending entire first series.

This Clipping From
HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM

JUL 9 - 1953

Eventful Program Slated For Weekend At Music Festival

Musical events at Tanglewood in Lenox this weekend include concerts by students at the Berkshire Music Center as well as Berkshire Festival concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Friday evening there will be an orchestra concert in the Music Shed by students of the center, open to those whose contributions have made them members of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. Other student events, open to attendance on the same basis, will be a chamber music concert Sunday morning in the chamber music hall and a composers' forum there Sunday evening.

There will be two Festival concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall, with Charles Munch conducting, over the weekend. The programs are as follows:

Saturday, at 8:30 p.m.:
Bach ..... Brandenburg Concertos
No. 1, in F
No. 2, in F (with flute, oboe, trumpet and violin)
(Doriot Anthony, flute; Harold Gomberg, oboe; Roger Voisin, trumpet; Richard Burgin, violin)
No. 3, in G (strings)
No. 5, in D (with piano, flute and violin)
(Lukas Foss, piano; Doriot Anthony, flute; Richard Burgin, violin)
No. 6, in B-flat (strings)
Sunday, at 2:30 p.m.:
Bach ...... Cantata No. 28, with chorus and soloists
(Conducted by Hugh Ross)
(Sara Mae Endich, soprano; Betty Allen, alto;
John McCollum, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass.
Bach ..... Suite No. 2, in B minor, for Flute and Strings Soloist: Doriot Anthony, flute)

Cir. (D 331,853) (S 567,298)

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE

- 1953

At Music Mountain

FALLS VILLAGE, Conn., Aug. —In the concert at 4 p. m. [illegible] Music Mountain here, the B[illegible] Quartet and as[illegible] will play Mozart's [illegible]. Beethoven's [illegible] horn quintet by [illegible], winner of the [illegible] Broadcasting Com[illegible] for a string quartet [illegible] Keith Wilson, clar[illegible] Deutscher, bassoon; John B[illegible] horn, and Murray Grodner, [illegible]ble-bass, will be the assisting artists. This will be the sixth concert in Music Mountain's ten-week series.

Berkshire Eagle Aug 1/53

Tanglewood Debut

11 New Musicians Join BSO

Eleven musicians made their Tanglewood debut last night as members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. They replace members who have retired and two who have died since the close of the 1952 season.

Three New Violinists

The violin section leads with three new men: Fredy Ostrovsky of Boston; William Marshall of Westwood; and Leonard Moss of Lincoln.

A native of Sofia, Bulgaria, Mr. Ostrovsky was educated in London and Vienna, where he graduated at the age of 16 from the State Academy of Music. He has concertized in Europe and the United States, appearing in recital and on the radio. He lived for a time in Sweden. His hobbies are photography and collecting first editions of books.

Mr. Marshall, who is a native of Shreveport, La., received the degree of bachelor of music at Northwestern University and master of music at Boston University, studying with Richard Burgin, Boston orchestra concertmaster. He has played in the National Symphony Orchestra, Washington, D.C.; and the Grant Park Symphony Orchestra.

Born in Baltimore, Mr. Moss attended Baltimore City College, Peabody Conservatory, the Curtis Institute, the New England Conservatory and the Cleveland Institute of Music. He has played with the New Opera Company, Ballet Theatre, Columbia Broadcasting Company, Dallas, Texas and Cleveland Orchestras. He served four years with the 88th Infantry in Africa and Italy. His hobbies are birds and gardening.

A native of Baltimore and a student at Peabody, Cleveland and Curtis Institutes, and the New England Conservatory, Mr. Morse was appointed by Charles Munch, following an audition at Tanglewood, to the chair of the late Harry Dubbs, who died in June. He was playing with the Pops Orchestra in the Esplanade concerts. He was with the National Orchestra Association, N.Y. and a year with the Ballet Theatre. Following four years as a lieutenant with the 88th Infantry Division in Africa and Italy he returned to play in the Dallas Symphony and four years with the Cleveland Symphony, from which he resigned last spring. His hobbies are hunting and fishing.

Join Percussion Section

Two newcomers to the percussion section are Everett Firth of Boston and Harold Thompson of Roslindale. Mr. Firth is a native of Winchester and was educated in Sanford, Me., the New England Conservatory and the Juilliard Institute, New York. He has held scholarships at the New England Conservatory and at Tanglewood for three seasons and has played with the New England Opera Company orchestra. His hobbies are hunting and fishing.

Mr. Thompson, who was born in Akron, Ohio, was educated in Cleveland and Medina, Ohio, high schools, at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music and the Roy Knapp School of Percussion, Chicago, as well as with private teachers. He played for eight years with the Cincinnati Symphony and for five seasons with the Cincinnati Summer Opera Orchestra. His hobbies are fishing and tackle making.

Two players new to the trombone section are Kauko Kahila, bass trombone of Walpole and William Moyer. Born in Norwood, the former attended the New England Conservatory and the Berkshire Music Center, winning scholarships to each. He has played with the orchestras of Houston, Texas, and St. Louis, Mo. He has three children, age 2, 3 and 8.

Mr. Moyer, who was born in Oberlin, Ohio, is a graduate of Oberlin Conservatory. His present post is his first professional one. He likes chess and photography.

Studied in Warsaw

Martin Hoherman of the cello section is a native of Warsaw, Poland, where he studied at the Music Conservatory under Eli Kochanski, and won scholarships. He played in the Warsaw Philharmonic, and Warsaw Radio Symphony orchestras until 1939. In Canada he has played with the orchestras of Winnipeg and Toronto. He lists his hobbies as medicine, watchmaking, fishing, golf and baseball.

Playing the contra-bassoon is Richard Plaster, of Boston, a native of Winston-Salem, N.C. He studied at the Juilliard Institute, where he held scholarships, as he did at Davidson College and the Music Academy of the West. He has played with the North Carolina and Baltimore Symphonies. His hobbies are church music, organ mechanics and cycling.

Sports Car Enthusiast

Gerard Coguen, trumpet player, who lives in Fitchburg, was born in Maine. He graduated from the New England Conservatory. He studied at Tanglewood in 1950 and '51. He has played with the Central Florida Symphony. A sports car enthusiast, he also likes photography.

Miss Doriot Anthony, flautist, who now lives in Boston, was born in Streator, Ill. She studied at the Eastman School, Rochester, N.Y., and with private teachers, including her mother, Mrs. W. C. Anthony. She won scholarships to study with Georges Barrere, at the Eastman School and at Interlochen Music Camp.

She played with the CBS and NBC orchestras, with the Standard Symphony, Los Angeles, and with the Los Angeles Philharmonic and Hollywood Bowl orchestras, as well as with the Massine Ballet. Cooking, sewing, horseback riding, hiking and swimming she lists as her hobbies.

Major Festival Concerts Open With Record Crowd of 10,300

TANGLEWOOD — Topping all previous records for a first night audience at Tanglewood, 10,300 persons last evening heard Charles Munch conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the opening concert of the 16th major Berkshire Festival in the Music Shed.

Last year's opening, when Berkshire County welcomed the orchestra on its return from its European tour, numbered 8600.

Violinist Thrills Audience

The size of the audience is attributed not only to the change of the opening concert from Thursday to Friday, for the convenience of week-enders, but to the first professional appearance in the Berkshires of Zino Francescatti, since late 1951 a resident of Monterey. The violinist, who played the solo in Mendelssohn's Concerto, was recalled by applause again and again. A factor also was the clear, pleasant night, especially for the 4000 on the lawn.

Among the prominent listeners was the Japanese ambassador, Eikichi Araki, his daughter, Tomiko, and his son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Fumio Araki Jr., who yesterday arrived by plane from Washington, via Boston. They will remain at the Curtis Hotel until Monday, to attend the entire first series of concerts.

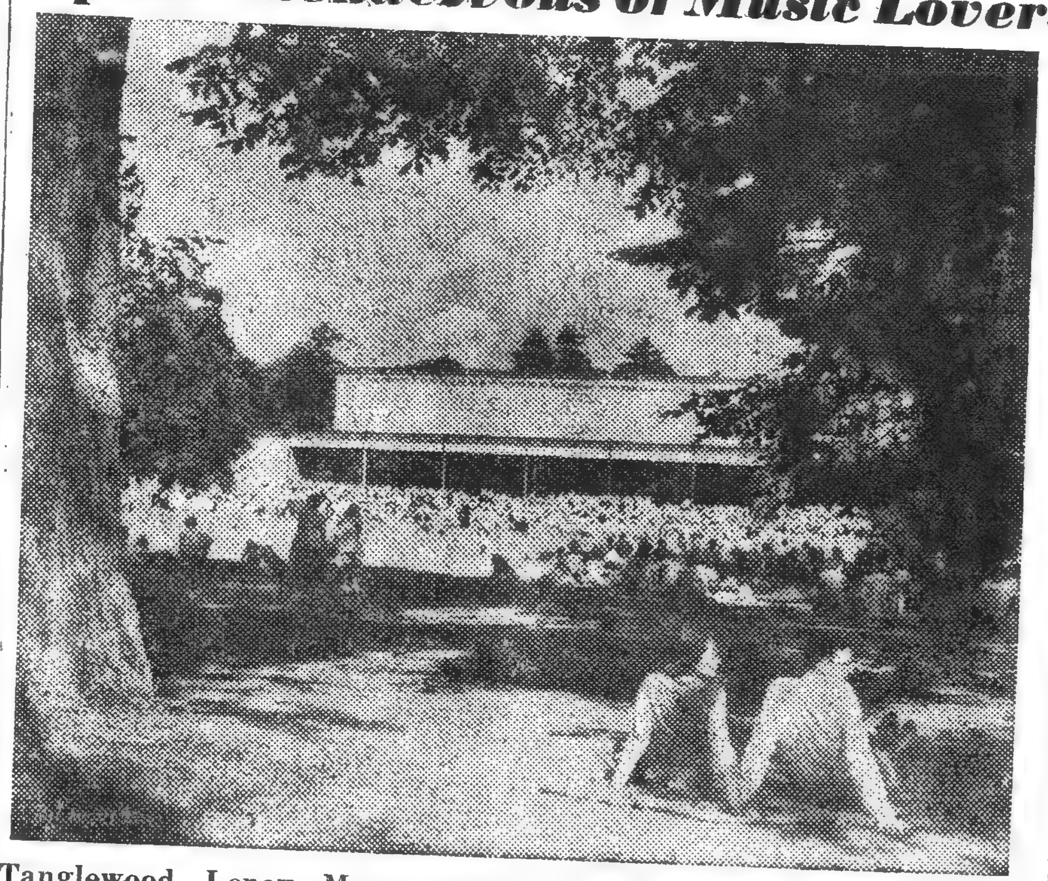
Also in the audience were the wife of Mr. Francescatti and his mother, Mrs. Ernestine Francescatti, who was his first teacher. With Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, in her box, was Pierre Monteux, who will conduct tomorrow's all-Tchaikovsky program; Gregor Piatigorsky, who will be the cello soloist Sunday afternoon, Aug. 9; the composer, Nicolai Lopatnikoff, and Mrs. Lopatnikoff; and Henry B. Cabot, Boston orchestra president, and Mrs. Cabot.

Others prominent in music circles as artists or in management present were Miss Mildred Miller, soprano, who soloed at Tanglewood last season and will appear in the coming Pittsfield Community Concert series; Max Enlow, vice-president of the Philco Corporation, and Mrs. Enlow; Mr. and Mrs. Julian Pollock of Philadelphia and P. B. Fleming of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Alan Keyes of New York.

Many Critics Present

The press was represented by critics from many leading newspapers including New Yorkers: Ross Parmenter of the Times; Arthur Berger, Herald-Tribune, and Mrs. Berger; Miss Harriet Johnson, the Post; Robert Bagar, World-Telegram and Dr. Miles Kastendieck, Journal-American; and Miss Eleanor Hughes of the Boston Herald.

Popular Rendezvous of Music Lovers



Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., scene of the Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, conducts the weekly concerts which began on July 11 and will continue through August 16.

TANGLEWOOD
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
By the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
Orchestra
CHARLES MUNCH Music Director
SHED CONCERTS
OPEN THIS FRIDAY, July 31, at 8:30
Charles Munch will conduct: Beethoven's Leonore No. 3 Overture, Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto, Copland's "Appalachian Spring," Ravel's "Bolero."
Soloist—ZINO FRANCESCATTI, Violin
Sat., Aug. 1 at 8.30—Soloist—LUKAS FOSS
Sun., Aug. 2 at 2.30—PIERRE MONTEUX Conducting
TCHAIKOVSKY Program, Soloist JORGE BOLET, Piano
Remaining Concerts Aug. 7, 8, 9; 14, 15, 16
PUBLIC REHEARSAL BOSTON SYMPHONY
Tomorrow Morning at 10—Admission $1.00
Reserved Seats from $2.50—Admission $2
Address Box Office, Tanglewood, Lenox Mass.—Tel. Lenox 600
Or England Brothers, Pittsfield

TANGLEWOOD
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
By the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
Orchestra
CHARLES MUNCH Music Director
SHED CONCERTS
TONIGHT at 8.30—Soloist, LUKAS FOSS
TOMORROW at 2.30—PIERRE MONTEUX conducting
TCHAIKOVSKY Program, Soloist JORGE BOLET, Piano
Remaining Concerts Aug. 7, 8, 9; 14, 15, 16
Reserved Seats from $2.50—Admission $2.00
SPECIAL EVENT! TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE
Thurs., Aug. 13 — Conductors CHARLES MUNCH, LEONARD BERSTEIN; SOLOISTS—ISAAC STERN, Violin, LEONTYNE PRICE, Soprano, WILLIAM WARFIELD, Baritone
Reserved Seats Now $3.00, $4.00, $5.00—Admission, $2.50
Address Box Office, Tanglewood, Lenox Mass.—Tel. Lenox 600
Or England Brothers, Pittsfield

[210]

Tanglewood Season in Full Swing—

Intimate Series Conducted By Munch in the Berkshires

By Harold Rogers

Tanglewood, Mass.

No other music festival in the United States has attained the stature and popularity of Tanglewood. It is unique. Each summer the Boston Symphony Orchestra presents the Berkshire Music Festival on its own 200-acre estate in western Massachusetts.

Thousands of music lovers are attracted to this idyllic spot during the six-week season. Some 400 music students from this country and abroad attend the Berkshire Music Center — the Tanglewood summer school operated by the Boston Symphony. From a modest beginning in 1934 the festival has continued to chalk up new attendance records.

This summer is no exception. The festival is now in its fourth week. Ticket sales for the first three week ends — for a series of intimate concerts that featured Bach, Mozart, Haydn, and several 20th-century composers —showed that 26,150 listeners attended. This is about 3,000 more than the 1950 record for this period—Koussevitzky's last season.

Economy and Artistry

But while financial success is determined by numbers, musical success is determined purely by the musicians. Economy and artistry must conjoin for a successful festival.

The opening Bach concerts this summer, however, were not consistently good. Charles Munch, conducting about 40 members of the Boston Symphony in the Theater-Concert Hall, played five of the six Brandenburg Concertos on one program. The performance of the No. 1 was particularly unfortunate for erratic tempos and lack of cohesion. Mr. Munch's pace was such that the French horns could not speak so rapidly as the fiddles, and the two sections seldom finished a phrase together.

During this concert one was tempted to believe that the musicians were allowing themselves to be influenced by the casual summer tempo of Tanglewood, that the standards which they strictly observe during the winter season were somehow not in force for festival listeners. Considering that the Boston Symphony has set standards for others to follow, one was unsettled by this careless playing.

Lukas Foss Soloist

The concert was saved, however, by the surety and aplomb with which Lukas Foss struck off the piano solos for the Fifth Brandenburg. He gave us superlative Bach playing—limpid, imbued with delicacy of nuance, marvelously climactic as the occasion required.

The following day Doriot Anthony stepped into the limelight. As first flutist of the Boston Symphony she was featured in the Suite No. 2 in B minor for Flute and Strings, a work she played in Symphony Hall last fall shortly after her appointment to the first desk. We heard the same dexterity and full, clean tone. There is no reason why this young lady, who has already accomplished much, should not soon become one of our great flutists.

The generally inferior playing for the Bach concerts was fortunately only temporary. All was righted for the Mozart programs the following week end. The musicians had regained their top form; Mr. Munch conducted as one inspired.

Here we had the complete vindication of all that Tanglewood stands for—that the listeners, whether sitting in boxes or on remote areas of the lawns, deserve to hear masterworks played by master musicians. Mr. Munch's Mozart was wonderfully adroit, exquisitely refined, proper in mood and style.

Isaac Stern gave us a magnificent performance of Mozart's Violin Concerto in G major, K. 216. As usual his tone was opulent and lustrous, his intonation accurate, but even more, his performance was so deeply subjective that one was caught up into a glow of classical grace and serenity.

Stern and de Pasquale

The following day Mr. Stern was joined by Joseph de Pasquale, first violist of the Boston Symphony, in a balanced performance of Mozart's Konzertante Sinfonie for Violin and Viola, K. 364. Mr. Stern's eloquent violin was equaled and amplified by Mr. de Pasquale's power and rich sonority.

For the Haydn concert of the third week end Hugh Ross, director of the Berkshire Music Center's choral department, conducted a stirring performance of the "Theresa" Mass in B-flat major. Though not highly polished, the choral singing was vigorous and dynamic.

The quartet of soloists, while not impassioned, were nevertheless artistic in their manner of working together. Fine singing was provided by John McCollum, tenor, Lois McCauley, soprano, Beatrice Krebs, contralto, and Lee Cass, bass.

The program of 20th-century composers offered Richard Strauss's Divertimento, Opus 86, on frivolous tunes by François Couperin; Ravel's archaistic "Le Tombeau de Couperin"; Prokofiev's "Classical" Symphony; Milhaud's excursion into hot symphonic jazz, "La Création du Monde," and the first Tanglewood performance of Lukas Foss's "Parable of Death" for Narrator, Chorus, Tenor Solo, and Orchestra.

Zorina as Narrator

The Foss work, using a text from "Stories of God" by Rainer Maria Rilke, employs poetic symbolism to tell of a man and woman whose love for each other enables them to face "the last enemy" fearlessly. But Mr. Foss's orchestral setting is slender and precious, feeding as it does on the leanest part of Stravinsky's style.

Vera Zorina as the narrator added much through the liquid quality of her eloquent speaking voice, but the Foss work doesn't begin to employ her artistry as we find it displayed in her performance of Honegger's "Jeanne d'Arc au Bûcher." Though Mr. Foss conducted his own music with evident enjoyment, there was at least one listener who was unmoved.

Whitestone

Aaron Copland, American composer and assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, presents Carlos Chavez, Mexican composer in residence this summer at Tanglewood, to Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, whose husband founded the music school in 1940.

CBS Radio

James Fassett, producer and commentator of CBS Radio's "World Music Festivals," discusses the Tanglewood coast-to-coast broadcasts with Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The Sunday afternoon concerts of Aug. 2, 9, and 16 will be heard on the series.

The Toll Road

The new toll road will revolutionize motor travel in Massachusetts. It will shorten the drive to New York city by more than an hour and the trip to Albany by almost two hours.

The highway will make much more accessible to Boston the Berkshires and Tanglewood. What is known here as "the Western part of the State" will no longer seem remote.

To those who have traveled limited access toll roads in Maine, New Hampshire [illegible] elsewhere, these things will be obvious.

The route announced by the [illegible] Authority yesterday shows what can be accomplished when planners consult local [illegible] and give maximum consideration to people in communities involved. This cooperation has borne fruit.

The exchange point near [illegible] Weston line, for instance, will be [illegible] in a wooded area, where [illegible] fere with existing settlement [illegible] will end at Route 128 [illegible] Hub"; the method of [illegible] Boston will be considered [illegible] doubtless be planned to cause the least possible inconvenience.

For an important point has been established. Public insistence that it be consulted on the toll road's route has not only brought about a generally satisfactory plan, it has also created a precedent.

The precedent is important for [illegible] pike is but one step—though [illegible] one—in the revolution [illegible] State Public Works Department [illegible] construction running into hundreds [illegible] lions of dollars. [illegible] necessary to meet the [illegible] evitably cause some [illegible] often have become [illegible] unnecessarily, when [illegible] midst.

The events preceding the [illegible] of the turnpike route make [illegible] Our new highway system [illegible] with the greatest consideration [illegible] cerned.

WASHINGTON, D.C.

THE WASHINGTON DAILY NEWS, THURSDAY, JULY 30, 1953

Area Students at Tanglewood

Among the 54 students from Washington, Maryland and Virginia at the Berkshire Music Center this year are the threesome above. Pictured with Hugh Ross, left, Tanglewood's choral department head, are (left to right): Eleanor Nalls, 9801 Burning Tree Road, Bethesda; George Manos, 1368 Randolph-st nw, and Keith Bryan, 5700 Wyngate Drive, Bethesda. The assistant conductor of the Navy Band, Warrant Officer John Norris, is studying conducting there under Leonard Bernstein.

MUSIC

Ber
W

LENOX, Mass.
an audi
the large an openi of the Berkshire tival, Charles Boston Symph
through a four last evening, t
Zino Francesc heard in the Me concerto.

This was the
that Mr. Frances for the opening stadium concert
Thus, proof an thing can go a

Needless to sa was up to his
One need not things as techn and all the word that goes with ance. We know equals in the ments aforement entirety of his p counts, the bea cending structu creates for us. ing, a world warmth, living a sic emerge.

I may as we now that the ent
more than satis
spect to perform
chestra, for one Francescatti suc
violinist's dream
There seemed to whatever between musicians. Truly operation carried able degree.

Mr. Munch,
the Beethoven gave us many mo
ure in the especi rendering. This, doubt, was an leading to grea

Crowds Record
Tanglew

(Special to The
Lenox, Mass.,
totaling 31,000, the
the opening trio
in the 16-year hist shire Music Festiv
Tanglewood's sha week end.

Despite chill a showers early ye ance came to 9,900
teux's appearance
tor of the Boston
chestra for an concert.

The program was lar demand, music
it has become trite
ity. At the same t teux's meticulous yesterday's three odic Serenade for tra; 5th Symphony
Piano Concerto, a de sometimes lack.

Jorge Bolet, towe
rotund figure of Mr.
soloist for the piano
Saturday night's pe contrast, offered a de from 19th Century to in time, and romanti impressionism in sty
Munch conducted the
Lukas Foss' Piano Co
(with the composer
Mendelssohn's Symp
and Hindemith's sp phonic Metamorphos
by Von Weber.

The Foss conce
vised, shows Tangle other facet of the yo conductor-pianist's tive personality. Tru echoes of Stravinsk could chose worse m own style becomes
Mr. Munch and L
stein share the podium end week end of Shed day, Saturday and Su
stein will take over for Koussevitzky Memoria
Saturday night, with leading the orchestra F and Sunday afternoon. G gorsky returns to Tang cello soloist in a Milhaud
Sunday.

Sunday, Aug. 2, 1953

MUSIC

Berkshires Ring With Strings

By ROBERT BAGAR.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 1.—Before an audience of 10,300, the largest ever to attend an opening performance of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival, Charles Munch led the Boston Symphony Orchestra through a four-part program last evening, the soloist being Zino Francescatti, who was heard in the Mendelssohn violin concerto.

This was the same concerto that Mr. Francescatti had played for the opening night of our own stadium concerts in New York. Thus, proof anew that a good thing can go a long way.

Needless to say, the violinist was up to his usual excellence. One need not talk about such things as technique, phrasing and all the worldly paraphernalia that goes with musical performance. We know he has few equals in the various departments aforementioned. It is the entirety of his performance that counts, the beautiful, ever-ascending structure that he recreates for us. And, in the doing, a world of expression, warmth, living and pulsing music emerge.

I may as well report right now that the entire evening was more than satisfactory with respect to performance. The orchestra, for one thing, gave Mr. Francescatti such a support as violinist's dreams are made of. There seemed to be no conflicts whatever between conductor and musicians. Truly, this was cooperation carried to a remarkable degree.

Mr. Munch, starting off with the Beethoven "Leonore" No. 3, gave us many moments of pleasure in the especial drama of the rendering. This, no one could doubt, was an operatic piece, leading to great climaxes in lives of humans. There was something positively eerie in the backstage trumpet's announcement of the Governor's arrival. And the music told more than words can do the imminence of the exultation awaiting the victim Florestan of the tyrannical Pizarro.

The almost classic drama that unreels before us on the stage in "Fidelio" had here a miniature survey, yet one teeming with vigor and majesty of Beethoven the Emancipator.

One of Aaron Copland's most genial scores, that for the Martha Graham choreography "Appalachian Spring," turned up in its purely concert version as the third number in the program. Mr. Copland is reflective in this work, pastoral, concerned with simple fundamentals. Also he is a painter of bucolic scenes, still and quiet in the morning, then stirring to life, as the new spring day wears on.

* * *

The charm of this music lies in the folk simplicity of its tunes, which—though they undergo necessary symphonic treatment and, therefore, complications—remain the true essence of the whole. No one may deny him his orchestral craftsmanship; in fact, it is because of that craftsmanship that the music is so endearing. And in the sensitive, all-over freshness of its delivery by the Bostonians, it told all it had to tell with much grace.

Ravel's "Bolero" concluded the evening. This piece has always been one of the orchestra's specialties. It had its expected excitements, and Mr. Munch was generous enough to place the snare drummer, Harold Farberman, right up front, as if he were a soloist which in this composition he practically is.

The voice and art of mezzo-soprano Jennie Tourel adorn two concerts of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival at Lenox, Mass., next Friday and Saturday evenings.

Crowds Break Record At Tanglewood

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 3—Audiences totaling 31,000, the largest ever for the opening trio of Shed concerts in the 16-year history of the Berkshire Music Festival, filed through Tanglewood's shady gates last week end.

Despite chill and intermittent showers early yesterday, attendance came to 9,900 for Pierre Monteux's appearance as guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for an all-Tschaikowsky concert.

The program was a sop to popular demand, music so often played it has become trite with familiarity. At the same time, Mr. Monteux's meticulous readings gave yesterday's three works, the melodic Serenade for Strings Orchestra, 5th Symphony, and B Flat Piano Concerto, a decisiveness they sometimes lack.

Jorge Bolet, towering over the rotund figure of Mr. Monteux, was soloist for the piano work.

Saturday night's performance, by [illegible] offered a delightful range from 18th Century to contemporary [illegible] romantic imagery to impressionism in style. Charles Munch conducted the orchestra in Lukas Foss' Piano Concerto No. 2 (with the composer as soloist); [illegible]'s Symphony No. 4, and Hindemith's sparkling Symphonic Metamorphosis of themes from Weber.

The Foss concerto, newly-revised, [illegible] Tanglewood still an[illegible] the face of the young composer-pianist's complex creative personality. True, there were [illegible] of Stravinsky, but Foss [illegible] these models until his [illegible] becomes fixed.

[illegible] and Leonard Bernstein [illegible] the podium for the second week end of Shed concerts Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Bernstein will take over for the annual [illegible] Memorial Concert Saturday night, with Mr. Munch leading the orchestra Friday night and Sunday afternoon. Gregor Piatigorsky returns to Tanglewood as soloist in a Milhaud concerto Sunday.

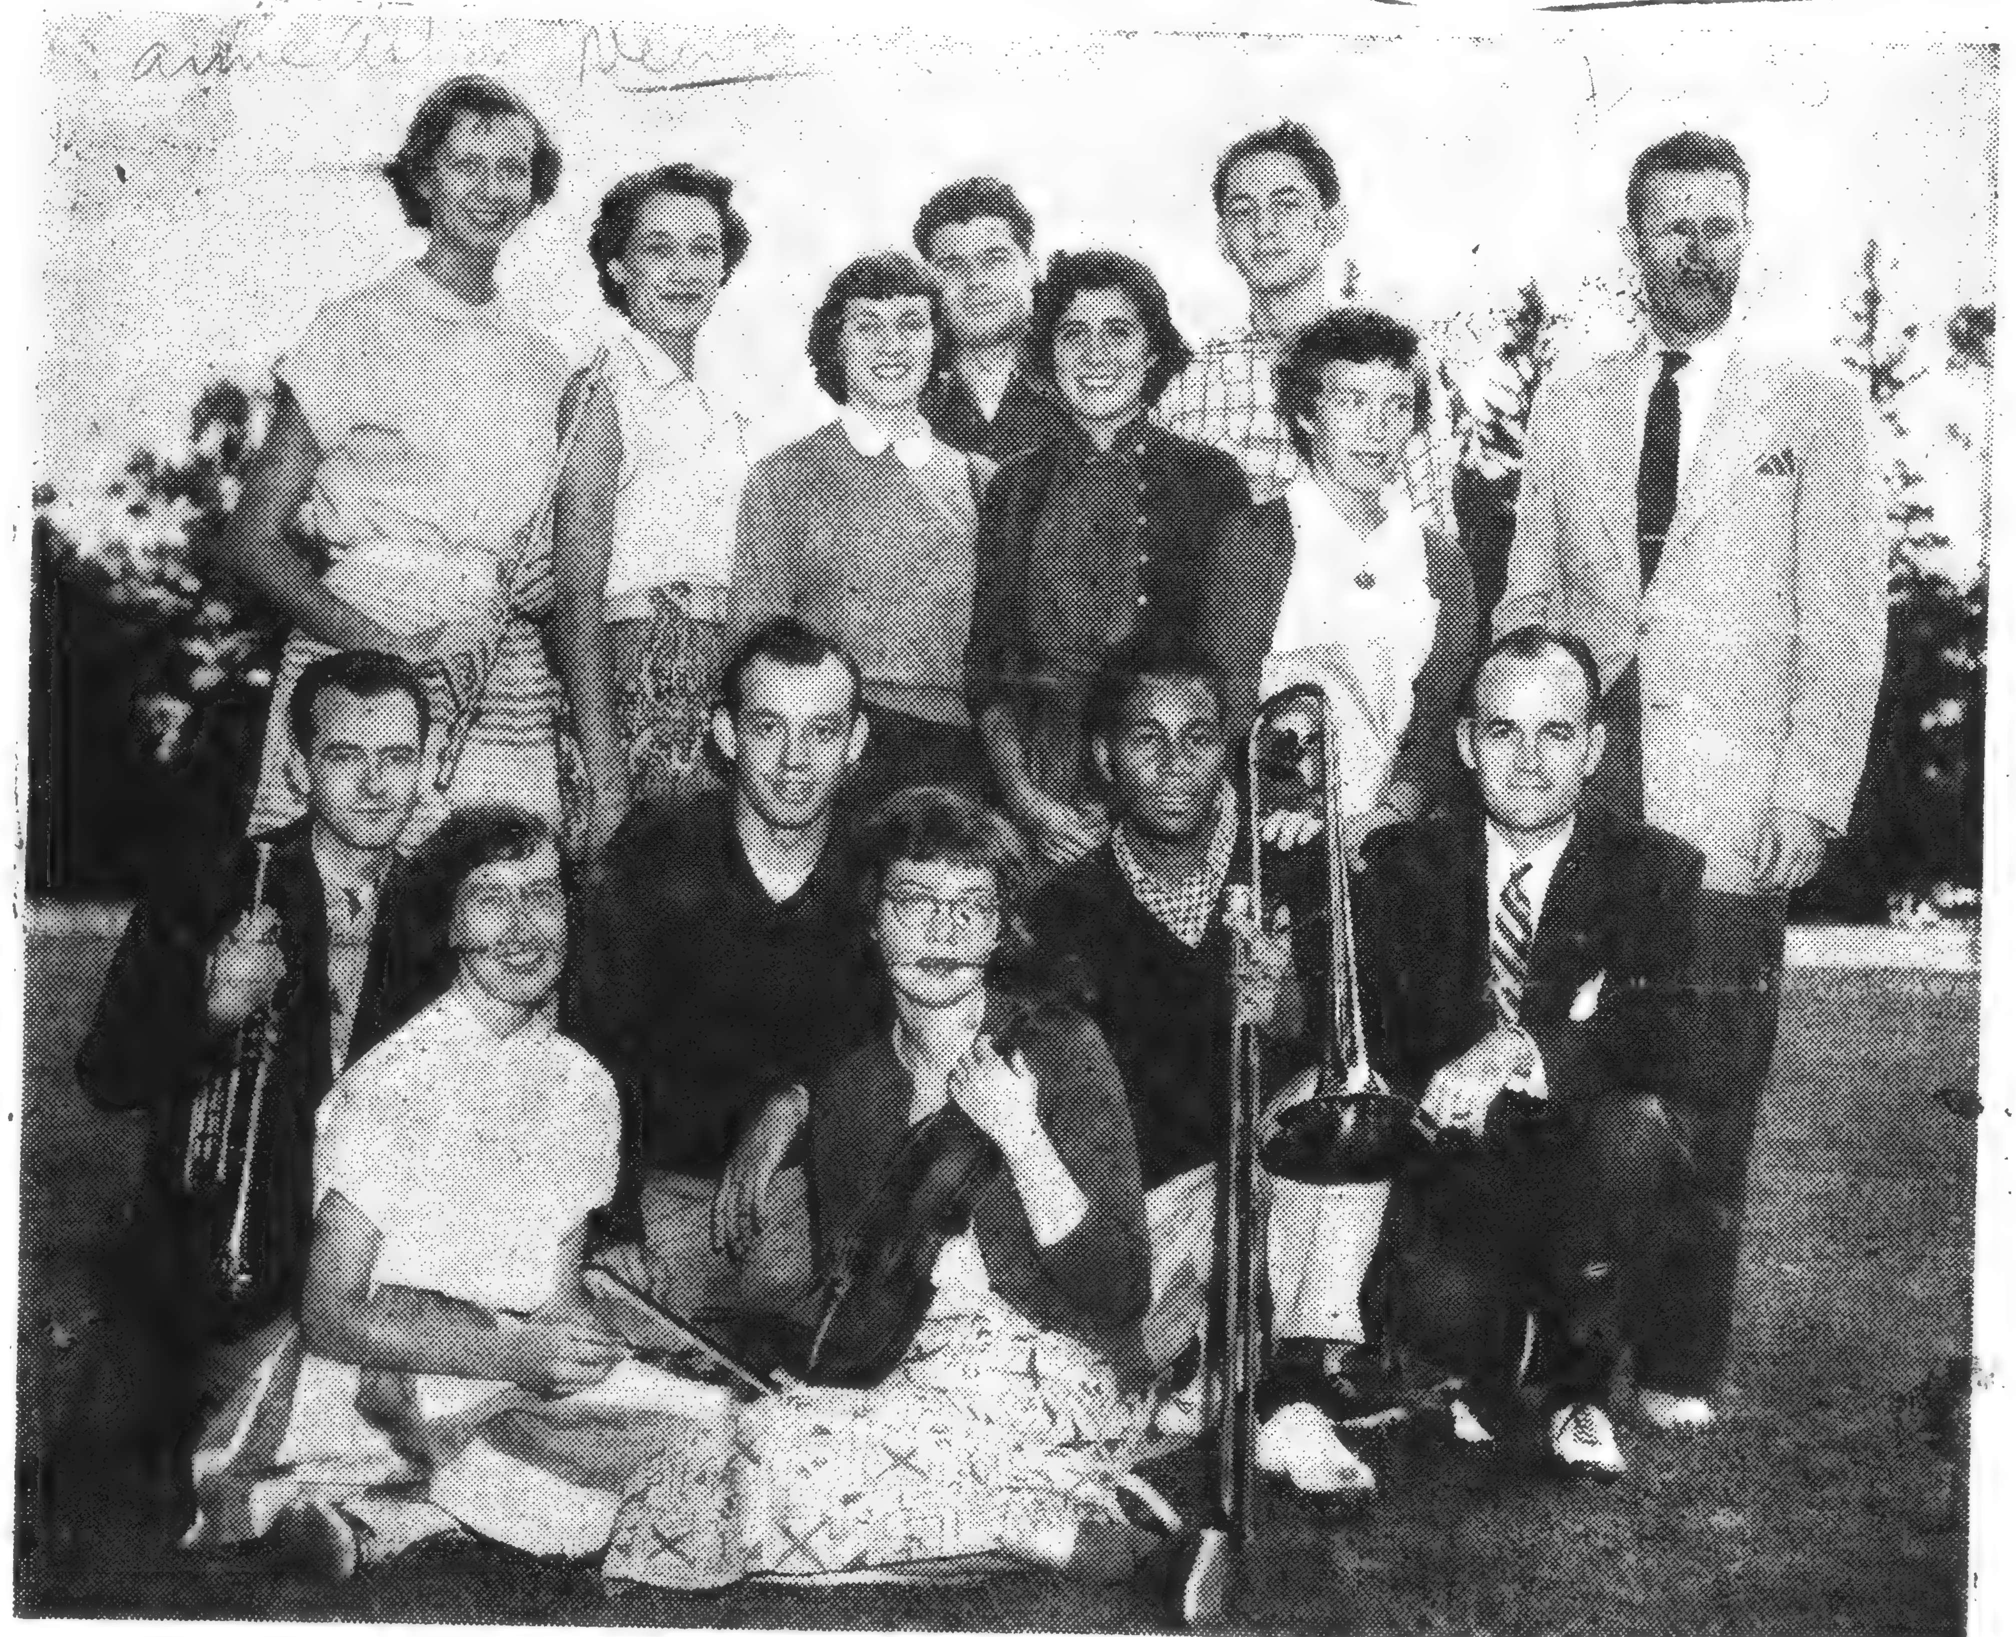
FZ.

OBSERVER-BUDGET, TROY, N. Y., SUNDAY, JULY 5,

THE WEEK IN NEW YORK

By ALICE C. ARMSTRONG

resident stock company with the same producing [illegible] returning each year make them part of the community life. Over in Massachusetts, where Jacob's Pillow, near Lee, opened its dance festival on Friday night. Here is an opportunity to enjoy ballet, modern and ethnic dances. This is the 12th season for Jacob's Pillow, founded and directed by Ted Shawn. At Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., the Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony will start with the theatre concerts July 11 through August 16. Charles Munch is the music director.



U-M STUDENTS AT TANGLEWOOD: A number of University of Michigan students and staff are summering at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., the summer school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival. They include (standing, left to right) Patricia Mann, Grosse Pointe; Virginia Hyde, South Bend; Camilla Heller, Appleton, Wis.; Carl Williams, Dearborn; Harriet Meiss, Woodbridge, Conn.; Robert D. Cogan, Grosse Pointe; Allegra Branson, 515 Catherine St., Ann Arbor, and Gail Rector of Ann Arbor, a member of the Tanglewood staff. (Seated, left to right) Paul Willwerth, Waltham, Mass.; Elizabeth Woldt, Oshkosh, Wis.; Edward Knob, Marshall, Mich.; Anne Westcott, 1515 Congress St., Ypsilanti; Joseph Moore, Detroit, and Wayne Dunlap of Ann Arbor, a member of the Tanglewood staff.

[2½

Telegram

Sunday, Aug. 2, 1953

MUSIC

Berkshires Ring With Strings

By ROBERT BAGAR.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 1.—Before an audience of 10,300, the largest ever to attend an opening performance of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival, Charles Munch led the Boston Symphony Orchestra through a four-part program last evening, the soloist being Zino Francescatti, who was heard in the Mendelssohn violin concerto.

This was the same concerto that Mr. Francescatti had played for the opening night of our own stadium concerts in New York. Thus, proof anew that a good thing can go a long way.

Needless to say, the violinist was up to his usual excellence. One need not talk about such things as technique, phrasing and all the wordy paraphernalia that goes with musical performance. We know he has few equals in the various departments aforementioned. It is the entirety of his performance that counts, the beautiful, ever-ascending structure that he recreates for us. And, in the doing, a world of expression, warmth, living and pulsing music emerge.

I may as well report right now that the entire evening was more than satisfactory with respect to performance. The orchestra, for one thing, gave Mr. Francescatti such a support as violinist's dreams are made of. There seemed to be no conflicts whatever between conductor and musicians. Truly, this was cooperation carried to a remarkable degree.

Mr. Munch, starting off with the Beethoven "Leonore" No. 3, gave us many moments of pleasure in the especial drama of the rendering. This, no one could doubt, was an operatic piece, leading to great climaxes in lives of humans. There was something positively eerie in the backstage trumpet's announcement of the Governor's arrival. And the music told more than words can do the imminence of the exultation awaiting the victim Florestan of the tyrannical Pizarro.

The almost classic drama that unreels before us on the stage in "Fidelio" had here a miniature survey, yet one teeming with vigor and majesty of Beethoven the Emancipator.

One of Aaron Copland's most genial scores, that for the Martha Graham choreography "Appalachian Spring," turned up in its purely concert version as the third number in the program. Mr. Copland is reflective in this work, pastoral, concerned with simple fundamentals. Also he is a painter of bucolic scenes, still and quiet in the morning, then stirring to life, as the new spring day wears on.

* * *

The charm of this music lies in the folk simplicity of its tunes, which—though they undergo necessary symphonic treatment and, therefore, complications—remain the true essence of the whole. No one may deny him his orchestral craftsmanship; in fact, it is because of that craftsmanship that the music is so endearing. And in the sensitive, all-over freshness of its delivery by the Bostonians, it told all it had to tell with much grace.

Ravel's "Bolero" concluded the evening. This piece has always been one of the orchestra's specialties. It had its expected excitements, and Mr. Munch was generous enough to place the snare drummer, Harold Farberman, right up front, as if he were a soloist which in this composition he practically is.

The voice and art of mezzo-soprano Jennie Tourel adorn two concerts of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival at Lenox, Mass., next Friday and Saturday evenings.

OBSERVER-BUDGET, TROY, N. Y., SUNDAY, JULY 5,

THE WEEK IN NEW YORK

By ALICE C. ARMSTRONG

resident stock company with the same producing and returning each year make them part of the community life. Over in Massachusetts, where Jacob's Pillow, near Lee, opened its dance festival on Friday night. Here is an opportunity to enjoy ballet, modern and ethnic dances. This is the 12th season for Jacob's Pillow, founded and directed by Ted Shawn. At Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., the Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony will start with the theatre concerts July 11 through August 16. Charles Munch is the music director.

Crowds Break Record At Tanglewood

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 3—Audiences totaling 31,000, the largest ever for the opening trio of Shed concerts in the 16-year history of the Berkshire Music Festival, filed through Tanglewood's shady gates last week end.

Despite chill and intermittent showers early yesterday, attendance came to 9,900 for Pierre Monteux's appearance as guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for an all-Tschaikowsky concert.

The program was a sop to popular demand, music so often played it has become trite with familiarity. At the same time, Mr. Monteux's meticulous readings gave yesterday's three works, the melodic Serenade for Strings Orchestra; 5th Symphony, and B Flat Piano Concerto, a decisiveness they sometimes lack.

Jorge Bolet, towering over the round figure of Mr. Monteux, was soloist for the piano work.

Saturday night's performance, by contrast, offered a delightful range from 19th Century to contemporary in time, and romantic imagery to impressionism in style. Charles Munch conducted the orchestra in Lukas Foss' Piano Concerto No. 2 (with the composer as soloist); Mendelssohn's Symphony No. 4, and Hindemith's sparkling Symphonic Metamorphosis of themes by Von Weber.

The Foss concerto, newly-revised, shows Tanglewood still another facet of the young composer-conductor-pianist's complex creative personality. True, there were traces of Stravinsky, but Foss could chose worse models until his own style becomes fixed.

Mr. Munch and Leonard Bernstein share the podium for the second week end of Shed concerts Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Bernstein will take over for the annual Koussevitsky Memorial Concert Saturday night, with Mr. Munch leading the orchestra Friday night and Sunday afternoon. Gregor Piatigorsky returns to Tanglewood as soloist in a Milhaud concerto Sunday.

FZ.

Ann Arbor News

July 53

U-M STUDENTS AT TANGLEWOOD: A number of University of Michigan students and staff are summering at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., the summer school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival. They include (standing, left to right) Patricia Mann, Grosse Pointe; Virginia Hyde, South Bend; Camilla Heller, Appleton, Wis.; Carl Williams, Dearborn; Harriet Meiss, Woodbridge, Conn.; Robert D. Cogan, Grosse Pointe; Allegra Branson, 515 Catherine St., Ann Arbor, and Gail Rector of Ann Arbor, a member of the Tanglewood staff. (Seated, left to right) Paul Willwerth, Waltham, Mass.; Elizabeth Woldt, Oshkosh, Wis.; Edward Knob, Marshall, Mich.; Anne Westcott, 1515 Congress St., Ypsilanti; Joseph Moore, Detroit, and Wayne Dunlap of Ann Arbor, a member of the Tanglewood staff.

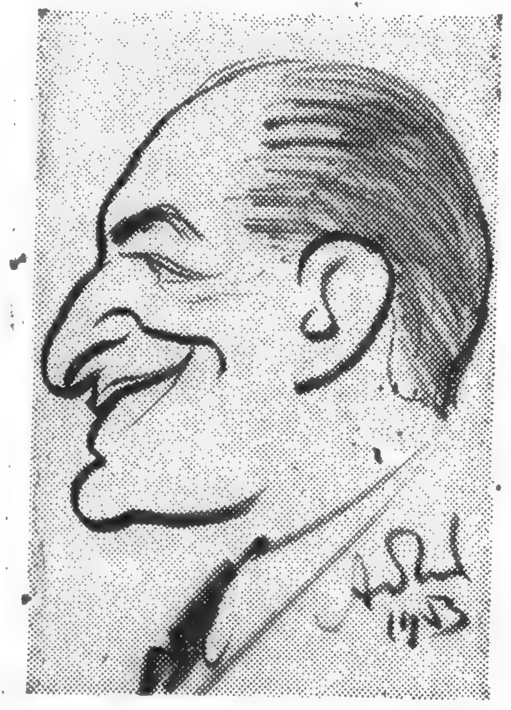
Music

Opening of Major Concerts Draw Record Crowds to Shed

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FIRST of the three major week ends of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the big Shed at Tanglewood brought out a record crowd which would undoubtedly been even larger if the weather at noon yesterday had been more reliable. The early afternoon grayness which dissolved to clear sunlight at concert-end time still encouraged nearly 10,000 to attend the third of the opening week trio of programs. Pierre Monteux made his initial appearance of the season at Tanglewood conducting an all Tchaikovsky program with Jorge Bolet as soloist in the piano concerto.

The string sections of the orchestra played with resplendent sonority in the pleasant, light Serenade. Monteux kept it from becoming lush and sentimental by restraint and good taste, just as he did in the fifth symphony. His palette is not as broad and big as is that of some other conductors but there is a quality of tone, a validity and musical turn to everything he does which give deep satisfaction to his hearers. In many cases he gives the orchestra its head, allowing individual players their personal eloquence, as he permitted James Stagliano to do the horn theme in the second movement of the symphony with an unforgettably lovely tone, and Roger Voisin the telling short trumpet phrases in beautiful contrast at the outset of the fourth movement. Monteux uses a minimum of indications and seems to assume that the Boston men are grown-up and experienced musicians. It was a joy to hear desired effects arrive by such musical understanding and artistic radar.



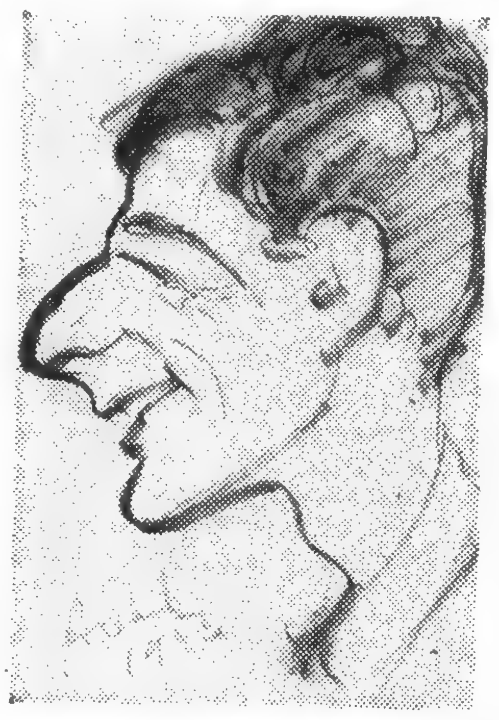
Adler

Roger Voisin

Pianist Bolet was making his second appearance on the Tanglewood stage. His playing evoked unbounded enthusiasm and he was recalled time after time. Monteux gave him extraordinary support from the orchestra and Bolet proved worthy of such company. He played with confidence and technical command at all times. We did not find him consistently convincing but his entire attention was applied to the music without thought of ulterior effect. The slow movement had tenderness and an admirable adherence to line, while in the more agitated end movements he rose to moments of excitement if not of greatness.

* * *

SATURDAY NIGHT Charles Munch divided his program equally between orchestral favorites and newer and contemporary, less familiar ones. Lukas Foss was soloist in his own piano concerto, a composition he has revised, he states, since its first presentation in 1951. This was Foss' second listing as composer in this Festival and also his second appearance as pianist. His playing was full of an incandescent spirit which raised it to magnetic levels. There was complete immersion in the music. His reactions were natural and immediate and revealed his aspirations as composer, a searching for nobility and heroism. Mr. Munch gave him the utmost faithful collaboration in what seemed to be a tremendously difficult task.



Adler

Lukas Foss

The concerto is in three movements of which the middle one is the most appealing immediately. It has an idyllic and poetic atmosphere, derivative of Copland's "Appalachian Spring" at times but personal and soft and warm. The concerto begins with a simple trumpet announcement after which come explosive contrasts in the entire orchestra and the piano enters with figures more pianistic than message-bearing. The fragmentary dialogue persists, and, again but in a different spirit, reappears in the final movement. There are many passages for the piano of swift-running phrases which are debatable as vehicles against the orchestral background he employs, but Foss carried the concerto on his musically powerful shoulders to a wonderfully exciting climax and personal triumph.

* * *

HINDEMITH'S Metamorphosis on four themes of Carl Maria von Weber are gay and subtle and humorous. Munch should be thanked for giving us the chance to hear this music. It is good fun throughout and does not descend to the more studious levels we sometimes associate with Hindemith. The orchestration has a happy tingle to it and resembles the same easy exercise of talents that Strauss used in his Couperin music which Munch played last week with the chamber-sized group from the Boston orchestra. For a man of Hindemith's facilities, it is a matter of juggling and toying with musical material as Mencken might have played with words.

Schumann's "Manfred" overture opened the Saturday night program and Mr. Munch placed the Mendelssohn "Italian" symphony directly after the intermission. The Schumann was enlivened by ardor and softened with contrasting grace. The symphony served to show the virtuosity of the orchestra, especially in the movements when Munch in matters of tempo and tonal demands showed the musicians no quarter. The huge audience was carried away by the volatile exuberance and recalled the conductor repeatedly.

Tanglewood

SCHEDULE FOR THE WEEK

Today

*4.30 PM—Informal chamber music concert by students of orchestra. Chamber Music Hall.

Trio for piano, violin and cello, Beethoven
Serge Blanc, violin; Norma Marcus, cello; Susan Pearlman, piano

Quartet .... Fragale

Quintet
Patricia Mann, flute; Catherine Dufford, oboe; William Duckham, bass-clarinet; Theodore Grimes, bassoon; David Allan, French-horn.

Sonata for flute, cello and piano .. Pierne
Bonnie Lake, flute; Jean Moore, cello; Betsy Moyer, piano.

Tonight

8.30—Three one-act French operas of Gluck, Debussy and Chabrier by students of Berkshire Music Center. Theatre.

Tomorrow

*8.30 PM—Concert by Small Choir. Theatre.

Miriam's Song of Triumph ...... Schubert
Barry Volkman, Philip Treggor, Kalman Novak, conductors.

Jubilemus Singuli .... Lassus
Rev. Michael Palotai, conductor

Velociter Exaudi Concupiscendo Concupiscit .... Lassus
Douglas Harding, conductor

Magnificat in C .... Pachelbel
William Byrd, conductor

Turn, O Libertad .... Sessions
James Owens, conductor

Sonnets .... Milhaud
Virginia Mead and David Buttolph, conductors

Song of the Fisherman (Peter Grimes) .... Britten
Kalman Novak, conductor

Wednesday

*4.30 PM—Opera scenes by students of associate division. Theatre.

*8.30 PM—Composers' Forum. Chamber Music Hall.

Thursday

*8.30 PM—Symphony concert by student orchestra. Music Shed.

Friday

8.30 PM—Opening of Series D, Berkshire Festival, Charles Munch, conducting Boston Symphony Orchestra. Music Shed.

"Romeo and Juliet" .... Berlioz dramatic symphony, with Festival chorus and soloists: Jennie Tourel, alto; Nicola Mascona, bass-baritone; John McCollum, tenor.

Saturday

10 AM—Public rehearsal of Boston Symphony Orchestra for benefit of pension fund. Music Shed.

*3.00 PM—Organ recital by E. Power Biggs. Music Shed.

8.30 PM—Berkshire Festival concert, Leonard Bernstein conducting Koussevitzky memorial program. Music Shed.

Prelude to "Khovanstchina" .. Moussorgsky

"Scheherazade" for soprano and orchestra .... Ravel
Miss Tourel, soloist

Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection") .. Mahler with fesitval chorus and soloists: Miss Tourel, alto; Theresa Green, soprano.

Sunday

*10.00 AM—Chamber Music concert. Chamber Music Hall.

2.30 PM—Berkshire Festival concert, Charles Munch conducting.

*Open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center whose contributions help to support the school.

No more seats available.

Foss, Bernstein In Duo-Piano Benefit Aug. 11

LENOX—Leonard Bernstein and Lukas Foss, pianists, composers and conductors, will be heard together for the first time in public when they play duo-piano numbers at the informal concert for members of the Stockbridge Bowl Association and their friends. The event, intended to broaden the membership of the society organized to preserve the beauty of the lake, will be held on the lawn of the Koussevitzky estate, Lenox, in view of the Bowl, Tuesday afternoon, Aug. 11.

In addition to the two-piano numbers and songs by Richard Dyer-Bennet and Mac Morgan, the program will include solos by Miss Doriot Anthony, Boston Symphony Orchestra flutist.

Membership blanks for joining the association are obtainable by all interested persons at the Curtis Hotel and Hagyard's Drug Store, Lenox; Rosemary Weston and Mary and Zell, Pittsfield; or the office of Oliver C. Kempton, treasurer of the association, who issues memberships, Stockbridge.

E, MONDAY, AUGUST 3, 1953

Berkshire Festival

Lukas Foss Is Piano Soloist In His Rewritten Concerto

By Arthur Berger

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 2.—The first big week end of the Berkshire Music Festival came to a close this afternoon with a Tchaikovsky program in which Pierre Monteux appeared as guest conductor of the Boston Symphony in the shed at Tanglewood.

Jorge Bolet was soloist in the piano concerto and the program opened with the lovely Serenade for Strings. The Fifth Symphony was the central work on the program.

Last night's program, under the direction of Charles Munch, provided the major musical news of the week end since it included the first performance, in its revised version, of the Piano Concerto of Lukas Foss. Foss, one of our really big creative talents, seems to be going through a gratifying period of self exploration and criticism that bears close watching. His understandable displeasure with his two-year-old concerto is only one sign of this.

Wrote New First Movement

The composer, who also appeared as soloist, has written a new first movement and a new ending to the second, and he has also made a few cuts in the finale. All this has been substantially for the better. After some years of skirting the periphery of the group of Stravinsky's most vital young disciples who center around Boston, he seems ready now, at least to a degree, to throw his lot in with theirs—if one is to judge from his new opening allegro.

Foss might have found a solution elsewhere as well. Where he finds it is less important than his merely finding one that will realize his phenomenal creative gifts and eliminate both his tylistic inconsistencies and what seems to be an indecision as to what goal he wants to achieve.

Inconsistency is still perceptible in the newly written section, much as it is dominated by the influence of Stravinsky's Symphony in Three Movements. Foss rings new changes on the typical repeated-note figures with skill and instrumental ingenuity. He achieves fine continuity where so many others today are episodic and sluggish. But much as he [illegible] for the highest classical values and a delightful gentleness and purity of sound, he is also obsessed by a need for a grandiloquence contradicting them.

It is good to profit from tradition. But it is another thing to try to assume by oneself, all over again, the attitudes that the masters have already assumed, especially when one has, as Foss does, something of one's own to convey.

Allegro Too Long

The material did not lend itself to the great proportions and gesture of the Brahms and Rachmaninoff concertos, nor to the big orchestral introduction of Mozart. As a result, the new allegro, like the original first movement and like the finale even with its cuts, is about twice as long as it should be.

Nothing pointed up Foss' shortcomings last night as much as Mendelssohn's "Italian" Symphony which received a very amiable reading after the intermission under Mr. Munch's direction. Foss has the spontaneous musicianship of a Mendelssohn but, alas, not as yet the remarkable judgment of shape, of how far to go with a given idea, of the material to be used and the material to be thrown away. This musicianship, in Foss' case, is clearly discernible, among other things, in his highly distinguished, poetic playing which was once again, last night, an incalculable delight.

This afternoon Mr. Bolet played the Tchaikowsky in his customary massive style, using his iron fingers to articulate the passage work with clarity and evennese. The venerable Mr. Monteux's praises need scarcely, at this late date be sung again, since his sound virtues are all too familiar. Despite this morning's rain and the cloudy skies that prevailed till after intermission, the attendance this afternoon was 9,900, the largest on record for any Sunday on the last week end of a festival series by the full Boston Symphony as distinct [illegible] from the Chamber Symphony.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 1, 1953. AM

BOSTON SYMPHONY HEARD AT FESTIVAL

Begins Friday Night Concerts in Shed at Tanglewood—Munch Conducts 'Bolero'

By ROSS PARMENTER

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LENOX, Mass., July 31—The Berkshire Music Festival moved into high gear tonight when the full Boston Symphony Orchestra gave its first concert in the great shed at Tanglewood. The program began the major innovation of the festival—Friday night concerts.

In the past, the first concerts of the week-ends have been on Thursday, leaving a day's gap before the second concert Saturday night. It was thought that eliminating the gap might be more convenient for persons attending the concerts and that more might come to the first of the triad.

Apparently the calculations were correct. The program attracted 10,300 persons, a larger audience than any Thursday concert drew. It meant that, in addition to the 6,000 listeners under the cover of the hangar-like roof of the shed, there were 4,300 on the lawns who had nothing above them but unusually bright stars.

The new record for the first night of the first big week-end indicated that, barring bad luck with the weather, this sixteenth festival is likely to be the largest to date. The smaller concerts in the theatre-concert hall of the last three week-ends already have surpassed previous figures. Altogether they drew 26,150, giving them an edge of almost 3,000 over Serge Koussevitzky's last chamber orchestra concerts in 1950.

Since the seating capacity of the theatre-concert hall is only 1,152 these earlier concerts, averaging 4,360 each, drew such great overflows that next year they may be moved to the shed.

Tonight's concert was one of superb quality. It [illegible] Beethoven's Overture to [illegible] No. 3, and one [illegible] ceived a sense of Charles [illegible] orchestral mastery. [illegible] opening measure [illegible] hush in the huge [illegible] suddenly one could hear the [illegible] ing of the [illegible] outside.

Then the Overture [illegible] all its drama, [illegible] liberty, the happiness of [illegible] and wife reunited and the [illegible] for nature being as [illegible] as the tension and [illegible] the dramatic episo[illegible]

Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto, with Zino Francescatti [illegible] ist, followed. As always the [illegible] linist played with [illegible] and with his [illegible] headlong [illegible] loses its balance. Other [illegible] ters have played the [illegible] higher flights of ethereal [illegible] but his warmth gave his [illegible] a quality of its own.

Following the intermission [illegible] what is perhaps Aaron Copland's most beautiful score, his "Appalachian Spring." For the [illegible] Mr. Munch conducted a [illegible] work of a master for whose [illegible] his conducting is justly famous: Ravel's "Bolero."

This Clipping From
HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM
JUL 6 - 1953

Season Opened With Exercises At Tanglewood

The Berkshire Festival opened its 11th annual season at Tanglewood in Lenox Sunday afternoon with special exercises in the theater-concert hall and a performance of "Alleluia" by Randall Thompson given by the student chorus conducted by Hugh Ross. There were brief talks by Charles Munch, director of the Berkshire Music Center and conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra; Lewis Perry, chairman of the friends of the Berkshire Music Center; Henry B. Cabot, president of the board of trustes of the Boston Symphony orchestra, and Aaron Copland, assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center. Later tea was served in the Tanglewood garden.

Lazy, Stimulating Atmosphere

Music Heaven in Berkshires

Wa. Post Aug 2

By Richard L. Coe

(See Picture on Page 2)

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.—After an easy 145 miles from Gotham along the tree-lined Taconic parkway, you find yourself, almost suddenly, at the entrance of this unique estate.

By now you're used to the pleasing greens of the Berkshire hills, but somehow all you've read and the pictures you've seen fail to do justice to Tanglewood.

Hundreds of cars are parked in fields, but you hardly notice them as you turn to the entrance of the celebrated musical summer resort. An ingenious adaptation of wood and glass in the modern style forms the almost translucent entrance beneath the trees

A few hundred yards on your right is a concert theater of impeccable acoustics. Under its wooden ceiling, 1200 spectators can be seated, and beyond its open back wall several thousand more can lounge on the lawn listening to a concert.

Farther off, at the left, is the huge shell, another acoustical wonder, open on three sides, where 5000 persons can sit "indoors" and where the sound will spill out to as many more on the lawns outside.

THIS IS THE SUMMER HOME of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. It's also a summer school for 400 musicians from all over the world. Most of them are professionals, but about a hundred are amateurs, enrolled for informal study, "auditors" for two, four or full six weeks of the season. All around the grounds, extending down to the placid Mahkeenac Lake, daytime classes are in progress and as you wander about with the Boston's gentle, keen-eyed manager, George E. Judd, you catch the sounds of a full orchestra, a chamber quartet, a chorus, a man with a horn, a girl with a rich alto.

In the afternoon heat, meticulous college boys guide tourists around the grounds. Charles Munch is leading the Berkshire Festival Orchestra in the shed. Leonard Bernstein—among other things, the composer of "Wonderful Town"—is taking a student orchestra over and over again through a tricky passage of Prokofieff at the bottom of a slope near a tree whose marker informs you that here Nathaniel Hawthorne wrote "Tanglewood Tales."

Walking down a lane not far from the spot where Herman Melville wrote "Moby Dick" is the ballerina turned concert narrator, Vera Zorina, casually without make-up or any of glamor's accoutrements. Hugh Ross rehearses a chorus in a shed whose natural wood blends into the trees, and Conductor Pierre Monteux ambles across a flower garden on some mission or other.

FOR ALL OF ITS LAZY, summer atmosphere, there's an invigorating zest in the fresh breeze. Not many proper Bostonians venture this far to the West. They're more fond of the sea around them, but Tanglewood is home to the Boston Symphony, as remarkable an orchestra as our country affords.

Like so many worthwhile organizations, Tanglewood is the outcome of a slow evolution that started 19 years ago in nearby Stockbridge, where Dr. Henry K. Hadley and 65 members of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony presented three August concerts. Two seasons later it was decided to engage the Boston, and its conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, whose widow lives nearby, was quick to see the possibilities for his proud orchestra. After hopping from one to another of the spacious Berkshire estates, the many-faceted Festival was offered a permanent home on her acres by Mrs. Gortham Brooks, and the tent that served as the first Tanglewood concert hall eventually gave way to a maze of buildings in the trees and across the lawns.

Now Tanglewood offers not only a unique concert series of six weeks, but classes in all types of the musical arts. Students from 16 to 65 are enrolled from all parts of the world and on a weekend, 10 to 15 thousand visitors arrive for this aural and visual feast.

Here, too, is Jay Fassett, timing the Sunday afternoon series for international radio broadcasts. He is just back from taping the European festivals in Finland and Holland, and soon he will be off again to bring you the Salzburg, Beyreuth and Edinburg Festivals on that Sunday afternoon series the Columbia Broadcasting System is so wisely continuing during the summer hiatus of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony. The Tanglewood atmosphere also captivates busy, urbane Fassett and instead of hurtling back to New York between concerts to complete arrangements for his return to Europe's maze of dates, he decides to get some work done, some articles written in this peaceful, invigorating air.

Music Heaven In Berkshires

COE, From Page 1

DOWN BY THE lakeside, some young men and women are stretched in the fading sunlight on a rubber float left over from Army Quartermaster material, and a city-dressed man is taking pictures.

"Where will we see them?" asks a young girl.

"In Pravada," jokes the photographer.

Out on the water a tall, gray-haired, straight-backed oboist twists his small sailboat between the pier and the float. He brings his boat up from Boston every summer, parks his family here in their summer home.

A SYMPHONY player with winter quarters, summer home and a sailboat? Yes, Tanglewood also is a paradise to musicians. For 47 weeks out of the year, the Boston's members are working and if it weren't for the need for a rest, they probably could work the remaining five weeks.

Small wonder that the National Symphony's Ralph Pottle, of the French horn section, up here for the six-week season as a student, tells you that he's taking his leave of the Potomac this year in hopes of finding a job with a longer season and better wages. "It's a splendid orchestra," he remarks, "but why does Washington and some of its wealthy citizens think that it can have the great orchestra it should have on a budget so much smaller than other leading orchestras?"

A question you ponder on the float in the lake, where a girl from Cleveland and a boy from San Francisco are disputing the tempo of a Bach chorale. Invigorating yet restful. Tanglewood is the music world in miniature, a universal langauge in a multitude of accents, a lucky, philanthropic oasis on the quicksands of the arts.

Tanglewood's School Hailed

By Paul Hume

THE BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL is entering its final two weeks. And the programs remaining are listed herein for the benefit of the rather substantial number of Washingtonians who have long planned to visit Tanglewood between now and August 16.

But the vital fact about Tanglewood is not its public festival programs but the six-week music school that takes place there. The amount and variety of music rehearsed and performed, studied and read through, and in still other ways introduced to the several hundred students gathering there, is impressive.

The formal concerts comprise only a small percentage of the musical activity of the school. In addition to the weekend concerts, there are chamber music recitals which this year have brought to Tanglewood the Baroque Trio of harpsichord, flute and cello; a sonata recital by Ruth Posselt, violinist, and Gary Graffman, pianist; an orgran program by E. Power Biggs, and frequent chamber and choral concerts.

THE OPERA DEPARTMENT under Boris Goldowsky has programs of opera scenes, and performances of the one-act operas, L'Ivrogne corrige by Gluck, Debussy's L'enfant prodique, and Chabrier's L'education manquee. They are also presenting two evenings of Gretry's "Richard the Lion-Hearted," which visitors can see on August 10 and 11.

Composers' forums have been almost weekly affairs at the school, sessions in which music students can examine verbally, before, during, and after a performance of new music, the composers who have created these new works. Few meetings are more effective in the way they tend to bring out some concrete expression of the way the creative processes work in different musicians.

The gala programs of the Boston Symphony in the Tanglewood Shed have tended to become more and more composed of standard repertoire, music played by the orchestra in its winter season, recorded by them, and of a largely popular nature. This afternoon's program, to be broadcast over WTOP-CBS at 2:30, is an all-Tschaikowsky concert, conducted by Pierre Monteux.

See HUME, Page 2

Tanglewood School Vital

HUME, From Page 1

NEXT FRIDAY evening, however, will be a great occasion, for it will bring forth for its all-too infrequent hearings the entire "Romeo and Juliet" symphony of Berlioz, with chorus and soloists, including Jennie Tourel.

Saturday night Leonard Bernstein will conduct a memorial program honoring Koussevitsky. He has chosen Moussorgsky's Khovantchina Prelude, the Symphony No. 102 of Haydn, the Mahler's 2d Syhphony, the "Resurrection."

Next Sunday afternoon Muench will conduct Schubert's 5th Symphony, the Barber Adagio, Don Quixote, by Strauss, the Milhaud Cello Concerto, and Wagner's Tannhauser Overture.

The final week promises the Brahms Requiem, on Friday, and a Saturday night of three symphonies: No. 4 by Sibelius, No. 2 of Brahms, and the Sinfonia India, by Carlos Chavez, who is teaching composition at Tanglewood this summer.

THE LAST CONCERT, on Sunday afternoon, August 16, holds Schubert's "Unfinished" symphony, the Chabrier Bourree, Wagner's Tristan Prelude and Love-Death, Siegfried Idyll, and Meistersinger excerpts, and the Ravel Left-hand concerto, and La Valse.

The broadcasting of the three Sunday afternoon concerts, even though the programs are chopped at 4 p. m., requiring the omission of the final number, brings the Tanglewood Festival touch to the entire country.

But the effects of the center will reach the country as a whole during the winter months, when the hundreds of musicians, young and not so young, return to their own communities to put into practice some of the music they worked on for six weeks in the Berkshires.

DISTRICT STUDENTS AT TANGLEWOOD: From the Potomac to the shores of Lake Mahkeenac have gone Eleanor Nalls, George Manos and Keith Bryan to study at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., the summer school of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. At the left is Hugh Ross, head of the Tanglewood choral department.

TANGLEWOOD MUSIC EVEN CHARMS BIRD

Times Aug 3

Feathered Intruder Competes, Then Submits to the Magic of Monteux and Orchestra

By ROSS PARMENTER

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 2—Pierre Monteux conducted his one concert of the Berkshire Festival this afternoon. It consisted entirely of familiar works by Tchaikovsky, but such is the conductor's power to make all music fresh that the program had the quality of sunlight.

The grounds of Tanglewood were dampened by a drizzle in the late afternoon and an overcast sky prevailed most of the day. The weather held down the size of the audience, but not by much. In addition to the 6,000 persons who sat under the fan-shaped shed, 3,900 others braved the dampness of the lawns.

Added to the 10,000 attendance last night and the 10,300 on Friday, the week-end total came to 30,200. This set a new record for the first big week-end of concerts.

The Serenade for Strings, the Fifth Symphony and the B Flat Minior Piano Concerto, with Jorge Bolet as soloist, were the works on Mr. Monteux's program. Perhaps the nature of the concert can best be dramatized by telling of something that happened during the first movement of the symphony.

Enter the Culprit

A bird flew into the shed, perched on a girder and started to sing. At another sort of summer event this might have been a pleasant rural touch. But because of the beauty and subtlety of the music that Mr. Monteux drew from the Boston Symphony strings in the Serenade, the audience had fallen into so deep and responsive a silence that the bird was a resented intruder.

Its song, heard above the quiet passages at the start of the symphony, was a distracting nuisance. Happily, though, it either flew out or, what is more likely, was charmed into silence. For the orchestra's performance was absorbing in every detail, superb in sound and infused with a flow of continuity that made the music seem to sing even through the absolute silence of Mr. Monteux's wonderfully significant pauses.

Mr. Bolet's performance of the concerto was carefully considered, strong in technique and widely varied in dynamic range. The big, clangorous passages were firm and clear, and the quieter passages of the slow movement rippled like a cool brook. But it did not have much color or warmth. The audience, though, was enthusiastic, and it rewarded him with whistles and cheers.

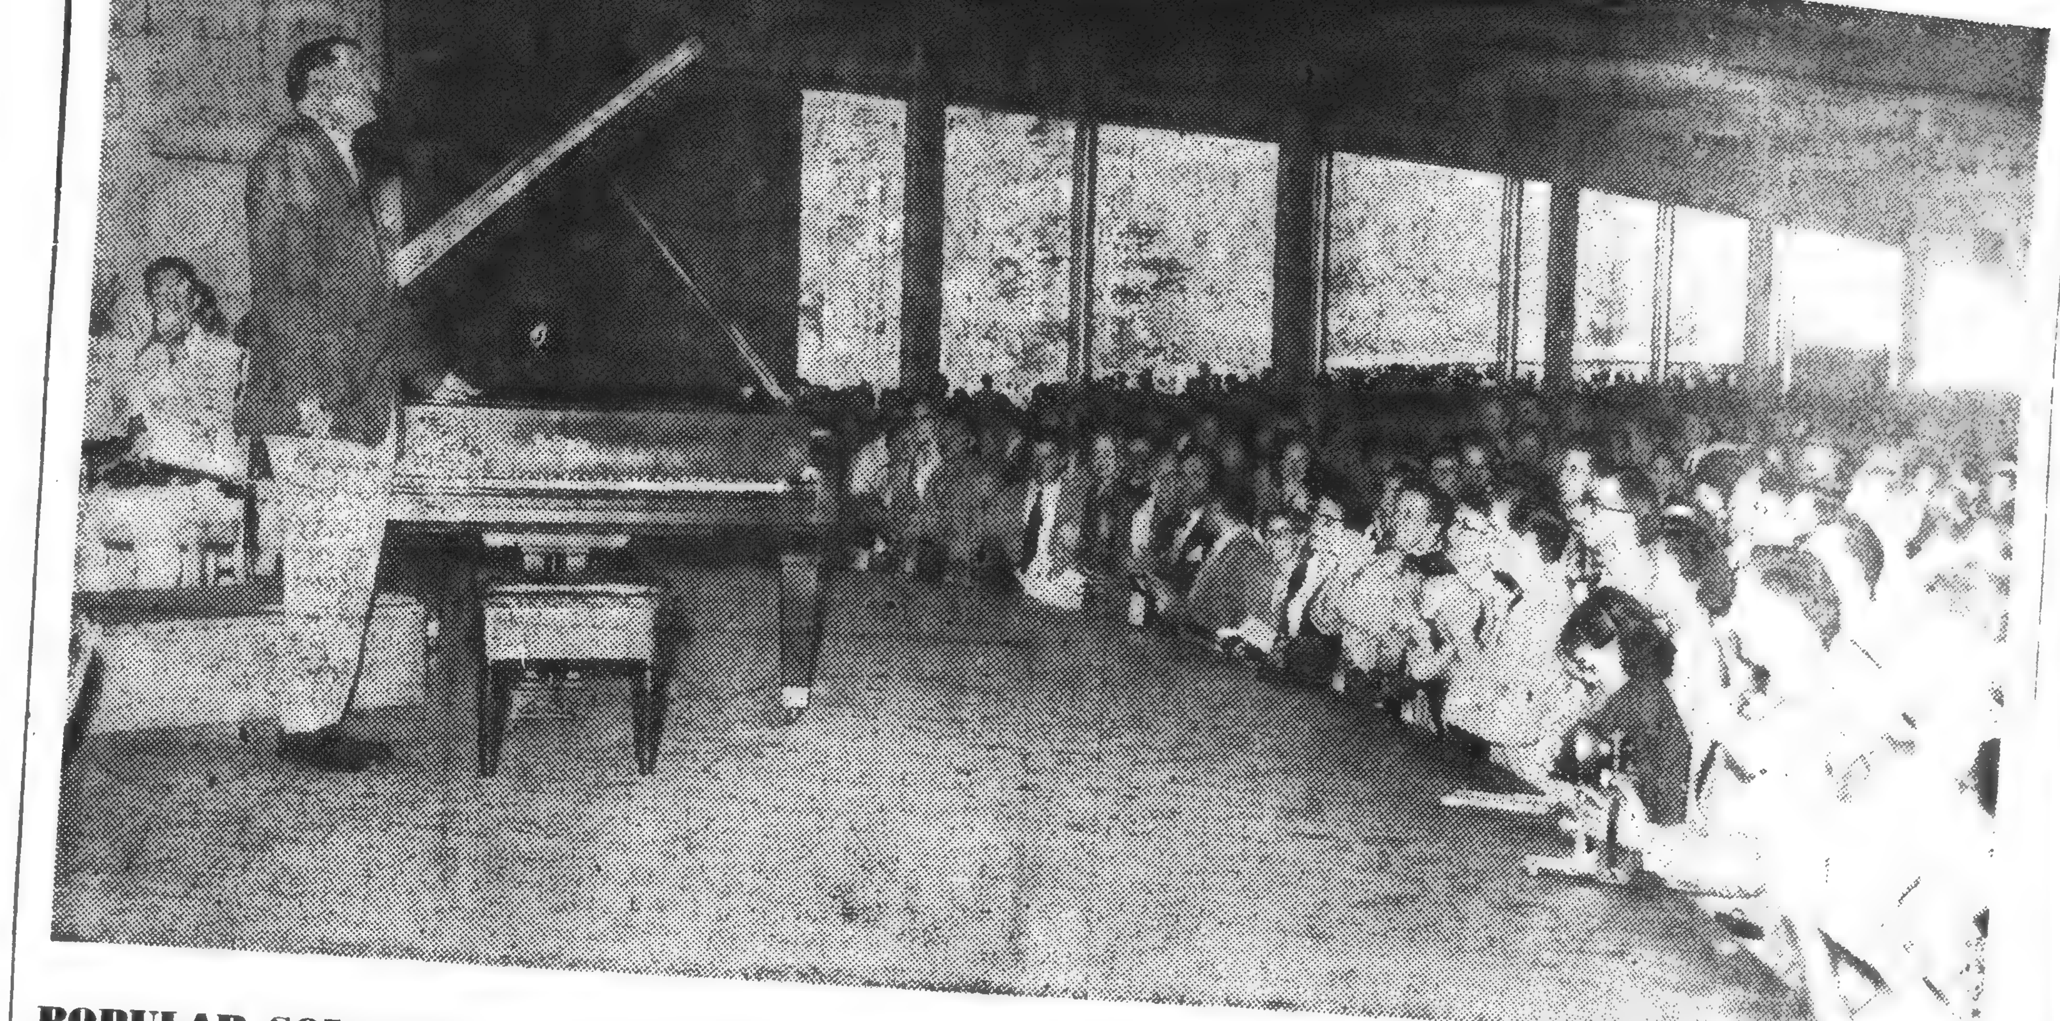
Modern Works Score

Last night's program, led by Charles Munch, the music director of the festival, consisted of two standard works, Schumann's "Manfred" Overture and Mendelssohn's "Italian" Symphony, and two contemporary works, Hindemith's Symphonic Metamorphosis of Themes by Weber and Lucas Foss' Piano Concerto No. 2, with the composer as soloist.

The modern works made the biggest hit with the audience. Mr. Foss, for instance, was recalled three times before the applause subsided. One listener, however, did not share the approbation. The concerto goes on for thirty-three minutes, with none of its fragmentary sections ever seeming to develop into anything that the mind can follow consecutively. Its emotions seemed to buck the musical materials without being properly conveyed by them.

In contrast, the Hindemith work was expert, sure and continuously interesting. Mr. Munch's reading of the standard works was warm and vigorous, but the "Italian" Symphony sounds far more beguiling when it is played with a less heavy hand.

Eagle Aug 3



POPULAR SOLOIST: Jorge Bolet, who played Tchaikovsky's piano concerto No. 1, in B flat minor at yesterday afternoon's concluding concert of the first series, acknowledges the ovation from part of the crowd of nearly 10,000 that turned out for the all-Tchaikovsky program in the Music Shed at Tanglewood. Mr. Bolet and the conductor, Pierre Monteux, were recalled to the platform five times by the large audience at the conclusion of the concerto.

Plouffe

TWO EXHIBITS OF SCULPTURE IN BERKSHIRE

Lenox Library Gardens and Tanglewood Hall Feature Works

By WAYNE C. SMITH

Lenox, Aug. 4—Sculpture is at present having its day in the sun, amidst all the activities in the other fields of artistic creation taking place in the Berkshires, through the third annual exhibition of sculpture currently being presented in the gardens of the Lenox Library and Franc Epping's one-man show of sculpture in the reception hall at Tanglewood.

Distinguished Artist

The sculpture show at the library is arranged by the Sculpture Workshop in Lenox, of which Miss Epping is the director, so this present elevation of sculpture into the Berkshire limelight is a credit to this distingushed artist.

Miss Epping studied at the Otis Art Institute, Los Angeles, Cal.; Corcoran Art Gallery, Washington, D. C. and Academy of Fine Arts, Munich, Germany, under Bernard Bleeker and Joseph Wackerle. She has exhibited at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, Museum of Modern Art and the World Fair in New York and the Pennsylvania Academy and Ellen Phillip Memorial International at Philadelphia. She is permanently represented in various museum, university and private collections.

Included in Miss Epping's one-man show at Tanglewood are eight of her sculptures and a half dozen drawings. The sculptures are in a variety of media and styles and demonstrate a commendable versitility and flexibility. The work ranges from carvings in wood and stone to modeled bronzes and hammered metals and from portraits in a conventional vein to experimental treatment of sheet metal.

Miss Epping's best efforts seem to be among the wood carvings in which she has uniquely combined into free sculpture archiac bas reliefs in which the body is shown in frontal view and the face in profile. Her highest achievements "Musician" in which the front view has this characteristic archaic treatment, yet the work is ingeniously created in the round with surprising views revealed as the work is circled.

Archaic Style

"Swinner" is a wood carving with a fine kinesthetic treatment of form to give it a gravity defying lightness, "Earthling" and "Young David" are distinguished works in the archaic style and "Pagan Angel" shows an extension of this style in the medium of hammered metal. "Scrub Woman" in marble has a largeness of forms, finely arranged, fitting for stone sculpture.

Prominent among the drawings are a study of a nude, a perspective study of a lying figure and a family trio.

Miss Epping's works included in the outdoor show at the library comprise a masterfully created figure of a girl entitled "Maia," "Seated Girl" in bronze and "Martyr" in Hornbeam which gives further variety to her representation.

There are 30 pieces of sculptures by 20 Berkshire sculptors in the annual exhibit and it is all in all a very fine representation of the art. There is a commendable search for the creative utilization of three dimentional forms demonstrated in the majority of the works. And there are some having a rewarding maturity of artistic insight and technical ability.

Some of the other more notable sculptures are "Dancer" in strap iron by Homer Gunn of Pittsfield, "Sisters" in Maryland marble by Robin Spry-Campbell of Putney, Vt., "Acrobats" in cocoabola and "Mother and Child" in ebony by Ethel P. Merlis of Lenox, "Turtle" from metal on foamglass by Martha Pancy of Lenox "Israel" in mahogany by Ruth Rosenfeld of Pittsfield and "The Flutist" by C. Torno Speyer of Stockbridge.

Attendance 4500 Ahead of 1952 For Week-End Festival Concerts

Attendance records for a first series of the Berkshire Festival in the Tanglewood Music Shed again were broken over the week end by an audience of 31,000, compared with 26,500 for the same series a year ago.

The largest jump was for the opening night, which this season attracted 10,300 and 8250 in 1952. The inference is that the Boston Symphony Orchestra management was wise in changing the opening from Thursday to Friday night. The Saturday crowd increased over that of 1952 from 10,050 to 10,800 and the Sunday audience from 8250 to 9900.

The figures are in addition to the 6350 members of the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, who attended student performances beginning Thursday night with the symphony concert, the public rehearsal Saturday morning and the organ recital by E. Power Biggs in the afternoon.

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE.

Three One-Act Operas Heard at Tanglewood

By Arthur Berger

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 4.—Chabrier's little comic opera, "Une Education Manquee," carried off honors last night in a triple bill of one-acters presented here in the theater concert hall by teh opera department of the Berkshire Music Center.

This was due in no small degree to its polished rendition by an excellent cast of three soloists, as well as to the charm of staging and sets which had the sophistication of an Alfred Lunt production. But these results were, in turn, one strongly suspects, available because of the intrinsic high quality of the work itself, which submitted to stylish execution and summoned forth the best effort of those involved.

Ancestor of Musical

Even with piano reduction—a decided handicap to the enjoyment of an opera—it was thoroughly captivating. It is a fluffy little piece that drew forth considerable laghter, an aristocratic ancestor of our Broadway musical. In fact, the proportion of spoken dialogue to music is much what it is on Broadway.

Last night's' singers did surprisingly well with the amount of speaking that fell to their lot. The work, however, lies precariously between a play and an opera, and Darius Milhaud, for this reason, recently set the dialogue to recitative, preserving Chabrier's' style. It would be very good to hear his version.

Any one who wonders why Chabrier's thoroughly delectable and musically elegant stage works are neglected in this country, may get some inkling from the subject matter of "Une Education Manquee." The spicy and suggestive little plot concerns an innocent and uninformed pair of newlyweds who only discover the secret of marriage when fear of lightning throws them into each other's arms.

Story "Quite Mild"

Compared with "Etoile," it is, I believe, quite mild. It would be rather a pity if it were, indeed, the demands of propriety on the Ameri[illegible] us from [illegible] overflowing so amply with melodic in [illegible]

Sara [illegible] Mc Collum [illegible] Cass [illegible] vealed [illegible] alities [illegible] and mu[illegible] Mc Collum [illegible] do. [illegible] of [illegible] Cass [illegible] gift as a [illegible] stage [illegible] John Blak[illegible] responsible [illegible] attractive [illegible] ning, bot[illegible] with adm[illegible] Reeses [illegible] under [illegible] Educat[illegible]

[illegible]

E[illegible] opera [illegible] Chabrier [illegible] bussy's [illegible] which [illegible] open[illegible] era by [illegible] Reform[illegible] scur[illegible] Sarah C[illegible] less [illegible] rep[illegible] al[illegible] it [illegible] cen[illegible] becau[illegible] sel[illegible] ity [illegible] degree of [illegible]

The D[illegible] fit of [illegible] men[illegible] Samuel K[illegible] music d[illegible] and [illegible] when [illegible] are re[illegible] ant in th[illegible] Gold[illegible] the scho[illegible] metn one [illegible] much from [illegible] use of [illegible] judicious [illegible] stance.

TANGLEWOOD BENEFIT PLANNED FOR THURSDAY

Tanglewood will be on parade next Thursday. The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, which includes afternoon festivities by every department of the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., a lawn supper and an evening concert by the Orchestra, will last from 6 P.M. to 11 P.M., followed by dancing on the lawn.

Isaac Stern, the celebrated violinist, will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D major with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, Music Director, conducting, at the evening concert.

The second half of the concert program, to be conducted by Leonard Bernstein head of the Berkshire Music Center's conducting classes,

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

10,300 Attend Berkshire Opening

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 1—A record crowd of 10,300 music lovers thronged the 6,000-seat music shed and surrounding grounds here Friday night for the opening of the Berkshire Festival, featuring the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Charles Munch conducting. The soloist was violinist Z[illegible] Francescatti who performed [illegible] popular Mendelssohn C[illegible], the same work he played [illegible] opening symphony concert [illegible] Lewisohn Stadium six weeks ago.

To [illegible] dramatic setting which [illegible] unique place provides as background for its music making, Munch chose a dramatic work with to begin this major series of concerts — the Beethoven Overture to "Leonore" No. 3, Op. 72. Listening to the stirring solo trumpet off stage for instance, with shadowy trees framing both sides of the open shed, with the fading dusk descending upon the hills, was quite a different experience from hearing the work in a conventional concert hall. The dynamics which Munch achieved in the "Leonore" gave what was probably an illusion of never having been so clearly defined, never so differentiated in color or range. He produced an extraordinary excitement with this work, an excitement undoubtedly facilitated by the acoustics, considered about perfect, of the shed designed by the late Finnish architect, Eliel Saarinen.

Following the intermission, Aaron Copland's suite from his ballet "Appalachian Spring" was heard, an apt choice considering the composer's long association with musical activities at Tanglewood, and also considering this work's "Americana" inspiration and its closeness in content to American tradition. It particularly seems to belong here in the [illegible] Nathaniel Hawthorne wrote his "House of Seven Gables" and where, six miles from here Melville wrote Moby Dick. Munch and the Bostonians rendered it with technical brilliance and appropriate sympathy. Ravel's "Bolero," featuring Harold Farberman playing the snare drum out front on the stage, brought the concert to a rousing conclusion.

Though concerts have been given for the past six weeks in the Theater-Concert Hall seating 1,100, this was the initial concert held in the big shed. The opening series continues over this week-end; the second and third series will take place over the next two consecutive week-ends.

Tanglewood

Tonight

8.30—Composers' forum with Aaron Copland, moderator, Chamber Music Hall. Open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Student Concert Tomorrow Night

Two members of the conducting faculty and pupils will lead the student orchestra tomorrow evening in the weekly concert in the Music Shed. Irving Fine, composer, assistant to Leonard Bernstein and faculty member at Brandeis University will conduct his own "Notturno" and Seymour Lipkin, pianist, who also assists Mr. Bernstein on the conducting faculty will take the baton for three dances from deFalla's "The Three-cornered Hat." Members of the Berkshire Music Center are invited.

The other numbers follow:

Overture to Marriage of Figaro ... Mozart
Alfred Strombergs of Halifax, N.S., conducting Violin Concerto in A major (first movement) .... Mozart
Nancy Heaton, soloist; Harold Blumenfeld conducting Variations on a theme of Hadyn .. Brahms
Herbert Blomstedt of Stockholm, Sweden, conducting

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Monteux Leads Berkshire Concert

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 3—Threatening skies notwithstanding, a record opening Sunday crowd of 9,900 arrived here yesterday afternoon for the Berkshire festival concert conducted by Pierre Monteux. This was Monteux's only appearance with the Boston Symphony during the three major week-ends of the festival, the first of which was concluded yesterday.

The veteran French maestro's all-Tchaikovsky program climaxed three days of music making which attendance-wise broke records for the 16-year old festival's concerts. Altogether, counting the 6,000 who heard each concert from a seat in the big shed, plus those thousands who paid $2 apiece to hear the music from the grounds outside, 31,000 people attended this first major series of the festival. Aided by a perfect summer evening, Saturday's concert, conducted by Charles Munch drew the biggest number for any single event, 10,800.

Those who came Sunday were rewarded during the concert by having bright sunlight replace the dubious gray dampness of the early afternoon. Even an uninhibited full-throated bird lodged in the shed voiced its approval as the change became apparent.

The audience, however, understandably did not relish hearing the Tchaikowsky Fifth Symphony embellished by chirping counterpoint.

Bolet Plays With Warmth

Such distraction was the more noticeable because of the beauty which Monteux re-created, both in sound and content, from the symphony. His opening "Serenade for String Orchestra" was on the same high level. For the concluding work, the B Flat Minor Piano Concerto, Jorge Bolet was the soloist. His conception, though poetic and romanticized, was at the same time, vigorous and technically emancipated. He brought virility and warmth to it, not just an objective virtuoso brilliance.

Foss Concerto Saturday

The young composer, Lukas Foss, was the soloist Saturday night in a performance of his own revised Second Piano Concerto. Foss' playing of the work, with Charles Munch on the podium for the Bostonians, was eminently more impressive than the concerto itself. This is a piece which appears on first hearing to have little to say with much ado in the saying.

New Neighbors at Tanglewood Concert

Plouffe

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar B. Stern of New Orleans, right, who recently bought a summer home on the New Lenox Road, attend a Festival concert with Mrs. Victor Elsas, formerly of New Orleans, now of New York. Mrs. Stern, daughter of the late Julius Rosenwald, philanthropist, is well-known for her musical interests, including the New Orleans Symphony Orchestra.

Tanglewood Opening Sets All-Time Record

albany 8/4

BY EDGAR S. VAN OLINDA

The first of a series of three week-end concerts in the large music shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Charles Munch established an all-time record for attendance at Tanglewood with an audience of 10,000 for Sunday afternoon's all-Tchaikowsky program, with the eminent French guest conductor, Pierre Monteux, directing the 104-piece orchestra.

The paid aattendance for the [illegible] concerts of 1953 which [illegible]ented Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoon was the largest in the history of the Berkshire Music [illegible] since it was established in 1934, a grand total of [illegible]

Friday and Saturday night's programs included works by Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Copland, Ravel, Schumann, Foss and Hindemith. Zino Francescatti was the guest soloist Friday night with the orchestra in a magnificent performance of the Mendelssohn violin concerto. Saturday night's soloist was the young pianist-composer, Lukas Foss in an [illegible] and provocative rendition of his own piano Concerto No. 2.

BOLET IS SOLOIST

Sunday afternoon's concert, conducted by Pierre Monteux included Serenade for Strings, Symphony, No. 5 and the Piano Concerto, No. 1 by Tchaikowsky magnificently played by the French pianist, Jorge Bolet. Mr. Bolet was recalled to the front of the stage for six bows at the conclusion of the concerto, the usual staid New England audience so far forgetting its accustomed decorum as to indulge in vociferous cheering, puncutated by whistles of approval from the younger members of the audience.

Plouffe

C'EST MAGNIFIQUE: Conductor Pierre Monteux and Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, left, exchange congratulations after the all-Tchaikovsky program at the Tanglewood Music Shed yesterday afternoon which attracted 9900 music lovers.

[246]

Berkshire Music Festival: N.Y. Journal-American Aug 2

10,300 at 1st Concert

By Miles Kastendieck

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., Aug 1 — Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony orchestra opened the major part of the 16th Berkshire festival in the music shed last night.

A program of familiar works found a record-breaking crowd of 10,300 people completely absorbed in everything played. The weather was ideal.

Beethoven's "Leonore" overture; Mendelssohn's violin concerto with Zino Francescatti as soloist, Copland's "Appalachian Spring," and Ravel's "Bolerro" comprised the program.

To Munch's credit, he included an American contemporary work in the list.

Playing the Beethoven with gusto, Munch made it a theatrical piece. This probably justified some sudden changes of tempo and certainly heightened the effectiveness of the performance.

Ravel High Spot

The Mendelssohn received a "classic" interpretation in the French tradition. Francescatti played with all the refinement and elegance characteristic of him, as he had in this same concerto at the opening of the Lewisohn Stadium concerts.

For this listener the Copland had special interest. It stands the test of almost a decade remarkably well. As a choice bit of Americana and one of Copland's truly notable scores, it sounds as fresh and as beautiful as at its premiere.

Munch played with understanding though his pacing might be open to question.

For the crowd, the Ravel was unquestionably the high point emotionally. A spontaneous cheer rose after its crashing finale—a tribute to the kind of tension Ravel and Munch generated.

In recognition of his role in the piece, the snare drummer Harold Farberman stood upstage as a featured soloist. Needless to say the performance was fabulous.

Berkshire Festival: N.Y. J.A. Aug. 3

Monteux's Tchaikowsky

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, Mass., Aug. 3.—Pierre Monteux made his only appearance at the Berkshire Festival yesterday afternoon. He played Tchaikowsky for an audience of 9,900, smaller than expected because of rain in the morning.

Charles Munch conducted the Saturday night concert for a crowd of 10,800. His program included the first performance of Lukas Foss's Second Piano Concerto in its revised form.

Though this concerto has gained color in revision, it is still handicapped by undistinguished material. It qualifies also as an old-fashioned virtuoso piece. Its convulsive character leaves the listener unmoved for all the syncopated rhythms and supercharged vigor. It fails to fill the promise of the orchestral introduction.

Disappointment

Foss was soloist in his own concerto. He played brilliantly, carrying much more conviction through his performance than through the music. Munch and the orchestra worked with him handsomely. All their efforts, however, could not put over the work successfully.

An impassioned performance of Schumann's overture to "Manfred", a lucid account of Mendelssohn's "Italian" symphony, and a persuasive presentation of Hindemith's symphonic metamorphosis of themes by Carl Maria Von Weber rounded out the program. It was curiously devised and left a sense of disappointment at the close.

The Tchaikowsky program listed the serenade for string orchestra, the Fifth Symphony.

Monteux's way with Tchaikowsky was exceptionally musical. He helped restore the true beauty of this beloved music through his keen appreciation of musical values and his wonderful sense of orchestral balance.

In the playing of the Boston symphony strings, Monteux achieved the epitome of charm in the serenade. The response of the orchestra also made possible an unusually artistic recreation of the symphony.

All Jorges Bolet's clean-cut, expert fingerwork made his solo performance of the concerto sound self-conscious. It was as though he cared chiefly for the virtuoso aspect of the work and stood aloof temperamentally from its beauty and warmth. The real Tchaikowsky was presented in the first part of the concert.

Eagle

Tourists Swamp County; Week-End Records Fall

Aug. 3

The Berkshire County tourist trade enjoyed what appears to have been a record week end and is headed for an even better one, according to all indications.

31,000 at Tanglewood

Record attendance of 31,000 at Tanglewood on the first of the big three week ends gave Berkshire's summer industry a healthy jolt of tourist dollars for rooms and meals.

And John F. Downing, director of the Berkshire Hills Conference, said today that the coming week end looks even better.

Rooms were so scarce in the Berkshire County area Saturday night that the staff at the Chamber of Commerce information booth on South Street was sending people to Springfield and Albany for accommodations.

James H. Lucas, director of the Pittsfield Chamber, said it was the first time in the seven-year history of the service provided by his organization that all listed accommodations were filled by midafternoon Saturday.

Lucas said all tourist homes, motels, inns and cabin colonies listed with the Chamber were completely filled by about 4 PM Saturday. Mrs. Louise Sanford's staff in the South Street booth found accommodations for 638 persons Saturday.

Albany Benefits

Efforts to place late arrivals in the Lebanon Valley area across the mountain were fruitless. Mr. Lucas said a motel in that area reported a capacity crowd of 100 and said it was referring its refusals to Albany.

Mr. Downing and his Berkshire Hills Conference staff were busy again at the Courthouse this morning working on reservations for the next week end. Downing said member listings in the Conference were all filled over the week end.

In Lenox, the Kiwanis information booth attendants reported nearly all rooms gone by 5 PM Friday, and a complete sellout by 10.30 Saturday morning. The booth stayed open until 5 Saturday giving out information to tourists.

Similar reports came from the Lee Chamber of Commerce booth. Mrs. Kathryn G. Ford, attendant at the booth, said her listings were used by 4 Saturday afternoon when she started sending tourists to Otis and Tyringham.

Restaurants in Pittsfield and surrounding communities also enjoyed a boom week end, with near capacity crowds for all three meals.

Things were so busy at the Yellow Aster Restaurant on South Street that at one time over the week end there was even a waiting line for parking.

Williamstown police reported heavy traffic, and information booth officials in that town said they found rooms for 106 persons Saturday night.

JGUST 6, 1953 NYHT

Tanglewood Plans Benefit

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 5.—The annual "Tanglewood on Parade" program for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center will be held at Tanglewood Thursday afternoon and evening, Aug. 13, rain or shine. The principal event, in the Music Shed at 8:15, is a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in which Charles Munch will conduct Handel's Water Music and Beethoven's violin concerto, with Isaac Stern as soloist, and Leonard Bernstein will conduct excerpts from Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess." Leontyne Price, William Warfield and the Berkshire Festival chorus will sing in the Gershwin music.

The first part of the program, after a fanfare and welcoming address by Boris Goldovsky, head of the Center's opera department, will consist of three simultaneous events at 6 o'clock. A student orchestra will play in the Music Shed; Jan Meyerowitz's opera, "Bad Boys in School," and Alan Sapp's cantata, "Little Boy Lost," will be performed in the Theater-Concert Hall, and chamber music will be played in the Chamber Music Hall. There will also be performances of opera scenes, for boxholders and reserved seat patrons only, at 4 o'clock in Tanglewood's formal garden.

Tickets, from $2.50 to $5, may be pbtained at the box office in Tanglewood (telephone, Lenox 600).

N.Y.J.A. Aug

Miles Kastendieck:

Festival Broadens Scope With 20th-Century Music

MILES KASTENDIECK

CHARLES MUNCH broke with Tanglewood tradition last week. In offering a program of 20th-Century music during the "minor" festival weekends, he broadened the scope of these concerts, setting a precedent worth following up in next year's Berkshire Festival. Traditionally the first three weekends have catered to 18th-Century music.

While much might be said in defense of the more intimate concerts centering on Bach, Mozart and Haydn, they cultivate a specialized interest. Hearing the music of these composers played by an orchestra commensurate with the size of 18th-Century instrumental groups has definite advantages. Adhering to such a pattern gives the festival a specific policy.

Nevertheless, since the festival as a whole has never been dedicated to singleness of purpose—other than support of the Berkshire Music Center—the expansion suggested in Munch's inclusion of a contemporary program deserves endorsement.

[illegible]

30 Years Old

Music of the present century is still clamoring for rehearing. Having been introduced, many a work has been shelved even though well received at its premiere. A case in point is Milhaud's "Creation of the World" played last Sunday. Many people probably found this a novelty though it is 30 years old this year. There was no doubt of its appeal at this performance.

Munch moved cautiously

Soprano Theresa Green [illegible] soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on [illegible] evening at the Berkshire Festival Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Music Telegram 8/13

Berkshires, And Melody In the Rain

By ROBERT BAGAR.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 1.—With an attendance of 31,000 for the weekend of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival, a figure handsomely topping any other for a similar period, the proceedings are off this summer at a record-breaking pace. There might have been even more listeners had there been no rain yesterday, a [illegible] that like an imp of the performance fell steadily until almost concert time at 2:30 p.m.

The conductor yesterday was Pierre Monteux, a name familiar to all music lovers, particularly those of Boston, San Francisco, and New York, not to omit capitals throughout the musical circuit.

Soaring Poetry.

Mr. Monteux, choosing Tschaikovsky as his high priest du jour, came up with three of the Russian composer's time-honored ceremonials—and you will please pardon my styling them so. They were the Serenade for String Orchestra, the Fifth Symphony, and the Piano Concerto No. 1, with Jorge Bolet, Cuban pianist, as soloist.

Hardly less ceremonious himself, Mr. Monteux matched Tschaikovsky measure-for-measure in pleasing his listeners. However, his is not the Tschaikovsky—so grossly misquoted by some others—of the schmalzy turn of phrase and the maudlin tears. Rather does this conductor regard him in a far more humane, as a man gifted with moments of soaring poetry and with a melodic line that breathes deep and long to exhale not cheapness, but compassion and mellow understanding.

Thus, did Mr. Monteux discuss the Symphony and the Concerto. In the latter Mr. Bolet saw eye-to-eye with the batonist's measure-for-measure view of Peter Ilyitch, and what else could come of that triple alliance of musical spirits, except a grateful, benign account of the piece?

Musically Rewarding.

On Saturday evening Charles Munch and the Bostonians, not quite the sensitive entente of the preceding night, communicated little of technical or interpretive excitement in their performance of Schumann's "Manfred" Overture and Mendelssohn's "Italian" Symphony. Far closer to earlier excellences, however, was their account of the Hindemith "Symphonic Metamorphosis of Themes by Weber."

Hindemith's imaginative treatment of the Weber morceaux—to the point of altering them to suit his fancy—proved a challenge that the orchestra took up enthusiastically, an attitude healthy, on general principles, and rewarding in musical ones.

The remaining item in the program, actually scheduled for the second spot, was Lukas Foss' Second Piano Concerto, a work premiered in Boston, November 1951, and since revised.

Much as I admire the numerous talents of Mr. Foss, who was the soloist, I cannot say that this Concerto of his reflects more than an iota of them. It is a garrulous work, rather given to lengthy display, uneven and cumbersome. I get no feeling of freshness in any of the music, although the performance by Mr. Foss and the orchestra was brilliant enough almost to take the place of such a thing. And for that brilliance, at least, there was long and clamorous applause.

'Porgy and Bess' Eagle 8/13

Scenes From Musical Comedy To Feature Tanglewood Show

TANGLEWOOD — The complete program was announced today for Tanglewood on Parade, the benefit for the Berkshire Music Center Aug. 13.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will be conducted by Charles Munch in Beethoven's Concerto in D major, with Isaac Stern as soloist. The program will open with Handel's "Water Music."

Scenes 1 and 2 from the second act of George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess" will occupy the second half of the program, conducted by Leonard Bernstein, with William Warfield and his wife, Leontyne Price in the title roles. They will sing "It Ain't Necessarily So," "What You Want With Bess," "The Street Cries," and "I Love You, Porgy."

After the concert in the Music Shed, Anna Russell, concert comedienne, will award 40 door prizes.

After fanfare at 5.45, Boris Goldovsky, head of the school's opera department, will welcome the audience. From 6 to 7.15 the five departments of the Berkshire Music Center will give simultaneous demonstrations in the various Tanglewood buildings. The chorus will sing during the supper hour, when the audience is invited to picnic on the lawn. The evening will conclude with dancing on the lawn near the main house, accompanied by two pianos.

For holders of reserved and box seats a special opera performance will be presented at 4 in the formal gardens of the estate.

Tickets are on sale at the box office.

Opera Eagle Aug. 4

Rarely-Heard One-Acters Delight Concert Hall Crowd

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

Three rarely-heard one-act operas were presented at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood last night by the students of Department IV. The presentation was directed by Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department, and his assistant, Sarah Caldwell.

Gluck's "The Drunkard Reformed" and Chabrier's "An Incomplete Education" are comic acts while Debussy's "The Prodigal Son" is a simple presentation of the Biblical episode.

* * *

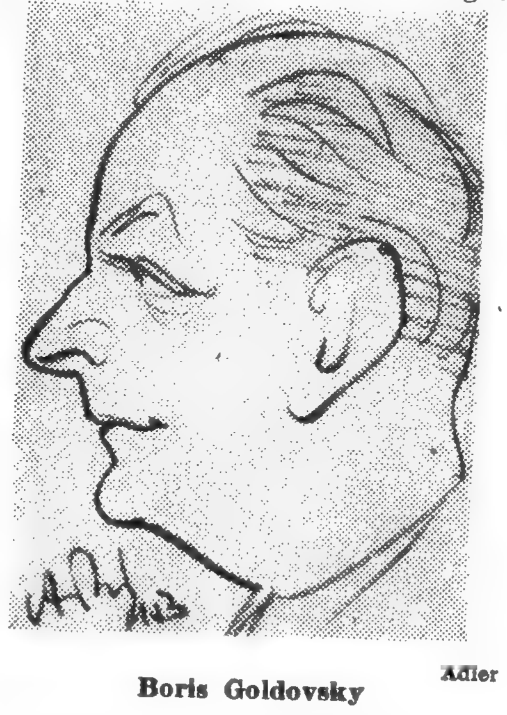
SANTAYANA is said to have considered himself a student to his last day. Thus, while the vocalists on last night's program are in no sense in the great philosopher's class, it becomes difficult to know just when a student ascends to the fulfillment of his career. Some of last night's singers are recognized and appear in established opera companies, which, of course, accounts for the calibre of the performances. Even with such short time for preparation and with the limited facilities the performances are on an exceptional plane and gave tremendous pleasure to the audience which packed the theatre-concert hall.

* * *

Anne English was Lia, the mother, in the "Infant Prodigue," Lee Cass, Simeon, the father, and Robert Simpson, Azael, the title role. There was a small troupe of dancers, who, Mr. Goldovsky explained in his opening explanatory talk, are not a part of the school but who volunteered for the assignment. The stage setting by John Blankenship was bare except for a simulated uneven terrain. Two slender stage-high trees, with the bark removed, and crossed at the top by another, were set directly in the front of the proscenium to form an effective frame for the action. The customers by Leo Van Witsen were plain and severe but the colors underscored the drama: the son wore a gray tunic with a shawl and headdress of darker gray, the mother garnet and gray, the father aqua with cocoa.

THE DANCING was not professional but the various tableaux offered added to the interest. Only this opera had the assistance of an orchestra in the pit. Samuel Krachmalnick conducted a group from Department I of the Berkshire Music Center; for the other two works Mr. Goldovsky provided his inimitably orchestral-type accompaniment at the piano. The singers, aided by scenic devices, created an atmosphere of pathos and at the climax, a mood of exultation was achieved.

The Chabrier work has a Noel Coward-ish sophisticated plot in which Sara Mae Endich took the part of the bride, Helene de la Cerisaie, on the wedding night; John McCollum, the bridegroom, Gontran de Boismassif, and Lee Cass as the bridegroom's uninformed tutor. This was high comedy and the acting as well as the singing was infectiously exhilarating. A duet between the bridegroom and his tutor near the start of the opera was top theatrical business. John Blankenchip again did the setting and lighting. He used a translucent plastic cord which he stretched over several uniform and separated frames with appropriate spaces for doors. These caught cleverly introduced lights to take on a remotely suggestive glow for a novel and effective background. The Gluck work as to plot or music had the least to commend it.



Adler

Boris Goldovsky

10,300 Hear Concert At Tanglewood

Aug. 1 Waterbury American

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 1 — The first concert of the annual three-week series by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the shed here at Tanglewood was presented last evening before 10,300 music lovers, the largest opening night attendance on record.

Marking the first performance under the changed system of presenting concerts on Friday evenings instead of Thursdays as was the custom for many years, the increased attendance of 2,000 more than opening night last year shows the wisdom of making the change.

The concert under the excellent conducting of Charles Munch was a delightful program from the opening notes of the Beethoven "Overture to 'Leonore' No. 3" to the closing of Ravel's "Bolero" which brought the audience to its feet with applause. We have heard the "Bolero" played many times, and in this shed, but those who listened to the Boston Symphony Orchestra play it last evening must have been well aware as this listener was that they were having a unique experience. This was a playing of the "Bolero" as one had never heard it before. It was an experience to remember for a life-time.

The strings were superb last evening in their playing of the "Leonore" and Zino Francescatti, playing the Mendelssohn "Concerto for Violin and Orchestra, in E minor," gave a beautiful performance in this selection with its ample solo parts. When intermission came the audience showed by its applause that it appreciated the high quality of performance by both orchestra and soloist.

Perfect Night

It was a perfect concert night in the Berkshires, though there was a snap in the air. The audience enjoyed wandering about the spacious lawns during intermission getting itself into a proper mood for the Copeland "Appalachian Spring" with which Mr. Munch began the second half of the concert. The orchestra played it beautifully and during parts of it one was half tempted to get up and dance about the lawn, almost as the composer, who was in the audience, meant for it to be.

When the orchestra finished, composer Copeland, who is on the staff of the Music School here, was called to the front of the shed by the conductor.

But it was the concluding "Bolero," perhaps, that made the greatest impression on the thousands here last night. Mr. Munch arranged the orchestra with the solo drummer right in front of the podium. From the first restrained playing and conducting with which Mr. Munch began the number one became aware that this would be no ordinary performance of what frequently is just another noisy selection on a program. The development just grew and grew as soloist and orchestra built the "Bolero" up to the final climax. When it was over, you knew this was one for your book of memories.

The Saturday concert tonight will present Schumann's "Overture to Byron's Manfred," and Lukas Foss' "Piano Concerto No. 2" with the composer as soloist. Following intermission Mr. Munch will present Mendelssohn's "Italian Symphony" and Hindemith's "Symphonic Metamorphosis of Themes by Carl Maria von Weber." The Sunday concert with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor will present an all-Tchaikovsky program. The Sunday concert will begin at 2:30 o'clock because the first half will be broadcast.

S. M.

TRIO OF OPERAS IN PRESENTATION AT TANGLEWOOD

Union 8/14

Debussy, Gluck, Chabrier Works Delight; Especially Fine Voices Heard

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 3—The opera department of the Berkshire Music Center directed by Boris Goldovsky with the assistance of the orchestra of Department 1, directed by Samuel Krachmalnick, presented three seldom heard one-act operas by Gluck, Debussy and Chabrier tonight.

Precedent Broken

Breaking the precedent, the Debussy "L'Enfant Prodigue" was sung in French. Mr. Goldovsky feels that opera in English is now basic in the United States and that the opera department has done its part in making this a fact. Thus, he reasons, it is now right to give some operas in the original language.

They do things well in the opera department. Settings and costumes are always imaginative as well as functional and each singer knows his part perfectly—and probably the other parts as well. There is no prompting or gazing at the conductor and the result is a smooth, well integrated performance with all three operas splendidly sung. The department has some unusually fine voices.

The three operas all had a certain Gallic charm and wit and, in the case of Debussy in his delineation of the lovely old Bible story, there was a depth of feeling and beauty of verse that left one entirely satisfied.

The first opera was Gluck's "The Drunkard Reformed," to give it the English translation recently completed by Giovanni Cardelli. This is a charming little story about the efforts of a wife and daughter to reform the drunken father. There was some fine singing by Beatrice Krebs as the mother. The role of the daughter was handsomely sung by Theresa Green, of whom more will be heard. The drunken father was convincingly sung by Alvin Edmonson. Robert Rue as Hasper, another drunk, revealed a fine baritone voice.

Prodigal Sympathetic

The tale of Leah, Simon and Azael was performed with nobility and sympathetic understanding. The orchestra played well under Mr. Krachmalnick's direction. The finest singing of the performance was provided by Anne English. Lee Cass, as the father, Simeon, was dignified and vocally satisfying. While Robert Simpson as Azael, the prodigal, offered a well-sung and sympathetic portrayal. It was a performance as fine as any we have ever witnessed here.

The third opera, Chabrier's "An Incomplete Education" was sung in the English text of Henry Reese. It is high comedy and some may have regarded it as a bit risque, for Mr. Reese's translation is earthy. It deals with the tribulation of a bride and her husband, neither of whom know what marriage is all about, but they find out in time.

Bridegroom John McCollum made a handsome figure and sang well. Sara Mae Endich has a beautiful voice and is attractive. Her portrayal of the bride was a delight. Lee Cass as the slightly inebriated tutor, was superb.

Mr. Goldovsky accompanied the Gluck and Chabrier operas on the piano. He directed all three operas. It was an entirely successful endeavor and one which revealed the splendid work accomplished by the opera department.

Notes and Footnotes

Eagle 8/5

THOUGHTS WHILE ROCKING: The Tanglewood Music Shed is so immense that if you sit more than half way back it looks as if the orchestra is a beat behind the conductor. Takes that long for the sound to reach you . . . Jacob's Pillow box office slightly miffed at phone call from lady on day they were sold out. She asked, "Have you any seats under cover?" Seems she was not implying under-the-counter deal, but thought she was connected with Tanglewood. By "under cover" she meant inside the Shed . . . Also at the Pillow, a

[248]

~~3?2~~ 1953

~~Standard Times~~

Dr. Koussevitzky Will Be Honored

8/2

Memorial Concert Set at Tanglewood

Special to The Standard-Times

LENOX, Aug. 1 — Memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, for 25 years conductor of the Boston Symphony, will be honored here next Saturday night at a concert conducted by Leonard Bernstein. Charles Munch, Berkshire Musical Festival director, will conduct next weekend's other two major concerts at Tanglewood.

Friday night's Tanglewood program will consist entirely of Berlioz' dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," which the Boston Symphony gave in its complete version with chorus and soloists last Winter for the first time.

Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, will sing the alto role; Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone, will be the bass soloist, and John McCollum, of Tuckahoe, N. Y., a student of the Berkshire Music Center, the Summer school of music maintained here by the orchestra, will be the tenor. The Festival Chorus, composed of students of the music center, will assist.

All Tchaikovsky

Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor at tomorrow's 2:30 p. m. concert, part of which will be broadcast by CBS. The all-Tchaikovsky program will include "Serenade for Strings," Symphony No. 5 in E minor and Piano Concerto No. 1 in B-flat minor with Jorge Bolet as soloist.

Mr. Bernstein's concert next Saturday night will be a memorial to Dr. Koussevitzky, the guiding spirit behind the Tanglewood annual festival and school activities. The program will open with Moussorgsky's Prelude to "Khovanstchina," which Dr. Koussevitzky performed many times. Miss Tourel will be soloist both in Ravel's "Sherherazade" and in Mahler's Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection") with chorale finale. The soprano role in the latter will be sung by Theresa Green of Baltimore, a Berkshire Music Center student.

Gregor Piatigorsky will be soloist in Darius Milhaud's Concerto for Cello, No. 1 on next Sunday afternoon's program, and will team with Joseph de Pasquale, violist of the Boston Symphony, in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote." The portion of the Sunday concert, 2:30 to 4 p. m., will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as commentator.

Program Announced

Complete programs for next weekend's concerts follow:

Friday—"Romeo and Juliet," dramatic symphony by Berlioz (soloists: Jennie Tourel, Nicola Moscona and John McCollum).

Saturday (Koussevitzky Memorial Concert)—Prelude to "Khovanstchina" by Moussorgsky; "Sheherazade" for soprano and orchestra by Ravel (soloists: Jennie Tourel and Theresa Green).

Sunday—Symphony No. 5, in B-flat, by Schubert; Adagio for Strings by Barber; "Don Quixote" (with cello and violin solo) by Strauss (soloists: Gregor Piatigorsky and Joseph De Pasquale); Concerto for Cello, No. 1, by Milhaud (soloist: Gregor Piatigorsky), and Second Suite from "Bacchus et Ariane" by Roussel.

The week at Tanglewood offers almost continuous music, with all departments, student orchestra, chamber music, chorus, opera and Tanglewood Study Group in full operation. Of special interest will be presentation of three one-act operas by Gluck, Debussy and Chabrier announced for a single hearing at 8:30 p. m. Monday.

These rarely-heard works, produced by Boris Goldovsky, head of the Berkshire Music Center's opera department, are open to those who help support the school by joining the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, all seats reserved.

One-Act Operas

Gluck's "L'Yvrogne Corrige" (The Drunkard Reformed), will have the English translation of Giovanni Cardelli which G. Schirmer, Inc. is publishing. Originally in two acts when it had its Vienna premiere in April, 1760, it has a libretto by L. Anseaume. So far as is known this will be its first American production.

Debussy's "L'Enfant Prodigue" (The Prodigal Son), to be given in French, had its premiere in operatic form at Covent Garden, London, Feb. 28, 1910, with a libretto by E. Guinand. It was the composer's Prix de Rome cantata, published in 1884. Boston had the first American production. in 1910 in French.

Chabrier's "Une Education Manquee" (An Incomplete Education) will be sung in the English translation of Henry Reese. With a text by Eugene Leterrier and Albert Vanloo, it was originally privately produced at the Cercle de la Presse, Paris, with piano accompaniment on May 1, 1879, given first with orchestra in the French capital in 1913.

For their presentation in Tanglewood's Theater - Concert Hall, the three one-acters will be staged by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell, performed by student casts with a student orchestra. Scenery will be by John Blankenchip and costumes by Leo Van Witsen.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
POST

JUL 26 1953

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Francescatti to Play in Berkshires

With Charles Munch conducting the 104-piece Boston Symphony, the Berkshire Festival opens its major series of concerts in the 6,000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Friday night. The initial event will feature violinist, Zino Francescatti, as soloist in the Mendelssohn E Minor Concerto.

Also to be heard are Aaron Copland's ballet suite, "Appalachian Spring"; Beethoven's Overture to "Leonore," No. 3, and Ravel's "Bolero."

The most provocative work of the second concert in the initial series, Saturday night, Aug. 1, will be the Piano Concerto No. 2 by the young American composer, Lukas Foss, with the composer as soloist. Mendelssohn's "Italian" Symphony and Hindemith's "Symphonic Metamorphosis of Themes by Weber" and Schumann's Overture to "Manfred" make up the rest of this program.

Pierre Monteux conducts the concluding concert Sunday, Aug. 2, at 2:30. This will be an all-Tchaikovsky program featuring Jorge Bolet, Cuban pianist, as soloist in the B-Flat Minor Concerto. The Fifth Symphony in E Minor and Serenade for Strings complete the evening.

The two remaining week-ends of music in the festival shed follow consecutively, each consisting of three concerts. Among the most important events of the Aug. 7th week-end is the performance of Gustav Mahler's "Resurrection" Symphony with chorus and soloists and with Leonard Bernstein conducting.

Brahms' "Requiem" with Lois Marshall, soprano, and with William Warfield, baritone, as soloists, will open the final week-end Friday, Aug. 14.

[From Late Editions of Yesterday's TIMES.]

TANGLEWOOD SEES WORK OF STUDENTS

Aug. 5

One-Act Operas by Debussy, Gluck and Chabrier Given Before 'Friends' of Center

By ROSS PARMENTER

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 3—The institution of Tanglewood is like a medal. The professional side, which consists of the Berkshire Festival, was turned to a vast public over the week-end. Tonight the other side, the work of the students of the Berkshire Music Center, was shown to the 1,200 "friends" of the center who filled the theatre-concert hall.

What the students presented was a bill of three one-act operas of French origin—Gluck's "L'Ivrogne Corrige," which was presented in English as "The Drunkard Reformed"; Debussy's L'Enfant Prodigue," done in the original French, and Chabrier's "Une Education Manquee," given in English as "An Incomplete Education."

Accompaniment for Operas

Boris Goldovsky, director of the center's opera department, provided the piano accompaniment for the Gluck and Chabrier operas. The Debussy work had an orchestral accompaniment provided by the leading student orchestra under the sensitive and skillful direction of one of the student conductors, Samuel Krachmalnick.

Pictorially, dramatically and musically, all three productions were excellently integrated. And each was done in a different style. The team of John Blankenchip and Leo van Witsen, who designed the sets and costumes, contrived a medieval décor for the Gluck, a Biblical one for the Debussy and a stylized, Napoleonic one for the Chabrier.

The differentiation of style extended to the acting and the musical approach as well, so that the evening was pleasantly varied. It was a demonstration of the verstility of the students and those guiding them.

The Gluck was the least successful. One keenly missed the beautiful orchestral score. There was some jarring in the transitions from spoken dialogue to arias. But there was some pleasant singing, especially by Theresa Green and Beatrice Krebs. As workshop productions go, it was definitely superior.

Credit to Goldovsky

The other productions did not need to be considered on a student level. They would have done credit to any professional group. The sincerity, the effective grouping, the surging orchestra and especially the moving and effective singing of Anne English, Lee Cass and Robert Simpson made "L'Enfant Prodigue" an absorbing experience. Mr. Goldovsky is to be congratulated for making what was originally a cantata seem so satisfying a work for the musical theatre.

Mr. Cass doffed his Biblical robes to appear as a quixotic and delightfully humorous professor in the ensuing Chabrier work. Here, he was an accomplished comedian who contributed a lot to the success of the witty work.

Sara Mae Endich, as the shy bride, and John McCollum, as the even shyer bridegroom, were also first rate, singing clearly and sweetly, and acting with taste and style, so that the joke never wore thin.

The Chabrier was the surprise of the program, for it is less well known than the two other pieces. It has rare charm and it sent the audience away with the same feeling one has so often after a Mozart opera—that of amusement and a remembrance of the sweetness and humanity of the music.

31,000 at Tan[illegible] For Week-En[illegible]

Amer

Aug 3

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 2 Pierre Monteux and the Boston Symphony Orchestra drew 9900 people to th[illegible] Tanglewood shed this afternoon [illegible] a memorable concert devoted to the music of Tschaikowsky. Th[illegible] three week-end concerts making up the first series have [illegible] played to a total of 31,000 p[illegible] which, we are told is anothe[illegible] time record.

This was a sure fire program one that really couldn't mi[illegible] matter how handled. But the [illegible]ardry of the 78-year-old F[illegible] Conductor Pierre Monteux [illegible] this music to its greatest he[illegible]

[249]

Tanglewood: A Musical Mecca

Tens of thousand of students, music lovers and plain tourists from all over the world stream into the central valley of Massachusetts' Berkshire hills each July and August for the Tanglewood concerts of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

The public concerts are but a small part of the activities centered at the historic estate, overlooking the lake where Nathaniel Hawthorne once lived and wrote.

Over 400 students are registered for this summers' six-week session which is taught by members of the Boston Symphony and other international musicoligists. The student roster is made up from forty-one states as well as representatives from Korea, Japan, Sweden, Israel, France, Mexico and Canada.

The concerts began in a humble way in the summer of 1943 when they were held in a tent. In 1937 the festival assumed greater proportions — and possibilities — through the gift of the Tanglewood estate to the Boston Orchestra.

The late Serge Koussevitzky, the orchestra's director, became the moving genius behind Tanglewood and under his leadership both the public concerts and the school became the resounding successes they are today.

On the 210 acres of the estate — velvet lawns and formal gardens shaded by elm, pine and birch — the great "shed" planned by the Finnish architect, Eliel Saarinen, smaller concert halls, a theater and administrative quarters, have been built.

War interrupted Tanglewood activities, but today the crowds are bigger than ever. Koussevitzky has gone but his work has been taken up and expanded by Charles Munch, who succeeded him as music director of the orchestra.

They Come by Thousands . . . In a few weeks the rolling lawns which surround the Big Shed at Tanglewood will be confetti-dotted with people . . . hundreds and thousands of them, coming from all parts of the country for the Berkshire Festival.

This Clipping From
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
UNION-STAR

JUL 11 1953

Tanglewood's Programs Outshone By None

TRAVELERS TO EUROPE return with glowing accounts of their visits to the famous music festivals held on that continent. But it is not necessary to cross the Atlantic to hear great music notably played during the summer months. One of the world's outstanding music festivals is held every Schenectady's back door, so t age.

It is the Berkshire Music near Lenox, Mass.

There are quite a few Sche reminder of the Boston Symph performances over in the Berks from past visits with the wea
Tanglewood concerts supply.

This season's programs ope
Bach concerts tonight and tom will be followed in succeeding all-Haydn programs and by works of other illustrious com some who still are making their the regular conductor of the conduct most of them but Pierr
Bernstein will appear as guest the concerts in the big shed.

While the orchestral prog attracting thousands to the fe are only a part of the immer activity that goes on there.
is maintained and its student their own—choral, orchestral an this year's schedule shows p chamber music open by invita
Berkshire Music Center, as are

In the growing attention to arts in America in recent decad been more significant than wha wood. And Schenectadians ar
60 miles away.

Society and Women's Clubs

THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S LEAGUE of Beth El Synagog attended the Sunday concert of the Berkshire Music Festival, Tanglewood, Mass. Photographed at Tanglewood are (left to right) Miss Zeena Pace, Miss Roselyn Lax; Rosario Mazzeo, bass clarinetist and personnel manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; Don Garber and Bennett Klamkin.—John Brook Photo.

anglewood: A Musical Mecca

Tens of thousand of students, music lovers and plain tourists from all over the world stream into the central valley of Massachusetts' Berkshire hills each July and August for the Tanglewood concerts of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

The public concerts are but a small part of the activities centered at the historic estate, overlooking the lake where Nathaniel Hawthorne once lived and wrote.

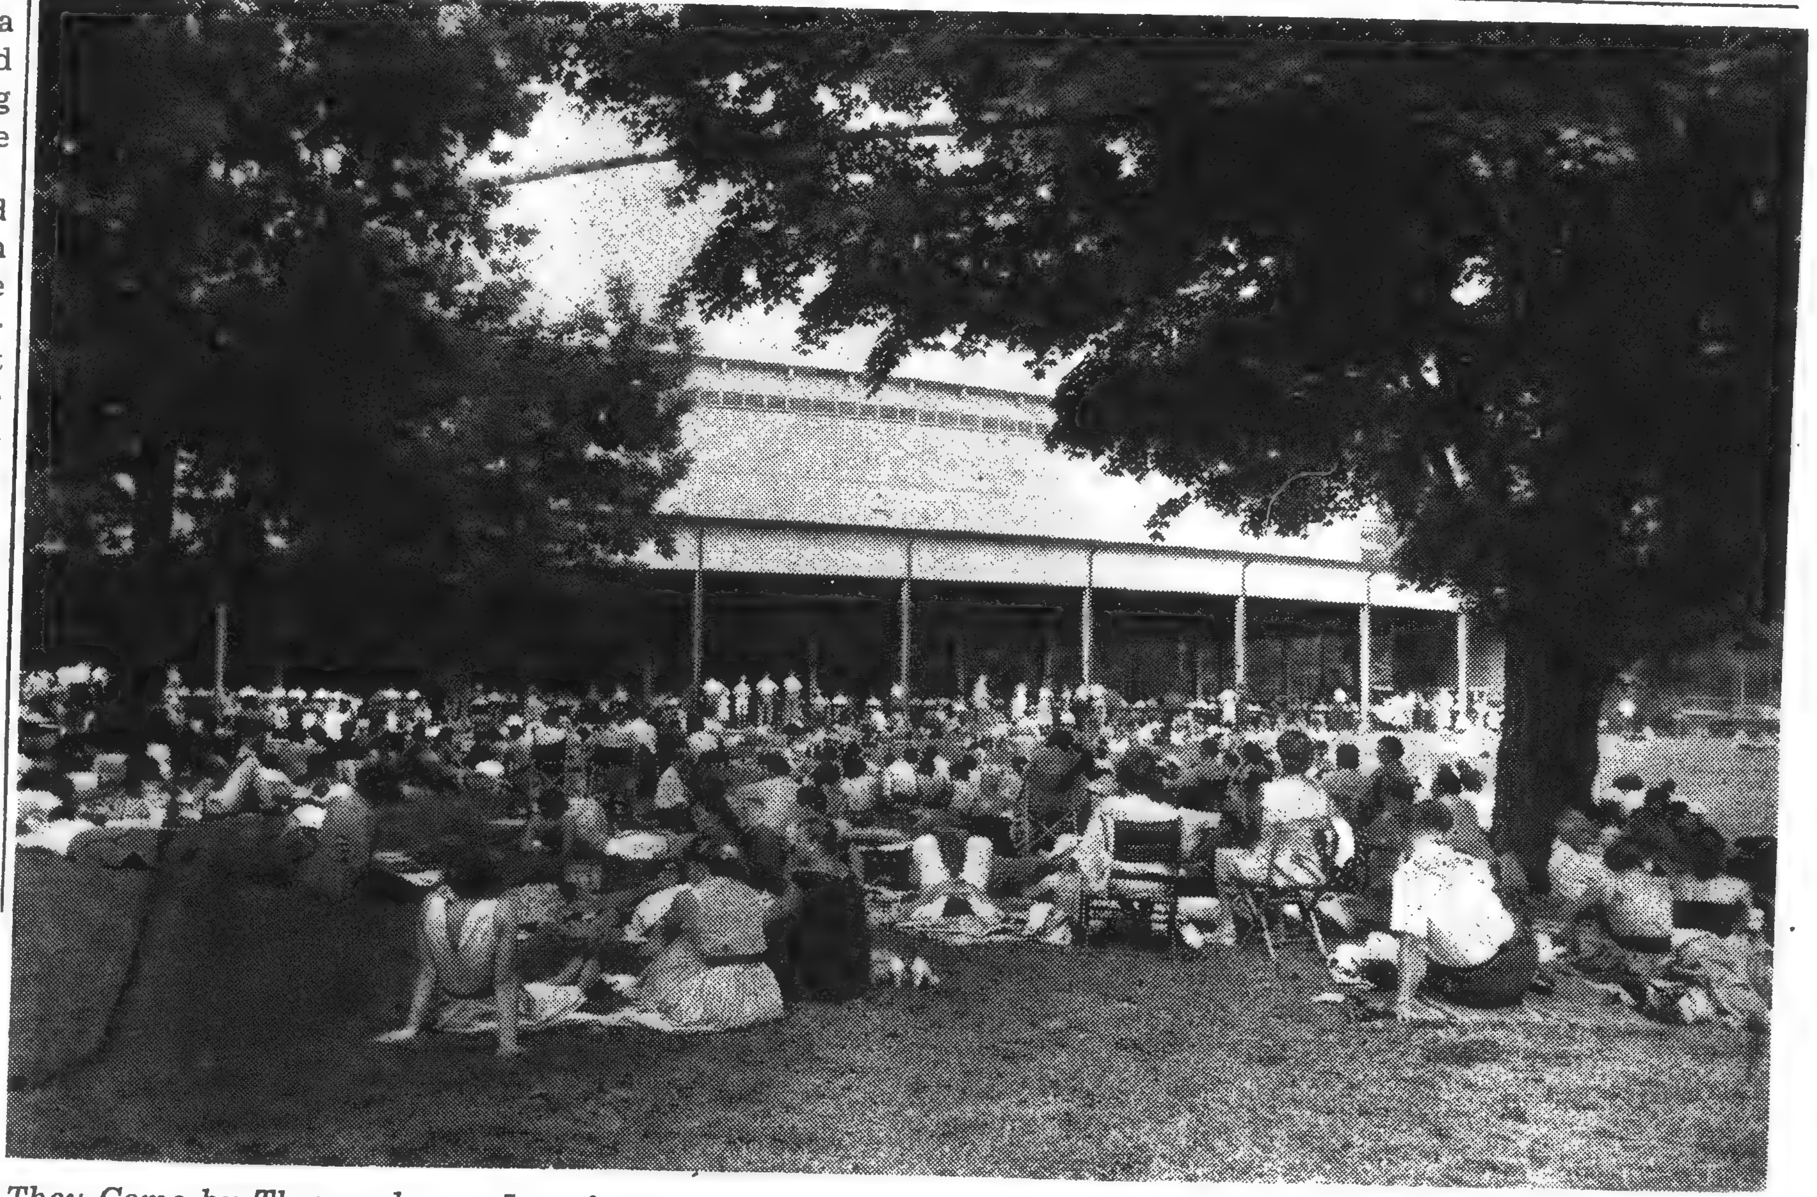
Over 400 students are registered for this summers' six-week session which is taught by members of the Boston Symphony and other international musicoligists. The student roster is made up from forty-one states as well as representatives from Korea, Japan, Sweden, Israel, France, Mexico and Canada.

The concerts began in a humble way in the summer of 1943 when they were held in a tent. In 1937 the festival assumed greater proportions — and possibilities — through the gift of the Tanglewood estate to the Boston Orchestra.

The late Serge Koussevitzky, the orchestra's director, became the moving genius behind Tanglewood and under his leadership both the public concerts and the school became the resounding successes they are today.

On the 210 acres of the estate — velvet lawns and formal gardens shaded by elm, pine and birch — the great "shed" planned by the Finnish architect, Eliel Saarinen, smaller concert halls, a theater and administrative quarters, have been built.

War interrupted Tanglewood activities, but today the crowds are bigger than ever. Koussevitzky has gone but his work has been taken up and expanded by Charles Munch, who succeeded him as music director of the orchestra.



They Come by Thousands . . . In a few weeks the rolling lawns which surround the Big Shed at Tanglewood will be confetti-dotted with people . . . hundreds and thousands of them, coming from all parts of the country for the Berkshire Festival.

This Clipping From
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
UNION-STAR

JUL 11 1953

Tanglewood's Programs Outshone By None

TRAVELERS TO EUROPE return with glowing accounts of their visits to the famous music festivals held on that continent. But it is not necessary to cross the Atlantic to hear great music notably played during the summer months. One of the world's outstanding music festivals is held every July and August right at Schenectady's back door, so to speak in this automobile age.

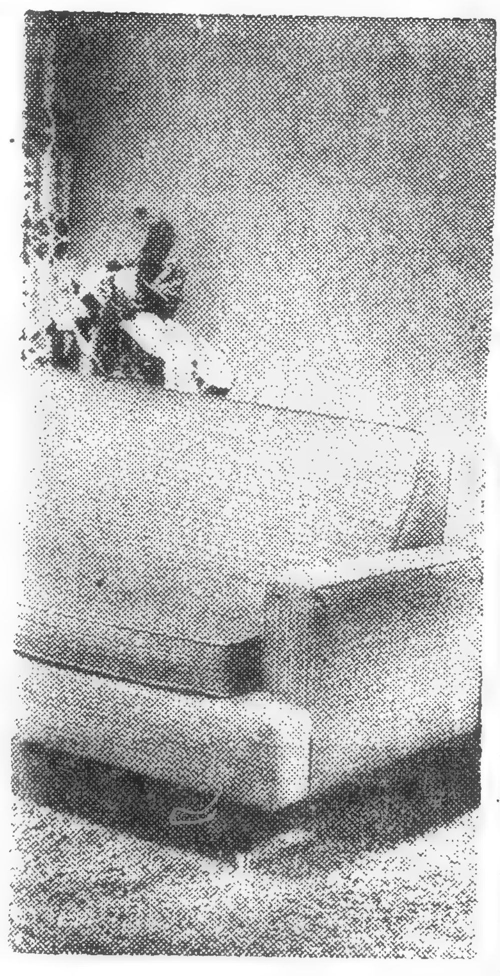
It is the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood near Lenox, Mass.

There are quite a few Schenectadians who need no reminder of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer performances over in the Berkshires. They are familiar from past visits with the wealth of music which the Tanglewood concerts supply.

This season's programs open this weekend with all-Bach concerts tonight and tomorrow afternoon. They will be followed in succeeding weeks by all-Mozart and all-Haydn programs and by concerts devoted to the works of other illustrious composers of the past and some who still are making their mark. Charles Munch, the regular conductor of the Boston Symphony, will conduct most of them but Pierre Monteux and Leonard Bernstein will appear as guest conductors at some of the concerts in the big shed.

While the orchestral programs are the big lure attracting thousands to the festival near Lenox, they are only a part of the immense amount of musical activity that goes on there. A summer music school is maintained and its students put on programs of their own—choral, orchestral and operatic. In addition this year's schedule shows programs of organ and chamber music open by invitation to friends of the Berkshire Music Center, as are the student concerts.

In the growing attention to and appreciation of the arts in America in recent decades no single factor has been more significant than what is offered at Tanglewood. And Schenectadians are fortunate to be only 60 miles away.



to a corner of the living room.
n with gold Metlon, a nontarnish-

Menu For Tomorrow

Try this piquant - flavored ope sandwich when you want some thing delightfully different fc lunch.

Open Tongue and Pimiento San wiches
Salad Bowl
Fresh Peach Pie

Women's Clubs

AGUE of Beth El Synagog attended the Sunday concert of the Berkshire Music Festival, Tanglewood, Mass. Photographed at Tanglewood are (left to right) Miss Zeena Pace, Miss Roselyn Lax; Rosario Mazzeo, bass clarinetist and personnel manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; Don Garber and Bennett Klamkin.—John Brook Photo.

[250]

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

WILLYS MOTORS, INC.
AERO WILLYS
CBS RADIO NETWORK
SUNDAY, JULY 26, 1953

WILLYS MOTORS, INC.
PRESENTS
"WORLD MUSIC FESTIVALS"

CBS RADIO NETWORK
2:30 - 4:00 PM (EDST)

SUNDAY
JULY 26, 1953

mw

- COVER ONLY -
CONTENTS AVAILABLE
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

Marble

WILLYS MOTORS, INC.
AERO WILLYS
CBS RADIO NETWORK
SUNDAY, AUGUST 2, 1953

WILLYS MOTORS, INC.

PRESENTS

"WORLD MUSIC FESTIVALS"

CBS RADIO NETWORK
2:30 - 4:00 PM (EDST)

SUNDAY
AUGUST 2, 1953

This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION

JUL 27 1953

Attendance Record Set at Tanglewood

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 26—All records have been broken at Tanglewood for attendance at the six week-end concerts devoted to the music of Bach, Mozart, Haydn and a group of 20th Century composers. A total of 26,150 persons heard these six concerts, with 4450 persons on hand to hear the final program this afternoon. The previous record was made in 1950 with a total of 23,500.

It seems to us that several factors were responsible for this record-breaking attendance. First of all, the devotees of Tanglewood have fully accepted Charles Munch. Secondly, the programs were varied and versatile, and finally, one heard superb performances, for the most part.

Last night we listened to the music of Joseph Haydn, enjoying its wholesomeness, humor and sincerity. Today we jumped forward into the 20th Century and were treated to works by Strauss, Ravel, Prokofieff, Milhaud and Lukas Foss.

True, two of these composers went back to the music of Francois Couperin for their inspiration and so Strauss was represented by his "Divertimenti, OP 86" drawn from harpsichord pieces by Couperin, while Ravel undertook a similar task, first as a suite for piano and then for orchestra.

The Strauss conception of the Couperin pieces was delightful. They were made richer through the orchestration which seldom was heavy or involved and which sustained the intimate, fragile quality of the original. Mr. Munch and his men played in distinguished manner.

It was common practice for the 17th Century composers to write collections of instrumental pieces in memory of their departed colleagues and the generic name for such collections was "Tombeau" which literally means tombstone. Ravel wrote his "Tombeau de Couperin" in 1947 as a piano suite in six movements, each of them dedicated to a companion who had been killed by Germans on the western front. The orchestraversion consists of a prelude and three dance movements like those of the classic suite. Ravel maintains the very essence of the times which were precise, ordered and delicately tinted. It was interesting to note the variations in the handling of the music of Couperin by such different entities as Strauss and Ravel. One could not help but Germanize the music, while the other enriched it through the magic of his own wit and feeling for color and form.

Run of Mill

About all that one can say for Mr. Munch's reading of the Prokofieff "Classical Symphony" is that it was a run of the mill affair, quite devoid of any brio, and lacked luster from beginning to end.

Darius Milhaud is a man of many enthusiasms, so it was not surprising that during his first visit to the United States in 1922 he was delighted with the music he heard in New York's Harlem and drew upon his memory of it as he wrote his "Creation du Monde" composed for a ballet by Blaze Cendrar. However, what he remembered of the musical idiom of 1922 he used in conjunction with music strongly derivative from Stravinsky, Ravel and then mixed it up with a liberal dosage of Gershwin. The result is a mish-mash of sounds and rhythms which might belong to any era. Mr. Munch evidently enjoys conducting this work and his men played it with enthusiasm and it was so received by the audience.

Enchanting Work

The second portion of the program was given over to Lukas Foss, the 31-year-old American composer, pianist and conductor who directed his "A Parade of Death." This enchanting work calls for chorus, orchestra, narrator and tenor soloist. Mme. Zorina was the narrator and John McCollum the tenor. At the moment Tanglewood has in its midst the finest group of singers that the Berkshire Music Festival has had for years. They sang today with a clarity of enunciation, range of dynamics and purity of tone that was a revelation to this listener. Mr. McCollum is proving a serviceable and sturdy tenor and he sang the exacting measures alloted to him in fine fashion. Zorina's voice is beautiful and her delivery of the story of the man and woman and death was simple and affecting. The chorus comments on the words of the narrator. Mr. Foss has written beautiful music for this story and has succeeded in keeping the music an integral part of the story, rather than making of it a monologue with music.

Foss conducts easily and with entire confidence and he held the work together in masterful manner. Here is work which should grace the programs of many orchestras throughout the country; one of the truly fine American compositions.

Cir. (D 157,288) (S 2[illegible])

This Clipping From
COLUMBUS, OHIO
DISPATCH

[illegible] 27 1953

Music Festival In Berkshires Opens Friday

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
UNION-STAR

JUL 27 19[illegible]

Main Concerts At Tanglewood Start Friday

Cir. (D 38,502)

This Clipping From
WATERBURY, CONN.
AMERICAN

JUL 27 1953

Widely-Varied Program Given At Tanglewood

Cir. (D 175,149) (S 182,[illegible])

This Clipping From DALLAS, TEX.
NEWS

JUL [illegible] 1953

Orchestra 'Warms Up' At Berkshire

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS

JUL 27 1953

'Escapade' Billing For Livesey-Jeans

Cir. (D 175,149) (S [illegible])

This Clipping From DALLAS, TEX.
NEWS

JUL [illegible]

Benefit Paralling Center's Talent

Cir. (D 20,200)
Cir. (D [illegible])

This Clipping From
WOMEN'S WEAR DAILY
NEW YORK, N. Y.

JUL 27 1953

LEONTYNE PRICE TO SING AT TANGLEWOOD

Leontyne Price, the alternate "Bess" in the Gershwin-Heyward musical will have a night off from her chores at the Ziegfeld Theatre on Thursday evening, Aug. 13 when she will sing at the gala concert for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood. Miss Price is an alumna of the school.

This Clipping From
HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES

JUL 27 1953

Tanglewood's Little Series Sets a Record

By CARL E. LINDSTROM

In the afternoon they came unto a land
In which it seemed always afternoon.

SUNDAY music at Tanglewood after all these years reached a new peak yesterday as to felicity of material and attendance for the Little Series.

There is nothing little about them now, these preliminary Bach-Mozart-Haydn concerts for which a total of 26,000 persons assembled on three weekends. This surpassed the previous record of 23,000 in 1950 which was the last series that Koussevitzky conducted.

As a reminder that important music making was going on in France while the above named Germanic triumvirate flourished, Charles Munch claimed our attention for Couperin.

* * *

INGENIOUSLY he presented two contrasted modern views of the French pictorialist, Richard Strauss's Divertimento, a transcription of a bevy of dances and Ravel's homage at the tomb of his precursor, also a set of dances, but freely composed in the Couperin mood if not in his idiom.

This was followed by Prokofieff's essay in the antique style, the "Classical Symphony" which could not be more Gallic than it is and then an apparent irrelevancy in Milhaud's "Le Creation du Monde" but actually about what Couperin might have written had he visited Harlem in 1920.

All this music was so germane that it could not have been interrupted by an intermission. So the audience sat entranced for one hour and 25 minutes without a breather. The second half of the program was devoted to Lukas Foss' "A Parable of Death" for narrator, tenor, chorus and orchestra, with the composer conducting.

This was indeed the irrelevancy. It had nothing to do with anything which preceded it in the series. It sounded important but strained and studied. It existed entirely in the penumbra of the dazzling choral performance of Haydn the night before.

* * *

MUNCH TOOK interpretive honors Sunday. When dealing with music that is fragile and exquisite he resists all invitations to dramatize or sentimentalize. It was all perfectly objective and rare.

Technical lapses are so few and far between that it becomes news when the Boston Orchestra makes so blurred a beginning as they did with the "Classical" Symphony.

As a program maker Mr. Munch may not have completely made his point. A young woman was heard to ask her escort: "Who is this Couperin they're making so much of?"

She was rather primly corrected: "He WAS an early English composer."

Quietly: "Oh."

Saturday's Concert:

TO HEAR ORATORIO performed by a balanced choir of singers who are musicians, supported by virtuoso symphonists who are thoroughly rehearsed, bears no resemblance to the article with which most of us are familiar.

The choral students at Tanglewood's Music Center possess the kind of musicianship and ear which distinguish between F sharp and G flat in an enharmonic modulation. In other words they sing in scientifically true pitch. They are so possessed by the music (Saturday night it was Haydn's Theresa Mass) that they sang zealously to the point of tension. Their excitement was palpable.

It communicated to the Boston Symphony's supporting instrumentalists who were energized to an unusually warm glow. Four singers who were in no sense soloists, but a solo quartet, added to a lustrous occasion with dependable, opulent song which even in florid passages was steady and well-defined. They were Lois McCauley, soprano; Beatrice Krebs, contralto; John McCallum tenor, and Lee Cass, bass.

Hugh Ross, most stimulating of choral interpreters, the lanky, willowy man with the long rubber arms and the convulsive style of conducting produced a resplendent and perfect performance.

Perfection is a sort of nemesis with the Boston Symphony and all its works. When no other fault can be found, it is the fault of perfection. And what is wrong with perfection?

Well, just this (and I am indebted to Ross and his company for a brilliant case in point). This Haydn Mass was the finest oratorio performance I have ever heard. It was great music—qua music.

It was a tremendous musical experience; it was not a religious one. A performance of opera or a symphony which left out the heart of the piece would not be a good one.

So we had music that was brilliant without an inner existence. Feeling? Yes, in a way. It was an instance of music that was expressive but without essential emotion.

* * *

ON THE CONTRARY, Mr. Munch's two symphonies, with which the Saturday program began, revealed an unsuspected Haydn. True he chose two of the more virile symphonies — the sober C minor and the brightly boisterous one nicknamed the "Military" symphony. But it was a Haydn nevertheless, who could walk among us a contemparary rather than that porcelain cis-alpine figure who lived the other side of Beethoven.

She is so much a conversation piece that it is impossible not to mention the girl flutist who had enough thematic passages in the two symphonies to give some idea of her talents. Doriot Anthony plays the way she looks, with the freshness, self-assurance and pensitiveness of youth.

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE

JUL 27 1953

Zorina Terrific

Berkshire Festival Hears Foss' "A Parable of Death"

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX, July 26—Lukas Foss' "A Parable of Death" was given its first Berkshire performance, this afternoon, at the final concert in the preliminary series of the Berkshire festival by the Boston Symphony orchestra. This unusual, deeply-felt and skillfully written score, the one new work of the preliminary series, is based upon verses of Rainer Maria Rilke which dwell upon two profound facts: the gaining by relinquishment, which is love, and the eternal continuity of life which grows out of death.

Foss' music calls for an extensive if not huge orchestra, chorus and tenor soloist. The text of Rilke (in an English translation which runs to some un-poetic and multi-syllabled words) was spoken at this performance as at the three previous in Louisville, New York and the Ojai festival in California, by Vera Zorina. The tenor soloist was John McCollum.

If you go back far enough, in tracing the ancestry of the general form, the harmonic idiom and the overall expressive style, you come to Gustav Mahler, and, chorally to Bach. Nonetheless, Mr. Foss has written in a contemporary if not indisputably personal manner, one in which his technic of orchestral and choral writing has grown perceptibly.

At first hearing I am inclined to sort out the choral writing from orchestra as less eloquent, and the tenor solo more stylized than emotional. That would be superficial judgment, however, for "A Parable of Death" is not completely absorbed at one performance. There are too many details, in rhythm, in color and patterns of orchestral usage, to warrant quick blanket opinion. The dominant impression, however, is one of power and beauty but sluggish motion.

Zorina Gorgeous

Miss Zorina, svelte and gorgeous in a pale blue gown, spoke with moving depth of voice and with a truly poetic style, lines which all too often, at least in English, are prose in effect. Occasionally, she had such heavy competition from the instruments that blurred her words, but mostly she was clearly understood. Mr. Foss conducted his own work and, seemingly, did it very well.

Mr. McCollum sang his relatively brief role with warmth of feeling and a fine ease of manner and technic.

Charles Munch had conducted the previous portions of the concert, which were broadcast over the C. B. S. network, and for that reason were played in the [illegible] shed instead of the smaller theatre-concert hall. The afternoon [illegible] with a superb account of Strauss' divertimento after Couperin, [illegible] included an equally superb [illegible] "Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin;" Prokofieff's "Classical Symphony and Milhaud's [illegible] masterful "La Creation du Monde."

It was interesting [illegible] Munch took the [illegible] lane of Ravel's [illegible] much slower than most conductors do it, with increasing clarity of detail at a sacrifice of [illegible] motion. Milhaud's music, [illegible] late ragtime and early jazz spots, enjoyed the best performances of it this reviewer has [illegible].

The final Saturday concert of this preliminary series was devoted to Haydn of the symphony in C Minor, No 95, the "Military" Symphony and the "Theresa" mass. Mr. Munch conducted the symphonies, of which the first named went reasonably well and the second in a glowing, and [illegible] exact fashion that was [illegible] genius of conducting and [illegible].

"Theresa" Mass Lovely

Haydn's "Theresa" mass, virtually unknown over here save for a foreign recording made a few years ago, is a lovely and noble score, if not one of the world's greatest masterpieces For it, Hugh Ross had prepared the Berkshire Music Center chorus down to the last eighth note and they sang with a really thrilling quality of tone and ensemble. The quartet of vocal soloists, also Berkshire Center students, consisted of soprano Lois McCauley, contralto Beatrice Krebs, Mr. McCollum in the tenor part, and bass Lee Cass.

For blend of voices and expert technic in style and keeping together they were, perhaps, the finest quartet I have heard in more than 20 years of music reviewing.

Mr. Ross conducted and the performance went admirably. But for the life of me, I can't see how the orchestra, which could not have had too many rehearsals for the mass, followed his [illegible] (and sometimes non-existent) beat. But they were of the Boston Symphony, which is equipped to pass miracles.

The Saturday night attendance in the theatre-concert hall—and on the lawn outside—was 4400. Today's audience, 4450. That brought the total attendance for the entire preliminary series to 26,150, the biggest in Berkshire Festival history.

This Clipping From
VARIETY
NEW YORK, N. Y.

JUL [illegible] 53

Berkshire Fest Chamber Mark Set With 52G Take

~~Lenox, Mass.~~, July 28.

Three weekends of Theatre-Concert Hall programs at the Berkshire Festival here, which ended Sunday night (26), broke all attendance records, with a total gross of $52,225 at a $5 top. Series of six concerts, two each weekend is offered by the chamber section of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 1,150-seat hall, with overflow crowds sitting out on the lawn. New attendance mark was 26,150, or an average of 4,360 per concert. First weekend offered Bach music; second, Mozart, and last weekend a combination of Haydn and moderns.

Full 104-piece BSO is gathering here at Tanglewood this week for the three weekends of major concerts in the 6,000-seat Shed. Series A, this weekend, will have Charles Munch conducting Friday and Saturday nights (31-1) and Pierre Monteux as guest maestro Sunday afternoon. Advance sale is good with Tanglewood expecting to better last season's b.o. and attendance, which averaged (in Shed and on the lawn) about 9,465 people per concert.

[253]

This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION

JUL 27 1953

Attendance Record Set at Tanglewood

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 26—All records have been broken at Tanglewood for attendance at the six week-end concerts devoted to the music of Bach, Mozart, Haydn and a group of 20th Century composers. A total of 26,150 persons heard these six concerts, with 4450 persons on hand to hear the final program this afternoon. The previous record was made in 1950 with a total of 23,500.

It seems to us that several factors were responsible for this record-breaking attendance. First of all, the devotees of Tanglewood have fully accepted Charles Munch. Secondly, the programs were varied and versatile, and finally, one heard superb performances, for the most part.

Last night we listened to the music of Joseph Haydn, enjoying its wholesomeness, humor and sincerity. Today we jumped forward into the 20th Century and were treated to works by Strauss, Ravel, Prokofieff, Milhaud and Lukas Foss.

True, two of these composers went back to the music of Francois Couperin for their inspiration and so Strauss was represented by his "Divertimenti, OP 86" drawn from harpsichord pieces by Couperin, while Ravel undertook a similar task, first as a suite for piano and then for orchestra.

The Strauss conception of the Couperin pieces was delightful. They were made richer through the orchestration which seldom was heavy or involved and which sustained the intimate, fragile quality of the original. Mr. Munch and his men played in distinguished manner.

It was common practice for the 17th Century composers to write collections of instrumental pieces in memory of their departed colleagues and the generic name for such collections was "Tombeau" which literally means tombstone. Ravel wrote his "Tombeau de Couperin" in 1947 as a piano suite in six movements, each of them dedicated to a companion who had been killed by Germans on the western front. The orchestraversion consists of a prelude and three dance movements like those of the classic suite. Ravel maintains the very essence of the times which were precise, ordered and delicately tinted. It was interesting to note the variations in the handling of the music of Couperin by such different entities as Strauss and Ravel. One could not help but Germanize the music, while the other enriched it through the magic of his own wit and feeling for color and form.

Run of Mill

About all that one can say for Mr. Munch's reading of the Prokofieff "Classical Symphony" is that it was a run of the mill affair, quite devoid of any brio, and lacked luster from beginning to end.

Darius Milhaud is a man of many enthusiasms, so it was not surprising that during his first visit to the United States in 1922 he was delighted with the music he heard in New York's Harlem and drew upon his memory of it as he wrote his "Creation du Monde" composed for a ballet by Blaze Cendrar. However, what he remembered of the musical idiom of 1922 he used in conjunction with music strongly derivative from Stravinsky, Ravel and then mixed it up with a liberal dosage of Gershwin. The result is a mish-mash of sounds and rhythms which might belong to any era. Mr. Munch evidently enjoys conducting this work and his men played it with enthusiasm and it was so received by the audience.

Enchanting Work

The second portion of the program was given over to Lukas Foss, the 31-year-old American composer, pianist and conductor who directed his "A Parade of Death." This enchanting work calls for chorus, orchestra, narrator and tenor soloist. Mme. Zorina was the narrator and John McCollum the tenor. At the moment Tanglewood has in its midst the finest group of singers that the Berkshire Music Festival has had for years. They sang today with a clarity of enunciation, range of dynamics and purity of tone that was a revelation to this listener. Mr. McCollum is proving a serviceable and sturdy tenor and he sang the exacting measures alloted to him in fine fashion. Zorina's voice is beautiful and her delivery of the story of the man and woman and death was simple and affecting. The chorus comments on the words of the narrator. Mr. Foss has written beautiful music for this story and has succeeded in keeping the music an integral part of the story, rather than making of it a monologue with music.

Foss conducts easily and with entire confidence and he held the work together in masterful manner. Here is work which should grace the programs of many orchestras throughout the country; one of the truly fine American compositions.

Cir. (D 157,288) (S 2[illegible])

This Clipping From
COLUMBUS, OHIO
DISPATCH

[illegible] 27 1953

Music Festival In Berkshires Opens Friday

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
UNION-STAR

JUL 27 19[illegible]

Main Concerts At Tanglewood Start Friday

Cir. (D 38,502)

This Clipping From
WATERBURY, CONN.
AMERICAN

JUL 27 1953

Widely-Varied Program Given At Tanglewood

Cir. (D 175,149) (S 182,397)

This Clipping From DALLAS, TEX.
NEWS

JUL [illegible] 1953

Orchestra 'Warms Up' At Berkshire

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS

man with I. E. degree and minimum of 2 years' experience. Send resume and salary desired. Box

---

This Clipping From
NEWS RECORD
NEW YORK, N. Y.

JUL 28 1953

LEONTYNE PRICE TO SING AT TANGLEWOOD

Leontyne Price, the alternate "Bess" in the Gershwin-Heyward musical will have a night off from her chores at the Ziegfeld Theatre on Thursday evening, Aug. 13 when she will sing at the gala concert for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood. Miss Price is an alumna of the school.

Sunday afternoon.

This Clipping From
HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES

JUL 27 1953

Tanglewood's Little Series Sets a Record

By CARL E. LINDSTROM

In the afternoon they came
unto a land
In which it seemed always afternoon.

SUNDAY music at Tanglewood after all these years reached a new peak yesterday as to felicity of material and attendance for the Little Series.

There is nothing little about them now, these preliminary Bach-Mozart-Haydn concerts for which a total of 26,000 persons assembled on three weekends.

This surpassed the previous record of 23,000 in 1950 which was the last series that Koussevitzky conducted.

As a reminder that important music making was going on in France while the above named Germanic triumvirate flourished, Charles Munch claimed our attention for Couperin.

* * *

INGENIOUSLY he presented two contrasted modern views of the French pictorialist, Richard Strauss's Divertimento, a transscription of a bevy of dances and Ravel's homage at the tomb of his precursor, also a set of dances, but freely composed in the Couperin mood if not in his idiom.

This was followed by Prokofieff's essay in the antique style, the "Classical Symphony" which could not be more Gallic than it is and then an apparent irrelevancy in Milhaud's "Le Creation du Monde" but actually about what Couperin might have written had he visited Harlem in 1920.

All this music was so germane that it could not have been interrupted by an intermission. So the audience sat entranced for one hour and 25 minutes without a breather. The second half of the program was devoted to Lukas Foss' "A Parable of Death" for narrator, tenor, chorus and orchestra, with the composer conducting.

This was indeed the irrelevancy. It had nothing to do with anything which preceded it in the series. It sounded important but strained and studied. It existed entirely in the penumbra of the dazzling choral performance of Haydn the night before.

* * *

MUNCH TOOK interpretive honors Sunday. When dealing with music that is fragile and exquisite he resists all invitations to dramatize or sentimentalize. It was all perfectly objective and rare.

Technical lapses are so few and far between that it becomes news when the Boston Orchestra makes so blurred a beginning as they did with the "Classical" Symphony.

As a program maker Mr. Munch may not have completely made his point. A young woman was heard to ask her escort: "Who is this Couperin they're making so much of?"

She was rather primly corrected: "He WAS an early English composer."

Quietly: "Oh."

Saturday's Concert:

TO HEAR ORATORIO performed by a balanced choir of singers who are musicians, supported by virtuoso symphonists who are thoroughly rehearsed, bears no resemblance to the article with which most of us are familiar.

The choral students at Tanglewood's Music Center possess the kind of musicianship and ear which distinguish between F sharp and G flat in an enharmonic modulation. In other words they sing in scientifically true pitch. They are so possessed by the music (Saturday night it was Haydn's Theresa Mass) that they sang zealously to the point of tension. Their excitement was palpable.

It communicated to the Boston Symphony's supporting instrumentalists who were energized to an unusually warm glow. Four singers who were in no sense soloists, but a solo quartet, added to a lustrous occasion with dependable, opulent song which even in florid passages was steady and well-defined. They were Lois McCauley, soprano; Beatrice Krebs, contralto; John McCallum tenor, and Lee Cass, bass.

Hugh Ross, most stimulating of choral interpreters, the lanky, willowy man with the long rubber arms and the convulsive style of conducting produced a resplendent and perfect performance.

Perfection is a sort of nemesis with the Boston Symphony and all its works. When no other fault can be found, it is the fault of perfection. And what is wrong with perfection?

Well, just this (and I am indebted to Ross and his company for a brilliant case in point). This Haydn Mass was the finest oratorio performance I have ever heard. It was great music—qua music.

It was a tremendous musical experience; it was not a religious one. A performance of opera or a symphony which left out the heart of the piece would not be a good one.

So we had music that was brilliant without an inner existence. Feeling? Yes, in a way. It was an instance of music that was expressive but without essential emotion.

* * *

ON THE CONTRARY, Mr. Munch's two symphonies, with which the Saturday program began, revealed an unsuspected Haydn. True he chose two of the more virile symphonies — the sober C minor and the brightly boisterous one nicknamed the "Military" symphony. But it was a Haydn nevertheless, who could walk among us a contemparary rather than that porcelain cis-alpine figure who lived the other side of Beethoven.

She is so much a conversation piece that it is impossible not to mention the girl flutist who had enough thematic passages in the two symphonies to give some idea of her talents. Doriot Anthony plays the way she looks, with the freshness, self-assurance and pensiveness of youth.

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE

JUL 27 1953

Zorina Terrific

Berkshire Festival Hears Foss' "A Parable of Death"

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX, July 26—Lukas Foss' "A Parable of Death" was given its first Berkshire performance, this afternoon, at the final concert in the preliminary series of the Berkshire festival by the Boston Symphony orchestra. This unusual, deeply-felt and skillfully written score, the one new work of the preliminary series, is based upon verses of Rainer Maria Rilke which dwell upon two profound facts: the gaining by relinquishment, which is love, and the eternal continuity of life which grows out of death.

Foss' music calls for an extensive if not huge orchestra, chorus and tenor soloist. The text of Rilke (in an English translation which runs to some un-poetic and multi-syllabled words) was spoken at this performance as at the three previous in Louisville, New York and the Ojai festival in California, by Vera Zorina. The tenor soloist was John McCollum.

If you go back far enough, in tracing the ancestry of the general form, the harmonic idiom and the overall expressive style, you come to Gustav Mahler, and, chorally to Bach. Nonetheless, Mr. Foss has written in a contemporary if not indisputably personal manner, one in which his technic of orchestral and choral writing has grown perceptibly.

At first hearing I am inclined to sort out the choral writing from orchestra as less eloquent, and the tenor solo more stylized than emotional. That would be superficial judgment, however, for "A Parable of Death" is not completely absorbed at one performance. There are too many details, in rhythm, in color and patterns of orchestral usage, to warrant quick blanket opinion. The dominant impression, however, is one of power and beauty but sluggish motion.

Zorina Gorgeous

Miss Zorina, svelte and gorgeous in a pale blue gown, spoke with moving depth of voice and with a truly poetic style, lines which all too often, at least in English, are prose in effect. Occasionally, she had such heavy competition from the instruments that blurred her words, but mostly she was clearly understood. Mr. Foss conducted his own work and, seemingly, did it very well.

Mr. McCollum sang his relatively brief role with warmth of feeling and a fine ease of manner and technic.

Charles Munch had conducted the previous portions of the concert, which were broadcast over the C. B. S. network, and for that reason were played in the [illegible] shed instead of the smaller theatre-concert hall. The afternoon began with a superb account of Strauss' divertimento after Couperin, and included an equally superb [illegible] "Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin;" Prokofieff's "Classical" Symphony and Milhaud's [illegible] and masterful "La Creation du Monde."

It was interesting that Mr. Munch took the prelude and [illegible] lane of Ravel's [illegible] much slower than most conductors do it, with increasing clarity of detail at a sacrifice of [illegible] motion. Milhaud's music, between late ragtime and early jazz in spots, enjoyed the best performances of it this reviewer has heard.

The final Saturday evening of this preliminary series was devoted to Haydn of the symphony in C Minor, No. 95, the "Military" Symphony and the "Theresa" mass. Mr. Munch conducted the symphonies, of which the first named went reasonably well and the second in a glowing, and [illegible] exact fashion that was [illegible] genius of conducting and playing.

"Theresa" Mass Lovely

Haydn's "Theresa" mass, virtually unknown over here save for a foreign recording made a few years ago, is a lovely and noble score, if not one of the world's greatest masterpieces. For it, Hugh Ross had prepared the Berkshire Music Center chorus down to the last eighth note and they sang with a really thrilling quality of tone and ensemble. The quartet of vocal soloists, also Berkshire Center students, consisted of soprano Lois McCauley, contralto Beatrice Krebs, Mr. McCollum in the tenor part, and bass Lee Cass.

For blend of voices and expert technic in style and keeping together they were, perhaps, the finest quartet I have heard in more than 20 years of music reviewing.

Mr. Ross conducted and the performance went admirably. But for the life of me, I can't see how the orchestra, which could not have had too many rehearsals for the mass, followed his peculiar (and sometimes non-existent) beat. But they were of the Boston Symphony, which is equipped to pass miracles.

The Saturday night attendance in the theatre-concert hall—and on the lawn outside—was 4400. Today's audience, 4450. That brought the total attendance for the entire preliminary series to 26,150, the biggest in Berkshire Festival history.

This Clipping From
VARIETY
NEW YORK, N. Y.

JUL 29 1953

Berkshire Fest Chamber Mark Set With 52G Take

~~Lenox, Mass.,~~ July 28.

Three weekends of Theatre-Concert Hall programs at the Berkshire Festival here, which ended Sunday night (26), broke all attendance records, with a total gross of $52,225 at a $5 top. Series of six concerts, two each weekend is offered by the chamber section of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the ~~1,150~~-seat hall, with overflow crowds sitting out on the lawn. New attendance mark was 26,150, or an average of 4,360 per concert. First weekend offered Bach music; second, Mozart, and last weekend a combination of Haydn and moderns.

Full 104-piece BSO is gathered here at Tanglewood this week for the three weekends of major concerts in the 6,000-seat Shed. Series A, this weekend, will have Charles Munch conducting Friday and Saturday nights (31-1) and Pierre Monteux as guest maestro Sunday afternoon. Advance sale is good with Tanglewood expecting to better last season's b.o. and attendance, which averaged (in Shed and on the lawn) about 9,465 people per concert.

[2-3]

This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION

JUL 27 1953

Attendance Record Set at Tanglewood

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 26—All records have been broken at Tanglewood for attendance at the six week-end concerts devoted to the music of Bach, Mozart, Haydn and a group of 20th Century composers. A total of 26,150 persons heard these six concerts, with 4450 persons on hand to hear the final program this afternoon. The previous record was made in 1950 with a total of 23,500.

It seems to us that several factors were responsible for this record-breaking attendance. First of all, the devotees of Tanglewood have fully accepted Charles Munch. Secondly, the programs were varied and versatile, and finally, one heard superb performances, for the most part.

Last night we listened to the music of Joseph Haydn, enjoying its wholesomeness, humor and sincerity. Today we jumped forward into the 20th Century and were treated to works by Strauss, Ravel, Prokofieff, Milhaud and Lukas Foss.

True, two of these composers went back to the music of Francois Couperin for their inspiration and so Strauss was represented by his "Divertimenti, OP 86" drawn from harpsichord pieces by Couperin, while Ravel undertook a similar task, first as a suite for piano and then for orchestra.

The Strauss conception of the Couperin pieces was delightful. They were made richer through the orchestration which seldom was heavy or involved and which sustained the intimate, fragile quality of the original. Mr. Munch and his men played in distinguished manner.

It was common practice for the 17th Century composers to write collections of instrumental pieces in memory of their departed colleagues and the generic name for such collections was "Tombeau" which literally means tombstone. Ravel wrote his "Tombeau de Couperin" in 1947 as a piano suite in six movements, each of them dedicated to a companion who had been killed by Germans on the western front. The orchestraversion consists of a prelude and three dance movements like those of the classic suite. Ravel maintains the very essence of the times which were precise, ordered and delicately tinted. It was interesting to note the variations in the handling of the music of Couperin by such different entities as Strauss and Ravel. One could not help but Germanize the music, while the other enriched it through the magic of his own wit and feeling for color and form.

Run of Mill

About all that one can say for Mr. Munch's reading of the Prokofieff "Classical Symphony" is that it was a run of the mill affair, quite devoid of any brio, and lacked luster from beginning to end.

Darius Milhaud is a man of many enthusiasms, so it was not surprising that during his first visit to the United States in 1922 he was delighted with the music he heard in New York's Harlem and drew upon his memory of it as he wrote his "Creation du Monde" composed for a ballet by Blaze Cendrar. However, what he remembered of the musical idiom of 1922 he used in conjunction with music strongly derivative from Stravinsky, Ravel and then mixed it up with a liberal dosage of Gershwin. The result is a mish-mash of sounds and rhythms which might belong to any era. Mr. Munch evidently enjoys conducting this work and his men played it with enthusiasm and it was so received by the audience.

Enchanting Work

The second portion of the program was given over to Lukas Foss, the 31-year-old American composer, pianist and conductor who directed his "A Parade of Death." This enchanting work calls for chorus, orchestra, narrator and tenor soloist. Mme. Zorina was the narrator and John McCollum the tenor. At the moment Tanglewood has in its midst the finest group of singers that the Berkshire Music Festival has had for years. They sang today with a clarity of enunciation, range of dynamics and purity of tone that was a revelation to this listener. Mr. McCollum is proving a serviceable and sturdy tenor and he sang the exacting measures alloted to him in fine fashion. Zorina's voice is beautiful and her delivery of the story of the man and woman and death was simple and affecting. The chorus comments on the words of the narrator. Mr. Foss has written beautiful music for this story and has succeeded in keeping the music an integral part of the story, rather than making of it a monologue with music.

Foss conducts easily and with entire confidence and he held the work together in masterful manner. Here is work which should grace the programs of many orchestras throughout the country; one of the truly fine American compositions.

Cir. (D 157,288) (S [illegible])

This Clipping From
COLUMBUS, OHIO
DISPATCH

JUL 27 1953

Music Festival In Berkshires Opens Friday

SCHENECTADY, N.Y.
UNION-STAR

JUL 27 19

Main Concerts At Tanglewood Start Friday

Cir. (D 38,502)

This Clipping From
WATERBURY, CONN.
AMERICAN

JUL 27 1953

Widely-Varied Program Given At Tanglewood

Cir. (D 175,149) (S 182,397)

This Clipping From DALLAS, TEX.
NEWS

JUL [illegible] 1953

Orchestra 'Warms Up' At Berkshire

Special to The News

BOSTON, Mass.—"Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will start in the afternoon and run through the night of Aug. 13 at the musical town of Lenox, Mass.

Soloists with the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the evening concert will be Isaac Stern, violinist, and the "Porgy and Bess" husband-and-wife stars, William Warfield, baritone, and Leontyne Price, soprano. Charles Munch and Leonard Bernstein will conduct.

---

three week-ends of Friday, Saturday and Sunday programs, will begin this Friday night. Charles Munch will conduct the Friday and Saturday evening concerts, with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor for an all-Tchaikowsky program Sunday afternoon.

This Clipping From
HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES

JUL 27 1953

Tanglewood's Little Series Sets a Record

By CARL E. LINDSTROM

In the afternoon they came
unto a land
In which it seemed always afternoon.

SUNDAY music at Tanglewood after all these years reached a new peak yesterday as to felicity of material and attendance for the Little Series.

There is nothing little about them now, these preliminary Bach-Mozart-Haydn concerts for which a total of 26,000 persons assembled on three weekends.

This surpassed the previous record of 23,000 in 1950 which was the last series that Koussevitzky conducted.

As a reminder that important music making was going on in France while the above named Germanic triumvirate flourished, Charles Munch claimed our attention for Couperin.

* * *

INGENIOUSLY he presented two contrasted modern views of the French pictorialist, Richard Strauss's Divertimento, a transscription of a bevy of dances and Ravel's homage at the tomb of his precursor, also a set of dances, but freely composed in the Couperin mood if not in his idiom.

This was followed by Prokofieff's essay in the antique style, the "Classical Symphony" which could not be more Gallic than it is and then an apparent irrelevancy in Milhaud's "Le Creation du Monde" but actually about what Couperin might have written had he visited Harlem in 1920.

All this music was so germane that it could not have been interrupted by an intermission. So the audience sat entranced for one hour and 25 minutes without a breather. The second half of the program was devoted to Lukas Foss' "A Parable of Death" for narrator, tenor, chorus and orchestra, with the composer conducting.

This was indeed the irrelevancy. It had nothing to do with anything which preceded it in the series. It sounded important but strained and studied. It existed entirely in the penumbra of the dazzling choral performance of Haydn the night before.

* * *

MUNCH TOOK interpretive honors Sunday. When dealing with music that is fragile and exquisite he resists all invitations to dramatize or sentimentalize. It was all perfectly objective and rare.

Technical lapses are so few and far between that it becomes news when the Boston Orchestra makes so blurred a beginning as they did with the "Classical" Symphony.

As a program maker Mr. Munch may not have completely made his point. A young woman was heard to ask her escort: "Who is this Couperin they're making so much of?"

She was rather primly corrected: "He WAS an early English composer."

Quietly: "Oh."

Saturday's Concert:

TO HEAR ORATORIO performed by a balanced choir of singers who are musicians, supported by virtuoso symphonists who are thoroughly rehearsed, bears no resemblance to the article with which most of us are familiar.

The choral students at Tanglewood's Music Center possess the kind of musicianship and ear which distinguish between F sharp and G flat in an enharmonic modulation. In other words they sing in scientifically true pitch. They are so possessed by the music (Saturday night it was Haydn's Theresa Mass) that they sang zealously to the point of tension. Their excitement was palpable.

It communicated to the Boston Symphony's supporting instrumentalists who were energized to an unusually warm glow. Four singers who were in no sense soloists, but a solo quartet, added to a lustrous occasion with dependable, opulent song which even in florid passages was steady and well-defined. They were Lois McCauley, soprano; Beatrice Krebs, contralto; John McCallum tenor, and Lee Cass, bass.

Hugh Ross, most stimulating of choral interpreters, the lanky, willowy man with the long rubber arms and the convulsive style of conducting produced a resplendent and perfect performance.

Perfection is a sort of nemesis with the Boston Symphony and all its works. When no other fault can be found, it is the fault of perfection. And what is wrong with perfection?

Well, just this (and I am indebted to Ross and his company for a brilliant case in point). This Haydn Mass was the finest oratorio performance I have ever heard. It was great music—qua music.

It was a tremendous musical experience; it was not a religious one. A performance of opera or a symphony which left out the heart of the piece would not be a good one.

So we had music that was brilliant without an inner existence. Feeling? Yes, in a way. It was an instance of music that was expressive but without essential emotion.

* * *

ON THE CONTRARY, Mr. Munch's two symphonies, with which the Saturday program began, revealed an unsuspected Haydn. True he chose two of the more virile symphonies — the sober C minor and the brightly boisterous one nicknamed the "Military" symphony. But it was a Haydn nevertheless, who could walk among us a contemparary rather than that porcelain cis-alpine figure who lived the other side of Beethoven.

She is so much a conversation piece that it is impossible not to mention the girl flutist who had enough thematic passages in the two symphonies to give some idea of her talents. Doriot Anthony plays the way she looks, with the freshness, self-assurance and pensitiveness of youth.

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE

JUL 27 1953

Zorina Terrific

Berkshire Festival Hears Foss' "A Parable of Death"

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX, July 26—Lukas Foss' "A Parable of Death" was given its first Berkshire performance, this afternoon, at the final concert in the preliminary series of the Berkshire festival by the Boston Symphony orchestra. This unusual, deeply-felt and skillfully written score, the one new work of the preliminary series, is based upon verses of Rainer Maria Rilke which dwell upon two profound facts: the gaining by relinquishment, which is love, and the eternal continuity of life which grows out of death.

Foss' music calls for an extensive if not huge orchestra, chorus and tenor soloist. The text of Rilke (in an English translation which runs to some un-poetic and multi-syllabled words) was spoken at this performance as at the three previous in Louisville, New York and the Ojai festival in California, by Vera Zorina. The tenor soloist was John McCollum.

If you go back far enough, in tracing the ancestry of the general form, the harmonic idiom and the overall expressive style, you come to Gustav Mahler, and, chorally to Bach. Nonetheless, Mr. Foss has written in a contemporary if not indisputably personal manner, one in which his technic of orchestral and choral writing has grown perceptibly.

At first hearing I am inclined to sort out the choral writing from orchestra as less eloquent, and the tenor solo more stylized than emotional. That would be superficial judgment, however, for "A Parable of Death" is not completely absorbed at one performance. There are too many details, in rhythm, in color and patterns of orchestral usage, to warrant quick blanket opinion. The dominant impression, however, is one of power and beauty but sluggish motion.

Zorina Gorgeous

Miss Zorina, svelte and gorgeous in a pale blue gown, spoke with moving depth of voice and with a truly poetic style, lines which all too often, at least in English, are prose in effect. Occasionally, she had such heavy competition from the instruments that blurred her words, but mostly she was clearly understood. Mr. Foss conducted his own work and, seemingly, did it very well.

Mr. McCollum sang his relatively brief role with warmth of feeling and a fine ease of manner and technic.

Charles Munch had conducted the previous portions of the concert, which were broadcast [illegible] the C. B. S. network, and for that reason were played in the [illegible] shed instead of the smaller theatre-concert hall. The afternoon began with a superb account of Strauss' divertimento after Couperin, and included an equally superb [illegible] "Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin;" Prokofieff's "Classical" Symphony and Milhaud's [illegible] and masterful "La Creation du Monde."

It was interesting that Mr. Munch took the prelude and [illegible] lane of Ravel's [illegible] much slower than most [illegible] do it, with increasing clarity of detail at a sacrifice of [illegible] motion. Milhaud's music, [illegible] late ragtime and early jazz in spots, enjoyed the best performances of it this reviewer has heard.

The final Saturday evening [illegible] this preliminary series was devoted to Haydn of the symphony in C Minor, No. 95, the "Military" Symphony and the "Theresa" mass. Mr. Munch conducted the symphonies, of which the first named went reasonably well and the second in a glowing, [illegible] exact fashion that was [illegible] genius of conducting and playing.

"Theresa" Mass Lovely

Haydn's "Theresa" mass, virtually unknown over here save for a foreign recording made a few years ago, is a lovely and noble score, if not one of the world's greatest masterpieces. For it, Hugh Ross had prepared the Berkshire Music Center chorus down to the last eighth note and they sang with a really thrilling quality of tone and ensemble. The quartet of vocal soloists, also Berkshire Center students, consisted of soprano Lois McCauley, contralto Beatrice Krebs, Mr. McCollum in the tenor part, and bass Lee Cass.

For blend of voices and expert technic in style and keeping together they were, perhaps, the finest quartet I have heard in more than 20 years of music reviewing.

Mr. Ross conducted and the performance went admirably. But for the life of me, I can't see how the orchestra, which could not have had too many rehearsals for the mass, followed his [illegible] (and sometimes non-existent) beat. But they were of the Boston Symphony, which is equipped to pass miracles.

The Saturday night attendance in the theatre-concert hall—and on the lawn outside—was 1400. Today's audience, 4450. That brought the total attendance for the entire preliminary series to 26,150, the biggest in Berkshire Festival history.

This Clipping From
VARIETY
NEW YORK, N. Y.

JUL 29 1953

Berkshire Fest Chamber Mark Set With 52G Take

~~Lenox, Mass.,~~ July 28.

Three weekends of Theatre-Concert Hall programs at the Berkshire Festival here, which ended Sunday night (26), broke all attendance records, with a total gross of $52,225 at a $5 top. Series of six concerts, two each weekend is offered by the chamber section of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 1,150-seat hall, with overflow crowds sitting out on the lawn. New attendance mark was 26,150, or an average of 4,360 per concert. First weekend offered Bach music; second, Mozart, and last weekend a combination of Haydn and moderns.

Full 104-piece BSO is gathering here at Tanglewood this week for the three weekends of major concerts in the 6,000-seat Shed. Series A, this weekend, will have Charles Munch conducting Friday and Saturday nights (31-1) and Pierre Monteux as guest maestro Sunday afternoon. Advance sale is good with Tanglewood expecting to better last season's b.o. and attendance, which averaged (in Shed and on the lawn) about 9,465 people per concert.

This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION

JUL 27 1953

Attendance Record Set at Tanglewood

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 26—All records have been broken at Tanglewood for attendance at the six week-end concerts devoted to the music of Bach, Mozart, Haydn and a group of 20th Century composers. A total of 26,150 persons heard these six concerts, with 4450 persons on hand to hear the final program this afternoon. The previous record was made in 1950 with a total of 23,500.

It seems to us that several factors were responsible for this record-breaking attendance. First of all, the devotees of Tanglewood have fully accepted Charles Munch. Secondly, the programs were varied and versatile, and finally, one heard superb performances, for the most part.

Last night we listened to the music of Joseph Haydn, enjoying its wholesomeness, humor and sincerity. Today we jumped forward into the 20th Century and were treated to works by Strauss, Ravel, Prokofieff, Milhaud and Lukas Foss.

True, two of these composers went back to the music of Francois Couperin for their inspiration and so Strauss was represented by his "Divertimenti, OP 86" drawn from harpsichord pieces by Couperin, while Ravel undertook a similar task, first as a suite for piano and then for orchestra.

The Strauss conception of the Couperin pieces was delightful. They were made richer through the orchestration which seldom was heavy or involved and which sustained the intimate, fragile quality of the original. Mr. Munch and his men played in distinguished manner.

It was common practice for the 17th Century composers to write collections of instrumental pieces in memory of their departed colleagues and the generic name for such collections was "Tombeau" which literally means tombstone. Ravel wrote his "Tombeau de Couperin" in 1947 as a piano suite in six movements, each of them dedicated to a companion who had been killed by Germans on the western front. The orchestraversion consists of a prelude and three dance movements like those of the classic suite. Ravel maintains the very essence of the times which were precise, ordered and delicately tinted. It was interesting to note the variations in the handling of the music of Couperin by such different entities as Strauss and Ravel. One could not help but Germanize the music, while the other enriched it through the magic of his own wit and feeling for color and form.

Run of Mill

About all that one can say for Mr. Munch's reading of the Prokofieff "Classical Symphony" is that it was a run of the mill affair, quite devoid of any brio, and lacked luster from beginning to end.

Darius Milhaud is a man of many enthusiasms, so it was not surprising that during his first visit to the United States in 1922 he was delighted with the music he heard in New York's Harlem and drew upon his memory of it as he wrote his "Creation du Monde" composed for a ballet by Blaze Cendrar. However, what he remembered of the musical idiom of 1922 he used in conjunction with music strongly derivative from Stravinsky, Ravel and then mixed it up with a liberal dosage of Gershwin. The result is a mish-mash of sounds and rhythms which might belong to any era. Mr. Munch evidently enjoys conducting this work and his men played it with enthusiasm and it was so received by the audience.

Enchanting Work

The second portion of the program was given over to Lukas Foss, the 31-year-old American composer, pianist and conductor who directed his "A Parade of Death." This enchanting work calls for chorus, orchestra, narrator and tenor soloist. Mme. Zorina was the narrator and John McCollum the tenor. At the moment Tanglewood has in its midst the finest group of singers that the Berkshire Music Festival has had for years. They sang today with a clarity of enunciation, range of dynamics and purity of tone that was a revelation to this listener. Mr. McCollum is proving a serviceable and sturdy tenor and he sang the exacting measures alloted to him in fine fashion. Zorina's voice is beautiful and her delivery of the story of the man and woman and death was simple and affecting. The chorus comments on the words of the narrator. Mr. Foss has written beautiful music for this story and has succeeded in keeping the music an integral part of the story, rather than making of it a monologue with music.

Foss conducts easily and with entire confidence and he held the work together in masterful manner. Here is work which should grace the programs of many orchestras throughout the country; one of the truly fine American compositions.

Cir. (D 157,288) (S 21[illegible])

This Clipping From
COLUMBUS, OHIO
DISPATCH

JUL 27 1953

Music Festival In Berkshires Opens Friday

SCHENECTADY, N.Y.
UNION-STAR

JUL 27 1953

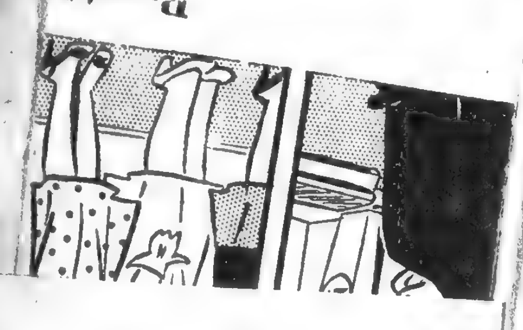
Main Concerts At Tanglewood Start Friday

Cir. (D 38,502)

This Clipping From
WATERBURY, CONN.
AMERICAN

JUL 27 1953

W[illegible] Varied



Roger Livesey and Ursula Jeans, the husband-wife acting team, have been signed for the local production of "Escapade," Roger MacDougal's play which currently is doing well in London. The Liveseys will arrive soon after Labor Day to begin rehearsals. The play will try out in Hartford and Boston and is expected here in November . . . The Woodstock (N. Y.) Playhouse announces the engagement of actor Michael Howard as director. His first production, starting the second half of the season at the Woodstock, will be Shaw's "The Philanderer," opening Aug. 4 . . . Anna Russell, who will open her "Little Show" Sept. 8 at the Vanderbilt, will appear as guest star with the Boston Symphony Orchestra Aug. 13 and 14 at the Berkshire Festival, at Stockbridge, Mass. . . . Alexis Smith and Victor Jory co-star in "Bell, Book and Candle," opening Monday for a week at the Falmouth (Mass.) Playhouse.

---

three week-ends of Friday, Saturday and Sunday programs, will begin this Friday night. Charles Munch will conduct the Friday and Saturday evening concerts, with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor for an all-Tchaikowsky program Sunday afternoon.

This Clipping From
HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES

JUL 27 1953

Tanglewood's Little Series Sets a Record

By CARL E. LINDSTROM

In the afternoon they came
unto a land
In which it seemed always afternoon.

SUNDAY music at Tanglewood after all these years reached a new peak yesterday as to felicity of material and attendance for the Little Series.

There is nothing little about them now, these preliminary Bach-Mozart-Haydn concerts for which a total of 26,000 persons assembled on three weekends.

This surpassed the previous record of 23,000 in 1950 which was the last series that Koussevitzky conducted.

As a reminder that important music making was going on in France while the above named Germanic triumvirate flourished, Charles Munch claimed our attention for Couperin.

* * *

INGENIOUSLY he presented two contrasted modern views of the French pictorialist, Richard Strauss's Divertimento, a transscription of a bevy of dances and Ravel's homage at the tomb of his precursor, also a set of dances, but freely composed in the Couperin mood if not in his idiom.

This was followed by Prokofieff's essay in the antique style, the "Classical Symphony" which could not be more Gallic than it is and then an apparent irrelevancy in Milhaud's "Le Creation du Monde" but actually about what Couperin might have written had he visited Harlem in 1920.

All this music was so germane that it could not have been interrupted by an intermission. So the audience sat entranced for one hour and 25 minutes without a breather. The second half of the program was devoted to Lukas Foss' "A Parable of Death" for narrator, tenor, chorus and orchestra, with the composer conducting.

This was indeed the irrelevancy. It had nothing to do with anything which preceded it in the series. It sounded important but strained and studied. It existed entirely in the penumbra of the dazzling choral performance of Haydn the night before.

* * *

MUNCH TOOK interpretive honors Sunday. When dealing with music that is fragile and exquisite he resists all invitations to dramatize or sentimentalize. It was all perfectly objective and rare.

Technical lapses are so few and far between that it becomes news when the Boston Orchestra makes so blurred a beginning as they did with the "Classical" Symphony.

As a program maker Mr. Munch may not have completely made his point. A young woman was heard to ask her escort: "Who is this Couperin they're making so much of?"

She was rather primly corrected: "He WAS an early English composer."

Quietly: "Oh."

Saturday's Concert:

TO HEAR ORATORIO performed by a balanced choir of singers who are musicians, supported by virtuoso symphonists who are thoroughly rehearsed, bears no resemblance to the article with which most of us are familiar.

The choral students at Tanglewood's Music Center possess the kind of musicianship and ear which distinguish between F sharp and G flat in an enharmonic modulation. In other words they sing in scientifically true pitch. They are so possessed by the music (Saturday night it was Haydn's Theresa Mass) that they sang zealously to the point of tension. Their excitement was palpable.

It communicated to the Boston Symphony's supporting instrumentalists who were energized to an unusually warm glow. Four singers who were in no sense soloists, but a solo quartet, added to a lustrous occasion with dependable, opulent song which even in florid passages was steady and well-defined. They were Lois McCauley, soprano; Beatrice Krebs, contralto; John McCallum tenor, and Lee Cass, bass.

Hugh Ross, most stimulating of choral interpreters, the lanky, willowy man with the long rubber arms and the convulsive style of conducting produced a resplendent and perfect performance.

Perfection is a sort of nemesis with the Boston Symphony and all its works. When no other fault can be found, it is the fault of perfection. And what is wrong with perfection?

Well, just this (and I am indebted to Ross and his company for a brilliant case in point). This Haydn Mass was the finest oratorio performance I have ever heard. It was great music—qua music.

It was a tremendous musical experience; it was not a religious one. A performance of opera or a symphony which left out the heart of the piece would not be a good one.

So we had music that was brilliant without an inner existence. Feeling? Yes, in a way. It was an instance of music that was expressive but without essential emotion.

* * *

ON THE CONTRARY, Mr. Munch's two symphonies, with which the Saturday program began, revealed an unsuspected Haydn. True he chose two of the more virile symphonies — the sober C minor and the brightly boisterous one nicknamed the "Military" symphony. But it was a Haydn nevertheless, who could walk among us a contemparary rather than that porcelain cis-alpine figure who lived the other side of Beethoven.

She is so much a conversation piece that it is impossible not to mention the girl flutist who had enough thematic passages in the two symphonies to give some idea of her talents. Doriot Anthony plays the way she looks, with the freshness, self-assurance and pensiveness of youth.

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE

JUL 27 1953

Zorina Terrific

Berkshire Festival Hears Foss' "A Parable of Death"

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX, July 26—Lukas Foss' "A Parable of Death" was given its first Berkshire performance, this afternoon, at the final concert in the preliminary series of the Berkshire festival by the Boston Symphony orchestra. This unusual, deeply-felt and skillfully written score, the one new work of the preliminary series, is based upon verses of Rainer Maria Rilke which dwell upon two profound facts: the gaining by relinquishment, which is love, and the eternal continuity of life which grows out of death.

Foss' music calls for an extensive if not huge orchestra, chorus and tenor soloist. The text of Rilke (in an English translation which runs to some un-poetic and multi-syllabled words) was spoken at this performance as at the three previous in Louisville, New York and the Ojai festival in California, by Vera Zorina. The tenor soloist was John McCollum.

If you go back far enough, in tracing the ancestry of the general form, the harmonic idiom and the overall expressive style, you come to Gustav Mahler, and, chorally to Bach. Nonetheless, Mr. Foss has written in a contemporary if not indisputably personal manner, one in which his technic of orchestral and choral writing has grown perceptibly.

At first hearing I am inclined to sort out the choral writing from orchestra as less eloquent, and the tenor solo more stylized than emotional. That would be superficial judgment, however, for "A Parable of Death" is not completely absorbed at one performance. There are too many details, in rhythm, in color and patterns of orchestral usage, to warrant quick blanket opinion. The dominant impression, however, is one of power and beauty but sluggish motion.

Zorina Gorgeous

Miss Zorina, svelte and gorgeous in a pale blue gown, spoke with moving depth of voice and with a truly poetic style, lines which all too often, at least in English, are prose in effect. Occasionally, she had such heavy competition from the instruments that blurred her words, but mostly she was clearly understood. Mr. Foss conducted his own work and, seemingly, did it very well.

Mr. McCollum sang his relatively brief role with warmth of feeling and a fine ease of manner and technic.

Charles Munch had conducted the previous portions of the concert, which were broadcast over the C. B. S. network, and for that reason were played in the [illegible] shed instead of the smaller theatre-concert hall. The afternoon [illegible] with a superb account of Strauss' divertimento after Couperin, [illegible] included an equally superb [illegible] "Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin;" Prokofieff's "Classical Symphony and Milhaud's [illegible] and masterful "La Creation du Monde."

It was interesting [illegible] Munch took the prelude and [illegible] lane of Ravel's [illegible] much slower than most conductors do it, with increasing clarity of detail at a sacrifice of [illegible] motion. Milhaud's music, [illegible] late ragtime and early jazz in spots, enjoyed the best performances of it this reviewer has heard.

The final Saturday evening [illegible] this preliminary series was devoted to Haydn of the symphony in C Minor, No. 95, the "Military" Symphony and the "Theresa" mass. Mr. Munch conducted the symphonies, of which the first named went reasonably well and the second in a glowing, [illegible] exact fashion that was [illegible] genius of conducting and playing.

"Theresa" Mass Lovely

Haydn's "Theresa" mass, [illegible] ly unknown over here save for a foreign recording made a few years ago, is a lovely and noble score, if not one of the world's greatest masterpieces. For it, Hugh Ross had prepared the Berkshire Music Center chorus down to the last eighth note and they sang with a really thrilling quality of tone and ensemble. The quartet of vocal soloists, also Berkshire Center students, consisted of soprano Lois McCauley, contralto Beatrice Krebs, Mr. McCollum in the tenor part, and bass Lee Cass.

For blend of voices and expert technic in style and keeping together they were, perhaps, the finest quartet I have heard in more than 20 years of music reviewing.

Mr. Ross conducted and the performance went admirably. But for the life of me, I can't see how the orchestra, which could not have had too many rehearsals for the mass, followed his peculiar (and sometimes non-existent) beat. But they were of the Boston Symphony, which is equipped to pass miracles.

The Saturday night attendance in the theatre-concert hall—and on the lawn outside—was 4400. Today's audience, 4450. That brought the total attendance for the entire preliminary series to 26,150, the biggest in Berkshire Festival history.

This Clipping From
VARIETY
NEW YORK, N. Y.

JUL 29 1953

Berkshire Fest Chamber Mark Set With 52G Take

Lenox, Mass., July 28.

Three weekends of Theatre-Concert Hall programs at the Berkshire Festival here, which ended Sunday night (26), broke all attendance records, with a total gross of $52,225 at a $5 top. Series of six concerts, two each weekend is offered by the chamber section of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 1,150-seat hall, with overflow crowds sitting out on the lawn. New attendance mark was 26,150, or an average of 4,360 per concert. First weekend offered Bach music; second, Mozart, and last weekend a combination of Haydn and moderns.

Full 104-piece BSO is gathering here at Tanglewood this week for the three weekends of major concerts in the 6,000-seat Shed. Series A, this weekend, will have Charles Munch conducting Friday and Saturday nights (31-1) and Pierre Monteux as guest maestro Sunday afternoon. Advance sale is good with Tanglewood expecting to better last season's b.o. and attendance, which averaged (in Shed and on the lawn) about 9,465 people per concert.

This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION

JUL 27 1953

Attendance Record Set at Tanglewood

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 26—All records have been broken at Tanglewood for attendance at the six week-end concerts devoted to the music of Bach, Mozart, Haydn and a group of 20th Century composers. A total of 26,150 persons heard these six concerts, with 4450 persons on hand to hear the final program this afternoon. The previous record was made in 1950 with a total of 23,500.

It seems to us that several factors were responsible for this record-breaking attendance. First of all, the devotees of Tanglewood have fully accepted Charles Munch. Secondly, the programs were varied and versatile, and finally, one heard superb performances, for the most part.

Last night we listened to the music of Joseph Haydn, enjoying its wholesomeness, humor and sincerity. Today we jumped forward into the 20th Century and were treated to works by Strauss, Ravel, Prokofieff, Milhaud and Lukas Foss.

True, two of these composers went back to the music of Francois Couperin for their inspiration and so Strauss was represented by his "Divertimenti, OP 86" drawn from harpsichord pieces by Couperin, while Ravel undertook a similar task, first as a suite for piano and then for orchestra.

The Strauss conception of the Couperin pieces was delightful. They were made richer through the orchestration which seldom was heavy or involved and which sustained the intimate, fragile quality of the original. Mr. Munch and his men played in distinguished manner.

It was common practice for the 17th Century composers to write collections of instrumental pieces in memory of their departed colleagues and the generic name for such collections was "Tombeau" which literally means tombstone. Ravel wrote his "Tombeau de Couperin" in 1947 as a piano suite in six movements, each of them dedicated to a companion who had been killed by Germans on the western front. The orchestraversion consists of a prelude and three dance movements like those of the classic suite. Ravel maintains the very essence of the times which were precise, ordered and delicately tinted. It was interesting to note the variations in the handling of the music of Couperin by such different entities as Strauss and Ravel. One could not help but Germanize the music, while the other enriched it through the magic of his own wit and feeling for color and form.

Run of Mill

About all that one can say for Mr. Munch's reading of the Prokofieff "Classical Symphony" is that it was a run of the mill affair, quite devoid of any brio, and lacked luster from beginning to end.

Darius Milhaud is a man of many enthusiasms, so it was not surprising that during his first visit to the United States in 1922 he was delighted with the music he heard in New York's Harlem and drew upon his memory of it as he wrote his "Creation du Monde" composed for a ballet by Blaze Cendrar. However, what he remembered of the musical idiom of 1922 he used in conjunction with music strongly derivative from Stravinsky, Ravel and then mixed it up with a liberal dosage of Gershwin. The result is a mishmash of sounds and rhythms which might belong to any era. Mr. Munch evidently enjoys conducting this work and his men played it with enthusiasm and it was so received by the audience.

Enchanting Work

The second portion of the program was given over to Lukas Foss, the 31-year-old American composer, pianist and conductor who directed his "A Parade of Death." This enchanting work calls for chorus, orchestra, narrator and tenor soloist. Mme. Zorina was the narrator and John McCollum the tenor. At the moment Tanglewood has in its midst the finest group of singers that the Berkshire Music Festival has had for years. They sang today with a clarity of enunciation, range of dynamics and purity of tone that was a revelation to this listener. Mr. McCollum is proving a serviceable and sturdy tenor and he sang the exacting measures alloted to him in fine fashion. Zorina's voice is beautiful and her delivery of the story of the man and woman and death was simple and affecting. The chorus comments on the words of the narrator. Mr. Foss has written beautiful music for this story and has succeeded in keeping the music an integral part of the story, rather than making of it a monologue with music.

Foss conducts easily and with entire confidence and he held the work together in masterful manner. Here is work which should grace the programs of many orchestras throughout the country; one of the truly fine American compositions.

Cir. (D 157,288) (S 2

This Clipping From
COLUMBUS, OHIO
DISPATCH

JUL 27 1953

Music Festival In Berkshires Opens Friday

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
UNION-STAR

JUL 27 1953

3 DIMENSION
WARNER BROS.' THE CHARGE AT FEATHER RIVER
Starring FRED
OSCAR LEVANT
with JAMES MITCH Color by TECH
ON STAGE: "ALPINE
Leonidoff, Rockettes, Corp
Orchestra directed by Ra
Doors Open
Picture at: 10:30, 1:28, 4:20, 7

NEW YORK (UP).—Three weekends of Bach, Mozart, and Haydn were warmups for three weekends of the full Boston Symphony at the 16th Berkshire Festival in the hills of western Massachusetts.

The warmup weekends used members of the orchestra correctly proportioned in numbers to the scores that were performed. The Bach weekend—Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon—included five of the Brandenburg concertos, the Second Orchestral Suite, and the 28th cantata.

The Mozart concerts included the D Major Divertimento (K. 136), the G Major Violin Concerto (K. 216), the Serenade for 13 wind instruments (K. 264), Eine Kleine Nachtmusik, and the "Prague" and "Jupiter" symphonies.

Issac Stern was soloist for the Mozart; Lukas Foss, pianist, for the fifth Brandenburg. Otherwise, soloists were drawn from the orchestra—Doriot Anthony, flute; Harold Gomberg, oboe; Roger Voisin, trumpet; and Richard Burgin, violin.

The full 104-piece orchestra began performing in the Music Shed June 21, inaugurating three weekends. Charles Munch, its musical director, conducted, assisted by Hugh Ross.

The major [illegible] three week-ends of Friday, Saturday and Sunday programs, will begin this Friday night. Charles Munch will conduct the Friday and Saturday evening concerts, with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor for an all-Tchaikowsky program Sunday afternoon.

This Clipping From
HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES

JUL 27 1953

Tanglewood's Little Series Sets a Record

By CARL E. LINDSTROM

In the afternoon they came
unto a land
In which it seemed always afternoon.

SUNDAY music at Tanglewood after all these years reached a new peak yesterday as to felicity of material and attendance for the Little Series.

There is nothing little about them now, these preliminary Bach-Mozart-Haydn concerts for which a total of 26,000 persons assembled on three weekends.

This surpassed the previous record of 23,000 in 1950 which was the last series that Koussevitzky conducted.

As a reminder that important music making was going on in France while the above named Germanic triumvirate flourished, Charles Munch claimed our attention for Couperin.

* * *

INGENIOUSLY he presented two contrasted modern views of the French pictorialist, Richard Strauss's Divertimento, a transscription of a bevy of dances and Ravel's homage at the tomb of his precursor, also a set of dances, but freely composed in the Couperin mood if not in his idiom.

This was followed by Prokofieff's essay in the antique style, the "Classical Symphony" which could not be more Gallic than it is and then an apparent irrelevancy in Milhaud's "Le Creation du Monde" but actually about what Couperin might have written had he visited Harlem in 1920.

All this music was so germane that it could not have been interrupted by an intermission. So the audience sat entranced for one hour and 25 minutes without a breather. The second half of the program was devoted to Lukas Foss' "A Parable of Death" for narrator, tenor, chorus and orchestra, with the composer conducting.

This was indeed the irrelevancy. It had nothing to do with anything which preceded it in the series. It sounded important but strained and studied. It existed entirely in the penumbra of the dazzling choral performance of Haydn the night before.

* * *

MUNCH TOOK interpretive honors Sunday. When dealing with music that is fragile and exquisite he resists all invitations to dramatize or sentimentalize. It was all perfectly objective and rare.

Technical lapses are so few and far between that it becomes news when the Boston Orchestra makes so blurred a beginning as they did with the "Classical" Symphony.

As a program maker Mr. Munch may not have completely made his point. A young woman was heard to ask her escort: "Who is this Couperin they're making so much of?"

She was rather primly corrected: "He WAS an early English composer."

Quietly: "Oh."

Saturday's Concert:

TO HEAR ORATORIO performed by a balanced choir of singers who are musicians, supported by virtuoso symphonists who are thoroughly rehearsed, bears no resemblance to the article with which most of us are familiar.

The choral students at Tanglewood's Music Center possess the kind of musicianship and ear which distinguish between F sharp and G flat in an enharmonic modulation. In other words they sing in scientifically true pitch. They are so possessed by the music (Saturday night it was Haydn's Theresa Mass) that they sang zealously to the point of tension. Their excitement was palpable.

It communicated to the Boston Symphony's supporting instrumentalists who were energized to an unusually warm glow. Four singers who were in no sense soloists, but a solo quartet, added to a lustrous occasion with dependable, opulent song which even in florid passages was steady and well-defined. They were Lois McCauley, soprano; Beatrice Krebs, contralto; John McCallum tenor, and Lee Cass, bass.

Hugh Ross, most stimulating of choral interpreters, the lanky, willowy man with the long rubber arms and the convulsive style of conducting produced a resplendent and perfect performance.

Perfection is a sort of nemesis with the Boston Symphony and all its works. When no other fault can be found, it is the fault of perfection. And what is wrong with perfection?

Well, just this (and I am indebted to Ross and his company for a brilliant case in point). This Haydn Mass was the finest oratorio performance I have ever heard. It was great music—qua music.

It was a tremendous musical experience; it was not a religious one. A performance of opera or a symphony which left out the heart of the piece would not be a good one.

So we had music that was brilliant without an inner existence. Feeling? Yes, in a way. It was an instance of music that was expressive but without essential emotion.

* * *

ON THE CONTRARY, Mr. Munch's two symphonies, with which the Saturday program began, revealed an unsuspected Haydn. True he chose two of the more virile symphonies — the sober C minor and the brightly boisterous one nicknamed the "Military" symphony. But it was a Haydn nevertheless, who could walk among us a contemporary rather than that porcelain cis-alpine figure who lived the other side of Beethoven.

She is so much a conversation piece that it is impossible not to mention the girl flutist who had enough thematic passages in the two symphonies to give some idea of her talents. Doriot Anthony plays the way she looks, with the freshness, self-assurance and pensiveness of youth.

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE

JUL 27 1953

Zorina Terrific

Berkshire Festival Hears Foss' "A Parable of Death"

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX, July 26—Lukas Foss' "A Parable of Death" was given its first Berkshire performance, this afternoon, at the final concert in the preliminary series of the Berkshire festival by the Boston Symphony orchestra. This unusual, deeply-felt and skillfully written score, the one new work of the preliminary series, is based upon verses of Rainer Maria Rilke which dwell upon two profound facts: the gaining by relinquishment, which is love, and the eternal continuity of life which grows out of death.

Foss' music calls for an extensive if not huge orchestra, chorus and tenor soloist. The text of Rilke (in an English translation which runs to some un-poetic and multi-syllabled words) was spoken at this performance as at the three previous in Louisville, New York and the Ojai festival in California, by Vera Zorina. The tenor soloist was John McCollum.

If you go back far enough, in tracing the ancestry of the general form, the harmonic idiom and the overall expressive style, you come to Gustav Mahler, and, chorally to Bach. Nonetheless, Mr. Foss has written in a contemporary if not indisputably personal manner, one in which his technic of orchestral and choral writing has grown perceptibly.

At first hearing I am inclined to sort out the choral writing from orchestra as less eloquent, and the tenor solo more stylized than emotional. That would be superficial judgment, however, for "A Parable of Death" is not completely absorbed at one performance. There are too many details, in rhythm, in color and patterns of orchestral usage, to warrant quick blanket opinion. The dominant impression, however, is one of power and beauty but sluggish motion.

Zorina Gorgeous

Miss Zorina, svelte and gorgeous in a pale blue gown, spoke with moving depth of voice and with a truly poetic style, lines which all too often, at least in English, are prose in effect. Occasionally, she had such heavy competition from the instruments that blurred her words, but mostly she was clearly understood. Mr. Foss conducted his own work and, seemingly, did it very well.

Mr. McCollum sang his relatively brief role with warmth of feeling and a fine ease of manner and technic.

Charles Munch had conducted the previous portions of the concert, which were broadcast over the C. B. S. network, and for that reason were played in the [illegible] shed instead of the smaller theatre-concert hall. The afternoon began with a superb account of Strauss' divertimento after Couperin, and included an equally superb [illegible] Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin;" Prokofieff's "Classical" Symphony and Milhaud's youthful and masterful "La Creation du Monde."

It was interesting that Mr. Munch took the prelude and Forlane of Ravel's jeweled [illegible] much slower than most conductors do it, with increasing clarity of detail at a sacrifice of [illegible] motion. Milhaud's music, between late ragtime and early jazz in spots, enjoyed the best performances of it this reviewer has heard.

The final Saturday evening of this preliminary series was devoted to Haydn of the symphony in C Minor, No 95, the Military Symphony and the "Theresa" mass. Mr Munch conducted the symphonies, of which the first named went reasonably well and the second in a glowing, absolutely exact fashion that was [illegible] genius of conducting and playing.

"Theresa" Mass Lovely

Haydn's "Theresa" mass, virtually unknown over here save for a foreign recording made a few years ago, is a lovely and noble score, if not one of the world's greatest masterpieces. For it, Hugh Ross had prepared the Berkshire Music Center chorus down to the last eighth note and they sang with a really thrilling quality of tone and ensemble. The quartet of vocal soloists, also Berkshire Center students, consisted of soprano Lois McCauley, contralto Beatrice Krebs, Mr. McCollum in the tenor part, and bass Lee Cass.

For blend of voices and expert technic in style and keeping together they were, perhaps, the finest quartet I have heard in more than 20 years of music reviewing.

Mr. Ross conducted and the performance went admirably. But for the life of me, I can't see how the orchestra, which could not have had too many rehearsals for the mass, followed his peculiar (and sometimes non-existent) beat. But they were of the Boston Symphony, which is equipped to pass miracles.

The Saturday night attendance in the theatre-concert hall—and on the lawn outside—was 4400. Today's audience, 4450. That brought the total attendance for the entire preliminary series to 26,150, the biggest in Berkshire Festival history.

This Clipping From
VARIETY
NEW YORK, N. Y.

JUL 29 1953

Berkshire Fest Chamber Mark Set With 52G Take

Lenox, Mass., July 28.

Three weekends of Theatre-Concert Hall programs at the Berkshire Festival here, which ended Sunday night (26), broke all attendance records, with a total gross of $52,225 at a $5 top. Series of six concerts, two each weekend is offered by the chamber section of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 1,150-seat hall, with overflow crowds sitting out on the lawn. New attendance mark was 26,150, or an average of 4,360 per concert. First weekend offered Bach music; second, Mozart, and last weekend a combination of Haydn and moderns.

Full 104-piece BSO is gathering here at Tanglewood this week for the three weekends of major concerts in the 6,000-seat Shed. Series A, this weekend, will have Charles Munch conducting Friday and Saturday nights (31-1) and Pierre Monteux as guest maestro Sunday afternoon. Advance sale is good with Tanglewood expecting to better last season's b.o. and attendance, which averaged (in Shed and on the lawn) about 9,465 people per concert.

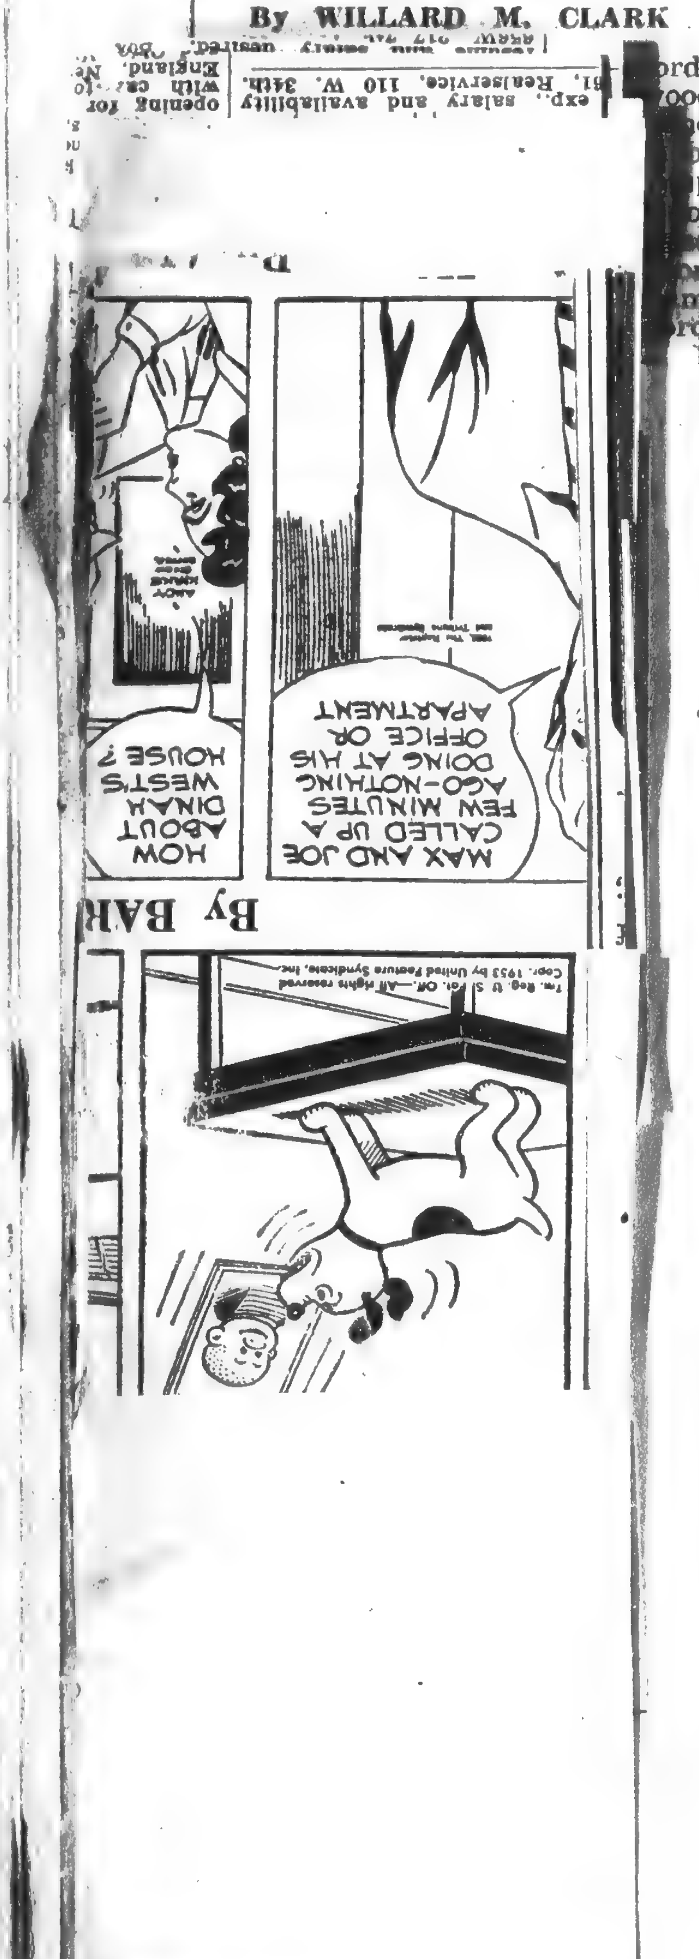
[253]

This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION

JUL 27 1953

Attendance Record Set at Tanglewood

By WILLARD M. CLARK



HOW ABOUT DINAH WEST'S HOUSE?
MAX AND JOE CALLED UP A FEW MINUTES AGO—NOTHING DOING AT HIS OFFICE OR APARTMENT
By BAR

was made in 1950 with a total of 23,500.

It seems to us that several factors were responsible for this record-breaking attendance. First of all, the devotees of Tanglewood have fully accepted Charles Munch. Secondly, the programs were varied and versatile, and finally, one heard superb performances, for the most part.

Last night we listened to the music of Joseph Haydn, enjoying its wholesomeness, humor and sincerity. Today we jumped forward into the 20th Century and were treated to works by Strauss, Ravel, Prokofieff, Milhaud and Lukas Foss.

True, two ,of these composers went back to the music of Francois Couperin for their inspiration and so Strauss was represented by his "Divertimenti, OP 86" drawn from harpsichord pieces by Couperin, while Ravel undertook a similar task, first as a suite for piano and then for orchestra.

The Strauss conception of the Couperin pieces was delightful. They were made richer through the orchestration which seldom was heavy or involved and which sustained the intimate, fragile quality of the original. Mr. Munch and his men played in distinguished manner.

It was common practice for the 17th Century composers to write collections of instrumental pieces in memory of their departed colleagues and the generic name for such collections was "Tombeau" which literally means tombstone. Ravel wrote his "Tombeau de Couperin" in 1947 as a piano suite in six movements, each of them dedicated to a companion who had been killed by Germans on the western front. The orchestraversion consists of a prelude and three dance movements like those of the classic suite. Ravel maintains the very essence of the times which were precise, ordered and delicately tinted. It was interesting to note the variations in the handling of the music of Couperin by such different entities as Strauss and Ravel. One could not help but Germanize the music, while the other enriched it through the magic of his own wit and feeling for color and form.

Run of Mill

About all that one can say for Mr. Munch's reading of the Prokofieff "Classical Symphony" is that it was a run of the mill affair, quite devoid of any brio, and lacked luster from beginning to end.

Darius Milhaud is a man of many enthusiasms, so it was not surprising that during his first visit to the United States in 1922 he was delighted with the music he heard in New York's Harlem and drew upon his memory of it as he wrote his "Creation du Monde" composed for a ballet by Blaze Cendrar. However, what he remembered of the musical idiom of 1922 he used in conjunction with music strongly derivative from Stravinsky, Ravel and then mixed it up with a liberal dosage of Gershwin. The result is a mishmash of sounds and rhythms which might belong to any era. Mr. Munch evidently enjoys conducting this work and his men played it with enthusiasm and it was so received by the audience.

Enchanting Work

The second portion of the program was given over to Lukas Foss, the 31-year-old American composer, pianist and conductor who directed his "A Parade of Death." This enchanting work calls for chorus, orchestra, narrator and tenor soloist. Mme. Zorina was the narrator and John McCollum the tenor. At the moment Tanglewood has in its midst the finest group of singers that the Berkshire Music Festival has had for years. They sang today with a clarity of enunciation, range of dynamics and purity of tone that was a revelation to this listener. Mr. McCollum is proving a serviceable and sturdy tenor and he sang the exacting measures alloted to him in fine fashion. Zorina's voice is beautiful and her delivery of the story of the man and woman and death was simple and affecting. The chorus comments on the words of the narrator. Mr. Foss has written beautiful music for this story and has succeeded in keeping the music an integral part of the story, rather than making of it a monologue with music.

Foss conducts easily and with entire confidence and he held the work together in masterful manner. Here is work which should grace the programs of many orchestras throughout the country; one of the truly fine American compositions.

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., July 27 — Tanglewood listeners yesterday reacted with astonishment, resentment or delight, according to the range of their musical broad-mindedness, to the assortment comprising the final program of the Berkshire Music Festival's "little concert" series.

What they heard went from the vibrant harpsichord exercises of Richard Strauss' Diverimento (after Couperin), the butterfly delicacy of Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin;" to prokofieff's miniature satire in the traditional manner, his Classical Symphony; the strident, brassy syncopation of "La Creation du Monde," by Darius Milhaud; and Lukas Foss' dramatic "Parable of Death."

It was a program revealing a trend becoming evident at the Festival, that of replacing much of the Boston Symphony's solid, tried and true conventional concert menu with more challenging fare. Whether the audiences agree with this policy or not, they support it, and in constantly increasing numbers. Yesterday's 4,450 attendance at the concert, moved from the Theater Hall to the Shed to accommodate broadcasting demands, brought the six-concert series total attendance to 26,150, breaking the 23,500 record set in 1950.

It was the Milhaud "jazz poem," and Foss' choral work, which drew the most comment yesterday. The Milhaud carries familiar themes of American jazz, from blues on. If not for the fact that it was composed in the 20's, before inception of the "progressive jazz" era, one might attribute a be-bop echo to its more dissonant phrases.

Vera Zorina, Berlin-born ballet star, was narrator for the moving "Parable of Death," conducted by Mr. Foss. The young pianist composed this powerful choral recitative in Rome while studying there under a Fulbright Fellowship several years ago.

The major Festival concerts, three week-ends of Friday, Saturday and Sunday programs, will begin this Friday night. Charles Munch will conduct the Friday and Saturday evening concerts, with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor for an all-Tchaikowsky program Sunday afternoon.

This Clipping From
HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES

JUL 27 1953

Tanglewood's Little Series Sets a Record

By CARL E. LINDSTROM

In the afternoon they came
unto a land
In which it seemed always afternoon.

SUNDAY music at Tanglewood after all these years reached a new peak yesterday as to felicity of material and attendance for the Little Series.

There is nothing little about them now, these preliminary Bach-Mozart-Haydn concerts for which a total of 26,000 persons assembled on three weekends.

This surpassed the previous record of 23,000 in 1950 which was the last series that Koussevitzky conducted.

As a reminder that important music making was going on in France while the above named Germanic triumvirate flourished, Charles Munch claimed our attention for Couperin.

* * *

INGENIOUSLY he presented two contrasted modern views of the French pictorialist, Richard Strauss's Divertimento, a transcription of a bevy of dances and Ravel's homage at the tomb of his precursor, also a set of dances, but freely composed in the Couperin mood if not in his idiom.

This was followed by Prokofieff's essay in the antique style, the "Classical Symphony" which could not be more Gallic than it is and then an apparent irrelevancy in Milhaud's "Le Creation du Monde" but actually about what Couperin might have written had he visited Harlem in 1920.

All this music was so germane that it could not have been interrupted by an intermission. So the audience sat entranced for one hour and 25 minutes without a breather. The second half of the program was devoted to Lukas Foss' "A Parable of Death" for narrator, tenor, chorus and orchestra, with the composer conducting.

This was indeed the irrelevancy. It had nothing to do with anything which preceded it in the series. It sounded important but strained and studied. It existed entirely in the penumbra of the dazzling choral performance of Haydn the night before.

* * *

MUNCH TOOK interpretive honors Sunday. When dealing with music that is fragile and exquisite he resists all invitations to dramatize or sentimentalize. It was all perfectly objective and rare.

Technical lapses are so few and far between that it becomes news when the Boston Orchestra makes so blurred a beginning as they did with the "Classical" Symphony.

As a program maker Mr. Munch may not have completely made his point. A young woman was heard to ask her escort: "Who is this Couperin they're making so much of?"

She was rather primly corrected: "He WAS an early English composer."

Quietly: "Oh."

Saturday's Concert:

TO HEAR ORATORIO performed by a balanced choir of singers who are musicians, supported by virtuoso symphonists who are thoroughly rehearsed, bears no resemblance to the article with which most of us are familiar.

The choral students at Tanglewood's Music Center possess the kind of musicianship and ear which distinguish between F sharp and G flat in an enharmonic modulation. In other words they sing in scientifically true pitch. They are so possessed by the music (Saturday night it was Haydn's Theresa Mass) that they sang zealously to the point of tension. Their excitement was palpable.

It communicated to the Boston Symphony's supporting instrumentalists who were energized to an unusually warm glow. Four singers who were in no sense soloists, but a solo quartet, added to a lustrous occasion with dependable, opulent song which even in florid passages was steady and well-defined. They were Lois McCauley, soprano; Beatrice Krebs, contralto; John McCallum tenor, and Lee Cass, bass.

Hugh Ross, most stimulating of choral interpreters, the lanky, willowy man with the long rubber arms and the convulsive style of conducting produced a resplendent and perfect performance.

Perfection is a sort of nemesis with the Boston Symphony and all its works. When no other fault can be found, it is the fault of perfection. And what is wrong with perfection?

Well, just this (and I am indebted to Ross and his company for a brilliant case in point). This Haydn Mass was the finest oratorio performance I have ever heard. It was great music—qua music.

It was a tremendous musical experience; it was not a religious one. A performance of opera or a symphony which left out the heart of the piece would not be a good one.

So we had music that was brilliant without an inner existence. Feeling? Yes, in a way. It was an instance of music that was expressive but without essential emotion.

* * *

ON THE CONTRARY, Mr. Munch's two symphonies, with which the Saturday program began, revealed an unsuspected Haydn. True he chose two of the more virile symphonies — the sober C minor and the brightly boisterous one nicknamed the "Military" symphony. But it was a Haydn nevertheless, who could walk among us a contemparary rather than that porcelain cis-alpine figure who lived the other side of Beethoven.

She is so much a conversation piece that it is impossible not to mention the girl flutist who had enough thematic passages in the two symphonies to give some idea of her talents. Doriot Anthony plays the way she looks, with the freshness, self-assurance and pensiveness of youth.

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE

JUL 27 1953

Zorina Terrific

Berkshire Festival Hears Foss' "A Parable of Death"

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX, July 26—Lukas Foss' "A Parable of Death" was given its first Berkshire performance, this afternoon, at the final concert in the preliminary series of the Berkshire festival by the Boston Symphony orchestra. This unusual, deeply-felt and skillfully written score, the one new work of the preliminary series, is based upon verses of Rainer Maria Rilke which dwell upon two profound facts: the gaining by relinquishment, which is love, and the eternal continuity of life which grows out of death.

Foss' music calls for an extensive if not huge orchestra, chorus and tenor soloist. The text of Rilke (in an English translation which runs to some un-poetic and multi-syllabled words) was spoken at this performance as at the three previous in Louisville, New York and the Ojai festival in California, by Vera Zorina. The tenor soloist was John McCollum.

If you go back far enough, in tracing the ancestry of the general form, the harmonic idiom and the overall expressive style, you come to Gustav Mahler, and, chorally to Bach. Nonetheless, Mr. Foss has written in a contemporary if not indisputably personal manner, one in which his technic of orchestral and choral writing has grown perceptibly.

At first hearing I am inclined to sort out the choral writing from orchestra as less eloquent, and the tenor solo more stylized than emotional. That would be superficial judgment, however, for "A Parable of Death" is not completely absorbed at one performance. There are too many details, in rhythm, in color and patterns of orchestral usage, to warrant quick blanket opinion. The dominant impression, however, is one of power and beauty but sluggish motion.

Zorina Gorgeous

Miss Zorina, svelte and gorgeous in a pale blue gown, spoke with moving depth of voice and with a truly poetic style, lines which all too often, at least in English, are prose in effect. Occasionally, she had such heavy competition from the instruments that blurred her words, but mostly she was clearly understood. Mr. Foss conducted his own work and, seemingly, did it very well.

Mr. McCollum sang his relatively brief role with warmth of feeling and a fine ease of manner and technic.

Charles Munch had conducted the previous portions of the concert, which were broadcast over the C. B. S. network, and for that reason were played in the music shed instead of the smaller theatre-concert hall. The afternoon began with a superb account of Strauss' divertimento after Couperin, and included an equally superb [illegible] "Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin;" Prokofieff's "Classical" Symphony and Milhaud's youthful and masterful "La Creation du Monde."

It was interesting that Mr. Munch took the prelude and Forlane of Ravel's jewelled [illegible] much slower than most conductors do it, with increasing clarity of detail at a sacrifice of [illegible] motion. Milhaud's music, [illegible] late ragtime and early jazz in spots, enjoyed the best performances of it this reviewer has heard.

The final Saturday evening of this preliminary series was devoted to Haydn of the symphony in C Minor, No 95, the "Military" Symphony and the "Theresa" mass. Mr. Munch conducted the symphonies, of which the first named went reasonably well and the second in a glowing, absolutely exact fashion that was [illegible] genius of conducting and playing.

"Theresa" Mass Lovely

Haydn's "Theresa" mass, virtually unknown over here save for a foreign recording made a few years ago, is a lovely and noble score, if not one of the world's greatest masterpieces. For it, Hugh Ross had prepared the Berkshire Music Center chorus down to the last eighth note and they sang with a really thrilling quality of tone and ensemble. The quartet of vocal soloists, also Berkshire Center students, consisted of soprano Lois McCauley, contralto Beatrice Krebs, Mr. McCollum in the tenor part, and bass Lee Cass.

For blend of voices and expert technic in style and keeping together they were, perhaps, the finest quartet I have heard in more than 20 years of music reviewing.

Mr. Ross conducted and the performance went admirably. But for the life of me, I can't see how the orchestra, which could not have had too many rehearsals for the mass, followed his peculiar (and sometimes non-existent) beat. But they were of the Boston Symphony, which is equipped to pass miracles.

The Saturday night attendance in the theatre-concert hall—and on the lawn outside—was 1400. Today's audience, 4450. That brought the total attendance for the entire preliminary series to 26,150, the biggest in Berkshire Festival history.

This Clipping From
VARIETY
NEW YORK, N. Y.

JUL 29 53

Berkshire Fest Chamber Mark Set With 52G Take

Lenox, Mass., July 28.

Three weekends of Theatre-Concert Hall programs at the Berkshire Festival here, which ended Sunday night (26), broke all attendance records, with a total gross of $52,225 at a $5 top. Series of six concerts, two each weekend, is offered by the chamber section of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 1,150-seat hall, with overflow crowds sitting out on the lawn. New attendance mark was 26,150, or an average of 4,360 per concert. First weekend offered Bach music; second, Mozart, and last weekend a combination of Haydn and moderns.

Full 104-piece BSO is gathering here at Tanglewood this week for the three weekends of major concerts in the 6,000-seat Shed. Series A, this weekend, will have Charles Munch conducting Friday and Saturday nights (31-1) and Pierre Monteux as guest maestro Sunday afternoon. Advance sale is good with Tanglewood expecting to better last season's b.o. and attendance, which averaged (in Shed and on the lawn) about 9,465 people per concert.

[273]

...cationing ...
...thers are

BEARING S...
1663 EAST MAIN STREET
KAPLAN
NATIONAL
Ball — Roller — Th...
BEARING
AS NEAR AS YOUR Telephone
A P L A K B R O S.

LENOX, Mass., July 27—The major series of Berkshire Festival concerts opens this week with evening concerts Friday and Saturday, conducted by Charles Munch, and one Sunday afternoon with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor.

The three programs will be played in the 6,000-seat shed at Tanglewood with evening performances scheduled for 8:30 and the Sunday performance at 2:30 p.m.

Nine concerts in all will be given over a period of three weekends with the last listed for Aug. 16.

Zion Francescatti will be soloist in the Mendelssohn "Violin Concerto in E Minor" Friday night. Other numbers will be Ravel's "Bolero," Copeland's "Appalachian Spring" and Beethoven's "Overture to Leonore, No. 3."

Saturday night Lukas Foss will be soloist for his own "Piano Concerto No. 2." Also on this bill will be Mendelssohn's "Symphony No. 4," Hindemith's "Symphonic Metamorphosis of Themes by Weber" and Schumann's "Overture to Manfred."

An all-Tschaikowsky program will be presented Sunday afternoon. The "Symphony No. 5," "Serenade for Strings" and "Piano Concerto No. 1" will be presented. Soloist for the concerto will be Jorge Bolet.

A program by the Hungarian Quartet will be presented Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. in the theater-concert hall for the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. Quartets by Haydn, Piston and Beethoven will be played.

---

ce Record
t Tanglewood

RK

records lewood ek-end sic of group
A tothese ons on rogram
record was made in 1950 with a total of 23,500.

It seems to us that several factors were responsible for this record-breaking attendance. First of all, the devotees of Tanglewood have fully accepted Charles Munch. Secondly, the programs were varied and versatile, and finally, one heard superb performances, for the most part.

Last night we listened to the music of Joseph Haydn, enjoying its wholesomeness, humor and sincerity. Today we jumped forward into the 20th Century and were treated to works by Strauss, Ravel, Prokofieff, Milhaud and Lukas Foss.

True, two of these composers went back to the music of Francois Couperin for their inspiration and so Strauss was represented by his "Divertimenti, OP 86" drawn from harpsichord pieces by Couperin, while Ravel undertook a similar task, first as a suite for piano and then for orchestra.

The Strauss conception of the Couperin pieces was delightful. They were made richer through the orchestration which seldom was heavy or involved and which sustained the intimate, fragile quality of the original. Mr. Munch and his men played in distinguished manner.

It was common practice for the 17th Century composers to write collections of instrumental pieces in memory of their departed colleagues and the generic name for such collections was "Tombeau" which literally means tombstone. Ravel wrote his "Tombeau de Couperin" in 1947 as a piano suite in six movements, each of them dedicated to a companion who had been killed by Germans on the western front. The orchestraversion consists of a prelude and three dance movements like those of the classic suite. Ravel maintains the very essence of the times which were precise, ordered and delicately tinted. It was interesting to note the variations in the handling of the music of Couperin by such different entities as Strauss and Ravel. One could not help but Germanize the music, while the other enriched it through the magic of his own wit and feeling for color and form.

Run of Mill

About all that one can say for Mr. Munch's reading of the Prokofieff "Classical Symphony" is that it was a run of the mill affair, quite devoid of any brio, and lacked luster from beginning to end.

Darius Milhaud is a man of many enthusiasms, so it was not surprising that during his first visit to the United States in 1922 he was delighted with the music he heard in New York's Harlem and drew upon his memory of it as he wrote his "Creation du Monde" composed for a ballet by Blaze Cendrar. However, what he remembered of the musical idiom of 1922 he used in conjunction with music strongly derivative from Stravinsky, Ravel and then mixed it up with a liberal dosage of Gershwin. The result is a mishmash of sounds and rhythms which might belong to any era. Mr. Munch evidently enjoys conducting this work and his men played it with enthusiasm and it was so received by the audience.

Enchanting Work

The second portion of the program was given over to Lukas Foss, the 31-year-old American composer, pianist and conductor who directed his "A Parade of Death." This enchanting work calls for chorus, orchestra, narrator and tenor soloist. Mme. Zorina was the narrator and John McCollum the tenor. At the moment Tanglewood has in its midst the finest group of singers that the Berkshire Music Festival has had for years. They sang today with a clarity of enunciation, range of dynamics and purity of tone that was a revelation to this listener. Mr. McCollum is proving a serviceable and sturdy tenor and he sang the exacting measures alloted to him in fine fashion. Zorina's voice is beautiful and her delivery of the story of the man and woman and death was simple and affecting. The chorus comments on the words of the narrator. Mr. Foss has written beautiful music for this story and has succeeded in keeping the music an integral part of the story, rather than making of it a monologue with music.

Foss conducts easily and with entire confidence and he held the work together in masterful manner. Here is work which should grace the programs of many orchestras throughout the country; one of the truly fine American compositions.

This Clipping From
HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES

JUL 27 1953

Tanglewood's Little Series Sets a Record

By CARL E. LINDSTROM

In the afternoon they came
unto a land
In which it seemed always afternoon.

SUNDAY music at Tanglewood after all these years reached a new peak yesterday as to felicity of material and attendance for the Little Series.

There is nothing little about them now, these preliminary Bach-Mozart-Haydn concerts for which a total of 26,000 persons assembled on three weekends. This surpassed the previous record of 23,000 in 1950 which was the last series that Koussevitzky conducted.

As a reminder that important music making was going on in France while the above named Germanic triumvirate flourished, Charles Munch claimed our attention for Couperin.

* * *

INGENIOUSLY he presented two contrasted modern views of the French pictorialist, Richard Strauss's Divertimento, a transscription of a bevy of dances and Ravel's homage at the tomb of his precursor, also a set of dances, but freely composed in the Couperin mood if not in his idiom.

This was followed by Prokofieff's essay in the antique style, the "Classical Symphony" which could not be more Gallic than it is and then an apparent irrelevancy in Milhaud's "Le Creation du Monde" but actually about what Couperin might have written had he visited Harlem in 1920.

All this music was so germane that it could not have been interrupted by an intermission. So the audience sat entranced for one hour and 25 minutes without a breather. The second half of the program was devoted to Lukas Foss' "A Parable of Death" for narrator, tenor, chorus and orchestra, with the composer conducting.

This was indeed the irrelevancy. It had nothing to do with anything which preceded it in the series. It sounded important but strained and studied. It existed entirely in the penumbra of the dazzling choral performance of Haydn the night before.

* * *

MUNCH TOOK interpretive honors Sunday. When dealing with music that is fragile and exquisite he resists all invitations to dramatize or sentimentalize. It was all perfectly objective and rare.

Technical lapses are so few and far between that it becomes news when the Boston Orchestra makes so blurred a beginning as they did with the "Classical" Symphony.

As a program maker Mr. Munch may not have completely made his point. A young woman was heard to ask her escort: "Who is this Couperin they're making so much of?"

She was rather primly corrected: "He WAS an early English composer."

Quietly: "Oh."

Saturday's Concert:

TO HEAR ORATORIO performed by a balanced choir of singers who are musicians, supported by virtuoso symphonists who are thoroughly rehearsed, bears no resemblance to the article with which most of us are familiar.

The choral students at Tanglewood's Music Center possess the kind of musicianship and ear which distinguish between F sharp and G flat in an enharmonic modulation. In other words they sing in scientifically true pitch. They are so possessed by the music (Saturday night it was Haydn's Theresa Mass) that they sang zealously to the point of tension. Their excitement was palpable.

It communicated to the Boston Symphony's supporting instrumentalists who were energized to an unusually warm glow. Four singers who were in no sense soloists, but a solo quartet, added to a lustrous occasion with dependable, opulent song which even in florid passages was steady and well-defined. They were Lois McCauley, soprano; Beatrice Krebs, contralto; John McCallum tenor, and Lee Cass, bass.

Hugh Ross, most stimulating of choral interpreters, the lanky, willowy man with the long rubber arms and the convulsive style of conducting produced a resplendent and perfect performance.

Perfection is a sort of nemesis with the Boston Symphony and all its works. When no other fault can be found, it is the fault of perfection. And what is wrong with perfection?

Well, just this (and I am indebted to Ross and his company for a brilliant case in point). This Haydn Mass was the finest oratorio performance I have ever heard. It was great music—qua music.

It was a tremendous musical experience; it was not a religious one. A performance of opera or a symphony which left out the heart of the piece would not be a good one.

So we had music that was brilliant without an inner existence. Feeling? Yes, in a way. It was an instance of music that was expressive but without essential emotion.

* * *

ON THE CONTRARY, Mr. Munch's two symphonies, with which the Saturday program began, revealed an unsuspected Haydn. True he chose two of the more virile symphonies — the sober C minor and the brightly boisterous one nicknamed the "Military" symphony. But it was a Haydn nevertheless, who could walk among us a contemparary rather than that porcelain cis-alpine figure who lived the other side of Beethoven.

She is so much a conversation piece that it is impossible not to mention the girl flutist who had enough thematic passages in the two symphonies to give some idea of her talents. Doriot Anthony plays the way she looks, with the freshness, self-assurance and pensiveness of youth.

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE

JUL 27 1953

Zorina Terrific

Berkshire Festival Hears Foss' "A Parable of Death"

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX, July 26—Lukas Foss' "A Parable of Death" was given its first Berkshire performance, this afternoon, at the final concert in the preliminary series of the Berkshire festival by the Boston Symphony orchestra. This unusual, deeply-felt and skillfully written score, the one new work of the preliminary series, is based upon verses of Rainer Maria Rilke which dwell upon two profound facts: the gaining by relinquishment, which is love, and the eternal continuity of life which grows out of death.

Foss' music calls for an extensive if not huge orchestra, chorus and tenor soloist. The text of Rilke (in an English translation which runs to some un-poetic and multi-syllabled words) was spoken at this performance as at the three previous in Louisville, New York and the Ojai festival in California, by Vera Zorina. The tenor soloist was John McCollum.

If you go back far enough, in tracing the ancestry of the general form, the harmonic idiom and the overall expressive style, you come to Gustav Mahler, and, chorally to Bach. Nonetheless, Mr. Foss has written in a contemporary if not indisputably personal manner, one in which his technic of orchestral and choral writing has grown perceptibly.

At first hearing I am inclined to sort out the choral writing from orchestra as less eloquent, and the tenor solo more stylized than emotional. That would be superficial judgment, however, for "A Parable of Death" is not completely absorbed at one performance. There are too many details, in rhythm, in color and patterns of orchestral usage, to warrant quick blanket opinion. The dominant impression, however, is one of power and beauty but sluggish motion.

Zorina Gorgeous

Miss Zorina, svelte and gorgeous in a pale blue gown, spoke with moving depth of voice and with a truly poetic style, lines which all too often, at least in English, are prose in effect. Occasionally, she had such heavy competition from the instruments that blurred her words, but mostly she was clearly understood. Mr. Foss conducted his own work and, seemingly, did it very well.

Mr. McCollum sang his relatively brief role with warmth of feeling and a fine ease of manner and technic.

Charles Munch had conducted the previous portions of the concert, which were broadcast over the C. B. S. network, and for that reason were played in the [illegible] shed instead of the smaller theatre-concert hall. The afternoon [illegible] with a superb account of Strauss' divertimento after Couperin, [illegible] included an equally [illegible] "Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin;" Prokofieff's "Classical Symphony and Milhaud's [illegible] masterful "La Creation du Monde."

It was interesting that Mr. Munch took the prelude and [illegible] lane of Ravel's [illegible] much slower than most conductors do it, with increasing [illegible] detail at a sacrifice of [illegible] motion. Milhaud's music, [illegible] late ragtime and early jazz [illegible] spots, enjoyed the best performances of it this reviewer has heard.

The final Saturday evening of this preliminary series was devoted to Haydn of the symph[illegible] in C Minor, No 95, the Military Symphony and the Theresa mass. Mr. Munch conducted the symphonies, of which the first named went reasonably well and the second in a glowing, absolutely exact fashion that was the genius of conducting and playing.

"Theresa" Mass Lovely

Haydn's "Theresa" mass, virtually unknown over here save for a foreign recording made a few years ago, is a lovely and noble score, if not one of the world's greatest masterpieces. For it, Hugh Ross had prepared the Berkshire Music Center chorus down to the last eighth note and they sang with a really thrilling quality of tone and ensemble. The quartet of vocal soloists, also Berkshire Center students, consisted of soprano Lois McCauley, contralto Beatrice Krebs, Mr. McCollum in the tenor part, and bass Lee Cass.

For blend of voices and expert technic in style and keeping together they were, perhaps, the finest quartet I have heard in more than 20 years of music reviewing.

Mr. Ross conducted and the performance went admirably. But for the life of me, I can't see how the orchestra, which could not have had too many rehearsals for the mass, followed his peculiar (and sometimes non-existent) beat. But they were of the Boston Symphony, which is equipped to pass miracles.

The Saturday night attendance in the theatre-concert hall—and on the lawn outside—was 4400. Today's audience, 4450. That brought the total attendance for the entire preliminary series to 26,150, the biggest in Berkshire Festival history.

This Clipping From
VARIETY
NEW YORK, N. Y.

JUL 29 1953

Berkshire Fest Chamber Mark Set With 52G Take

~~Lenox, Mass.,~~ July 28.

Three weekends of Theatre-Concert Hall programs at the Berkshire Festival here, which ended Sunday night (26), broke all attendance records, with a total gross of $52,225 at a $5 top. Series of six concerts, two each weekend, is offered by the chamber section of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 1,150-seat hall, with overflow crowds sitting out on the lawn. New attendance mark was 26,150, or an average of 4,360 per concert. First weekend offered Bach music; second, Mozart, and last weekend a combination of Haydn and moderns.

Full 104-piece BSO is gathered here at Tanglewood this week for the three weekends of major concerts in the 6,000-seat Shed. Series A, this weekend, will have Charles Munch conducting Friday and Saturday nights (31-1) and Pierre Monteux as guest maestro Sunday afternoon. Advance sale is good with Tanglewood expecting to better last season's b.o. and attendance, which averaged (in Shed and on the lawn) about 9,465 people per concert.

[253]

tumn colors; class 2, uniform containers with an arrangement of fruit or vegetable foliage; open classes, class 3, composition for terraces and table; class 4, an arrangement in picture frame.

Class 5, an arrangement in a basket; class 6, arrangement suggesting profusion in a Victorian container; class 7, a composition of fall flowers using a utensil found in a country kitchen; class 8, a live arrangement of roses, garden variety; class 9, an arrangement of dry material, horticulture, house plants; and collection of three African violets, cultural, annual, perenial, biennials and bulbs; roses, one specimen or spray, three of any variety of roses.

A feature of the show will be classes open to youth exhibitors from 5 to 15 years of age. It is to be a miniature arrangement not to exceed four inches including container.

Each club member is required to have at least three arrangements. The show is open to the public.

Material exhibited in the cultural class must be grown by the exhibitor. No arrangement is to exceed 20 inches in height.

Mrs. Lawrence Nusser is gen-

TANGLEWOOD, MASS.—With Charles Munch conducting the entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday and Saturday evenings, July 31 and Aug. 1, at 8:30 p. m. and Pierre Monteux as guest conductor on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 2, at 2:30 p. m., the major series of the Berkshire Festival opens this week in the 6000-seat Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Nine concerts will be given over three week-ends, until Aug. 16.

Three innovations mark the Shed series this season: the concerts commence on Friday evenings instead of the previous Thursdays, thus making it possible for music lovers who travel some distance to concentrate the complete series in their week-end; the Sunday afternoon programs commence at 2:30 p. m. instead of the former 3 o'clock; and the first hour-and-a-half of the Sunday program will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio from Tanglewood as the only American event in the network's "World Music Festivals" program, which includes highlights from seven European summer festivals. The first portion of the Sunday program, 2:30 to 4 p. m., will be heard on the air, with James Fassett, CBS Radio director of music, as commentator.

The week-end will introduce to Tanglewood audiences the noted violinist, Zino Francescatti, soloist on Friday evening, and the first Eastern performance in its revised from of Lukas Foss' Piano Concerto No. 2, with the composer as soloist. Jorge Bolet will be soloist on Sunday afternon

---

Record Tanglewood

as made in 1950 with a total of 3,500.

It seems to us that several factors were responsible for this record-breaking attendance. First of all, the devotees of Tanglewood have fully accepted Charles Munch. Secondly, the programs were varied and versatile, and finally, one heard superb performances, for the most part.

Last night we listened to the music of Joseph Haydn, enjoying its wholesomeness, humor and sincerity. Today we jumped forward into the 20th Century and were treated to works by Strauss, Ravel, Prokofieff, Milhaud and Lukas Foss.

True, two of these composers went back to the music of Francois Couperin for their inspiration and so Strauss was represented by his "Divertimenti, OP 86" drawn from harpsichord pieces by Couperin, while Ravel undertook a similar task, first as a suite for piano and then for orchestra.

The Strauss conception of the Couperin pieces was delightful. They were made richer through the orchestration which seldom was heavy or involved and which sustained the intimate, fragile quality of the original. Mr. Munch and his men played in distinguished manner.

It was common practice for the 17th Century composers to write collections of instrumental pieces in memory of their departed colleagues and the generic name for such collections was "Tombeau" which literally means tombstone. Ravel wrote his "Tombeau de Couperin" in 1947 as a piano suite in six movements, each of them dedicated to a companion who had been killed by Germans on the western front. The orchestraversion consists of a prelude and three dance movements like those of the classic suite. Ravel maintains the very essence of the times which were precise, ordered and delicately tinted. It was interesting to note the variations in the handling of the music of Couperin by such different entities as Strauss and Ravel. One could not help but Germanize the music, while the other enriched it through the magic of his own wit and feeling for color and form.

Run of Mill

About all that one can say for Mr. Munch's reading of the Prokofieff "Classical Symphony" is that it was a run of the mill affair, quite devoid of any brio, and lacked luster from beginning to end.

Darius Milhaud is a man of many enthusiasms, so it was not surprising that during his first visit to the United States in 1922 he was delighted with the music he heard in New York's Harlem and drew upon his memory of it as he wrote his "Creation du Monde" composed for a ballet by Blaze Cendrar. However, what he remembered of the musical idiom of 1922 he used in conjunction with music strongly derivative from Stravinsky, Ravel and then mixed it up with a liberal dosage of Gershwin. The result is a mish-mash of sounds and rhythms which might belong to any era. Mr. Munch evidently enjoys conducting this work and his men played it with enthusiasm and it was so received by the audience.

Enchanting Work

The second portion of the program was given over to Lukas Foss, the 31-year-old American composer, pianist and conductor who directed his "A Parade of Death." This enchanting work calls for chorus, orchestra, narrator and tenor soloist. Mme. Zorina was the narrator and John McCollum the tenor. At the moment Tanglewood has in its midst the finest group of singers that the Berkshire Music Festival has had for years. They sang today with a clarity of enunciation, range of dynamics and purity of tone that was a revelation to this listener. Mr. McCollum is proving a serviceable and sturdy tenor and he sang the exacting measures alloted to him in fine fashion. Zorina's voice is beautiful and her delivery of the story of the man and woman and death was simple and affecting. The chorus comments on the words of the narrator. Mr. Foss has written beautiful music for this story and has succeeded in keeping the music an integral part of the story, rather than making of it a monologue with music.

Foss conducts easily and with entire confidence and he held the work together in masterful manner. Here is work which should grace the programs of many orchestras throughout the country; one of the truly fine American compositions.

This Clipping From
HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES

JUL 27 1953

Tanglewood's Little Series Sets a Record

By CARL E. LINDSTROM

In the afternoon they came
unto a land
In which it seemed always afternoon.

SUNDAY music at Tanglewood after all these years reached a new peak yesterday as to felicity of material and attendance for the Little Series.

There is nothing little about them now, these preliminary Bach-Mozart-Haydn concerts for which a total of 26,000 persons assembled on three weekends. This surpassed the previous record of 23,000 in 1950 which was the last series that Koussevitzky conducted.

As a reminder that important music making was going on in France while the above named Germanic triumvirate flourished, Charles Munch claimed our attention for Couperin.

* * *

INGENIOUSLY he presented two contrasted modern views of the French pictorialist, Richard Strauss's Divertimento, a transscription of a bevy of dances and Ravel's homage at the tomb of his precursor, also a set of dances, but freely composed in the Couperin mood if not in his idiom.

This was followed by Prokofieff's essay in the antique style, the "Classical Symphony" which could not be more Gallic than it is and then an apparent irrelevancy in Milhaud's "Le Creation du Monde" but actually about what Couperin might have written had he visited Harlem in 1920.

All this music was so germane that it could not have been interrupted by an intermission. So the audience sat entranced for one hour and 25 minutes without a breather. The second half of the program was devoted to Lukas Foss' "A Parable of Death" for narrator, tenor, chorus and orchestra, with the composer conducting.

This was indeed the irrelevancy. It had nothing to do with anything which preceded it in the series. It sounded important but strained and studied. It existed entirely in the penumbra of the dazzling choral performance of Haydn the night before.

* * *

MUNCH TOOK interpretive honors Sunday. When dealing with music that is fragile and exquisite he resists all invitations to dramatize or sentimentalize. It was all perfectly objective and rare.

Technical lapses are so few and far between that it becomes news when the Boston Orchestra makes so blurred a beginning as they did with the "Classical" Symphony.

As a program maker Mr. Munch may not have completely made his point. A young woman was heard to ask her escort: "Who is this Couperin they're making so much of?"

She was rather primly corrected: "He WAS an early English composer."

Quietly: "Oh."

Saturday's Concert:

TO HEAR ORATORIO performed by a balanced choir of singers who are musicians, supported by virtuoso symphonists who are thoroughly rehearsed, bears no resemblance to the article with which most of us are familiar.

The choral students at Tanglewood's Music Center possess the kind of musicianship and ear which distinguish between F sharp and G flat in an enharmonic modulation. In other words they sing in scientifically true pitch. They are so possessed by the music (Saturday night it was Haydn's Theresa Mass) that they sang zealously to the point of tension. Their excitement was palpable.

It communicated to the Boston Symphony's supporting instrumentalists who were energized to an unusually warm glow. Four singers who were in no sense soloists, but a solo quartet, added to a lustrous occasion with dependable, opulent song which even in florid passages was steady and well-defined. They were Lois McCauley, soprano; Beatrice Krebs, contralto; John McCallum tenor, and Lee Cass, bass.

Hugh Ross, most stimulating of choral interpreters, the lanky, willowy man with the long rubber arms and the convulsive style of conducting produced a resplendent and perfect performance.

Perfection is a sort of nemesis with the Boston Symphony and all its works. When no other fault can be found, it is the fault of perfection. And what is wrong with perfection?

Well, just this (and I am indebted to Ross and his company for a brilliant case in point). This Haydn Mass was the finest oratorio performance I have ever heard. It was great music—qua music.

It was a tremendous musical experience; it was not a religious one. A performance of opera or a symphony which left out the heart of the piece would not be a good one.

So we had music that was brilliant without an inner existence. Feeling? Yes, in a way. It was an instance of music that was expressive but without essential emotion.

* * *

ON THE CONTRARY, Mr. Munch's two symphonies, with which the Saturday program began, revealed an unsuspected Haydn. True he chose two of the more virile symphonies — the sober C minor and the brightly boisterous one nicknamed the "Military" symphony. But it was a Haydn nevertheless, who could walk among us a contemporary rather than that porcelain cis-alpine figure who lived the other side of Beethoven.

She is so much a conversation piece that it is impossible not to mention the girl flutist who had enough thematic passages in the two symphonies to give some idea of her talents. Doriot Anthony plays the way she looks, with the freshness, self-assurance and penstiveness of youth.

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE

JUL 27 1953

Zorina Terrific

Berkshire Festival Hears Foss' "A Parable of Death"

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX, July 26—Lukas Foss' "A Parable of Death" was given its first Berkshire performance, this afternoon, at the final concert in the preliminary series of the Berkshire festival by the Boston Symphony orchestra. This unusual, deeply-felt and skillfully written score, the one new work of the preliminary series, is based upon verses of Rainer Maria Rilke which dwell upon two profound facts: the gaining by relinquishment, which is love, and the eternal continuity of life which grows out of death.

Foss' music calls for an extensive if not huge orchestra, chorus and tenor soloist. The text of Rilke (in an English translation which runs to some un-poetic and multi-syllabled words) was spoken at this performance as at the three previous in Louisville, New York and the Ojai festival in California, by Vera Zorina. The tenor soloist was John McCollum.

If you go back far enough, in tracing the ancestry of the general form, the harmonic idiom and the overall expressive style, you come to Gustav Mahler, and, chorally to Bach. Nonetheless, Mr. Foss has written in a contemporary if not indisputably personal manner, one in which his technic of orchestral and choral writing has grown perceptibly.

At first hearing I am inclined to sort out the choral writing from orchestra as less eloquent, and the tenor solo more stylized than emotional. That would be superficial judgment, however, for "A Parable of Death" is not completely absorbed at one performance. There are too many details, in rhythm, in color and patterns of orchestral usage, to warrant quick blanket opinion. The dominant impression, however, is one of power and beauty but sluggish motion.

Zorina Gorgeous

Miss Zorina, svelte and gorgeous in a pale blue gown, spoke with moving depth of voice and with a truly poetic style, lines which all too often, at least in English, are prose in effect. Occasionally, she had such heavy competition from the instruments that blurred her words, but mostly she was clearly understood. Mr. Foss conducted his own work and, seemingly, did it very well.

Mr. McCollum sang his relatively brief role with warmth of feeling and a fine ease of manner and technic.

Charles Munch had conducted the previous portions of the concert, which were [illegible] over the C. B. S. network, and [illegible] reason were played in the [illegible] shed instead of the smaller theatre-concert hall. The afternoon began with a superb account of Strauss' divertimento after Couperin, and included an equally [illegible] "Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin;" Prokofieff's "Classical Symphony and Milhaud's [illegible] and masterful "La Creation du Monde."

It was interesting [illegible] Munch took the prelude and [illegible] lane of Ravel's jewelled [illegible] much slower than most conductors do it, with increasing [illegible] detail at a sacrifice of [illegible] motion. Milhaud's music, between late ragtime and early jazz in spots, enjoyed the best performances of it this reviewer has heard.

The final Saturday evening of this preliminary series was devoted to Haydn of the symphony in C Minor, No 95, the "Military" Symphony and the "Theresa" mass. Mr. Munch conducted the symphonies, of which [illegible] named went reasonably well and the second in a glowing, [illegible] exact fashion that was [illegible] genius of conducting and [illegible]

"Theresa" Mass Lovely

Haydn's "Theresa" mass, [illegible] ly unknown over here save for a foreign recording made a few years ago, is a lovely and [illegible] score, if not one of the world's greatest masterpieces. For it Hugh Ross had prepared the Berkshire Music Center chorus down to the last eighth note and they sang with a really thrilling quality of tone and ensemble. The quartet of vocal soloists, also Berkshire Center students, consisted of soprano Lois McCauley, contralto Beatrice Krebs, Mr. McCollum in the tenor part, and bass Lee Cass.

For blend of voices and expert technic in style and keeping together they were, perhaps, the finest quartet I have heard in more than 20 years of music reviewing.

Mr. Ross conducted and the performance went admirably. But for the life of me, I can't see how the orchestra, which could not have had too many rehearsals for the mass, followed his [illegible] (and sometimes non-existent) beat. But they were of the Boston Symphony, which is equipped to pass miracles.

The Saturday night attendance in the theatre-concert hall—and on the lawn outside—was 4400. Today's audience, 4450. That brought the total attendance for the entire preliminary series to 26,150, the biggest in Berkshire Festival history.

This Clipping From
VARIETY
NEW YORK, N. Y.

JUL 29 1953

Berkshire Fest Chamber Mark Set With 52G Take

Lenox, Mass., July 28.

Three weekends of Theatre-Concert Hall programs at the Berkshire Festival here, which ended Sunday night (26), broke all attendance records, with a total gross of $52,225 at a $5 top. Series of six concerts, two each weekend, is offered by the chamber section of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 1,150-seat hall, with overflow crowds sitting out on the lawn. New attendance mark was 26,150, or an average of 4,360 per concert. First weekend offered Bach music; second, Mozart, and last weekend a combination of Haydn and moderns.

Full 104-piece BSO is gathered here at Tanglewood this week for the three weekends of major concerts in the 6,000-seat Shed. Series A, this weekend, will have Charles Munch conducting Friday and Saturday nights (31-1) and Pierre Monteux as guest maestro Sunday afternoon. Advance sale is good with Tanglewood expecting to better last season's b.o. and attendance, which averaged (in Shed and on the lawn) about 9,465 people per concert.

[253]

Cir. (D 98,282)

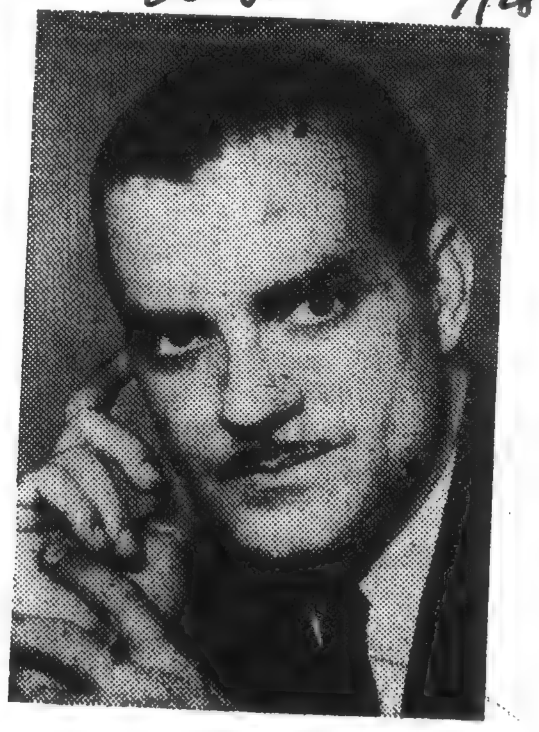
This Clipping From
WORCESTER, MASS.
GAZETTE

JUL 28 1953

SOLOISTS AUG. 8 AT TANGLEWOOD

JENNIE TOUREL (left) is alto soloist in the Mahler Symphony No. 2, which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform with Festival chorus and soloists at 8.30 p. m. Aug. 8 at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox. THERESA GREEN, soprano soloist, will be heard in the Mahler Symphony No. 2 that same evening. Leonard Bernstein will be guest conductor of this memorial program to Serge Koussevitzky.

Echo 7/28



JORGE BOLET, pianist, soloist in Tchaikovsky's "Piano Concerto No. 1, in B-flat minor", which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform in the Sunday afternoon, August 2, concert of the Berkshire Festival, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Pierre Monteux is guest-conductor of an all Tchaikovsky program.

This Week At TANGLEWOOD

7/28

Wed., *8:30 p. m.—Theatre-Concert Hall. Coolidge Recital, by the Hungarian Quartet.

Thurs., *8:30 p. m.—Music Shed Orchestra Concert by students of Department I.

Fri., 8:30 p. m.—Music Shed. Berkshire Festival Concert — Charles Munch, conductor

Sat., 10:00 a. m.—Music Shed Boston Symphony Orchestra — Charles Munch, conductor. Public Rehearsal.

*3:00 p. m.—Music Shed Organ recital—E. Power Biggs

*4:00 p. m.—Barn Concert of Renaissance and Baroque Music by students of the Tanglewood Study Group.

8:30 p. m.—Music Shed. Berkshire Festival Concert — Charles Munch, Conductor

Sun., *10:00 a. m.—Chamber Music Hall—Chamber Music Concert by students of Dept. 1—2:30 p. m.—Music Shed. Berkshire Festival Concert, Pierre Monteux, conductor. (Broadcast coast-to-coast by CBS Radio.

 Events open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

THE WASHINGTON DAILY NEWS, THURSDAY, JULY 30, 1953—7

Area Students at Tanglewood

Among the 54 students from Washington, Maryland and Virginia at the Berkshire Music Center this year are the threesome above. Pictured with Hugh Ross, left, Tanglewood's choral department head, are (left to right): Eleanor Nalls, 9801 Burning Tree Road, Bethesda; George Manos, 1368 Randolph-st nw, and Keith Bryan, 5700 Wyngate Drive, Bethesda. The assistant conductor of the Navy Band, Warrant Officer John Norris, is studying conducting there under Leonard Bernstein.

Cir. (D 146,820) (S 298,053)

This Clipping From
BUFFALO, N. Y.
COURIER-EXPRESS

JUL 29 1953

New Yorkers 'Do' Europe Maintaining Usual Pace

By ALICE HUGHES

New York, July 28 — Comes August and New Yorkers abandon their city to the visitors. We city slickers roam elsewhere for fun and rest. Did I say "rest?" Mail from resorts here and abroad reveals American travelers frantically "doing" the continent. My sister Francie and her husband are touring England, Spain, Italy and France — all in six weeks. Read her weary report on her third day in London:

Alice Hughes

"We skipped Cambridge: The trip takes too long. We do only what's nearby. Windsor Castle and Hampton Court nearly finished me off yesterday. They were wonderful, but oh! my feet! Wait till you see our color pictures of British gardens! Never saw such magnificence! And all in full bloom, at the end of July! We're impressed with the enduring tradition of the people and the antiquity of the architecture. But I had to beg off from the Tower of London and the trip along the Thames. That's why I have time to scribble this letter.

"We've been to the theatre once and dancing twice. Dinner at the Savoy also at the Ambassadeurs. cutting up and noted the shabby-looking 'man on the street' looking down. But no one notices shabbiness because the British are too polite to stare.

"If the other countries are as wonderful as England, it'll be a memorable trip. We're dead tired but happy, toting camera, notebook and sun glasses, like all American tourist Before tea we rest an hour, so as to survive dinner, parties and entertainment. Usually we are back in the hotel by 1 a.m., in time to do a little laundry—stockings, nylon underwear gloves, etc."

From Lenox, Mass., in the same mail, a letter from my other sister—the one whose husband plays the violin with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. They are now enjoying the music festival season at Tanglewood in the Berkshires. From July 5 until Aug. 17, music dominates their lives spent in a tiny one-story, two-room cottage located on Sanctuary Hill, in the Audubon Reservation.

When Pierre practices his violin in the early morning, birds furnish both audience and chorus.

Americans are the grandest people in the world, but they're nicest when on their home-grounds. Something happens when they transport themselves abroad. They get chesty and chauvinistic. Let them invade Europe in the summer-time. I prefer the Continent in the fall, winter and spring. Meantime, the bird sanctuary at Lenox seems deliciously inviting to me and I'm all pitched to tune in with the birds this weekend.

yright, 1953, King Features Synd. Inc.

Cir. (82,197)

This Clipping From
COLUMBUS, OHIO
STAR

AUG 22 1953

Cir. (D 85,078)

This Clipping From
HARRISBURG, PA.
NEWS

JUL 28 1953

Pianos Arrive

TANGLEWOOD, Mass. (INS) — One of the largest shipments of pianos ever sent to a music event recently arrived for the Berkshire music Festival. Seventy-two new pianos and two Baldwin electronic organs were loaded on a fleet of trucks which made the 790-mile run to Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., from the Cincinnati factory of the Baldwin company, which supplies the instruments.

Cir. (D 10,293)

This Clipping From
FRAMINGHAM, MASS.
NEWS

JUL 30 1953

PIANOS ARRIVE

f the s ever tly arrived for the Berkshire Music Festival. Seventy-two electronic organs were loaded on a fleet of trucks, which made the 790-mile run to Tanglewood, near Lenox, from the Cincinnati factory of the Baldwin company, which supplies the instruments.

Cir. (D 131,670) (S 258,529)

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD

JUL 28 1953

Berkshire Festival Concert Tomorrow

Third and final of the Chamber Music concerts which Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge has generously donated to the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, and which are free to members of the Society of Friends of the School maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be held tomorrow evening at 8:30 p.m. in the Theater-Concert Hall.

The Hungarian Quartet, whose members are Zoltan Szekely and Alexander Moskowsky, violinists; Denes Koromzay, viola; Vilmos Palotai, cello, will give the following program:

Quartet in G major, Opus 77, No. 1 ..... Joseph Haydn
Quartet No. 4 .... Walter Piston
Quartet in B-flat major, Opus 130 ..... Ludwig van Beethoven

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL-AMERICAN

JUL 28 1953

Guest at Festival

Anna Russell, who will open the new theatrical season with her "Little Show," at the Vanderbilt on Sept. 8, will be the guest of honor at the Berkshire Festival, Stockbridge, Mass. on Aug. 13 and 14. Miss Russell will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Other Drama News on Page 9

Cir. (4,000)

This Clipping From
NORTH ATTLEBORO, MASS.
CHRONICLE

JUL 29 1953

TANGLEWOOD, Mass. INS—One of the largest shipments of pianos ever sent to a music event recently arrived for the Berkshire Music Festical. Seventy-two new pianos and two Baldwin electronic organs were loaded on a fleet of trucks which made the 790-mile run to Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., from the Cincinnati factory of the Baldwin company, which supplies the instruments.

Cir. (D 98,282)

This Clipping From
WORCESTER, MASS.
GAZETTE

JUL 28 1953

SOLOISTS AUG. 8 AT TANGLEWOOD

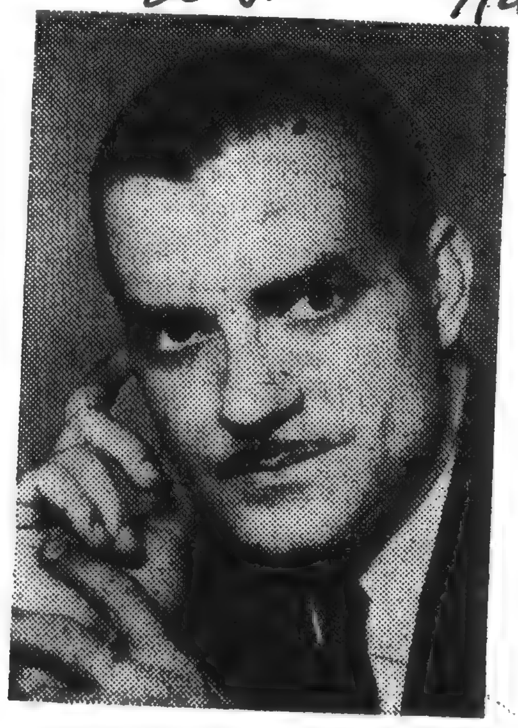
JENNIE TOUREL (left) is alto soloist in the Mahler Symphony No. 2, which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform with Festival chorus and soloists at 8.30 p. m. Aug. 8 at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox. THERESA GREEN, soprano soloist, will be heard in the Mahler Symphony No. 2 that same evening. Leonard Bernstein will be guest conductor of this memorial program to Serge Koussevitzky.

THE WASHINGTON DAILY NEWS, THURSDAY, JULY 30, 1953—7

Area Students at Tanglewood

Among the 54 students from Washington, Maryland and Virginia at the Berkshire Music Center this year are the threesome above. Pictured with Hugh Ross, left, Tanglewood's choral department head, are (left to right): Eleanor Nalls, 9801 Burning Tree Road, Bethesda; George Manos, 1368 Randolph-st nw, and Keith Bryan, 5700 Wyngate Drive, Bethesda. The assistant conductor of the Navy Band, Warrant Officer John Norris, is studying conducting there under Leonard Bernstein.

Echo 7/28



JORGE BOLET, pianist, soloist in Tchaikovsky's "Piano Concerto No. 1, in B-flat minor", which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform in the Sunday afternoon, August 2, concert of the Berkshire Festival, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Pierre Monteux is guest-conductor of an all Tchaikovsky program.

Echo

This Week At TANGLEWOOD

7/28

Wed., *8:30 p. m.—Theatre-Concert Hall. Coolidge Recital, by the Hungarian Quartet.

Thurs., *8:30 p. m.—Music Shed Orchestra Concert by students of Department I.

Fri., 8:30 p. m.—Music Shed. Berkshire Festival Concert — Charles Munch, conductor

Sat., 10:00 a. m.—Music Shed Boston Symphony Orchestra — Charles Munch, conductor. Public Rehearsal.

*3:00 p. m.—Music Shed Organ recital—E. Power Biggs

*4:00 p. m.—Barn Concert of Renaissance and Baroque Music by students of the Tanglewood Study Group.

8:30 p. m.—Music Shed. Berkshire Festival Concert — Charles Munch, Conductor

Sun., *10:00 a. m.—Chamber Music Hall—Chamber Music Concert by students of Dept. 1—2:30 p. m.—Music Shed. Berkshire Festival Concert, Pierre Monteux, conductor. (Broadcast coast-to-coast by CBS Radio.

* Events open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Cir. (D 146,820) (S 298,053)

This Clipping From
BUFFALO, N. Y.
COURIER-EXPRESS

JUL 29 1953

New Yorkers 'Do' Europe Maintaining Usual Pace

By ALICE HUGHES

New York, July 28 — Comes August and New Yorkers abandon their city to the visitors. We city slickers roam elsewhere for fun and rest. Did I say "rest?" Mail from resorts here and abroad reveals American travelers frantically "doing" the continent. My sister Francie and her husband are touring England, Spain, Italy and France — all in six weeks. Read her weary report on her third day in London:

Alice Hughes

"We skipped Cambridge: The trip takes too long. We do only what's nearby. Windsor Castle and Hampton Court nearly finished me off yesterday. They were wonderful, but oh! my feet! Wait till you see our color pictures of British gardens! Never saw such magnificence! And all in full bloom, at the end of July! We're impressed with the enduring tradition of the people and the antiquity of the architecture. But I had to beg off from the Tower of London and the trip along the Thames. That's why I have time to scribble this letter.

"We've been to the theatre once and dancing twice. Dinner at the Savoy also at the Ambassadeurs. cutting up and noted the shabby-looking 'man on the street' looking down. But no one notices shabbiness because the British are too polite to stare.

"If the other countries are as wonderful as England, it'll be a memorable trip. We're dead tired but happy, toting camera, notebook and sun glasses, like all American tourist Before tea we rest an hour, so as to survive dinner, parties and entertainment. Usually we are back in the hotel by 1 a.m., in time to do a littl laundry—stockings, nylon underwear gloves, etc."

From Lenox, Mass., in the sam mail, a letter from my other sister—the one whose husband plays th violin with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. They are now enjoying th music festival season at Tanglewoo in the Berkshires. From July 5 unti Aug. 17, music dominates their lives spent in a tiny one-story, two-roon cottage located on Sanctuary Hill, i the Audubon Reservation.

When Pierre practices his violin in the early morning, birds furnish both audience and chorus.

Americans are the grandest peopl in the world, but they're nicest wher on their home-grounds. Something happens when they transport themselves abroad. They get chesty anc chauvinistic. Let them invade Europe in the summer-time, I prefer the Continent in the fall, winter and spring Meantime, the bird sanctuary a Lenox seems deliciously inviting tc me and I'm all pitched to tune in with the birds this weekend.

yright, 1953, King Features Synd. Inc.

Cir. (D 131,670) (S 258,529)

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD

JUL 28 1953

Berkshire Festival Concert Tomorrow

Third and final of the Chamber Music concerts which Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge has generously donated to the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, and which are free to members of the Society of Friends of the School maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be held tomorrow evening at 8:30 p.m. in the Theater-Concert Hall.

The Hungarian Quartet, whose members are Zoltan Szekely and Alexander Moskowsky, violinists; Denes Koromzay, viola; Vilmos Palotai, cello, will give the following program:

Quartet in G major, Opus 77, No. 1 . . . Joseph Haydn
Quartet No. 4 . . . . Walter Piston
Quartet in B-flat major, Opus 130 . . . Ludwig van Beethoven

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL-AMERICAN

JUL 28 1953

Guest at Festival

Anna Russell, who will open the new theatrical season with her "Little Show," at the Vanderbilt on Sept. 8, will be the guest of honor at the Berkshire Festival, Stockbridge, Mass. on Aug. 13 and 14. Miss Russell will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Other Drama News on Page 9

Cir. (82,197)

This Clipping From
COLUMBUS, OHIO
STAR

AUG 22 1953

Cir. (D 85,078)

This Clipping From
HARRISBURG, PA.
NEWS

JUL 28 1953

Pilot Seeking Rating As Ace Listed Missing

pianos ever sent to a music event recently arrived for the Berkshire music Festival. Seventy-two new pianos and two Baldwin electronic organs were loaded on a fleet of trucks which made the 790-mile run to Tanglewood, near Lenox,

---

Cir. (D 10,293)

This Clipping From
FRAMINGHAM, MASS.
NEWS

JUL 30 1953

PIANOS ARRIVE

TANGLEWOOD—One of the largest shipments of pianos ever sent to a music event recently arrived for the Berkshire Music Festival. Seventy-two electronic organs were loaded on a fleet of trucks, which made the 790-mile run to Tanglewood, near Lenox, from the Cincinnati factory of the Baldwin company, which supplies the instruments.

Cir. (4,000)

This Clipping From
NORTH ATTLEBORO, MASS.
CHRONICLE

JUL 29 1953

TANGLEWOOD, Mass. INS—One of the largest shipments of pianos ever sent to a music event recently arrived for the Berkshire Music Festical. Seventy-two new pianos and two Baldwin electronic organs were loaded on a fleet of trucks which made the 790-mile run to Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., from the Cincinnati factory of the Baldwin company, which supplies the instruments.

[254]

This Clipping From
ALBANY, N. Y.
KNICKERBOCKER NEWS
AUG 1 - 1953

Munch and Francescatti Share Tanglewood Cheers

A capacity audience greeted conductor Charles Munch last night for the opening of the Tanglewood concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the immense shed. The program balanced traditional and modern compositions, with the superb French violinist, Zino Francescatti, appearing as soloist.

The opening Beethoven Leonore Overture No. 3 proved appropriate in every respect. The dramatic quality of this operatic synthesis gave the opportunity for a most exciting performance. With incisive beat Munch literally whipped the ensemble into the power of the music. The opening crescendo verified for any listener the rewards of a live performance. The intensity of such an experience is a rare delight, the climax of listening.

Playing so familiar a concerto as the Mendelssohn places a violinist in a critical position. Zino Francescatti gave an authoritative performance of polished elegance that left even the keenest auditors in the orchestra satisfied. The quality of his tone gives a carrying power that dominates the accompaniment and fully realizes the contrasting styles in the concerto form. Soloist and conductor, fellow countrymen, joined hands to acknowledge the plaudits.

After intermission the ballet music, "Appalachian Spring," by Aaron Copland imparted its vitality and variety. It is a pleasing bit of Americana varying from the calm flow of expressive melody to the most individual quality of this composer, complex originality in rhythms. The performance was ample reminder of the merit of this music which won the Pulitzer Prize and Critics Circle award in 1945. The genial Mr. Copland, presently head of the composition department at Tanglewood, came forward to share in the applause.

Ravel's Bolero concluded the evening. In a performance of this quality it is so apparent that the monotony of the constant repetition of a subtle melody and insistant rhythm has been transformed by magnificent orchestration. The final escape from the ironclad key limits released the mounting tension just in time to close this "tour de force" and a most successful concert.

Programs are being given on Friday, Saturday and Sunday this year, thus offering more opportunity for week-end attendance. C. F. S.

Aug. 1, 1953

MUSIC

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

Boston Symphony Orch.

The first in series A of the shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra took place last evening in the shed at Tanglewood; Charles Munch conducted, the soloist was Zino Francescatti, and the program was as follows:

Beethoven—Overture to "Leonore," No. 3. Op. 72.
Mendelssohn—Concerto for violin and orchestra in 3 Minor. Op. 64.
Copland—"Appalachian Spring"
Ravel—Bolero.

By ELINOR HUGHES

LENOX, Mass.,—The seventh of the Berkshire Festival concerts of the 1953 season and first in a series of the concerts in the shed presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, took place last evening at Tanglewood before a crowd of 10,300 persons, the largest audience ever to attend the opening.

The weather was ideal, clear and cool with a gentle breeze, and the sky was no more thickly studded with stars than was the lawn with music lovers. A more auspicious start could hardly be imagined, and if the concerts continue as they began, this should be a banner year for the festival.

The program chosen by Mr. Munch for the occasion was a

and modern favorites, including works by Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Copland and Ravel.

Though there were no novelties, there was, none the less, a sense of freshness attending the presentation of the most redoubtable of war horses, such as Ravel's "Bolero;" and Copland's ever fresh and delightful "Appala-

---

Black Dispatch
Okla. City, Okla.

81

WARFIELD AND WIFE TEAM UP FOR TANGLEWOOD

William Warfield and his singing wife, Leontyne Price of "Porgy and Bess", along with Issac Stern, violinist, will be heard in a benefit "Tanglewood on Parade," for the Berkshire Music Center up in Lenox, Mass.

This Clipping From
CINCINNATI, OHIO
ENQUIRER
AUG - 1953

MRS. LOGAN
Tuesday

This Clipping From
NEW YORKER
NEW YORK, N. Y.

Cir. (D

This Clipp
SCHENECTA
GAZE
JUL 30

Frances At Tang

Francescatti be the soloist with phony Orchestra fo ing tomorrow at Ta Lenox, Mass. The orchestra will play tion of Charles M gram will be the fi presented on Frida evenings and Sun through Aug. 16.

* *

OPENING AT 8: row's program will ven, "Overture to ber 3"; Mendelssoh certo in E minor"; palachian Spring," "Bolero."

The Saturday e also conducted by include the Schu to 'Manfred' "; F certo number 2" w as soloist; Men phony number 4 Hindemith, "Sym phosis on Themes

Pierre Monteux Sunday program, at 2:30 p.m. The program will inclu for Strings," Sym in E minor" and certo number 1, in

* *

THE AUG. 7 EV will be devoted t of Berlioz "Romeo matic symphony Jennie Tourel a cona as the solo will conduct. Th vitzky Memorial directed by Leon Mr. Munch will afternoon progr Piatigorsky as so

The famous T rade program h this year for Au

The final series under Mr. Munc ance of the B with Lois Marsh Warfield as the s stein will conduct gram and Mr. Mu

---

This C
ALBA
TIME
JUL 3

Full Bos Symph Tangle

The first o concerts by the phony Orchestr will inaugurat the Big Music woo tonight tion of Charle manent condu will feature Zi the Mendelss certo.

Saturday ni will lead th works by Sch sohn ("Italian Hindemith. T will be the pianist, Lucas Concerto, No. chestra.

Sunday af will be cond inent French Monteux in program. T played are Strings;" Sy the Piano C the French as soloist.

---

10 THE LAKEVILLE JOURNAL

Major Festival C Start Tomorrow

With Charles Munch conducting the entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday and Saturday evenings, July 31 and August 1, at 2:30 p.m., the major series of the Berkshire Festival opens this week in the 6,000-seat Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Nine concerts will be given over three weekends, until August 16.

The sixteenth Berkshire Festival since summer concerts were inaugumence on Friday evenings instead of the previous Thursdays, thus making it possible for music lovers who travel some distance to concentrate the complete series in their weekend; the Sunday afternoon programs commence at 2:30 p.m. instead of the former 3 o'clock; and the first hour-and-a-half of the Sunday program will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio from Tanglewood as the only American event in the network's "World Music Festivals" program, which includes highlights from seven European summer festivals. The first portion of the Sunday program 2:30 to 4 p.m., will be heard on the air, with James Fassett, CBS Radio Director of Music, as commentator.

The weekend will introduce to Tanglewood audiences the noted violinist Zino Francescatti, soloist on Friday evening; and the first Eastern performance in its revised form of Lukas Foss' Piano Concerton No. 2, with the composer as soloist. Jorge Bolet will be soloist on Sunday afternoon.

The Series A programs are:

Friday, July 31: Charles Munch — Beethoven, Overture to Leonore, No. 3; Mendelssohn, Violin Concerton in E Minor, (Soloist: Zino Francescatti); Copland, Appalachian Spring; Ravel, Bolero.

Saturday, August 1: Charles Munch — Schumann. Overture to Manfred; Foss, Piano Concerton No. 2 (the Composer as soloist); Mendelssohn, Symphony No. 4 "Italian"; Hindemith, Symphonic Metamorphosis of Themes by Weber.

Sunday, August 2: — Pierre Monteux — Tchaikovsky, Serenade for Strings; Tchaikovsky, Symphony No. 5, in E Minor; Tchaikovsky, Piano Concerton No. 1, in F-Flat Minor (soloist: Jorge Bolet).

Men at Work . . . Charles Munch and his Boston Symphony Orchestra who will play at the Big Shed in Tanglewood this weekend in the first Festival series. Concerts will be held Friday and Saturday evenings, Sunday afternoon.

GRACE NOTES

• Norfolk Music School

(Continued from Page Nine)

were: Helen Boatwright, Soprano; Carleton Sprague Smith, Flute; Robert Cecil, Horn; Luigi Silva, Violoncello; Keith Wilson, Clarinet, Howard Boatwright, Violin; Arthur Hague, Piano, and Bruce Simonds, Piano. These performers are widely known as concert soloists and most of them are familiar to Norfolk audiences.

The program began with two eighteenth century compositions which have not been republished since that century. They were performed from photostat copies of the recently discovered original editions, and this was probably their first performance in America. The first was a cantata, Morning for soprano, flute, strings, and "continue" (played at the piano by Mr. Hague. The composition had a steady, lyric flow, and full harmony. Helen Boatwright's interpretation was at once authoritative and spontaneous-sounding; Carleton Sprague Smith's playing was distinguished for its rhythm and tonal delicacy.

The Sonata in E Flat for Horn and Diane, by Franz Danzi, was the other eighteenth century piece, and it was presented by Robert Cecil, and Arthur Hague. Both these performers showed technical proficiency and awareness of the spirit of the music. Much of the time the score gave greater importance to the piano part, but even so one would have liked the horn to be allowed to cut through more, by a more subdued tone from the piano.

Howard Boatwright was a mem-

the quartet [illegible] Serenade for [illegible] Strings [illegible] combination [illegible] was suitably [illegible] sincerity and [illegible] smooth continuity [illegible] performance was [illegible] vigorous and [illegible] moving.

[illegible] sons Madecasses [illegible] Madagascar by Ravel [illegible] by Helen Boatwright [illegible] Carleton Sprague [illegible] alternately [illegible] and Luigi Silva [illegible] color; a [illegible] between [illegible] shrieking [illegible] drum-like [illegible] and subdued [illegible] rhythms.

[illegible] Hindemith's Quartet for [illegible] Violin, Cello, and Piano [illegible] composed in [illegible] the substantial [illegible] the recital. [illegible] sure and [illegible] details of tonal [illegible] worked out, and [illegible] composer's [illegible] with awareness.

[illegible] has been true [illegible] the large audience [illegible] and appreciation [illegible] standards of program [illegible] performance.

Tanglewood

SUNDAY

By A. S. C.

[illegible] sixth program [illegible] Festival was [illegible] twentieth century [illegible] Copland [illegible] opened the [illegible] dance suite [illegible] the work [illegible] complexity, not [illegible] combination [illegible] and percussion [illegible] XIV [illegible] Le Tombeau [illegible]

[illegible] Berkshire music Divertimento Richard. An o movement [illegible] rhythm [illegible] fasc [illegible] ind [illegible] varied [illegible] was [illegible] out the [illegible] same i [illegible] harpsichordist [illegible] was [illegible] Couperin [illegible] inflec [illegible]

[illegible] beginning, Prokofieff's [illegible] Classical Symphony [illegible] unforgiv [illegible] musi [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] even slip-shod performance of this work was all too evident and was certainly unworthy the Boston Symphony. [illegible] was renewed, however, by a thrilling reading [illegible] Milhaud's La Creation du Monde. Written as the score for a ballet which the creation of the world portrayed as envisioned by an a [illegible] this is one of the earliest works in which a recognized composer used the jazz idiom symphonically.

As the closing work of the concert, Lukas Foss conducted the orchestra, Festival Chorus, a narrator and tenor soloist in his own Parable of Death. Commissioned and first performed by the Louisville Orchestra in March of this year, the work is in a contemporary, tonal idiom, varies from sparse to full-bodied textures and employs techniques avowedly reminiscent of Bach. Vera Zorina, as narrator, gave a wonderfully intense and unhurried reading. Her every gesture and facial expression added to the effective rendering of Rainer Maria Rilke's text. The difficult tenor solo, which demands a wide range and tremendous control, was admirably sung by John McCollum. It was unfortunate that this work was given in the Shed which is too large for the projection of the speaking voice.

STUART THEATRE
Lakeville, Conn.
Matinee Sat. - Sun. at 2:30 P. M.
Evening Cont. from 7-11 P. M.

Thurs.-Fri.-Sat. July 30-Aug. 1
STALAG 17
with
William Holden Don Taylor

Sun.-Mon.-Tues.-Wed. Aug. 2-3-4-5
SHANE
in Technicolor with Alan Ladd Jean Arthur
Van Heflyn
Slight increase in admission

Thurs.-Fri.-Sat. Aug. 6-7-8
SALOME
in Technicolor
Rita Hayworth Stewart Granger
Slight increase in admission

GREAT BARRINGTON
MON. AUG. 10
SHEFFIELD ROAD
Avspice, Rotary Club
KING

We Have a New Line of Dishes
New Libby Glassware
Clothespin Bags
Magnetic Pot Holders with Lifetime Magnets Stick to Any Metal Surface
New Better Homes and Gardens Recipe Book
New Line of Lamps — Brass, Milk Glass, Wood, Glass, Children's Lamps, Planters, Table and Pin-ups
Paints and Wallpapers
Open Fri. till 8 — Sat. till 6
Sprague's Gift Shop
CENTER STREET
Below Post Office
MILLERTON, N. Y.
Phone 54

Watch for the
3 DIMENSIO

[255]

This Clipping From
ALBANY, N. Y.
KNICKERBOCKER NEWS
AUG 1 - 1953

Munch and Francescatti Share Tanglewood Cheers

A capacity audience greeted conductor Charles Munch last night for the opening of the Tanglewood concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the immense shed. The program balanced traditional and modern compositions, with the superb French violinist, Zino Francescatti, appearing as soloist.

The opening Beethoven Leonore Overture No. 3 proved appropriate in every respect. The dramatic quality of this operatic synthesis gave the opportunity for a most exciting performance. With incisive beat Munch literally whipped the ensemble into the power of the music. The opening crescendo verified for any listener the rewards of a live performance. The intensity of such an experience is a rare delight, the climax of listening.

Playing so familiar a concerto as the Mendelssohn places a violinist in a critical position. Zino Francescatti gave an authoritative performance of polished elegance that left even the keenest auditors in the orchestra satisfied. The quality of his tone gives a carrying power that dominates the accompaniment and fully realizes the contrasting styles in the concerto form. Soloist and conductor,

---

Aug. 1, 1953

MUSIC

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
Boston Symphony Orch.

The first in series A of the shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra took place last evening in the shed at Tanglewood; Charles Munch conducted, the soloist was Zino Francescatti, and the program was as follows:

Beethoven—Overture to "Leonore," No. 3, Op. 72.
Mendelssohn—Concerto for violin and orchestra in 3 Minor, Op. 64.
Copland—"Appalachian Spring"
Ravel—Bolero.

By ELINOR HUGHES

LENOX, Mass.,—The seventh of the Berkshire Festival concerts of the 1953 season and first in a series of the concerts in the shed presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, took place last evening at Tanglewood before a crowd of 10,300 persons, the largest audience ever to attend the opening.

The weather was ideal, clear and cool with a gentle breeze, and the sky was no more thickly studded with stars than was the lawn with music lovers. A more auspicious start could hardly be imagined, and if the concerts continue as they began, this should be a banner year for the festival.

The program chosen by Mr. Munch for the occasion was a

and modern favorites, including works by Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Copland and Ravel.

Though there were no novelties, there was, none the less, a sense of freshness attending the presentation of the most redoubtable of war horses, such as Ravel's "Bolero;" and Copland's ever fresh and delightful "Appala-

---

Black Dispatch
Okla. City, Okla.

WARFIELD AND WIFE TEAM UP FOR TANGLEWOOD

81 William Warfield and his singing wife, Leontyne Price of "Porgy and Bess", along with Issac Stern, violinist, will be heard in a benefit "Tanglewood on Parade," for the Berkshire Music Center up in Lenox, Mass.

This Clipping From
CINCINNATI, OHIO
ENQUIRER
AUG - 1953

MRS. LOGAN leaving Tuesday

This Clipping From
NEW YORKER
NEW YORK, N. Y.

This SCHEN
JU

Franc
At Ta

Zino Franc be the soloist
phony Orchest
ing tomorrow
Lenox, Mass.
orchestra will tion of Charle gram will be t presented on evenings and through Aug. 1

*

OPENING A row's program
ven, "Overture ber 3"; Mendel
certo in E mi
palachian Spri
"Bolero."

The Saturda
also conducted include the S to 'Manfred'"
certo number 2
as soloist;
phony numbe Hindemith, "S phosis on The

Pierre Mont
Sunday progra
at 2:30 p.m.
program will i for Strings," S in E minor" a certo number 1

*

THE AUG. 7 will be devoted of Berlioz "Ro
matic sympho
Jennie Tourel
cona as the will conduct.
vitzky Memor directed by Le
Mr. Munch wil afternoon pro
Piatigorsky as

The famous rade program
this year for A

The final seri
under Mr. Mun
ance of the
with Lois Mar
Warfield as the stein will condu
gram and Mr. M

Major Festival Concerts To Start Tomorrow In Big Shed

With Charles Munch conducting the entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday and Saturday evenings, July 31 and August 1, at 2:30 p.m., the major series of the Berkshire Festival opens this week in the 6,000-seat Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Nine concerts will be given over three weekends, until August 16.

The sixteenth Berkshire Festival since summer concerts were inaugurated in the hills of Western Massachusetts, and the fourteenth since the Boston Symphony participated, has been drawing record crowds, what with the accessibility of Berkshire County from Vermont on the north, Massachusetts on the east, New York state on the west, and Connecticut on the south. Tanglewood concerts averaged a crowd of 9,500 in 1952. This season even larger crowds are anticipated, and concert-goers who do not have reserved seats may purchase general admission on the day of the concert and picnic on the grounds, which open on concert evenings at 6 p.m. and on Sundays at 12:30 p.m.

Three innovations mark the Shed series this season: the concerts commence on Friday evenings instead of the previous Thursdays, thus making it possible for music lovers who travel some distance to concentrate the complete series in their weekend; the Sunday afternoon programs commence at 2:30 p.m. instead of the former 3 o'clock; and the first hour-and-a-half of the Sunday program will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio from Tanglewood as the only American event in the network's "World Music Festivals" program, which includes highlights from seven European summer festivals. The first portion of the Sunday program 2:30 to 4 p.m., will be heard on the air, with James Fassett, CBS Radio Director of Music, as commentator.

Men at Work . . . Charles Munch and his Boston Symphony Orchestra who will play at the Big Shed in Tanglewood this weekend in the first Festival series. Concerts will be held Friday and Saturday evenings, Sunday afternoon.

The weekend will introduce to Tanglewood audiences the noted violinist Zino Francescatti, soloist on Friday evening; and the first Eastern performance in its revised form of Lukas Foss' Piano Concerton No. 2, with the composer as soloist. Jorge Bolet will be soloist on Sunday afternoon.

The Series A programs are:

Friday, July 31: Charles Munch — Beethoven, Overture to Leonore, No. 3; Mendelssohn, Violin Concerton in E Minor, (Soloist: Zino Francescatti); Copland, Appalachian Spring; Ravel, Bolero.

Saturday, August 1: Charles Munch — Schumann. Overture to Manfred; Foss, Piano Concerton No. 2 (the Composer as soloist); Mendelssohn, Symphony No. 4 "Italian"; Hindemith, Symphonic Metamorphosis of Themes by Weber.

Sunday, August 2: — Pierre Monteux — Tchaikovsky, Serenade for Strings; Tchaikovsky, Symphony No. 5, in E Minor; Tchaikovsky, Piano Concerton No. 1, in F-Flat Minor (soloist: Jorge Bolet).

GRACE NOTES
• Norfolk Music School

(Continued from Page Nine)

were: Helen Boatwright, Soprano; Carleton Sprague Smith, Flute; Robert Cecil, Horn; Luigi Silva, Violoncello; Keith Wilson, Clarinet, Howard Boatwright, Violin; Arthur Hague, Piano, and Bruce Simonds, Piano. These performers are widely known as concert soloists and most of them are familiar to Norfolk audiences.

The program began with two eighteenth century compositions which have not been republished since that century. They were performed from photostat copies of the recently discovered original editions, and this was probably their first performance in America. The first was a cantata, Morning for soprano, flute, strings, and "continue" (played at the piano by Mr. Hague. The composition had a steady, lyric flow, and full harmony. Helen Boatwright's interpretation was at once authoritative and spontaneous-sounding; Carleton Sprague Smith's playing was distinguished for its rhythm and tonal delicacy.

The Sonata in E Flat for Horn and Diane, by Franz Danzi, was the other eighteenth century piece, and it was presented by Robert Cecil, and Arthur Hague. Both these performers showed technical proficiency and awareness of the spirit of the music. Much of the time the score gave greater importance to the piano part, but even so one would have liked the horn to be allowed to cut through more, by a more subdued tone from the piano.

Howard Boatwright was a mem-

the quartet which Serenade for T Strings (comp combination one and was suitably sincerity and smooth continuity performance was al s vigorous and at moving.

sons Madecasses agascar by Ravel we
by Helen Boatwr
Carleton Spra
alternately on the
and Luigi Silva color: a between shrieking drum-like pizz
and rhy

Hindemith's Quartet for Viol Cello, and Piano composed in substantial the recital.
sure and sincere tails of tonal worked out, and composer's with awareness.

has been true all
the large audience sh and appreciation
high standards of progr
performance.

STUART THEATRE
Lakeville, Conn.
Matinee Sat. - Sun. at 2:30 P. M.
Evening Cont. from 7-11 P. M.

Thurs.-Fri.-Sat. July 30-Aug. 1
STALAG 17
with
William Holden Don Taylor

Sun.-Mon.-Tues.-Wed. Aug. 2-3-4-5
SHANE
in Technicolor with Alan Ladd Jean Arthur
Van Heflyn
Slight increase in admission

Thurs.-Fri.-Sat. Aug. 6-7-8
SALOME
in Technicolor
Rita Hayworth Stewart Granger
Slight increase in admission

GREAT BARRINGTON
MON. AUG. 10
SHEFFIELD ROAD
Avspice, Rotary Club
KING

We Have a New Line of Dishes
New Libby Glassware
Clothespin Bags
Magnetic Pot Holders with Lifetime Magnets
Stick to Any Metal Surface
New Better Homes and Gardens Recipe Book
New Line of Lamps — Brass, Milk Glass, Wood, Glass, Children's Lamps, Planters, Table and Pin-ups
Paints and Wallpapers
Open Fri. till 8 — Sat. till 6
Sprague's Gift Shop
CENTER STREET
Below Post Office
MILLERTON, N. Y.
Phone 54

Tanglewood

SUNDAY

By A. S. C.

sixth program Festival was twentieth century
Composer opened the dance suite work is instrumental con nati stri tions giv high
the
of thor light
From
the tion

After auspicious
the Classic Symphony able. In contrast cianship lavished
pedestrian devil
even slip-shod performance of this work all too evident and was certainly unworthy the Boston Symphony. Faith renewed however by a thrilling reading
Milhaud La Creation du Monde
Written for a ballet which the creation of the world protrayed ned by an a riginal is one of earlier which a recognized used the jazz idiom
symph

As ng work of the concert, oss conducted the orchestra val Chorus, a narrator and te oist in his own Parable of Deat missioned and first performed ne Louisville Orchestra in March of this year, the work is in a contemporary, tonal idiom, varies from sparse to full-bodied textures and employs techniques avowedly reminiscent of Bach. Vera Zorina, as narrator, gave a wonderfully intense and unhurried reading. Her every gesture and facial expression added to the effective rendering of Rainer Maria Rilke's text. The difficult tenor solo, which demands a wide range and tremendous control, was admirably sung by John McCollum. It was unfortunate that this work was given in the Shed which is too large for the projection of the speaking voice.

Watch for the
3 DIMENSIO

This C
ALBA
TIME
JUL

Full Bos
Symph
Tangle

The first of concerts by the phony Orchestra will inaugurate the Big Music wood tonight tion of Charles manent conduct will feature Zino the Mendelssohn certo.

Saturday nigh will lead the works by Schum sohn ("Italian Sy Hindemith. The will be the you pianist, Lucas Fo Concerto, No. 2, chestra.

Sunday after will be conduct inent French Monteux in an program. The played are Strings;" Symph the Piano Conce the French pian as soloist.

[255]

Aug 1 1953

MUSIC

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
Boston Symphony Orch.

The first in series A of the shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra took place last evening in the shed at Tanglewood; Charles Munch conducted, the soloist was Zino Francescatti, and the program was as follows:
Beethoven—Overture to "Leonore," No. 3, Op. 72
Mendelssohn—Concerto for violin and orchestra in E Minor, Op. 64.
Copland—"Appalachian Spring"
Ravel—Bolero

By ELINOR HUGHES

LENOX, Mass.—The seventh of the Berkshire Festival concerts of the 1953 season and first in a series of the concerts in the shed presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, took place last evening at Tanglewood before a crowd of 10,300 persons, the largest audience ever to attend the opening.

The weather was ideal, clear and cool with a gentle breeze, and the sky was no more thickly studded with stars than was the lawn with music lovers. A more auspicious start could hardly be imagined, and if the concerts continue as they began, this should be a banner year for the festival.

The program chosen by Mr. Munch for the occasion was a and modern favorites, including works by Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Copland and Ravel.

Though there were no novelties, there was, none the less, a sense of freshness attending the presentation of the most redoubtable of war horses, such as Ravel's "Bolero;" and Copland's ever fresh and delightful "Appala-

---

81 Black Disp. Okla. City, O

WARFIELD AND WIFE TEAM UP FOR TANGLEWOOD

William Warfield and his singing wife, Leontyn of "Porgy and Bess", along with Issac Stern, violini be heard in a benefit "Tanglewood on Parade," f Berkshire Music Center up in Lenox, Mass.

This Clipping From
CINCINNATI, OHIO
ENQUIRER

AUG 1 - 1953

MRS. LOGAN THOMSON is leaving Tuesday for New York,

This Clipping From
NEW YORKER
NEW YORK, N. Y.

AUG 1 - 1953

COUNTRY

MUSING THINGS TO DO AND PLACES TO GO

Thursday, July 30, 1953 THE LAKEVILLE JOURNAL 9

MODERN WEEK ENS AT PILLOW

height of the Berkshire tourist season approaches, b's Pillow Dance Festival additional performances to e extra thousands of pleaskers during the coming week. even-performance weeks en announced, and the first , a program of all-modern be danced by Jose Limon mpany with Pauline Koner rtist, got under way Tuesday , July 28 and will play Fri- nd Saturday evenings, with es Thursday, Friday, Satur- July 29-August 1). The com- ster will be completed by Jones, Ruth Currier, Lavina and Lucas Hoving. Unlike al festival program which three styles of dance, ballet, and ethnic, the program sist entirely of contemporary from the large repertoire of nguished Mexican-American company.

The Moor's Pavane, a modern dance based on the story of Othello, which will be given at Jacob's Pillow in Lee this weekend. Pictured are Pauline Koner and Jose Limon.

Three One-Act Operas To Be Given Monday

Three rarely-heard one-act operas by Gluck, Debussy and Chabrier will be performed by Students of Department IV, Berkshire Music Center, for a single performance at Tanglewood, on Monday (August 3) at 8:30 p.m. in the Theater-Concert Hall. All seats are reserved. The performance is open to those who support the summer school of music of the Boston Symphony Orchestra by joining the Society of Friends of the BMC.

Gluck's L'Yvrogne Corrigé (The Drunkard Reformed) of 1760 will have the English translation of Giovanni Cardelli, just published by G. Schirmer, Inc., of the libretto by L. Anseaume. So far as is known, this will be its first American production.

Debussy's L'Enfant Prodigue (The Prodigal Son) uses the composer's Prix de Rome score of 1884. It will be sung in French, to the libretto of E. Guinard.

Emmanuel Chabrier's The Education Manquée (An Incomplete Education) of 1879, will be sung in the English translation of Henry Reese.

The three one-acters, all Tanglewood premiers, are produced by Boris Goldovsky head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, staged by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell. Scenery is by John Blankenchip and costumes by Leo Van Witsen. They will be performed with student casts. Mr. Goldovsky will accompany the Gluck and Chabrier operas on the piano, and an orchestra of the school's Department I students, — Samuel Krachmalnick, conductor — will accompany the Debussy. Leo Kharibian has devised choreography for ten dancers in LeFils Prodigue.

Grace Notes

Music Mountain

By V. S.

A varied and interesting program marked the fourth performance of the Berkshire Quartet at Music Mountain. The program opened with Beethoven's Quartet in G Major, Opus 18, No. 2. The music begins with graceful and restrained phrases that grow in strength and beauty as they are played by one instrument and then another, enriched with nuances and variations of the other strings. The finale is of outstanding brilliance, the chamber work having the quality and depth of a string orchestra.

Ravel's Quartet in F is gentle melodic music interspersed with glowing bits of drama. The individual voices of the instruments are strong and clear and combine to make a rich tapestry of sound.

Quintet for Piano and Strings in C Minor, Opus 1 played by the Quartet and Ward Davenny at the piano is fine, sweeping romantic music. Ward Davenny gave a distinguished performance, fluid tones rippled with great virtuosity from the piano. The quintet has a soaring singing quality that brought the concert to a thrilling close.

Tanglewood

By V. S.

It was an all-Haydn concert at Tanglewood on Saturday evening. This was the last of the concerts to be held in the Theater-Concert Hall, and the Boston Symphony Orchestra was again under the direction of Charles Munch.

The opening work of the concert was the Symphony in C Minor, No. 95. In spite of the minor key signature, it was bright, lilting music with an effect of spaciousness and elegance.

The Symphony in G Major, No. 100, the "military symphony" was a colorful work and a very gay one. Except for the opening strains of the very short Adagio, which starts the composition, the "military symphony" has the cheerfulness of toy soldiers on parade. It was a thoroughly delightful piece of work which might have been less jocular if Mr. Munch had held down the "boom-clash-tingle" of the bass drum, cymbals and triangle just a bit.

The Theresa Mass in B Flat Major by Haydn was magnificent. The mass is rarely heard these days. It has no brilliant solo passages but the total effect was reverence and splendor. The vocal quartet, alternating with the Berkshire Festival Chorus, was supplemented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Hugh Ross conducted the mass.

Norfolk Music School

The concert at the Norfolk Music School on Wednesday, July 22, was so varied in scope, both chrono-avowed Zorina, as narrator unhurried fully intense and unhurried Her every gesture and facial expr sion added to the effective render ing of Rainer Maria Rilke's tex The difficult tenor solo, which d mands a wide range and treme dous control, was admirably su by John McCollum. It was unf tunate that this work was given the Shed which is too large for the projection of the speaking voice.

Watch for the
DIMENSIO

Where to Dine

THE SPURR'S
Home-Made
Ice Cream
"Worth Going Miles to Get"
Fifteen Delectable Flavors
Sh
Route 23

Salisbury Farms
Milk Bar and Restaurant
SAN Wholes
Famo
Located

Pine Tree Cabin
Route 7
Sheffield, Mass.
LU
Ba
C
Dance

BROOKSIDE RESTAURANT GRILL ROOM
Coffee — Ha

Cir. (D 39,275)

This Clipping From
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
JUL 30 1953

Francescatti to Be Soloist At Tanglewood Tomorrow

Zino Francescatti, violinist, will be the soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the Shed opening tomorrow at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass. The entire 104-piece orchestra will play under the direction of Charles Munch. The program will be the first of nine to be presented on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons through Aug. 16.

* * *

OPENING AT 8:30 P.M. tomorrow's program will include Beethoven, "Overture to 'Leonore,' number 3"; Mendelssohn, "Violin Concerto in E minor"; Copland, "Appalachian Spring," and the Ravel "Bolero."

The Saturday evening program, also conducted by Mr. Munch, will include the Schumann, "Overture to 'Manfred'"; Foss, "Piano Concerto number 2" with the composer as soloist; Mendelssohn, "Symphony number 4, 'Italian'"; and Hindemith, "Symphonic Metamorphosis on Themes by Weber."

Pierre Monteux will conduct the Sunday program, which will open at 2:30 p.m. The all Tchaikovsky program will include the "Serenade for Strings," Symphony number 5, in E minor" and the "Piano Concerto number 1, in B flat minor."

* * *

THE AUG. 7 EVENING program will be devoted to a performance of Berlioz "Romeo and Juliet," dramatic symphony with chorus and Jennie Tourel and Nichola Moscona as the soloists. Mr. Munch will conduct. The Aug. 8 Koussevitzky Memorial Concert will be directed by Leonard Bernstein and Mr. Munch will conduct the Aug. 9 afternoon program with Gregor Piatigorsky as soloist.

The famous Tanglewood on Parade program has been scheduled this year for Aug. 13.

The final series will open Aug. 14 under Mr. Munch with a performance of the Brahms "Requiem" with Lois Marshall and William Warfield as the soloists. Mr. Bernstein will conduct the Aug. 15 program and Mr. Munch the final Sunday afternoon program on Aug. 16. Seymour Lipkin will be the soloist in the Ravel "Piano Concerto for the Left Hand" at the concluding concert.

CHARLES MUNCH
To Conduct Tomorrow

* * *

LAST YEAR THE Tanglewood concerts averaged a crowd of 9,500 and even larger crowds are anticipated this year. The Shed seats 6,000 persons and those who do not have reserved seats may purchase general admission on the day of the concert. Those desiring to picnic on the grounds may do so. On concert evenings the grounds open at 6 p.m. and on Sundays at 12:30 p.m.

The annual Tanglewood on Parade, a benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will feature a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Mr. Munch and Mr. Bernstein. Soloists for the event will include Isaac Stern, violinist; and William Warfield, baritone, and his soprano wife, Leontyne Price, in Act II, scenes I and II of "Porgy and Bess."

This Clipping From
BALTIMORE, MD.
NEWS-POST
AUG 1 - 1953

THESE DAYS!

An Age Of Genius

SKY

the inter-ert, up at could not had per-

to relate the whole of human existence, experience and knowledge to his times. Where is such a person today, in this generation?

And yet, as one moves among the pines of lovely Tanglewood, watching young in their interminable arguments ic and life, it is impossible not tive to a great stirring, like the that precedes an electric storm.
e the dawn of another era of

Cir. (D 60,097) (S 112,417)

This Clipping From
ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES-UNION
AUG 1 - 19

Albany, N.Y. Times-Union 8/1/53

These Days:

New Age of Genius Stirs at Tanglewood

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

The other night, during the intermission of a Mozart concert, up at Tanglewood in the Berkshires, I could not help remarking that Mozart had performed such wonders by the age of 16. A friend commented that genius comes in cycles and we are outside the cycle. It was one of those remarks that sticks in one's craw until something is done about it. Is it true that there is a cycle of genius and a cycle of the commonplace?

Let us start with Johann Sebastian Bach and we have "Gott Ist Mein Koenig" in 1707 when he was 22 years old. Fourteen years later, he produced the "Brandenburg Concertos," which, in a way, are the beginning of the modern orchestra. Bach died in 1750, nine years before Hadyn produced his first symphony and 14 years before Mozart wrote his "Sonates Pour Le Clavecin." Mozart died in 1791. He was alive when Beethoven began to write

AGE OF GENIUS

So, we have 120 years, from 1707, when Bach's first composition was written, to 1827, when Beethoven died. In music, this is the golden age of genius. Apart from Bach, Handel, Hadyn, Mozart and Beethoven, this period produced other composers whose works are still being played.

It was an extraordinarily rich period in all fields, in innovation and discovery, in the beginning of modern science. Isaac Newton published his "Universal Arithmetic" the year that Handel wrote his "Rodrigo". Leeuwenhoek produced his microscope a year later. Alexander Pope wrote his "Pastorals" the year that Gusmao made the first ascent in a balloon at Lisbon and the following year Sir Christopher Wren completed the magnificent St. Paul's in London.

What a wonderful time I am having as I go through this period of 120 years! How envious one can be of such a year as 1734 when Swedenborg published his philosophy; Bach his "Christmas Oratorio"; Montesquieu his "Considerations on the Grandeur and Decadence of the Romans"; Voltaire, his "Lettres Philosophiques."

MOZART APPEARS

I look at the year 1764, when Mozart first appeared. The gentle architect, Robert Adam, had completed the beautiful Kenwood Lodge. James Watt invented the first steam engine. Hadyn published his "String Quartet, Opus 1.' Immanuel Kant produced his master-work in esthetics. Voltaire issued his "Dictionnaire Philosophique."

Or I turn to 1827, the year that Beethoven died, the end of this period. In that year, Faraday published his "Chemical Manipulation" and Hallam his "The Constitutional History of England." Tennyson issued "Poems by Two Brothers." Turner painted "Ulysses Deriding Polyhemus." Schubert was writing songs and H poems. Balzac, Victor Hugo and Stendhal were producing novels.

This is the period of revolution, of the stimulation of the imagination of youth by new ideas, new countries, new developments. The American and French Revolutions stirred the world and Napolean moved across continents.

Can we draw any conclusions from all this? Does it help us to understand why this period of 120 years is an age of genius? Does it aid us to understand our own times when on the cultural side of life so little is produced in any country?

ERA OF SCIENCE

Perhaps the explanation is that our great minds have turned to science, to chemistry and physics and engineering. Have we become so bogged down in facts and in the business of earning a living that the beauty of life escapes us? Are we so full of statistics that there is no room for poetry?

And as we ponder these questions, the mind naturally turns to moral equations. Every noble era has produced a great moralist, a philosopher who has sought to relate the whole of human existence, experience and knowledge to his times. Where is such a person today, in this generation? Sartre, whose existentialism had a moment of excitement, is already a toy among the intellectuals. In the Western World, philosophy has become a teaching profession and the moralists are apologists for their times.

And yet, as one moves among the pines of lovely Tanglewood, watching young people in their interminable arguments about music and life, it is impossible not to be sensitive to a great stirring, like the cold wind that precedes an electric storm. Here is a sampling of the cultured youth of America, from every state, who give their summers to composition and performance and to endless talk. It may be the dawn of another era of genius.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL-AMERICAN
AUG 3 - 1953

Cir. (D 81,951) (S 101,368)

This Clipping From
SYRACUSE, N. Y.
POST-STANDARD
AUG 1 - 1953

Cir. (D 6,882)

This Clipping From
TOWANDA, PA.
REVIEW
AUG 1 - 1953

Cir. (D 189,738) Genius

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
AMERICAN
AUG 3 - 1953

This Clipping From
ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES-UNION
JUL 31 1953

Full Boston Symphony at Tanglewood

The first of three weekend concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra of 104 members will inaugurate the opening of the Big Music Shed at Tanglewood tonight under the direction of Charles Munch, the permanent conductor. The program will feature Zino Francescatti in the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto.

Saturday night, Mr. Munch will lead the orchestra in works by Schumann, Mendelssohn ("Italian Symphony":) and Hindemith. The guest soloist will be the young American pianist, Lucas Foss in his own Concerto, No. 2, with the orchestra.

Sunday afternoon's concert will be conducted by the eminent French director Pierre Monteux in an all-Tchaikowsky program. The works to be played are "Serenade for Strings;" Symphony, No. 5 and the Piano Concerto, No. 1 with the French pianist, Jorge Bolet as soloist.

Cir. (D 117,194) (S 210,551)

This Clipping From
FORT WORTH, TEX.
EVENING STAR TELEGRAM
JUL 3 0 1953

A Woman's New Y

They're Seeing Having Fun at

BY ALICE HUG

NEW YORK, July 30.—Comes abandon their city to the visitors elsewhere for fun and rest. Did resorts here and abroad reveals tically "doing" the continent. My husband are touring England, Sp all in six weeks.

Read her weary report on her third day in London:

"We skipped Cambridge: The trip takes too long. We do only what's near by. Windsor Castle and Hampton Court nearly finished me off yesterday. They were wonderful, but oh! my feet! Wait till you see our color pictures of British gardens! Never saw such magnificence! And all in full bloom, at the end of July! We're impressed with the enduring tradition of the people and the antiquity of the architecture. But I had to beg off the Tower of London and the trip along the Thames. That's why I have time to scribble this letter.

"We've been to the theater once and dancing twice. Dinner at the Savoy; also at the Ambassadeurs. We've seen the young Mayfairites cutting up and noted the shabby-looking 'man on the street' looking down. But no one notices shabbiness because the British are too polite to stare. If anything, they are too obsequious. It troubled me that a maid in the hotel elevator tried to get out of the "lift" in order to spare us the indignity, I suppose, of riding with a servant. We made her come back in and ride down, which embarrassed her. The only shortage we notice in England is paper. There's little of it, and it's poor quality. I shook hands with Clement Attlee in Parliament.

'DEAD TIRED.'

"If the other countries are as wonderful as England, it'll be a memorable trip. We're dead tired, but happy, toting camera, notebook and sun-glasses, like all American tourists. Before tea we rest an hour, so as to survive dinner, parties and entertainment. Usually we are back in the hotel by 1 a. m., in time to do a little laundry—stockings, nylon underwear, gloves, etc. Then we write a few letters, sleep a little and get an early start

Day
Spa
F
sam othe band
Bost
They festi
the til A lives, two-r Sanc
Rese tices
ing,
and on is dista birds nurtu
ciety, songs silenc

IDYLLIC PLACE.

As my sister describes it it sounds idyllic. They read, sunbathe, pick blueberries. Now and then they invite friends to invade this birdland for a meal and a chat. I'll be there the final week-end in July, en route for Hillsboro, N. H., to celebrate my 9-year-old Jeremiah's birthday at his boys' camp. As this will be my first gander at him since June 25, Aug. 1 can not come too soon for me.

From their present sylvan retreat, my sister and husband will emerge, at the end of August, to fly to Europe and dissipate their refreshed tissues in the frenzied pace of France—at the height of the tourist season! I can't think of anything I'd rather do less than mill around in Europe this summer. Americans are the grandest people in the world, but they're nicest when on their home-grounds. Something happens when they transport themselves abroad. They get chesty and chauvinistic. Let them invade Europe in the summer-time. I prefer the Continent in the fall, winter and spring. Meantime, the bird sanctuary at Lenox seems deliciously inviting to me and I'm all pitched to tune in with the birds this week-end.

(Copyright, 1953 King Feat. Synd., Inc.)

---

r. (D 21,010)

This Clipping From
WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.
REPORTER-DISPATCH
JUL 30 1953

Student Composer Taking Course at Berkshire Festival

Studying composition at the Berkshire Festival Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., is David Tecklin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Tecklin of 170 Soundview Avenue. Mr. Tecklin, who composes music for string quartets and choirs, is among 400 students from 41 states and 11 foreign countries attending the school, which opened July 27 and will close Aug. 16.

He is on the dean's list at Brown University, where he will be a senior in September.

The music center was founded by the Boston Symphony orchestra and offers studies in orchestra playing, conducting, chamber music and opera. The center's faculty includes Charles Munch, director of the Boston symphony, Aaron Copland, Leonard Bernstein and Boris Goldovsky.

Cir. (D 39,275)

This Clipping From
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
JUL 30 1953

Francescatti to Be Soloist At Tanglewood Tomorrow

Zino Francescatti, violinist, will be the soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra fot the Shed opening tomorrow at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass. The entire 104-piece orchestra will play under the direction of Charles Munch. The program will be the first of nine to be presented on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons through Aug. 16.

* * *

OPENING AT 8:30 P.M. tomorrow's program will include Beethoven, "Overture to 'Leonore,' number 3"; Mendelssohn, "Violin Concerto in E minor"; Copland, "Appalachian Spring," and the Ravel Bolero."

The Saturday evening program, also conducted by Mr. Munch, will include the Schumann, "Overture to 'Manfred'"; Foss, "Piano Concerto number 2" with the composer as soloist; Mendelssohn, "Symphony number 4, 'Italian'"; and Hindemith, "Symphonic Metamorphosis on Themes by Weber."

Pierre Monteux will conduct the Sunday program, which will open at 2:30 p.m. The all Tchaikovsky program will include the "Serenade for Strings," Symphony number 5, in E minor" and the "Piano Concerto number 1, in B flat minor."

* * *

THE AUG. 7 EVENING program will be devoted to a performance of Berlioz "Romeo and Juliet," dramatic symphony with chorus and Jennie Tourel and Nichola Moscona as the soloists. Mr. Munch will conduct. The Aug. 8 Koussevitzky Memorial Concert will be directed by Leonard Bernstein and Mr. Munch will conduct the Aug. 9 afternoon program with Gregor Piatigorsky as soloist.

The famous Tanglewood on Parade program has been scheduled this year for Aug. 13.

The final series will open Aug. 14 under Mr. Munch with a performance of the Brahms "Requiem" with Lois Marshall and William Warfield as the soloists. Mr. Bernstein will conduct the Aug. 15 program and Mr. Munch the final Sunday afternoon program on Aug. 16. Seymour Lipkin will be the soloist in the Ravel "Piano Concerto for the Left Hand" at the concluding concert.

CHARLES MUNCH
To Conduct Tomorrow

* * *

LAST YEAR THE Tanglewood concerts averaged a crowd of 9,500 and even larger crowds are anticipated this year. The Shed seats 6,000 persons and those who do not have reserved seats may purchase general admission on the day of the concert. Those desiring to picnic on the grounds may do so. On concert evenings the grounds open at 6 p.m. and on Sundays at 12:30 p.m.

The annual Tanglewood on Parade, a benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will feature a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Mr. Munch and Mr. Bernstein. Soloists for the event will include Isaac Stern, violinist; and William Warfield, baritone, and his soprano wife, Leontyne Price, in Act II, scenes I and II of "Porgy and Bess."

BALTIMORE, MD.
NEWS-POST
AUG 1 - 1953

THESE DAYS!

An Age Of Genius

SKY

the interrt, up at could not had per-

to relate the whole of human existence, experience and knowledge to his times. Where is such a person today, in this generation?

And yet, as one moves among the pines of lovely Tanglewood, watching young their interminable arguments ic and life, it is impossible not tive to a great stirring, like the that precedes an electric storm. the dawn of another era of

Cir. (D 60,097) (S 112,417)

This Clipping From
ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES-UNION
AUG 1 - 19

Albany, N.Y. Times-Union
8/1/53

These Days:

New Age of Genius Stirs at Tanglewood

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

The other night, during the intermission of a Mozart concert, up at Tanglewood in the Berkshires, I could not help remarking that Mozart had performed such wonders by the age of 16. A friend commented that genius comes in cycles and we are outside the cycle. It was one of those remarks that sticks in one's craw until something is done about it. Is it true that there is a cycle of genius and a cycle of the commonplace?

Let us start with Johann Sebastian Bach and we have "Gott Ist Mein Koenig" in 1707 when he was 22 years old. Fourteen years later, he produced the "Brandenburg Concertos," which, in a way, are the beginning of the modern orchestra. Bach died in 1750, nine years before Hadyn produced his first symphony and 14 years before Mozart wrote his "Sonates Pour Le Clavecin." Mozart died in 1791. He was alive when Beethoven began to write.

AGE OF GENIUS

So, we have 120 years, from 1707, when Bach's first composition was written, to 1827, when Beethoven died. In music, this is the golden age of genius. Apart from Bach, Handel, Hadyn, Mozart and Beethoven, this period produced other composers whose works are still being played.

It was an extraordinarily rich period in all fields, in innovation and discovery, in the beginning of modern science. Isaac Newton published his "Universal Arithmetic" the year that Handel wrote his "Rodrigo". Leeuwenhoek produced his microscope a year later. Alexander Pope wrote his "Pastorals" the year that Gusmao made the first ascent in a balloon at Lisbon and the following year Sir Christopher Wren completed the magnificent St. Paul's in London.

What a wonderful time I am having as I go through this period of 120 years! How envious one can be of such a year as 1734 when Swedenborg published his philosophy; Bach his "Christmas Oratorio"; Montesquieu his "Considerations on the Grandeur and Decadence of the Romans"; Voltaire, his "Lettres Philosophiques."

MOZART APPEARS

I look at the year 1764, when Mozart first appeared. The gentle architect, Robert Adam, had completed the beautiful Kenwood Lodge. James Watt invented the first steam engine. Hadyn published his "String Quartet, Opus 1.' Immanuel Kant produced his master-work in esthetics. Voltaire issued his "Dictionnaire Philosophique."

Or I turn to 1827, the year that Beethoven died, the end of this period. In that year, Faraday published his "Chemical Manipulation" and Hallam his "The Constitutional History of England." Tennyson issued "Poems by Two Brothers." Turner painted "Ulysses Deriding Polyhemus." Schubert was writing songs and Heine poems. Balzac, Victor Hugo and Stendhal were producing novels.

This is the period of revolution, of the stimulation of the imagination of youth by new ideas, new countries, new developments. The American and French Revolutions stirred the world and Napolean moved across continents.

Can we draw any conclusions from all this? Does it help us to understand why this period of 120 years is an age of genius? Does it aid us to understand our own times when on the cultural side of life so little is produced in any country?

ERA OF SCIENCE

Perhaps the explanation is that our great minds have turned to science, to chemistry and physics and engineering. Have we become so bogged down in facts and in the business of earning a living that the beauty of life escapes us? Are we so full of statistics that there is no room for poetry?

And as we ponder these questions, the mind naturally turns to moral equations. Every noble era has produced a great moralist, a philosopher who has sought to relate the whole of human existence, experience and knowledge to his times. Where is such a person today, in this generation? Sartre, whose existentialism had a moment of excitement, is already a toy among the intellectuals. In the Western World, philosophy has become a teaching profession and the moralists are apologists for their times.

And yet, as one moves among the pines of lovely Tanglewood, watching young people in their interminable arguments about music and life, it is impossible not to be sensitive to a great stirring, like the cold wind that precedes an electric storm. Here is a sampling of the cultured youth of America, from every state, who give their summers to composition and performance and to endless talk. It may be the dawn of another era of genius.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL-AMERICAN
AUG 3 - 1953

Cir. (D 81,951) (S 101,368)

This Clipping From
SYRACUSE, N. Y.
POST-STANDARD
AUG 1 - 1953

Cir. (D 6,882)

This Clipping From
TOWANDA, PA.
REVIEW
AUG 1 - 1953

Cir. (D 189,738) Genius

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
AMERICAN
AUG 3 - 1953

This Clipping From
ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES-UNION
JUL 31 1953

Full Boston Symphony at Tanglewood

The first of three weekend concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra of 104 members will inaugurate the opening of the Big Music Shed at Tanglewood tonight under the direction of Charles Munch, the permanent conductor. The program will feature Zino Francescatti in the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto.

Saturday night, Mr. Munch will lead the orchestra in works by Schumann, Mendelssohn ("Italian Symphony":) and Hindemith. The guest soloist will be the young American pianist, Lucas Foss in his own Concerto, No. 2, with the orchestra.

Sunday afternoon's concert will be conducted by the eminent French director Pierre Monteux in an all-Tchaikowsky program. The works to be played are "Serenade for Strings;" Symphony, No. 5 and the Piano Concerto, No. 1 with the French pianist, Jorge Bolet as soloist.

Cir. (D 117,194) (S 210,551)

This Clipping From
FORT WORTH, TEX.
EVENING STAR TELEGRAM
JUL 3 0 1953

A Woman's New Y

They're Seeing Having Fun at

BY ALICE HUG

NEW YORK, July 30.—Comes abandon their city to the visitor elsewhere for fun and rest. Did resorts here and abroad reveals tically "doing" the continent. My husband are touring England, Sp all in six weeks.

Read her weary report on her third day in London:

"We skipped Cambridge: The trip takes too long. We do only what's near by. Windsor Castle and Hampton Court nearly finished me off yesterday. They were wonderful, but oh! my feet! Wait till you see our color pictures of British gardens! Never saw such magnificence! And all in full bloom, at the end of July! We're impressed with the enduring tradition of the people and the antiquity of the architecture. But I had to beg off the Tower of London and the trip along the Thames. That's why I have time to scribble this letter.

"We've been to the theater once and dancing twice. Dinner at the Savoy; also at the Ambassadeurs. We've seen the young Mayfairites cutting up and noted the shabby-looking 'man on the street' looking down. But no one notices shabbiness because the British are too polite to stare. If anything, they are too obsequious. It troubled me that a maid in the hotel elevator tried to get out of the "lift" in order to spare us the indignity, I suppose, of riding with a servant. We made her come back in and ride down, which embarrassed her. The only shortage we notice in England is paper. There's little of it, and it's poor quality. I shook hands with Clement Attlee in Parliament.

'DEAD TIRED.'

"If the other countries are as wonderful as England, it'll be a memorable trip. We're dead tired, but happy, toting camera, notebook and sun-glasses, like all American tourists. Before tea we rest an hour, so as to survive dinner, parties and entertainment. Usually we are back in the hotel by 1 a. m., in time to do a little laundry—stockings, nylon underwear, gloves, etc. Then we write a few letters, sleep a little and get an early start

Day Spa F sam oth band Bost The festi the til A lives two- Sanc Rese tices ing, and on is dista birds nurtu ciety, songs silen

IDYLLIC PLACE.

As my sister describes it it sounds idyllic. They read, sunbathe, pick blueberries. Now and then they invite friends to invade this birdland for a meal and a chat. I'll be there the final week-end in July, en route for Hillsboro, N. [illegible] my 9-year-old Jeremiah's birthday at his boys' camp. As this will be my first gander at him since June 25, Aug. 1 can not come too soon for me.

From their present sylvan retreat, my sister and husband will emerge, at the end of August, to fly to Europe and dissipate their refreshed tissues to the frenzied pace of France—at the height of the tourist season! I can't think of anything I'd rather do less than mill around in Europe this summer. Americans are the grandest people in the world, but they're nicest when on their home-grounds. Something happens when they transport themselves abroad. They get chesty and chauvinistic. Let them invade Europe in the summer-time. I prefer the Continent in the fall, winter and spring. Meantime, the bird sanctuary at Lenox seems deliciously inviting to me and I'm all pitched to tune in with the birds this week-end.

(Copyright, 1953 King Feat. Synd., Inc.)

Cir. (D 21,010)

This Clipping From
WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.
REPORTER-DISPATCH
JUL 30 1953

Student Composer Taking Course at Berkshire Festival

Studying composition at the Berkshire Festival Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., is David Tecklin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Tecklin of 170 Soundview Avenue. Mr. Tecklin, who composes music for string quartets and choirs, is among 400 students from 41 states and 11 foreign countries attending the school, which opened July 27 and will close Aug. 16.

He is on the dean's list at Brown University, where he will be a senior in September.

The music center was founded by the Boston Symphony orchestra and offers studies in orchestra playing, conducting, chamber music and opera. The center's faculty includes Charles Munch, director of the Boston symphony, Aaron Copland, Leonard Bernstein and Boris Goldovsky.

[256]

Cir. (D 39,275)

This Clipping From
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
JUL 30 1953

Francescatti to Be Soloist At Tanglewood Tomorrow

Zino Francescatti, violinist, will be the soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the Shed opening tomorrow at Tanglewood, near Lenox Mass. The entire 104-piece orchestra will play under the direction of Charles Munch. The program will be the first of nine to be presented on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons through Aug. 16.

* * *

OPENING AT 8:30 P.M. tomorrow's program will include Beethoven "Overture to 'Leonore,' number 3"; Mendelssohn, "Violin Concerto in E minor"; Copland, "Appalachian Spring," and the Ravel Bolero."

The Saturday evening program, also conducted by Mr. Munch, will include the Schumann, "Overture to 'Manfred'"; Foss, "Piano Concerto number 2" with the composer as soloist; Mendelssohn, "Symphony number 4, 'Italian'"; and Hindemith, "Symphonic Metamorphosis on Themes by Weber."

Pierre Monteux will conduct the Sunday program, which will open at 2:30 p.m. The all Tchaikovsky program will include the "Serenade for Strings," Symphony number 5, in E minor" and the "Piano Concerto number 1, in B flat minor."

* * *

THE AUG. 7 EVENING program will be devoted to a performance of Berlioz "Romeo and Juliet," dramatic symphony with chorus and Jennie Tourel and Nichola Moscona as the soloists. Mr. Munch will conduct. The Aug. 8 Koussevitzky Memorial Concert will be directed by Leonard Bernstein and Mr. Munch will conduct the Aug. 9 afternoon program with Gregor Piatigorsky as soloist.

The famous Tanglewood on Parade program has been scheduled this year for Aug. 13.

The final series will open Aug. 14 under Mr. Munch with a performance of the Brahms "Requiem" with Lois Marshall and William Warfield as the soloists. Mr. Bernstein will conduct the Aug. 15 program and Mr. Munch the final Sunday afternoon program on Aug. 16. Seymour Lipkin will be the soloist in the Ravel "Piano Concerto for the Left Hand" at the concluding concert.

CHARLES MUNCH
To Conduct Tomorrow

* * *

LAST YEAR THE Tanglewood concerts averaged a crowd of 9,500 and even larger crowds are anticipated this year. The Shed seats 6,000 persons and those who do not have reserved seats may purchase general admission on the day of the concert. Those desiring to picnic on the grounds may do so. On concert evenings the grounds open at 6 p.m. and on Sundays at 12:30 p.m.

The annual Tanglewood on Parade, a benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will feature a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Mr. Munch and Mr. Bernstein. Soloists for the event will include Isaac Stern, violinist; and William Warfield, baritone, and his soprano wife, Leontyne Price, in Act II, scenes I and II of "Porgy and Bess."

Genius

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

THE OTHER night, during the intermission of a Mozart concert, up at Tanglewood in the Berkshires, I could not help remarking that Mozart had performed such wonders by the age of sixteen. A friend commented that genius comes in cycles and we are outside the cycle.

It was one of those remarks that sticks in one's craw until something is done about it. Is it true that there is a cycle of genius and a cycle of the commonplace?

Let us start with Johann Sebastian Bach and we have "Gott Is Mein Koenig" in 1707, when he was twenty-two years old. Fourteen years later he produced the "Brandenburg Concertos," which, in a way, are the beginning of the modern orchestra. Bach died in 1750, nine years before Haydn produced his first symphony and 14 years before Mozart wrote his "Sonates Pour le Clavecin." Mozart died in 1791; he was alive when Beethoven began to write.

* * *

So, we have 120 years, from 1707, when Bach's first composition was written, to 1827, when Beethoven died. In music this is the golden age of genius. Apart from Bach, Handel, Haydn, Mozart and Beethoven, this period produced other composers whose works are still being played.

It was an extraordinarily rich period in all fields, in innovation and discovery, in the beginning of modern science. Isaac Newton published his "Universal Arithmetic" the year that Handel wrote his "Rodrigo"; Leeuwenhoek produced his microscope a year later.

Alexander Pope wrote his "Pastorals" the year that Gusmao made the first ascent in a balloon at Lisbon and the following year Sir Christopher Wren completed the magnificent St. Paul's in London.

Are There Conclusions?

Can we draw any conclusions from this? Does it help us to understand why this period of 120 years is an age of genius? Does it aid us to understand our own times when on the cultural side of life so little is produced in any country?

Perhaps the explanation is that our great minds have turned to science, to chemistry and physics and engineering. Have we become so bogged down in facts and in the business of earning a living that the beauty of life escapes us? Are we so full of statistics that there is no room for poetry?

* * *

And as we ponder these questions, the mind naturally turns to moral equations. Every noble era has produced a great moralist, a philosopher who has sought to relate the whole of human existence, experience and knowledge to his times. Where is such a person today, in this generation?

And yet, as one moves among the pines of lovely Tanglewood, watching young people in their interminable arguments about music and life, it is impossible not to be sensitive to a great stirring, like the cold wind that precedes an electric storm. It may be the dawn of another era of genius.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL-AMERICAN
AUG 3 - 1953

Cir. (D 81,951) (S 101,368)

This Clipping From
SYRACUSE, N. Y.
POST-STANDARD
AUG 1 - 1953

Cir. (D 6,882)

This Clipping From
TOWANDA, PA.
REVIEW
AUG 1 - 1953

Cir. (D 189,738) Genius

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
AMERICAN
AUG 3 - 1953

This Clipping From
ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES-UNION
JUL 31 1953

Full Boston Symphony at Tanglewood

The first of three weekend concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra of 104 members will inaugurate the opening of the Big Music Shed at Tanglewood tonight under the direction of Charles Munch, the permanent conductor. The program will feature Zino Francescatti in the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto.

Saturday night, Mr. Munch will lead the orchestra in works by Schumann, Mendelssohn ("Italian Symphony":) and Hindemith. The guest soloist will be the young American pianist, Lucas Foss in his own Concerto, No. 2, with the orchestra.

Sunday afternoon's concert will be conducted by the eminent French director Pierre Monteux in an all-Tchaikowsky program. The works to be played are "Serenade for Strings;" Symphony, No. 5 and the Piano Concerto, No. 1 with the French pianist, Jorge Bolet as soloist.

Cir. (D 117,194) (S 210,551)

This Clipping From
FORT WORTH, TEX.
EVENING STAR TELEGRAM
JUL 30 1953

A Woman's New Yo

They're Seeing Having Fun at a

BY ALICE HUGH

NEW YORK, July 30.—Comes A abandon their city to the visitors. elsewhere for fun and rest. Did I say "rest"? Mail from resorts here and abroad reveals American travelers frantically "doing" the continent. My sister Francie and her husband are touring England, Spain, Italy and France—all in six weeks.

Read her weary report on her third day in London:

"We skipped Cambridge: The trip takes too long. We do only what's near by. Windsor Castle and Hampton Court nearly finished me off yesterday. They were wonderful, but oh! my feet! Wait till you see our color pictures of British gardens! Never saw such magnificence! And all in full bloom, at the end of July! We're impressed with the enduring tradition of the people and the antiquity of the architecture. But I had to beg off the Tower of London and the trip along the Thames. That's why I have time to scribble this letter.

"We've been to the theater once and dancing twice. Dinner at the Savoy; also at the Ambassadeurs. We've seen the young Mayfairites cutting up and noted the shabby-looking 'man on the street' looking down. But no one notices shabbiness because the British are too polite to stare. If anything, they are too obsequious. It troubled me that a maid in the hotel elevator tried to get out of the "lift" in order to spare us the indignity, I suppose, of riding with a servant. We made her come back in and ride down, which embarrassed her. The only shortage we notice in England is paper. There's little of it, and it's poor quality. I shook hands with Clement Attlee in Parliament.

'DEAD TIRED.'

"If the other countries are as wonderful as England, it'll be a memorable trip. We're dead tired, but happy, toting camera, notebook and sun-glasses, like all American tourists. Before tea we rest an hour, so as to survive dinner, parties and entertainment. Usually we are back in the hotel by 1 a. m., in time to do a little laundry—stockings, nylon underwear, gloves, etc. Then we write a few letters, sleep a little and get an early start. Day after tomorrow we're off for Spain!"

From Lenox, Mass., in the same mail, a letter from my other sister—the one whose husband plays the violin with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. They are now enjoying the music festival season at Tanglewood in the Berkshires. From July 5 until Aug. ~~17~~, music dominates their lives, spent in a tiny one-story, two-room cottage located on Sanctuary Hill, in the Audubon Reservation. When Pierre practices his violin in the early morning, birds furnish both audience and chorus. The hill they live on is thickly treed; those in the distance are blue and misty. The birds, carefully protected and nurtured by the Audubon Society, include many species. Their songs sound loud because the silence is so profound.

IDYLLIC PLACE.

As my sister describes it it sounds idyllic. They read, sunbathe, pick blueberries. Now and then they invite friends to invade this birdland for a meal and a chat. I'll be there the final week-end in July, en route for Hillsboro, N. H., to celebrate my 9-year-old Jeremiah's birthday at his boys' camp. As this will be my first gander at him since June 25, Aug. 1 can not come too soon for me.

From their present sylvan retreat, my sister and husband will emerge, at the end of August, to fly to Europe and dissipate their refreshed tissues in the frenzied pace of France—at the height of the tourist season! I can't think of anything I'd rather do less than mill around in Europe this summer. Americans are the grandest people in the world, but they're nicest when on their home-grounds. Something happens when they transport themselves abroad. They get chesty and chauvinistic. Let them invade Europe in the summer-time. I prefer the Continent in the fall, winter and spring. Meantime, the bird sanctuary at Lenox seems deliciously inviting to me and I'm all pitched to tune in with the birds this week-end.

(Copyright, 1953 King Feat. Synd., Inc.)

Cir. (D 21,010)

This Clipping From
WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.
REPORTER-DISPATCH
JUL 30 1953

Student Composer Taking Course at Berkshire Festival

Studying composition at the Berkshire Festival Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., is David Tecklin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Tecklin of 170 Soundview Avenue. Mr. Tecklin, who composes music for string quartets and choirs, is among 400 students from 41 states and 11 foreign countries attending the school, which opened July 27 and will close Aug. 16.

He is on the dean's list at Brown University, where he will be a senior in September.

The music center was founded by the Boston Symphony orchestra and offers studies in orchestra playing, conducting, chamber music and opera. The center's faculty includes Charles Munch, director of the Boston symphony, Aaron Copland, Leonard Bernstein and Boris Goldovsky.

Cir. (D 39,275)

This Clipping From
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
JUL 30 1953

Francescatti to Be Soloist At Tanglewood Tomorrow

CHARLES MUNCH
To Conduct Tomorrow

Zino Francescatti, violinist, will be the soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra fot the Shed opening tomorrow at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass. The entire 104-piece orchestra will play under the direction of Charles Munch. The program will be the first of nine to be presented on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons through Aug. 16.

* * *

OPENING AT 8:30 P.M. tomorrow's program will include Beethoven, "Overture to 'Leonore,' number 3"; Mendelssohn, "Violin Concerto in E minor"; Copland, "Appalachian Spring," and the Ravel Bolero."

The Saturday evening program, also conducted by Mr. Munch, will include the Schumann, "Overture to 'Manfred'"; Foss, "Piano Concerto number 2" with the composer as soloist; Mendelssohn, "Symphony number 4, 'Italian'"; and Hindemith, "Symphonic Metamorphosis on Themes by Weber."

Pierre Monteux will conduct the Sunday program, which will open at 2:30 p.m. The all Tchaikovsky program will include the "Serenade for Strings," Symphony number 5, in E minor" and the "Piano Concerto number 1, in B flat minor."

* * *

THE AUG. 7 EVENING program will be devoted to a performance of Berlioz "Romeo and Juliet," dramatic symphony with chorus and Jennie Tourel and Nichola Moscona as the soloists. Mr. Munch will conduct. The Aug. 8 Koussevitzky Memorial Concert will be directed by Leonard Bernstein and Mr. Munch will conduct the Aug. 9 afternoon program with Gregor Piatigorsky as soloist.

The famous Tanglewood on Parade program has been scheduled this year for Aug. 13.

The final series will open Aug. 14 under Mr. Munch with a performance of the Brahms "Requiem" with Lois Marshall and William Warfield as the soloists. Mr. Bernstein will conduct the Aug. 15 program and Mr. Munch the final Sunday afternoon program on Aug. 16. Seymour Lipkin will be the soloist in the Ravel "Piano Concerto for the Left Hand" at the concluding concert.

* * *

LAST YEAR THE Tanglewood concerts averaged a crowd of 9,500 and even larger crowds are anticipated this year. The Shed seats 6,000 persons and those who do not have reserved seats may purchase general admission on the day of the concert. Those desiring to picnic on the grounds may do so. On concert evenings the grounds open at 6 p.m. and on Sundays at 12:30 p.m.

The annual Tanglewood on Parade, a benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will feature a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Mr. Munch and Mr. Bernstein. Soloists for the event will include Isaac Stern, violinist; and William Warfield, baritone, and his soprano wife, Leontyne Price, in Act II, scenes I and II of "Porgy and Bess."

Genius

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

THE OTHER night, during the intermission of a Mozart concert, up at Tanglewood in the Berkshires, I could not help remarking that Mozart had performed such wonders by the age of sixteen. A friend commented that genius comes in cycles and we are outside the cycle.

It was one of those remarks that sticks in one's craw until something is done about it. Is it true that there is a cycle of genius and a cycle of the commonplace?

Let us start with Johann Sebastian Bach and we have "Gott Is Mein Koenig" in 1707, when he was twenty-two years old. Fourteen years later he produced the "Brandenburg Concertos," which, in a way, are the beginning of the modern orchestra. Bach died in 1750, nine years before Haydn produced his first symphony and 14 years before Mozart wrote his "Sonates Pour Je Clavecin." Mozart died in 1791; he was alive when Beethoven began to write.

* * *

So, we have 120 years, from 1707, when Bach's first composition was written, to 1827, when Beethoven died.

to relate the whole of human existence, experience and knowledge to his times. Where is such a person today, in this generation?

And yet, as one moves among the pines of lovely Tanglewood, watching young people in their interminable arguments about music and life, it is impossible not to be sensitive to a great stirring, like the cold wind that precedes an electric storm. It may be the dawn of another era of genius.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL-AMERICAN
AUG 3 - 1953

Cir. (D 81,951) (S 101,368)

This Clipping From
SYRACUSE, N. Y.
POST-STANDARD
AUG 1 - 1953

Cir. (D 6,882)

This Clipping From
TOWANDA, PA.
REVIEW
AUG 1 - 1953

Cir. (D 189,738) Genius

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
AMERICAN
AUG 3 - 1953

This Clipping From
ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES-UNION
JUL 31 1953

Full Boston Symphony at Tanglewood

The first of three weekend concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra of 104 members will inaugurate the opening of the Big Music Shed at Tanglewood tonight under the direction of Charles Munch, the permanent conductor. The program will feature Zino Francescatti in the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto.

Saturday night, Mr. Munch will lead the orchestra in works by Schumann, Mendelssohn ("Italian Symphony":) and Hindemith. The guest soloist will be the young American pianist, Lucas Foss in his own Concerto, No. 2, with the orchestra.

Sunday afternoon's concert will be conducted by the eminent French director Pierre Monteux in an all-Tchaikowsky program. The works to be played are "Serenade for Strings;" Symphony, No. 5 and the Piano Concerto, No. 1 with the French pianist, Jorge Bolet as soloist.

Cir. (D 117,194) (S 210,551)

This Clipping From
FORT WORTH, TEX.
EVENING STAR TELEGRAM
JUL 30 1953

A Woman's New York

They're Seeing Europe and Having Fun at a Fast Pace

BY ALICE HUGHES.

NEW YORK, July 30.—Comes August and New Yorkers abandon their city to the visitors. We city slickers roam elsewhere for fun and rest. Did I say "rest"? Mail from resorts here and abroad reveals American travelers frantically "doing" the continent. My sister Francie and her husband are touring England, Spain, Italy and France—all in six weeks.

Read her weary report on her third day in London:

"We skipped Cambridge: The trip takes too long. We do only what's near by. Windsor Castle and Hampton Court nearly finished me off yesterday. They were wonderful, but oh! my feet! Wait till you see our color pictures of British gardens! Never saw such magnificence! And all in full bloom, at the end of July! We're impressed with the enduring tradition of the people and the antiquity of the architecture. But I had to beg off the Tower of London and the trip along the Thames. That's why I have time to scribble this letter.

"We've been to the theater once and dancing twice. Dinner at the Savoy; also at the Ambassadeurs. We've seen the young Mayfairites cutting up and noted the shabby-looking 'man on the street' looking down. But no one notices shabbiness because the British are too polite to stare. If anything, they are too obsequious. It troubled me that a maid in the hotel elevator tried to get out of the "lift" in order to spare us the indignity, I suppose, of riding with a servant. We made her come back in and ride down, which embarrassed her. The only shortage we notice in England is paper. There's little of it, and it's poor quality. I shook hands with Clement Attlee in Parliament.

'DEAD TIRED.'

"If the other countries are as wonderful as England, it'll be a memorable trip. We're dead tired, but happy, toting camera, notebook and sun-glasses, like all American tourists. Before tea we rest an hour, so as to survive dinner, parties and entertainment. Usually we are back in the hotel by 1 a. m., in time to do a little laundry—stockings, nylon underwear, gloves, etc. Then we write a few letters, sleep a little and get an early start. Day after tomorrow we're off for Spain!"

From Lenox, Mass., in the same mail, a letter from my other sister—the one whose husband plays the violin with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. They are now enjoying the music festival season at Tanglewood in the Berkshires. From July 5 until Aug. ~~17~~, music dominates their lives, spent in a tiny one-story, two-room cottage located on Sanctuary Hill, in the Audubon Reservation. When Pierre practices his violin in the early morning, birds furnish both audience and chorus. The hill they live on is thickly treed; those in the distance are blue and misty. The birds, carefully protected and nurtured by the Audubon Society, include many species. Their songs sound loud because the silence is so profound.

IDYLLIC PLACE.

As my sister describes it it sounds idyllic. They read, sunbathe, pick blueberries. Now and then they invite friends to invade this birdland for a meal and a chat. I'll be there the final week-end in July, en route for Hillsboro, N. H., to celebrate my 9-year-old Jeremiah's birthday at his boys' camp. As this will be my first gander at him since June 25, Aug. 1 can not come too soon for me.

From their present sylvan retreat, my sister and husband will emerge, at the end of August, to fly to Europe and dissipate their refreshed tissues to the frenzied pace of France—at the height of the tourist season! I can't think of anything I'd rather do less than mill around in Europe this summer. Americans are the grandest people in the world, but they're nicest when on their home-grounds. Something happens when they transport themselves abroad. They get chesty and chauvinistic. Let them invade Europe in the summer-time. I prefer the Continent in the fall, winter and spring. Meantime, the bird sanctuary at Lenox seems deliciously inviting to me and I'm all pitched to tune in with the birds this week-end.

(Copyright, 1953 King Feat. Synd., Inc.)

Cir. (D 21,010)

This Clipping From
WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.
REPORTER-DISPATCH
JUL 30 1953

Student Composer Taking Course at Berkshire Festival

Studying composition at the Berkshire Festival Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., is David Tecklin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Tecklin of 170 Soundview Avenue. Mr. Tecklin, who composes music for string quartets and choirs, is among 400 students from 41 states and 11 foreign countries attending the school, which opened July 27 and will close Aug. 16.

He is on the dean's list at Brown University, where he will be a senior in September.

The music center was founded by the Boston Symphony orchestra and offers studies in orchestra playing, conducting, chamber music and opera. The center's faculty includes Charles Munch, director of the Boston symphony, Aaron Copland, Leonard Bernstein and Boris Goldovsky.

Cleveland - Aug 1, 1953

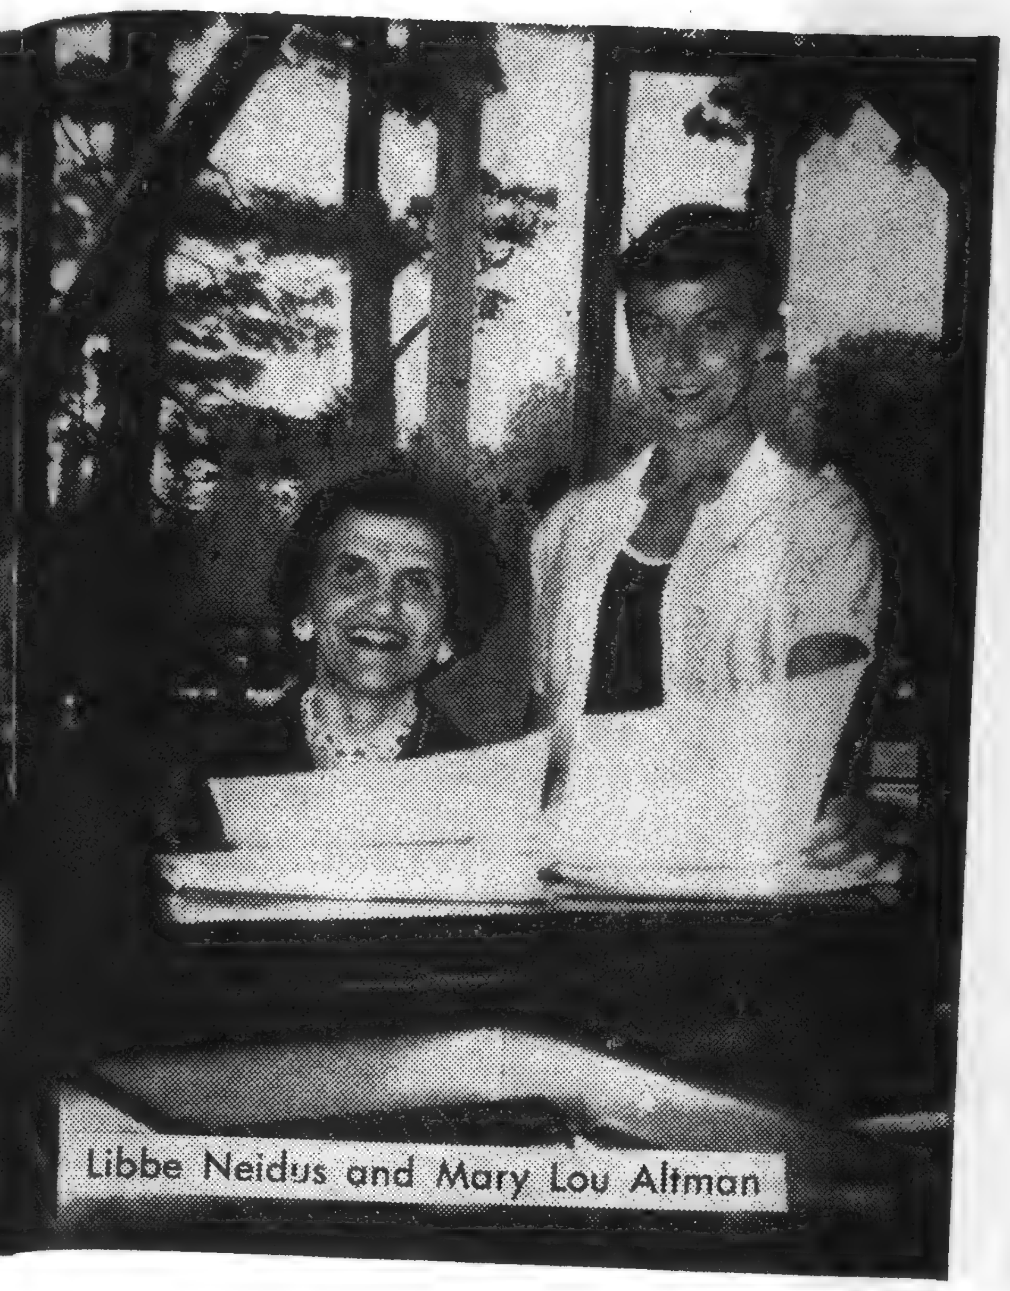
MOUNTAIN MUSIC

Robert Pangborn and Mrs. George Kleinfeld

Bonnie Lake

George Kleinfeld, Elinor Zvenitsky, Boris Goldovsky

Elwyn Adams and Leonard Bernste



Libbe Neidus and Mary Lou Altman

Six Clevelanders in SelecTanglewood 400

By MARJORIE ALGE, Press Staff Writer

TANGLEWOOD, Mass.: Sprawled amidst Berkshire's gentle rolling hills lies this summer headquarters of the Boston Symphony and summer music mecca for thousands of Americans.

They come armed with blankets or sunglasses —depending on time of day or night. They loll on the lawn if they prefer not to buy seats for the bare-ribbed Theater-Concert Hall or the mammoth fan-shaped Shed.

But the western Massachusetts music center is not simply an outdoor Carnegie Hall. For keen music students it is the Berkshire Music Center, summer school conducted by the Boston Symphony.

These scholars are a select 400 culled from 1500 young and not-so-young applicants. They have the privilege of studying with such greats as Leonard Bernstein, Boris Goldovsky and Aaron Copland.

Six Weeks Study

Armed with voice or violin, baton or bassoon, they encamp July 5 until Aug. 16 for serious study in one of the center's five departments: Orchestra, opera, chamber music, choral conducting and chorus, and composition.

No staid pupil-teacher relationship exists here. Problems are thrashed out together during rehearsals and classes under cover in Tanglewood's 18 buildings, or in after-class bull sessions under the skies.

Only transgression on informali a sternly-enforced rule against shorts. The taboo for students.

Enrollment requirements are rous: Students must be extremely profi in their field. Orchestra students, who e up the bulk of the five divisions, must ble to sing in choral presentations with reg symphony concerts.

Practice, too, is a must. If pracrooms are full, students take to the woods

Eight Northern Ohio

This year, mingling their talent h students from 41 states and 11 foreign coes are six musicians from Greater Clevele one from Painesville, and one from Huron,

Elwyn Adams is a 9-year-oldinist who lives at 2222 E. 81st St. on the occasions he's in town. Back for his third mer at the music school, he's completed or ar at the New England Conservatory of M

Bonnie Lake, pretty flutist anso a third-termer, is a grad of Heights Hind Oberlin Conservatory of Music. Wintes include teaching elementary orchestra Cleveland schools, playing in the Akron Shony. On week ends she teaches at Ober She lives at 1558 Compton Rd., Clevelandghts.

Painesville representative is R C. Pangborn, 18, a student of percussion. A first-time student, Bob's on top of his freshman term at Eastman School of Music.

Joan and George Kleinfeld, 1450 E. 94th St., are one of three married couples enrolled at the school. Blond Joan, violinist and pupil of Josef Gingold, teaches elementary music at University School in addition to coaching her own fiddle students.

Under Goldovsky

George, a magnificent bariton, is enrolled in the opera division under direction of former Clevelander Boris Goldovsky. A part-time record salesman at Schirmer's, he'll graduate from Adelbert in September, hopes to sing professionally.

Attractive Elinor Zvenitsky, mezzo-soprano, is also enrolled in opera study. A graduate of John Adams, Elinor's home is 3440 E. 149th St.

Combining vacation with two-week study terms are sopranos Libbe Neidus, 3195 E. Overlook Rd., and Mary Lou Altman of Huron, O.

Libbe, soloist at Park Synagogue, has appeared at Karamu and gave her own recital in Cleveland last spring. She's a member of the Jewish Singing Society, Mary Lou, a pretty brunette, says she sings "just for pleasure."

Though musical aims differ, all are unanimous in their opinion of Tanglewood. "It's the most wonderful spot in the world."

Pesty Plants Do Good Deeds, Too

By WILLIAM SCHEELE

W. E. SCHEELE

Two plant plague nearly everyone. They are persistent pests that require strenuous measures to keep them out of gardens and lawns: The common BURDOCK and the YELLOW DOCK, or curly dock, as it is sometimes known. It wasn't too long ago that both plants were in use as food and as medicine.

You will probably know burdock better if it is described as the big-leafed, tall weed that has burrs on it. In this case, the roots are the valuable part of the plant.

They are dried and made into a medicine that seems to be one of the few cures for eczema. People from central Europe know the plant best. It is their use of the roots that is responsible for the large tonnage imported every year.

A tea is also made from the root and this is supposed to act as a blood purifier. The fibrous parts of the heavy stalks of the plant can be stripped away and the stalk itself prepared in same manner as asparagus.

Used for Salads

Early settlers knew the curly dock best, for they used its young leaves as salad greens, preparing them like spinach. Their use was so widespread that it was often possible in the early 1900's to buy the leaves in market stalls in poorer sections of this country.

The roots of this plant are also used. In this case they are dried and powdered and made into a dentrifice.

Children take great delight in stripping the ripe, brown seeds from the stalk and pretending that these seeds are coffee. If they want to be romantic about it, they call them "Indian coffee."

There is nothing wrong with eating these plants. It just seems that it takes a depression or something equally drastic to force housewives to look for substitute food.

Jewelweed Useful

An incredible number of plants that we consider weeds are edible or at least useful to us. The latest of a long list of plants that has been put up commercially is the JEWELWEED.

It is sold as a salve (Nox-Ivy) that will help clear up poison ivy. The Indians passed along this remedy to the early settlers, and many persons today who suffer from ivy find it to be their only relief.

This particular plant does not grow near homes unless there is a shady, wet spot nearby. It is a soft, succulent plant with a yellow or orange flower.

Since knowledge of its curative powers has become more publicized, many landowners have permitted it to grow freely in places where it had been previously cut down.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
SUNDAY NEWS

AUG 2 - 1953

The Berkshires Offer Recreation, Culture

(Special to THE NEWS)

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 1.—A blend of recreation and cultural activities awaits the visitors to the Berksh Hills thi Summer.

Throughout the region there is swimming, sailing, fishing, riding, golfing and tennis as well as hiking trails and picnic sites in verdant state forests. On the cultural agenda are music and dance recitals.

Outstanding among the cultural activities is the Berkshire Symphonic Festival under the direction of Charles Munch at [illegible] Lenox.

Interpretive [illegible] wi be presented on [illegible] Sat urday afternoons [illegible] through Labor D[illegible] Pi low School of the Da[illegible] Becket

The nature lover [illegible] will find plenty of interest in this region There is Pleasant [illegible] and Wildflower Sanctuary, Lenox, and Mount Greylock, North Adams, i the highest peak in the state. I can be climbed via hiking trail o automobile road. Trout fishin extends through the end of thi month. All other fishing may b enjoyed throughout the season.

Hatchery Fishing.

In Sheffield there is a big tro hatchery where the visitor m catch his own dinner for a nomi fee.

There is scenic splendor as w as many recreation facilities in 16 state forests and reservations the Berkshires. Camping sites located in some, picnic areas at miles of riding and walking tra swimming and fishing. Fine hote inns, camps, ranches, guest hom and tourist courts meeting eve requirement complement outdo activities.

Cir. (D 20,402) (S 41,868)

This Clipping From
WATERBURY, CONN.
REPUBLICAN

AUG 2 - 1953

Beth-El League Plans Day At Tanglewood

"A Day at Tanglewood" has been planned by the Waterbury Young People's League of Beth-El for Aug. 9 at Lenox, Mass.

The program will include a picnic lunch at Tanglewood prior to the concert; the Berkshire Music Festival concert with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conducting, and Gregor Piatagorsky, cello soloist; and dinner at the Yale Barn in the evening.

Transportation will be provided by the Arrangements Committee, under the chairmanship of Miss Sallye Rosenbaum. Members will be contacted by telephone. All persons who have not been reached may obtain further information by calling Miss Rosenbaum at 4-3879.

Cir. (D 503,999) (S 1,096,738)

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES

AUG 2 - 1953

AFTER THE CLASSICS

Something extra to titillate Berkshire Hills vacationists after the Tanglewood Music Festival ends is the Jazz Roundtable, celebrating its fifth season at Music Inn, between Stockbridge and Tanglewood. The roundtable, scheduled for two weeks from Aug. 17-30, has a couple of directors and an impressive title, "From Folk Music to Jazz," but actually its first principle is to give holidayers something to do when they weary of swimming, boating and relaxing and the Boston Symphony has gone back to Boston.

[257]

Cir. (D 389,011) (S 258,545)

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
POST

Cir. (D 20,402) (S 41,868)

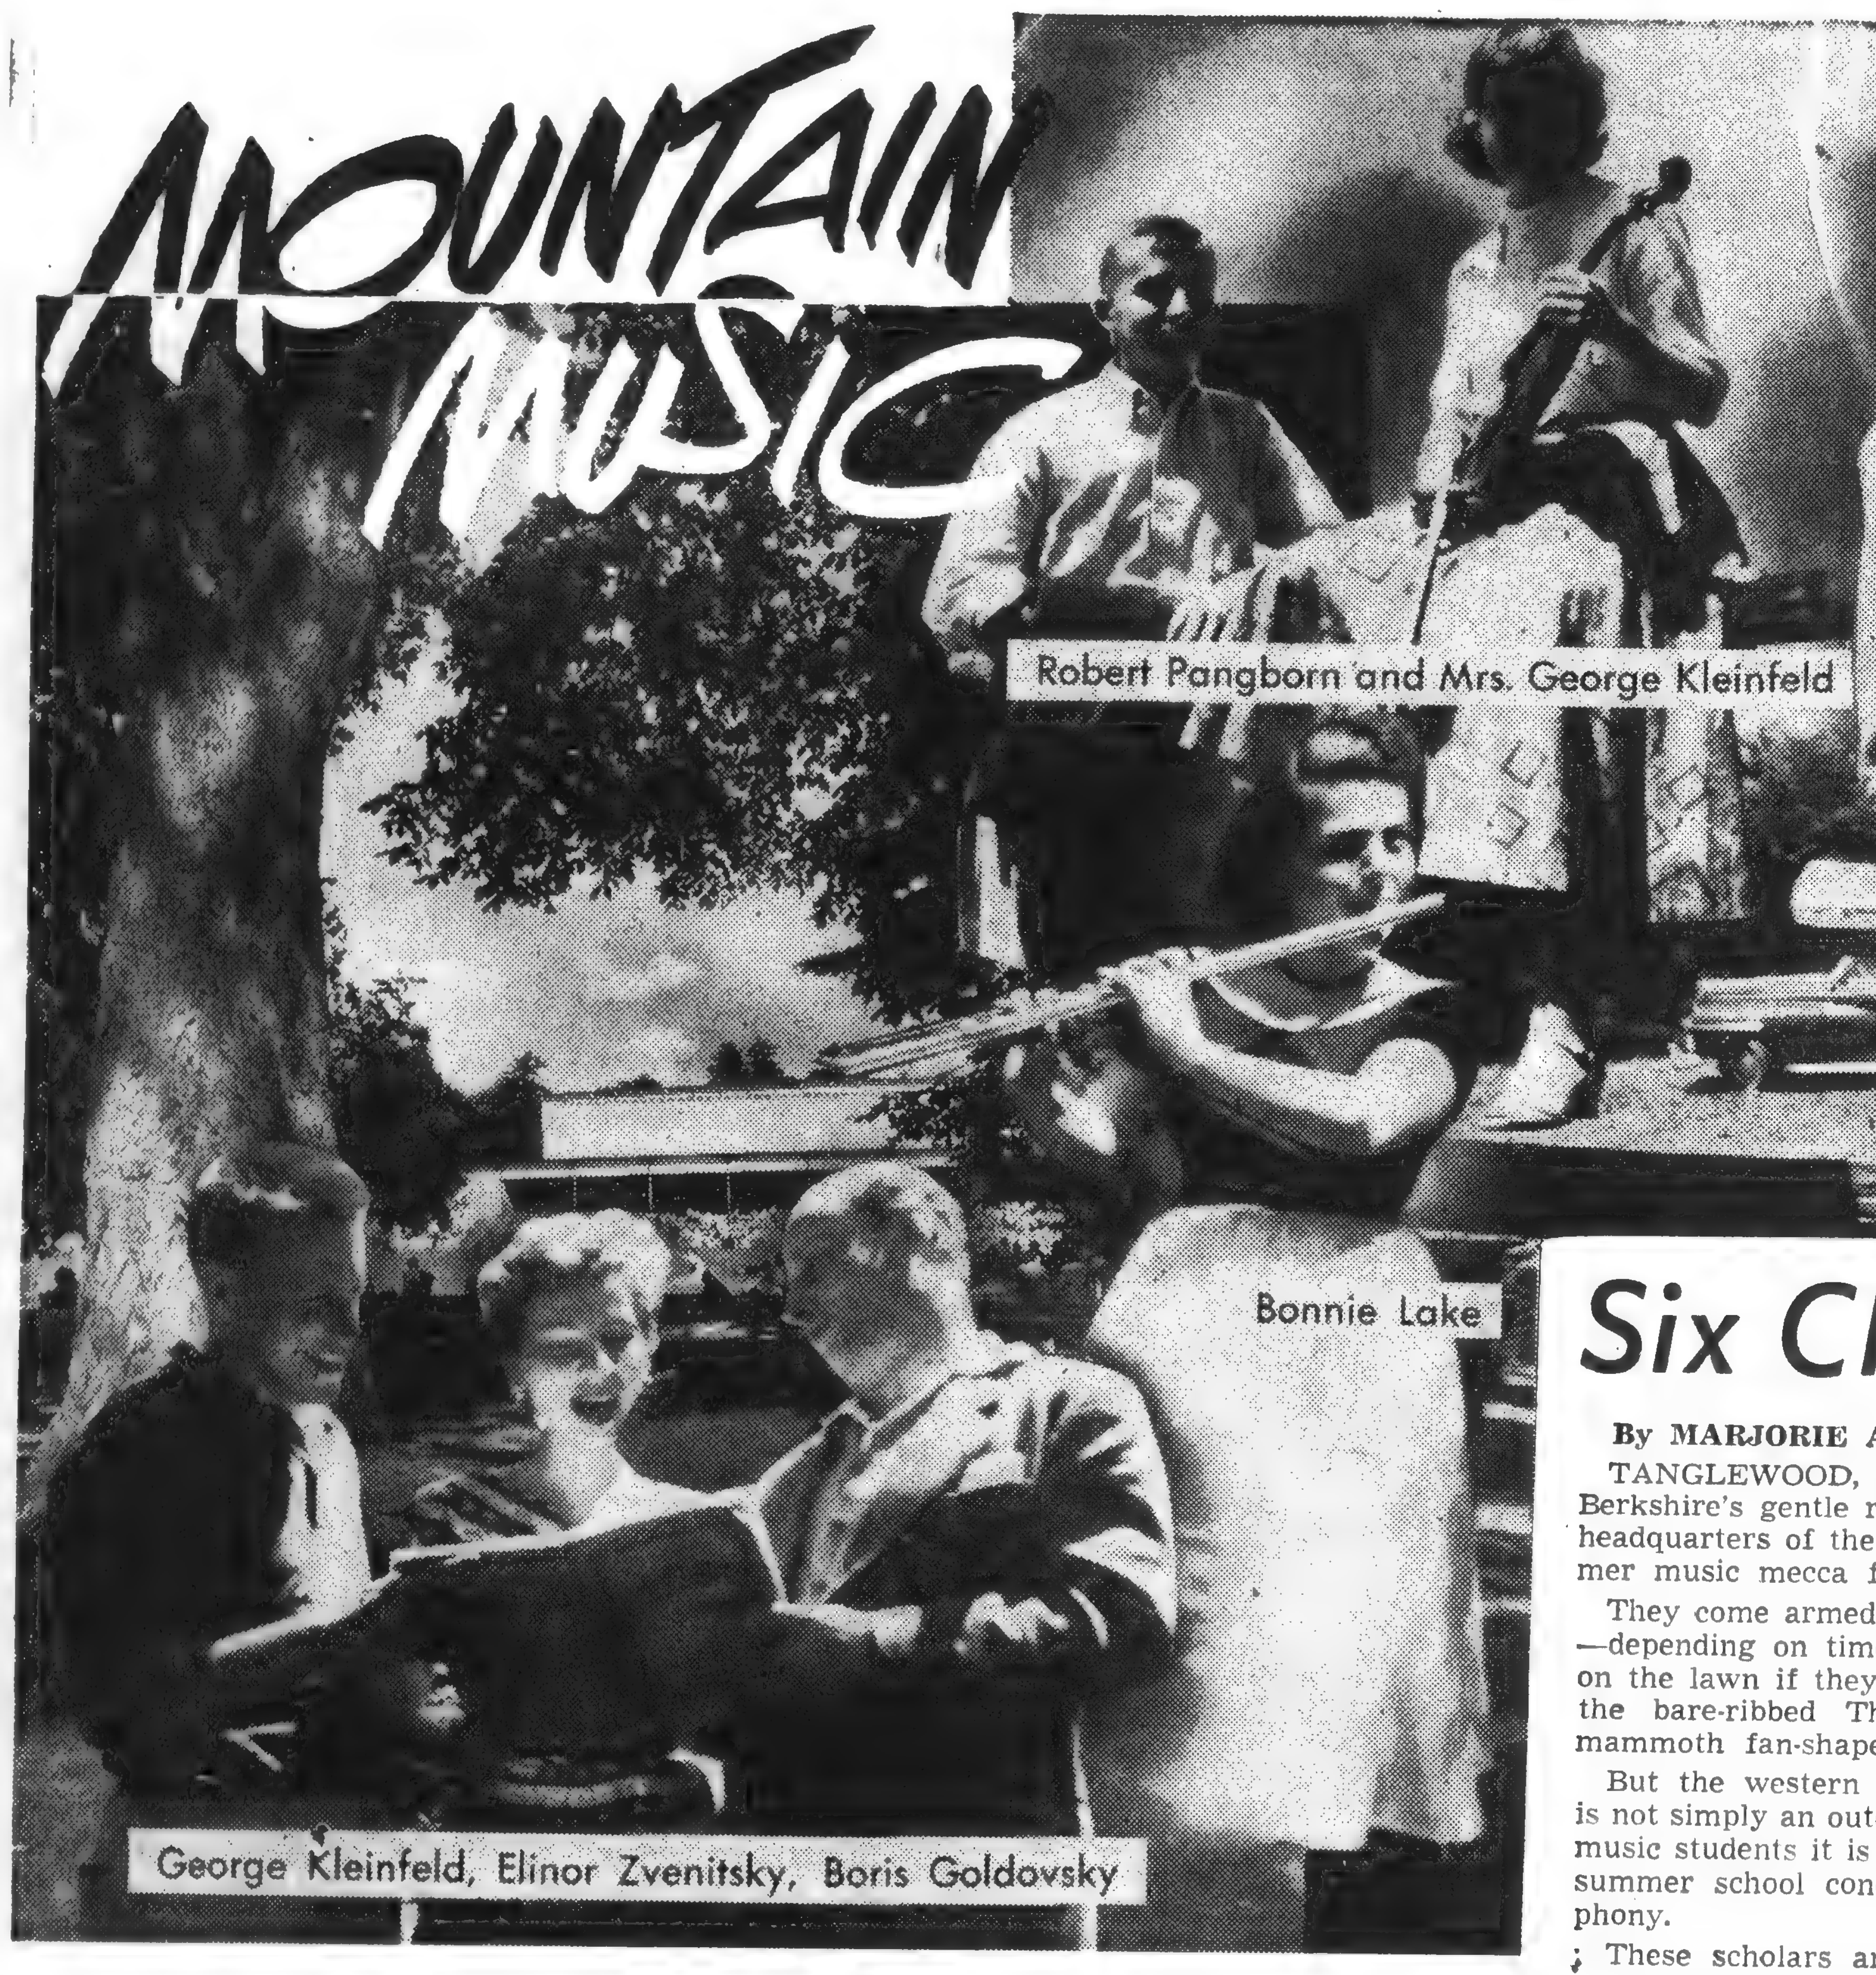
This Clipping From
WATERBURY, CONN.
REPUBLICAN

AUG 2 - 1953

Mr. and Mrs. Roger S. Makepeace and Mrs. Roger S. Sperry, Middlebury, are attending the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Mass., this week end.

Cleveland - Aug 1, 1953

MOUNTAIN MUSIC



Robert Pangborn and Mrs. George Kleinfeld

Bonnie Lake

George Kleinfeld, Elinor Zvenitsky, Boris Goldovsky

Elwyn Adams and Leonard Bernste

Libbe Neidus and Mary Lou Altman

Six Clevelanders in SelecTanglewood 400

By MARJORIE ALGE, Press Staff Writer

TANGLEWOOD, Mass.: Sprawled amidst Berkshire's gentle rolling hills lies this summer headquarters of the Boston Symphony and summer music mecca for thousands of Americans.

They come armed with blankets or sunglasses —depending on time of day or night. They loll on the lawn if they prefer not to buy seats for the bare-ribbed Theater-Concert Hall or the mammoth fan-shaped Shed.

But the western Massachusetts music center is not simply an outdoor Carnegie Hall. For keen music students it is the Berkshire Music Center, summer school conducted by the Boston Symphony.

These scholars are a select 400 culled from 1500 young and not-so-young applicants. They have the privilege of studying with such greats as Leonard Bernstein, Boris Goldovsky and Aaron Copland.

Six Weeks Study

Armed with voice or violin, baton or bassoon, they encamp July 5 until Aug. 16 for serious study in one of the center's five departments: Orchestra, opera, chamber music, choral conducting and chorus, and composition.

No staid pupil-teacher relationship exists here. Problems are thrashed out together during rehearsals and classes under cover in Tanglewood's 18 buildings, or in after-class bull sessions under the skies.

Only transgression on informali a sternly-enforced rule against shorts. The taboo for students.

Enrollment requirements are rous: Students must be extremely profic in their field. Orchestra students, who e up the bulk of the five divisions, must ble to sing in choral presentations with reg symphony concerts.

Practice, too, is a must. If prac rooms are full, students take to the woods

Eight Northern Ohio

This year, mingling their talent h students from 41 states and 11 foreign co es are six musicians from Greater Clevel one from Painesville, and one from Huron,

Elwyn Adams is a 19-year-old nist who lives at 2222 E. 81st St. on the occasions he's in town. Back for his third ner at the music school, he's completed or ar at the New England Conservatory of M

Bonnie Lake, pretty flutist an o a third-termer, is a grad of Heights Hi d Oberlin Conservatory of Music. Winter s include teaching elementary orchestra Cleveland schools, playing in the Akron S hony. On week ends she teaches at Ober She lives at 1558 Compton Rd., Cleveland ghts.

Painesville representative is R C. Pangborn, 18, a student of percussion. A first-time student, Bob's on top of his freshman term at Eastman School of Music.

Joan and George Kleinfeld, 1450 E. 94th St., are one of three married couples enrolled at the school. Blond Joan, violinist and pupil of Josef Gingold, teaches elementary music at University School in addition to coaching her own fiddle students.

Under Goldovsky

George, a magnificent bariton, is enrolled in the opera division under direction of former Clevelander Boris Goldovsky. A part-time record salesman at Schirmer's, he'll graduate from Adelbert in September, hopes to sing professionally.

Attractive Elinor Zvenitsky, mezzo-soprano, is also enrolled in opera study. A graduate of John Adams, Elinor's home is 3440 E. 149th St.

Combining vacation with two-week study terms are sopranos Libbe Neidus, 3195 E. Overlook Rd., and Mary Lou Altman of Huron, O.

Libbe, soloist at Park Synagogue, has appeared at Karamu and gave her own recital in Cleveland last spring. She's a member of the Jewish Singing Society, Mary Lou, a pretty brunette, says she sings "just for pleasure."

Though musical aims differ, all are unanimous in their opinion of Tanglewood. "It's the most won[illegible] spot in the world."

Pesty Plants Do Good Deeds, Too

By WILLIAM SCHEELE

Two plant plague nearly everyone. They are persistent pests that require strenuous measures to keep them out of gardens and lawns: The common BURDOCK and the YELLOW DOCK, or curly dock, as it is sometimes known. It wasn't too long ago that both plants were in use as food and as medicine.

W. E. SCHEELE

You will probably know burdock better if it is described as the big-leafed, tall weed that has burrs on it. In this case, the roots are the valuable part of the plant.

They are dried and made into a medicine that seems to be one of the few cures for eczema. People from central Europe know the plant best. It is their use of the roots that is responsible for the large tonnage imported every year.

A tea is also made from the root and this is supposed to act as a blood purifier. The fibrous parts of the heavy stalks of the plant can be stripped away and the stalk itself prepared in same manner as asparagus.

Used for Salads

Early settlers knew the curly dock best, for they used its young leaves as salad greens, preparing them like spinach. Their use was so widespread that it was often possible in the early 1900's to buy the leaves in market stalls in poorer sections of this country.

The roots of this plant are also used. In this case they are dried and powdered and made into a dentrifice.

Children take great delight in stripping the ripe, brown seeds from the stalk and pretending that these seeds are coffee. If they want to be romantic about it, they call them "Indian coffee."

There is nothing wrong with eating these plants. It just seems that it takes a depression or something equally drastic to force housewives to look for substitute food.

Jewelweed Useful

An incredible number of plants that we consider weeds are edible or at least useful to us. The latest of a long list of plants that has been put up commercially is the JEWELWEED.

It is sold as a salve (Nox-Ivy) that will help clear up poison ivy. The Indians passed along this remedy to the early settlers, and many persons today who suffer from ivy find it to be their only relief.

This particular plant does not grow near homes unless there is a shady, wet spot nearby. It is a soft, succulent plant with a yellow or orange flower.

Since knowledge of its curative powers has become more publicized, many landowners have permitted it to grow freely in places where it had been previously cut down.

Cir. (D 20,402) (S 41,868)

This Clipping From
WATERBURY, CONN.
REPUBLICAN

AUG 2 - 1953

Beth-El League Plans Day At Tanglewood

"A Day at Tanglewood" has been planned by the Waterbury Young People's League of Beth-El for Aug. 9 at Lenox, Mass.

The program will include a picnic lunch at Tanglewood prior to the concert; the Berkshire Music Festival concert with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conducting, and Gregor Piatagorsky, cello soloist; and dinner at the Yale Barn in the evening.

Transportation will be provided by the Arrangements Committee, under the chairmanship of Miss Sallye Rosenbaum. Members will be contacted by telephone. All persons who have not been reached may obtain further information by calling Miss Rosenbaum at 4-3879.

Cir. (D 503,999) (S 1,096,738)

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES

AUG 2 - 1953

AFTER THE CLASSICS

Something extra to titillate Berkshire Hills vacationists after the Tanglewood Music Festival ends is the Jazz Roundtable, celebrating its fifth season at Music Inn, between Stockbridge and Tanglewood. The roundtable, scheduled for two weeks from Aug. 17-30, has a couple of directors and an impressive title, "From Folk Music to Jazz," but actually its first principle is to give holidayers something to do when they weary of swimming, boating and relaxing and the Boston Symphony has gone back to Boston.

[257]

NEW YORK, N. Y.
SUNDAY NEWS

AUG 2 - 1953

The Berkshires Offer Recreation, Culture

(Special to THE NEWS)

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 1.—A blend of [illegible] tural activities awaits the visitors to the Berksh[illegible] Summer.

Throughout the region there is swimming, sailing, fishing, riding, golfing and tennis as well as hiking trails and picnic sites in verdant state forests. On the cultural agenda are [illegible] and dance [illegible]

[illegible] e cultural [illegible] ire Symphony [illegible] direction of Charles M[illegible] Lenox.

Interpretive [illegible] be presented on F[illegible] Saturday afternoons [illegible] through Labor Day [illegible] low School of the [illegible]

The nature lover [illegible] plenty of interest in [illegible] region. There is Pleasant Val[illegible] Wildflower Sanctuary [illegible] Mount Greylock, North A[illegible] the highest peak in the state, can be climbed via [illegible] trail or automobile road. Tro[illegible] extends through the end of the month. All other [illegible] enjoyed throughout [illegible]

Hatchery Fishing

In Sheffield there is [illegible] hatchery where the [illegible] catch his own din[illegible] fee.

There is scenic splendor as [illegible] as many recreation fac[illegible] in 16 state forests and re[illegible] the Berkshires. Campin[illegible] sites located in some, picnic areas at [illegible] miles of riding and walking trails [illegible] swimming and fishing. Fine hot[illegible] inns, camps, ranches, guest ho[illegible] and tourist courts meeting ev[illegible] requirement complement outd[illegible] activities.

AUG 2 - 1953

2:30—WCBS, World Music Festival Berkshire Music Festival, Pierre Monteux, conductor.

JULI/AUGUSTUS 1953 - No. 10-11
45 CENT

VERGELIJKENDE DISCOGRAFIE door
RUTGER SCHOUTE

„Luister...!"

Onafhankelijk maandblad voor Gramofoonplaten-liefhebbers

In dit nummer o.a.:

Aanwinsten door Casper Höweler

*

De Opera's „Salome" en „Boris Godounov" door Leo Riemens

*

Het hoekje voor de Opera-platenverzamelaar

*

Interview met Rudi Wairata

*

Hit parade standen

*

Grote foto van Les Brown

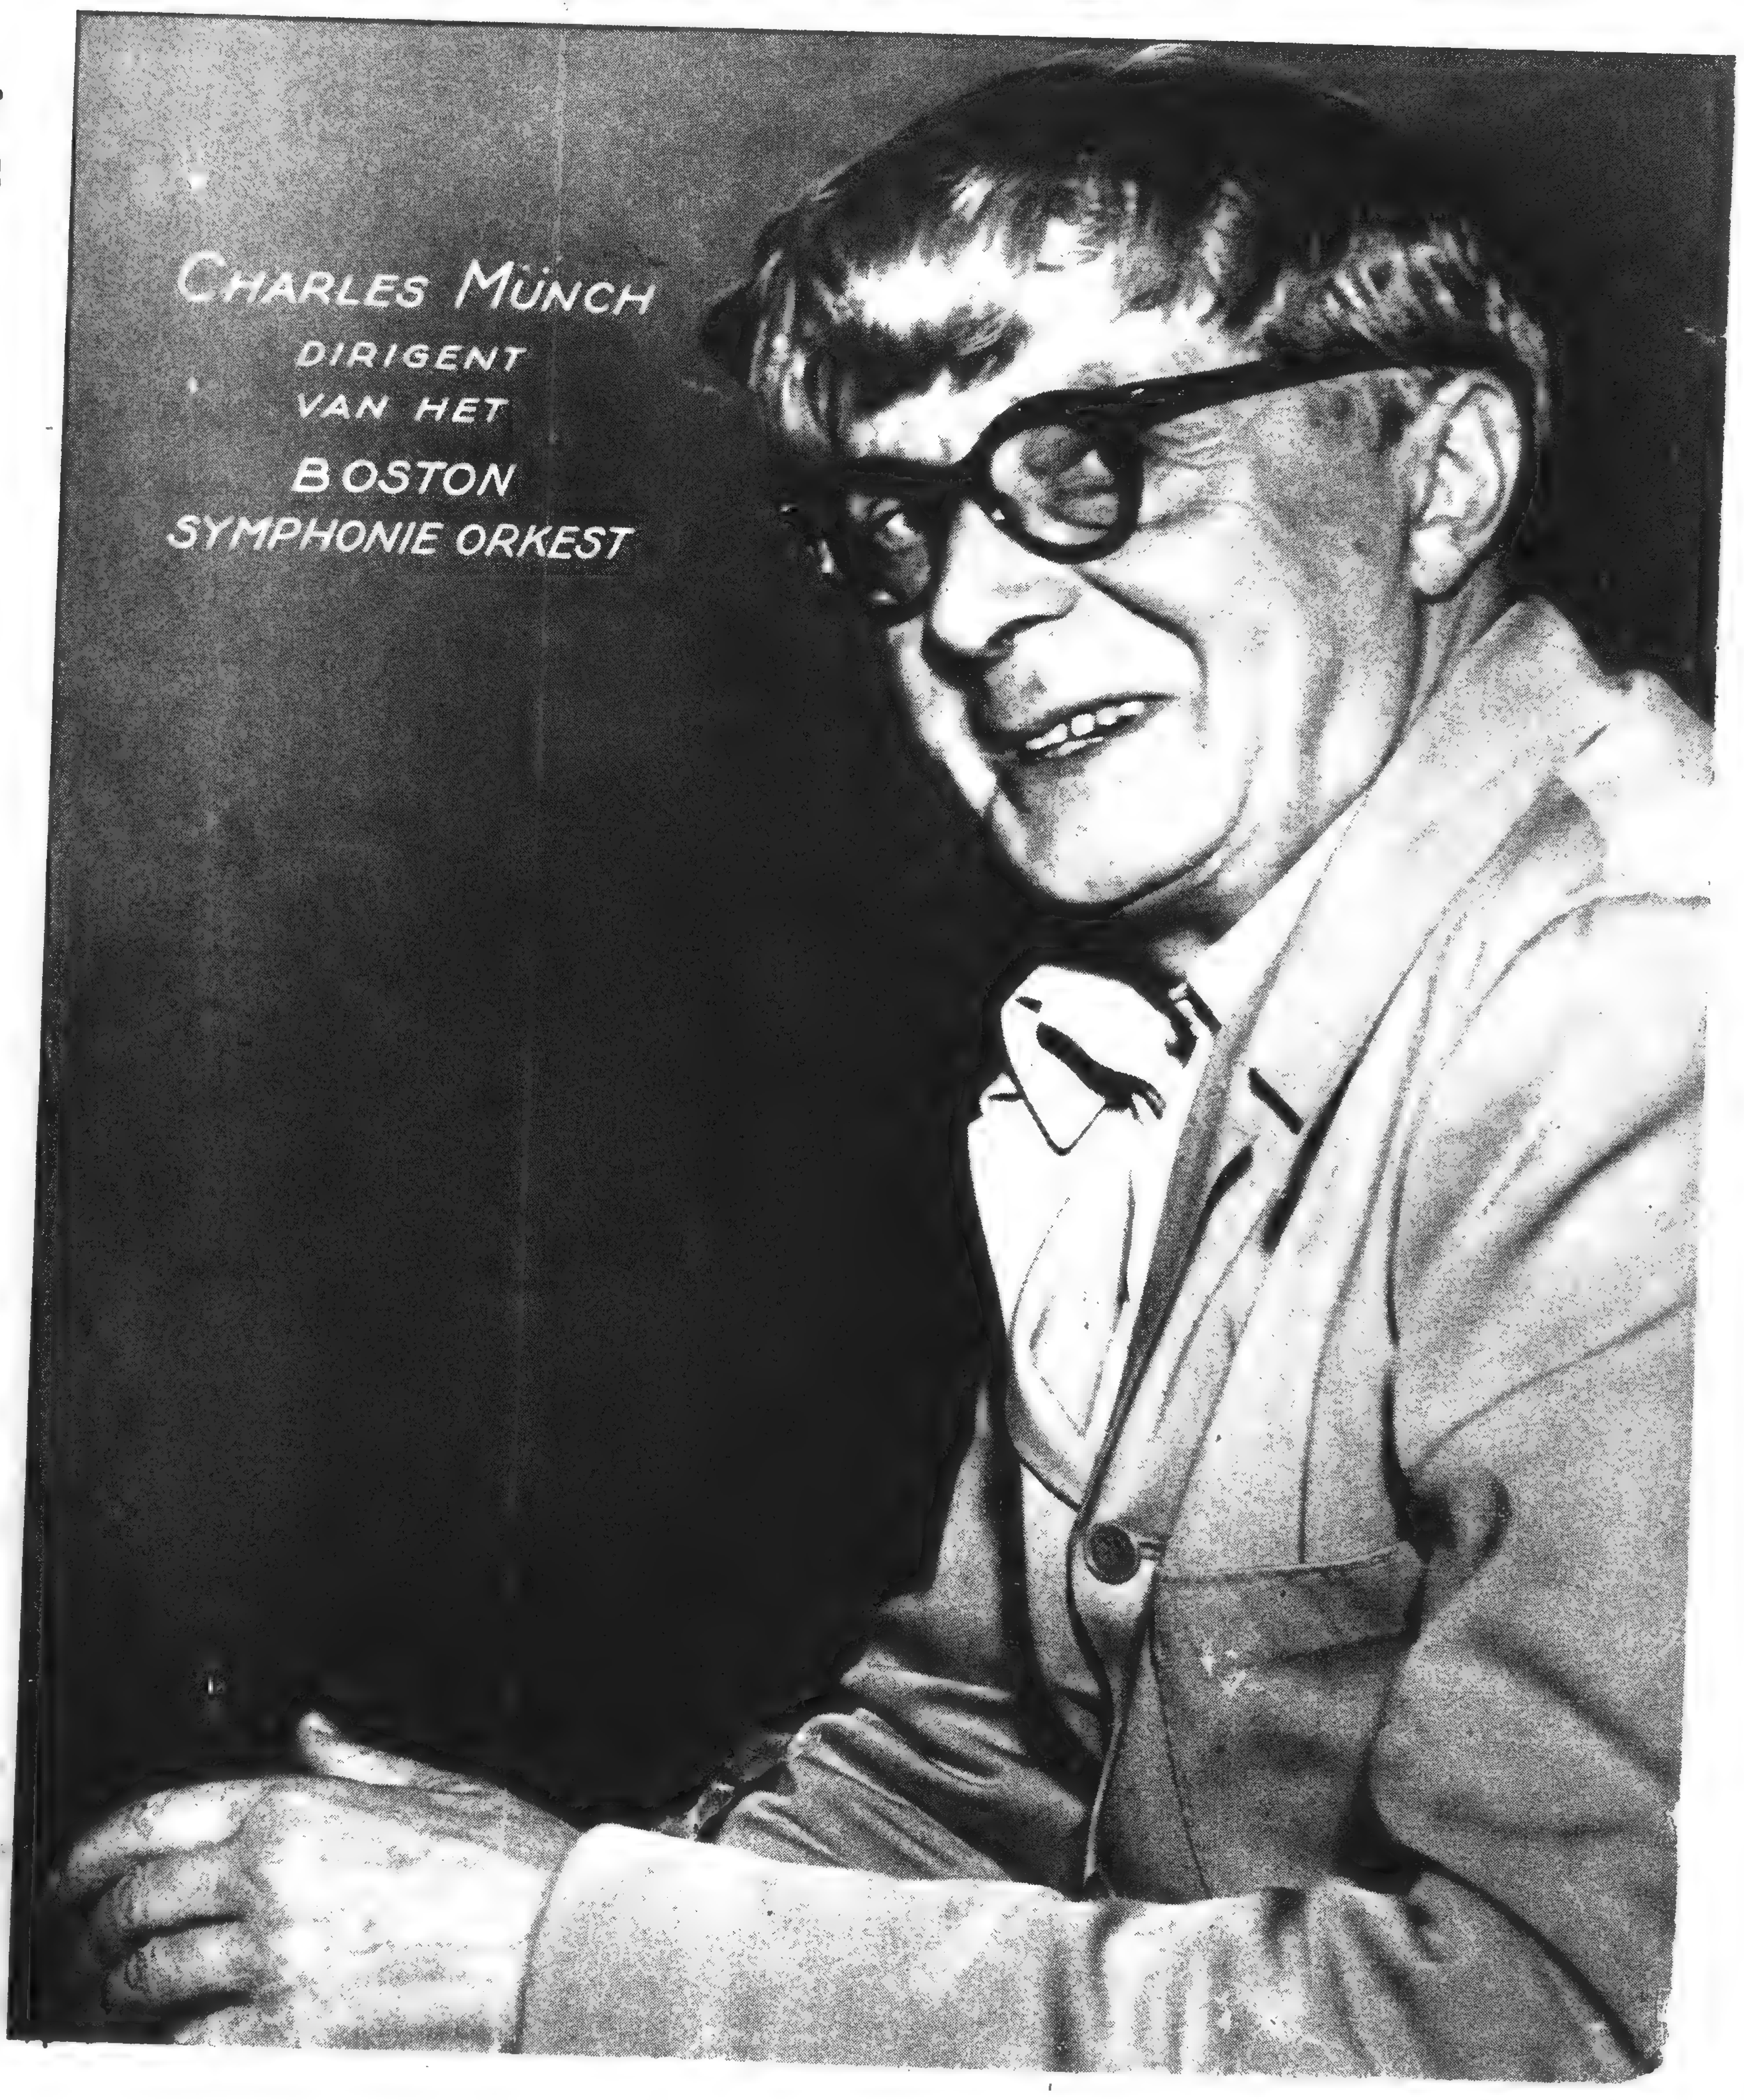
*

Opera en Film

*

Puzzle

UITG. DRUKKERIJ ONNES n.v.
POSTBUS 43 - AMERSFOORT



TROY OBSERVER-BUDGET, TROY, N. Y., SUNDAY, AUGUST 2, 1953

THE WEEK IN NEW YORK

By ALICE C. ARMSTRONG

The concerts at Tanglewood started at th[illegible] day and with the exception of the ch[illegible] music [illegible] one-act operas will continue there until the close [illegible]

Cir. (D 331,853) (S 567,298)

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE

AUG 2 - 1953

Boston Symphony At Tanglewood

By Arthur Berger

LENOX, Mass., July 31.—The Berkshire Music Festival entered its major phase here in the shed on the Tanglewood estate with the first of the series of week-end concerts by the full membership of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch.

Mr. Munch assembled for Friday night a list that consisted mostly of standard repertory pieces, with the exception of Aaron Copland's music from the Martha Graham ballet, "Appalachian Spring," which, though not altogether unfamiliar, offered the fillip of music in a contemporary idiom. Zino Francescatti, violinist, was soloist in the Mendelssohn concerto and the program opened with Beethoven's "Leonore" overture, No. 3. The program closed with the popular "Bolero" of Ravel.

For those who came early and settled on the lawns behind the shed with picnic suppers the weather was ideal. By moving the opening concert of the week end from Thursday to Friday, the Berkshire Festival authorities have made it more convenient this season for week-enders to take in all three events each week. Another feature of the concerts this season in this regard has been the earlier hour of the Sunday concerts—2:30 instead of 3. In this way, there is more time for motorists to get home after the concerts.

Friday night's attendance of 10,300 demonstrated to all concerned with rescheduling the week-end concerts that the new plan is definitely rewarding since this figure sets a record for an opening night of the major concert series in the shed. A record was also established this season by the attendances at the concert series by the chamber orchestra devoted mainly to Bach, Mozart and Haydn.

The total attendance for the six concerts given in three week-ends was 26,150. This marked an advance of almost 6,500 over last year's attendance at the series in the theater concert hall.

JULI/AUGUSTUS 1953 - No. 10-11

45 CENT

VERGELIJKENDE DISCOGRAFIE

door

RUTGER SCHOUTE

„Luister...!"

Onafhankelijk maandblad voor Gramofoonplaten-liefhebbers

CHARLES MÜNCH
DIRIGENT
VAN HET
BOSTON
SYMPHONIE ORKEST

In dit nummer o.a.:

Aanwinsten door Casper Höweler

*

De Opera's „Salome" en „Boris Godounov" door Leo Riemens

*

Het hoekje voor de Opera-platenverzamelaar

*

Interview met Rudi Wairata

*

Hit parade standen

*

Grote foto van Les Brown

*

Opera en Film

*

Puzzle

UITG. DRUKKERIJ ONNES n.v.
POSTBUS 43 - AMERSFOORT

TROY OBSERVER-BUDGET, TROY, N. Y., SUNDAY, AUGUST 2, 1953

THE WEEK IN NEW YORK

By ALICE C. ARMSTRONG

The concerts at Tanglewood started at the big shed on Thursday and with the exception of the chamber music, small choir and one-act operas will continue there until the closing Sunday, Aug. 16.

Cir. (D 331,853) (S 567,298)

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
AUG 2- 1953

Boston Symphony At Tanglewood

By Arthur Berger

LENOX, Mass., July 31.—The Berkshire Music Festival entered its major phase here in the shed on the Tanglewood estate with the first of the series of week-end concerts by the full membership of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch.

Mr. Munch assembled for Friday night a list that consisted mostly of standard repertory pieces, with the exception of Aaron Copland's music from the Martha Graham ballet, "Appalachian Spring," which, though not altogether unfamiliar, offered the fillip of music in a contemporary idiom. Zino Francescatti, violinist, was soloist in the Mendelssohn concerto and the program opened with Beethoven's "Leonore" overture, No. 3. The program closed with the popular "Bolero" of Ravel.

For those who came early and settled on the lawns behind the shed with picnic suppers the weather was ideal. By moving the opening concert of the week end from Thursday to Friday, the Berkshire Festival authorities have made it more convenient this season for week-enders to take in all three events each week. Another feature of the concerts this season in this regard has been the earlier hour of the Sunday concerts—2:30 instead of 3. In this way, there is more time for motorists to get home after the concerts.

Friday night's attendance of 10,300 demonstrated to all concerned with rescheduling the week-end concerts that the new plan is definitely rewarding since this figure sets a record for an opening night of the major concert series in the shed. A record was also established this season by the attendances at the concert series by the chamber orchestra devoted mainly to Bach, Mozart and Haydn.

The total attendance for the six concerts given in three week-ends was 26,150. This marked an advance of almost 6,500 over last year's attendance at the series in the theater concert hall.

[258]

TIGHT BINDING

Cir. (D 503,999) (S 1,096,738)

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES

AUG 2 - 1953

PROGRAMS OF THE WEEK

GUGGENHEIM MEMORIAL CONCERTS

GOLDMAN BAND

TONIGHT, Central Park. All concerts begin at 8:30 P. M., unless otherwise noted.
Grand March, from Tannhaeuser; Wagner
Overture, Romeo and Juliet...Tchaikovsky
Kammenoi Ostrow; Reve Angelique, ...Rubinstein
Columbian Fantasie ....Rogers
Russian Sailors' Dance..............Gliere
Shepherd's Hey ....Grainger
March, Illinois ....Goldman
March, Manhattan Beach; March, El Capitan; Liberty Bell; Semper Fidelis; The Flashing Eyes of Andalusia Waltz; March, Our Flirtations; March, The Stars and Stripes Forever.........Sousa
MONDAY, Central Park.
Grand March, University ....Goldman
Overture, Halka ....Moniuszko
Procession of Knights, from Parsifal, ...Wagner
Second Swedish Rhapsody.........Leidzen
Favorite Melodies: A Kiss in the Dark; Punchinello; Pan Americana; Excerpts from Babes in Toyland; The Gold Bug, The Fortune Teller ....Herbert
WEDNESDAY, Central Park.
Music Memory Contest
Huldigungsmarsch ....Wagner
Overture, Youth Triumphant .....Hadley
Introduction and Tarantella;
March, Happy-Go-Lucky ....Goldman
Novelette ....MacDowell
Overture, William Tell ....Rossini
THURSDAY, Prospect Park.
Overture ....Catel
A Curtain Raiser and Country Dance; Concert Waltz ....Goldman
Eight Russian Folksongs ....Liadov
Czech. Rhapsody ....Weinberger
Symphony No. 1;
Polonaise; Egmont Overture..Beethoven
FRIDAY, Central Park.
Repeating Thursday's program.
SATURDAY, Prospect Park.
March Slav; Andante Cantabile from Fifth Symphony; Overture, Romeo and Juliet ....Tchaikovsky
Kammenoi Ostrow; Reve Angelique, ...Rubinstein
Pictures at an Exhibition.....Mussorgsky
Eili, Eili ....Shallitt
March for Band................Prokofieff
Finale, A Life for the Tsar........Glinka
Russian Sailors' Dance.............Gliere

Bender

Jennie Tourel, who will sing Saturday at Berkshire Festival.

OPERA

LEMONADE OPERA

141 West Thirteenth Street

TONIGHT, 8:30 o'clock, Don Pedro. Performances nightly except Mondays.

COMMUNITY CIVIC OPERA

Educational Alliance

MONDAY, 8:15 P. M., Rigoletto (in concert form).

PUNCH OPERA

Cherry Lane Theatre

WEDNESDAY THROUGH NEXT SUNDAY, 8:30 P. M., Volpone.

LA PUMA WORKSHOP

270 West Eighty-ninth Street

WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY, 7:45 P. M., Aida. Admission free.

AMATO OPERA THEATRE

159 Bleecker Street

FRIDAY, 8:30 P. M., La Boheme.

J. Abresch

Theresa Green, soprano soloist at Tanglewood Saturday.

SALMAGGI OPERA

Randalls Island Stadium

SATURDAY, 8:45 P. M., Aida. Hallberg, Carruba; Ruhl, Buckley, Pichardo, Salvador, Rossi. Conductor, Leide.

OTHER EVENTS

TODAY

ERNST AND LORY WALLFISCH, viola-piano duo, Brooklyn Museum, 2 P. M.
JOY McLEAN, soprano; PAULINE PHELPS, mezzo-soprano; GEORGE HILL, bass; Carl Fischer Hall, 3 P. M.

TUESDAY

MARILYN MASON, organist, St. Paul's Chapel, Columbia University, 12 noon.

WEDNESDAY

EVERETT ANDERSON, bass-baritone, McMillin Theatre, 8:30 P. M.

THURSDAY

THOMAS RICHNER, organist, St. Paul's Chapel, Columbia University, 12 noon.

TANGLEWOOD CONCERTS

THE SHED

Lenox, Mass.

TODAY, 2:30 P. M. Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Pierre Monteux. Jorge Bolet, pianist.
Serenade for Strings; Symphony No. 5; Piano Concerto in B flat minor, ...Tchaikovsky
FRIDAY, 8:30 P. M. Conductor, Charles Munch; Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano; Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone; John McCollum, tenor; Berkshire Festival Chorus.
Romeo and Juliet...................Berlioz
SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M. Conductor, Leonard Bernstein; Theresa Green, soprano; Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano; The Berkshire Festival Chorus.
Prelude to Khovanstchina....Mussorgsky
Sheherazade for Soprano and Orchestra, ...Ravel
Symphony No. 2 (Resurrection)....Mahler
NEXT SUNDAY, Aug. 9, 2:30 P. M. Conductor, Munch; Gregor Piatigorsky, 'cellist; Joseph De Pasquale, violist.
Symphony No. 5 ....Schubert
Adagio for Strings ....Barber
Don Quixote ....Strauss
'Cello Concerto No. 1 ....Milhaud
Tannhaeuser Overture ....Wagner

Cir. (D 130,147)

This Clipping From
SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-JOURNAL

AUG 3 - 1953

[illegible]ora Sulzle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. G. [illegible] Grant blvd., was in Lenox, Mass., over the [illegible] to attend the Berkshire Music Festival.

Cir. (D 281,218)

This Clipping From
BUFFALO, N. Y.
NEWS

AUG 3 - 1953

MRS. DUANE LYMAN and Miss Jane Stimson will go on Thursday to attend the annual Berkshire Festifal at "Tanglewood." in the Berkshire Mountains of Massachusetts.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE

AUG 1 - 1953

Boston Symphony At Tanglewood

By Arthur Berger

LENOX, Mass., July 31.—The Berkshire Music Festival entered its major phase here in the shed on the Tanglewood estate with the first of the series of week-end concerts by the full membership of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Charles Munch.

Mr. Munch assembled for tonight a list that consisted mostly of standard repertory pieces, with the exception of Aaron Copland's music from the Martha Graham ballet, "Appalachian Spring," which, though not altogether unfamiliar, offered the fillip of music in a contemporary idiom. Zino Francescatti, violinist, was soloist in the Mendelssohn concerto and the program opened with Beethoven's "Leonore" overture, No. 3. The program closed with the popular "Bolero" of Ravel.

For those who came early and settled on the lawns behind the shed with picnic suppers the weather was ideal. By moving the opening concert of the week end from Thursday to Friday, the Berkshire Festival authorities have made it more convenient this season for week-enders to take in all three events each week. Another feature of the concerts this season in this regard has been the earlier hour of the Sunday concerts—2:30 instead of 3. In this way, there is more time for motorists to get home after the concerts.

Tonight's attendance of 10,300 demonstrated to all concerned with rescheduling the week-end concerts that the new plan is definitely rewarding since this figure sets a record for an opening night of the major concert series in the shed. A record was also established this season by the attendances at the concert eries by the chamber orchestra devoted mainly to Bach Mozart and Haydn.

The total attendance for the six concerts given in three week-ends was 26,150. This marked an advance of almost 6,500 over last year's attendance at the series in the theater concert hall.

Cir. (D 56,872)

This Clipping From
ALBANY, N. Y.
KNICKERBOCKER NEWS

AUG 3 - 1953

9,900 at First Tanglewood Sunday

By DUANE LA FLECHE

Pierre Monteux, appearing very much as if he had just enjoyed to the fullest a lunch of excellent French cuisine, trotted to the podium of the Tanglewood music shed yesterday afternoon to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in an all-Tchaikovsky program.

As Mr. Monteux's lunch appeared to have agreed with him, so the music agreed with the record opening Sunday crowd of 9,900 which filled the shed and spread far over the Tanglewood lawns, still damp from morning showers.

As an appetizer, Mr. Monteux served his guests the Serenade for String Orchestra. It whetted the appetite for the more that was to come. The string sections of the Boston Symphony are its greatest delight, and Mr. Monteux made the most of them.

The Serenade was followed quickly, since the program was broadcast, by the Fifth Symphony.

Most folks can remember the Fifth because its opening theme was used for so many years to introduce the once popular "aspirin" program of the dear dead days of big-time radio.

The closing composition was the Tchaikovsky Piano Concerto, that even had a whirl on the juke boxes not too long ago, when Freddie Martin "popularized" it.

The Boston Symphony got along quite well yesterday without Mr. Martin's aid. The soloist was Jorge Bolet, who brought to the work great power and virtuosity. While his interpretation appeared cold, it quite apparently warmed the hearts of most of the audience, for Mr. Bolet was called back again and again by applause, bravos and a great assortment of whistles.

If one had done a bit of eavesdropping during the program he could have heard the critic of the Toronto Star comment to the critic of one of the Boston gazettes:

"Monteux appears a little nervous."

To which the critic of the Boston newspaper replied:

"The brasses seem to be getting away from him."

The two gentlemen may have known what they were talking about, and on the other hand they may have been just another couple of guys named Joe.

It would be remarkable if Mr. Monteux was nervous. Mr. Monteux is 78, and has been conducting symphony orchestras for more years than the gentlemen of the press had lived. Some critics contend, in fact, that he can conduct better with a twitch of the eyebrow than some of the younger fry can with the most athletic waving of the baton.

At any rate the New York critics thought Mr. Monteux had done well. The Times found he had given the program "the quality of sunlight." The Herald Tribune found him up to his usual high standard, with the remark that his praises "need scarcely to be sung again."

As for Mr. Monteux, at the close of the program, and after taking a proper number of bows, he trotted from the podium appearing very much as if he was off to enjoy to the fullest a dinner of excellent French cuisine.

There are two weekends yet to come of Tanglewood music. The dates are Aug. 7, 8, 9, 14, 15 and 16. The conductors will be Charles Munch and Leonard Burnstein.

It would be well to keep in mind too, the "Tanglewood on Parade" program Thursday, Aug. 13, when guests can see and hear the pupils at the Berk[illegible] shire Music Center, then listen [illegible] to a concert by the Boston [illegible]

Cir. (D 38,502)

This Clipping From
WATERBURY, CONN.
AMERICAN

AUG 3 - 1953

Crowds Break Record At Tanglewood

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 3—Audiences totaling 31,000, the largest ever for the opening trio of Shed concerts in the 16-year history of the Berkshire Music Festival, filed through Tanglewood's shady gates last week end.

Despite chill and intermittent showers early yesterday, attendance came to 9,900 for Pierre Monteux's appearance as guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for ~~an~~ all-Tschaikowsky concert.

The program was a sop to popular demand, music so often played it has become trite with familiarity. At the same time, Mr. Monteux's meticulous readings gave yesterday's three works, the melodic Serenade for Strings Orchestra; 5th Symphony, and B Flat Piano Concerto, a decisiveness they sometimes lack.

Jorge Bolet, towering over the rotund figure of Mr. Monteux, was soloist for the piano work.

Saturday night's performance, by contrast, offered a delightful range from 19th Century to contemporary in time, and romantic imagery to impressionism in style. Charles Munch conducted the orchestra in Lukas Foss' Piano Concerto No. 2 (with the composer as soloist); Mendelssohn's Symphony No. 4, and Hindemith's sparkling Symphonic Metamorphosis of themes by Von Weber.

The Foss concerto, newly-revised, shows Tanglewood still another facet of the young composer-conductor-pianist's complex creative personality. True, there were echoes of Stravinsky, but Foss could chose worse models until his own style becomes fixed.

Mr. Munch and Leonard Bernstein share the podium for the second week end of Shed concerts Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Bernstein will take over for the annual Koussevitsky Memorial Concert Saturday night, with Mr. Munch leading the orchestra Friday night and Sunday afternoon. Gregor Piatogorsky returns to Tanglewood [illegible] cello soloist in a Milhaud concerto Sunday.

F.Z.

Cir. (D 125,983) (S 3

This Clipping F
BOSTON, MA MORNING GL

AUG 4

Tanglewood to [illegible]
Old French [illegible]

Dallas, Tex
Times Herald
8/3/53

Legion Awards Made.

New York, Aug. 3 [illegible] Hurok, the well-known impresario, and George E. Judd, manager of the Boston Sym[illegible] have been made chevaliers [illegible] Legion of Honor by the Fr[illegible] government.

TIGHT BINDING

Cir. (D 503,999) (S 1,096,738)

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES

AUG 2 - 1953

PROGRAMS OF THE WEEK

GUGGENHEIM MEMORIAL CONCERTS

GOLDMAN BAND

TONIGHT, Central Park. All concerts begin at 8:30 P. M., unless otherwise noted.
Grand March, from Tannhaeuser; Wagner
Overture, Romeo and Juliet...Tchaikovsky
Kammenoi Ostrow; Reve Angelique, Rubinstein
Columbian Fantasie ....Rogers
Russian Sailors' Dance...........Gliere
Shepherd's Hey ....Grainger
March, Illinois ....Goldman
March, Manhattan Beach; March, El Capitan; Liberty Bell; Semper Fidelis; The Flashing Eyes of Andalusia Waltz; March, Our Flirtations; March, The Stars and Stripes Forever.........Sousa

MONDAY, Central Park.
Grand March, University ....Goldman
Overture, Halka ....Moniuszko
Procession of Knights, from Parsifal, Wagner
Second Swedish Rhapsody.........Leidzen
Favorite Melodies: A Kiss in the Dark; Punchinello; Pan Americana; Excerpts from Babes in Toyland; The Gold Bug, The Fortune Teller ....Herbert

WEDNESDAY, Central Park.
Music Memory Contest
Huldigungsmarsch ....Wagner
Overture, Youth Triumphant .....Hadley
Introduction and Tarantella; March, Happy-Go-Lucky ....Goldman
Novelette ....MacDowell
Overture, William Tell ....Rossini

THURSDAY, Prospect Park.
Overture ....Catel
A Curtain Raiser and Country Dance; Concert Waltz ....Goldman
Eight Russian Folksongs ....Liadov
Czech Rhapsody ....Weinberger
Symphony No. 1; Polonaise; Egmont Overture..Beethoven

FRIDAY, Central Park.
Repeating Thursday's program.

SATURDAY, Prospect Park.
March Slav; Andante Cantabile from Fifth Symphony; Overture, Romeo and Juliet ....Tchaikovsky
Kammenoi Ostrow; Reve Angelique, Rubinstein
Pictures at an Exhibition.....Mussorgsky
Eili, Eili ....Shallitt
March for Band................Prokofieff
Finale, A Life for the Tsar........Glinka
Russian Sailors' Dance..............Gliere

Bender

Jennie Tourel, who will sing Saturday at Berkshire Festival.

OPERA

LEMONADE OPERA

141 West Thirteenth Street

TONIGHT, 8:30 o'clock, Don Pedro. Performances nightly except Mondays.

COMMUNITY CIVIC OPERA

Educational Alliance

MONDAY, 8:15 P. M., Rigoletto (in concert form).

PUNCH OPERA

Cherry Lane Theatre

WEDNESDAY THROUGH NEXT SUNDAY, 8:30 P. M., Volpone.

LA PUMA WORKSHOP

270 West Eighty-ninth Street

WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY, 7:45 P. M., Aida. Admission free.

AMATO OPERA THEATRE

159 Bleecker Street

FRIDAY, 8:30 P. M., La Boheme.

J. Abresch

Theresa Green, soprano soloist at Tanglewood Saturday.

SALMAGGI OPERA

Randalls Island Stadium

SATURDAY, 8:45 P. M., Aida. Hallberg, Carruba; Ruhl, Buckley, Pichardo, Salvador, Rossi. Conductor, Leide.

OTHER EVENTS

TODAY

ERNST AND LORY WALLFISCH, viola-piano duo, Brooklyn Museum, 2 P. M.

JOY McLEAN, soprano; PAULINE PHELPS, mezzo-soprano; GEORGE HILL, bass; Carl Fischer Hall, 3 P. M.

TUESDAY

MARILYN MASON, organist, St. Paul's Chapel, Columbia University, 12 noon.

WEDNESDAY

EVERETT ANDERSON, bass-baritone, McMillin Theatre, 8:30 P. M.

THURSDAY

THOMAS RICHNER, organist, St. Paul's Chapel, Columbia University, 12 noon.

TANGLEWOOD CONCERTS

THE SHED

Lenox, Mass.

TODAY, 2:30 P. M. Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Pierre Monteux. Jorge Bolet, pianist.
Serenade for Strings; Symphony No. 5; Piano Concerto in B flat minor, Tchaikovsky

FRIDAY, 8:30 P. M. Conductor, Charles Munch; Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano; Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone; John McCollum, tenor; Berkshire Festival Chorus.
Romeo and Juliet.................Berlioz

SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M. Conductor, Leonard Bernstein; Theresa Green, soprano; Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano; The Berkshire Festival Chorus.
Prelude to Khovanstchina....Mussorgsky
Sheherazade for Soprano and Orchestra, Ravel
Symphony No. 2 (Resurrection)....Mahler

NEXT SUNDAY, Aug. 9, 2:30 P. M. Conductor, Munch; Gregor Piatigorsky, 'cellist; Joseph De Pasquale, violist.
Symphony No. 5 ....Schubert
Adagio for Strings ....Barber
Don Quixote ....Strauss
'Cello Concerto No. 1 ....Milhaud
Tannhaeuser Overture ....Wagner

Cir. (D 130,147)

This Clipping From
SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-JOURNAL

AUG 3 - 1953

[illegible] ora Sulzle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. G. [illegible] Grant blvd., was in Lenox, Mass., over the [illegible] to attend the Berkshire Music Festival.

Cir. (D 281,218)

This Clipping From
BUFFALO, N. Y.
NEWS

AUG 3 - 1953

MRS. DUANE LYMAN and Miss Jane Stimson will go on Thursday to attend the annual Berkshire Festifal at "Tanglewood," in the Berkshire Mountains of Massachusetts.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE

AUG 1 - 1953

Boston Symphony At Tanglewood

By Arthur Berger

LENOX, Mass., July 31.—The Berkshire Music Festival entered its major phase here in the shed on the Tanglewood estate with the first of the series of week-end concerts by the full membership of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Charles Munch.

Mr. Munch assembled for tonight a list that consisted mostly of standard repertory pieces, with the exception of Aaron Copland's music from the Martha Graham ballet, "Appalachian Spring," which, though not altogether unfamiliar, offered the fillip of music in a contemporary idiom. Zino Francescatti, violinist, was soloist in the Mendelssohn concerto and the program opened with Beethoven's "Leonore" overture, No. 3. The program closed with the popular "Bolero" of Ravel.

For those who came early and settled on the lawns behind the shed with picnic suppers the weather was ideal. By moving the opening concert of the week end from Thursday to Friday, the Berkshire Festival authorities have made it more convenient this season for week-enders to take in all three events each week. Another feature of the concerts this season in this regard has been the earlier hour of the Sunday concerts—2:30 instead of 3. In this way, there is more time for motorists to get home after the concerts.

Tonight's attendance of 10,300 demonstrated to all concerned with rescheduling the week-end concerts that the new plan is definitely rewarding since this figure sets a record for an opening night of the major concert series in the shed. A record was also established this season by the attendances at the concert eries by the chamber orchestra devoted mainly to Bach Mozart and Haydn.

The total attendance for the six concerts given in three week-ends was 26,150. This marked an advance of almost 6,500 over last year's attendance at the series in the theater concert hall.

Cir. (D 56,872)

This Clipping From
ALBANY, N. Y.
KNICKERBOCKER NEWS

AUG 3 - 1953

9,900 at First Tanglewood Sunda

By DUANE LA FLECHE

Pierre Monteux, appearing very much as if he had just enjoyed to the fullest a lunch of excellent French cuisine, trotted to the podium of the Tanglewood music shed yesterday afternoon to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in an all-Tchaikovsky program.

As Mr. Monteux's lunch appeared to have agreed with him, so the music agreed with the record opening Sunday crowd of 9,900 which filled the shed and spread far over the Tanglewood lawns, still damp from morning showers.

As an appetizer, Mr. Monteux served his guests the Serenade for String Orchestra. It whetted the appetite for the more that was to come. The string sections of the Boston Symphony are its greatest delight, and Mr. Monteux made the most of them.

The Serenade was followed quickly, since the program was broadcast, by the Fifth Symphony.

Most folks can remember the Fifth because its opening theme was used for so many years to introduce the once popular "aspirin" program of the dear dead days of big-time radio.

The closing composition was the Tchaikovsky Piano Concerto, that even had a whirl on the juke boxes not too long ago, when Freddie Martin "popularized" it.

The Boston Symphony got along quite well yesterday without Mr. Martin's aid. The soloist was Jorge Bolet, who brought to the work great power and virtuosity. While his interpretation appeared cold, it quite apparently warmed the hearts of most of the audience, for Mr. Bolet was called back again and again by applause, bravos and a great assortment of whistles.

If one had done a bit of eavesdropping during the program he could have heard the critic of the Toronto Star comment to the critic of one of the Boston gazettes:

"Monteux appears a little nervous."

To which the critic of the Boston newspaper replied:

"The brasses seem to be getting away from him."

The two gentlemen may have known what they were talking about, and on the other hand they may have been just another couple of guys named Joe.

It would be remarkable if Mr. Monteux was nervous. Mr. Monteux is 78, and has been conducting symphony orchestras for more years than the gentlemen of the press had lived. Some critics contend, in fact, that he can conduct better with a twitch of the eyebrow than some of the younger fry can with the most athletic waving of the baton.

At any rate the New York critics thought Mr. Monteux had done well. The Times found he had given the program "the quality of sunlight." The Herald Tribune found him up to his usual high standard, with the remark that his praises "need scarcely to be sung again."

As for Mr. Monteux, at the close of the program, and after taking a proper number of bows, he trotted from the podium appearing very much as if he was off to enjoy to the fullest a dinner of excellent French cuisine.

There are two weekends yet to come of Tanglewood music. The dates are Aug. 7, 8, 9, 14, 15 and 16. The conductors will be Charles Munch and Leonard Burnstein.

It would be well to keep in mind too, the "Tanglewood on Parade" program Thursday, Aug. 13, when guests can see and hear the pupils at the Berkshire Music Center, then listen [illegible] to a concert by the Boston [illegible]

Cir. (D 38,502)

This Clipping From
WATERBURY, CONN.
AMERICAN

AUG 3 - 1953

Crowds Break Record At Tanglewood

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 3—Audiences totaling 31,000, the largest ever for the opening trio of Shed concerts in the 16-year history of the Berkshire Music Festival, filed through Tanglewood's shady gates last week end.

Despite chill and intermittent showers early yesterday, attendance came to 9,900 for Pierre Monteux's appearance as guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for ~~an~~ all-Tschaikowsky concert.

The program was a sop to popular demand, music so often played it has become trite with familiarity. At the same time, Mr. Monteux's meticulous readings gave yesterday's three works, the melodic Serenade for Strings Orchestra; 5th Symphony, and B Flat Piano Concerto, a decisiveness they sometimes lack.

Jorge Bolet, towering over the rotund figure of Mr. Monteux, was soloist for the piano work.

Saturday night's performance, by contrast, offered a delightful range from 19th Century to contemporary in time, and romantic imagery to impressionism in style. Charles Munch conducted the orchestra in Lukas Foss' Piano Concerto No. 2 (with the composer as soloist); Mendelssohn's Symphony No. 4, and Hindemith's sparkling Symphonic Metamorphosis of themes by Von Weber.

The Foss concerto, newly-revised, shows Tanglewood still another facet of the young composer-conductor-pianist's complex creative personality. True, there were echoes of Stravinsky, but Foss could chose worse models until his own style becomes fixed.

Mr. Munch and Leonard Bernstein share the podium for the second week end of Shed concerts Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Bernstein will take over for the annual Koussevitsky Memorial Concert Saturday night, with Mr. Munch leading the orchestra Friday night and Sunday afternoon. Gregor Piatogorsky returns to Tanglewood [illegible] cello soloist in a Milhaud concerto Sunday.

Old [illegible]

"Richard [illegible] opera [illegible] before [illegible] Revolution [illegible] be [illegible] at Tanglewood [illegible] the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center next Monday and Tuesday evenings. Boris Goldovsky will conduct. [illegible] probably has not been [illegible] America since 1800

[259]

Cir. (D 91,577)

This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
EVE. NEWS

AUG 3 - 1953

Week End at Tanglewood Brings Very Wide Variety

Foss Piano Concerto Intrigues Large Crowd at Saturday Night Music Festival Concert; All-Tchaikovsky Program Pleasing Yesterday Afternoon

By W. HARLEY RUDKIN

Nostalgia was the central theme of the music that sang through the great shed at Tanglewood yesterday afternoon, as Pierre Monteux, venerable French maestro, thrilled the vast audience with an all-Tchaikovsky program that was sympathetic without being banal; suave without ever approaching indifference.

PIERRE MONTEUX

Well-remembered music all too often falls into the "program" classification, losing, through close and constant association, whatever innate beauty, fire, or purpose it made have originally had in the composer's mind.

Tchaikovsky has been hackneyed; some of his more singing melodies have been turned into popular tunes with gooey lyrics, and, under this influence, it is possible to momentarily forget that he wrote music for the ages. It was nice to have Mr. Monteux reaffirm a little of the faith in Tchaikovsky, and the beautiful andante of the Fifth Symphony never sounded fresher, or sang more sweetly than it did with the Boston Symphony and its guest conductor yesterday.

The same was true of the opening "Serenade for Strings," which gave what is probably the best symphonic string section in the world a chance to show the scope of its capabilities. The audience response was both spontaneous and prolonged, a reception worthy of epicurean fare. Jorge Bolet rounded out a perfect musical afternoon with a flashing and tonally-lovely presentation of the Concerto No. 1, in E-Minor.

Quite a Contrast

Those who heard both the Saturday night and Sunday afternoon a change of pace, and a most effective one.

For many, in fact for this listener, the highlight was Lukas Foss playing his own technically-bewildering Piano Concerto No. 2, something we'd have to hear more than once to have any clear idea as to what was going on. Powerful it certainly is, and intricate, and the Saturday night audience gave it full measure of appreciation.

Charles Munch conducted the Boston Symphony in Schumann's "Overture to Manfred," Mendelssohn's Fourth, or so-called "Italian" Symphony, and the tricky Hindemith "Symphonic Metamorphosis of Themes by Weber," a composition open to considerable debate and discussion.

It was all very heady music and the Sunday afternoon Tchaikovsky helped calm the turbulent atmosphere of the night before.

For This Week

The complete program of activities for this week follows:

Today—*4.30 p. m.—Chamber music hall
Informal chamber music concert by students of Dept. I
8.30 p. m.—Theater-concert hall (All seats reserved)
Three one-act operas by students of Dept. IV
"L'Yvrogne Corrige" (The Reformed Drunkard) .... by Gluck
"L'Enfant Prodigue" (The Prodigal Son) ....by Debussy
"Une Education Manquee" (An Incomplete Education) .... by Chabrier
Tomorrow—*8.30 p. m.—Theater-concert hall
Small choir concert, students of Dept. II
Wednesday—*4.30 p. m.—Theater-concert hall
Opera scenes by students of associate division, Dept. IV
*8.30 p. m.—Chamber music hall
Composers' Forum, by students of Dept. III
Thursday—*8.30 p. m.—Music shed
Orchestra concert by students of Dept. I
Friday—8.30— Music shed
Berkshire Festival Concert B-1—Charles Munch, conductor
Berlioz .... "Romeo and Juliet," dramatic symphony, with festival chorus and soloists
Soloists: Jennie Tourel, alto; Nicola Mascona, bass-baritone; John McCollum, tenor Saturday—10.00 a. m.—Music shed
Boston Symphony Orchestra—Charles Munch, conductor
Public rehearsal (benefit pension fund)
—*3.00 p. m.—Music shed
Organ recital—E. Power Biggs
—8.30 p. m.—Music shed
Berkshire Festival Concert B-2 Leonard Bernstein, guest concert
(Koussevitzky memorial concert)
Moussorgsky .... "Prelude to "Khovanstchina"
Ravel .... "Sheherazade" for soprano and orchestra
Soloist: Jennie Tourel
Mahler ...... Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection"), with festival chorus and soloists Solists: Jennie Tourel, alto; Theresa Green, soprano
Sunday, *10.00 a. m.—Chamber music hall
Chamber music concert by students of Dept. I
—2.30 p. m.—Music shed
Berkshire festival concert B-3.... Charles Munch, conductor
Schubert ...... Symphony No. 5, in B-flat
Barber .... Adagio for Strings
Strauss ...... "Don Quixote" with cello and viola solo
(Soloists: Gregor Piatigorsky, cello; Joseph de Pasquale, viola (Broadcast coast-to-cast by CBS Radio James Fassett, commentator)
Milhaud ..... Concerto for Cello, No.
Soloist: Gregor Piatigorsky
Roussel .... "Bacchus et Ariane" Suite No. 2
*—Concerts open to members of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center whose contributions help to support the school.

Cir. (D 56,872)

This Clipping From
ALBANY, N. Y.
KNICKERBOCKER NEWS

AUG 3 - 1953

Monteux Leads Orchestra In 9th Berkshire Concert

Tanglewood welcomed a distinguished guest conductor yesterday. Pierre Monteux, peerless veteran of the podium, apparently enjoyed leading the Boston Symphony in the ninth concert of the Berkshire Festival, an all-Tchaikowsky program. The Serenade for Strings, Symphony No. 5, and the First Piano Concerto, with Jorge Bolet as soloist, delighted a large audience.

The personality of Monteux was the dominant feature of the concert. Relaxed and obviously at ease among old friends that he often has led, his readings had the firm authority that permitted him confidence in every result. He is the straightforward interpretation, the beautifully-flowing phrase, the minute attention to detail, all with an economy of physical effort that might mislead some in its ease. Every gesture counts and contributes to the invigorating leadership of this dean of conductors. His pleasure in the performances was obvious. Orchestra and leader were attuned.

The String Serenade showed beautiful attention to patterns of phrasing. Here the famous string section was heard to advantage. The glowing warmth of the familiar "Valse" turned into a tender longing in the muted "Elegia." One could appreciate the satisfaction that Tchaikowsky so often expressed about the composition of this serenade. It has a haunting appeal.

The superb brass arrested attention often in the symphony. The Andante Cantabile called for the famous born solo, beautifully played by James Stagliano. The melodic gift of Tchaikowsky dominated every phase of the performance as Monteux colored the effects. The monotony that can overcome this work was skillfully avoided by the needed variations in the characteristic phrase repetitions. The careful contrasts of tempos produced an exciting finale.

Jorge Bolet, young Cuban pianist, plays with confidence, precision and fluency. His technique is sure; tone is never forced. In the Allegro there were passages of dazzling octaves. A sense of romantic poetry tinged the Andante. The apparent unity of musical ideal between the soloist and the conductor marked a sterling performance of the popular concerto.

Two more weeks of the Berkshire Festival remain. Concerts are given on Friday, Saturday and Sunday. C. F. S.

Cir. (D 39,275)

This Clipping From
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE

AUG 3 - 1953

Francescatti Is Superb At Tanglewood Concert

By D. E. RITZ

The first of the Shed weekends at Tanglewood in the Berkshires opened Friday night with Charles Munch directing the full Boston Symphony Orchestra and violinist Zino Francescatti as the assisting artist. It closed yesterday afternoon with an all-Tschaikovsky program conducted by Pierre Monteux. Jorge Bolet was the piano soloist yesterday and Lukas Foss was heard in his "Piano Concerto number 2" at the Saturday evening program. Munch also conducted the Saturday program.

* * *

WE ATTENDED Friday evening particularly to hear Francescatti and Aaron Copland's "Appalachian Spring" and were not disappointed in either. Francescatti appeared here several years ago under the sponsorship of the Schenectady Civic Music Association and at that time we were deeply impressed with his musicianship. An opportunity to hear him as soloist with the country's major orchestra was not to be passed up lightly especially as he was playing the Mendelssohn concerto.

The Mendelssohn concerto is a violinist's concerto from the first to last note. Written by a man, who himself was no mean string player, with the collaboration of Ferdinand David, one of the foremost violinists, teachers and orchestral men of the period, it contains some of the lovliest of melodies ever written for the instrument. These are employed against an equally expressive orchestral background and remain a joy to public and performers alike. When conducted by a French violinist (Charles Munch studied with Lucien Capet and Karl Flesch and played in the Gewandhaus Orchestra under Furtwangler) and played by the foremost French violinist of the day, it left nothing to be desired. Bravos from the audience and applause from the orchestra greeted the soloist at the conclusion of a performance radiant with warmth and brilliance.

* * *

THE PROGRAM opened with the Beethoven "Overture to Leonore number 3" One realized again the beauty which can be obtained from a most familiar work by a conductor whose advice to student musicians is "to make music with all your intensity, with all your conviction, with fire and flame."

Aaron Copland's "Appalachian Spring" and the Ravel "Bolero" formed the after-intermission portion of the program. Both were written on commissions as ballets but, there, all resemblance ceases.

Copland, a faculty member at the Tanglewood Music Center, was present to share the applause which the performance rated. The composition received the Pulitzer Prize for music in 1945 and the award of the Music Critics' Circle of New York for the outstanding theatrical work of the 1944-45 season there. Though containing a number of strictly American themes it attains a continental orchestration that is surprising. Clarity and simplicity seem its keynotes while its orchestration is expert and unerring.

* * *

THE RAVEL "Bolero" has an impact that must be felt. Mere words can never express the compulsions which its inexorable rhythm arouse from the drum's first almost inaudible announcement to the final full-orchestra and drum head-splitting closing bars.

Ideal weather brought 26,150 to the six "small" concerts which preceded the Shed concerts. So popular, indeed, have these become that the Symphony management is faced with the problem of whether or not to move them to the large Shed next season.

Shed concerts will continue this weekend and next at Tanglewood, which has become a music Mecca for the country.

Festival Broadcast Heard at Edge Of Iron Curtain

8/6 Eagle

The Berkshire Festival has been heard on the edge of the Iron Curtain. A young GI, writing from the Soviet-West German border, where he is stationed with the U.S. Military Police, wrote his mother in Chicopee July 24, "Right now I am listening to a concert beamed directly from Tanglewood. The Boston outfit is making some noise. They are telling about Serge Koussevitzky. It is really nice. It is coming over the Voice of America. I remember how nice it was up there at Tanglewood so long ago."

Pfc. William G. Corridan, who was writing to Mrs. Frances O'Connell Corridan, music critic for the Chicopee Herald, often had been to Tanglewood concerts with her and with his uncle, Charles O'Connell, former music director for RCA Victor and assistant conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra.

Tanglewood

Bulletin Wilton, Conn. 8/5

"Tanglewood on Parade"

With Isaac Stern, violinist, soprano Leontyne Price, the Bess of Broadway's "Porgy and Bess", and her husband, baritone William Warfield as stars, the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be held at the home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival, Lenox, Mass. on Thursday (August 13). Festivities include demonstrations by every department of the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra, a lawn supper and a gala evening concert by the orchestra, from 6 p.m. to 11 p.m., followed by the drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

Isaac Stern will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D major with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, Music Director, conducting at the evening concert, which commences at 8:15 p.m. in the 6,000-seat Music Shed. Mr. Munch will also conduct the Suite from Handel's "Water Music". arranged by Sir Hamilton Harty.

George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess", Act II, Scenes 1 and 2, will occupy the second half of the concert program, directed and conducted by Leonard Bernstein, head of the Berkshire Music Center's conducting classes.

Festival Conclusion

Charles Munch conducts the concluding concerts on Friday night (August 14) and Sunday afternoon (August 16), and Leonard Bernstein will be on the great Music Shed's podium for the concert of Saturday night (August 15).

The Friday evening program will be given over to Brahms' "German Requiem", for chorus and soloists. Canadian soprano Lois Marshall and baritone William Warfield will make their Tanglewood debuts as soloists, with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students participating.

On the Saturday night program Leonard Bernstein will feature the "Sinfonia India" of Carlos Chavez, which had its premiere by the Boston Orchestra in 1936, the composer conducting.

Seymour Lipkin, pianist, will be soloist in the Ravel Concerto for the Left Hand, which will have its first Tanglewood performance at the concluding concert. Other Tanglewood premieres of the weekend are Sibelius' Symphony No. 4, (Saturday evening), and Chabrier's Bourree Fanasque (Sunday afternoon).

The portion of the Sunday concert, 2:30 to 4:00 p.m., will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as commentator.

Record-ially Yours

MARTIN BOOKSPAN

BLOCH: Concerto Grosso for Piano and String Orchestra; also, SCHUMAN: Symphony No. 5 for String Orchestra. William Steinberg conducting the strings of the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra. (Capitol S 8212, $5.72)

Here are two of the finest works of our time in sterling performances recorded at the actual concert presentations of last November's First Pittsburgh International Contemporary Music Festival. At the time of the Festival it was made known that Capitol was recording all the events for eventual distribution (on a gratis basis!) to schools and institutions. Obviously, and with just cause, Capitol decided that these two performances in particular deserve much greater currency; if the other performances of the Pittsburgh Festival were of a similar excellence, then Capitol would do us all a good turn by releasing for general commercial sale the entire series of Festival performances. Much significant music of the 20th century was performed in Pittsburgh last November; too many of these works are still not available on records.

The Bloch Concerto Grosso dates from the mid-twenties. Thanks largely to the phonograph, it is one of Bloch's best-known works. Not long after its first performance, in 1925, it was recorded for Victor by Fabien Sevitzky and the Philadelphia Chamber String Sinfonietta, composed of members of the Philadelphia Orchestra. About a dozen years later a second recording of the piece found its way into the Victor catalogue; this time by an ensemble from the Curtis Institute in Philadelphia conducted by Louis Bailly. This Bailly recording did yeoman work on behalf of the Bloch Concerto Grosso all during the 40's. A couple of years ago it was displaced by LP version, one of th discs in Mercury's Olym ries by the Chicago Sy Orchestra conducted by Kubelik. This new re Capitol is by far the fir formance of the music corded.

The Concerto Gross is movements, an opening very assertive and taut ically; a Dirge, with a ing section called "Pastc Rustic Dance"; and a b conceived Fugue, whic end reverts to a restat the theme of the Prelud sense that two contra strumental groups, one l one small, are pitted each other, this is a t certo Grosso, but the wh

---

MUSIC IN REVIEW

By GERALD A. BERLIN

MUNCH AND MONTEUX SHARE TANGLEWOOD PODIUM

(Editor's Note:—This week's column is by Martin Bookspan, noted radio personality, whose column on records appears regularly in the Advocate on this page.)

Last week-end marked the opening of the "big" series of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. This season the Thursday evening series of concerts has been moved up to Friday evening, thus affording the week-end Tanglewood visitor the opportunity to attend all three concerts in each series. That this move has been eminently successful is proven by the more than 10,000 persons who attended last Friday evening's concert, the largest week-day crowd ever to attend a Tanglewood concert. With the Friday evening concerts offering something extra-special this week and next in Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet" and Brahms' "A German Requiem," it is expected that last Friday's 10,000-plus figure will be greatly exceeded. At the concert last Friday night, which I arrived too late to attend, Mr. Munch conducted Beethoven's Third Leonore Overture, Copland's Ballet Suite "Appalachian Spring," and Ravel's "Bolero" and Zino Francescatti was the soloist in the Mendelssohn E Minor Violin Concerto.

The highlight of the program on Saturday evening was the first performance on the East Coast, with the composer as soloist, of the revised Second Piano Concerto by Lukas Foss. When Mr. Foss flew to Boston a year and a half ago from his sojourn in Italy to perform the world premiere performance of the Concerto with the orchestra, I found the piece wayward, episodic, and over-long. Since that time Mr. Foss has considerably revised the work, rewriting the first movement, making a different ending for the second and some alterations in the third. Now I find the piece as wayward as of yore, still episodic, and still over-long. There is much of Stravinsky in the Concerto's scoring, particularly the latter-day Stravinsky of the Symphony in Three Movements and the Norwegian Moods, but of the organic unity which is such an integral part of Stravinsky's music there is little or none in Mr. Foss' Concerto. If I remember correctly, at its performance a year and a half ago Mr. Foss stated that it was his intention to compose a Concerto in the big, Romantic tradition of the 19th century. Unfortunately, he seems to have failed in this aim. It remains to be seen whether any other pianists will incorporate the work into their repertories.

Mr. Munch began the program with a fine reading of the "Manfred" Overture by Schumann and after the intermission conducted a surprisingly gracious performance of Mendelssohn's "Italian" Symphony. The concert ended with Hindemith's "Symphonic Metamorphosis on Themes by Weber," which Mr. Munch took rather too seriously; other conductors have made more of the work's spontaneous good humor. However, the reading was a much subtler one than Mr. Munch conducted here in Boston during the winter season, as indeed both the Schumann and Mendelssohn were vastly improved over Mr. Munch's earlier performances of them.

On Sunday afternoon Pierre Monteux conducted at Tanglewood for the second time, choosing an all-Tchaikovsky program made up of the Serenade for Strings, the Fifth Symphony and the B Flat Minor Piano Concerto with Jorge Bolet as soloist. The Serenade and Symphony were broadcast coast-to-coast on the CBS Radio Network. Mr. Monteux' way with Tchaikovsky was a bit disappointing. The Serenade was taken on the fast side, direct, unsentimental—and somewhat dry. The Fifth Symphony was given a routine, tradition-bound performance, at times rather surprisingly heavy and Teutonic in character. This had nowhere

---

Grace Notes

[illegible] the Journal
8/6

Tanglewood

FRIDAY

By V. S.

More than 10,000 people gathered at Tanglewood on Friday evening to hear the full Boston Symphony Orchestra give its first concert of this season in the great shed, under the direction of Charles Munch.

This year for the first time the concerts are held Friday evening, Saturday evening, and Sunday afternoon. Apparently people welcomed the idea of three continuous days of music because there was a record-breaking crowd.

With the opening strains of Beethoven's third Leonore Overture a hush fell over the audience. The sweet plaintive notes built up to the great climax and a brilliant and jubilant finale. It was a superb performance and the wonderful Tanglewood setting made it more beautiful and arresting.

Zino Francescatti was soloist in Mendelssohn's Concerto for Violin and Orchestra, in E Minor. The rich tones of his violin held the audience enthralled. The sweet lyrical strains were never over-sentimentalized and the brilliant playing had a warm, flowing quality.

Aaron Copland was in the audience to hear his Appalachian Spring. It is one of his best loved scores and one that has delightful bits of drama in the strong, stirring music.

The muted tapping of the snare drum was the opening of a truly dramatic performance of Ravel's Bolero. The soft voices grew in intensity to a great crescendo, bringing the concert to a brilliant ending.

Tanglewood

SATURDAY

By A. C. S.

The Saturday evening offering at Tanglewood included the Overture to "Manfred" by Schumann, Mendelssohn's Italian Symphony, and Hindemith's Symphonic Metamorphosis of Themes by Weber. Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony were in top form as they strode back and forth between the nineteenth century and the present.

The most important musical event was the performance of the revised version of the Piano Concerto No. 2 by Lukas Foss with the composer as soloist. Even in its present revision the work is not cut from whole cloth, but the quest for a goal of personal expression is omnipresent. The basic weakness is structural rather than thematic. Leaning on the classical tradition, the work opens with a lengthy introduction containing thematic material which varies from rugged, intervalic statements to playful, folk-like ones. Almost immediately, however, one is aware of stylistic inconsistencies. The apparent desire for clarity, evidenced in a sparse orchestral fabric, is nearly obliterated by sections of nineteenth century enormity. The wonderfully pithy quality of some material suffers from an overabundance of ideas. This is particularly true of the last movement which could well be shortened. On the bright side there is delightful dialogue between tutti and piano and fascinating orchestral writing which has a truly personal stamp. It is hoped that a mastery of style will soon equal Mr. Foss' wealth of creative imagination and pianistic ability.

Tanglewood

SUNDAY

By A. H.

Familiar, melodic, romantic and dramatic, the all-Tschaikovsky program at Tanglewood, Sunday, once again testified to the still-vital drawing power of this composer whose themes have found popularity in both Concert Hall and Tin Pan Alley. The orchestra, under the baton of rotund, mustaschioed Pierre Monteux, opened the program with the delicate and mannered Serenade for String Orchestra, a composition of which the composer himself had been most fond.

This was followed by the Fifth Symphony, a work which was more appreciated by its hearers than by its creator. Although, like Hamlet, this symphony is "full of familiar quotations," it was played with such melodic richness by the accomplished Bostonians that it reached the audience with a freshness and beauty that inspired thunderous applause.

After the intermission the First Piano Concerto in B Flat Minor took up the last half of the program and proved the highlight of the afternoon. Again Mr. Monteux, aided this time by Cuban soloist Jorge Bolet, removed all hint of tarnish from an often overplayed and profaned composition. The Concerto seemed new-minted in its performance. Mr. Bolet played with rare sensitivity and exquisite coloring. Individual notes had shape and limpid clarity while the glissandi were brilliant cascades of sound. Even the musicians in the orchestra were impressed by Bolet's virtuosity and at the conclusion of the piece gave the artist their spontaneous applause. In this they were joined by the audience who recalled the pianist eight times with their stamping, clapping and shouts of approval.

Eagle 8/5

Bruckner Medal To Be Presented Bernstein Tomorrow

Following tomorrow night's performance by the Boston Symphony Orchestra of Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection"), Leonard Bernstein, who will conduct it, will be awarded the Bruckner Society medal by Tucker Keiser, acting music critic of the Boston Post. The ceremony in the Green Room of the Tanglewood Music Shed will be attended by Mrs. Alma Mahler Werfel, widow of the composer, who will come to Lenox for the occasion.

The award is given for outstanding performance of German music. The symphony will conclude the 11th program of the Berkshire Festival.

Tanglewood

Tonight

8.30—Berkshire Festival Concert by Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Music Shed.

Tomorrow

10.00 AM—Public rehearsal of Boston Symphony Orchestra for benefit of pension fund. Music Shed.

*3.00—Organ recital by E. Power Biggs. Music Shed.

Mozart . . . Adagio and Rondo

Antonio Soler . . . Concerto No. 3 in G major (Two movements)

J. S. Bach . . . Sheep May Safely Graze (From Birthday Cantata)

J. S. Bach . . . Tocatta and Fugue in D minor

*Open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Eagle 8/7

TANGLEWOOD

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

By the

BOSTON SYMPHONY

Orchestra

CHARLES MUNCH Music Director

TONIGHT AT

TOMORROW A

Sol

SUNDAY AT

Pasquale

ctor

eph De

stra.

Public Rel

Sa

ug. 13

TANGLEW

Address Bo

606

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL ATTRACTIONS LISTED

8/7

With C[illegible] [illegible] conducting the Boston S[illegible] Orchestra this evening [illegible] afternoon and with [illegible]stein as guest conductor on S[illegible] ning, the Berkshire Festival [illegible] concerts continue this weekend in the 6,000-seat Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

This evening's program will be given over in its entirety to Berlioz' dramatic sy[illegible] and Juliet," [illegible] Boston Symphony ga[illegible] version with ch[illegible] last winter for the [illegible] Jennie Tourel, mezz[illegible] sing the alto role [illegible] cona, bass-barito[illegible] bass soloist; and [illegible] of Tuckahoe, N. Y., a s[illegible] the Berkshire Music Center, [illegible] summer school of music [illegible]ed by the orchestra at Tanglewood, will be the tenor. The Festival Chorus, composed of students of the Berkshire Music Center, will assist.

Mr Bernstein's concert Saturday night will be a memorial to Serge Koussevitsky, for 25 years conductor of the Boston Symphony and the guiding spirit behind the Tanglewood annual festival and school activities. The program opens with Moussorgsky's Prelude to "Khovanstchina," which Dr Koussevitsky performed many times. Miss Tourel will be soloist both in Ravel's "Sheherazade" and in Mahler's Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection") with chorale finale. The soprano role in the latter will be sung by Theresa Green of Baltimore, a Berkshire Music Center student.

Gregor Piatigorsky will be soloist in Darius Milhaud's Concerto for Cello, No. 1 on the Sunday afternoon program, and will team with Joseph de Pasquale, violist of the Boston Symphony in Richard Strauss's "Don Quixote." The portion of the Sunday concert 2:30 to 4 P. M. will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio with the network's director of music James Fassett, as commentator.

Tanglewood Soloist

GREGOR PIATIGORSKY

Gregor [illegible] loist in [illegible] for Cell[illegible] de Pa[illegible] Straus[illegible] Sunda[illegible] p.m. [illegible] by the [illegible] estra, [illegible] in the M[illegible] Lenox, M[illegible]

, Friday, Aug. 7, 1953

Public Events

Tonight

8.30—Opening of second series of Berkshire Festival concerts, Tanglewood Shed.

Record-ially Yours

MARTIN BOOKSPAN

BLOCH: Concerto Grosso for Piano and String Orchestra; also, SCHUMAN: Symphony No. 5 for String Orchestra. William Steinberg conducting the strings of the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra. (Capitol S 8212, $5.72)

Here are two of the finest works of our time in sterling performances recorded at the actual concert presentations of last November's First Pittsburgh International Contemporary Music Festival. At the time of the Festival it was made known that Capitol was recording all the events for eventual distribution (on a gratis basis!) to schools and institutions. Obviously, and with just cause, Capitol decided that these two performances in particular deserve much greater currency; if the other performances of the Pittsburgh Festival were of a similar excellence, then Capitol would do us all a good turn by releasing for general commercial sale the entire series of Festival performances. Much significant music of the 20th century was performed in Pittsburgh last November; too many of these works are still not available on records.

The Bloch Concerto Grosso dates from the mid-twenties. Thanks largely to the phonograph, it is one of Bloch's best-known works. Not long after its first performance, in 1925, it was recorded for Victor by Fabien Sevitzky and the Philadelphia Chamber String Sinfonietta, composed of members of the Philadelphia Orchestra. About a dozen years later a second recording of the piece found its way into the Victor catalogue; this time by an ensemble from the Curtis Institute in Philadelphia conducted by Louis Bailly. This Bailly recording did yeoman work on behalf of the Bloch Concerto Grosso all during the 40's. A couple of years ago it was displaced by its first LP version, one of the debut discs in Mercury's Olympian Series by the Chicago Symphony Orchestra conducted by Rafael Kubelik. This new release by Capitol is by far the finest performance of the music yet recorded.

The Concerto Gross is in three movements, an opening Prelude, very assertive and taut rhythmically; a Dirge, with a contrasting section called "Pastorale and Rustic Dance"; and a brilliantly conceived Fugue, which at the end reverts to a restatement of the theme of the Prelude. In the sense that two contrasting instrumental groups, one large and one small, are pitted against each other, this is a true Concerto Grosso, but the whole is of

MUSIC IN REVIEW

By GERALD A. BERLIN

MUNCH AND MONTEUX SHARE TANGLEWOOD PODIUM

(Editor's Note:—This week's column is by Martin Bookspan, noted radio personality, whose column on records appears regularly in the Advocate on this page.)

Last week-end marked the opening of the "big" series of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. This season the Thursday evening series of concerts has been moved up to Friday evening, thus affording the week-end Tanglewood visitor the opportunity to attend all three concerts in each series. That this move has been eminently successful is proven by the more than 10,000 persons who attended last Friday evening's concert, the largest week-day crowd ever to attend a Tanglewood concert. With the Friday evening concerts offering something extra-special this week and next in Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet" and Brahms' "A German Requiem," it is expected that last Friday's 10,000-plus figure will be greatly exceeded. At the concert last Friday night, which I arrived too late to attend, Mr. Munch conducted Beethoven's Third Leonore Overture, Copland's Ballet Suite "Appalachian Spring," and Ravel's "Bolero" and Zino Francescatti was the soloist in the Mendelssohn E Minor Violin Concerto.

The highlight of the program on Saturday evening was the first performance on the East Coast, with the composer as soloist, of the revised Second Piano Concerto by Lukas Foss. When Mr. Foss flew to Boston a year and a half ago from his sojourn in Italy to perform the world premiere performance of the Concerto with the orchestra, I found the piece wayward, episodic, and over-long. Since that time Mr. Foss has considerably revised the work, rewriting the first movement, making a different ending for the second and some alterations in the third. Now I find the piece as wayward as of yore, still episodic, and still over-long. There is much of Stravinsky in the Concerto's scoring, particularly the latter-day Stravinsky of the Symphony in Three Movements and the Norwegian Moods, but of the organic unity which is such an integral part of Stravinsky's music there is little or none in Mr. Foss' Concerto. If I remember correctly, at its performance a year and a half ago Mr. Foss stated that it was his intention to compose a Concerto in the big, Romantic tradition of the 19th century. Unfortunately, he seems to have failed in this aim. It remains to be seen whether any other pianists will incorporate the work into their repertories.

Mr. Munch began the program with a fine reading of the "Manfred" Overture by Schumann and after the intermission conducted a surprisingly gracious performance of Mendelssohn's "Italian" Symphony. The concert ended with Hindemith's "Symphonic Metamorphosis on Themes by Weber," which Mr. Munch took rather too seriously; other conductors have made more of the work's spontaneous good humor. However, the reading was a much subtler one than Mr. Munch conducted here in Boston during the winter season, as indeed both the Schumann and Mendelssohn were vastly improved over Mr. Munch's earlier performances of them.

On Sunday afternoon Pierre Monteux conducted at Tanglewood for the second time, choosing an all-Tchaikovsky program made up of the Serenade for Strings, the Fifth Symphony and the B Flat Minor Piano Concerto with Jorge Bolet as soloist. The Serenade and Symphony were broadcast coast-to-coast on the CBS Radio Network. Mr. Monteux' way with Tchaikovsky was a bit disappointing. The Serenade was taken on the fast side, direct, unsentimental—and somewhat dry. The Fifth Symphony was given a routine, tradition-bound performance, at times rather surprisingly heavy and Teutonic in character. This had nowhere near the disciplined incandescence of the remarkable performances of the Symphony that Guido Cantelli conducted in Boston last January and February.

Mr. Bolet proved himself to be a very serious and dedicated musician in his performance of the Concerto. His was a very honest and musicianly approach to a work about as hackneyed as any in the entire symphonic realm. The result was that Messrs. Bolet and Monteux got a lot more music out of the piece than is customary with today's jet-propelled performances. The second movement was especially interesting on two accounts: it ended with the piano and orchestra accompanied in obbligato by two sparrows perched high atop one of the steel girders inside the Shed; and for the first time in my concert-going experience the conductor had the first flute disregard the obvious misprint in the published part and play the right note in the flute's first statement of the movement's main theme. For which, M. Monteux, huzzah!

Eagle 8/7

TANGLEWOOD

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

By the

BOSTON SYMPHONY

Orchestra

CHARLES MUNCH Music Director

TONIGHT AT 8.30—(Berlioz—"Romeo and Juliet"

TOMORROW AT 8.30—Leonard Bernstein, guest conductor
Soloists: Jennie Tourel, Theresa Green

SUNDAY AT 2.30—Soloists: Gregor Piatigorsky, Joseph De Pasquale

Public Rehearsal, Boston Symphony Orchestra,
Sat. AM at 10—Admission $1

TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE" Thurs., Aug. 13
Many Events

Address Box Office, Tanglewood, Lenox Mass.—Tel. Lenox 600
Or England Brothers, Pittsfield

Eagle 8/7

Bruckner Medal To Be Presented Bernstein Tomorrow

Following tomorrow night's performance by the Boston Symphony Orchestra of Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection"), Leonard Bernstein, who will conduct it, will be awarded the Bruckner Society medal by Tucker Keiser, acting music critic of the Boston Post. The ceremony in the Green Room of the Tanglewood Music Shed will be attended by Mrs. Alma Mahler Werfel, widow of the composer, who will come to Lenox for the occasion.

The award is given for outstanding performance of German music. The symphony will conclude the 11th program of the Berkshire Festival.

---

home, single or double. Private bath; near center of town. Tel. 6-0535.

ONE bedroom adjoining bath and shower. Rent reasonable. For a gentleman who will be steady. 25 Orchard St. Tel. 8-9339.

PROFESSIONAL or business — five rooms first floor; opposite Veteran's Memorial Park. Parking in rear for 8 to 10 cars. Phone Norwalk 6-0539 for appointment.

EAST NORWALK, 1 double room with kitchen privileges. Also

...de Music Center ... assist.

Mr Bernstein's concert Saturday night will be a memorial to Serge Koussevitsky, for 25 years conductor of the Boston Symphony and the guiding spirit behind the Tanglewood annual festival and school activities. The program opens with Moussorgsky's Prelude to "Khovanstchina," which Dr. Koussevitsky performed many times. Miss Tourel will be soloist both in Ravel's "Sheherazade" and in Mahler's Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection") with chorale finale. The soprano role in the latter will be sung by Theresa Green of Baltimore, a Berkshire Music Center student.

Gregor Piatigorsky will be soloist in Darius Milhaud's Concerto for Cello, No. 1 on the Sunday afternoon program, and will team with Joseph de Pasquale, violist of the Boston Symphony in Richard Strauss's "Don Quixote." The portion of the Sunday concert, 2.30 to 4 P. M. will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as commentator.

Tanglewood

Tonight

8.30—Berkshire Festival Concert by Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Music Shed.

Tomorrow

10.00 AM—Public rehearsal of Boston Symphony Orchestra for benefit of pension fund. Music Shed.

*3.00—Organ recital by E. Power Biggs. Music Shed.

Mozart . . . Adagio and Rondo

Antonio Soler . . . Concerto No. 3 in G major
(Two movements)

J. S. Bach . . . Sheep May Safely Graze
(From Birthday Cantata)

J. S. Bach . . . Tocatta and Fugue in D minor

*Open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Tanglewood Soloist

GREGOR PI...

Gregor Pi... loist in Dari... for Cello, N... de Pasqu... Strauss's "D... Sunday a... p.m.) B... by the Bo... estra, Charl... in the Mus... Lenox, Mass.

Eagle

, Friday, Aug. 7, 1953

Public Events

Tonight

8.30—Opening of second series of Berkshire Festival concerts. Tanglewood Shed.

...acy
...en Avenue
Their Relatives,
...ustomers
...ous

OUR VERY BEST WISHES FOR A HAPPY AND PROSPEROUS NEW YEAR

SHARFENBERG'S

PAWTUCKET, RHODE ISLAND

CHURCH NOT...

Bridget's Church
... Housatonic
...nding
...tor,

Miss Sally Dunn and Miss Alma Ives, representing the Young People of Second Church, are attending the Connecticut Congregational Confer...e at Dering, N. H. this week. At ...d of the week, Rev. Charles ... take a group of the Young ...pend three days in the ...ns and will bring ...me.

---

were... and the ... warm, flowing qua...

Aaron Copland was in ... ence to hear his Appalachian Spring. It is one of his best loved scores and one that has delightful bits of drama in the strong, stirring music.

The muted tapping of the snare drum was the opening of a truly dramatic performance of Ravel's Bolero. The soft voices grew in intensity to a great crescendo, bringing the concert to a brilliant ending.

shorte... is delightful ... and piano and fascinati... writing which has a truly pers... stamp. It is hoped that a mastery of style will soon equal Mr. Foss' wealth of creative imagination and pianistic ability.

d ... o- ... ice ... aw- ... hose ... y in ... Pan ... r the ... Pierre ... m with ... Serenade ... mposition ... mself had

... the Fifth ... h was more ... rers than by ... like Hamlet, ... ll of familiar ... ayed with such ... y the accom- ... that it reached ... a freshness and ... ed thunderous ap-

...ermission the First ... in B Flat Minor ... t half of the program ... the highlight of the ... ain Mr. Monteux, aided ... y Cuban soloist Jorge ... ved all hint of tarnish ... tten overplayed and pro- ... mposition. The Concerto ... ew-minted in its perform- ... r. Bolet played with rare ... ty and exquisite coloring. In- ... l notes had shape and limpid ... while the glissandi were bril- ... cascades of sound. Even the musicians in the orchestra were impressed by Bolet's virtuosity and at the conclusion of the piece gave the artist their spontaneous applause. In this they were joined by the audience who recalled the pianist eight times with their stamping, clapping and shouts of approval.

Berkshire Fes... season by... Aug. 7, at... Berlioz's sy... Jennie Tou... cona,' bass... Aug. 8, at... with Jenni... other voca... day, Aug. ... ing, with... ¶ Thursda... "Tanglew... performan... ments, a la... Symphony... Leonard Be... William W... Price, sopr... the lawn. ... Music Cent... Charles Mu... with Lois ... field, barit... Aug. 15, ... ing; no ... 2:30: Cha... mour Lip... Mass.)

TANGL...
BERK...
BOS...
CHARL...
TONIGHT
(Berli...
SAT. (Au...
(Leonard ...
Soloist...
SUN. (Au...
(Soloist...
Rema...
Reserved se...
"TA...
MANY EVE...
Unres. $2.50.

Fo... the ... condu... Charl... gram ... "Rom... Hecto... tomor... of the... festiv...

Sol... Toure... Mosca... Collum...

The ... Hugh ... passage... leading... season.

Miss ... the firs... has su... tra. Bo... parenta... France... debut ... has su... cludin... the P...

Debu...

He... when... with ... Orche... year ... late S... pold S... range ... langua...

IN THE COUNTRY Ny 8/6

Berkshire Festival—Final performances of the season by the Boston Symphony—Friday, Aug. 7, at 8:30: Charles Münch directing Berlioz's symphony "Romeo and Juliet," with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano; Nicola Moscona, bass, and a chorus. . . . ¶ Saturday, Aug. 8, at 8:30: Leonard Bernstein directing, with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, as well as other vocal soloists and a chorus. . . . ¶ Sunday, Aug. 9, at 2:30: Charles Münch conducting, with Gregor Piatigorsky, cello. . . . ¶ Th[illegible] Aug. 13, at 6: The annual "T[illegible]od on Parade" program, including [illegible]es by the various student depart[illegible]n party, a concert by the Boston [illegible] conducted by Charles Münch and [illegible]rnstein, with Isaac Stern, violin; [illegible]arfield, baritone; and Leontyne [illegible]no), door prizes, and waltzing on [illegible]or the benefit of the Berkshire [illegible]r. . . . ¶ Friday, Aug. 14, at 8:30: [illegible]nch directing Brahms' Requiem, [illegible]Marshall, soprano; William War[illegible]ne; and a chorus. . . . ¶ Saturday, [illegible] 8:30: Leonard Bernstein conduct[illegible]loists. . . . ¶ Sunday, Aug. 16, at [illegible]es Münch conducting, with Sey[illegible]in, piano. (Tanglewood, Lenox, M[illegible]

TAN LEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.

BE KSHIRE FESTIVAL

by the

BO TON SYMPHONY

Orchestra

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

TONIGHT (Aug. 7) at 8:30
(Berlioz—"Romeo and Juliet")
SAT. (Aug. 8) at 8:30
(Leonard Bernstein conducting,
Soloist, Jennie Tourel)
SUN. (Aug. 9) at 2:30
(Soloist, Gregor Piatigorsky, Cello)
Remaining Concerts Aug. 14, 15, 16
Reserved seats from $2.50; Gen'l Adm. $2

8/7

Thurs., Aug. 13
"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"
MANY EVENTS—Reserved seats $3, $4, $5.
Unres. $2.50.

Lakeville Journal Aug. 6.

Piatigorsky To Be Soloist Sunday At Festival Concert

there is with the Hunt Bros. Circus, not by any means. For there are acrobats, jugglers, gymnasts, bareback riders, wire walkers and just about every type of circus act that you can think of, all blended into a smooth running, fast moving program, set to the real old time spine tingling circus music of the Hunt Bros. circus band under the direction of Robert Mills, well known circus band leader.

And in addition to the big show there are all the worthwhile features usually connected with circus day.

There is the combined circus menagerie and side show with its many attractions; there is a fast moving wild west or rodeo show headed by Frank Biron; a kiddie Whip ride for the youngsters, as well as popcorn and peanuts, hot dogs and cold drinks, candy floss and ice cream and circus souvenirs.

The Lions of Millerton have tickets for sale now and they benefit to

With Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon, August 7 and 9, with Leonard Bernstein as guest conductor on Saturday evening, August 8, the Berkshire Festival concerts continue this weekend in the 6,000-seat Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

GREGOR PIATIGORSKY, cellist, is soloist in Darius Milhaud's "Concerto for Cello, No. 1," and with Joseph de Pasqudle, viola, in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote," at the Sunday afternoon, August 9 (2:30 p.m.) Berkshire Festival concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, in the Music Shed, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The Friday evening program will be given over in its entirety to Berlioz' dramatic symphony, Romeo and Juliet, which the Boston Symphony gave in its complete version with chorus and soloists last winter for and the guiding spirit behind the Tanglewood annual festival and school activities. The program opens with Moussorgsky's Prelude to Khovanstchina, which Dr. Koussevitzky performed many times. Miss Tourel will be soloist both in Ravel's Sheherazade and in Mahler's Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection") with choral finale. The soprano role in the latter will be sung by Theresa Green, of Baltimore, a Berkshire Music Center student.

Gregor Piatigorsky will be soloist in Darius Milhaud's Concerto for Cello, No. 1 on the Sunday afternoon program, and will team with Joseph de Pasquale, violist of the Boston Symphony in Richard Strauss' Don Quixote. The portion of the Sunday concert, 2:30 to 4:00 p.m., will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as commentator.

THERESA GREEN, soprano, soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. on Saturday, August 8, (8:30 p.m.) in the Mahler Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection"). Jennie Tourel will be the contralto soloist in this work conducted by Leonard Bernstein as a part of the Koussevitzky Memorial Concert.

NICOLA MOSCONA, bass-baritone, soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Friday, August 7, (8:30 p.m.) in the Berlioz Dramatic Symphony "Romeo and Juliet." Jennie Tourel will be the contralto soloist, John McCollum, tenor soloist and the Festival Chorus, made up of Berkshire Music Center students, will take part in this performance which will be the first at Tanglewood in its complete version.

The Series B programs are:

Friday, August 7, at 8:30 p.m., Charles Munch: Berlioz, Romeo and Juliet, Dramatic Symphony, soloists: Jennie Tourel, Nicola Moscona, John McCollum and the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

Saturday, August 8, 8:30 p.m., Leonard Bernstein: Koussevitzky Memorial Concert. Moussorgsky, Prelude to Khovanstchinas Ravel, Sheherazade for Soprano and Orchestra, soloist: Jennie Tourel; Mahler, Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection"), soloists: Jennie Tourel, Theresa Green and the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

Sunday, August 9, 2:30 p.m., Charles Munch: Schubert, Symphony No. 5, in B Flat; Barber, Adagio for Strings; Strauss, Don Quixote (with Cello and Violin Solo), soloists: Gregor Piatigorsky and Joseph De Pasquale; Milhaud, Concerto for Cello, No. 1, soloist: Gregor Piatigorsky; Roussel, Second Suite from Bacchus et Ariane.

'Romeo and Juliet' Tomorrow ~~To Be~~ a Tanglewood 'First'

Eagle 8/6.

Nicola Moscana

Jennie Tourel

For the first time at Tanglewood the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by its music director, Charles Munch, will devote a program to a dramatic symphony. "Romeo and Juliet," composed by Hector Berlioz, will be presented tomorrow evening at the opening of the second series of the major festival in the Music Shed.

Soloists will be Miss Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano and Nicola Moscana, baritone and John McCollum, tenor.

The Festival chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, will sing the choral passages. Mr. McCollum is singing leading roles at Tanglewood this season.

Miss Tourel, who will appear for the first time at Tanglewood, often has sung with the Boston orchestra. Born in Montreal of Russian parentage, she was educated in France and Switzerland, made her debut as Carmen, a role which she has sung more than 300 times, including a performance in 1933 at the Paris Opera-Comique.

Debut as Juliet

Her American debut was in 1942, when she sang the role of Juliet with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra under Toscanini. In that year also she was soloist with the late Serge Koussevitzky and Leopold Stokowski. She has an unusual range of low G to high C. Her nine languages are Russian, French, English, Spanish, Italian, German, Polish, Hebrew and Portuguese.

She has sung many times with the Metropolitan Opera Company and created the role of Baba the Turk at the world premiere in Venice of Stravinsky's opera, "The Rake's Progress," in 1951. Recently she has specialized in song recitals of German and French songs.

Mr. Moscona, who also sings at Tanglewood for the first time, is a native of Athens, Greece. He came to the United States in 1937, and has been a citizen since 1945. Starting his singing career as a choir boy in Athens, he made his professional debut there in "Rigoletto" in 1930 and seven years later appeared in "Aida" on the Metropolitan Opera stage, where he has sung every season since, doing 350 performances in New York and 150 on tour with the company.

Knows 105 Operas

He has sung with most of the leading American and European orchestras, including 26 times with Toscanini. He speaks four languages fluently and sings in seven, with a repertoire of 105 operas. His favorite role is Mephistopheles in Gounod's "Faust."

Returning to Greece in 1949, the bass-baritone was presented the Cross of the Royal Order of Phoenix by King Paul, being the first artist to receive the award. He made his film debut in "The Great Caruso."

Tickets for all Festival performances are on sale at the Tanglewood box office. The grounds will open at 6.30 for the convenience of those who wish to picnic on the lawn. General admission tickets will be sold for listening from the grounds surrounding the Music Shed.

[262]

Post Heels

Berkshire Festival Series Continues At Tanglewood 8/6

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
WORLD-TELEGRAM & SUN
AUG 6 - 1953

Music

Memorial Concert Due At Festival

Lakeville Journal

GRACE NOTES
Tanglewood 8/6
By Charlotte Schuchardt

A rich and rare musical program was offered at the Tanglewood shrine.

Tanglewood

Tonight Eagle
Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Berkshire Festival

by the

BOSTON SYMPHONY

Orchestra

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director Eagle 8/6

FRI., Aug. 7, at 8:30
SAT., Aug. 8, at 8:30
(Leonard Bernstein conducting)
SUN., Aug. 9, at 2:30
(Soloist—PIATIGORSKY, Cello)
Reserved Seats from $2.50
General Admission $2

PUBLIC REHEARSAL—Boston Symphony Orchestra, Sat. A.M. at 10. Adm. $1

THURS., Aug. 13, 6 - 11 PM
(Rain or Shine)

"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"

Boston Symphony
Concert
CHARLES MUNCH
and
LEONARD BERNSTEIN
Conducting
Soloists:
ISSAC STERN
(In Beethoven's Violin Concerto)
LEONTYNE PRICE
Soprano, now starring as "Bess" on Broadway
and
WILLIAM WARFIELD
Bariton, Popular star of "Show Boat and "Porgy and Bess" will appear together with the Orchestra and Festival Chorus in Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess" Act II, Scenes 1 and 2

Berkshire Music Center:
Orchestra—Opera Scenes—
Chorus—Chamber Music
and other events:—
Lawn Party—Picnic Supper
Waltzing on the Lawn
40 Door Prizes

Box Seats, $5, Front Sections (reserved), $4 and $3—Unreserved section—$2.50
Address Box Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.—(Lenox 600)
Or England Brothers, Pittsfield

IN THE COUNTRY

N.Y. 8/6

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Final performances of the season by the Boston Symphony—Friday, Aug. 7, at 8:30: Charles Münch directing Berlioz's symphony "Romeo and Juliet," with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano; Nicola Moscona, bass; and a chorus. . . . ¶ Saturday, Aug. 8, at 8:30: Leonard Bernstein directing, with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, as well as other vocal soloists and a chorus. . . . ¶ Sunday, Aug. 9, at 2:30: Charles Münch conducting, with Gregor Piatigorsky, cello. . . . ¶ Thursday, Aug. 13, at 6: The annual "Tanglewood on Parade" program, including performances by the various student departments, lawn party, a concert by the Boston Symphony (conducted by Charles Münch and Leonard Bernstein, with Isaac Stern, violin; William Warfield, baritone; and Leontyne Price, soprano), door prizes, and waltzing on the lawn for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center. . . . ¶ Friday, Aug. 14, at 8:30: Charles Münch directing Brahms' Requiem, with Marshall, soprano; William Warfield, baritone; and a chorus. . . . ¶ Saturday, Aug. 15, at 8:30: Leonard Bernstein conducting, soloists. . . . ¶ Sunday, Aug. 16, at 2:30: Charles Münch conducting, with Seymour Lipkin, piano. (Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.)

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

by the

BOSTON SYMPHONY

Orchestra

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

TONIGHT (Aug. 7) at 8:30
(Berlioz—"Romeo and Juliet")
SAT. (Aug. 8) at 8:30
(Leonard Bernstein conducting,
Soloist, Jennie Tourel)
SUN. (Aug. 9) at 2:30
(Soloist, Gregor Piatigorsky, Cello)
Remaining Concerts Aug. 14, 15, 16
Reserved seats from $2.50; Gen'l Adm. $2

8/7

Thurs., Aug. 13
"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"
MANY EVENTS—Reserved seats $3, $4, $5.
Unres. $2.50.

'Romeo and Juliet' Tomorrow ~~To Be~~ a Tanglewood 'First'

Eagle 8/6.

Nicola Moscana

Jennie Tourel

For the first time at Tanglewood the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by its music director, Charles Munch, will devote a program to a dramatic symphony. "Romeo and Juliet," composed by Hector Berlioz, will be presented tomorrow evening at the opening of the second series of the major festival in the Music Shed.

Soloists will be Miss Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano and Nicola Moscana, baritone and John McCollum, tenor.

The Festival chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, will sing the choral passages. Mr. McCollum is singing leading roles at Tanglewood this season.

Miss Tourel, who will appear for the first time at Tanglewood, often has sung with the Boston orchestra. Born in Montreal of Russian parentage, she was educated in France and Switzerland, made her debut as Carmen, a role which she has sung more than 300 times, including a performance in 1933 at the Paris Opera-Comique.

Debut as Juliet

Her American debut was in 1942, when she sang the role of Juliet with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra under Toscanini. In that year also she was soloist with the late Serge Koussevitzky and Leopold Stokowski. She has an unusual range of low G to high C. Her nine languages are Russian, French, English, Spanish, Italian, German, Polish, Hebrew and Portuguese.

She has sung many times with the Metropolitan Opera Company and created the role of Baba the Turk at the world premiere in Venice of Stravinsky's opera, "The Rake's Progress," in 1951. Recently she has specialized in song recitals of German and French songs.

Mr. Moscona, who also sings at Tanglewood for the first time, is a native of Athens, Greece. He came to the United States in 1937, and has been a citizen since 1945. Starting his singing career as a choir boy in Athens, he made his professional debut there in "Rigoletto" in 1930 and seven years later appeared in "Aida" on the Metropolitan Opera stage, where he has sung every season since, doing 350 performances in New York and 150 on tour with the company.

Knows 105 Operas

He has sung with most of the leading American and European orchestras, including 26 times with Toscanini. He speaks four languages fluently and sings in seven, with a repertoire of 105 operas. His favorite role is Mephistopheles in Gounod's "Faust."

Returning to Greece in 1949, the bass-baritone was presented the Cross of the Royal Order of Phoenix by King Paul, being the first artist to receive the award. He made his film debut in "The Great Caruso."

Tickets for all Festival performances are on sale at the Tanglewood box office. The grounds will open at 6.30 for the convenience of those who wish to picnic on the lawn. General admission tickets will be sold for listening from the grounds surrounding the Music Shed.

[262]

Lakeville Journal Aug. 6.

Piatigorsky To Be Soloist Sunday At Festival Concert

there is with the Hunt Bros. Circus, not by any means. For, there are acrobats, jugglers, gymnasts, bareback riders, wire walkers and just about every type of circus act that you can think of, all blended into a smooth running, fast moving program, set to the real old time spine tingling circus music of the Hunt Bros. circus band under the direction of Robert Mills, well known circus band leader.

And in addition to the big show there are all the worthwhile features usually connected with circus day.

There is the combined circus menagerie and side show with its many attractions; there is a fast moving wild west or rodeo show headed by Frank Biron; a kiddie Whip ride for the youngsters, as well as popcorn and peanuts, hot dogs and cold drinks, candy floss and ice cream and circus souvenirs.

The Lions of Millerton have tickets for sale now and they benefit to

With Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon, August 7 and 9, with Leonard Bernstein as guest conductor on Saturday evening, August 8, the Berkshire Festival concerts continue this weekend in the 6,000-seat Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

GREGOR PIATIGORSKY, cellist, is soloist in Darius Milhaud's "Concerto for Cello, No. 1," and with Joseph de Pasquale, viola, in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote," at the Sunday afternoon, August 9 (2:30 p.m.) Berkshire Festival concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, in the Music Shed, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The Friday evening program will be given over in its entirety to Berlioz' dramatic symphony, Romeo and Juliet, which the Boston Symphony gave in its complete version with chorus and soloists last winter for and the guiding spirit behind the Tanglewood annual festival and school activities. The program opens with Moussorgsky's Prelude to Khovanstchina, which Dr. Koussevitzky performed many times. Miss Tourel will be soloist both in Ravel's Sheherazade and in Mahler's Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection") with choral finale. The soprano role in the latter will be sung by Theresa Green, of Baltimore, a Berkshire Music Center student.

Gregor Piatigorsky will be soloist in Darius Milhaud's Concerto for Cello, No. 1 on the Sunday afternoon program, and will team with Joseph de Pasquale, violist of the Boston Symphony in Richard Strauss' Don Quixote. The portion of the Sunday concert, 2:30 to 4:00 p.m., will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as commentator.

THERESA GREEN, soprano, soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. on Saturday, August 8, (8:30 p.m.) in the Mahler Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection"). Jennie Tourel will be the contralto soloist in this work conducted by Leonard Bernstein as a part of the Koussevitzky Memorial Concert.

NICOLA MOSCONA, bass-baritone, soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Friday, August 7, (8:30 p.m.) in the Berlioz Dramatic Symphony "Romeo and Juliet." Jennie Tourel will be the contralto soloist, John McCollum, tenor soloist and the Festival Chorus, made up of Berkshire Music Center students, will take part in this performance which will be the first at Tanglewood in its complete version.

The Series B programs are:

Friday, August 7, at 8:30 p.m., Charles Munch: Berlioz, Romeo and Juliet, Dramatic Symphony, soloists: Jennie Tourel, Nicola Moscona, John McCollum and the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

Saturday, August 8, 8:30 p.m., Leonard Bernstein: Koussevitzky Memorial Concert. Moussorgsky, Prelude to Khovanstchinas Ravel, Sheherazade for Soprano and Orchestra, soloist: Jennie Tourel; Mahler, Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection"), soloists: Jennie Tourel, Theresa Green and the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

Sunday, August 9, 2:30 p.m., Charles Munch: Schubert, Symphony No. 5, in B Flat; Barber, Adagio for Strings; Strauss, Don Quixote (with Cello and Violin Solo), soloists: Gregor Piatigorsky and Joseph De Pasquale; Milhaud, Concerto for Cello, No. 1, soloist: Gregor Piatigorsky; Roussel, Second Suite from Bacchus et Ariane.

Berkshire Festival Series Continues At Tanglewood

8/6

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
WORLD-TELEGRAM & SUN
AUG 6 - 1953

Music

Memorial Concert Due At Festival

Berkshire Courier

GRACE NOTES
Tanglewood

8/6

By Charlotte Schuchardt

A rich and rare musical program was offered at the Tanglewood

---

Tanglewood

Tonight

Eagle

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Berkshire Festival

by the

BOSTON SYMPHONY

Orchestra

Eagle 8/6

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

FRI., Aug. 7, at 8:30
SAT., Aug. 8, at 8:30
(Leonard Bernstein conducting)
SUN., Aug. 9, at 2:30
(Soloist—PIATIGORSKY, Cello)
Reserved Seats from $2.50
General Admission $2

PUBLIC REHEARSAL—Boston Symphony Orchestra, Sat. A.M. at 10. Adm. $1

THURS., Aug. 13, 6 - 11 PM
(Rain or Shine)

"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"

Boston Symphony
Concert
CHARLES MUNCH
and
LEONARD BERNSTEIN
Conducting

Soloists:
ISSAC STERN
(In Beethoven's Violin Concerto)
LEONTYNE PRICE
Soprano, now starring as "Bess" on Broadway
and
WILLIAM WARFIELD
Bariton, Popular star of "Show Boat and "Porgy and Bess" will appear together with the Orchestra and Festival Chorus in Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess"
Act II, Scenes 1 and 2

Berkshire Music Center:
Orchestra—Opera Scenes—
Chorus—Chamber Music
and other events:—
Lawn Party—Picnic Supper
Waltzing on the Lawn
40 Door Prizes

Box Seats, $5, Front Sections (reserved), $4 and $3—Unreserved section—$2.50
Address Box Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.—(Lenox 600)
Or England Brothers, Pittsfield

IN THE COUNTRY NYr 8/6

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Final performances of the season by the Boston Symphony—Friday, Aug. 7, at 8:30: Charles Münch directing Berlioz's symphony "Romeo and Juliet," with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano; Nicola Moscona, bass, and a chorus. . . . ¶ Saturday, Aug. 8, at 8:30: Leonard Bernstein directing, with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, as well as other vocal soloists and a chorus. . . . ¶ Sunday, Aug. 9, at 2:30: Charles Münch conducting, with Gregor Piatigorsky, cello. . . . ¶ Th[illegible]y, Aug. 13, at 6: The annual Ta[illegible]od on Parade" program, including [illegible]es by the various student depart[illegible]n party, a concert by the Boston [illegible] conducted by Charles Münch and [illegible]rnstein, with Isaac Stern, violin; [illegible]arfield, baritone; and Leontyne [illegible]no), door prizes, and waltzing on [illegible]or the benefit of the Berkshire [illegible]r. . . . ¶ Friday, Aug. 14, at 8:30: [illegible]nch directing Brahms' Requiem, [illegible]arshall, soprano; William Warne; and a chorus. . . . ¶ Saturday, 8:30: Leonard Bernstein conduct[illegible]loists. . . . ¶ Sunday, Aug. 16, at [illegible]les Münch conducting, with Sey[illegible]in, piano. (Tanglewood, Lenox,

---

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

by the

BOSTON SYMPHONY

Orchestra

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

TONIGHT (Aug. 7) at 8:30

(Berlioz—"Romeo and Juliet")

SAT. (Aug. 8) at 8:30

(Leonard Bernstein conducting,

Soloist, Jennie Tourel)

SUN. (Aug. 9) at 2:30

(Soloist, Gregor Piatigorsky, Cello)

Remaining Concerts Aug. 14, 15, 16

Reserved seats from $2.50; Gen'l Adm. $2

Thurs., Aug. 13

"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"

MANY EVENTS—Reserved seats $3, $4, $5. Unres. $2.50.

8/7

Lakeville Journal Aug. 6.

Piatigorsky To Be Soloist Sunday At Festival Concert

there is with the Hunt Bros. Circus, not by any means. For there are acrobats, jugglers, gymnasts, bareback riders, wire walkers and just about every type of circus act that you can think of, all blended into a smooth running, fast moving program, set to the real old time spine tingling circus music of the Hunt Bros. circus band under the direction of Robert Mills, well known circus band leader.

And in addition to the big show there are all the worthwhile features usually connected with circus day.

There is the combined circus menagerie and side show with its many attractions; there is a fast moving wild west or rodeo show headed by Frank Biron; a kiddie Whip ride for the youngsters, as well as popcorn and peanuts, hot dogs and cold drinks, candy floss and ice cream and circus souvenirs.

The Lions of Millerton have tickets for sale now and they benefit to

With Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon, August 7 and 9, with Leonard Bernstein as guest conductor on Saturday evening, August 8, the Berkshire Festival concerts continue this weekend in the 6,000-seat Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

GREGOR PIATIGORSKY, cellist, is soloist in Darius Milhaud's "Concerto for Cello, No. 1," and with Joseph de Pasqudle, viola, in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote," at the Sunday afternoon, August 9 (2:30 p.m.) Berkshire Festival concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, in the Music Shed, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The Friday evening program will be given over in its entirety to Berlioz' dramatic symphony, Romeo and Juliet, which the Boston Symphony gave in its complete version with chorus and soloists last winter for and the guiding spirit behind the Tanglewood annual festival and school activities. The program opens with Moussorgsky's Prelude to Khovanstchina, which Dr. Koussevitzky performed many times. Miss Tourel will be soloist both in Ravel's Sheherazade and in Mahler's Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection") with choral finale. The soprano role in the latter will be sung by Theresa Green, of Baltimore, a Berkshire Music Center student.

Gregor Piatigorsky will be soloist in Darius Milhaud's Concerto for Cello, No. 1 on the Sunday afternoon program, and will team with Joseph de Pasquale, violist of the Boston Symphony in Richard Strauss' Don Quixote. The portion of the Sunday concert, 2:30 to 4:00 p.m., will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as commentator.

THERESA GREEN, soprano, soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. on Saturday, August 8, (8:30 p.m.) in the Mahler Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection"). Jennie Tourel will be the contralto soloist in this work conducted by Leonard Bernstein as a part of the Koussevitzky Memorial Concert.

NICOLA MOSCONA, bass-baritone, soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Friday, August 7, (8:30 p.m.) in the Berlioz Dramatic Symphony "Romeo and Juliet." Jennie Tourel will be the contralto soloist, John McCollum, tenor soloist and the Festival Chorus, made up of Berkshire Music Center students, will take part in this performance which will be the first at Tanglewood in its complete version.

The Series B programs are:

Friday, August 7, at 8:30 p.m., Charles Munch: Berlioz, Romeo and Juliet, Dramatic Symphony, soloists: Jennie Tourel, Nicola Moscona, John McCollum and the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

Saturday, August 8, 8:30 p.m., Leonard Bernstein: Koussevitzky Memorial Concert. Moussorgsky, Prelude to Khovanstchinas Ravel, Sheherazade for Soprano and Orchestra, soloist: Jennie Tourel; Mahler, Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection"), soloists: Jennie Tourel, Theresa Green and the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

Sunday, August 9, 2:30 p.m., Charles Munch: Schubert, Symphony No. 5, in B Flat; Barber, Adagio for Strings; Strauss, Don Quixote (with Cello and Violin Solo), soloists: Gregor Piatigorsky and Joseph De Pasquale; Milhaud, Concerto for Cello, No. 1, soloist: Gregor Piatigorsky; Roussel, Second Suite from Bacchus et Ariane.

'Romeo and Juliet' Tomorrow To Be a Tanglewood 'First'

Eagle 8/6

Nicola Moscana

Jennie Tourel

For the first time at Tanglewood the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by its music director, Charles Munch, will devote a program to a dramatic symphony. "Romeo and Juliet," composed by Hector Berlioz, will be presented tomorrow evening at the opening of the second series of the major festival in the Music Shed.

Soloists will be Miss Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano and Nicola Moscana, baritone and John McCollum, tenor.

The Festival chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, will sing the choral passages. Mr. McCollum is singing leading roles at Tanglewood this season.

Miss Tourel, who will appear for the first time at Tanglewood, often has sung with the Boston orchestra. Born in Montreal of Russian parentage, she was educated in France and Switzerland, made her debut as Carmen, a role which she has sung more than 300 times, including a performance in 1933 at the Paris Opera-Comique.

Debut as Juliet

Her American debut was in 1942, when she sang the role of Juliet with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra under Toscanini. In that year also she was soloist with the late Serge Koussevitzky and Leopold Stokowski. She has an unusual range of low G to high C. Her nine languages are Russian, French, English, Spanish, Italian, German, Polish, Hebrew and Portuguese.

She has sung many times with the Metropolitan Opera Company and created the role of Baba the Turk at the world premiere in Venice of Stravinsky's opera, "The Rake's Progress," in 1951. Recently she has specialized in song recitals of German and French songs.

Mr. Moscona, who also sings at Tanglewood for the first time, is a native of Athens, Greece. He came to the United States in 1937, and has been a citizen since 1945. Starting his singing career as a choir boy in Athens, he made his professional debut there in "Rigoletto" in 1930 and seven years later appeared in "Aida" on the Metropolitan Opera stage, where he has sung every season since, doing 350 performances in New York and 150 on tour with the company.

Knows 105 Operas

He has sung with most of the leading American and European orchestras, including 26 times with Toscanini. He speaks four languages fluently and sings in seven, with a repertoire of 105 operas. His favorite role is Mephistopheles in Gounod's "Faust."

Returning to Greece in 1949, the bass-baritone was presented the Cross of the Royal Order of Phoenix by King Paul, being the first artist to receive the award. He made his film debut in "The Great Caruso."

Tickets for all Festival performances are on sale at the Tanglewood box office. The grounds will open at 6.30 for the convenience of those who wish to picnic on the lawn. General admission tickets will be sold for listening from the grounds surrounding the Music Shed.

Tonight Eagle

8.30—Symphony concert by student orchestra, Irving Fine, Seymour Lipkin and students conducting. Music Shed. Open to Friends of Berkshire Music Center.

8/6

Chavez To Introduce Violin Concerto Tomorrow

In the lecture series for students, "Special Aspects of Music," tomorrow afternoon at 3.15, in the Chamber Music Hall, Carlos Chavez, guest teacher of composition from Mexico, will introduce to Tanglewood his violin concerto first performed in Los Angeles last year. The composition, with commentary by the composer, will be analyzed by Barney Childs. It will be performed by guest artists: Viviane Bertolani, New York violinist, who played the solo in the premiere performance, and Harry Kondaks, pianist, of Boston.

Friends of the Berkshire Music Center are invited.

Samuel Krachmalnick, brother Jacob Krachmalnick, former Tanglewood student who now is concertmaster of the Philadelphia Orchestra, has left New York to conduct the subway circuit tour of the musical comedy, "Top Banana." While a conducting student of Leonard Bernstein at the Berkshire Music Center, the younger Krachmalnick, 27, of St. Louis, directed the orchestra for Monday's performance of Debussy's one-act opera, "L'Enfant Prodigue," and conducted the student orchestra in two of its weekly performances in the Music Shed.

Most recent foreign student at the school is Jaap Drielsma, of the Amsterdam (Holland) Conservatory of Music, a concert pianist who is a member of the Tanglewood Study Group.

---

operas.

the father in L'Enfant Prodigue, and in An Incomplete Education he portrayed the tutor with delightful finesse.

No Berkshire Festival would be complete without such a tribute to Serge Koussevitzky. Tanglewood is his monument, and his epitaph is written on every bar of music heard in that beautiful summer shrine.

[262]

IN THE COUNTRY NYT 8/6

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Final performances of the season by the Boston Symphony—Friday, Aug. 7, at 8:30: Charles Münch directing Berlioz's symphony "Romeo and Juliet," with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano; Nicola Moscona, bass, and a chorus. . . . ¶ Saturday, Aug. 8, at 8:30: Leonard Bernstein directing, with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, as well as other vocal soloists and a chorus. . . . ¶ Sunday, Aug. 9, at 2:30: Charles Münch conducting, with Gregor Piatigorsky, cello. . . . ¶ Th Aug. 13, at 6: The annual T od on Parade" program, including es by the various student depart n party, a concert by the Boston conducted by Charles Münch and rnstein, with Isaac Stern, violin; arfield, baritone; and Leontyne no), door prizes, and waltzing on or the benefit of the Berkshire r. . . . ¶ Friday, Aug. 14, at 8:30: nch directing Brahms' Requiem, larshall, soprano; William Warne; and a chorus. . . . ¶ Saturday, 8:30: Leonard Bernstein conduct oists. . . . ¶ Sunday, Aug. 16, at les Münch conducting, with Sey in, piano. (Tanglewood, Lenox,

---

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

by the

BOSTON SYMPHONY

Orchestra

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

TONIGHT (Aug. 7) at 8:30
(Berlioz—"Romeo and Juliet")
SAT. (Aug. 8) at 8:30
(Leonard Bernstein conducting,
soloist, Jennie Tourel)
SUN. (Aug. 9) at 2:30
(Soloist, Gregor Piatigorsky, Cello)
Remaining Concerts Aug. 14, 15, 16
Reserved seats from $2.50; Gen'l Adm. $2

Thurs., Aug. 13
"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"
MANY EVENTS—Reserved seats $3, $4, $5.
[illegible] $2.50.

8/7

Lakeville Journal Aug. 6.

Piatigorsky To Be Soloist Sunday At Festival Concert

there is with the Hunt Bros. Circus, not by any means. For there are acrobats, jugglers, gymnasts, bareback riders, wire walkers and just about every type of circus act that you can think of, all blended into a smooth running, fast moving program, set to the real old time spine tingling circus music of the Hunt Bros. circus band under the direction of Robert Mills, well known circus band leader.

And in addition to the big show there are all the worthwhile features usually connected with circus day.

There is the combined circus menagerie and side show with its many attractions; there is a fast moving wild west or rodeo show headed by Frank Biron; a kiddie Whip ride for the youngsters, as well as popcorn and peanuts, hot dogs and cold drinks, candy floss and ice cream and circus souvenirs.

The Lions of Millerton have tickets for sale now and they benefit to

With Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon, August 7 and 9, with Leonard Bernstein as guest conductor on Saturday evening, August 8, the Berkshire Festival concerts continue this weekend in the 6,000-seat Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

GREGOR PIATIGORSKY, cellist, is soloist in Darius Milhaud's "Concerto for Cello, No. 1," and with Joseph de Pasqudle, viola, in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote," at the Sunday afternoon, August 9 (2:30 p.m.) Berkshire Festival concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, in the Music Shed, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The Friday evening program will be given over in its entirety to Berlioz' dramatic symphony, Romeo and Juliet, which the Boston Symphony gave in its complete version with chorus and soloists last winter for and the guiding spirit behind the Tanglewood annual festival and school activities. The program opens with Moussorgsky's Prelude to Khovanstchina, which Dr. Koussevitzky performed many times. Miss Tourel will be soloist both in Ravel's Sheherazade and in Mahler's Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection") with choral finale. The soprano role in the latter will be sung by Theresa Green, of Baltimore, a Berkshire Music Center student.

Gregor Piatigorsky will be soloist in Darius Milhaud's Concerto for Cello, No. 1 on the Sunday afternoon program, and will team with Joseph de Pasquale, violist of the Boston Symphony in Richard Strauss' Don Quixote. The portion of the Sunday

THERESA GREEN, soprano, soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. on Saturday, August 8, (8:30 p.m.) in the Mahler Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection"). Jennie Tourel will be the contralto soloist in this work conducted by Leonard Bernstein as a part of the Koussevitzky Memorial Concert.

NICOLA MOSCONA, bass-baritone, soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Friday, August 7, (8:30 p.m.) in the Berlioz Dramatic Symphony "Romeo and Juliet." Jennie Tourel will be the contralto soloist, John McCollum, tenor soloist and the Festival Chorus, made up of Berkshire Music Center students, will take part in this performance which will be the first at Tanglewood in its complete version.

concert, 2:30 to 4:00 p.m., will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as commentator.

The Series B programs are:

Friday, August 7, at 8:30 p.m., Charles Munch: Berlioz, Romeo and Juliet, Dramatic Symphony, soloists: Jennie Tourel, Nicola Moscona, John McCollum and the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

Saturday, August 8, 8:30 p.m., Leonard Bernstein: Koussevitzky Memorial Concert. Moussorgsky, Prelude to Khovanstchinas Ravel, Sheherazade for Soprano and Orchestra, soloist: Jennie Tourel; Mahler, Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection"), soloists: Jennie Tourel, Theresa Green and the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

Sunday, August 9, 2:30 p.m., Charles Munch: Schubert, Symphony No. 5, in B Flat; Barber, Adagio for Strings; Strauss, Don Quixote (with Cello and Violin Solo), soloists: Gregor Piatigorsky and Joseph De Pasquale; Milhaud, Concerto for Cello, No. 1, soloist: Gregor Piatigorsky; Roussel, Second Suite from Bacchus et Ariane.

'Romeo and Juliet' Tomorrow ~~To Be~~ made a Tanglewood 'First' 8/6.

Nicola Moscana

Jennie Tourel

For the first time at Tanglewood the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by its music director, Charles Munch, will devote a program to a dramatic symphony. "Romeo and Juliet," composed by Hector Berlioz, will be presented tomorrow evening at the opening of the second series of the major festival in the Music Shed.

Soloists will be Miss Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano and Nicola Moscana, baritone and John McCollum, tenor.

The Festival chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, will sing the choral passages. Mr. McCollum is singing leading roles at Tanglewood this season.

Miss Tourel, who will appear for the first time at Tanglewood, often has sung with the Boston orchestra. Born in Montreal of Russian parentage, she was educated in France and Switzerland, made her debut as Carmen, a role which she has sung more than 300 times, including a performance in 1933 at the Paris Opera-Comique.

Debut as Juliet

Her American debut was in 1942, when she sang the role of Juliet with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra under Toscanini. In that year also she was soloist with the late Serge Koussevitzky and Leopold Stokowski. She has an unusual range of low G to high C. Her nine languages are Russian, French, English, Spanish, Italian, German, Polish, Hebrew and Portuguese.

She has sung many times with the Metropolitan Opera Company and created the role of Baba the Turk at the world premiere in Venice of Stravinsky's opera, "The Rake's Progress," in 1951. Recently she has specialized in song recitals of German and French songs.

Mr. Moscona, who also sings at Tanglewood for the first time, is a native of Athens, Greece. He came to the United States in 1937, and has been a citizen since 1945. Starting his singing career as a choir boy in Athens, he made his professional debut there in "Rigoletto" in 1930 and seven years later appeared in "Aida" on the Metropolitan Opera stage, where he has sung every season since, doing 350 performances in New York and 150 on tour with the company.

Knows 105 Operas

He has sung with most of the leading American and European orchestras, including 26 times with Toscanini. He speaks four languages fluently and sings in seven, with a repertoire of 105 operas. His favorite role is Mephistopheles in Gounod's "Faust."

Returning to Greece in 1949, the bass-baritone was presented the Cross of the Royal Order of Phoenix by King Paul, being the first artist to receive the award. He made his film debut in "The Great Caruso."

Tickets for all Festival performances are on sale at the Tanglewood box office. The grounds will open at 6.30 for the convenience of those who wish to picnic on the lawn. General admission tickets will be sold for listening from the grounds surrounding the Music Shed.

Taft Leaves Estate to Widow

CINCINNATI (AP)—The late Senator Robert A. Taft set up two trust funds in his will after leaving all personal effects to his widow, Mrs. Martha Taft.

One fund set aside 49 per cent of his assets, from which Mrs. Taft will receive the income for life. Later it will be disposed of as she sees fit.

The other 51 per cent of his assets also go to her for life and, upon her death, is to be divided in equal shares among the four sons, William Howard Taft, 3d, ambassador to Ireland; Robert A. Taft Jr.; Lloyd B. Taft and Horace D. Taft.

Robert A. Taft Jr., was named executor and trustee. No estimate of the estate was made.

The will was made June 12, after the senator learned about his serious condition.

Theater-Concert Hall Monday evening, August 3, by the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center. The three one-act operas, Gluck's L'Yvrogne Corrige (The Drunkard Reformed), Debussy's L'Enfant Prodigue (The Prodigal Son) and Chabrier's Une Education Manquee (An Incomplete Education) gave a very appreciative audience a varied fare of gaiety and eloquent depth of feeling.

For Gluck's opera of 1760 the English text by Giovanni Cardelli was used, translated from the libretto of L. Anseaume. Debussy's opera (1884) was sung in French with E. Guinand's libretto. Chabrier's opera (1879) was in English, using Henry Reese's translation of the text by Eugene Leterrier and Albert Vanloo. The operas were produced by Boris Goldovsky, head of the Opera Department, and were staged by him and Sarah Caldwell. The Orchestra of Department I conducted by Samuel Krachmalnick performed Debussy's music; Mr. Goldovsky played the piano accompaniment for the Gluck and Chabrier operas. For all three the settings and lighting (by John Blankenchip) and the costumes (by Leo van Witsen) were very effectively designed. The choreography for the Furies, Demons and Sprites of the "underworld" into which The Drunkard was led was done by Leo Kharibian, as well as for the eleven dancers, including Mr. Kharibian himself, in L'Enfant Prodigue.

The entire cast gave an able performance, but two should be given special mention: Anne English, whose excellent voice and acting as Lia, the mother, in Debussy's opera was deeply moving; and Lee Cass, who participated in two of the operas. Mr. Cass took the part of the father in L'Enfant Prodigue, and in An Incomplete Education he portrayed the tutor with delightful finesse.

No Berkshire Festival would be complete without such a tribute to Serge Koussevitzky. Tanglewood is his monument, and his epitaph is written on every bar of music heard in that beautiful summer shrine.

[262]

IN THE COUNTRY NY T 8/6

Berkshire Festival—Final performances of the season by the Boston Symphony—Friday, Aug. 7, at 8:30: Charles Münch directing Berlioz's symphony "Romeo and Juliet," with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano; Nicola Moscona, bass, and a chorus. . . . ¶ Saturday, Aug. 8, at 8:30: Leonard Bernstein directing, with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, as well as other vocal soloists and a chorus. . . . ¶ Sunday, Aug. 9, at 2:30: Charles Münch conducting, with Gregor Piatigorsky, cello. . . . ¶ Th . . . y, Aug. 13, at 6: The annual T . . . od on Parade" program, including . . . es by the various student depart- . . . n party, a concert by the Boston . . . (conducted by Charles Münch and . . . rnstein, with Isaac Stern, violin; . . . arfield, baritone; and Leontyne . . . no), door prizes, and waltzing on . . . or the benefit of the Berkshire . . . r. . . . ¶ Friday, Aug. 14, at 8:30: . . . nch directing Brahms' Requiem, . . . Marshall, soprano; William Warne; and a chorus. . . . ¶ Saturday, . . . 8:30: Leonard Bernstein conduct- . . . loists. . . . ¶ Sunday, Aug. 16, at . . . les Münch conducting, with Sey- . . . in, piano. (Tanglewood, Lenox,

---

TAN LEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.

BE KSHIRE FESTIVAL

by the

BO TON SYMPHONY

Orchestra

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

TONIGHT (Aug. 7) at 8:30
(Berlioz—"Romeo and Juliet")
SAT. (Aug. 8) at 8:30
(Leonard Bernstein conducting,
Soloist, Jennie Tourel)
SUN. (Aug. 9) at 2:30
(Soloist, Gregor Piatigorsky, Cello)
Remaining Concerts Aug. 14, 15, 16
Reserved seats from $2.50; Gen'l Adm. $2

8/7

Thurs., Aug. 13
"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"
MANY EVENTS—Reserved seats $3, $4, $5.
. . . $2.50.

Lakeville Journal Aug. 6.

Piatigorsky To Be Soloist Sunday At Festival Concert

there is with the Hunt Bros. Circus, not by any means. For there are acrobats, jugglers, gymnasts, bareback riders, wire walkers and just about every type of circus act that you can think of, all blended into a smooth running, fast moving program, set to the real old time spine tingling circus music of the Hunt Bros. circus band under the direction of Robert Mills, well known circus band leader.

And in addition to the big show there are all the worthwhile features usually connected with circus day.

There is the combined circus menagerie and side show with its many attractions; there is a fast moving wild west or rodeo show headed by Frank Biron; a kiddie Whip ride for the youngsters, as well as popcorn and peanuts, hot dogs and cold drinks, candy floss and ice cream and circus souvenirs.

The Lions of Millerton have tickets for sale now and they benefit to

With Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon, August 7 and 9, with Leonard Bernstein as guest conductor on Saturday evening, August 8, the Berkshire Festival concerts continue this weekend in the 6,000-seat Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

GREGOR PIATIGORSKY, cellist, is soloist in Darius Milhaud's "Concerto for Cello, No. 1," and with Joseph de Pasqudle, viola, in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote," at the Sunday afternoon, August 9 (2:30 p.m.) Berkshire Festival concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, in the Music Shed, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The Friday evening program will be given over in its entirety to Berlioz' dramatic symphony, Romeo and Juliet, which the Boston Symphony gave in its complete version with chorus and soloists last winter for and the guiding spirit behind the Tanglewood annual festival and school activities. The program opens with Moussorgsky's Prelude to Khovanstchina, which Dr. Koussevitzky performed many times. Miss Tourel will be soloist both in Ravel's Sheherazade and in Mahler's Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection") with choral finale. The soprano role in the latter will be sung by Theresa Green, of Baltimore, a Berkshire Music Center student.

Gregor Piatigorsky will be soloist in Darius Milhaud's Concerto for Cello, No. 1 on the Sunday afternoon program, and will team with Joseph de Pasquale, violist of the Boston Symphony in Richard Strauss' Don Quixote. The portion of the Sunday concert, 2:30 to 4:00 p.m., will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as commentator.

THERESA GREEN, soprano, soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. on Saturday, August 8, (8:30 p.m.) in the Mahler Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection"). Jennie Tourel will be the contralto soloist in this work conducted by Leonard Bernstein as a part of the Koussevitzky Memorial Concert.

NICOLA MOSCONA, bass-baritone, soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Friday, August 7, (8:30 p.m.) in the Berlioz Dramatic Symphony "Romeo and Juliet." Jennie Tourel will be the contralto soloist, John McCollum, tenor soloist and the Festival Chorus, made up of Berkshire Music Center students, will take part in this performance which will be the first at Tanglewood in its complete version.

The Series B programs are:

Friday, August 7, at 8:30 p.m., Charles Munch: Berlioz, Romeo and Juliet, Dramatic Symphony, soloists: Jennie Tourel, Nicola Moscona, John McCollum and the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

Saturday, August 8, 8:30 p.m., Leonard Bernstein: Koussevitzky Memorial Concert. Moussorgsky, Prelude to Khovanstchinas Ravel, Sheherazade for Soprano and Orchestra, soloist: Jennie Tourel; Mahler, Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection"), soloists: Jennie Tourel, Theresa Green and the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

Sunday, August 9, 2:30 p.m., Charles Munch: Schubert, Symphony No. 5, in B Flat; Barber, Adagio for Strings; Strauss, Don Quixote (with Cello and Violin Solo), soloists: Gregor Piatigorsky and Joseph De Pasquale; Milhaud, Concerto for Cello, No. 1, soloist: Gregor Piatigorsky; Roussel, Second Suite from Bacchus et Ariane.

'Romeo and Juliet' Tomorrow ~~To Be~~ Eagle a Tanglewood 'First' 8/6.

Nicola Moscana

Jennie Tourel

For the first time at Tanglewood the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by its music director, Charles Munch, will devote a program to a dramatic symphony. "Romeo and Juliet," composed by Hector Berlioz, will be presented tomorrow evening at the opening of the second series of the major festival in the Music Shed.

Soloists will be Miss Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano and Nicola Moscana, baritone and John McCollum, tenor.

The Festival chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, will sing the choral passages. Mr. McCollum is singing leading roles at Tanglewood this season.

Miss Tourel, who will appear for the first time at Tanglewood, often has sung with the Boston orchestra. Born in Montreal of Russian parentage, she was educated in France and Switzerland, made her debut as Carmen, a role which she has sung more than 300 times, including a performance in 1933 at the Paris Opera-Comique.

Debut as Juliet

Her American debut was in 1942, when she sang the role of Juliet with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra under Toscanini. In that year also she was soloist with the late Serge Koussevitzky and Leopold Stokowski. She has an unusual range of low G to high C. Her nine languages are Russian, French, English, Spanish, Italian, German, Polish, Hebrew and Portuguese.

She has sung many times with the Metropolitan Opera Company and created the role of Baba the Turk at the world premiere in Venice of Stravinsky's opera, "The Rake's Progress," in 1951. Recently she has specialized in song recitals of German and French songs.

Mr. Moscona, who also sings at Tanglewood for the first time, is a native of Athens, Greece. He came to the United States in 1937, and has been a citizen since 1945. Starting his singing career as a choir boy in Athens, he made his professional debut there in "Rigoletto" in 1930 and seven years later appeared in "Aida" on the Metropolitan Opera stage, where he has sung every season since, doing 350 performances in New York and 150 on tour with the company.

Knows 105 Operas

He has sung with most of the leading American and European orchestras, including 26 times with Toscanini. He speaks four languages fluently and sings in seven, with a repertoire of 105 operas. His favorite role is Mephistopheles in Gounod's "Faust."

Returning to Greece in 1949, the bass-baritone was presented the Cross of the Royal Order of Phoenix by King Paul, being the first artist to receive the award. He made his film debut in "The Great Caruso."

Tickets for all Festival performances are on sale at the Tanglewood box office. The grounds will open at 6.30 for the convenience of those who wish to picnic on the lawn. General admission tickets will be sold for listening from the grounds surrounding the Music Shed.

---

which . . . The two pieces of the program . . . succubus into a benign spirit. . . . ishes the terror and transforms the struggling sleeper who finally ban- larly effective in the role of the fitful, and Mr. Limon was particu- mind can conjure up when sleep is grotesque figures which the troubled Night Spell concentrates on the Major, and the Fugue in C Minor; Mozart's Fantasy and Fugue in C four, and six figures, was set to purely abstract, executed by two, different in mood and execution: the group's Artistic Director, were very ographed by Doris Humphrey, the two largely abstract pieces, chore- six members of the company. The satility of the field as well as of the were well planned to show the ver- up the program for Friday evening The four major works which made ordinary group. over by the brilliance of this extra-

SALE

By LOUIS BIANCOLLI.

The memory of two celebrated men of music will be honored in the performance at the Berkshire Festival this weekend.

Tomorrow night Charles Munch will devote the entire program to the "Romeo and Juliet" symphony of Hector Berlioz, whose 150th anniversary is being observed this year.

Saturday night Leonard Bernstein will give over the complete program in the large shed the memory of Serge Koussevitzky, without whose tireless campaigning and unwavering vision there would never have been a Berkshire Festival.

Fourth 'B'.

This is the year Berlioz seems at last to have come into his own as the fourth 'B' of music. The revival of much of his neglected works has served to emphasize his true stature among the giants of the repertory.

Without this revived interest, it is possible that we should have had to wait still longer for another complete performance of the symphony which is regarded as perhaps the greatest tribute to Shakespeare in music.

There are three main sections to the symphony, with twelve subdivisions which are themselves further divided. With the soloists and chorus, it makes a whole evening of vocal and symphonic music almost unparalleled outside of Mahler.

Former Protege.

Which brings us to Mr. Bernstein's memorial program. This will feature Mahler's Second Symphony, known as the "Resurrection" symphony, a massive score that also calls for soloists and chorus. Jennie Tourel will be heard in both works.

It is fitting that Mr. Bernstein should direct the Koussevitzky concert. He was for some years the artistic protege and disciple of the Boston Symphony maestro.

Mahler's "Resurrection" symphony is an ideal choice for a program of homage to a man who was something of a spokesman for the less widely honored prophets of music.

Standard Bearer.

The movement to establish Gustave Mahler in the working repertory has been a crusade of work and love. In the tradition of Bruno Walter, Serge Koussevitzky gave it inspiring attention, and Mr. Bernstein has become standard-bearer of his generation.

No Berkshire Festival would be complete without such a tribute to Serge Koussevitzky. Tanglewood is his monument, and his epitaph is written on every bar of music heard in that beautiful summer shrine.

IN THE COUNTRY NYr 8/6

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Final performances of the season by the Boston Symphony—Friday, Aug. 7, at 8:30: Charles Münch directing Berlioz's symphony "Romeo and Juliet," with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano; Nicola Moscona, bass, and a chorus. . . . ¶ Saturday, Aug. 8, at 8:30: Leonard Bernstein directing, with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, as well as other vocal soloists and a chorus. . . . ¶ Sunday, Aug. 9, at 2:30: Charles Münch conducting, with Gregor Piatigorsky, cello. . . . ¶ Th[illegible], Aug. 13, at 6: The annual "T[illegible]od on Parade" program, including [illegible]es by the various student depart[illegible]n party, a concert by the Boston [illegible] conducted by Charles Münch and [illegible]rnstein, with Isaac Stern, violin; [illegible]arfield, baritone; and Leontyne [illegible]no), door prizes, and waltzing on [illegible]or the benefit of the Berkshire [illegible]r. . . . ¶ Friday, Aug. 14, at 8:30: [illegible]nch directing Brahms' Requiem, [illegible]Marshall, soprano; William War[illegible]ne; and a chorus. . . . ¶ Saturday, [illegible] 8:30: Leonard Bernstein conduct[illegible]loists. . . . ¶ Sunday, Aug. 16, at [illegible]les Münch conducting, with Sey[illegible]in, piano. (Tanglewood, Lenox, [illegible]

TAN LEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.

BE KSHIRE FESTIVAL

by the

BO TON SYMPHONY

Orchestra

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

TONIGHT (Aug. 7) at 8:30
(Berlioz—"Romeo and Juliet")
SAT. (Aug. 8) at 8:30
(Leonard Bernstein conducting,
Soloist, Jennie Tourel)
SUN. (Aug. 9) at 2:30
(Soloist, Gregor Piatigorsky, Cello)
Remaining Concerts Aug. 14, 15, 16
Reserved seats from $2.50; Gen'l Adm. $2

8/7

Thurs., Aug. 13
"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"
MANY EVENTS—Reserved seats $3, $4, $5.
Unres. $2.50.

Lakeville Journal Aug. 6.

Piatigorsky To Be Soloist Sunday At Festival Concert

there is with the Hunt Bros. Circus, not by any means. For, there are acrobats, jugglers, gymnasts, bareback riders, wire walkers and just about every type of circus act that you can think of, all blended into a smooth running, fast moving program, set to the real old time spine tingling circus music of the Hunt Bros. circus band under the direction of Robert Mills, well known circus band leader.

And in addition to the big show there are all the worthwhile features usually connected with circus day.

There is the combined circus menagerie and side show with its many attractions; there is a fast moving wild west or rodeo show headed by Frank Biron; a kiddie Whip ride for the youngsters, as well as popcorn and peanuts, hot dogs and cold drinks, candy floss and ice cream and circus souvenirs.

The Lions of Millerton have tickets for sale now and they benefit to

With Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon, August 7 and 9, with Leonard Bernstein as guest conductor on Saturday evening, August 8, the Berkshire Festival concerts continue this weekend in the 6,000-seat Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

GREGOR PIATIGORSKY, cellist, is soloist in Darius Milhaud's "Concerto for Cello, No. 1," and with Joseph de Pasqudle, viola, in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote," at the Sunday afternoon, August 9 (2:30 p.m.) Berkshire Festival concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, in the Music Shed, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The Friday evening program will be given over in its entirety to Berlioz' dramatic symphony, Romeo and Juliet, which the Boston Symphony gave in its complete version with chorus and soloists last winter for and the guiding spirit behind the Tanglewood annual festival and school activities. The program opens with Moussorgsky's Prelude to Khovanstchina, which Dr. Koussevitzky performed many times. Miss Tourel will be soloist both in Ravel's Sheherazade and in Mahler's Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection") with choral finale. The soprano role in the latter will be sung by Theresa Green, of Baltimore, a Berkshire Music Center student.

Gregor Piatigorsky will be soloist in Darius Milhaud's Concerto for Cello, No. 1 on the Sunday afternoon program, and will team with Joseph de Pasquale, violist of the Boston Symphony in Richard Strauss' Don Quixote. The portion of the Sunday concert, 2:30 to 4:00 p.m., will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as commentator.

THERESA GREEN, soprano, soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. on Saturday, August 8, (8:30 p.m.) in the Mahler Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection"). Jennie Tourel will be the contralto soloist in this work conducted by Leonard Bernstein as a part of the Koussevitzky Memorial Concert.

NICOLA MOSCONA, bass-baritone, soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Friday, August 7, (8:30 p.m.) in the Berlioz Dramatic Symphony "Romeo and Juliet." Jennie Tourel will be the contralto soloist, John McCollum, tenor soloist and the Festival Chorus, made up of Berkshire Music Center students, will take part in this performance which will be the first at Tanglewood in its complete version.

The Series B programs are:

Friday, August 7, at 8:30 p.m., Charles Munch: Berlioz, Romeo and Juliet, Dramatic Symphony, soloists: Jennie Tourel, Nicola Moscona, John McCollum and the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

Saturday, August 8, 8:30 p.m., Leonard Bernstein: Koussevitzky Memorial Concert. Moussorgsky, Prelude to Khovanstchinas Ravel, Sheherazade for Soprano and Orchestra, soloist: Jennie Tourel; Mahler, Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection"), soloists: Jennie Tourel, Theresa Green and the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

Sunday, August 9, 2:30 p.m., Charles Munch: Schubert, Symphony No. 5, in B Flat; Barber, Adagio for Strings; Strauss, Don Quixote (with Cello and Violin Solo), soloists: Gregor Piatigorsky and Joseph De Pasquale; Milhaud, Concerto for Cello, No. 1, soloist: Gregor Piatigorsky; Roussel, Second Suite from Bacchus et Ariane.

'Romeo and Juliet' Tomorrow To ~~Be~~ made a Tanglewood 'First' 8/6.

Nicola Moscana

Jennie Tourel

For the first time at Tanglewood the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by its music director, Charles Munch, will devote a program to a dramatic symphony. "Romeo and Juliet," composed by Hector Berlioz, will be presented tomorrow evening at the opening of the second series of the major festival in the Music Shed.

Soloists will be Miss Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano and Nicola Moscana, baritone and John McCollum, tenor.

The Festival chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, will sing the choral passages. Mr. McCollum is singing leading roles at Tanglewood this season.

Miss Tourel, who will appear for the first time at Tanglewood, often has sung with the Boston orchestra. Born in Montreal of Russian parentage, she was educated in France and Switzerland, made her debut as Carmen, a role which she has sung more than 300 times, including a performance in 1933 at the Paris Opera-Comique.

Debut as Juliet

Her American debut was in 1942, when she sang the role of Juliet with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra under Toscanini. In that year also she was soloist with the late Serge Koussevitzky and Leopold Stokowski. She has an unusual range of low G to high C. Her nine languages are Russian, French, English, Spanish, Italian, German, Polish, Hebrew and Portuguese.

She has sung many times with the Metropolitan Opera Company and created the role of Baba the Turk at the world premiere in Venice of Stravinsky's opera, "The Rake's Progress," in 1951. Recently she has specialized in song recitals of German and French songs.

Mr. Moscona, who also sings at Tanglewood for the first time, is a native of Athens, Greece. He came to the United States in 1937, and has been a citizen since 1945. Starting his singing career as a choir boy in Athens, he made his professional debut there in "Rigoletto" in 1930 and seven years later appeared in "Aida" on the Metropolitan Opera stage, where he has sung every season since, doing 350 performances in New York and 150 on tour with the company.

Knows 105 Operas

He has sung with most of the leading American and European orchestras, including 26 times with Toscanini. He speaks four languages fluently and sings in seven, with a repertoire of 105 operas. His favorite role is Mephistopheles in Gounod's "Faust."

Returning to Greece in 1949, the bass-baritone was presented the Cross of the Royal Order of Phoenix by King Paul, being the first artist to receive the award. He made his film debut in "The Great Caruso."

Tickets for all Festival performances are on sale at the Tanglewood box office. The grounds will open at 6.30 for the convenience of those who wish to picnic on the lawn. General admission tickets will be sold for listening from the grounds surrounding the Music Shed.

With Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon August 7 and 9, with Leonard Bernstein as guest conductor on Saturday evening August 8, the Berkshire Festival concerts continue this week end in the 6,000-seat Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

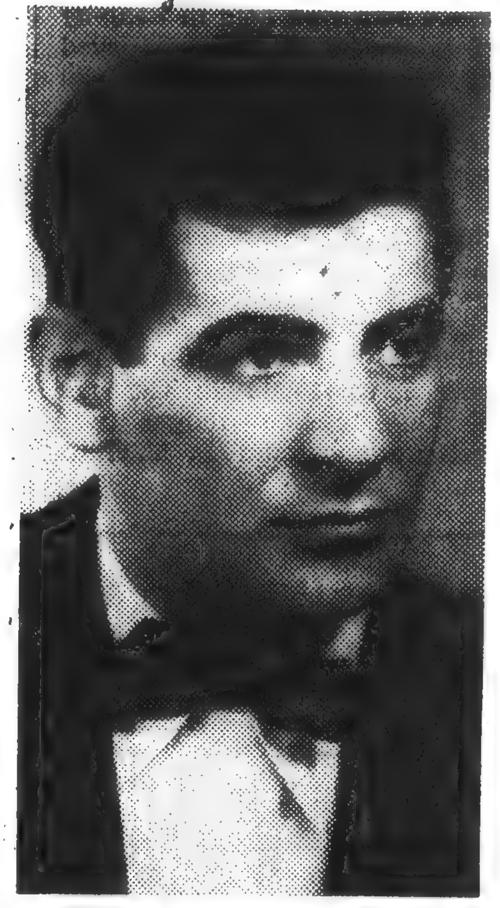
The Friday evening program will be given over in its entirety to Berlioz's dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet", which the Boston Symphony gave in its complete version with chorus and soloists last winter for the first time, and which now has its first performance at Tanglewood. Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, will sing the alto role; Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone will be the bass soloist; and John McCollum, of Tuckahoe, N. Y., a student of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra at Tanglewood, will be the tenor; and the Festival Chorus, composed of students of the Berkshire Music Center, will assist.

Mr. Bernstein's concert Saturday night will be a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky, for twenty-five years conductor of the Boston Symphony, and the guiding spirit behind the Tanglewood annual festival and school activities. The program opens with Moussorgsky's Prelude to "Khovanstchina", which Dr. Koussevitzky performed many times. Miss Tourel will be soloist both in Ravel's "Sheherazade" and in Mahler's Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection") with choral finale. The soprano role in the latter will be sung by Theresa Green, of Baltimore, a Berkshire Music Center student.

Gregor Piatigorsky will be soloist in Darius Milhaud's Concerto for Cello, No. 1 on the Sunday afternoon program, and will team with Joseph de Pasquale, violinist of the Boston Symphony in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote". The portion of the Sunday concert, 2:30 to 4:00 p.m., will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as commentator.

Bernstein Conducts Tomorrow At Memorial to Koussevitzky

Eagle 8/7



Leonard Bernstein

Theresa Green

Leonard Bernstein will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra tomorrow evening at 8.30 in a program dedicated to the memory of his teacher, the late Serge Koussevitzky. The memorial program, conducted by the pupil of the founder and director of the Berkshire Music Center, has become an annual event, featuring music which Dr. Koussevitzky especially loved.

Soloists in the Mahler Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection") will be Jennie Tourel, who is to sing the title role tonight in Berlioz' dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," and Theresa Green, soprano, a Marian Anderson award winner who is a scholarship student at the Tanglewood school. The Festival chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, will provide the choral music.

Mr. Bernstein, who will appear as guest conductor at Tanglewood for the first time this season, heads the conducting and orchestra departments of the school. With his 35th birthday Aug. 25, he is internationally famous as a conductor, composer and pianist. At present he is represented on Broadway by the score for the popular comedy, "Wonderful Town," starring Rosalind Russell at the Winter Garden, which won the New York Drama Critics' award as the year's best musical, the Variety and Donaldson awards and the Antoinette Perry medal of the American Theatre wing. Before coming to Tanglewood this season he conducted for two weeks in New York's Lewisohn Stadium and led Milhaud's opera, "Les Mamelles de Tiresias" at Brandeis University, Boston, where he teaches.

A native of Lawrence, Bernstein attended the Boston Latin School, majored in music at Harvard University and studied composition under Walter Piston and Edward Burlinghame Hill, and piano with Miss Helen Coates, now his secretary, and Henrich Gebhard, graduating in 1939. The next two years he spent at Philadelphia's Curtis Institute of Music, studying under Fritz Reiner, now conductor of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, orchestration under Randall Thompson and piano under Isabella Vengerova.

His Tanglewood association dates from the beginning of the school, which he attended in 1940 and 1941 as a conducting student of Dr. Koussevitzky. He returned in 1942 as his teacher's assistant. In the season 1943-44 he was assistant conductor of the New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra, then led by Artur Rodzinski. His first opportunity as conductor was in November of 1943, when Bruno Walter, scheduled guest conductor, suddenly became ill, and he substituted, winning front page notice and editorials.

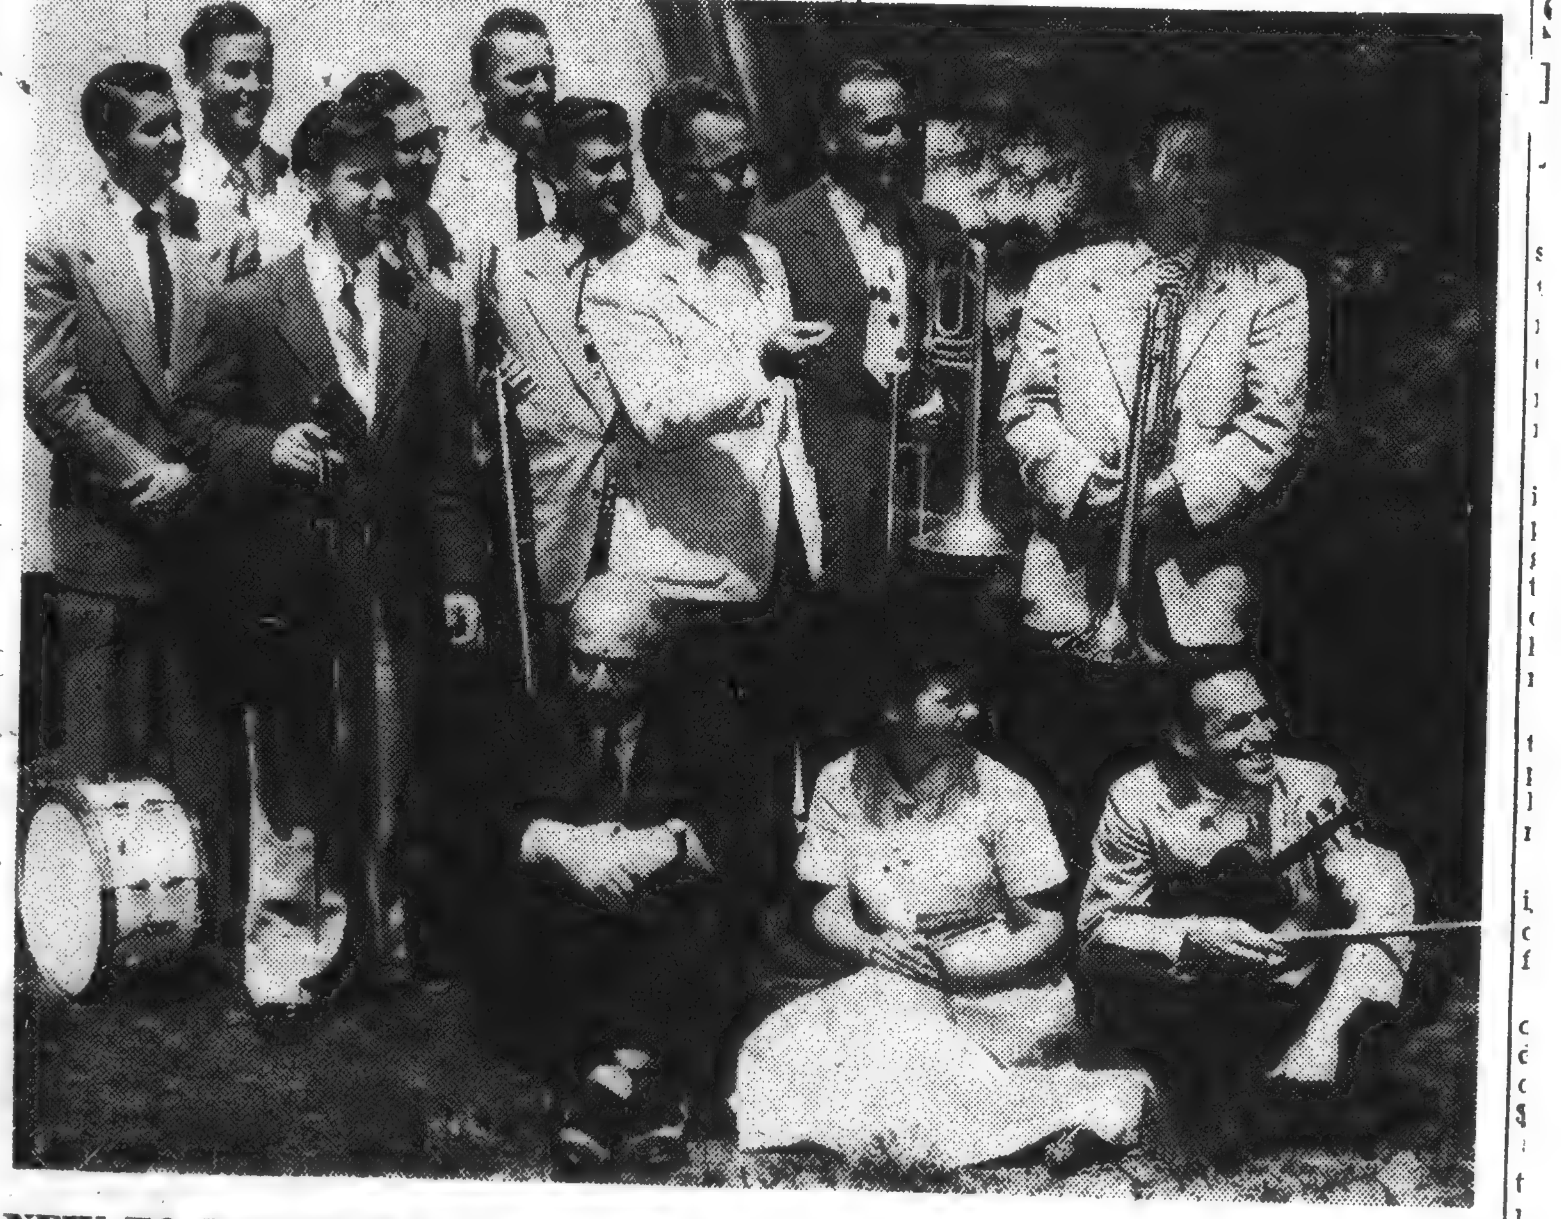
Bernstein has conducted leading orchestras in Europe and America, and has written two symphonies; two ballets; another Broadway musical, "On the Town"; an opera, "Trouble in Tahiti," performed at Tanglewood last season; and songs for the Broadway revival of "Peter Pan."

Miss Green, born 24 years ago in Baltimore, in private life is Mrs. Gilbert Coleman of New York City. She has been a scholarship student at Curtis Institute, has won a John Hay Whitney fellowship, and three times has won the Arthur Godfrey "Talent Scout" award. One of nine children of a minister, she first had lessons with her mother, a church organist and teacher. She soloed under Reginald Stewart with the Baltimore Symphony and made her New York Town Hall debut in 1950. She will return in September to the professional concert stage for her first national tour, filling more than 60 engagements in the United States and Canada.

The program will open with Moussorgsky's prelude to "Khovanstchina." The second number will be Ravel's "Scheherazade," with Miss Tourel as soloist.

Seats are available at the Tanglewood box office for all Festival concerts. General admission for listening from the lawn will be sold tomorrow night, beginning at 6.30.

Eagle Aug. 6



NEW TO TANGLEWOOD: Musicians who joined the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the past year enjoy with Rosario Mazzeo, BSO personnel representative, a scene on the Tanglewood lawn. Seated, left: Martin Hoherman, Miss Doriot Anthony, Leonard Moss; standing: Everett Firth, Richard Plaster, Fredy Ostrovsky, William Marshall, Harold Thompson, Gerard Geguen, Mr. Mazzeo, Kauko Kahila and William Moyer.

ONE OF FINEST ACHIEVEMENTS AT TANGLEWOOD

Union 8/8

Dramatic Symphony, 'Romeo and Juliette,' Thrillingly Performed

WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 7—The 7600 people at Tanglewood tonight heard a magnificent, a thrilling performance of Hector Berlioz' dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliette." It was one of Charles Munich's finest achievements, with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, festival chorus and soloists giving of their best in a superlative interpretation.

Influenced Wagner

In 1839 when this dramatic symphony was first produced Beethoven's Ninth Symphony was scarcely known and it was a milestone in the composer's life and in 19th century music. Present at the premiere was the 26-year-old Richard Wagner and its influence upon him was later to be shown in the ring cycle.

The dramatic symphony is in a purely formal style in outline; although enlarged and supplemented, it was divided into 12 episodes. The opening introduction is a double allegro. The prologue with its contralto solo and chorus tells of the feud between the Montagues and Capulets. Jennie Tourel was the contralto, singing with exquisite musicianship and generally lovely tone. Mercutio's short song was well sung by tenor John McCollum, who has proven one of the best all round musicians the school has.

One of Finest

Continued From Page 1

There are beautiful melodies throughout this symphony, melodies of heart-rending sadness or of scintillating brilliance and grace, as, for example, the Queen Mab episode, a scherzo. This episode was played with uncanny beauty.

Again in the episodes depicting Romeo alone, the concert and ball and the festival at the Capulets, the purely instrumental music clearly emphasized every character and movement.

Audience Cheers

Berlioz alone is responsible for the funeral music and Friar Lawrence's plea for reconciliation. This great air was sung with stunning effect by the basso Nicola Moscona. One's thoughts turned to Boris Godunoff as one listened to the richness of the orchestration and the voluminous voice of the distinguished basso. It was no surprise that at the close of this tremendous episode the audience burst into prolonged cheers.

Berlioz stated that this was a symphony, not opera or cantata, and he solved his problem by restricting the solo voices to narration and by relating the textual exposition to the first part of the symphony in which he outlines the whole story in recitative style. In this way he was free to translate into purely orchestral tones the supreme moments of Shakespeare's tale.

We shall hear another great choral symphony tomorrow night when Leonard Bernstein conducts Mahler's "Resurrection" Symphony No. 2. Also on the program will be the "Scheherazade" of Ravel with Tourel singing, and the prelude to "Khovanstchina" by Moussorgsky.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

night, Aug. 14-15.

Berkshire Music Festival, Lenox "Tanglewood on Parade" pro-

2:30-4, WCBS—WORLD MUSIC FESTIVALS—Boston Symphony Orchestra, Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Mass.; Charles Munch, conductor; Gregor Piatigorsky, cello, Joseph de Pasquale, viola; James Fasset, comments:
Symphony No. 5, B flat......Schubert
Adagio for Strings............Barber
Don Quixote ....Strauss

products of genius written in only four weeks when Schubert was 19 years old. It was played in private performances by Schubert's own little chamber music orchestra.

During Strauss' "Don Quixote," based on the Cervantes character, Gregor Piatigorsky will be cello soloist and Joseph de Pasquale, viola soloist.

Globe 8/4

WORLD MUSIC FESTIVAL: Charles Munch conducts Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Gregor Piatigorsky, Joseph de Pasquale as soloists; WEEI, 2:30.

WEEI, 2:30-4:00—"World Music Festivals"—Charles Munch conducts Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood. Gregor Piatigorsky, cello; Joseph de Pasquale, viola, soloists. James Fassett, music commentator.
Symphony No. 5 in B flat....Schubert
Adagio for Strings............Barber
Don Quixote ....Strauss

Bernstein Conducts Tomorrow At Memorial to Koussevitzky

Eagle 8/7

Leonard Bernstein

Theresa Green

Leonard Bernstein will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra tomorrow evening at 8.30 in a program dedicated to the memory of his teacher, the late Serge Koussevitzky. The memorial program, conducted by the pupil of the founder and director of the Berkshire Music Center, has become an annual event, featuring music which Dr. Koussevitzky especially loved.

Soloists in the Mahler Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection") will be Jennie Tourel, who is to sing the title role tonight in Berlioz' dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," and Theresa Green, soprano, a Marian Anderson award winner who is a scholarship student at the Tanglewood school. The Festival chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, will provide the choral music.

Mr. Bernstein, who will appear as guest conductor at Tanglewood for the first time this season, heads the conducting and orchestra departments of the school. With his 35th birthday Aug. 25, he is internationally famous as a conductor, composer and pianist. At present he is represented on Broadway by the score for the popular comedy, "Wonderful Town," starring Rosalind Russell at the Winter Garden, which won the New York Drama Critics' award as the year's best musical, the Variety and Donaldson awards and the Antoinette Perry medal of the American Theatre wing. Before coming to Tanglewood this season he conducted for two weeks in New York's Lewisohn Stadium and led Milhaud's opera, "Les Mamelles de Tiresias" at Brandeis University, Boston, where he teaches.

A native of Lawrence, Bernstein attended the Boston Latin School, majored in music at Harvard University and studied composition under Walter Piston and Edward Burlinghame Hill, and piano with Miss Helen Coates, now his secretary, and Henrich Gebhard, graduating in 1939. The next two years he spent at Philadelphia's Curtis Institute of Music, studying under Fritz Reiner, now conductor of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, orchestration under Randall Thompson and piano under Isabella Vengerova.

His Tanglewood association dates from the beginning of the school, which he attended in 1940 and 1941 as a conducting student of Dr. Koussevitzky. He returned in 1942 as his teacher's assistant. In the season 1943-44 he was assistant conductor of the New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra, then led by Artur Rodzinski. His first opportunity as conductor was in November of 1943, when Bruno Walter, scheduled guest conductor, suddenly became ill, and he substituted, winning front page notice and editorials.

Bernstein has conducted leading orchestras in Europe and America, and has written two symphonies; two ballets; another Broadway musical, "On the Town"; an opera, "Trouble in Tahiti," performed at Tanglewood last season; and songs for the Broadway revival of "Peter Pan."

Miss Green, born 24 years ago in Baltimore, in private life is Mrs. Gilbert Coleman of New York City. She has been a scholarship student at Curtis Institute, has won a John Hay Whitney fellowship, and three times has won the Arthur Godfrey "Talent Scout" award. One of nine children of a minister, she first had lessons with her mother, a church organist and teacher. She soloed under Reginald Stewart with the Baltimore Symphony and made her New York Town Hall debut in 1950. She will return in September to the professional concert stage for her first national tour, filling more than 60 engagements in the United States and Canada.

The program will open with Moussorgsky's prelude to "Khovanstchina." The second number will be Ravel's "Scheherazade," with Miss Tourel as soloist.

Seats are available at the Tanglewood box office for all Festival concerts. General admission for listening from the lawn will be sold tomorrow night, beginning at 6.30.

Eagle Aug. 6

NEW TO TANGLEWOOD: Musicians who joined the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the past year enjoy with Rosario Mazzeo, BSO personnel representative, a scene on the Tanglewood lawn. Seated, left: Martin Hoherman, Miss Doriot Anthony, Leonard Moss; standing: Everett Firth, Richard Plaster, Fredy Ostrovsky, William Marshall, Harold Thompson, Gerard Goguen, Mr. Mazzeo, Kauko Kahila and William Moyer.

ONE OF FINEST ACHIEVEMENTS AT TANGLEWOOD

Union 8/8

Dramatic Symphony, 'Romeo and Juliette,' Thrillingly Performed

WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 7—The 7600 people at Tanglewood tonight heard a magnificent, a thrilling performance of Hector Berlioz' dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliette." It was one of Charles Munich's finest achievements, with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, festival chorus and soloists giving of their best in a superlative interpretation.

Influenced Wagner

In 1839 when this dramatic symphony was first produced Beethoven's Ninth Symphony was scarcely known and it was a milestone in the composer's life and in 19th century music. Present at the premiere was the 26-year-old Richard Wagner and its influence upon him was later to be shown in the ring cycle.

The dramatic symphony is in a purely formal style in outline; although enlarged and supplemented, it was divided into 12 episodes. The opening introduction is a double allegro. The prologue with its contralto solo and chorus tells of the feud between the Montagues and Capulets. Jennie Tourel was the contralto, singing with exquisite musicianship and generally lovely tone. Mercutio's short song was well sung by tenor John McCollum, who has proven one of the best all round musicians the school has.

One of Finest

Continued From Page 1

There are beautiful melodies throughout this symphony, melodies of heart-rending sadness or of scintillating brilliance and grace, as, for example, the Queen Mab episode, a scherzo. This episode was played with uncanny beauty.

Again in the episodes depicting Romeo alone, the concert and ball and the festival at the Capulets, the purely instrumental music clearly emphasized every character and movement.

Audience Cheers

Berlioz alone is responsible for the funeral music and Friar Lawrence's plea for reconciliation. This great air was sung with stunning effect by the basso Nicola Moscona. One's thoughts turned to Boris Godunoff as one listened to the richness of the orchestration and the voluminous voice of the distinguished basso. It was no surprise that at the close of this tremendous episode the audience burst into prolonged cheers.

Berlioz stated that this was a symphony, not opera or cantata, and he solved his problem by restricting the solo voices to narration and by relating the textual exposition to the first part of the symphony in which he outlines the whole story in recitative style. In this way he was free to translate into purely orchestral tones the supreme moments of Shakespeare's tale.

We shall hear another great choral symphony tomorrow night when Leonard Bernstein conducts Mahler's "Resurrection" Symphony No. 2. Also on the program will be the "Scheherazade" of Ravel with Tourel singing, and the prelude to "Khovanstchina" by Moussorgsky.

Charles Munch will open the Boston Symphony Tanglewood concert with Symphony No. 5 in B flat major by Franz Schubert today at 2:30 over WEEI. The number is one of those remarkable products of genius written in only four weeks when Schubert was 19 years old. It was played in private performances by Schubert's own little chamber music orchestra.

During Strauss' "Don Quixote," based on the Cervantes character, Gregor Piatigorsky will be cello soloist and Joseph de Pasquale, viola soloist.

Globe 8/4

WORLD MUSIC FESTIVAL: Charles Munch conducts Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Gregor Piatigorsky, Joseph de Pasquale as soloists; WEEI, 2:30.

WEEI, 2:30-4:00—"World Music Festivals"—Charles Munch conducts Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood. Gregor Piatigorsky, cello; Joseph de Pasquale, viola, soloists. James Fassett, music commentator.

Symphony No. 5 in B flat....Schubert
Adagio for Strings............Barber
Don Quixote ....Strauss

Bernstein Conducts Tomorrow At Memorial to Koussevitzky

Eagle 8/7

Leonard Bernstein

Theresa Green

Leonard Bernstein will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra tomorrow evening at 8.30 in a program dedicated to the memory of his teacher, the late Serge Koussevitzky. The memorial program, conducted by the pupil of the founder and director of the Berkshire Music Center, has become an annual event, featuring music which Dr. Koussevitzky especially loved.

Soloists in the Mahler Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection") will be Jennie Tourel, who is to sing the title role tonight in Berlioz' dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," and Theresa Green, soprano, a Marian Anderson award winner who is a scholarship student at the Tanglewood school. The Festival chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, will provide the choral music.

Mr. Bernstein, who will appear as guest conductor at Tanglewood for the first time this season, heads the conducting and orchestra departments of the school. With his 35th birthday Aug. 25, he is internationally famous as a conductor, composer and pianist. At present he is represented on Broadway by the score for the popular comedy, "Wonderful Town," starring Rosalind Russell at the Winter Garden, which won the New York Drama Critics' award as the year's best musical, the Variety and Donaldson awards and the Antoinette Perry medal of the American Theatre wing. Before coming to Tanglewood this season he conducted for two weeks in New York's Lewisohn Stadium and led Milhaud's opera, "Les Mamelles de Tiresias" at Brandeis University, Boston, where he teaches.

A native of Lawrence, Bernstein attended the Boston Latin School, majored in music at Harvard University and studied composition under Walter Piston and Edward Burlinghame Hill, and piano with Miss Helen Coates, now his secretary, and Henrich Gebhard, graduating in 1939. The next two years he spent at Philadelphia's Curtis Institute of Music, studying under Fritz Reiner, now conductor of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, orchestration under Randall Thompson and piano under Isabella Vengerova.

His Tanglewood association dates from the beginning of the school, which he attended in 1940 and 1941 as a conducting student of Dr. Koussevitzky. He returned in 1942 as his teacher's assistant. In the season 1943-44 he was assistant conductor of the New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra, then led by Artur Rodzinski. His first opportunity as conductor was in November of 1943, when Bruno Walter, scheduled guest conductor, suddenly became ill, and he substituted, winning front page notice and editorials.

Bernstein has conducted leading orchestras in Europe and America, and has written two symphonies; two ballets; another Broadway musical, "On the Town"; an opera, "Trouble in Tahiti," performed at Tanglewood last season; and songs for the Broadway revival of "Peter Pan."

Miss Green, born 24 years ago in Baltimore, in private life is Mrs. Gilbert Coleman of New York City. She has been a scholarship student at Curtis Institute, has won a John Hay Whitney fellowship, and three times has won the Arthur Godfrey "Talent Scout" award. One of nine children of a minister, she first had lessons with her mother, a church organist and teacher. She soloed under Reginald Stewart with the Baltimore Symphony and made her New York Town Hall debut in 1950. She will return in September to the professional concert stage for her first national tour, filling more than 60 engagements in the United States and Canada.

The program will open with Moussorgsky's prelude to "Khovanstchina." The second number will be Ravel's "Scheherazade," with Miss Tourel as soloist.

Seats are available at the Tanglewood box office for all Festival concerts. General admission for listening from the lawn will be sold tomorrow night, beginning at 6.30.

Eagle Aug. 6

NEW TO TANGLEWOOD: Musicians who joined the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the past year enjoy with Rosario Mazzeo, BSO personnel representative, a scene on the Tanglewood lawn. Seated, left: Martin Hoherman, Miss Doriot Anthony, Leonard Moss; standing: Everett Firth, Richard Plaster, Fredy Ostrovsky, William Marshall, Harold Thompson, Gerard Goguen, Mr. Mazzeo, Kauko Kahila and William Moyer.

ONE OF FINEST ACHIEVEMENTS AT TANGLEWOOD

Union 8/8

Dramatic Symphony, 'Romeo and Juliette,' Thrillingly Performed

WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 7—The 7600 people at Tanglewood tonight heard a magnificent, a thrilling performance of Hector Berlioz' dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliette." It was one of Charles Munich's finest achievements, with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, festival chorus and soloists giving of their best in a superlative interpretation.

Influenced Wagner

In 1839 when this dramatic symphony was first produced Beethoven's Ninth Symphony was scarcely known and it was a milestone in the composer's life and in 19th century music. Present at the premiere was the 26-year-old Richard Wagner and its influence upon him was later to be shown in the ring cycle.

The dramatic symphony is in a purely formal style in outline; although enlarged and supplemented, it was divided into 12 episodes. The opening introduction is a double allegro. The prologue with its contralto solo and chorus tells of the feud between the Montagues and Capulets. Jennie Tourel was the contralto, singing with exquisite musicianship and generally lovely tone. Mercutio's short song was well sung by tenor John McCollum, who has proven one of the best all round musicians the school has.

One of Finest

Continued From Page 1

There are beautiful melodies throughout this symphony, melodies of heart-rending sadness or of scintillating brilliance and grace, as, for example, the Queen Mab episode, a scherzo. This episode was played with uncanny beauty.

Again in the episodes depicting Romeo alone, the concert and ball and the festival at the Capulets, the purely instrumental music clearly emphasized every character and movement.

Audience Cheers

Berlioz alone is responsible for the funeral music and Friar Lawrence's plea for reconciliation. This great air was sung with stunning effect by the basso Nicola Moscona. One's thoughts turned to Boris Godunoff as one listened to the richness of the orchestration and the voluminous voice of the distinguished basso. It was no surprise that at the close of this tremendous episode the audience burst into [illegible] cheers.

Globe 8/9

B[illegible] Music Festival. Lenox. "Tanglewood on Parade" program, Aug. 13; Brahms Requiem, with chorus and soloists, Charles Munch conducting, Aug. 14, 8:30 p. m.; public rehearsal, Boston Symphony Orchestra, 10 a. m., Aug. 15; Leonard Bernstein conducting program of Sibelius, Chavez, Brahms, 8:30 p. m., Aug. 15; afternoon concert conducted Charles Munch, 2:30, Aug.

Address Box Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Bernstein Conducts Tomorrow At Memorial to Koussevitzky

Eagle 8/7

Leonard Bernstein

Theresa Green

Leonard Bernstein will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra tomorrow evening at 8.30 in a program dedicated to the memory of his teacher, the late Serge Koussevitzky. The memorial program, conducted by the pupil of the founder and director of the Berkshire Music Center, has become an annual event, featuring music which Dr. Koussevitzky especially loved.

Soloists in the Mahler Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection") will be Jennie Tourel, who is to sing the title role tonight in Berlioz' dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," and Theresa Green, soprano, a Marian Anderson award winner who is a scholarship student at the Tanglewood school. The Festival chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, will provide the choral music.

Mr. Bernstein, who will appear as guest conductor at Tanglewood for the first time this season, heads the conducting and orchestra departments of the school. With his 35th birthday Aug. 25, he is internationally famous as a conductor, composer and pianist. At present he is represented on Broadway by the score for the popular comedy, "Wonderful Town," starring Rosalind Russell at the Winter Garden, which won the New York Drama Critics' award as the year's best musical, the Variety and Donaldson awards and the Antoinette Perry medal of the American Theatre wing. Before coming to Tanglewood this season he conducted for two weeks in New York's Lewisohn Stadium and led Milhaud's opera, "Les Mamelles de Tiresias" at Brandeis University, Boston, where he teaches.

A native of Lawrence, Bernstein attended the Boston Latin School, majored in music at Harvard University and studied composition under Walter Piston and Edward Burlinghame Hill, and piano with Miss Helen Coates, now his secretary, and Henrich Gebhard, graduating in 1939. The next two years he spent at Philadelphia's Curtis Institute of Music, studying under Fritz Reiner, now conductor of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, orchestration under Randall Thompson and piano under Isabella Vengerova.

His Tanglewood association dates from the beginning of the school, which he attended in 1940 and 1941 as a conducting student of Dr. Koussevitzky. He returned in 1942 as his teacher's assistant. In the season 1943-44 he was assistant conductor of the New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra, then led by Artur Rodzinski. His first opportunity as conductor was in November of 1943, when Bruno Walter, scheduled guest conductor, suddenly became ill, and he substituted, winning front page notice and editorials.

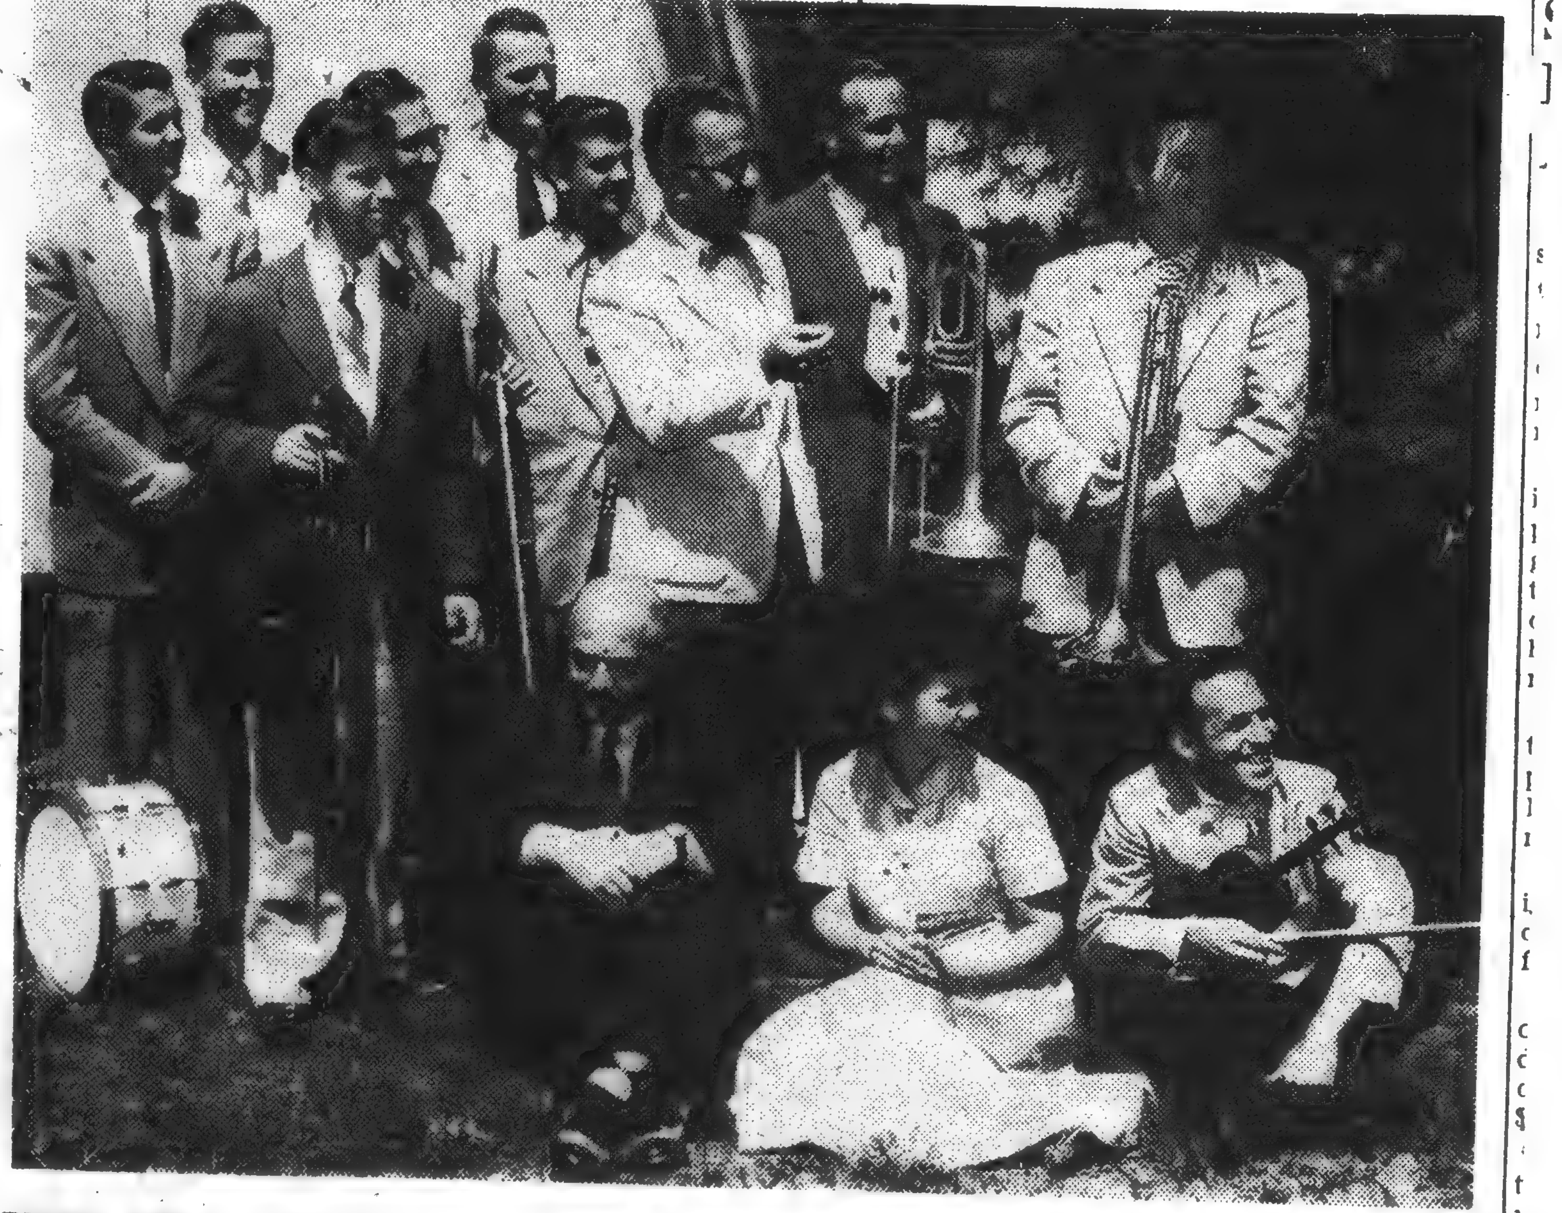
Bernstein has conducted leading orchestras in Europe and America, and has written two symphonies; two ballets; another Broadway musical, "On the Town"; an opera, "Trouble in Tahiti," performed at Tanglewood last season; and songs for the Broadway revival of "Peter Pan."

Miss Green, born 24 years ago in Baltimore, in private life is Mrs. Gilbert Coleman of New York City. She has been a scholarship student at Curtis Institute, has won a John Hay Whitney fellowship, and three times has won the Arthur Godfrey "Talent Scout" award. One of nine children of a minister, she first had lessons with her mother, a church organist and teacher. She soloed under Reginald Stewart with the Baltimore Symphony and made her New York Town Hall debut in 1950. She will return in September to the professional concert stage for her first national tour, filling more than 60 engagements in the United States and Canada.

The program will open with Moussorgsky's prelude to "Khovanstchina." The second number will be Ravel's "Scheherazade," with Miss Tourel as soloist.

Seats are available at the Tanglewood box office for all Festival concerts. General admission for listening from the lawn will be sold tomorrow night, beginning at 6.30.

Eagle Aug. 6



NEW TO TANGLEWOOD: Musicians who joined the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the past year enjoy with Rosario Mazzeo, BSO personnel representative, a scene on the Tanglewood lawn. Seated, left: Martin Hoherman, Miss Doriot Anthony, Leonard Moss; standing: Everett Firth, Richard Plaster, Fredy Ostrovsky, William Marshall, Harold Thompson, Gerard Geguen, Mr. Mazzeo, Kauko Kahila and William Moyer.

ONE OF FINEST ACHIEVEMENTS AT TANGLEWOOD

Union 8/8

Dramatic Symphony, 'Romeo and Juliette,' Thrillingly Performed

WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 7—The 7600 people at Tanglewood tonight heard a magnificent, a thrilling performance of Hector Berlioz' dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliette." It was one of Charles Munich's finest achievements, with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, festival chorus and soloists giving of their best in a superlative interpretation.

Influenced Wagner

In 1839 when this dramatic symphony was first produced Beethoven's Ninth Symphony was scarcely known and it was a milestone in the composer's life and in 19th century music. Present at the premiere was the 26-year-old Richard Wagner and its influence upon him was later to be shown in the ring cycle.

The dramatic symphony is in a purely formal style in outline; although enlarged and supplemented, it was divided into 12 episodes. The opening introduction is a double allegro. The prologue with its contralto solo and chorus tells of the feud between the Montagues and Capulets. Jennie Tourel was the contralto, singing with exquisite musicianship and generally lovely tone. Mercutio's short song was well sung by tenor John McCollum, who has proven one of the best all round musicians the school has.

One of Finest

Continued From Page 1

There are beautiful melodies throughout this symphony, melodies of heart-rending sadness or of scintillating brilliance and grace, as, for example, the Queen Mab episode, a scherzo. This episode was played with uncanny beauty.

Again in the episodes depicting Romeo alone, the concert and ball and the festival at the Capulets, the purely instrumental music clearly emphasized every character and movement.

Audience Cheers

Berlioz alone is responsible for the funeral music and Friar Lawrence's plea for reconciliation. This great air was sung with stunning effect by the basso Nicola Moscona. One's thoughts turned to Boris Godunoff as one listened to the richness of the orchestration and the voluminous voice of the di[illegible] basso. It was no sur[illegible]

---

by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
Orchestra
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
TODAY (Aug. 9) at 8:30
(Soloist, Gregor Piatigorsky, Cello)
Remaining Concerts Aug. 14, 15, 16
Reserved Seats from $2.50; Gen'l Adm. $2

Thurs. (Aug. 13)—"Tanglewood on Parade" Many events include Boston Symphony Concert. Conducted by CHARLES MUNCH and LEONARD BERNSTEIN; Soloists—ISAAC STERN, Violin; LEONTYNE PRICE, Soprano, appearing with WILLIAM WARFIELD, Baritone, in "Porgy and Bess," Act II, Scenes 1 & 2. Reserved Seats $4 and $3, Unres.—$2.50.

Address Box Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

[263]

TIGHT BINDING

ard the Lion-Hearted' To Be Given pera Students Next Monday, Tuesday

y's Work e Heard nglish

OD — "Richard the the three-act opera e French composer, Gretry, will and Tuesday students of the n under G 'dovsky, ent. The members Center advance.

er in 1784

ll be given emiere in American n 1797, was ars later in Philadel- New York in 1800. It to be the French comic opera, poser's masterpiece. co-operation of the e's, Belgium. French to Mr. Goldovsky manuscript for prepar- performance. French the only version commercial use, re- century composer. n is by Mr. Goldov- Sarah Caldwell.

ss Caldwell, scenery John Blankenchip, the Paul Planer ns with slides sim- for Mozart's "Titus" Costumes by Leo and choreography by Mr. Goldovsky will orchestra of 38 stu-

is based on an old e minstrel Blondel, the whereabouts of d King Richard by fortress to fortress narch's favorite love

Lois McCauley of Trenton, N.J., and Alvin Edmonson of New York, will sing the soprano and baritone roles of Richard and Marguerite in two performances of Grétry's opera, "Richard the Lion-Hearted," Monday and Tuesday evenings at 8.30 in the Tanglewood theatre for Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

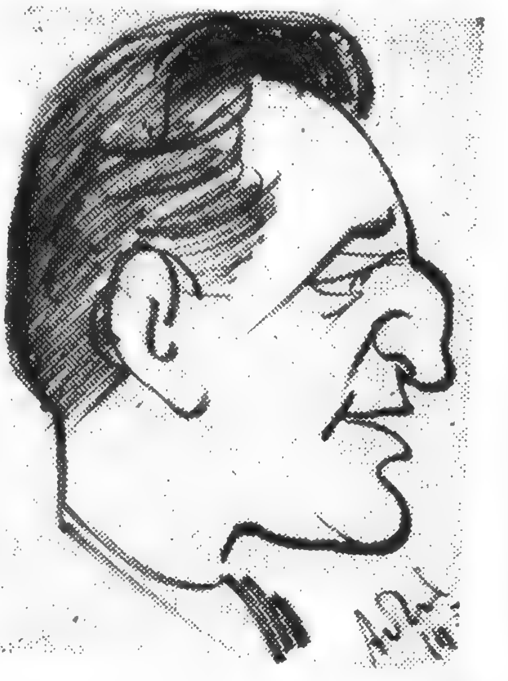
Berlioz Symphony Given Brilliant Interpretation

Eagle 8/8

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE DRAMATIC symphony "Romeo and Juliet" of Hector Berlioz in its entirety was the fare of the first concert of the pivot week-end series in the big Shed at Tanglewood last night. Charles Munch led the Boston Symphony orchestra, augmented by all the additional instruments Berlioz called for, in a performance which reached grandeur at its most inspired moments and which at times he conducted with exceptionally fervently felt emotion.

The symphony, in addition to the extra large orchestra, calls for a mixed chorus and three soloists. The chorus was chosen from the student body of the Berkshire Music Center and was trained by Hugh Ross and his assistant, Lorna de Varon. Mr. Munch invited them to share the recalls and the ovation at the end that the vital performance evoked. The soloists were Jennie Tourel, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, and Nicola Moscona, as Friar Laurence, bass.



Adler

John McCollum

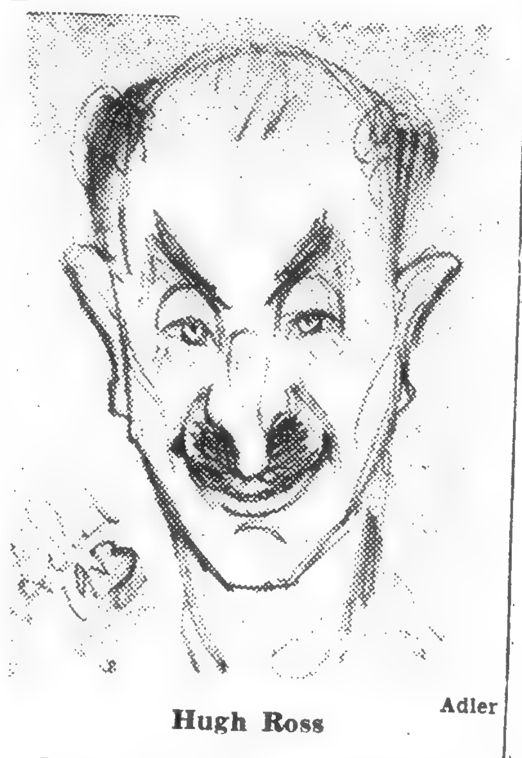
* * *

BERLIOZ does not borrow any of Shakespeare's words but sketches swiftly through the plot. Only the bass soloist is lent identification as the Friar; the others have declamations pertinent to the action but are not personalized. The bass appeared in the second half after the intermission; the other two before. Berlioz called it a dramatic symphony. It does not fit well into any category because there are factors which just will not conform to any accepted formula. When it is done as vividly as Mr. Munch did it last night, and Berlioz' imagination is so vitally conveyed to the audience, it is nearer opera, even though there are no scenery, props, costumes or action.

The music tells the story, and its modernity is all the more astounding when one considers that it was written over a century ago, only 12 years after Beethoven had passed on, and before Wagner had mounted an opera, and while Brahms was still an infant. Berlioz only feared that Mendelssohn would steal the idea of a scherzo on a "Queen Mab" dream theme before he got it on paper. Mr. Munch has an especial sympathy for Berlioz and has played him oftener than other conductors, a propensity which pleases this reviewer very much. He made his Boston debut with the "Fantastic" symphony and indubitably reveals a bond and affinity for the music of the great and inspired innovator.

* * *

THE FRESH Berkshire temperature added a degree of sparkle to the fascinating "Queen Mab." Munch was sure of himself there, as he was after intermission in the treacherous orchestral recitative, and the musicians played for him with a gossamer touch, and a confident bravado, respectively. The scherzo darts and skips like "a fairies' midwife" who "comes in shape no bigger than an agate-stone on the fore-finger of an alderman, drawn with a team of little atomies athwart men's noses as they lie asleep."



Adler

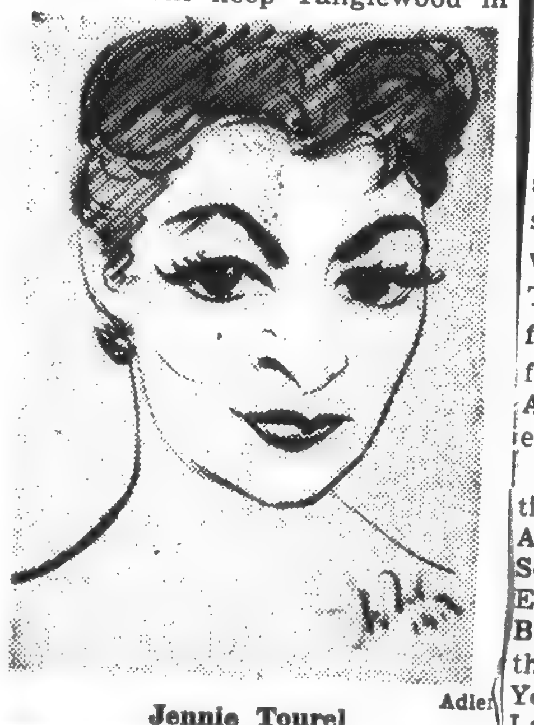
Hugh Ross

The love scene is moving music and the magic of Berlioz' orchestration gives the musicians a rare opportunity to translate the ardent passions of the young lovers into swelling sounds. The orchestra rode the rapids of the introduction and quickly smoothed its disheveled hair and frazzled composure and settled into secure and impressive music-making. The chorus was effective more or less consistently, its best efforts coming in the final half.

* * *

FRIAR LAURENCE has the most generous allotment and Mr. Moscona had the vocal stature and dramatic ability to cope with the formidable concurrence of orchestra and chorus. Miss Tourel sang with lovely tone quality and gave character to her aria. Mr. McCollum devoted himself selflessly to a graphic presentation of his material without concern for personal favor.

Mr. Munch gave this whole symphony in Boston during the past season. Its repetition here last night not only was a welcome and rewarding event but is an achievement of the kind which will keep Tanglewood in the ascendancy in the musical world and continue to make it the mecca of the music lovers the world over. We love and enjoy Tchaikowsky, et als, and not only grant their programming but demand it, but such listings come a dime a dozen, not with the distinctive playing of the Boston Symphony, to be sure, but such Berlioz, and tonight's Mahler and other ventures and explorations of that type are to be commended and encouraged in the fullest.



Adler

Jennie Tourel

Piatigorsky Returns to Shed As Concert Soloist Tomorrow

TANGLEWOOD — Gregor Piatigorsky will appear as cello soloist in two numbers of tomorrow's Berkshire Festival concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch in the Music Shed. He will play in Darius Milhaud's First Concerto for Cello and with Joseph de Pasquale, viola, in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote."

Gregor Piatigorsky

Well Known in Area

Mr. Piatigorsky is well-known to Berkshire audiences for recitals in Pittsfield and at Tanglewood for previous appearances with the orchestra and as former head of the Berkshire Music Center chamber music section. He has made few concert appearances in recent years.

Born in Ekaterinoslav, Russia, in 1903, he became first cellist of the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra under Wilhelm Furtwangler. He first visited the United States in 1929 and returned two years later to play with the Boston orchestra, with whom he has soloed four times in "Don Quixote" and twice in Milhaud's concerto, including a Tanglewood performance in 1949.

Barber To Attend

In the audience tomorrow will be Samuel Barber, to hear his Adagio for Strings. He also is a former Tanglewood faculty member, and teacher of composition. A native of West Chester, Pa., Mr. Barber is a nephew of the late Louise Homer, to whom, with her husband, Sidney, he dedicated the Adagio. First performed in Rome by the Pro Arte Quartet, the piece was given its premiere in its present form by Arturo Toscanini with the NBC Orchestra in New York.

Richard Strauss, who was born in Munich in 1864 and died in Garmisch five years ago, composed the score of "Don Quixote" in 1897. It was first played a year later at a Gurzenich Concert in Cologne.

Broadcast at 2.30

Franz Schubert composed his Fifth Symphony in 1816. Composed for a small orchestra, it sometimes is referred to as the "Symphony without trumpets and drums."

Tomorrow's concert will be broadcast over the CBS network from 2.30 to 4, with commentary by James Fassett. Seats should be occupied promptly, as late comers will not be admitted until the end of the opening number.

Seats are on sale at the box office for all concerts. General admissions for listening from the lawn are sold two hours before the programs start. The grounds will open for picnicking.

Complete week-end programs follow:

Tonight at 8.30

"Prelude to Khovantchina ... Moussorgsky
"Sheherazade" for soprano and orchestra .... Ravel
Soloist: Jennie Tourel
Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection"), ... Mahler with Festival Chorus and Soloists: Miss Tourel, alto; Theresa Green, soprano

Tomorrow at 2.30

Symphony No. 5, in B flat ...... Schubert
Adagio for strings .... Barber
"Don Quixote" .... Strauss
with cello and viola solo
Concerto for cello .... Milhaud
"Bacchus et Ariane," Suite No. 2 .... Roussel

Crowd of 7500 At Festival Concert

The attendance of 7500 last night at Tanglewood, while below any previous Berkshire Festival concert in the Shed this season, topped the 1952 audience for the opening program of series B by 700.

Tanglewood

Tonight

8.30—Berkshire Festival, Koussevitzky memorial concert by Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting. Music Shed.

Tomorrow

*10.00 AM—Chamber Music Concert by students of Berkshire Music Center. Chamber Music Hall.

Ravel . . . String Quartet in F-major
Copland . . . Quintet for Piano and Strings
Franck . . . Quintet in F-minor for Piano and Strings

2.30 PM—Berkshire Festival concert by Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Music Shed.

*Open to friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Lee Named Conductor Of Lexington Symphony

Everett Lee, a former Berkshire Music Center Negro student, has been appointed conductor of the symphony orchestra of Lexington, Ky.; starting in September. In 1946 he was accompanist in the opera workshop of the school and in 1947 an auditor in the orchestra conducting department.

French Consul Here

In the audience tonight and tomorrow will be Francois Charles-Roux, French consul in Boston, and Mrs. Charles-Roux. They lunched at Wheatleigh, the men's dormitory for the Berkshire Music Center, today with Charles Munch, George E. Judd, orchestra manager, upon whom last month the consul conferred the award of the French Legion of Honor, and two trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; Dr. Lewis Perry and Edward A. Taft. M. and Mme. Charles-Roux are spending the week end at Elm Court, Lenox.

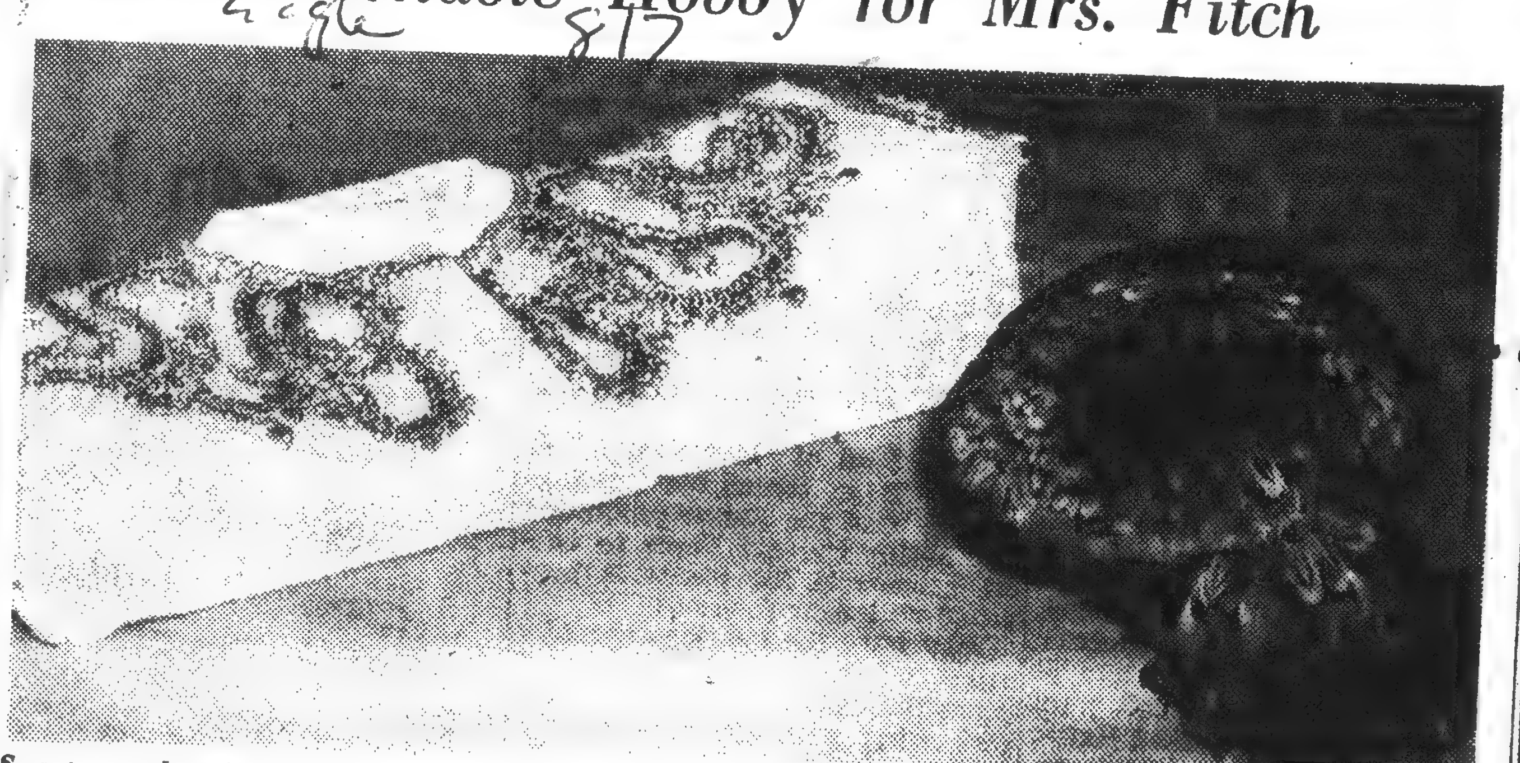
Leonard Bernstein commutes each day during the Tanglewood season from Hillsdale, N.Y., where he is spending the summer with his wife, Felicia Montealegre, Chilean-born television actress.

Duo-Pianists Here

In the Tanglewood audience this week end will be duo-pianists, Pierre Luboshutz and his wife, Genia Nemenoff of New York and Rockport, Me. who have played with the Boston Orchestra under Koussevitzky at Tanglewood and Symphony Hall. Mr. Luboshutz is an uncle of Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department. They will remain for the opening Monday evening of Grégry's opera, "Richard the Lionhearted."

Artistic Arrangement of Feathers and Beads Makes Profitable Hobby for Mrs. Fitch

Eagle 8/7



Sweater embroidered with beads and sequins and "Priscilla Original," were made by Mrs. Priscilla Fitch in her spare time from work as chief clerk of Lee Draft Board. Hat is of pheasant feathers.

Mrs. Priscilla Edwards Fitch of 26 Paisley Terrace is developing a hobby into a business. For the past three years she has been making what she termed "feather encrusted hats." Now she calls them "Priscilla Originals." The venture started as a benefit for the Berkshire Garden Center, in connection with its annual Harvest Festival. Then she made them for her friends and now, for a modest price, for anyone who places an order. As a side line she decorates sweaters with beads and sequins.

Actually it is Mrs. Fitch's artistic bent and training coming out. After graduating from Miss Hall's School she studied painting with Ethel Heaven Hamilton and Leo Blake, and voice for three years at the Juilliard School of Music, New York, with Royal Dadman and Lambert Murphy.

Spending four years in the Far East, most of the time at Fort Stotenburg, Manila, she circled the globe and brought back many examples of the art of the Pacific Islands which she visited. Since returning, her time has been spent in more routine employment. She was for three seasons in the box office at Tanglewood, where she now works week ends. During the war she was with the Pittsfield Ration Board and now is chief clerk for the Lee Draft Board.

Feathers From Great Barrington

The first feather hat was a suggestion of Mrs. Thomas H. Blodgett of Great Barrington, who had made them herself. The feathers of peacocks, ducks, pheasants and partridges come from Mrs. Blodgett's wild bird sanctuary. They are gathered from the ground, and not plucked from the birds. September is the time when the yield is especially good. "It is like hunting for jewels," Mrs. Fitch says. "It is thrilling to find the brilliant blue-green peacock feathers and colorful ones of the male pheasant."

The occupation is seasonal. "I cannot work on them when it is hot and sticky. Also, they are suited for wear with tweeds and other woolens. The colors are fall colors, especially the browns and tans of the pheasant. They are fascinating to work on. I work from the edge in, and do the top design last."

Felt Is Base

As a base Mrs. Fitch uses a soft piece of felt, shaped like a beanie. She pastes the feathers on one at a time, making the design as she works. It takes about 75 to make the crown design. She never draws a design, either for hats or sweaters. "I work by eye," she says. "It is fascinating." The quills, stuck on the side, give dash. She also decorates felt hats with them."

A shoe box of feathers is not enough for a hat, but Mrs. Fitch has never lacked a supply. She gathers them when they are available and keeps them in moth balls. At first she sewed them to the felt, but they worked loose, so she now uses milliners' paste. Last fall she wore a hat every day for two months in an open car, to test the glue. After driving in all kinds of weather, the feathers were still smoothly in place.

The hats again will be sold for the Garden Center's benefit at the coming Harvest Festival Oct. 3. Since making the first one, she has made 36, sending three to South America, three to Australia and one to England.

Beaded sweaters are a more recent interest. Mrs. Fitch will bead a sweater brought to her or will supply it. She has knitted them, too, but now hasn't the time. She recommends nylon as well as wool. The beads and sequins she gets wherever she can find them—from broken strings of inexpensive pearls, from boxes in attics or buys them in the shops of Pittsfield or New York.

[264]

GREAT MEMORIAL AT TANGLEWOOD

Rec 8/9

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 8 — The annual Koussevitzky Memorial Concert drew 11,400 persons to Tanglewood tonight and a glorious night it was with Leonard Bernstein on the podium and Mahler's "Resurrection" Symphony No. 2 as the major work.

Moment of Silence

After Mr. Bernstein came on the stage there was the usual moment of silence with orchestra and audience standing. Then he launched into the prelude to "Khovanstchina" which was introduced to the Boston Symphony concerts by Dr. Koussevitzky in 1924 and many times repeated under his direction. This was the kind of music in which Dr. Koussevitzky was at his interpretive height. Richly orchestrated, rhythmically arresting and highly flavored, Mr. Bernstein offered a handsome reading with the orchestra responding magnificiently.

Following this, Jennie Tourel came on the stage to sing the "Scherazade" by Ravel, three poems for voice and orchestra to the verses of Tristan Klingsor. The poems are titled, "Asia." "The Eenchanted Flute" and "The Indifferent One." Ravel is at his most exotic, most appealing in his orchestration of these poems. Miss Tourel, magnificient musician she is, proved the ideal interpreter, even though her artistry is today greater than her vocal resources. Eevery phrase was meaningful; every inflection of pitch was right and she was able to make these very intimate poems very real to the vast audience.

Second Portion

The second portion of the program was given over to Mahler's "Symphony No. 2, known as the "Resurrection" symphony. Miss Tourel and Therese Green, sorano, were the soloists with the orchestra and the chorus.

As we listen to Mahler's music it seems that three factors figured in his expressive ideal. First, the dramatic and descriptive element; second, the general idea of God, religion and death, and finally, the folk element. Drama is present in all of Mahler's symphonies. Just as Tenn.

GREAT MEMORIAL

(Continued From Page 1A)

his lieders are abridged dramas, his symphonies are expanded dramas.

Friday night we heard Berlioz' dramatic-symphony "Romeo and Juliet," which is a choral symphony with affinity to Beethoven's 9th. Mahler directly took up with the dramatic development of Beethoven's 9th Symphony when he planned his 2d Symphony. One notes that both Beethoven and Mahler in their first movements are concerned with the human struggle and give to their ideas a purely musical structure. Also, in the final movements, both express their faith in different forms and in so doing enlarge the limits of the classical symphony.

Happier Days

Mahler describes the second movement of his symphony as an interlude, a recollection of happier days. The final three movements are played without pause; the third movement is a scherzo, a wonderful example of Mahler's inventiveness and originality. It is a symphonic arrangement of one of Mahler's songs, St. Anthony of Padua's sermon to the fishes. This movement leads directly into the fourth movement which is entirely a song for contralto solo and orchestra, "Eternal Light." Miss Tourel sang this song with a depth of feeling and understanding, that almost made up for her lack of vocal beauty and vocal richness which this solo demands. It is one of Mahler's most beautiful and expressive songs.

The fifth and final movement of the symphony is the most theatrical structure Mahler ever conceived in symphonic form.

Tonight the chorus sang with a beauty of tone surpassing any Berkshire Center chorus we remember. It was of an earthly quality, relaxed, pure and deeply moving. Thesese Green has a voice of lovely quality, clear and pure, and well projected. There was no sense of strain in her singing of the top notes and the voice floated easily over the audience.

Mr. Bernstein gave a dedicated reading of this work. He was entirely engrossed in it and no effective opportunity was lost by him. The orchestra was in top form and responded nobly to the conductor's demands. In fact, the audience could not be kept from applauding after the first movement and during the dance rhythms of the second movement not a sound could be heard but the music. Mr. Bernstein brought Vienna to Tanglewood in these dances, schmaltz and everything.

All concerned in this performance received a wonderful ovation at its close, an ovation justly earned, for this performance will surley go down as one of the great Tanglewood achievments.

Music

Post 8/9

Mahler Medal to Bernstein

BY TUCKER KEISER

Receiving the Mahler Medal this week end, Leonard Bernstein was tendered an accolade by the most erudite fan club in all the musical world. It is the passionate few and not the directionless multitudes who carry the torches of artistic progress onward, according to Arnold Bennett; the Bruckner Society is made up of just such a devoted coterie, endeavoring to keep the music of Anton Bruckner (1824-1896) and Gustav Mahler (1860-1911) constantly on symphony and recital programs.

The society proposes: (1) to develop in the music-loving publice an ever-increasing interest in the appreciation of Bruckner, Mahler, and "such modern composers as carry on the classical tradition" (I should like to insert a row of exclamation points after that statement; (2) to have works of these composers performed with befitting frequency and regularity by existing musical organizations; (3) to foster the publication in English of books on these composers.'

* * *

In carrying out this manifesto, the society has commissioned Julie Kilenyi, the world-famous Hungarian sculptor, to design two bronze medals, one showing the Bruckner profile and one the Mahler, to be presented to conductors who have done missionary work in programming compositions by these two compc

Mr. Bernstein recently if he did not consider the medal a kind of recognition for valor beyond the call of duty.

"Not at all," he said unhesitatingly, but with a smile. "It is true that I have always loved the music of Mahler, and of course my great success has been with his Second Symphony."

"However, it is rather amusing to receive my Mahler Medal from the Bruckner Society, since I have never conducted one note of Bruckner in my life. I never associate the music of the two composers at all. I keep them apart completely in my mind. They are so utterly different."

* * *

The point is well taken. For its models and its vocabulary, Bruckner's music looks to the past while Mahler's looks to the future. Ready or not, Bruckner got dragged into the Wagner-Brahms battle-royal in Vienna, because benevolent neutrality had become impossible. Technically, Bruckner develops a theme of 20 or 30 bars ad infinitum, running it through a wringer until the theme is a limp rag with nothing more for the imagination of the listener. Beautiful as the music is, is is somewhat garrulous. We are reminded of Keats' dictum: "Heard melodies are sweet, but those unheard are sweeter."

* * *

Despite its philosophical concern with death, Mahler's music, on the other hand, has more in common with 20th century esthetics and techniques. His influence on contemporary music in its neo-classical approach is clearly discernible in such widely divergent composers as Arnold Schoenberg, under the Mahler influence in his student days, and Dimitri Shostakovich, bowing in homage to the Austrian master in his first symphony, composed at the age of nineteen.

The opposition to the music of Mahler and Bruckner had two obvious justifications. One called for too many performers and the other called for too much patience; one demanded a gigantic orchestra and the other demanded interminable performances. So large a musical force is called for in Mahler's Eighth that it has been dubbed "Symphony of a Thousand." Bruckner's demand for large forces of wind instruments make an augmented string section necessary for good balance among the various choirs of the orchestra.

* * *

With few exceptions, one symphony by each composer will fill an entire symphony program. Since 20th century audiences demand variety, the Bruckner slow movements, always the most eloquent sections of Bruckner symphonies, some of which last 35 minutes, seem endless. These adagios are longer than any symphony of the classical period. As an example, a recent recording of the Bruckner Eighth takes five long-playing record sides; a complete Haydn or Mozart four-movement symphony can be had on one side. And yet, on the other hand, cutting would disturb the grandiose formal design.

* * *

The Bruckner Society's official publication, "Chord and Discord," contains learned articles on various facets of the composers' works by some of the world's most honored teachers, conductors, composers, critics, and scholars. It is a rare issue in which the POST'S distinguished music editor, Warren Storey Smith, does not have a dissertation on one or the other of the society's idols. Each issue gives revised batting averages in the form of lists of performances of major works with critical opinions.

This fire of enthusiasm, this passionate devotion, this missionary zeal is a fine thing in our culture; it gives a cutting edge to aesthetic idealism and it gives birth to artistic accomplishment, through the spirit of emulation, even among those who are not moved by the special aims of this particular society.

TON SUNDAY POST, AUGUST 9, 1953

Toll Road Seen Creating Berkshires Tourist Boom

A tourist boom, attracting thousands of Greater Bostonians to resort areas in the western part of Massachusetts, will follow construction of the $200,000,000 East-West toll highway, officials last night predicted.

The super-highway, terminating in West Stockbridge near the New York State line, is expected to cut in half the four-hour automobile trip between Boston and Pittsfield, said John F. Downing, executive secretary of the Berkshire Valley Conference.

The entire Berkshire Valley area, comprising 32 cities and towns, has never been a year-round vacation area for Bostonians, Downing explained. Tourist trade income, second only to the electrical manufacturing industry, is chiefly derived from New Yorkers who cross the State line to spend their vacations, he added.

"This will be changed with the coming of the toll road," Downing said.

"The State's new department of natural resources, under Commissioner Arthur T. Lyman, has announced that $500,000 will be spent to fix up State forests for camping and picnic sites. Berkshire Valley has a large percentage of State forest area, in addition to a wide variety of natural attractions for tourists Downing said.

A recent performance of the Boston Symphony O[illegible] Tanglewood attracted an [illegible] ence of 30,000 [illegible] Staters.

Also expected to benefit by the toll road is the [illegible] area of the State which comprises a number of resorts [illegible] and vacationing spots.

Officials last night [illegible] construction cost estimates still remain at $200,000,000, contrary to a report that delays and alterations for part of the link from the Route 120 terminus in Weston into Boston have upped the estimates another $50,000,000.

New England Takes to Festivals, with Notable Results

Bos Herald 8/9

By ELINOR HUGHES

Once upon a time—it seems in the dim [illegible] summer was an easy, drowsy time in the theatre [illegible] worlds. New Englanders who wanted to hear music [illegible] themselves to Salzburg and Bayreuth, and those who [illegible] desired theatrical entertainment took off to London [illegible] stopping over briefly in New York to catch those [illegible] they had been unable to buy seats for during the [illegible] winter.

Nowadays, though London, Paris, Salzburg and Bayreuth continue to flourish, and a notable new music festival is given each summer at Prades, the seeker after entertainment, highbrow, lowbrow or middle brow, need not go so far afield.

certainly not across the ocean. With Brandeis to launch the proceedings, the Berkshire Festival, the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, the Sturbridge Festival, the Plymouth Rock Center of Music and Drama and, literally, dozens of summer theaters are supplying music, dance, drama and opera of first rate quality, and just across the border in Ontario, Canada, the newly organized Stratford Shakespeare Festival is flourishing. Who says there's no culture in North America? Not I, for sure and certain.

IN THE BERKSHIRES

Even a week-end at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, gives an impressive idea of the variety and quality of musical fare offered by this now world famous organization. Beginning on July 5 and continuing through next Sunday, Aug. 16, there has been an unbroken array of chamber concerts, organ recitals, operas, sonata recitals and nine major concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by Charles Munch, with Leonard Bernstein and Pierre Monteux as guest conductors.

Boris Goldovsky's opera group already has presented three one-act operas by Gluck, Debussy and Chabrier and will on Monday and Tuesday evenings this coming week present Gretry's "Richard the Lionhearted" (in English, of course). Thursday will be the gala "Tanglewood On Parade," with Isaac Stern, William Warfield and Leontyne Price as soloists in the concert by the Boston Symphony, and the list of soloists for the week and the preceding weeks includes Jennie Gregor Piatigorsky, Seymour Lipkin and Lois Marshall, E. Power Biggs in a series of organ recitals in the Shed, and such celebrated chamber groups as the Baroque Trio, and the Hungarian Quartet; Zino Francescatti, Joseph de Pasquale, Ruth Posselt, Doriot Anthony and Nicola Moscona.

Furthermore, and this is best of all, the attendance has mounted steadily over previous seasons, to the point where several of the chamber concerts had to be transferred from the Theater to the Shed, and new records for the series were established right and left. The weather has been remarkably clement, a factor which is purely fortuitous but which has certainly helped the attendance greatly.

No solution has yet been found for the pressing problem of getting cars out of the parking lot following the evening concerts. It was not unusual for people to be close on an hour enroute from Tanglewood to the center of Lenox, and that is a matter of only two miles. Three exits are totally inadequate to handle several thousand cars, and all that saved the situation was the remarkable patience of the patrons and the efforts of the special traffic police.

A final note: there are so many rules and regulations in our every day life that it is probably more than unkind to suggest any more, but there does seem to be the vaguest of notions regarding attire at the Festival. For [illegible] on the grass at night [illegible] are a requirement [illegible] slacks for those who [illegible] blankets practically [illegible] was an informal [illegible] downright [illegible] of some visitors [illegible] to the visual or aesthetic [illegible] of the occasion [illegible] a matter of [illegible] asserting itself [illegible] occasion designed primarily [illegible] enjoyment of music [illegible] regard for visual pleasure [illegible] be observed. The setting [illegible] something more than [illegible] outfits parading the grounds.

STURBRIDGE FESTIVAL

Those in search of [illegible] tainment need, n[illegible] take themselves as [illegible] which is quite a [illegible] however energetic [illegible] Sixty miles west [illegible] to New York, there [illegible] Sturbridge Festival [illegible] a few weeks ago and [illegible] to the end of this [illegible] ambitious and success[illegible] ing is something unique [illegible] though not in the [illegible] "The Common Glory [illegible] Lost Colony" are [illegible] stitutions.

New England weather [illegible] it is, unpredictable [illegible] right contrary, it [illegible] of a gambling [illegible] of an outdoor [illegible] 1600 people and [illegible] nights a week [illegible] far, as in the [illegible] shire Festival [illegible] off, and the S[illegible] flourishes.

The setting [illegible] proved upon [illegible] tural amphitheater [illegible] of Old Sturbridge [illegible] only has admirable [illegible] is also blessed w[illegible] good acoustics. [illegible] some help, of course [illegible] of blacktop paving [illegible] terraced to give [illegible] for the seats. A[illegible] and a fine permanent [illegible] erous stage and [illegible] chestra pit, and [illegible] with a variety of [illegible] added, plus a br[illegible] the stream and a [illegible] the big parking a[illegible] theater.

The entertainment [illegible] "The Devil and D[illegible] a musical play [illegible] Moore and Step[illegible] from Mr. Benet's [illegible] story of that [illegible] matter is pure [illegible] suit the setting. [illegible] Benet work is [illegible] which illustrates [illegible] toms of mid-19th [illegible] Hampshire.

The rural back[illegible] however, imply a [illegible] amateurish about [illegible] itself, which was [illegible] carried out by first [illegible] al talent and enlist[illegible] accomplished perfo[illegible] of them from the [illegible] Opera Company.

Whether future [illegible] "The Devil and Da[illegible] to be given season [illegible] or whether other A[illegible] operas are being cons[illegible] not know. But I am sure [illegible] first season at Sturbridge has [illegible] duced something of such quality that you should not miss it.

[265]

INFORMATION OBSCURED

GREAT MEMORIAL AT TANGLEWOOD

Ref 8/9

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 8 — The annual Koussevitzky Memorial Concert drew 11,400 persons to Tanglewood tonight and a glorious night it was with Leonard Bernstein on the podium and Mahler's "Resurrection" Symphony No. 2 as the major work.

Moment of Silence

After Mr. Bernstein came on the stage there was the usual moment of silence with orchestra and audience standing. Then he launched into the prelude to "Khovanstchina" which was introduced to the Boston Symphony concerts by Dr. Koussevitzky in 1924 and many times repeated under his direction. This was the kind of music in which Dr. Koussevitzky was at his interpretive height. Richly orchestrated, rhythmically arresting and highly flavored, Mr. Bernstein offered a handsome reading with the orchestra responding magnificiently.

Following this, Jennie Tourel came on the stage to sing the "Scherazade" by Ravel, three poems for voice and orchestra to the verses of Tristan Klingsor. The poems are titled, "Asia." "The Eenchanted Flute" and "The Indifferent One." Ravel is at his most exotic, most appealing in his orchestration of these poems. Miss Tourel, magnificient musician she is, proved the ideal interpreter, even though her artistry is today greater than her vocal resources. Eevery phrase was meaningful; every inflection of pitch was right and she was able to make these very intimate poems very real to the vast audience.

Second Portion

The second portion of the program was given over to Mahler's "Symphony No. 2, known as the "Resurrection" symphony. Miss Tourel and Therese Green, sorano, were the soloists with the orchestra and the chorus.

As we listen to Mahler's music it seems that three factors figured in his expressive ideal. First, the dramatic and descriptive element; second, the general idea of God, religion and death, and finally, the folk element. Drama is present in all of Mahler's symphonies. Just as his lieders are abridged dramas, his symphonies are expanded dramas.

GREAT MEMORIAL

(Continued From Page 1A)

Friday night we heard Berlioz' dramatic-symphony "Romeo and Juliet," which is a choral symphony with affinity to Beethoven's 9th. Mahler directly took up with the dramatic development of Beethoven's 9th Symphony when he planned his 2d Symphony. One notes that both Beethoven and Mahler in their first movements are concerned with the human struggle and give to their ideas a purely musical structure. Also, in the final movements, both express their faith in different forms and in so doing enlarge the limits of the classical symphony.

Happier Days

Mahler describes the second movement of his symphony as an interlude, a recollection of happier days. The final three movements are played without pause; the third movement is a scherzo, a wonderful example of Mahler's inventiveness and originality. It is a symphonic arrangement of one of Mahler's songs, St. Anthony of Padua's sermon to the fishes. This movement leads directly into the fourth movement which is entirely a song for contralto solo and orchestra, "Eternal Light." Miss Tourel sang this song with a depth of feeling and understanding, that almost made up for her lack of vocal beauty and vocal richness which this solo demands. It is one of Mahler's most beautiful and expressive songs.

The fifth and final movement of the symphony is the most theatrical structure Mahler ever conceived in symphonic form.

Tonight the chorus sang with a beauty of tone surpassing any Berkshire Center chorus we remember. It was of an earthly quality, relaxed, pure and deeply moving. Thesese Green has a voice of lovely quality, clear and pure, and well projected. There was no sense of strain in her singing of the top notes and the voice floated easily over the audience.

Mr. Bernstein gave a dedicated reading of this work. He was entirely engrossed in it and no effective opportunity was lost by him. The orchestra was in top form and responded nobly to the conductor's demands. In fact, the audience could not be kept from applauding after the first movement and during the dance rhythms of the second movement not a sound could be heard but the music. Mr. Bernstein brought Vienna to Tanglewood in these dances, schmaltz and everything.

All concerned in this performance received a wonderful ovation at its close, an ovation justly earned, for this performance will surley go down as one of the great Tanglewood achievments.

Music

~~Post~~ 8/9

Mahler Medal to Bernstein

BY TUCKER KEISER

Receiving the Mahler Medal this week end, Leonard Bernstein was tendered an accolade by the most erudite fan club in all the musical world. It is the passionate few and not the directionless multitudes who carry the torches of artistic progress onward, according to Arnold Bennett; the Bruckner Society is made up of just such a devoted coterie, endeavoring to keep the music of Anton Bruckner (1824-1896) and Gustav Mahler (1860-1911) constantly on symphony and recital programs.

The society proposes: (1) to develop in the music-loving publice an ever-increasing interest in the appreciation of Bruckner, Mahler, and "such modern composers as carry on the classical tradition" (I should like to insert a row of exclamation points after that statement; (2) to have works of these composers performed with befitting frequency and regularity by existing musical organizations; (3) to foster the publication in English of books on these composers.

* * *

In carrying out this manifesto, the society has commissioned Julie Kilenyi, the world-famous Hungarian sculptor, to design two bronze medals, one showing the Bruckner profile and one the Mahler, to be presented to conductors who have done missionary work in programming compositions by these two composers.

Mr. Bernstein, the youngest conductor ever to receive the medal, is in distinguished company as a recipient. Among th conductors previously so ho ored are Bruno Walter, Ot Klemperer, Dimitri Mitropoul Fritz Reiner, Leopold Stoko sky, and Boston's Serge Kous vitzky and Richard Burgin.

* * *

Magnificent performances Mahler's "Resurrection" phony No. 2 by Mr. Bernste New York, Boston, Chicag Tanglewood prompte awarding of the medal. T not the only Mahler the conductor has performed. played with considerable the Fourth and Sixth S nies and "Das Lied Erde." in form Mahler Symphony, but not so cause of the compose or superstitious refus ceed Beethoven's nine.

Knowing the popula tion that Bruckner a are names that driv away from box-offic on- sic, e in es- is in- music oach is widely Arnold Mahler ent days, ch, bowing strian mas- phony, com- nineteen.

ONAL
NCES
RE

o the music of ckner had two tions. One called formers and the for too much pa- manded a gigantic the other demand- ble performances. sical force is called er's Eighth that it bbed "Symphony of a Thousand." Bruckner's demand for large forces of wind instruments make an augmented string section necessary for good balance among the various choirs of the orchestra.

* * *

With few exceptions, one symphony by each composer will fill an entire symphony program. Since 20th century audiences demand variety, the Bruckner slow movements, always the most eloquent sections of Bruckner symphonies, some of which last 35 minutes, seem endless. These adagios are longer than any symphony of the classical period. As an example, a recent recording of the Bruckner Eighth takes five long-playing record sides; a complete Haydn or Mozart four-movement symphony can be had on one side. And yet, on the other hand, cutting would disturb the grandiose formal design.

* * *

The Bruckner Society's official publication, "Chord and Discord," contains learned articles on various facets of the composers' works by some of the world's most honored teachers, conductors, composers, critics, and scholars. It is a rare issue in which the POST'S distinguished editor, Warren Storey not have a disserta- other of the ue gives the es of ical c sm, this mission- g in our ting edge and it gives nplishment, emulation. who are not aims of this

---

10 Eddie Zack Show

alden Woman ins Letter Contest

e winning pro and con let- riters who entered a con- to reply to the query, d Princess Margaret be d to marry the man of her , conducted on the WBZ- dies' Choice, were an- s last week.

irst prize winners are D. Phillips, 39 Porter en, Mass., for her let- ng why the Princess allowed to marry the choice, and Mrs. J. P. Box 421, Route 9, Va., on why Princess ould not marry him. was awarded a $100 ps wrote: "Princess ould be allowed to she chooses. Mar- llment of all your e, companionship, nd raising a fami- es to have her

---

TON SUNDAY POST, AUGUST 9, 1953

Toll Road Seen Creating Berkshires Tourist Boom

A tourist boom, attracting thousands of Greater Bostonians to resort areas in the western part of Massachusetts, will follow construction of the $200,000,000 East-West toll highway, officials last night predicted.

The super-highway, terminating in West Stockbridge near the New York State line, is expected to cut in half the four-hour automobile trip between Boston and Pittsfield, said John F. Downing, executive secretary of the Berkshire Valley Conference.

The entire Berkshire Valley area, comprising 32 cities and towns, has never been a year-round vacation area for Bostonians, Downing explained. Tourist trade income, second only to the electrical manufacturing industry, is chiefly derived from New Yorkers who cross the State line to spend their vacations, he added.

"This will be changed with the coming of the toll road," Downing said.

"The State's new department of natural resources, under Commissioner Arthur T. Lyman, has announced that $500,000 will be spent to fix up State forests for camping and picnic sites. Berkshire Valley has a large percentage of State forest area, in addition to a wide variety of natural attractions for tourists, Downing said.

A recent performance of [illegible] Boston Symphony O[illegible] Tanglewood attracted an [illegible] ence of 30,000, mostly o[illegible] Staters.

Also expected to benefit by [illegible] toll road is the Pioneer V[illegible] area of the State which [illegible] prises a number of [illegible] and vacationing spots.

Officials last night maintained construction cost estimates still remain at $200,000,000, contrary to a report that delays, and alterations for part of the link from the Route 120 terminus in Weston into Boston have upped the estimates another $50,000,000.

~~Bos Herald~~ 8/9

New England Takes to Festivals, with Notable Results

By ELINOR HUGHES

Once upon a time—it seems in the dim, remote [illegible] summer was an easy, drowsy time in the theater and music worlds. New Englanders who wanted to hear music would [illegible] themselves to Salzburg and Bayreuth, and those who pass[illegible] desired theatrical entertainment took off to London [illegible] stopping over briefly in New York to catch those shows [illegible] they had been unable to buy seats for during the autumn [illegible] winter.

Nowadays, though London, Paris, Salzburg and Bayreuth continue to flourish, and a notable new music festival is given each summer at Prades, the seeker after entertainment, highbrow, lowbrow or middle brow, need not go so far afield.

certainly not across the ocean. With Brandeis to launch the proceedings, the Berkshire Festival, the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, the Sturbridge Festival, the Plymouth Rock Center of Music and Drama and, literally, dozens of summer theaters are supplying music, dance, drama and opera of first rate quality, and just across the border in Ontario, Canada, the newly organized Stratford Shakespeare Festival is flourishing. Who says there's no culture in North America? Not I, for sure and certain.

IN THE BERKSHIRES

Even a week-end at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, gives an impressive idea of the variety and quality of musical fare offered by this now world famous organization. Beginning on July 5 and continuing through next Sunday, Aug. 16, there has been an unbroken array of chamber concerts, organ recitals, operas, sonata recitals and nine major concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by Charles Munch, with Leonard Bernstein and Pierre Monteux as guest conductors.

Boris Goldovsky's opera group already has presented three one-act operas by Gluck, Debussy and Chabrier and will on Monday and Tuesday evenings this coming week present Gretry's "Richard the Lionhearted" (in English, of course). Thursday will be the gala "Tanglewood On Parade," with Isaac Stern, William Warfield and Leontyne Price as soloists in the concert by the Boston Symphony, and the list of soloists for the week and the preceding weeks includes Jennie Gregor Piatigorsky, Seymour Lipkin and Lois Marshall, E. Power Biggs in a series of organ recitals in the Shed, and such celebrated chamber groups as the Baroque Trio, and the Hungarian Quartet; Zino Francescatti, Joseph de Pasquale, Ruth Posselt, Doriot Anthony and Nicola Moscona.

Furthermore, and this is best of all, the attendance has mounted steadily over previous seasons, to the point where several of the chamber concerts had to be transferred from the Theater to the Shed, and new records for the series were established right and left. The weather has been remarkably clement, a factor which is purely fortuitous but which has certainly helped the attendance greatly.

No solution has yet been found for the pressing problem of getting cars out of the parking lot following the evening concerts. It was not unusual for people to be close on an hour enroute from Tanglewood to the center of Lenox, and that is a matter of only two miles. Three exits are totally inadequate to handle several thousand cars, and all that saved the situation was the remarkable patience of the patrons and the efforts of the special traffic police.

A final note: there are so many rules and regulations in our every day life that it is probably more than unkind to suggest any more, but there does seem to be the vaguest of notions regarding attire at the Festival. For [illegible] on the grass at night, wa[illegible] are a requirement, a[illegible] slacks for those [illegible] blankets practically [illegible] was an informality [illegible] downright sloppin[illegible] of some visitors [illegible] to the visual or aesthetic [illegible] of the occasion. It was [illegible] a matter of ragged [illegible] asserting itself, but [illegible] occasion designed prima[illegible] enjoyment of music. I [illegible] regard for visual pleas[illegible] be observed. The setting deserves something more than those [illegible] outfits parading the grounds.

STURBRIDGE FESTIVAL

Those in search of [illegible] tainment need, not [illegible] take themselves as [illegible] which is quite a goodly [illegible] however energetic [illegible] Sixty miles west, along [illegible] to New York, there [illegible] Sturbridge Festival, which opened a few weeks ago and will continue to the end of this month. This ambitious and successful undertaking is something unique hereabouts, though not in the [illegible] where "The Common Glory" and "The Lost Colony" are [illegible] stitutions.

New England weather [illegible] it is, unpredictable and [illegible] right contrary, it [illegible] of a gambling inst[illegible] of an outdoor amph[illegible] 1600 people and [illegible] nights a week for [illegible] far, as in the ca[illegible] shire Festival, th[illegible] off, and the Sturb[illegible] flourishes.

The setting could [illegible] proved upon, since [illegible] tural amphitheater [illegible] of Old Sturbridge V[illegible] only has admirable [illegible] is also blessed with good acoustics. [illegible] some help, of course [illegible] of blacktop paving [illegible] terraced to give a [illegible] for the seats. An [illegible] and a fine perman[illegible] erous stage and [illegible] chestra pit, and fail[illegible] with a variety of s[illegible] added, plus a bridge [illegible] the stream and a road [illegible] the big parking are[illegible] theater.

The entertainment [illegible] "The Devil and D[illegible] a musical play with [illegible] Moore and Steph[illegible] from Mr. Benet's [illegible] story of that [illegible] matter is pure [illegible] suit the setting [illegible] Benet work is pre[illegible] which illustrates [illegible] toms of mid-19th [illegible] Hampshire.

The rural backg[illegible] however, imply any[illegible] amateurish about [illegible] itself, which was [illegible] carried out by first [illegible] al talent and enlists [illegible] accomplished perfo[illegible] of them from the [illegible] Opera Company.

Whether future p[illegible] "The Devil and Dan[illegible] to be given season a[illegible] or whether other Ameri[illegible] operas are being considered I [illegible] not know. But I am sure that [illegible] first season at Sturbridge has produced something of such quality that you should not miss it.

[265]

Will Play Milhaud Concerto

Standard-Times N. Bedford

GREGOR PIATIGORSKY

Cellist Piatigorsky will be soloist in Darius Milhaud's Concerto for Cello No. 1 at Tanglewood this afternoon. He also will be featured with Joseph de Pasquale, viola, in Richard Strauss' "Don Qiuxote" on the same Berkshire Music Festival program.

Tanglewood Season Ends, Record Set

8/8

Special to The Standard-Times

LENOX, Aug. 8—With an anticipated attendance at its 15 concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra of 100,000, an expected 10,000 at Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center (the Summer school of music maintained by the symphony); and a predictable 40,000 patrons at the 38 concerts and demonstrations of the school's departments, the 16th Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood concludes its 1953 program next weekend.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, conducts the concluding concerts on next Friday night and next Sunday afternoon, and Leonard Bernstein will be on the great Music Shed's podium for the concert next Saturday.

The Friday night program will be given over in its entirety to Brahms' "German Requiem," for chorus and solists. Canadian soprano Lois Marshall and baritone William Warfield will make their Tanglewood debuts as soloists, with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students participating.

On the Saturday night program Leonard Bernstein will feature the "Sinfonia India" of Carlos Chavez, which had its premiere by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1936, the composer conducting. Seymour Lipkin, pianist, will be soloist in the Ravel "Concerto for the Left Hand," which will have its first Tanglewood performance at the concluding concert. Other Tanglewood premieres of the weekend are Sibelius "Symphony No. 4," Saturday night, and Chabrier's "Bourree Fantasque" Sunday afternoon.

During the final week of the Berkshire Festival two performances will be given, next Monday and Tuesday nights, Auguste Gretry's three-act opera, "Richard Coeur-de-Lion" "(Richard the Lion-Hearted)," of 1784, not presented within living memory, to be performed in English by students of the Berkshire Music Center's opera department headed by Boris Goldovsky.

Final Week of Berkshire Festval

Globe 8/9

'Tanglewood on Parade' Thursday Eve—Berkshire Festival Ends Next Week-End

GREGOR PIATIGORSKY will be soloist in Milhaud's Concerto for Cello, No. 1, at Tanglewood this afternoon. With Joseph De Pasquale, violist, he also will play Strauss' "Don Quixote" under Charles Munch.

Charles Munch will conduct this afternoon's concert of the Berkshire Music Festival at 2:30 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood in Lenox.

Gregor Piatigorsky will be soloist in Milhaud's Cello Concerto No. 1, and will join with violist Joseph DePasquale in Strauss' "Don Quixote." The program will also include Schubert's Fifth Symphony; Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings; Roussel's Second Suite from "Bacchus and Ariane."

Two performances will be given, on Monday and Tuesday evenings of Andre Gretry's three-act opera, "Richard the Lion-Hearted" by students of the Berkshire Music Center's opera department under Boris Goldovsky. The Gretry opera, in English translation by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell, has been staged by Miss Caldwell. Leads will be sung by John McCollum, Alvin Edmonson, Richard Cassilly, Robert Rue, Theresa Green, Lois McCauley, Christina Cardillo.

"Tanglewood on Parade," the Berkshire Music Festival's annual fiesta for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, will be held Thursday rain or shine.

Boris Goldovsky will deliver a welcome at 5:45 p. m. From 6 to 7 the various departments of the Music Center will be shown in operation. The Orchestra will play short symphonic works; opera scenes will be shown in the Theatre-Concert Hall; the chamber music department will offer a program in the Chamber Music Hall.

Visitors are invited to bring picnic suppers for the lawn party at 7 o'clock.

Charles Munch and Leonard Bernstein will conduct a gala concert in the Shed at 8:15. The program will feature Isaac Stern in Beethoven's Violin Concerto; baritone William Warfield and his wife, soprano Leontyne Price, and the Festival Chorus in scenes from Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess."

The concert will be followed by dancing on the lawn for all.

Following are the programs to be presented next week-end, the final concerts of this season's Festival:

Friday at 8:30 (Charles Munch, conducting)—Brahms, German, Requiem. Soloists, Lois Marshall, soprano; William Warfield, baritone, and the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

Saturday at 8:30 (Leonard Bernstein, conducting)—Sibelius, Symphony No. 4, in A minor; Chavez, Sinfonia India; Brahms, Symphony No. 2, in D major.

Sunday at 2:30. (Charles Munch, conducting) —Schubert, Symphony in B minor ("Unfinished"); Chabrier, Bourree Fantasque; Wagner, Prelude and Love-Death, "Tristan und Isolde"; Wagner, A Siegfied Idyll; Wagner, "Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg," Excerpts from Act III; Ravel, Piano Concerto for the left hand (soloist, Seymour Lipkin); Ravel, "La Valse."

Tanglewood Record

This is a remarkable season for attendance at the Berkshire Music Festival in Tanglewood. On July 31, the first concert of the main series attracted the largest opening-night audience in Festival history to the Music Shed: 10,300. The next night the figure was 10,800. Because it rained until 1 p. m. last Sunday, the matinee crowd numbered only 9900, but still the weekend total of 31,000 persons broke all records there.

Tanglewood Rehearsal

Boston Symphony Gives Preview of Concert Today

By Francis O. Perkins

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 8.—The Boston Symphony Orchestra played four hours today in Tanglewood's music she where E. Power Biggs provided a fifth hour of public musical activity with this afternoon's organ recital.

In the morning Charles Munch rehearsed the orchestra in the program which closes the Berkshire Festival's last week end but onetomorrow afternoon. Leonard Bernstein conducted tonight's program, which was dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky. It included the prelude to Moussorgsky's opera "Khovanstchina," Ravel's "Scheherazade" and Mahler's second symphony in C minor. Jennie Tourel sang the Ravel set of three songs and was the contralto soloist in the Mahler symphony. The other singer in this monumental work were Theresa Green, soprano, and the Berkshire Festival chorus trained by Hugh Ross.

Over half the music shed was filled for this morning's rehearsal, which offered a complete preview of Sunday's concert at a bargain rate of one dollar for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund. Gregor Piatigorsky was the soloist in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote" and Darius Milhaud's first cello concerto. The orchestra also played Schubert's fifth symphony, Samuel Barber's adagio for strings and Roussel's second "Bacchus et Ariane Suite."

The chorus and Miss Tourel also sang in last night's complete performance of Hector Berlioz' dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet." John McCollum, tenor, and Nicola Moscona, bass, were the other soloists. This ranks as one of Berlioz' major and most memorable works, but owing to its length, more than an hour and a half, and its need of a chorus, it is very seldom performed in full. It is uneven in quality and eloquence; its best sections are on the whole those for orchestra alone and particularly those which are often played separately. But a complete hearing is valuable in giving an idea of the form, purpose and variety of music which reflects much of the drama and emotions of its Shakespearean subject.

Program Interrupted

There is a strong sense of drama and increasing excitement in the orchestra prelude. It was unfortunate that the performance had then to be halted to admit late arrivals, this interrupted the already created expressive tension. The unfamiliar sections which followed the intermission gave a sense of less expressive communication and more of length. Berlioz here is still a master craftsman, but the music has less to say, the final climax which follows Friar Laurence's long lyric speech, presented persuasively by Mr. Moscona, is relatively conventional. During the last half hour the drama is mainly over; the rest is largely epilogue and commentary.

The middle sections, such as that depicting Romeo alone and the garden scene, wrought their customary magic. Here Mr. Munch and the orchestra were memorably eloquent; there was an engrossing expressive atmosphere as well as an ingratiating quality of lingering lyric tone. The Queen Mab schergo was played with subtle, light-footed delicacy. The chorus fared commendably, gaining in expressive color as the performance advanced. Miss Tourel's singing was notable for imaginative understanding and appealing warmth of tone, and Mr. McCollum's tones were clear and well focused. All were warmly applauded by the audience of 7,500.

TIGHT BINDING

THE NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, AUGUST 9, 1953. X 5

TANGLEWOOD OPERA GROUP PERFORMS 18TH CENTURY GRETR

Christina Cardillo and Robert Rue as the young lovers in a rarely heard performance of the composer's "Richard Coeur-de-Lion."

Alvin Edmonson (left) as King Richard in a scene with his faithful follower, Blondel, sung by John McCollum. The opera will be heard in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Lenox Monday and Tuesday ev in an English version by Boris Goldovsky and Sarah Ca monson with Lois McCauley as Margaret of Flanders. The will be sung by an all-student cast of Berkshire Music Center.

Tel. Chelsea 3-8500

Cir. (D 331,853) (S 567,298)

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE

AUG 9 - 1953

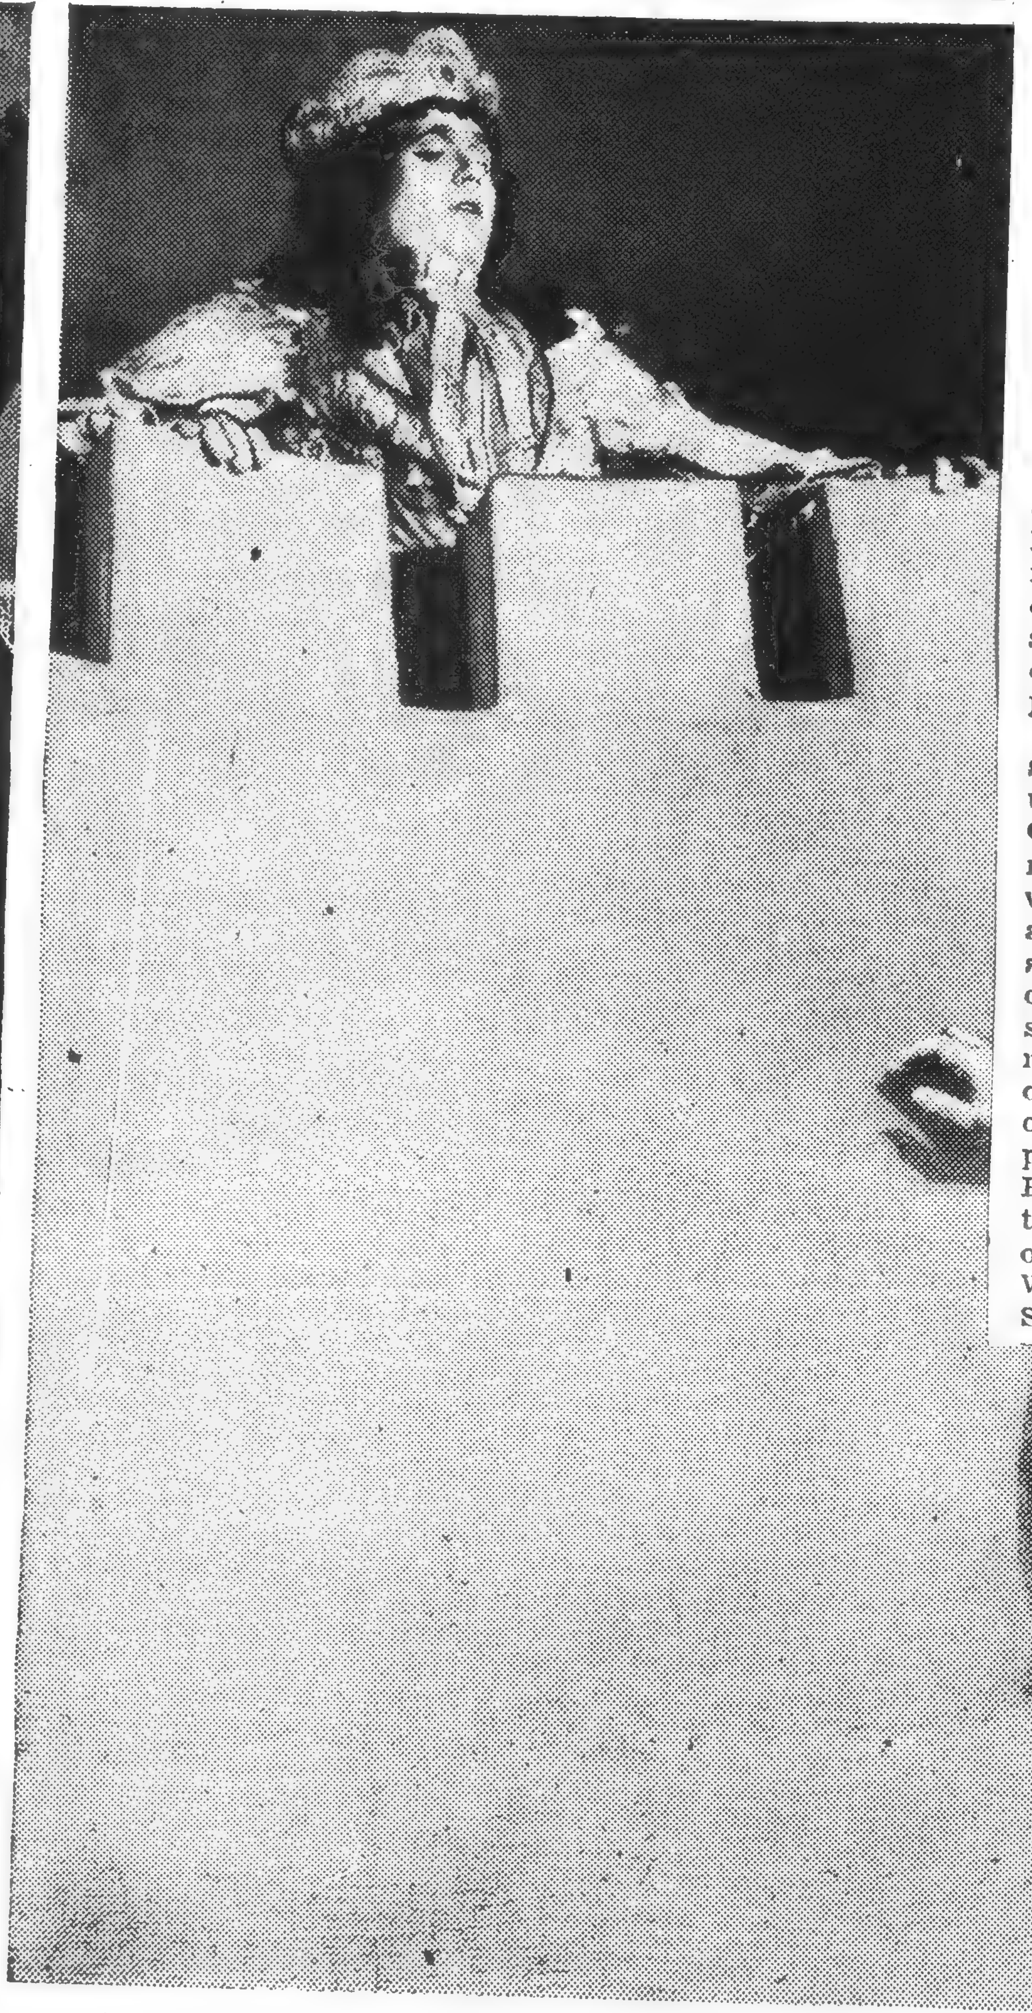
A scene from Gretry's opera "Richard Coeur-De-Lion," to be presented by students of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood tomorrow night and Tuesday. Featured in the cast of the opera, which has not been given in the United States since 1800, are Christina Cardillo as Laurette, John McCollum as Blondel and Lee Cass as Sir William.

TIGHT BINDING

THE NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY

TANGLEWOOD OPERA GROUP PERF

Christina Cardillo and Robert Rue as the young lovers in a rarely heard performance of the composer's "Richard Coeur-de-Lion."



Alvin Edmonson (left) as King Richard in a scene with his faithful follower, Blondel, sung by John McCollum. The opera will be heard in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Lenox Monday and Tuesday ev in an English version by Boris Goldovsky and Sarah Ca

Clemens

THE DANCE: FESTIVAL

New Works Predominate In New London Season

By JOHN MARTIN

JOSE LIMON

To appear in Connecticut festival, Aug. 20-23.

THE sixth annual American Dance Festival, which will consist of five performances in the Palmer Auditorium of Connecticut College in New London Aug. 20-23, will concern itself largely with the first presentations of new works. On the schedule are five new ensemble compositions and six smaller pieces.

Doris Humphrey will be represented by a "dance drama," as yet untitled, set to Benjamin Britten's Quartet No. 2 and the first movement of his Quartet No. 1, which will be performed by José Limon and his company. Mr. Limon himself will contribute a "farce-in-dance" called "Don Juan Fantasia" set to Liszt's music of that name. Sophie Maslow is at work on two pieces for her company; one is entitled "Suite" and employs music by Jimmy Yancey, Pinetop Smith and Pete Johnson; the other is "The Wall," based on John Hersey's book about the Warsaw ghetto, with music by Samuel Matlowsky. The fifth pre-Pillow. Miss Maslow's "Th lage I Knew" (Sam of Ma Gregory Tucker) and M "Moor's Pavane" (P also be repeated.

The schedule of program follows:

THURSDAY, Aug. 2 mon and Company in new phrey-Britten work "Inv (Humphrey-Lloyd), "Night (Humphrey-Ramey); Dance Company in "Ma (Butler-Provenzano); Paul ner in new solo (Copland).

FRIDAY Sophie Maslo

Tel. Chelsea

Cir. (D 331,853) (S 567,298)

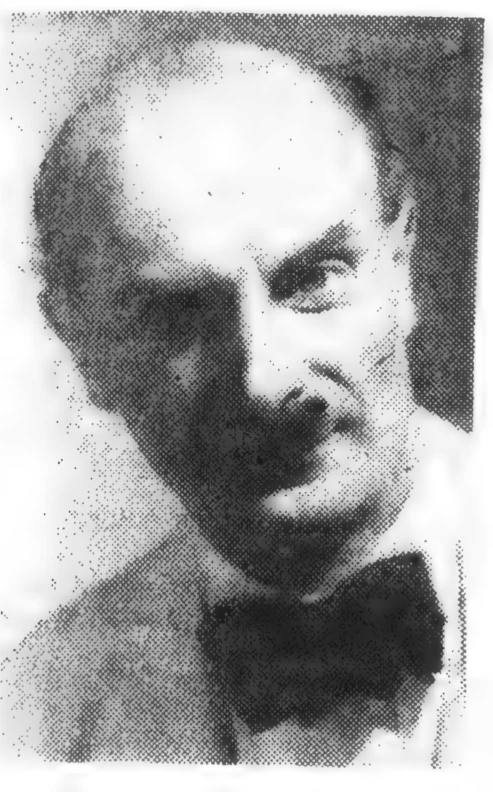
This Clipping From

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE

AUG 9 - 1953

A scene from Gretry's opera "Richard Coeur-De-Lion," to be presented by students of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood tomorrow night and Tuesday. Featured in the cast of the opera, which has not been given in the United States since 1800, are Christina Cardillo as Laurette, John McCollum as Blondel and Lee Cass as Sir William.

Tanglewood Tutors



HUGH ROSS

BORIS GOLDOVSKY

Hugh Ross and Boris Goldovsky present stellar accomplishments at Tanglewood in Lenox in this concluding week of the Berkshire Festival. Mr. Ross trained the chorus for this week end's Berlioz' dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet" and Mahler's "Resurrection" and for next Friday night's Brahms Requiem. Mr. Goldovsky's students are to present Auguste Gretry's opera "Richard Coeur-de-Lion" on Monday and Tuesday night in the Theater-Concert Hall.

Tanglewood Tales

Lenox, Aug. 8—Theresa Green, a scholarship student in the Berkshire Music Center's opera department, was awarded by Leonard Bernstein the coveted soprano role in the Mahler Symphony No. 2 at Tanglewood. The performance took place tonight. Aged 24, a native of Baltimore, in private life she is Mrs. Gilbert Coleman of New York City. She is a Marian Anderson award winner, has been a scholarship pupil at Curtis Institute, Philadelphia, has won a John Hay Whitney Fellowship, and three times has won the Arthur Godfrey "Talent Scout" award on his television program.

Theresa is the daughter of a minister, one of nine children, and had her first lessons from her mother, church organist and teacher in Baltimore. She has soloed under Reginald Stewart with the Baltimore Symphony, made her New York Town Hall debut in 1950. At Tanglewood this summer she sang the role of Julie in Gluck's comic opera, "The Drunkard Reformed." Next Tuesday night she will have the leading feminine role of Marguerite in Gretry's rarely-heard opera, "Richard the Lion-Hearted." In September she returns to the professional concert stage for her first national tour, more than 60 engagements in the U. S. and Canada, as far afield as Newfoundland.

Distinguished Mexican composer-conductor Carlos Chavez, guest conductor at Tanglewood this summer introduced the violin concerto he wrote in 1952 at a lecture-recital at Tanglewood last Friday afternoon. The work was analyzed by composer Barney Childs, and performed by two guest artists, Miss Viviane Bertolani, violinist, New York City, who played it at its Los Angeles premiere, with Harry Kondaks, Boston, as pianist. At the season's final concert of the student symphony orchestra, Saturday, August 15, at 3 p. m. in the Music Shed, Mr. Chavez will lead the orchestra in his 1932 composition, "H. P." (meaning horse power), "Sinfonia de Baile" (ballet symphony).

Mrs. Alma Mahler Werfel, widow of Gustav Mahler, was guest of honor at the Berkshire Festival when Leonard Bernstein conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program which included her late husband's Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection"). Following the performance, the conductor was awarded the Bruckner Society Medal in a ceremony in the Green Room.

Other Tanglewood guests this week end include Samuel Barber, the young American composer who was a teacher of composition

Symphony Orchestra Sunday, afternoon; and the noted duo-pianists, Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff, of New York, who have given Tanglewood recitals. Mr. Luboshutz is an uncle of Boris Goldovsky, head of the summer school's opera department, and they will be his guests at the opening performances Monday night of the Gretry opera, "Richard the Lion-Hearted."

Newest foreign student at Tanglewood is Jaap Drielsma, of the Amsterdam Conservatory, in the Dutch City, a concert pianist who is a Study Group student in Department V.

Samuel Krachmalnick, who followed his brother Jacob, now concertmaster of the Philadelphia Orchestra, as a Tanglewood student, and who has one of Leonard Bernstein's more personable conducting pupils this summer, has left for New York, to conduct the subway circuit tour of the popular musical comedy, "Top Banana. The younger Krachmalnick, 27, of St. Louis, directed an orchestra of Department I students in last week's performance by the opera department of Debussy's L'Enfant Prodigue."

"Richard the Lion-Hearted," the 18th century French opera which students of Boris Goldovsky's department of the Berkshire Music Center present at Tanglewood on Monday and Tuesday nights, will have alternates for two of the principal leads. Alvin Edmonson will sing the title role on Monday night, Richard Cassilly on Tuesday; Theresa Green will sing Marguerite on Monday, Lois McCauley on Tuesday. Other principal roles are sung by John McCollum (Blondel), Lee Cass (Sir Williams), Robert Rue (Florestan), Christina Cardillo (Laurette). Mr. Goldovsky will conduct an orchestra of 38 students from Department I.

Leonard Bernstein, left, and Lukas Foss, who will be heard in four-hands at the piano in a real "first" at a benefit performance for the Stockbridge Bowl Association, on the lawn of Serenak, the home of Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, in Lenox, on Tuesday afternoon at 3.30. This will be the first time that these two noted musicians have appeared as duetists.

CARLOS CHAVEZ WILL BE HONORED AT TANGLEWOOD

Mexican Composer's 'Sinfonia India' to Be Given During Last Week End

Lenox, Aug. 8—The distinguished composer-conductor Carols Chavez will be honored during the final weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts when, on Saturday night Leonard Bernstein conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a performance of his "Sinfonia India", composed in 1935-6, and given its first concert performance by the Boston Symphony in April, 1936, when the composer was the orchestra's guest conductor.

In 1928, Mr. Chavez organized the Symphony Orchestra of Mexico, which he has built into one of the finest ensembles on the continent. In that year he was appointed director of the National Conservatory of Music, in 1933 he was named chief of the Department of Fine Arts of the Secretariat of Public Education, and under President Aleman's regime, in 1946 was named Mexico's director of fine arts.

Carlos began to compose as a child. His first symphony dates from 1918. In the next three years he wrote extensively for orchestra, piano, ensemble and voice. The String Quartet of 1921 was a summation of his apprenticeship and a clear intimation of his mature works.

Chosen as Conductor

It was in July 1928, that he accepted the post of conductor of what was then, in Mexico City, the orchestra of the Musicians' Union. From an aggregation of uncertain power and vague character, he has transformed it into the major symphony it is. The Orquesta Sinfonica de Mexico gave its first concerts for workers and peasants in a park on the outskirts of Mexico City, with no admission, no tickets. Now it has a large subscription audience in the Palace of Fine Arts. After 18 years, in July 1945, he announced his resignation: he was in himself the Orchestra's conductor, artistic director, financial director, regisseur, general manager, advertising manager, publicity director. President Alemen asked him to remain as titular conductor, and in 1946 appointed him director of fine arts: he has since established Mexico's first official Museum of Fine Arts.

Among his other important compositions are "Sinfonia de Antigona" (1937) three great choral works, "Tierra Mojada", "El Sol", "Llamadas": a ballet for Martha Graham, known in this country as "Dark Meadow", commissioned by the Library of Congress; a Concerto for Piano, premiered in 1942; a Concerto for Violin, premiered in 1952.

Several Commissions

His Symphony No. 4, commissioned by the Louisville Philharmonic, was given its first performance, the composer conducting the orchestra, February, 1953. He is in process of composing a symphony, commissioned by Mrs. Clare Boothe Luce, present ambassador to Italy, in memory of her daughter, Ann Clare Brokaw. He has also been commissioned by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation to write an orchestral work on which he will start toward the end of the year; and by New York's Ballet Society, to compose a three-act opera, "The Tuscan Players", to a libretto by Chester Kallmann, co-author of the libretto for Stravinsky's "The Rake's Progress," to be finished August, 1954, and to be offered first to the New York City Opera Company.

In the opinion of Aaron Copland, the American composer who is his confrere at the Berkshire Music Center this summer, Carlos Chavez "Has gradually evolved a style which is racial and still his own. Composing to him is a natural function, like eating or sleeping. His music is not a substitutue for living but a manifestation of life. It exemplifies the complete overthrow of nineteenth-century Germanic ideals which tyrannized over music for more than a hundred years. It pro-softness. Here is absolute music, if ever there was any."

Performed at Tanglewood

A number of Mr. Chavez' compositions are being performed on concerts by students of the Berkshire Music Center this summer. One was "Arbolucu", a setting for chorus of a Spanish folksong, from the unique collection of more than 1000 Spanish and Portugese native airs made in 1933-4 by Kurt Schindler, founder of the Schola Cantorum, New York. It was composed in 1942 at the request of Hugh Ross, the Berkshire Music School's choral head.

Piano Soloist

SEYMOUR LIPKIN

Seymour Lipkin, pianist, who will be the soloist in Ravel's "Piano Concerto for the Left Hand," which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will perfrom at the concluding concert of the Berkshire Music Festival next Sunday afternoon in the Music Shed at Tanglewood.

Berkshire Footlights

Jacob's Pillow is due to hit a new high on the applause meter this week when Madam La Meri will be the featured dancer. Also included on the week's billing will be such other favorites as Ted Shawn himself, Peter Di Falco and Carola Goya. Elaborate, alternate "all-ethnic" programs will be offered on the schedule of seven performances. Highlighting the programs will be the new productions, "El Amor Brujo," and the premiere of "Drishyakava." Completing the banner offering will be the presentation of the exotic Haitian Troupe.

"Drishyakava" is set to the music of Vivaldi's "The Season," and La Meri has choregraphed the composer's evocation of ever-changing nature in terms of the limitless language of the Hindu dance. It was during her residence in Spain that LaMeri became a close personal friend of Manuel de Falla, and it is on his descriptions of an ideal presentation that she has based the details of her newest version of "El Amor Brujo." LaMeri fans will want to make their reservations early lest they be disappointed, for a SRO sign will be going up early.

Ted Shawn will be seen dancing in his "Cowboy" (Turkey In The Straw) and "The Not-So-Pure Polka." Peter DiFalco's specialities will include two Flamenco numbers, and as an added attraction La Meri will be seen dancing the "Hula" which drew down the house when it was first presented at the Pillow a year ago.

Eleanor Wilson, popular radio and television performer, will be seen in the role of the fascinating Constance Russell in "Affairs of State" which opens at the Berkshire Playhouse in Stockbridge Monday night. Always fond of the Berkshires, Eleanor now makes her home at the historic 140-year old Mill House on Yale Hill not far from the Playhouse. With its huge wooden water-wheel on the side of the structure, her home has long been a must on sight-seeking tours of the area....Kendall Clark, who is to be featured in this week's play, also considers Stockbridge his second home. His feelings were expressed upon his arrival this week when he was heard to comment: "Playhouse audiences have done more for me than I could ever hope to do for them." Nothing pleases him more than to have Director William Miles ask him to join a cast here in the Berkshire Hills.

ELEANOR WILSON

Anna Russell will make her first and only appearance before a summer stock audience at the Berkshire Playhouse on Thursday and Friday afternoons. This comico-musico lady has become internationally famous as a comedienne who delights her audiences with grand satire.

Miss Russell's career came about quite by accident. As she puts it, she fell into comedy. The first time she sang Cavalleria Rusticott she sliped and fell head first into a prop church which promptly collapsed, causing the entire cast to run for cover as the scenery came crashing down. The audience roared. Then when she sang "Elijah' in an elaborate production she was joined by a conductor five feet tall and a tenor who was slightly shorter. The sight of Anna striding on stage between these two "midgets" had the audience convulsed with laughter. That was enough. There and then she decided that she knew what people wanted.

As the Boston Symphony Orchestra continues to establish attendance records with each succeeding program at Tanglewood, there is a Northern Berkshire favorite son making a solid contribution to the delightful music of Conductor Charles Munch and the world famous musical unit. He is Pasquale Cardillo of North Adams. The clarinetist is a graduate of Drury High School in

PASQUALE CARDILLO

MARSH EXHIBITS HIS ART AT TANGLEWOOD

To conclude the weekly art exhibitions in the reception room at Tanglewood, Reginald Marsh, distinguished American artist-partic (including works by Stanley Bate, John Carroll, E. Arnold Clark, Honer Gunn, June Kimball, and Harry Lane) and one-man-shows by Harry Lane, Franc Epping (sculpture) and others.

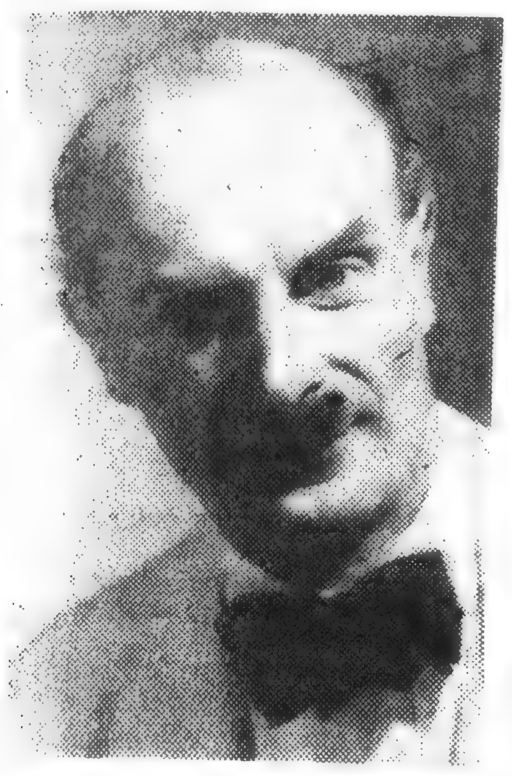
Solo Cellist

GREGOR PIATIGORSKY

Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist who will be the soloist in Darius Milhaud's "Concerto for Cello, No. 1," and with Joseph de Pasquale, viola, in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote," at this afternoon's Berkshire Festival concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Music Shed, Tanglewood.

[265]

Tanglewood Tutors



HUGH ROSS

BORIS GOLDOVSKY

Hugh Ross and Boris Goldovsky present stellar accomplishments at Tanglewood in Lenox in this concluding week of the Berkshire Festival. Mr. Ross trained the chorus for this week end's Berlioz' dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet" and Mahler's "Resurrection" and for next Friday night's Brahms Requiem. Mr. Goldovsky's students are to present Auguste Gretry's opera "Richard Coeur-de-Lion" on Monday and Tuesday night in the Theater-Concert Hall.

Tanglewood Tales

Lenox, Aug. 8—Theresa Green, a scholarship student in the Berkshire Music Center's opera department, was awarded by Leonard Bernstein the coveted soprano role in the Mahler Symphony No. 2 at Tanglewood. The performance took place tonight. Aged 24, a native of Baltimore, in private life she is Mrs. Gilbert Coleman of New York City. She is a Marian Anderson award winner, has been a scholarship pupil at Curtis Institute, Philadelphia, has won a John Hay Whitney Fellowship, and three times has won the Arthur Godfrey "Talent Scout" award on his television program.

Theresa is the daughter of a minister, one of nine children, and had her first lessons from her mother, church organist and teacher in Baltimore. She has soloed under Reginald Stewart with the Baltimore Symphony, made her New York Town Hall debut in 1950. At Tanglewood this summer she sang the role of Julie in Gluck's comic opera, "The Drunkard Reformed." Next Tuesday night she will have the leading feminine role of Marguerite in Gretry's rarely-heard opera, "Richard the Lion-Hearted." In September she returns to the professional concert stage for her first national tour, more than 60

1947, and whose "Adagio for Strings" will be performed by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra Sunday, afternoon; and the noted duo-pianists, Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff, of New York, who have given Tanglewood recitals. Mr. Luboshutz is an uncle of Boris Goldovsky, head of the summer school's opera department, and they will be his guests at the opening performances Monday night of the Gretry opera, "Richard the Lion-Hearted."

Newest foreign student at Tanglewood is Jaap Drielsma, of the Amsterdam Conservatory, in the Dutch City, a concert pianist who is a Study Group student in Department V.

Samuel Krachmalnick, who followed his brother Jacob, now concertmaster of the Philadelphia Orchestra, as a Tanglewood student, and who, has one of Leonard Bernstein's more personable conducting pupils this summer, has left for New York, to conduct the subway circuit tour of the popular musical comedy, "Top Banana. The younger Krachmalnick, 27, of St. Louis, directed an orchestra of Department I students in last week's performance by the opera department of Debussy's L'Enfant Prodigue."

"Richard the Lion-Hearted," the 18th century French opera which students of Boris Goldovsky's department of the Berkshire Music Center present at Tanglewood on [illegible]onday and Tuesday nights, [illegible]ll have alternates for two of the [illegible]ncipal leads. Alvin Edmonson

CARLOS CHAVEZ WILL BE HONORED AT TANGLEWOOD

Mexican Composer's 'Sinfonia India' to Be Given During Last Week End

Lenox, Aug. 8—The distinguished composer-conductor Carols Chavez will be honored during the final weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts when, on Saturday night Leonard Bernstein conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a performance of his "Sinfonia India", composed in 1935-6, and given its first concert performance by the Boston Symphony in April, 1936, when the composer was the orchestra's guest conductor.

In 1928, Mr. Chavez organized the Symphony Orchestra of Mexico, which he has built into one of the finest ensembles on the continent. In that year he was appointed director of the National Conservatory of Music, in 1933 he was named chief of the Department of Fine Arts of the Secretariat of Public Education, and under President Aleman's regime, in 1946 was named Mexico's director of fine arts.

Carlos began to compose as a child. His first symphony dates from 1918. In the next three years he wrote extensively for orchestra, piano, ensemble and voice. The String Quartet of 1921 was a summation of his apprenticeship and a clear intimation of his mature works.

Chosen as Conductor

It was in July 1928, that he accepted the post of conductor of what was then, in Mexico City, the orchestra of the Musicians' Union. From an aggregation of uncertain power and vague character, he has transformed it into the major symphony it is. The Orquesta Sinfonica de Mexico gave its first concerts for workers and peasants in a park on the outskirts of Mexico City, with no admission, no tickets. Now it has a large subscription audience in the Palace of Fine Arts. After 18 years, in July 1945, he announced his resignation: he was in himself the Orchestra's conductor, artistic director, financial director, regisseur, general manager, advertising manager, publicity director. President Alemen asked him to remain as titular conductor, and in 1946 appointed him director of fine arts: he has since established Mexico's first official Museum of Fine Arts.

Among his other important compositions are "Sinfonia de Antigona" (1937) three great choral works, "Tierra Mojada", "El Sol", "Llamadas": a ballet for Martha Graham, known in this country as "Dark Meadow", commissioned by grounds no problems, no metaphysics. Chavez' music is extraordinarily healthy, it is clear and clean-sounding, without shadows or

Piano Soloist

SEYMOUR LIPKIN

Seymour Lipkin, pianist, who will be the soloist in Ravel's "Piano Concerto for the Left Hand," which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will perfrom at the concluding concert of the Berkshire Music Festival next Sunday afternoon in the Music Shed at Tanglewood.

Berkshire Footlights

Jacob's Pillow is due to hit a new high on the applause meter this week when Madam La Meri will be the featured dancer. Also included on the week's billing will be such other favorites as Ted Shawn himself, Peter Di Falco and Carola Goya. Elaborate, alternate "all-ethnic" programs will be offered on the schedule of seven performances. Highlighting the programs will be the new productions, "El Amor Brujo," and the premiere of "Drishyakava." Completing the banner offering will be the presentation of the exotic Haitian Troupe.

"Drishyakava" is set to the music of Vivaldi's "The Season," and La Meri has choregraphed the composer's evocation of ever-changing nature in terms of the limitless language of the Hindu dance. It was during her residence in Spain that LaMeri became a close personal friend of Manuel de Falla, and it is on his descriptions of an ideal presentation that she has based the details of her newest version of "El Amor Brujo." LaMeri fans will want to make their reservations early lest they be disappointed, for a SRO sign will be going up early.

Ted Shawn will be seen dancing

ularly noted for his paintings of New York City and its people, will present a selection of his drawings and paintings to be shown through the conclusion of the Berkshire Festival, Aug. 16. The Tanglewood show will be in addition to Mr. Marsh's one-man-show running until Aug. 31 at the Berkshire Museum in Pittsfield.

Reginald Marsh, born in Paris in 1898 of American parents, spent his youth in New York City and was educated at Lawrenceville School and Yale College. After college, where he was cartoonist for the "Yale Record," he returned to New York for further work under Jacques Maroger and studies at the Art Student's League. In 1922 he joined the New York Daily News as staff cartoonist and caricaturist, leaving it in 1925 to free-lance and to collaborate with Robert Edmond Jones and John Murry Anderson on theater design. Since 1925 his works, mainly cartoons, have appeared in such publications as the New Yorker magazine, Fortune and Harpers'. In addition to cartooning, he has worked in fresco; examples of this media are in the New Post Office at Washington, D. C., and the Custom House of New York.

The weekly Tanglewood art exhibitions this season, all arranged through the co-operation of Stuart C. Henry of the Berkshire Museum, have included a group-show (including works by Stanley Bate, John Carroll, E. Arnold Clark, Honer Gunn, June Kimball, and Harry Lane) and one-man-shows by Harry Lane, Franc Epping (sculpture) and others.

opens at the Berkshire Playhouse in Stockbridge Monday night. Always fond of the Berkshires, Eleanor now makes her home at the historic 140-year old Mill House on Yale Hill not far from the Playhouse. With its huge wooden water-wheel on the side of the structure, her home has long been a must on sight-seeking tours of the area....Kendall Clark, who is to be featured in this week's play, also considers Stockbridge his second home. His feelings were expressed upon his arrival this week when he was heard to comment: "Playhouse audiences have done more for me than I could ever hope to do for them." Nothing pleases him more than to have Director William Miles ask him to join a cast here in the Berkshire Hills.

ELEANOR WILSON

Anna Russell will make her first and only appearance before a summer stock audience at the Berkshire Playhouse on Thursday and Friday afternoons. This comico-musico lady has become internationally famous as a comedienne who delights her audiences with grand satire.

Miss Russell's career came about quite by accident. As she puts it, she fell into comedy. The first time she sang Cavalleria Rusticott she sliped and fell head first into a prop church which promptly collapsed, causing the entire cast to run for cover as the scenery came crashing down. The audience roared. Then when she sang "Elijah' in an elaborate production she was joined by a conductor five feet tall and a tenor who was slightly shorter. The sight of Anna striding on stage between these two "midgets" had the audience convulsed with laughter. That was enough. There and then she decided that she knew what people wanted.

North Adams. It was back in 1939 that he joined the BSO after a successful tryout at Tanglewood. Pat also is a member of the Berkshire Woodwind Ensemble. His family still resides in North Adams.

Gregor Piatigorsky who will be soloist on this afternoon's Berkshire Festival program in Darius Milhaud's Concerto for Cello, is a guest member of the faculty of Berkshire Music Center. Before returning to his home in California he plans to record with Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Center, as his accompanist.

LABORER'S SON

London—Capt. James Cook, who discovered the Hawaiian Islands, was the son of a field laborer, but he rose to the position of captain in the British Navy and became one of the world's foremost explorers.

Solo Cellist

GREGOR PIATIGORSKY

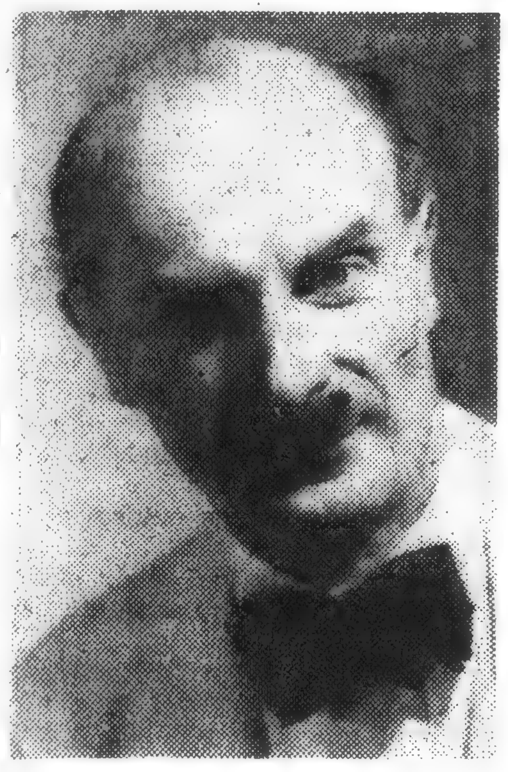
Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist who will be the soloist in Darius Milhaud's "Concerto for Cello, No. 1," and with Joseph de Pasquale, viola, in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote," at this afternoon's Berkshire Festival concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Music Shed, Tanglewood.

To Play in Stockbridge Benefit Performance

Leonard Bernstein, left, and Lukas Foss, who will be heard in four-hands at the piano in a real "first" at a benefit performance for the Stockbridge Bowl Association on the lawn of Serenak, the home of Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, in Lenox, on Tuesday afternoon at 3.30. This will be the first time that these two noted musicians have appeared as duetists.

[aGE

Tanglewood Tutors



HUGH ROSS

BORIS GOLDOVSKY

Hugh Ross and Boris Goldovsky present stellar accomplishments at Tanglewood in Lenox in this concluding week of the Berkshire Festival. Mr. Ross trained the chorus for this week end's Berlioz' dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet" and Mahler's "Resurrection" and for next Friday night's Brahms Requiem. Mr. Goldovsky's students are to present Auguste Gretry's opera "Richard Coeur-de-Lion" on Monday and Tuesday night in the Theater-Concert Hall.

Tanglewood Tales

Lenox, Aug. 8—Theresa Green, a scholarship student in the Berkshire Music Center's opera department, was awarded by Leonard Bernstein the coveted soprano role in the Mahler Symphony No. 2 at Tanglewood. The performance took place tonight. Aged 24, a native of Baltimore, in private life she is Mrs. Gilbert Coleman of New York City. She is a Marian Anderson award winner, has been a scholarship pupil at Curtis Institute, Philadelphia, has won a John Hay Whitney Fellowship, and three times has won the Arthur Godfrey "Talent Scout" award on his television program.

Theresa is the daughter of a minister, one of nine children, and had her first lessons from her mother, church organist and teacher in Baltimore. She has soloed under Reginald Stewart with the Baltimore Symphony, made her New York Town Hall debut in 1950. At Tanglewood this summer she sang the role of Julie in Gluck's comic opera, "The Drunkard Reformed." Next Tuesday night she will have the leading feminine role of Marguerite in Gretry's rarely-heard opera, "Richard the Lion-Hearted." In September she returns to the professional concert stage for her first national tour, more than 60 engagements in the U. S. and Canada, as far afield as Newfoundland.

Distinguished Mexican composer-conductor Carlos Chavez, guest conductor at Tanglewood this summer introduced the violin concerto he wrote in 1952 at a lecture-recital at Tanglewood last Friday afternoon. The work was analyzed by composer Barney Childs, and performed by two guest artists, Miss Viviane Bertolani, violinist, New York City, who played it at its Los Angeles premiere, with Harry Kondaks, Boston, as pianist. At the season's final concert of the student symphony orchestra, Saturday, August 15, at 3 p. m. in the Music Shed, Mr. Chavez will lead the orchestra in his 1932 composition, "H. P." (meaning horse power), "Sinfonia de Baile" (ballet symphony).

Mrs. Alma Mahler Werfel, widow of Gustav Mahler, was guest of honor at the Berkshire Festival when Leonard Bernstein conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program which included her late husband's Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection"). Following the performance, the conductor was awarded the Bruckner Society Medal in a ceremony in the Green Room.

Other Tanglewood guests this week end include Samuel Barber, the young American composer who was a teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center in

Symphony Orchestra Sunday, afternoon; and the noted duo-pianists, Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff, of New York, who have given Tanglewood recitals. Mr. Luboshutz is an uncle of Boris Goldovsky, head of the summer school's opera department, and they will be his guests at the opening performances Monday night of the Gretry opera, "Richard the Lion-Hearted."

Newest foreign student at Tanglewood is Jaap Drielsma, of the Amsterdam Conservatory, in the Dutch City, a concert pianist who is a Study Group student in Department V.

Samuel Krachmalnick, who followed his brother Jacob, now concertmaster of the Philadelphia Orchestra, as a Tanglewood student, and who has one of Leonard Bernstein's more personable conducting pupils this summer, has left for New York, to conduct the subway circuit tour of the popular musical comedy, "Top Banana. The younger Krachmalnick, 27, of St. Louis, directed an orchestra of Department I students in last week's performance by the opera department of Debussy's L'Enfant Prodigue."

"Richard the Lion-Hearted," the 18th century French opera which students of Boris Goldovsky's department of the Berkshire Music Center present at Tanglewood on Monday and Tuesday nights, will have alternates for two of the principal leads. Alvin Edmonson will sing the title role on Monday night, Richard Cassilly on Tuesday; Theresa Green will sing Marguerite on Monday, Lois McCauley on Tuesday. Other principal roles are sung by John McCollum (Blondel), Lee Cass (Sir Williams), Robert Rue (Florestan), Christina Cardillo (Laurette). Mr. Goldovsky will conduct an orchestra of 38 students from Department I.

Leonard Bernstein, left, and Lukas Foss, who will be heard in four-hands at the piano in a real "first" at a benefit performance for the Stockbridge Bowl Association on the lawn of Serenak, the home of Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, in Lenox, on Tuesday afternoon at 3.30. This will be the first time that these two noted musicians have appeared as duetists.

CARLOS CHAVEZ WILL BE HONORED AT TANGLEWOOD

Mexican Composer's 'Sinfonia India' to Be Given During Last Week End

Lenox, Aug. 8—The distinguished composer-conductor Carols Chavez will be honored during the final weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts when, on Saturday night Leonard Bernstein conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a performance of his "Sinfonia India", composed in 1935-6, and given its first concert performance by the Boston Symphony in April, 1936, when the composer was the orchestra's guest conductor.

In 1928, Mr. Chavez organized the Symphony Orchestra of Mexico, which he has built into one of the finest ensembles on the continent. In that year he was appointed director of the National Conservatory of Music, in 1933 he was named chief of the Department of Fine Arts of the Secretariat of Public Education, and under President Aleman's regime, in 1946 was named Mexico's director of fine arts.

Carlos began to compose as a child. His first symphony dates from 1918. In the next three years he wrote extensively for orchestra, piano, ensemble and voice. The String Quartet of 1921 was a summation of his apprenticeship and a clear intimation of his mature works.

Chosen as Conductor

It was in July 1928, that he accepted the post of conductor of what was then, in Mexico City, the orchestra of the Musicians' Union. From an aggregation of uncertain power and vague character, he has transformed it into the major symphony it is. The Orquesta Sinfonica de Mexico gave its first concerts for workers and peasants in a park on the outskirts of Mexico City, with no admission, no tickets. Now it has a large subscription audience in the Palace of Fine Arts. After 18 years, in July 1945, he announced his resignation: he was in himself the Orchestra's conductor, artistic director, financial director, regisseur, general manager, advertising manager, publicity director. President Alemen asked him to remain as titular conductor, and in 1946 appointed him director of fine arts: he has since established Mexico's first official Museum of Fine Arts.

Among his other important compositions are "Sinfonia de Antigona" (1937) three great choral works, "Tierra Mojada", "El Sol", "Llamadas": a ballet for Martha Graham, known in this country as "Dark Meadow", commissioned by the Library of Congress; a Concerto for Piano, premiered in 1942; a Concerto for Violin, premiered in 1952.

Several Commissions

His Symphony No. 4, commissioned by the Louisville Philharmonic, was given its first performance, the composer conducting the orchestra, February, 1953. He is in process of composing a symphony, commissioned by Mrs. Clare Boothe Luce, present ambassador to Italy, in memory of her daughter, Ann Clare Brokaw. He has also been commissioned by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation to write an orchestral work on which he will start toward the end of the year; and by New York's Ballet Society, to compose a three-act opera, "The Tuscan Players", to a libretto by Chester Kallmann, co-author of the libretto for Stravinsky's "The Rake's Progress," to be finished August, 1954, and to be offered first to the New York City Opera Company.

In the opinion of Aaron Copland, the American composer who is his confrere at the Berkshire Music Center this summer, Carlos Chavez "Has gradually evolved a style which is racial and still his own. Composing to him is a natural function, like eating or sleeping. His music is not a substitutue for living but a manifestation of life. It exemplifies the complete overthrow of nineteenth-century Germanic ideals which tyrannized over music for more than a hundred years. It pro-softness. Here is absolute music, if ever there was any."

Performed at Tanglewood

A number of Mr. Chavez' compositions are being performed on concerts by students of the Berkshire Music Center this summer. One was "Arbolucu", a setting for chorus of a Spanish folksong, from the unique collection of more than 1000 Spanish and Portugese native airs made in 1933-4 by Kurt Schindler, founder of the Schola Cantorum, New York. It was composed in 1942 at the request of Hugh Ross, the Berkshire Music School's choral head.

Piano Soloist

SEYMOUR LIPKIN

Seymour Lipkin, pianist, who will be the soloist in Ravel's "Piano Concerto for the Left Hand," which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will perfrom at the concluding concert of the Berkshire Music Festival next Sunday afternoon in the Music Shed at Tanglewood.

Berkshire Footlights

Jacob's Pillow is due to hit a new high on the applause meter this week when Madam La Meri will be the featured dancer. Also included on the week's billing will be such other favorites as Ted Shawn himself, Peter Di Falco and Carola Goya. Elaborate, alternate "all-ethnic" programs will be offered on the schedule of seven performances. Highlighting the programs will be the new productions, "El Amor Brujo," and the premiere of "Drishyakava." Completing the banner offering will be the presentation of the exotic Haitian Troupe.

"Drishyakava" is set to the music of Vivaldi's "The Season," and La Meri has choregraphed the composer's evocation of ever-changing nature in terms of the limitless language of the Hindu dance. It was during her residence in Spain that LaMeri became a close personal friend of Manuel de Falla, and it is on his descriptions of an ideal presentation that she has based the details of her newest version of "El Amor Brujo." LaMeri fans will want to make their reservations early lest they be disappointed, for a SRO sign will be going up early.

Ted Shawn will be seen dancing in his "Cowboy" (Turkey In The Straw) and "The Not-So-Pure Polka." Peter DiFalco's specialities will include two Flamenco numbers, and as an added attraction La Meri will be seen dancing the "Hula" which drew down the house when it was first presented at the Pillow a year ago.

Eleanor Wilson, popular radio and television performer, will be seen in the role of the fascinating Constance Russell in "Affairs of State" which opens at the Berkshire Playhouse in Stockbridge Monday night. Always fond of the Berkshires, Eleanor now makes her home at the historic 140-year old Mill House on Yale Hill not far from the Playhouse. With its huge wooden water-wheel on the side of the structure, her home has long been a must on sight-seeking tours of the area....Kendall Clark, who is to be featured in this week's play, also considers Stockbridge his second home. His feelings were expressed upon his arrival this week when he was heard to comment: "Playhouse audiences have done more for me than I could ever hope to do for them." Nothing pleases him more than to have Director William Miles ask him to join a cast here in the Berkshire Hills.

ELEANOR WILSON

Anna Russell will make her first and only appearance before a summer stock audience at the Berkshire Playhouse on Thursday and Friday afternoons. This comico-musico lady has become internationally famous as a comedienne who delights her audiences with grand satire.

Miss Russell's career came about quite by accident. As she puts it, she fell into comedy. The first time she sang Cavalleria Rusticott she sliped and fell head first into a prop church which promptly collapsed, causing the entire cast to run for cover as the scenery came crashing down. The audience roared. Then when she sang "Elijah' in an elaborate production she was joined by a conductor five feet tall and a tenor who was slightly shorter. The sight of Anna striding on stage between these two "midgets" had the audience convulsed with laughter. That was enough. There and then she decided that she knew what people wanted.

As the Boston Symphony Orchestra continues to establish attendance records with each succeeding program at Tanglewood, there is a Northern Berkshire favorite son making a solid contribution to the delightful music of Conductor Charles Munch and the world famous musical unit. He is Pasquale Cardillo of North

PASQUALE CARDILLO

Adams. The clarinetist is a graduate of Drury High School in

MARSH EXHIBITS HIS ART AT TANGLEWOOD

To conclude the weekly art exhibitions in the reception room at Tanglewood, Reginald Marsh, distinguished American artist, partic including works by Stanley Bate, John Carroll, E. Arnold Clark, Honer Gunn, June Kimball, and Harry Lane) and one-man-shows by Harry Lane, Franc Epping (sculpture) and others.

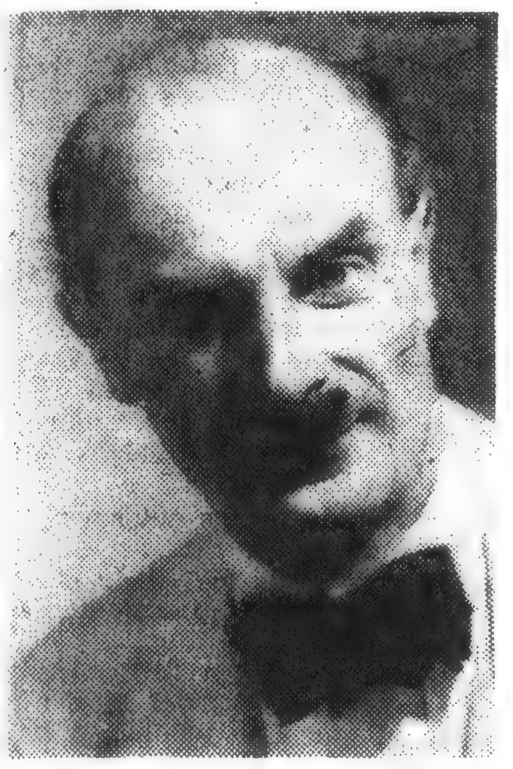
Solo Cellist

GREGOR PIATIGORSKY

Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist who will be the soloist in Darius Milhaud's "Concerto for Cello, No. 1," and with Joseph de Pasquale, viola, in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote," at this afternoon's Berkshire Festival concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Music Shed, Tanglewood.

[263]

Tanglewood Tutors



HUGH ROSS

BORIS GOLDOVSKY

Hugh Ross and Boris Goldovsky present stellar accomplishments at Tanglewood in Lenox in this concluding week of the Berkshire Festival. Mr. Ross trained the chorus for this week end's Berlioz' dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet" and Mahler's "Resurrection" and for next Friday night's Brahms Requiem. Mr. Goldovsky's students are to present Auguste Gretry's opera "Richard Coeur-de-Lion" on Monday and Tuesday night in the Theater-Concert Hall.

Tanglewood Tales

Lenox, Aug. 8—Theresa Green, a scholarship student in the Berkshire Music Center's opera department, was awarded by Leonard Bernstein the coveted soprano role in the Mahler Symphony No. 2 at Tanglewood. The performance took place tonight. Aged 24, a native of Baltimore, in private life she is Mrs. Gilbert Coleman of New York City. She is a Marian Anderson award winner, has been a scholarship pupil at Curtis Institute, Philadelphia, has won a John Hay Whitney Fellowship, and three times has won the Arthur Godfrey "Talent Scout" award on his television program.

Theresa is the daughter of a minister, one of nine children, and had her first lessons from her mother, church organist and teacher in Baltimore. She has soloed under Reginald Stewart with the Baltimore Symphony, made her New York Town Hall debut in 1950. At Tanglewood this summer she sang the role of Julie in Gluck's comic opera, "The Drunkard Reformed." Next Tuesday night she will have the leading feminine role of Marguerite in Gretry's rarely-heard opera, "Richard the Lion-Hearted." In September she returns to the professional concert stage for her first national tour, more than 60

1947, and whose "Adagio for Strings" will be performed by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra Sunday, afternoon; and the noted duo-pianists, Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff, of New York, who have given Tanglewood recitals. Mr. Luboshutz is an uncle of Boris Goldovsky, head of the summer school's opera department, and they will be his guests at the opening performances Monday night of the Gretry opera, "Richard the Lion-Hearted."

Newest foreign student at Tanglewood is Jaap Drielsma, of the Amsterdam Conservatory, in the Dutch City, a concert pianist who is a Study Group student in Department V.

Samuel Krachmalnick, who followed his brother Jacob, now concertmaster of the Philadelphia Orchestra, as a Tanglewood student, and who, has one of Leonard Bernstein's more personable conducting pupils this summer, has left for New York, to conduct the subway circuit tour of the popular musical comedy, "Top Banana. The younger Krachmalnick, 27, of St. Louis, directed an orchestra of Department I students in last week's performance by the opera department of Debussy's L'Enfant Prodigue."

"Richard the Lion-Hearted," the 18th century French opera which students of Boris Goldovsky's department of the Berkshire Music Center present at Tanglewood on Monday and Tuesday nights, will have alternates for two of the principal leads. Alvin Edmonson

CARLOS CHAVEZ WILL BE HONORED AT TANGLEWOOD

Mexican Composer's 'Sinfónia India' to Be Given During Last Week End

Lenox, Aug. 8—The distinguished composer-conductor Carols Chavez will be honored during the final weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts when, on Saturday night Leonard Bernstein conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a performance of his "Sinfonia India", composed in 1935-6, and given its first concert performance by the Boston Symphony in April, 1936, when the composer was the orchestra's guest conductor.

In 1928, Mr. Chavez organized the Symphony Orchestra of Mexico, which he has built into one of the finest ensembles on the continent. In that year he was appointed director of the National Conservatory of Music, in 1933 he was named chief of the Department of Fine Arts of the Secretariat of Public Education, and under President Aleman's regime, in 1946 was named Mexico's director of fine arts.

Carlos began to compose as a child. His first symphony dates from 1918. In the next three years he wrote extensively for orchestra, piano, ensemble and voice. The String Quartet of 1921 was a summation of his apprenticeship and a clear intimation of his mature works.

Chosen as Conductor

It was in July 1928, that he accepted the post of conductor of what was then, in Mexico City, the orchestra of the Musicians' Union. From an aggregation of uncertain power and vague character, he has transformed it into the major symphony it is. The Orquesta Sinfonica de Mexico gave its first concerts for workers and peasants in a park on the outskirts of Mexico City, with no admission, no tickets. Now it has a large subscription audience in the Palace of Fine Arts. After 18 years, in July 1945, he announced his resignation: he was in himself the Orchestra's conductor, artistic director, financial director, regisseur, general manager, advertising manager, publicity director. President Alemen asked him to remain as titular conductor, and in 1946 appointed him director of fine arts: he has since established Mexico's first official Museum of Fine Arts.

Among his other important compositions are "Sinfonia de Antigona" (1937) three great choral works, "Tierra Mojada", "El Sol", "Llamadas": a ballet for Martha Graham, known in this country as "Dark Meadow", commissioned by grounds no problems, no metaphysics. Chavez' music is extraordinarily healthy, it is clear and clean-sounding, without shadows or

Piano Soloist

SEYMOUR LIPKIN

Seymour Lipkin, pianist, who will be the soloist in Ravel's "Piano Concerto for the Left Hand," which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform at the concluding concert of the Berkshire Music Festival next Sunday afternoon in the Music Shed at Tanglewood.

Berkshire Footlights

Jacob's Pillow is due to hit a new high on the applause meter this week when Madam La Meri will be the featured dancer. Also included on the week's billing will be such other favorites as Ted Shawn himself, Peter Di Falco and Carola Goya. Elaborate, alternate "all-ethnic" programs will be offered on the schedule of seven performances. Highlighting the programs will be the new productions, "El Amor Brujo," and the premiere of "Drishyakava." Completing the banner offering will be the presentation of the exotic Haitian Troupe.

"Drishyakava" is set to the music of Vivaldi's "The Season," and La Meri has choregraphed the composer's evocation of ever-changing nature in terms of the limitless language of the Hindu dance. It was during her residence in Spain that LaMeri became a close personal friend of Manuel de Falla, and it is on his descriptions of an ideal presentation that she has based the details of her newest version of "El Amor Brujo." LaMeri fans will want to make their reservations early lest they be disappointed, for a SRO sign will be going up early.

Ted Shawn will be seen dancing

ularly noted for his paintings of New York City and its people, will present a selection of his drawings and paintings to be shown through the conclusion of the Berkshire Festival, Aug. 16. The Tanglewood show will be in addition to Mr. Marsh's one-man-show running until Aug. 31 at the Berkshire Museum in Pittsfield.

Reginald Marsh, born in Paris in 1898 of American parents, spent his youth in New York City and was educated at Lawrenceville School and Yale College. After college, where he was cartoonist for the "Yale Record," he returned to New York for further work under Jacques Maroger and studies at the Art Student's League. In 1922 he joined the New York Daily News as staff cartoonist and caricaturist, leaving it in 1925 to free-lance and to collaborate with Robert Edmond Jones and John Murry Anderson on theater design. Since 1925 his works, mainly cartoons, have appeared in such publications as the New Yorker magazine, Fortune and Harpers'. In addition to cartooning, he has worked in fresco; examples of this media are in the New Post Office at Washington, D. C., and the Custom House of New York.

The weekly Tanglewood art exhibitions this season, all arranged through the co-operation of Stuart C. Henry of the Berkshire Museum, have included a group-show (including works by Stanley Bate, John Carroll, E. Arnold Clark, Honer Gunn, June Kimball, and Harry Lane) and one-man-shows by Harry Lane, Franc Epping (sculpture) and others.

opens at the Berkshire Playhouse in Stockbridge Monday night. Always fond of the Berkshires, Eleanor now makes her home at the historic 140-year old Mill House on Yale Hill not far from the Playhouse. With its huge wooden water-wheel on the side of the structure, her home has long been a must on sight-seeking tours of the area....Kendall Clark, who is to be featured in this week's play, also considers Stockbridge his second home. His feelings were expressed upon his arrival this week when he was heard to comment: "Playhouse audiences have done more for me than I could ever hope to do for them." Nothing pleases him more than to have Director William Miles ask him to join a cast here in the Berkshire Hills.

ELEANOR WILSON

Anna Russell will make her first and only appearance before a summer stock audience at the Berkshire Playhouse on Thursday and Friday afternoons. This comico-musico lady has become internationally famous as a comedienne who delights her audiences with grand satire.

Miss Russell's career came about quite by accident. As she puts it, she fell into comedy. The first time she sang Cavalleria Rusticott she sliped and fell head first into a prop church which promptly collapsed, causing the entire cast to run for cover as the scenery came crashing down. The audience roared. Then when she sang "Elijah' in an elaborate production she was joined by a conductor five feet tall and a tenor who was slightly shorter. The sight of Anna striding on stage between these two "midgets" had the audience convulsed with laughter. That was enough. There and then she decided that she knew what

North Adams. It was back in 1939 that he joined the BSO after a successful tryout at Tanglewood. Pat also is a member of the Berkshire Woodwind Ensemble. His family still resides in North Adams.

Gregor Piatigorsky who will be soloist on this afternoon's Berkshire Festival program in Darius Milhaud's Concerto for Cello, is a guest member of the faculty of Berkshire Music Center. Before returning to his home in California he plans to record with Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Center, as his accompanist.

LABORER'S SON

London—Capt. James Cook, who discovered the Hawaiian Islands, was the son of a field laborer, but he rose to the position of captain in the British Navy and became one of the world's foremost explorers.

Solo Cellist

GREGOR PIATIGORSKY

Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist who will be the soloist in Darius Milhaud's "Concerto for Cello, No. 1," and with Joseph de Pasquale, viola, in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote," at this afternoon's Berkshire Festival concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Music Shed, Tanglewood.

To Play in Stockbridge Benefit Performance

Leonard Bernstein, left, and Lukas Foss, who will be heard in four-hands at the piano in a real "first" at a benefit performance for the Stockbridge Bowl Association, on the lawn of Serenak, the home of Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, in Lenox, on Tuesday afternoon at 3.30. This will be the first time that these two noted musicians have appeared as duetists.

Tanglewood Record Seen In Final Week of Festival

Munch Will Conduct Concerts on Friday Night and Sunday Afternoon, Bernstein to Be on Podium of Music Shed Saturday Night

Lenox, Aug. 8—With an anticipated attendance at its 15 concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra of 100,000, an expected 10,000 at "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the symphony, and a predictable 40,000 pattrons at the 38 cmoncerts and demonstrations of the school's departments, the 16th Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood will conclude its 1953 program this coming week end. It is expected that about 150,000 persons will have helped shatter all existing records.

Munch, Bernstein to Conduct

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducts the program this afternoon with Gregor Piatiogorsky as soloist in the Milhaud Concerto for Cello, No. 1. Mr. Muhch also will conduct the concluding concerts on Friday night and on next Sunday afternoon (Aug. 16), while Leonard Bernstein will be on the great Music Shed's podium for the concert Saturday night.

The Friday evening program will be given over in its entirety to Brahms' "German Requiem," for chorus and soloists. Canadian soprano Lois Marshall and baritone William Warfield will make their Tanglewood debuts as soloists, with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students participating.

On the Saturday night program Leonard Bernstein will feature the "Sinfonia India" of Carlos Chavez, which had its premiere by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1936, the composer conducting. The symphony will be in honor of the distinguished Mexican composer-conductor who is guest teacher of composition at the Tanglewood this summer.

Lipkin to Be Soloist

Seymour Lipkin, pianist, will be soloist in the Ravel Concerto for the Left Hand, which will have its first Tanglewood performance at the concluding concert. Other Tangl-ewood premieres of the week end are Sibelius' Symphony No. 4, (Saturday evening), and Chabrier's Bourree Fantasque (Sunday afternoon).

A portion of the Sunday concert, 2.30 to 4 p. m., will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as commentator.

The Series C programs are:

Friday

German Requiem ....Brahms
(Soloists: Lois Marshall and William Warfield)

Saturday

Symphony No. 4, in A minor .. Sibelius
Symphony No. 2, in D major ....Brahms

Sunday, Aug. 16

Symphony in B minor ("Unfinished'))
..............................Schubert
Bourree Fantasque ....Chabrier
Prelude and Love-Death, "Tristan und Isolde" ....Wagner
A Siegfied Idyll ....Wagner
"Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg," Excerpts from Act III ....Wagner
Piano Concerto for the Left Hand ..Ravel
(Soloist: Seymour Lipkin)
"La Valse" ....Ravel

Student Performances

During the final week of the Berkshire Festival two performances will be given, tomorrow and Tuesday nights of Auguste Gretry's three-act opera, "Richard Coeur-de-Lion" of 1784, not presented within living memory, to be performed by students of the Berkshire Music Center's opera department headed by Boris Goldovsky. The Gretry opera, in English translation by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell, is staged by Miss Caldwell, with costumes by Leo Van Witsen, scenery by John Blankenchip and choreography by Leon Kharibian. Mr. Goldovsky conducts an orchestra of Department I students. Leads are sung by John McCollum, Alvin Edmonson, Richard Cassilly, Robert Rue, Theresa Green, Lois McCauley, Christina Cardillo.

The annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, from 6 to 11 p. m. Thursday, will commence with demonstrations by all departments of the Berkshire Music Center, a feature of which are world premieres of a one-act opera, "Bad Boys in School," by Jan Meyerowits, (Department IV students) and a cantata, "A Little Boy Lost" by Alan Sapp (students of Department V). Charles Munch and Leonard Bernstein will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra's gala evening concert, with Isaac Stern soloist in the Beethoven Violin Concerto; and Leontyne Price, soprano, of Broadway's "Porgy and Bess," her husband William Warfield, and the Festival Chorus in Scenes 1 and 2 of Act II of the Gershwin opera. Anna Russell, international concert comedienne, will draw door prizes.

School's Activities

The final week of the Berkshire Music Center will see the school in almost continuous activity: Friends of the school, whose contributions help support it, are invited to the following student concerts: Informal chamber music concert (Department I students), Chamber Music Hall, Monday afternoon; "Richard Coeur-de-Lion" (Department IV students), Theater-Concert Hall, Monday and Tuesday evenings, all seats reserved; opera scenes (Department IV, associate division, students), Theater-Concert Hall, Wednesday afternoon; composers' forum (Department III students), Chamber Music Hall, Wednesday evening orchestra concert (Department I students), Music Shed, Saturday afternoon; chamber music concert (Department I students), Theater-Concert Hall, Sunday morning, Aug. 16.

Festival patrons are also admitted, for the nominal charge of $1, to a public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Saturday morning, Aug. 15, in the Music Shed, for the benefit of the orchestra's Pension Fund.

---

program.

2.30 to 4.00—WHYN—Gregor Piatigorsky, cello soloist, and Joseph de Pasquale, viola soloist will be heard with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, in "Don Quixote" by Richard Strauss, which will be broadcast from the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood on the World Music Festivals program. The Adagio for Strings by Samuel Barber, will follow.

Soloists at Tanglewood

LOIS MARSHALL

WILLIAM WARFIELD

Lois Marshall, left, soprano, and William Warfield, bass-baritone, will make their Tanglewood debuts as soloists in Brahms' "Requiem" which the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, will perform with the Festival Chorus at the Friday evening concert of the Berkshire Festival in the Music Shed at Tanglewood.

MUSIC FOR EVERYBODY

BY SIGMUND SPAETH

During the month of August a great many Americans will be spending their time at the various music festivals of Europe, while a still larger number will attend those available in their own country. It is not difficult to explain the fascination that European summer music has always had for American tourists—a fascination which has grown in proportion as the facilities and conveniences of travel developed.

Added Glamour

Even a well known musical work, perhaps in a fairly routine performance, takes on an added glamour when presented in historic surroundings, with natural beauties and local traditions to enhance the atmosphere. Actually many of the foreign festivals make a point of producing real novelties and maintain high standards even in the conventional repertoire of opera and the concert stage.

There is, moreover, unquestionably an extra thrill in hearing Mozart's "Don Giovanni," "Figaro" or 'The Magic Flute" in Salzburg, the city of his birth, regardless of how familiar these masterpieces may be to most of the listeners. Wagner's music dramas achieve a new importance in the Bayreuth Festival Theater, which the composer himself designed, with perfect acoustics and the artistic asset of a completely invisible orchestra and conductor. The liberties taken by his grandsons in their production are accepted as legitimately controversial, and there is enthusiastic approval of the American singers who have assumed more and more of the leading Wagnerian roles.

Unique Background

The famous lion of Lucerne forms an almost unique background to concerts of all kinds, with a constant awareness of the beautiful lake and mountains in the distance and the handy proximity of a Casino where one can gamble or enjoy the simpler pleasures of Tyrolean folk-music. Edinburgh's historic castle looks down each summer on a series of important concerts and operas, while staging within its own walls the exciting military pageant known as 'Tattoo."

Rome lends a special significance to Italian opera by presenting its masterpieces in the ruins of the Baths of Caracalla, containing perhaps the largest stage in the world. Venice, Stockholm, Prades and other places, large and small, achieve new fame in the summer months by their emphasis on music, usually marked by some elements of individuality.

Tanglewood Atmosphere

As competition to such alluring prospects, supplemented by the basic satisfaction of European travel in general, we can now offer more and more summer music of real significance, often in gorgeous natural settings which may compensate for a necessary lack of historical background. The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood has acquired an atmosphere of its own, and this is true also in varying degrees of Colorado's Aspen, Red Rocks and Central City, the Hollywood Bowl, the New York Stadium, the Cincinnati Zoo, Chicagoland and other centers of summer music. We may not have a Salzburg or a Bayreuth as yet, but we do have the resources, the equipment and the audiences for an unlimited development of music festivals far beyond the traditional summer months.

* * *

Plan Tanglewood Broadcasts

Charles Munch, right, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and James Fassett, producer and commentator for CBS Radio's "World Music Festivals," shown at Lenox as they play broadcasts of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood for today and next Sunday.

Berkshire Music Center's School Has 400 Students

Only Such Institution in U. S. to Be Maintained by Major Orchestra; Pupils Come From 41 States And 11 Foreign Countries

Lenox, Aug. 8—Students from 41 states and 11 foreign countries are enrolled this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood. This country's only school of music maintained by a major orchestra was established by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1940, when Serge Koussevitzky was its music director, and is now in its 11th six-week session, through the end of the Berkshire Festival next Sunday.

True Cross-Section

The enrollment of 400 students represents a true cross-section of advanced music students, teachers and professional musicians, who work in the divisions of orchestra playing and conducting, chamber music, opera under a distinguished faculty of 36 which includes such outstanding musicians as Aaron Copland, Leonard Bernstein, Carlos Chavez, Boris Goldovsky, Hugh Ross, Lukas Foss, Irving Fine, Paul Ulanowsky, Seymour Lipkin Richard Burgin, William Kroll and first chair players of the Boston orchestra.

The symphony's music director, Charles Munch, is director of the school, and Ralph Berkowitz is dean. A special department, the Tanglewood Study Group, set up last year for amateurs of music who wish to spend their vacations in the absorption of music, has been continued this year under the leadership of Ingolf Dahl, with an enrollment of 105, of whom 38 are spending the full six weeks.

New York state leads the registration, with more than 100 students. Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Ohio are represented by 90 students. Nineteen each come from Connecticut and New Jersey; 18 each from Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and Washington, D. C. As a result of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's first transcontinental tour last spring, when auditions were held for the first time in 10 cities on its route, enrollment from California increased to 10 students; from Salt Lake City and Provo, Utah, have come five pupils. Nine Canadians are studying at Tanglewood this summer, mostly from Toronto and Montreal where the symphony played. The New Orleans orchestral auditions produced seven students now on the Berkshire campus, and five from Florida.

Foreign Students

Nineteen foreign students are enrolled. Besides the Canadians, Mexico, France, Israel, Sweden, Japan, Korea, Holland, Bolivia, Latvia and China have representatives. Serge Blanc of Paris is concertmaster of the student orchestra. From Pusan, South Korea, is John Kim, who is president and conductor of the Republic of Korea Naval Symphony Orchestra and Chorus; A composition pupil with Mexico's composer-conductor Carlos Chavez is Tossi Ichiyanagi, of Tokyo. As the result of seeing in Shanghai in 1950 a U. S. State Department film on Tanglewood, Miss Lily Hsia is now a member of the opera department. On invitation of the federal government through a Smith-Mundt Award to study conducting is Herbert Blomstedt, of Stockholm, Sweden. Fernado Illanes is a chorus student from Bolivia; Johannes Emmen-Riedel is a Study Group student from The Hague. George Mester and Olga Zilboorg, of Mexico City, are studying violin and cello. Pnina God is a trumpet player, Uziahu Wiesel is a student cellist, both from Israel. Endel Kalam, of Latvia, now resident in Indianapolis, is a viola player.

Ranging in age from 17 to 65, the majority of students are from 19 to 24. The 75 per cent in the full course are highly talented, since competition was keen for the tuition scholarships awarded for the second time annually to those who play in the orchestra and chamber music groups or lead in the choral or opera departments. Most of the students live at the Lenox Preparatory School and Wheatleigh, a nearby estate owned by the orchestra.

Ten per cent of the membership of all major U. S. symphony orchestras is composed of former Tanglewood students, and conductors who have graduated from here include Leonard Bernstein, Thor Johnson (Cincinnati), Walter Hendl (Dallas), Eleazar de Carvalho (Rio de Janeiro), Lukas Foss, Robert Zeller, Herman Herz (Duluth), Robert Whitney (Louisville), Richard Bales (National Gallery, Washington), Thomas Schippers, Lorin Maazel, and Alexander Leslie (Springfield, Mass).

Notable Former Students

The roster of former students at the Metropolitan Opera includes Frank Guarerra, Mack Harrell, Mildred Miller, Anne Bollinger, Paul Knowles; Paula Lenchner, and Heidi Kral (Toledo) and Robert McFerrin (St. Louis), winners of the 1953 auditions of the air. New York City Opera Company graduates from Tanglewood include Ellen Faull, David Lloyd, Patricia Neway, Mac Morgan, James Pease, David Poleri, Robert Rounseville, Frances Yeend, Mario Lanza, of Hollywood, was a student in 1940-41; Leontyne Price, the "Bess" of Broadway's "Porgy and Bess," was a singer in the summer of 1951.

Choral conductors who are Tanglewood alumni include James Aliferis (University of Minnesota); Jacob Avshalomoff (Columbia University); Lorna Cooke deVaron (New England Conservatory, Boston).

Tanglewood's opera department has given the American premieres of Benjamin Britten's "Peter

---

'PARADE' EVENT AT TANGLEWOOD ON THURSDAY

Isaac Stern, Leontyne Price And William Warfield Will Be Stars of Program

Lenox, Aug. 8—With Isaac Stern, violinist; soprano Leontyne Price, the "Bess" of Broadway's "Porgy and Bess," and her husband, baritone William Warfield as stars, the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be held at the home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival on Thursday. Festivities include demonstrations by every department of the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra, a lawn supper and a gala evening concert by the orchestra, from 6 p. m. to 11 p. m., followed by the drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

Beethoven Concerto

Isaac Stern will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D major with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, conducting, at the evening concert, which starts at 8.15 p. m. in the Music Shed. Mr. Munch will also conduct the Suite from Handel's "Water Music," arranged by Sir Hamilton Harty.

George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," Act II, Scenes 1 and 2, will occupy the second half of the concert program, directed and conducted by Leonard Bernstein, head of the Berkshire Music Center's conducting classes. This concert performance, and the appearance of Leontyne Price, a Berkshire Music Center student in 1951, is made possible through the courtesy of Blevins Davis and Robert Breen, producers of the successful revival of the opera currently playing at the Ziegfeld Theater, New York City.

To Make Debut

William Warfield will make his Tanglewood debut at the concert, and the following night will be Berkshire Festival soloist with soprano Lois Marshall in Brahms' Requiem. Mr. Warfield and Miss Price were married a year ago just prior to singing the title roles in "Porgy and Bess" in the Davis-Breen production in Vienna, Berlin and London. The baritone left the Gershwin opera prior to its Paris and New York engagement to resume his concert appearances.

Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky is chairman of the ticket and publicity committee of 40 for "Tanglewood on Parade," with Mrs. Bruce Sanborn of Minneapolis, vice-chairman, and Mrs. George Edman, of Pittsfield, as secretary. The honorary committee includes Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge and Mayor Robert T. Capeless, Pittsfield. The committee is also arranging for more than 40 door prizes, which will be awarded to lucky ticket-holders following the concert by Anna Russell, international concert comedienne, who is appearing in two afternoon concerts, Thursday and Friday at the neighboring Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

The Program

The detailed program for "Tanglewood on Parade" follows:—

4 p. m.—Formal gardens, for boxholders and reserved seat patrons.

5.45 p. m.—Fanfare, welcome by Boris Goldovsky.

6 p. m.—Simultaneous sessions of each department, Berkshire Music Center. Music Shed, Short symphonic works, Orchestra of Department I; Theater-Concert Hall, World Premiere of one-act opera and cantata, "Bad Boys in School" by Jan Meyerowitz by students of the Associate Division of Department IV. Cantata, "A Little Boy Lost," by Alan Sapp, from "Songs of Innocence" "Songs of Experience" by William Blake, Chamber Music Hall Chamber Music program, Students of [illegible]

7.15 p. m.—Lawn party, [illegible] supper, concert by chorus, students of Department II.

8.15 p. m.—Music Shed, Gala Concert, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor; Handel's [illegible]; Beethoven's Violin Concerto, soloist, Isaac Stern; Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein, [illegible]; Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," Act II, Scenes 1 and 2, with Festival Chorus and soloists. William Warfield, baritone; Leontyne Price, soprano.

11 p. m.—Drawing for door prizes by Anna Russell, international concert comedienne, followed by waltzing on the lawn.

Tanglewood Record Seen In Final Week of Festival

Munch Will Conduct Concerts on Friday Night and Sunday Afternoon, Bernstein to Be on Podium of Music Shed Saturday Night

Lenox, Aug. 8—With an anticipated attendance at its 15 concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra of 100,000, an expected 10,000 at "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the symphony, and a predictable 40,000 pattrons at the 38 cmoncerts and demonstrations of the school's departments, the 16th Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood will conclude its 1953 program this coming week end. It is expected that about 150,000 persons will have helped shatter all existing records.

Munch, Bernstein to Conduct

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducts the program this afternoon with Gregor Piatiogorsky as soloist in the Milhaud Concerto for Cello, No. 1. Mr. Munch also will conduct the concluding concerts on Friday night and on next Sunday afternoon (Aug. 16), while Leonard Bernstein will be on the great Music Shed's podium for the concert Saturday night.

The Friday evening program will be given over in its entirety to Brahms' "German Requiem," for chorus and soloists. Canadian soprano Lois Marshall and baritone William Warfield will make their Tanglewood debuts as soloists, with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students participating.

On the Saturday night program Leonard Bernstein will feature the "Sinfonia India" of Carlos Chavez, which had its premiere by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1936, the composer conducting. The symphony will be in honor of the distinguished Mexican composer-conductor who is guest teacher of composition at the Tanglewood this summer.

Lipkin to Be Soloist

Seymour Lipkin, pianist, will be soloist in the Ravel Concerto for the Left Hand, which will have its first Tanglewood performance at the concluding concert. Other Tangl-ewood premieres of the week end are Sibelius' Symphony No. 4, (Saturday evening), and Chabrier's Bourree Fantasque (Sunday afternoon).

A portion of the Sunday concert, 2.30 to 4 p. m., will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as commentator.

The Series C programs are:

Friday
German Requiem (Soloists: Lois Marshall and William Warfield)	Brahms
Saturday
Symphony No. 4, in A minor	Sibelius
Symphony No. 2, in D major	Brahms
Sunday, Aug. 16
Symphony in B minor ("Unfinished"))	Schubert
Bourree Fantasque	Chabrier
Prelude and Love-Death, "Tristan und Isolde"	Wagner
A Siegfied Idyll	Wagner
"Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg," Excerpts from Act III	Wagner
Piano Concerto for the Left Hand (Soloist: Seymour Lipkin)	Ravel
"La Valse"	Ravel

Student Performances

During the final week of the Berkshire Festival two performances will be given, tomorrow and Tuesday nights of Auguste Gretry's three-act opera, "Richard Coeur-de-Lion" of 1784, not presented within living memory, to be performed by students of the Berkshire Music Center's opera department headed by Boris Goldovsky. The Gretry opera, in English translation by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell, is staged by Miss Caldwell, with costumes by Leo Van Witsen, scenery by John Blankenchip and choreography by Leon Kharibian. Mr. Goldovsky conducts an orchestra of Department I students. Leads are sung by John McCollum, Alvin Edmonson, Richard Cassilly, Robert Rue, Theresa Green, Lois McCauley, Christina Cardillo.

The annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, from 6 to 11 p. m. Thursday, will commence with demonstrations by all departments of the Berkshire Music Center, a feature of which are world premieres of a one-act opera, "Bad Boys in School," by Jan Meyerowits, (Department IV students) and a cantata, "A Little Boy Lost" by Alan Sapp (students of Department V). Charles Munch and Leonard Bernstein will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra's gala evening concert, with Isaac Stern soloist in the Beethoven Violin Concerto; and Leontyne Price, soprano, of Broadway's "Porgy and Bess," her husband William Warfield, and the Festival Chorus in Scenes 1 and 2 of Act II of the Gershwin opera. Anna Russell, international concert comedienne, will draw door prizes.

School's Activities

The final week of the Berkshire Music Center will see the school in almost continuous activity: Friends of the school, whose contributions help support it, are invited to the following student concerts: Informal chamber music concert (Department I students), Chamber Music Hall, Monday afternoon; "Richard Coeur-de-Lion" (Department IV students), Theater-Concert Hall, Monday and Tuesday evenings, all seats reserved; opera scenes (Department IV, associate division, students), Theater-Concert Hall, Wednesday afternoon; composers' forum (Department III students), Chamber Music Hall, Wednesday evening orchestra concert (Department I students), Music Shed, Saturday afternoon; chamber music concert (Department I students), Theater-Concert Hall, Sunday morning, Aug. 16.

Festival patrons are also admitted, for the nominal charge of $1, to a public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Saturday morning, Aug. 15, in the Music Shed, for the benefit of the orchestra's Pension Fund.

---

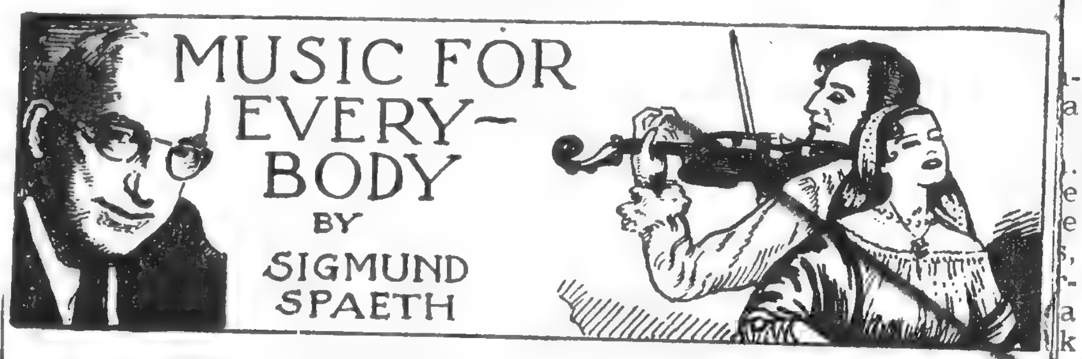
program.

2.30 to 4.00—WHYN—Gregor Piatigorsky, cello soloist, and Joseph de Pasquale, viola soloist will be heard with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, in "Don Quixote" by Richard Strauss, which will be broadcast from the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood on the World Music Festivals program. The Adagio for Strings by Samuel Barber, will follow.

Soloists at Tanglewood

LOIS MARSHALL WILLIAM WARFIELD

Lois Marshall, left, soprano, and William Warfield, bass-baritone, will make their Tanglewood debuts as soloists in Brahms' "Requiem" which the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, will perform with the Festival Chorus at the Friday evening concert of the Berkshire Festival in the Music Shed at Tanglewood.



MUSIC FOR EVERY-BODY

BY SIGMUND SPAETH

During the month of August a great many Americans will be spending their time at the various music festivals of Europe, while a still larger number will attend those available in their own country. It is not difficult to explain the fascination that European summer music has always had for American tourists—a fascination which has grown in proportion as the facilities and conveniences of travel developed.

Added Glamour

Even a well known musical work, perhaps in a fairly routine performance, takes on an added glamour when presented in historic surroundings, with natural beauties and local traditions to enhance the atmosphere. Actually many of the foreign festivals make a point of producing real novelties and maintain high standards even in the conventional repertoire of opera and the concert stage.

There is, moreover, unquestionably an extra thrill in hearing Mozart's "Don Giovanni," "Figaro" or 'The Magic Flute" in Salzburg, the city of his birth, regardless of how familiar these masterpieces may be to most of the listeners. Wagner's music dramas achieve a new importance in the Bayreuth Festival Theater, which the composer himself designed, with perfect acoustics and the artistic asset of a completely invisible orchestra and conductor. The liberties taken by his grandsons in their production are accepted as legitimately controversial, and there is enthusiastic approval of the American singers who have assumed more and more of the leading Wagnerian roles.

Unique Background

The famous lion of Lucerne forms an almost unique background to concerts of all kinds, with a constant awareness of the beautiful lake and mountains in the distance and the handy proximity of a Casino where one can gamble or enjoy the simpler pleasures of Tyrolean folk-music. Edinburgh's historic castle looks down each summer on a series of important concerts and operas, while staging within its own walls the exciting military pageant known as 'Tattoo."

Rome lends a special significance to Italian opera by presenting its masterpieces in the ruins of the Baths of Caracalla, containing perhaps the largest stage in the world. Venice, Stockholm, Prades and other places, large and small, achieve new fame in the summer months by their emphasis on music, usually marked by some elements of individuality.

Tanglewood Atmosphere

As competition to such alluring prospects, supplemented by the basic satisfaction of European travel in general, we can now offer more and more summer music of real significance, often in gorgeous natural settings which may compensate for a necessary lack of historical background. The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood has acquired an atmosphere of its own, and this is true also in varying degrees of Colorado's Aspen, Red Rocks and Central City, the Hollywood Bowl, the New York Stadium, the Cincinnati Zoo, Chicagoland and other centers of summer music. We may not have a Salzburg or a Bayreuth as yet, but we do have the resources, the equipment and the audiences for an unlimited development of music festivals far beyond the traditional summer months.

* * *

Plan Tanglewood Broadcasts

Charles Munch, right, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and James Fassett, producer and commentator for CBS Radio's "World Music Festivals," shown at Lenox as they play broadcasts of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood for today and next Sunday.

Berkshire Music Center's School Has 400 Students

Only Such Institution in U. S. to Be Maintained by Major Orchestra; Pupils Come From 41 States And 11 Foreign Countries

Lenox, Aug. 8—Students from 41 states and 11 foreign countries are enrolled this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood. This country's only school of music maintained by a major orchestra was established by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1940, when Serge Koussevitzky was its music director, and is now in its 11th six-week session, through the end of the Berkshire Festival next Sunday.

True Cross-Section

The enrollment of 400 students represents a true cross-section of advanced music students, teachers and professional musicians, who work in the divisions of orchestra playing and conducting, chamber music, opera under a distinguished faculty of 36 which includes such outstanding musicians as Aaron Copland, Leonard Bernstein, Carlos Chavez, Boris Goldovsky, Hugh Ross, Lukas Foss, Irving Fine, Paul Ulanowsky, Seymour Lipkin Richard Burgin, William Kroll and first chair players of the Boston orchestra.

The symphony's music director, Charles Munch, is director of the school, and Ralph Berkowitz is dean. A special department, the Tanglewood Study Group, set up last year for amateurs of music who wish to spend their vacations in the absorption of music, has been continued this year under the leadership of Ingolf Dahl, with an enrollment of 105, of whom 38 are spending the full six weeks.

New York state leads the registration, with more than 100 students. Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Ohio are represented by 90 students. Nineteen each come from Connecticut and New Jersey; 18 each from Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and Washington, D. C. As a result of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's first transcontinental tour last spring, when auditions were held for the first time in 10 cities on its route, enrollment from California increased to 10 students; from Salt Lake City and Provo, Utah, have come five pupils. Nine Canadians are studying at Tanglewood this summer, mostly from Toronto and Montreal where the symphony played. The New Orleans orchestral auditions produced seven students now on the Berkshire campus, and five from Florida.

Foreign Students

Nineteen foreign students are enrolled. Besides the Canadians, Mexico, France, Israel, Sweden, Japan, Korea, Holland, Bolivia, Latvia and China have representatives. Serge Blanc of Paris is concertmaster of the student orchestra. From Pusan, South Korea, is John Kim, who is president and conductor of the Republic of Korea Naval Symphony Orchestra and Chorus; A composition pupil with Mexico's composer-conductor Carlos Chavez is Tossi Ichiyanagi, of Tokyo. As the result of seeing in Shanghai in 1950 a U. S. State Department film on Tanglewood, Miss Lily Hsia is now a member of the opera department. On invitation of the federal government through a Smith-Mundt Award to study conducting is Herbert Blomstedt, of Stockholm, Sweden. Fernado Illanes is a chorus student from Bolivia; Johannes Emmen-Riedel is a Study Group student from The Hague. George Mester and Olga Zilboorg, of Mexico City, are studying violin and cello. Pnina God is a trumpet player, Uziahu Wiesel is a student cellist, both from Israel. Endel Kalam, of Latvia, now resident in Indianapolis, is a viola player.

Ranging in age from 17 to 65, the majority of students are from 19 to 24. The 75 per cent in the full course are highly talented, since competition was keen for the tuition scholarships awarded for the second time annually to those who play in the orchestra and chamber music groups or lead in the choral or opera departments. Most of the students live at the Lenox Preparatory School and Wheatleigh, a nearby estate owned by the orchestra.

Ten per cent of the membership of all major U. S. symphony orchestras is composed of former Tanglewood students, and conductors who have graduated from here include Leonard Bernstein, Thor Johnson (Cincinnati), Walter Hendl (Dallas), Eleazar de Carvalho (Rio de Janeiro), Lukas Foss, Robert Zeller, Herman Herz (Duluth), Robert Whitney (Louisville), Richard Bales (National Gallery, Washington), Thomas Schippers, Lorin Maazel, and Alexander Leslie (Springfield, Mass).

Notable Former Students

The roster of former students at the Metropolitan Opera includes Frank Guarerra, Mack Harrell, Mildred Miller, Anne Bollinger, Paul Knowles; Paula Lenchner, and Heidi Kral (Toledo) and Rob-

Grimes" [illegible] Mozart's "Idomeneo" and Jacques Ibert's "Le Roi d'Yvetot," and this year, through a grant of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, has commissioned young composers Leonard Rosenman, of New York City, and Louis Mennini, of Rochester, N. Y. to write one-act operas here this summer for performance in 1954.

'PARADE' EVENT AT TANGLEWOOD ON THURSDAY

Isaac Stern, Leontyne Price And William Warfield Will Be Stars of Program

Lenox, Aug. 8—With Isaac Stern, violinist; soprano Leontyne Price, the "Bess" of Broadway's "Porgy and Bess," and her husband, baritone William Warfield as stars, the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be held at the home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival on Thursday. Festivities include demonstrations by every department of the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra, a lawn supper and a gala evening concert by the orchestra, from 6 p. m. to 11 p. m., followed by the drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

Beethoven Concerto

Isaac Stern will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D major with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, conducting, at the evening concert, which starts at 8.15 p. m. in the Music Shed. Mr. Munch will also conduct the Suite from Handel's "Water Music," arranged by Sir Hamilton Harty.

George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," Act II, Scenes 1 and 2, will occupy the second half of the concert program, directed and conducted by Leonard Bernstein, head of the Berkshire Music Center's conducting classes. This concert performance, and the appearance of Leontyne Price, a Berkshire Music Center student in 1951, is made possible through the courtesy of Blevins Davis and Robert Breen, producers of the successful revival of the opera currently playing at the Ziegfeld Theater, New York City.

To Make Debut

William Warfield will make his Tanglewood debut at the concert, and the following night will be Berkshire Festival soloist with soprano Lois Marshall in Brahms' Requiem. Mr. Warfield and Miss Price were married a year ago just prior to singing the title roles in "Porgy and Bess" in the Davis-Breen production in Vienna, Berlin and London. The baritone left the Gershwin opera prior to its Paris and New York engagement to resume his concert appearances.

Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky is chairman of the ticket and publicity committee of 40 for "Tanglewood on Parade," with Mrs. Bruce Sanborn of Minneapolis, vice-chairman, and Mrs. George Edman, of Pittsfield, as secretary. The honorary committee includes Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge and Mayor Robert T. Capeless, Pittsfield. The committee is also arranging for more than 40 door prizes, which will be awarded to lucky ticket-holders following the concert by Anna Russell, international concert comedienne, who is appearing in two afternoon concerts, Thursday and Friday at the neighboring Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

The Program

The detailed program for "Tanglewood on Parade" follows:

4 p. m.—Formal gardens for boxholders and reserved seat patrons.

5.45 p. m.—Fanfare, welcome by Boris Goldovsky.

6 p. m.—Simultaneous sessions of each department, Berkshire Music Center, Music Shed, Short symphonic [illegible] Orchestra of Department I; Theater-Concert Hall, World Premiere of [illegible] and cantata, "Bad Boys in [illegible]" by Jan Meyerowitz by students of Associate Division of Department IV [illegible] cantata, "A Little Boy Lost" by [illegible] Sapp, from "Songs of [illegible]" "Songs of Experience" by William [illegible], Chamber Music Hall [illegible] program, Students of Department [illegible]

7.15 p. m.—Lawn [illegible] supper, concert by chorus, students of Department II.

8.15 p. m.—Music Shed, [illegible] Boston Symphony Orchestra [illegible] Munch, conductor; Handel's [illegible] Beethoven's Violin Concerto [illegible] Isaac Stern; Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein [illegible] Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess" [illegible] Scenes 1 and 2, with Festival [illegible] soloists, William Warfield, [illegible] Leontyne Price, soprano.

11 p. m.—Drawing for door [illegible] by Anna Russell, international concert comedienne, followed by [illegible] lawn.

Can't You Hear the Berkshires Calling?

(Continued From Page 13)

choice of five dressings, or ask for your own fixin's. Desserts, raspberry pie, peppermint stick glace, lemon meringue pudding and many others, all made right in their own kitchen.

If you are just passing through and stay overnight the Treadway's will fix up a box luncheon for you to enjoy in any one of hundreds of picnic areas along the road. For $2.25 you have your choice of fried chicken, white and dark meat, or hickory-smoked turkey sandwich, a jelly and cream cheese sandwich, deviled egg, potato chips, olives and pickles, cookies and cake, fresh fruit and a choice of tomato juice, milk or chocolate milk. Other box luncheons are $1.75 and $1.25.

PLACE TO RELAX

The Williams' Inn doesn't offer much in recreation outside of tennis, but plenty of relaxation. In the dining room John Treadway has arranged a bird feeding station and birds may actually come into the room yet not disturb the guests. All the grounds surrounding the property are magnificently landscaped and much emphasis placed on care and feeding of wild birds.

Rates at Williams Inn, single $5.50-$7.50, double with double bed $9.50-$12, double with twin beds 10-$14.50 European plan. American plan rates $11 to $14 per day.

Space limitations prevent more than mention of other places to stay in the Berkshire district other than by name. There's Elwal Pine in Williamstown, a Colonial inn with a brand-new motel and private lake. American or European plan. Taconic Park Inn with modern cabins at junction of routes 7 and 2. Fischer's Hopper Lodge and cabins, a mountain retreat. Greystone Lodge on Williams College campus, the Willows Motel, all in Williamstown.

In New Ashford there's the Mill on the Floss, a unique setting beside the river and an excellent place to eat. Lanesboro has Hillcrest Inn. Brett's Motel cabins with as many as three rooms per cabin, and Wick's Mt. Greylock Cabins.

In North Adams, Blue Spruce guest house, Airport tourist home, Spencer's on the Trail, a cabin court, Wigwam Motor Court, Trailside cabins on Mohawk Trail. Whitcomb Summit with accommodations for 50 and in the city proper Hotel Richmond.

Charlemont offers the Plantation House with continental menu, Mohawk Park cabins, Red Rose Cabins and Pioneer Valley and Dude Ranch.

FOR MUSIC FESTIVAL

Pittsfield proper has the vast Hotel Sheraton which is almost completely occupied by tourists during summer months, most of whom come to attend the music festival at Tanglewood.

In fact they have a special Tanglewood tour which includes tickets for two programs of theatre concerts and room accommodations for four days and three nights from $16.95 to $23.50 or for eight days and seven nights from $32 to $46.

Radios and television have been installed in most of the Sheraton's rooms. Dining room is always top quality and special Saturday night buffets where you can eat all you want for $2.25 has had a tremendous appeal. At cocktail hour between 5 and 6 p. m. bonus drinks are served, double drinks for the price of one.

In the Sheraton bar you can get unusual drinks like a screwball cocktail (Vodka and orange juice 65 cents. Scarlet O'Hara, (lime juice, grenadine and Southern comfort) 75 cents. Grasshopper (green creme de menthe, creme de cocoa and heavy cream) 85 cents; or a Bullfrog consisting of a mixture of green creme de menthe and bourbon, 85 cents. All this and the regular run of the mill drinks plus some wonderful organ and piano music by Jimmy Sullivan.

In the Southern Berkshires in Sheffield there's Sheffield Inn. and Blue Belton Inn and Motor Court.

Great Barrington offers the big Berkshire Inn on the main street, with single room from $12 to parlor suite up to $50 per day. The Berkshire Chalet Motel and the newly converted Chalet Inn. Also Barrington Hall, and the semi commercial Hotel Miller in the heart of town.

South Egremont has the famous 200-year-old Egremont Tavern and an annex in a nearby Old Mill now completely remodeled. Mount Everett Inn at junction of routes 23 and 41. In North Egremont try Emily Rose Inn. The Flying Cloud in New Marlboro. The carefully preserved New Boston Inn in New Boston. Hotel Otis in the town of the same name. Marlboro Manor in New Marlboro. and in Lee Chanterwood, The Morgan House, or Victoria Court Motel. In Chester, Jack O'Lantern.

NOTED FOR FOOD

In Stockbridge you'll find the fine old Red Lion Inn, noted for its food, Elm Lodge, Heaton Hall. Oakland Inn, Pilgrim's Inn, Stockbridge Inn and the Town House.

Lenox boasts of the Avaloch, 300 yards from Tanglewood, Blantyre, Cook's Cabins, Shadowood Inn, Tanglewood Motor Court, Music Inn, Lenox Lodge, Seven Hills, Festival House, Garden Gables, Hampton Terrace, Hawthorne Hill, and the 1829 Curtiss Hotel.

The Berkshire Music Festival will end its 1953 season after another week of concerts, closing August 16. Besides the Music Festival you'll want to attend the Stockbridge Playhouse, see the weekly polo matches in Pittsfield, the dance festival at Jacob's pillow under the direction of Ted Shawn and the gigantic Great Barrington Fair, September 13.

There are any number of scenic wonders, picnic, recreation and camping facilities at many of the State parks and forests. See Windsor Jams at Windsor State Forest for example, the crooked forest on Mohawk Trail. Climb up any one of a dozen observation towers and see western Massachusetts, at its best.

As one put it the other day, "I don't care where you go, you won't find anything superior to what western Massachusetts has to offer."

BOST
MA
Sunda

the Berkshir

Western Massachusetts Offers Vacation

Wonderful Scenery, Varied Accommodation

Unique Features—All at Costs to Please

Vacation Face!

This is the 14th of a series of illustrated stories on costs, facilities and attractions at New England's famed summer resort areas. Another will appear next Sunday.

By FRANK G. JASON

WITH the vacation season now at its peak, these are happy, carefree days in the Berkshires. Hotels, inns, cabins, tourist homes and resorts are buzzing with excited tourists who have discovered the mountains of western Massachusetts for the first time, and if you happen to be a late vacationer there's still plenty of time to get in on the fun.

It's always vacation time in the Berkshires, no matter what season of the year you choose for your holiday. Unlike some resort areas that close their gates after Labor Day, the Berkshires keep the welcome mat out at all times.

For some strange reason only a small percentage of New Englanders take advantage of the marvelous vacation lands which lie almost in their own back yards, while more and more people from New York, the Midwest and the South are reporting the Berkshires to be the most wonderful country they have ever visited.

What has the Berkshires got that other resort areas lack?

Here's what they like to boast about and are right proud of every inch of the land which they call the "Vacation Apple" of your eye.

Berkshire county, which includes all the mountains of Massachusetts, extends from the Connecticut line to the Vermont border. New York State is its western boundary and on the east, Pioneer Valley.

Within it there are 16 State forests and reservations with a total of 73,098 acres, 13 major rivers, 112 brooks and streams, 59 lakes, 17 major waterfalls, 23 camping and picnic areas, 14 golf courses, 200 miles of State highways, 1500 miles of country roads, eight mountains ranging in heights from 2239 feet to 3491 feet, dozens of streams in which to fish, and a score or more swimming areas, hundreds of miles of riding and hiking trails.

LOTS OF EVERYTHING

You'll find towns and villages large and small, some with super-dooper markets and shops where fancy clothes are sold or the convenient backwoodsy store where the cracker barrel is still predominant and where you can really get a glimpse of New England as it really is.

Each has one or a dozen points of historical interest, each has its elm shaded streets, each has its own centre of amusements, whether it be the conventional movie house, the village dance hall, a summer theatre, or the symphonic festival of world renown. The towns are neat, clean, picturesque, and it isn't any wonder that thousands have fallen in love with them upon first sight.

A native of Wisconsin came to New England a few years ago and went to work for a Connecticut airplane manufacturer. On week ends he traveled through the Berkshires and soon formed the opinion that their natural beauties were unexcelled. As a result, he decided to open a year 'round vacation resort in the Lee area.

He found what he considered to be an ideal location for such an enterprise in South Lee. It was an old but sturdy group of buildings which once housed an agricultural school.

Today the sports lodge of Frank Prinz, known as Oak 'n' Spruce, is one of four outstanding "package deal" resorts in the Berkshires.

In the event you are unfamiliar with this type of resort we hasten to explain that it is one designed generally for young people. You pay a flat rate and everything is included except horseback riding and the hire of sporting equipment.

There are no cocktail lounges in resorts like this. You bring your own. If you require soda, ginger ale, coke and ice, you help yourself. The bar is operated on the honor system. At the end of your stay you tell the management how many bottles of soft beverages you took, he totals the bill and that's all there is to it. No more questions asked.

Everything is informal about the "package deal" resort. You don't have to wear fancy clothes but you can't wear bathing suits or scanty attire at meals. You dress within reason.

Meals are served family style and generally you have your choice of two or three main dishes. At Mr. Prinz' Oak 'n' Spruce Chef Victor Mendez is in charge of the kitchen and serves the guests such appetizing dishes as vicyssoise or perhaps a cheese soup from an ancient recipe, duck with orange sauce and there's not a trace of grease on it when he gets through with it. His barbecue sauces for roast beef and outdoor cook-outs are memorable eating experiences.

THE RATES VARY

Rates at Oak 'n' Spruce vary depending upon the number of people occupying a room or whether or not it is equipped with bath. Starting at $9 per person and it goes to $12 per day. Weekly rates from $56 to $77.

For entertainment at resorts like this there's dancing every night, hayrides, weiner roasts, movies, television, amateur night, talent shows, swimming day and night, costume parties, bingo, horse racing, gay nineties night, riding, watermelon feasts, treasure hunts, golf, water games, races, square dancing, rodeos, corn roasts, picnics, steak and chicken barbecues, and always romance.

The other three similar resorts are Jug End Barn in South Egremont, the first of its kind in the Berkshires, G-Bar-S Ranch in Great Barrington, and Eastover in Lenox.

Jug End was once a rich man's farm. Prize cattle and all that sort of thing. Cost about a dollar to produce a quart of milk. Money, however, was no object to the gentleman farmer. The farm is situated at the base of the mountain bearing the name of Jug End, named so because that's exactly what it looks like.

Incidentally, on the eastern slope of Jug End, which is a spur of Mt. Everett, the second highest peak in the State, there's a group of limestone caves which includes one of the most beautiful caves in Massachusetts.

If you feel adventurous and don't mind crawling on your tummy into these holes in the mountains you will experience a new kind of thrill. The Berkshires are literally filled with caves, with stalactites and stalagmites and rock formations that are wonderful to behold. Look up one of Clay Perry's books for locations of them and detailed information on how they may be reached. He's the authority on caves in New England. Lives in the territory.

Jug End Barn is an estate of 1400 acres. Has 16 horses available for riding, cost $2.50. Meals are superb. Friday night is talent show night, and also the night when guests participate in turn-about dances. Men dress as girls and girls as boys. It's a howl and all good fun.

Accommodations are plain and rustic but comfortable. Bunk rooms are available in the barn for boys and girls, these are known as cowpen and bullpen. The silo has rooms with private bath. There is also the lodge, cottages, and farmhouses. Rates start at $7.50 a day (bunk room) and rise to Camp fires stir even city souls; and singing—now when did you last sing?

Tramping out the beat of de luxe—come

ON POST AGAZINE
, August 9, 1953

S

'aradise—
s and Many our Budget

$10 in other accommodations. Weekly rates from $49 to $66.50. Week end and holiday rates, add 1 to daily rates. Psst! There's a meal tax averaging about 24 cents per day.

The G-Bar-S over in Great Barrington, operated by the same management as Jug End. This was one of the first dude ranches in New England and still has the reputation of being one of the finest in this part of the country.

Riding—you can get all you want of it here. There are 50 horses, plus. It's strictly western style, with western saddles and veteran cowboys to show you the fine points of horsemanship.

BREAKFAST RIDE

One of the features is a breakfast ride. Starts at 7 a. m. Guests ride out in the cool morning air, reach the rendezvous at 9:30, where a chuck wagon awaits with hot breakfast. After a lazy interlude they ride again until noon when the return for ranch-style luncheon at the ranch house.

As an extra dividend this year G-Bar-S guests pay for two and one-half hours riding and get another two and one-half hours free when horses are available.

You don't have to be a horseman, however, to enjoy a vacation at the ranch. All the facilities of the above mentioned resorts are available here. If you don't want to play you can just relax for the "rest" of your life, or go out and pet "Old Jack" the donkey, who has been the family pet for years. Rodeos are held every Tuesday night. No fancy riding clothes are required here. Dungarees will do.

Daily rates begin at $7.50 and rise to $10, for non-riders; with riding, daily rates are from $10 to $12.50 per day. Weekly, non-riders $49-$66.50, riders, $63-$80.50.

Eastover, in Lenox, is in the class of the "package deal" resorts. This was once the summer mansion of an extremely wealthy New York banker, named Fahnestock, built during the days at the turn of the century when millionaires vied with one another to build the most spectacular estate.

The estate looks across to October Mountain and out to Mt. Greylock. Below it lies the resourceful and beautiful Housatonic valley. It's a place where boy meets girl, at least a lot of them do.

When you enter the gateway of this estate of more than 400 acres you leave behind the noise and bustle of the city and are relaxing in a very different world. A world of luxury but one that can be enjoyed by anyone who doesn't have to go in debt to go on a vacation.

Food here is bountiful, New England menus of clam chowder, steaks, chicken and lobster grilled in the open over charcoal fires. Sunday night buffet dinner is served on the terrace. Eat as much as you want. Delectable.

Swimming pool is located in the spot where the formal garden once stood, just a few steps from the door. If you're in the mood for entertainment, there's something going on every minute of every day and every evening. Week end dances with live band of seven pieces. Other evenings smaller orchestras perform.

Public address system covers the entire estate. You are never out of touch. Living accommodations are located in the mansion proper, the Tally-Ho Barn, Lodge, cottages and ranch house. Depending upon your choice you can live as cheaply as $8 per day in these magnificent surroundings or you can go for $12 per day. Weekly from $53.50 to $81.50.

For a vacation in direct contrast to the aforementioned, in old Colonial setting, modern, yet without sacrificing charm and atmosphere, there's the Williams Inn in Williamstown, way up in the northwest corner of the State. Here there are accommodations for 100 people and every room has private or connecting baths.

This is the original of the Treadway Inns. It caters to discriminating people who wish homelike comfort and good food and we do mean good food. Lick your chops on something like this—Cornish game chicken, roasted in wine and butter, served with wild rice and currant jelly ($4) and worth every penny of it.

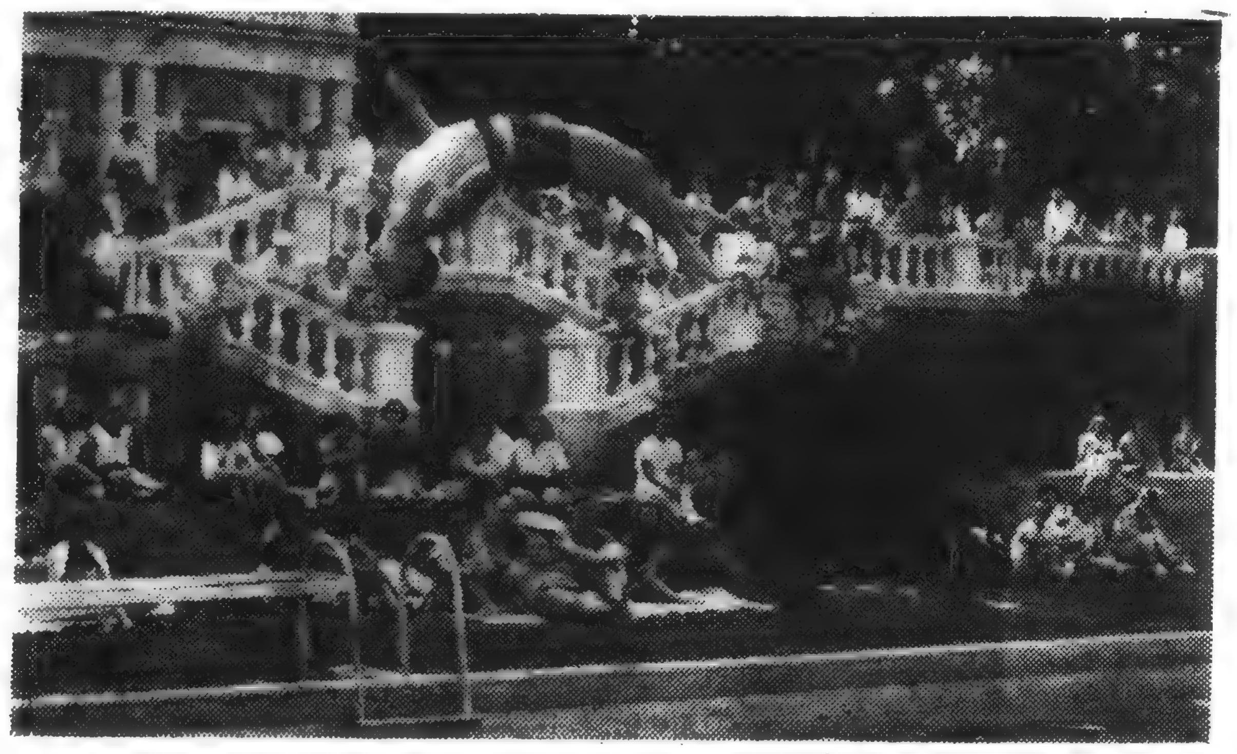
If the Cornish hen doesn't appeal to you they serve a baby white Guinea hen prepared in exactly the same manner and for the same price. Or you can try baked lobster pie, made from a recipe of their own, ($3.65), or broiled prime steer sirloin steak with French fried onion rings at $5 a copy. Of course, all the fixings go with these meals.

Relish trays are extraordinary. Salads—you have the

(Continued on Page 23)

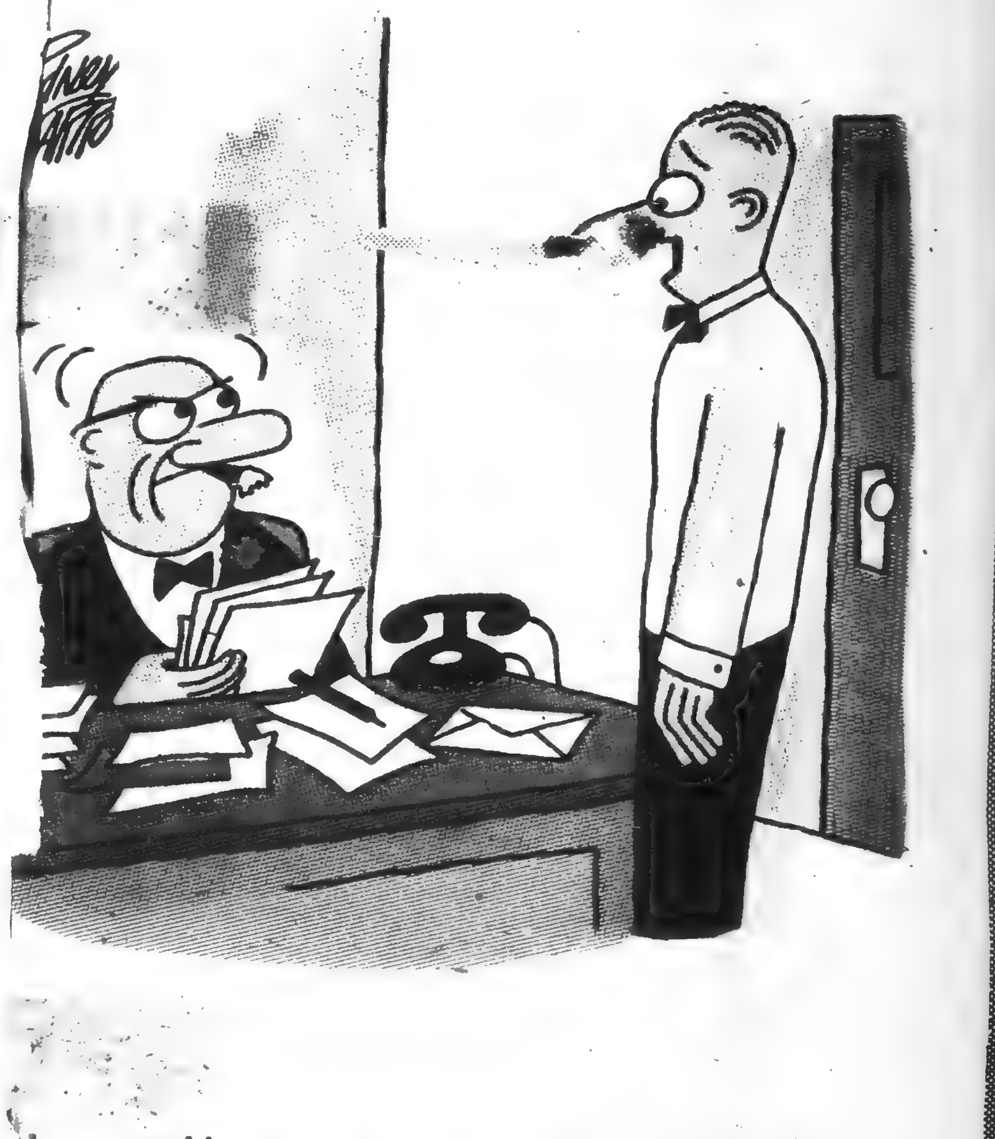
The big splash at the busy Oak 'n' Spruce, in South Lee.

he band is tramping
[illegible]

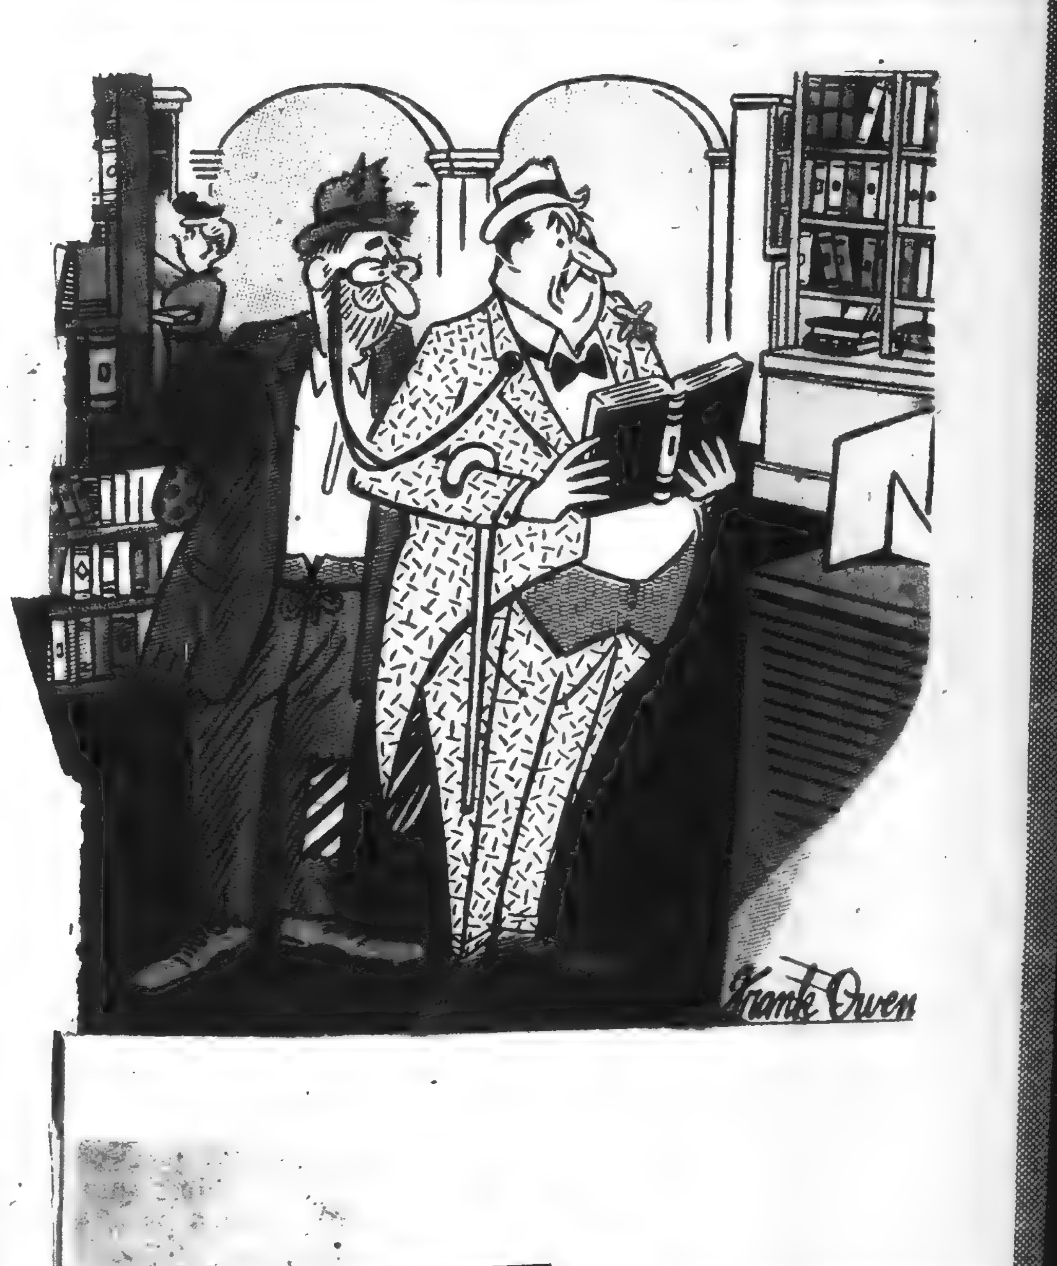


Here's suspense, and "apparently" no diving board, at the well-known Eastover, Lenox. 'No splash—and he's good.

Shh! After all, vacation romance can be beautiful—and lasting!



been working pretty hard lately, Mr. Blank. Why don't you take a vacation?"



8-9

TIGHT BINDING

NEWARK SUNDAY NEWS, AUGUST 9, 1953

PLANT'S A PROP—Scenery maker Alison Dessau of 140 Hillside avenue, Englewood, shows how to make tree grow on Tanglewood stage as choral student William Tooker of 7 Princeton place, Montclair, watches.

INTERMEZZO—Composer Malcolm Peyton of Pretty Brook road, Princeton Township, at piano, plays some of his work during interlude at Tanglewood. Miss Lynne Hartman of 102 Kensingtan avenue, Trenton, and William Durkham of 22 Pomeroy avenue, Madison, accompany on violin and clarinet.

Jerseyans in Tanglewood Scene

Study at Berkshire Music Center

BY ALFRED G. ARONOWITZ
Staff Correspondent.

LENOX, Mass.—For 20 young Jerseyans, the step to the Massachusetts Summer music capital here at Tanglewood, perched in the green scape of a Berkshire mountain, was as logical as a Bach fugue. And for several of logically, may be to even greater heights.

The Jerseyans are students at the Berkshire Music Center, which is the more formal name applied by the Boston Symphony Orchestra to Tanglewood, its vacation-month estate and the scene of its Berkshire Symphonic Festival. But students at Tanglewood ought to be called participants rather than students, because their six-week Summer program here is one of participation rather than study.

That's why each of those Jerseyans agree with Robert Simpson, one of their number, when he explains their presence here by saying, in his fine tenor voice: "There just isn't any other place like Tanglewood."

Simpson, who lives at 357 Nassau street, Princeton, proved that point to quite a number of persons in the theater here last Monday when he sang the role of Azael, the young Galilean, in Claude Debussy's seldom-performed—but nonetheless beautiful—one-act opera, "The Prodigal Son."

The opera was one of several staged each Summer by the Tanglewood opera department, which, like almost everything else at Tanglewood (including, sometimes, the Boston Symphony Orchestra) depends upon complete student participation.

Before a setting conceived and built by student artists, Simpson and the other students of the supporting cast sang to the accompaniment of music played by a student orchestra under the baton of a student conductor. The only professional touch was an adept one. It was that of Boris Goldovsky, who heads the Tanglewood opera department, and it was enough of a touch to make the presentation appear professional, too.

Attracts Professionals

Goldovsky's touch, in fact, is so that other professionals have been attracted to Tanglewood for study under him. One of them is Miss Alice Richmond of 1839 Manor drive, Union. A one-time winner of the Griffith Music Foundation award, Miss Richmond has already sung for two seasons with the New York City Opera Company in the New York City Center. She became a student at Tanglewood, however, to get Goldovsky's guidance in opera dramatics.

Other Jerseyans in the opera department at Tanglewood are Miss Lois McCauley of 1946 Pennington road, Trenton, a soprano, who just returned from study in Europe, and Merrill Fisher of 27 Park street, Orange.

Although all the Jerseyans agree that they cannot accomplish anywhere else all that they are accomplishing in six weeks here, the particular reasons for their Massachusetts migration vary with their personalities.

Choir Instructor

Simpson, a 29-year-old instructor at the Westminster Choir College in Princeton, was persuaded by friends to apply at Tanglewood: William Tooker, 22, of 7 Princeton place, Montclair, who was graduated last year from Princeton University, wanted additional choir training—even though he is studying to be an English instructor.

Malcolm Peyton, 21, of Pretty Brook road, Princeton Township, a senior at Princeton, decided several months ago that he'll become a composer, and he is completing work on a string quintet at Tanglewood. Another Princetonian, Hassler Whitney, who is doing mathematical research at the Institute for Advanced Study, is seeking proficiency in his hobby, the viola. And Miss Alison Dessau, a 19-year-old brownette from 140 Hillside avenue, Englewood, is one of those artists of make-believe who brings life to the still life of scenery.

Of course, another good reason why the Jerseyans are here is that Tanglewood wanted them. All—with the exception of several who came to participate in the Tanglewood study group program—have been awarded scholarships by the Berkshire Music Center for the session.

And they earn those scholarships, too. In addition to the opera presentations, the orchestral students perform at weekly concerts and numerous chamber music recitals, and the choral students provide the voices for massive choral pieces, such as Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, when they are performed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during its week-end concerts.

That, however, is the strength of Tanglewood, according to another Jerseyan, John Sant Ambrogio, 21, of 107 Orchard street, Bloomfield.

"In the conservatories and in the schools, we can be taught, we can study and we can practice," said Sant Ambrogio, who last year won the Gregor Piatigorsky Award as the outstanding violincellist at Tanglewood. "But we cannot perform the way we can perform at Tanglewood, where there are men like Charles Much, Leonard Munch, Leonard Bernstein, Aaron Copland and Hugh Ross to lead us."

William Duckman, a 24-year-old clarinetist from 22 Pomeroy road, Madison, put it in a shorter way.

"At Tanglewood we have more play and less practice," he said.

Cir. (D 193,011) (S 222,310)

This Clipping From
MIAMI, FLA.
HERALD

CELLIST Gregor Piatigorsky and violist Joseph de Pasquale will be soloists with Boston Symphony in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote" in the broadcast from Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood at 9 tonight. CBS-WGBS.

Charles Munch will conduct, programming also the Schubert Symphony No. 5 in B-flat major and the Barber Adagio for Strings. Commentary will, as usual, be by James Fassett.

* * *

Cir. (D 21,668) (S 24,585)

This Clipping From
SANTA BARBARA, CALIF.
NEWS-PRESS

AUG 9 1953

Fugitive Notes...

THE not inconsiderable uproar in recent months over book banning in libraries throughout the United States and in the State Department's overseas libraries is not without its interesting angles. Opinion generally is that book banning is bad in any form since it constitutes a sort of censorship, as was shown in a poll, conducted by George Gallup and his American Institute of Public Opinion. The same poll, however, showed that opinion was about evenly divided over the question of banning certain books from the overseas libraries.

The Gallup questions included this poser: "Do you think books written by Communist authors or by persons said to have Communist leanings should or should not be banned from library shelves in this country?" The reported results showed 77 per cent believed they should not be banned, 18 per cent felt they should and 5 per cent were indifferent.

It appears the question should not be hinged on banning these books but on the support their purchase gives those writers who thrive on peddling Communist preachings and dogma. We lose this point when we raise a howl about freedom from censorship.

* * *

FOR years it was fashionable in literary circles of the United States to be a Communist, or at least to have pink leanings as was the fashion of the so-called liberals. In those years, we never heard protest raised over banning of works of the "rightists," among them John T. Flynn. Why is it, therefore, that we never hear from the liberals until their own side is attacked? They assume the pose of defenders of the faith but their pose is strictly one-sided.

the genensorship
It smells of books
. Never-
ot in the United States to point to the Nazis. We have done similar things before.

For one example, we recall that during the first world war the study of the German language was lifted from the curricula of our high schools because we were at war with Germany. And in intellectual Boston, Dr. Karl Muck was fired as musical director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra chiefly because he was a German national, even though the immediate excuse was that he refused to close his concerts with "The Star Spangled Banner," which had not at that time been designated the American national anthem.

* * *

IN PLACE OF censorship what we need is good taste. We know what books should or should not be brought into the home, judged not only by their political content. Those authors who dish out pornography in all forms could not live and write as they do if they were not supported by sales. There are times when we see signs that the trend is veering away from this sort of stuff for, as Somerset Maugham pointed out earlier this year, the public is becoming satiated with what is termed "realism." The true artist knows what should be weeded out of his work, be it a painting or a novel.

* * *

ONE EXCEPTION WE would make in voting against censorship. In the distribution of textbooks for our schools the duty devolves on authorities to see that nothing erroneous either in fact or interpretation of fact gets into these books. The minds of the young are colored by what they absorb in the days of their early learning and an idea once rooted is difficult to supplant. Error taught in those days may branch out into many multiples to cause endless trouble in future days.—T. M.

Cir. (D 194,114) (S 293,426)

This Clipping From
LOUISVILLE, KY.
COURIER-JOURNAL

AUG 9 1953

MUSIC ON THE AIR THIS WE

By ANGELA PREIS

GREGOR Piatigorsky, cellist, and Joseph de Pasquale, viola soloist, perform Don Quixote by Richard Strauss with the Boston Symphony, Charles Munch conducting, WHAS 2:30 today.

SUNDAY

Moods for Sunday: Overture to Verdi's La Forza del Destino and Beethoven's Symphony No. 2. WHAS 6 a.m.

This Morning's Music: Dance of The Hours by Ponchielli, Tchaikovsky's Concerto No. 1 for Piano and L'Arlesienne Suite by Bizet, repeated daily. WFPL 7 a.m.

George Crook, organ recital: Larghetto by Mozart, Grieg's At The Cradle, Gavotte in F major by Scharwenka, Cantilene by Salome, Reverie by Saint-Saens, Hoffman's Scherzo and Cantilene Nuptiale by Dubois. WAVE 7:05 a.m.

St. Augustine's College Choir sings Let Us Break Bread Together, O Morning Star, Adoramus Te, Christe, Bach-Gounod Ave Maria and An Evening's Pastorelle. WKLO 9:30 a.m.

Masterworks From France: Hahn's Concerto for Piano, repeated daily. WFPL 1 p.m.

Robert Whitney presents Ravel's Le Tombeau de Couperin, Concerto in G major for Violin by Mozart and Hindemith's Symphonic Metamorphosis on Themes of Von Weber. WHAS 1:30 p.m.

World Music Festival: Charles Munch conducts the Boston Symphony in Schubert's Fifth Symphony, Adagio for Strings by Barber and Don Quixote by Richard Strauss. WHAS 2:30 p.m.

Masterworks: Preludes by Rachmaninoff, repeated daily. WFPL 3 p.m.

Good Music Hour: Beethoven Violin Concerto, Fantasy on Carmen and Flower Song by Bizet. WKYW

Contemporary Music: Fra
Johnny by Moross, Symphony
Piston and Music for The T
Copland, repeated daily. WF

Serious Music: Concerto in D
Cello by Lalo, Chausson's Sym
B flat, The Sandman by Rous in E flat by Saint-Saens, Rave in F, Trois Morceaux en Form by Satie and Debussy's Prelud repeatedly nightly. W

MONDAY

Good Music Hour: Gershwin
in F for Piano. WK

Nadine Conner sings Deh
Tardar from Mozart's The M
Figaro. WAVE, WAVE T

Barbara Gibson sings Waltz od's Romeo and Juliet and Variations by LaForge WA

Music In The Night: Schub
munde Ballet Suite and Me
A Midsummer Night's Dream
WA

TUESDAY

Good Music Hou : Patrice M
Strauss waltzes. WK

Music In The Night: Sylvi
Delibes. VAV

WEDNES A

Good Music Hour: La Mer
W

Music In The Night: Schum val Suite and Liszt's Pian
No. 1. W

THURSDA

Good Music Hour: Slaught
Avenue by Rodgers, Berns
Free, Interplay by Gould a
Copland. W

Music In The Night: Les Liszt and Symphony No. 8
W

FRIDAY

Good Music Hour: Ezio
Coronation and Death of Boris Godounov and Robert
Sempre Libera from Travia
Song and Duet from Faus
W

Music In The Night:
Oberon by Weber and Debussy

Patrice Munsel
To sing waltzes Tuesday

[271]

TIGHT BINDING

NEWARK SUNDAY NEWS, AUGUST 9, 1953

PLANT'S A PROP—Scenery maker Alison Dessau of 140 Hillside avenue, Englewood, shows how to make tree grow on Tanglewood stage as choral student William Tooker of 7 Princeton place, Montclair, watches.

INTERMEZZO—Composer Malcolm Peyton of Pretty Brook road, Princeton Township, at piano, plays some of his work during interlude at Tanglewood. Miss Lynne Hartman of 102 Kensingtan avenue, Trenton, and William Duckham of 22 Pomeroy avenue, Madison, accompany on violin and clarinet.

Jerseyans in Tanglewood Scene

Study at Berkshire Music Center

BY ALFRED G. ARONOWITZ
Staff Correspondent.

LENOX, Mass.—For 20 young Jerseyans, the step to the Massachusetts Summer music capital here at Tanglewood, perched in the green scape of a Berkshire mountain, was as logical as a Bach fugue. And for several of logically, may be to even greater heights.

The Jerseyans are students at the Berkshire Music Center, which is the more formal name applied by the Boston Symphony Orchestra to Tanglewood, its vacation-month estate and the scene of its Berkshire Symphonic Festival. But students at Tanglewood ought to be called participants rather than students, because their six-week Summer program here is one of participation rather than study.

That's why each of those Jerseyans agree with Robert Simpson, one of their number, when he explains their presence here by saying, in his fine tenor voice: "There just isn't any other place like Tanglewood."

Simpson, who lives at 357 Nassau street, Princeton, proved that point to quite a number of persons in the theater here last Monday when he sang the role of Azael, the young Galilean, in Claude Debussy's seldom-performed—but nonetheless beautiful—one-act opera, "The Prodigal Son."

The opera was one of several staged each Summer by the Tanglewood opera department, which, like almost everything else at Tanglewood (including, sometimes, the Boston Symphony Orchestra) depends upon complete student participation.

Before a setting conceived and built by student artists, Simpson and the other students of the supporting cast sang to the accompaniment of music played by a student orchestra under the baton of a student conductor. The only professional touch was an adept one. It was that of Boris Goldovsky, who heads the Tanglewood opera department, and it was enough of a touch to make the presentation appear professional, too.

Attracts Professionals

Goldovsky's touch, in fact, is so that other professionals have been attracted to Tanglewood for study under him. One of them is Miss Alice Richmond of 1839 Manor drive, Union. A one-time winner of the Griffith Music Foundation award, Miss Richmond has already sung for two seasons with the New York City Opera Company in the New York City Center. She became a student at Tanglewood, however, to get Goldovsky's guidance in opera dramatics.

Other Jerseyans in the opera department at Tanglewood are Miss Lois McCauley of 1946 Pennington road, Trenton, a soprano, who just returned from study in Europe, and Merrill Fisher of 27 Park street, Orange.

Although all the Jerseyans agree that they cannot accomplish anywhere else all that they are accomplishing in six weeks here, the particular reasons for their Massachusetts migration vary with their personalities.

Choir Instructor

Simpson, a 29-year-old instructor at the Westminster Choir College in Princeton, was persuaded by friends to apply at Tanglewood: William Tooker, 22, of 7 Princeton place, Montclair, who was graduated last year from Princeton University, wanted additional choir training—even though he is studying to be an English instructor.

Malcolm Peyton, 21, of Pretty Brook road, Princeton Township, a senior at Princeton, decided several months ago that he'll become a composer, and he is completing work on a string quintet at Tanglewood. Another Princetonian, Hassler Whitney, who is doing mathematical research at the Institute for Advanced Study, is seeking proficiency in his hobby, the viola. And Miss Alison Dessau, a 19-year-old brownette from 140 Hillside avenue, Englewood, is one of those artists of make-believe who brings life to the still life of scenery.

Of course, another good reason why the Jerseyans are here is that Tanglewood wanted them. All—with the exception of several who came to participate in the Tanglewood study group program—have been awarded scholarships by the Berkshire Music Center for the session.

And they earn those scholarships, too. In addition to the opera presentations, the orchestral students perform at weekly concerts and numerous chamber music recitals, and the choral students provide the voices for massive choral pieces, such as Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, when they are performed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during its week-end concerts.

That, however, is the strength of Tanglewood, according to another Jerseyan, John Sant Ambrogio, 21, of 107 Orchard street, Bloomfield.

"In the conservatories and in the schools, we can be taught, we can study and we can practice," said Sant Ambrogio, who last year won the Greggor Piatigorsky Award as the outstanding violincellist at Tanglewood. "But we cannot perform the way we can perform at Tanglewood, where there are men like Charles Much, Leonard Munch, Leonard Bernstein, Aaron Copland and Hugh Ross to lead us."

William Duckman, a 24-year-old clarinetist from 22 Pomeroy road, Madison, put it in a shorter way.

"At Tanglewood we have more play and less practice," he said.

Cir. (D 193,011) (S 222,310)

This Clipping From
MIAMI, FLA.
HERALD

CELLIST Gregor Piatigorsky and violist Joseph de Pasquale will be soloists with Boston Symphony in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote" in the broadcast from Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood at 9 tonight, CBS-WGBS.

Charles Munch will conduct, programming also the Schubert Symphony No. 5 in B-flat major and the Barber Adagio for Strings. Commentary will, as usual, be by James Fassett.

* * *

Cir. (D 21,668) (S 24,585)

This Clipping From
SANTA BARBARA, CALIF.
NEWS-PRESS

AUG 9 1953

Fugitive Notes...

THE not inconsiderable uproar in recent months over book banning in libraries throughout the United States and in the State Department's overseas libraries is not without its interesting angles. Opinion generally is that book banning is bad in any form since it constitutes a sort of censorship, as was shown in a poll, conducted by George Gallup and his American Institute of Public Opinion. The same poll, however, showed that opinion was about evenly divided over the question of banning certain books from the overseas libraries.

The Gallup questions included this poser: "Do you think books written by Communist authors or by persons said to have Communist leanings should or should not be banned from library shelves in this country?" The reported results showed 77 per cent believed they should not be banned, 18 per cent felt they should and 5 per cent were indifferent.

It appears the question should not be hinged on banning these books but on the support their purchase gives those writers who thrive on peddling Communist preachings and dogma. We lose this point when we raise a howl about freedom from censorship.

* * *

FOR years it was fashionable in literary circles of the United States to be a Communist, or at least to have pink leanings as was the fashion of the so-called liberals. In those years, we never heard protest raised over banning of works of the "rightists," among them John T. Flynn. Why is it, therefore, that we never hear from the liberals until their own side is attacked? They assume the pose of defenders of the faith but their pose is strictly one-sided.

Few will quarrel with the general proposition that censorship is not good. It isn't. It smells too much of the burning of books in the days of the Nazis. Nevertheless, we have no right in the United States to point to the Nazis. We have done similar things before.

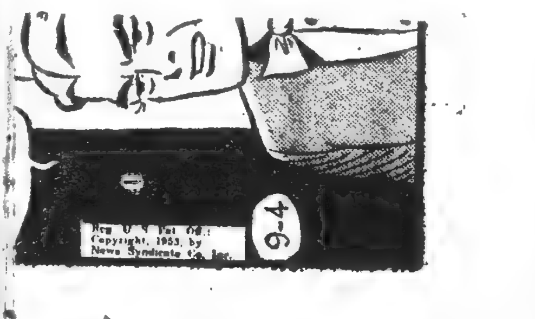
For one example, we recall that during the first world war the study of the German language was lifted from the curricula of our high schools because we were at war with Germany. And in intellectual Boston, Dr. Karl Muck was fired as musical director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra chiefly because he was a German national, even though the immediate excuse was that he refused to close his concerts with "The Star Spangled Banner," which had not at that time been designated the American national anthem.

* * *

IN PLACE OF censorship what we need is good taste. We know what books should or should not be brought into the home, judged not only by their political content. Those authors who dish out pornography in all forms could not live and write as they do if they were not supported by sales. There are times when we see signs that the trend is veering away from this sort of stuff for, as Somerset Maugham pointed out earlier this year, the public is becoming satiated with what is termed "realism." The true artist knows what should be weeded out of his work, be it a painting or a novel.

* * *

ONE EXCEPTION WE would make in voting against censorship. In the distribution of textbooks for our schools the duty devolves on authorities to see that nothing erroneous either in fact or interpretation of fact gets into these books. The minds of the young are colored by what they absorb in the days of their early learning and an idea once rooted is difficult to supplant. Error taught in those days may branch out into many multiples to cause endless trouble in future days.—T. M.



Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.
Copyright, 1953, by News Syndicate Co. Inc.
9-4

soloist, perform Don Quixote by Richard Strauss with the Boston Symphony, Charles Munch conducting, WHAS 2:30 today.

SUNDAY

Moods for Sunday: Overture to Verdi's La Forza del Destino and Beethoven's Symphony No. 2. WHAS 6 a.m.

This Morning's Music: Dance of The Hours by Ponchielli, Tchaikovsky's Concerto No. 1 for Piano and L'Arlesienne Suite by Bizet, repeated daily. WFPL 7 a.m.

George Crook, organ recital: Larghetto by Mozart, Grieg's At The Cradle, Gavotte in F major by Scharwenka, Cantilene by Salome, Reverie by Saint-Saens, Hoffman's Scherzo and Cantilene Nuptiale by Dubois. WAVE 7:05 a.m.

St. Augustine's College Choir sings Let Us Break Bread Together, O Morning Star, Adoramus Te, Christe, Bach-

---

THE AIR THIS WE

ounod Ave Maria and An Evening's astorelle. WKLO 9:30 a.m.

Masterworks From France: Hahn's Concerto for Piano, repeated daily. WFPL 1 p.m.

Robert Whitney presents Ravel's Le Tombeau de Couperin, Concerto in G major for Violin by Mozart and Hindemith's Symphonic Metamorphosis on Themes of Von Weber. WHAS 1:30 p.m.

World Music Festival: Charles Munch conducts the Boston Symphony in Schubert's Fifth Symphony, Adagio for Strings by Barber and Don Quixote by Richard Strauss. WHAS 2:30 p.m.

Masterworks: Preludes by Rachmaninoff, repeated daily. WFPL 3 p.m.

Good Music Hour: Beethoven Violin Concerto, Fantasy on Carmen and Flower

Patrice Munsel
To sing waltzes Tuesday

Song by Bizet WKYW

Contemporary Music: Fran Johnny by Moross, Symphony Piston and Music for The Th Copland, repeated daily. WF

Serious Music: Concerto in D Cello by Lalo, Chausson's Sym B flat, The Sandman by Rouss in E flat by Saint-Saens, Ravel in F, Trois Morceaux en Form by Satie and Debussy's Prelude repeatedly night. WF

MONDAY

Good Music Hour: Gershwin's in F for Piano WK

Nadine Conner sings Deh Tardar from Mozart's The M Figaro. WAVE, WAVE TV

Barbara Gibson sings Waltz od's Romeo and Juliet and Variations by LaForge. WA

Music In The Night: Schub munde Ballet Suite and Me A Midsummer Night's Dream WA

TUESDAY

Good Music Hour: Patrice M Strauss waltzes. WK

Music In The Night: Sylvi Delibes. WAV

WED ESDA

Good Music Hour: Le Mer WI

Music In The Night: Schum val Suite and Liszt's Pian No. 1. W

THURSDAY

Good Music Hour: Slaughte Avenue by Rodgers, Berns Free, Interplay by Gould an Copland. W

Music In The Night: Les Liszt and Symphony No. 8 W

FRIDAY

Good Music Hour: Eric Coronation and Death of Boris Godounov and Rober Sempre Libera from Travia Song and Duet from Faust. W

Music In The Night: Oberon by Weber and Debussy

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.

Eagle 8/10

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

by the

BOSTON SYMPHONY

Orchestra

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

CLOSING CONCERTS

FRI. EVE., Aug. 14—BRAHMS' REQUIEM, Soloists: LOIS MARSHALL, Sorano, WILLIAM WARFIELD, Baritone
SAT. EVE., Aug. 15, LEONARD BERNSTEIN, Conducting
SUN. AFT., Aug. 16, Soloist, SEYMOUR LIPKIN, Piano
Reserved seats from $2.50; General Admission $2.00

Thur, Aug. 13, "TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"

Many events include Boston Symphony Concert, Conducted by CHARLES MUNCH and LEONARD BERNSTEIN; Soloists—ISAAC STERN, Violin; LEONTYNE PRICE, Soprano, appearing with WILLIAM WARFIELD, Baritone, in "Porgy and Bess," Act 11, Scenes 1 and 2.

MASS., MONDAY, AUGUST 10, 1953

THE STANDARD-TIMES, NEW BED

From: Geo. L. Geiger
Managing Editor

Thursday's Program Listed For Berkshire Music Center

Of interest is the announcement that the world premieres of "Bad Boys in School," a one-act opera by Jan Meyerowitz, and of "A Little Boy Lost," a cantata by Allen Sapp, will be featured in Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade," the gala benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer school of music, at Tanglewood, Lenox.

The short works will be performed by students of the Berkshire Music Center as a part of a simultaneous demonstration by each of the school's five departments, orchestra, chamber music, opera, chorus, and study group, commencing at 6 p. m.

Following their performance will be the gala concert in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Charles Munch will conduct Handel and Beethoven, with Isaac Stern as soloist and Leonard Bernstein will have the podium for act II, scenes 1 and 2 of Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," with Leontyne Price and William Warfield as soloists, and the festival chorus.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

by the

BOSTON SYMPHONY

Orchestra

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

CLOSING CONCERTS

FRI. EVE., Aug. 14, Soloists: LOIS MARSHALL, Soprano, WILLIAM WARFIELD, Baritone
SAT. EVE., Aug. 15, LEONARD BERNSTEIN, Conducting
SUN. AFT., Aug. 16, Soloist, SEYMOUR LIPKIN, Piano
Reserved seats from $2.50; Gen'l Adm. $2

Thurs., Aug. 13—"Tanglewood on Parade"

Many events include Boston Symphony Concert, Conducted by CHARLES MUNCH and LEONARD BERNSTEIN; Soloists—ISAAC STERN, Violin; WILLIAM WARFIELD, Baritone, in "Porgy and LEONTYNE PRICE, Soprano, appearing with Bess," Act II, Scenes 1 & 2. Reserved Seats $4 and $3; Unreserved—$2.50.

Address Box Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

MUSIC

globe 8/10

Boston Symphony Pays Koussevitzky Tribute

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX, Aug. 9—The second week-end of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood was perhaps the biggest of the three series, in the size of certain compositions and splendor of their performance.

Not often can you hear Berlioz' entire "Romeo and Juliet" Symphony, the "Resurrection" Symphony of Mahler, and Strauss' "Don Quixote" in the course of three concerts, not to mention Ravel's "Scheherazade" sung by Jennie Tourel, and the Milhaud first cello concerto along the way.

This afternoon's performance of "Don Quixote" was the first that Charles Munch had conducted since he came to America, and the soloist was that distinguished protagonist of the cello "title role," Gregor Piatigorsky. Truth to tell, conductor, soloist and orchestra finished the piece rather better than they had begun it, for the first few minutes were a trifle edgy and the solo cello was a bit overshadowed. The Munch reading is full-bodied and graphic (the sheep were satisfyingly loud), though more of a symphonic continuity than a series of vividly outlined episodes. I did miss the good, mellow, German sound of brass that Strauss needs. But otherwise the tone was rich and silken.

The program began with Schubert's Fifth Symphony, in a brave and tidy reading; included Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings, which the composer was present to hear and to be roundly applauded therefor; the Milhaud First Cello Concerto and that Munch favorite, the Second Suite from Roussel's "Bacchus et Ariane."

Mahler's "Resurrection" Symphony was the main piece Saturday night, at a concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky conducted by Leonard Bernstein. The soloists were contralto Jennie Tourel and Theresa Green, soprano, and the chorus that of the Berkshire Music Festival, prepared by Hugh Ross.

This huge and mercilessly demanding score received a performance that I can describe only as magnificent.

Serge Koussevitzky, I think, would have been very happy could he have heard this triumphant feat of his former protege.

The memory of the late conductor of the Boston Symphony was invoked not only by the concert itself, but a rising, silent tribute of audience and musicians, accorded in response to the gesture of Bernstein when first he appeared upon the stage.

The memorial program began with the prelude to Moussorgsky's "Khovantschina" (one of the smaller interpretive jewels of Koussevitzky in the old days), and included Ravel's song cycle "Scheherazade," sung with gorgeous voice and her usual superb musicianship by Miss Tourel.

After the concert, in the green room of the music shed, Bernstein was presented with the Mahler Medal of the Bruckner Society of America, an organization devoted to propagating the music of Anton Bruckner and Gustav Mahler.

Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet" took the whole of the Friday evening program, Munch conducting. The soloists were Miss Tourel, John McCollum (Romeo) and Nicola Moscona (Friar Laurence), and the chorus was the Berkshire Festival Group, again prepared by Ross.

The total attendance for this week-end was 28,000.

Tanglewood Program Of Light Music Pleases

Union 8/10

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 9 — After the tense excitement of Mahler's "Resurrection" symphony last night, it was pleasant this afternoon to listen to a program that for the most part was light hearted. It was the sort of music which Charles Munch interprets knowingly.

Schubert Symphony Is Opener

The program opened with Schubert's "Symphony No. 5 in B-Flat Major." Ten came Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings" and the first and recorded portion of the program concluded with "Don Quixote" with Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist and Joseph De Pasquale, violist, as soloists. The second portion of the program was given over to Milhaud's "Concerto for Cello and Orchestra, No. 1" with Mr. Piatigorsky as soloist and the "Bacchus Et Ariane" ballet, second suite, as the concluding number.

The Schubert symphony is one of pleasant charm and ingenousness. Schubertian melodies flow gently through each movement, while the menuetto and final allegro are redolent of Mozart, the interpretation gained by its simplicity. It never went beyond its modest framework and there was the usual meticulous attention to detail and nuance.

Continued On Page 8

Samuel Barber wrote his "Adagio for Strings" some years ago. Indeed, the present version for strings, was first made known by Arturo Toscanini in 1938, although the movement in the quartet in B minor was first played in 1936, it remains one of Barber's most rewarding works, rich in feeling and elegant in style. In spite of the richness of the orchestra cello section, we felt that the work, as a whole emerged a bit colorless under Mr. Munch's direction. Of intensity there was little. Mr. Barber was present to share in the applause for his adagio.

Another Matter

Strauss's "Don Quixote" was quite another matter. When Mr. Piatigorsky wasn't fighting wind mills, chasing sheep or scaring poor pilgrims to death, he found time to play with that beauty of tone and elegance of phrasing for which he is justly noted. Mr. De Pasquale was a capital Sancho Panza, playing with a complete conception of his role. Mr. Munch missed no opportunity of the score and there are many for sheer virtuoso display. The result was a brilliant performance. Darius Milhaud, who has been a visiting teacher here, has often been represented on the Tanglewood programs. His music has a certain spice and crispness that sets it apart and his concerto for cello is no exception. It is melodically interesting and rhythmically arresting. The first two movements are quiet, with the cello singing softly to the accompaniment, but the finale is a joyous, brilliant bit of writing in which soloist and orchestra collaborate in rhythmic romp. Mr. Piatigorsky was evidently delighted with the work and he played it with marvelous style and irridescent tone.

The final number was the ballet suite "Bacchus Et Ariane" by A

Berkshire Festival:

N.Y.J.A. aug-10

Munch Offers 'Romeo'

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 10.—in a generous outpouring of symphonic music, the second weekend of the Berkshire Festival had several highlights.

Munch's performance of Berlioz's dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet" in its entirety, Leonard Bernstein's interpretation of the Mahler Second Symphony, and the playing of Piatigorsky and the B. S. O. in Strauss's "Don Quixote" each dominated its respective concert. A total of 28,000 people attended the three events.

The Berlioz in full dress of solos and chorus attains a completeness not fully appreciated in hearing only the orchestral parts. The Berkshire Festival chorus, Jennie Tourel, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, and Nicola Moscona, bass, functioned admirably.

Though Munch did justice to the score's romanticism, the work emerged as more old-fashioned than anticipated.

Wins Medal

Temperamentally attuned to the Mahler, Bernstein conducted a fiery, emotionally-charged performance. It aroused the audience to fever pitch. He was handsomely assisted by the chorus, Miss Tourel, and Theresa Green, soprano.

In making the most of the score as conductor's music, however, Bernstein indulged in inartistic exaggerations. He was over-eager in underlining what Mahler had over-provided in the first place. For his efforts, nonetheless, he received the Bruckner Society medal after the concert.

Munch's masterly reading of the Strauss score made this account of Don Quixote's tale exciting. Better known than the other works, it lost nothing through familiarity because of a finely integrated performance.

Piatigorsky was in top form for the cello solos, most ably seconded by Joseph De Pasquale playing the viola role of Panza.

Notable Singing

The Mahler was the focal point of the Koussevitzky Memorial Concert, annually entrusted to Bernstein. He opened with Moussorgsky's prelude to "Khovanstchina," a special favorite of Koussevitzky, and followed it with Ravel's "Sheherazade" with Miss Tourel as soloist.

She sang with that artistic perfection expected of her, and the memory of her singing persisted even after the Mahler had been performed.

The Strauss was part of the Sunday afternoon program. Munch led off with the sim- Shubert's charming

---

PIATIGORSKY PLAYS MILHAUD CONCERTO

'Cellist Is Heard With Boston Symphony at Tanglewood—Also Offers 'Don Quixote'

NYT 8/10

By JOHN BRIGGS

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 9—Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra concluded this afternoon a week-end of music-making at Tanglewood with a concert featuring Gregor Piatigorsky, 'cellist, as soloist.

Mr. Piatigorsky was heard in the Milhaud 'Cello Concerto No. 1, and in Strauss' "Don Quixote." The renowned 'cellist was in good form this afternoon, his playing was fluent and expressive. His warm, sensitive, singing tone made a telling effect in the Strauss and Milhaud works. It was a distinguished performance by Mr. Piatigorsky.

The viola solos in "Don Quixote" were very capably performed by Joseph de Pasquale.

This afternoon's music began

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Bernstein Conducts at Tanglewood

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 10—The concert which Leonard Bernstein conducted Saturday night at Tanglewood was a memorial program to Serge Koussevitzky who for 25 years conducted the Boston Symphony and for 15 years prior to his death in 1951 had guided the destinies of the Berkshire Festival here. Musically, the event, performance and program-wise, resulted in a measure both of effulgence and inspiration.

Bernstein's decision to perform the prelude to "Khovanstchina," plus the Ravel "Sheherazade" before the intermission, and to follow with the Mahler "Resurrection" (Second) Symphony, might have appeared at first glance like too much of a good thing for a single evening. But the leisurely mood of music-making at Tanglewood encourages long programs. Here, intermissions are extended. Here also, many people arrive hours before a concert to enjoy the relaxation and beauty of the Festival's unique situation.

Despite the fact that the Ravel and the Mahler employ voice with orchestra, two more different works in character can hardly be imagined. Yet the voluptuous languor of the impressionistic "Sheherazade" did not seem out of place preceding the almost fierce exaltation of the Mahler, probably because each, in its way, is a work of intensity and inspiration and each retained its own validity neither adding nor subtracting from the other.

Tourel's Superior Artistry

Ravel's fantastic musical setting of the three "Sheherazade" poems by Tristan Klingsor enhances their pagan sensuousness and dreamy fantasy. Scored for solo voice and orchestra, the pieces benefited last night from the superb performance rendered them by mezzo-soprano Jennie Tourel together with the Bostonians. Miss Tourel's superior artistry is not news to the music-minded but her versatility has never been better demonstrated than over this past week-end when she was soloist with stunning results in three such different works as the Berlioz "Romeo and Juliet" plus the Ravel and Mahler compositions.

The Mahler "Second," like many and done, the main thing is that this is music that Mr. Bernstein of this controversial composer's works, arouses violent pros and cons regarding its worth. My vote is with those (including conductors Bernstein, Ormandy and Walter) who regard it highly and welcome an opportunity to perform it. Considered Cumulatively, the symphony's five movements which reach a climax in the choral finale, to me constitute a tremendous musical experience. And judging from the ovation at the conclusion of Saturday's performance by the 11,400 attending, many others shared my enthusiasm. The Berkshire Festival Chorus performed magnificently and Theresa Green, a gifted young soprano enrolled in the music school here, sang beautifully as the co-soloist with the more experienced Miss Tourel.

TOUREL GREEN

Though Bernstein was inclined toward exaggeration in effects and too slow tempi (it took him ten minutes longer to do the work than it had Ormandy last winter with the Philadelphia Orchestra) his conception was still impressive. He showed throughout an understanding of the work's essential meaning.

23 NEW YORK POST, MONDAY, AUGUST 10, 1953

[272]

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. agle 8/10

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

by the

BOSTON SYMPHONY

Orchestra

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

CLOSING CONCERTS

FRI. EVE., Aug. 14—BRAHMS' REQUIEM, Soloists: LOIS MARSHALL, Sofano, WILLIAM WARFIELD, Baritone
SAT. EVE., Aug. 15, LEONARD BERNSTEIN, Conducting
SUN. AFT., Aug. 16, Soloist, SEYMOUR LIPKIN, Piano
Reserved seats from $2.50; General Admission $2.00

Thur, Aug. 13, "TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"

Many events include Boston Symphony Concert, Conducted by CHARLES MUNCH and LEONARD BERNSTEIN; Soloists—ISAAC STERN, Violin; LEONTYNE PRICE, Soprano, appearing with WILLIAM WARFIELD, Baritone, in "Porgy and Bess," Act 11, Scenes 1 and 2.

Reserved Seats $4 and $3. Unreserved—$2.50

Address Box Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

---

290 WESTMINSTER ST.
6th Floor, Lapham Bldg.

From: Geo. L. Managin

Allen Sapp, will be ... Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade," the gala benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer school of music, at Tanglewood, Lenox.

The short works will be performed by students of the Berkshire Music Center as a part of a simultaneous demonstration by each of the school's five departments, orchestra, chamber music, opera, chorus, and study group, commencing at 6 p. m.

Following their performance will be the gala concert in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Charles Munch will conduct Handel and Beethoven, with Isaac Stern as soloist and Leonard Bernstein will have the podium for act II, scenes 1 and 2 of Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," with Leontyne Price and William Warfield as soloists, and the festival chorus.

Berkshire Festival:

N.Y. J.A. aug-10

Munch Offers 'Romeo'

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 10.—in a generous outpouring of symphonic music, the second weekend of the Berkshire Festival had several highlights.

Munch's performance of Berlioz's dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet" in its entirety, Leonard Bernstein's interpretation of the Mahler Second Symphony, and the playing of Piatigorsky and the B. S. O. in Strauss's "Don Quixote" each dominated its respective concert. A total of 28,000 people attended the three events.

The Berlioz in full dress of solos and chorus attains a completeness not fully appreciated in hearing only the orchestral parts. The Berkshire Festival chorus, Jennie Tourel, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, and Nicola Moscona, bass, functioned admirably.

Though Munch did justice to the score's romanticism, the work emerged as more old-fashioned than anticipated.

Wins Medal

Temperamentally attuned to the Mahler, Bernstein conducted a fiery, emotionally-charged performance. It aroused the audience to fever pitch. He was handsomely assisted by the chorus, Miss Tourel, and Theresa Green, soprano.

In making the most of the score as conductor's music, however, Bernstein indulged in inartistic exaggerations. He was over-eager in underlining what Mahler had over-provided in the first place. For his efforts, nonetheless, he received the Bruckner Society medal after the concert.

Munch's masterly reading of the Strauss score made this account of Don Quixote's tale exciting. Better known than the other works, it lost nothing through familiarity because of a finely integrated performance.

Piatigorsky was in top form for the cello solos, most ably seconded by Joseph De Pasquale playing the viola role of Panza.

Notable Singing

The Mahler was the focal point of the Koussevitzky Memorial Concert, annually entrusted to Bernstein. He opened with Moussorgsky's prelude to "Khovanstchina," a special favorite of Koussevitzky, and followed it with Ravel's "Sheherazade" with Miss Tourel as soloist.

She sang with that artistic perfection expected of her, and the memory of her singing persisted even after the Mahler had been performed.

The Strauss was part of the Sunday afternoon program. Munch led off with the sim- ... Schubert's charming

---

Hollywood Is My Beat

Week in Review—Brooklynite Spots Boner in TV Show

By Sidney Skolsky

TOWN NOTES OF THE WEEK: Howard Keel has his nose straightened with makeup (putty) in "Kiss Me, Kate" and will be a new romantic sensation, judging from the reaction at the preview . . . Betty Grable should worry about not making pictures. Her horses earned $110,000 already this year. More than Betty . . .

Out at Fred Astaire's Blue Valley Ranch in Northridge, there's a steer named Custer wh

"I've managed not to acquire the mogul attitude. The mogul attitude is made up of two points of view. You have to think, 'Everybody makes mis-kes but me,' and 'Nobody akes more money than I .'"

Martin relates: "The characs in Stevens' current film, ane,' live, work, fight and e against a backdrop of the single evening. But the leisure

---

Today's New Film

"THE CRUEL SEA," a J. Arthur Rank presentation released by Universal-International. Directed by Charles duction directed by Charles Frend. Based on the novel by Nicholas Monsarrat. Screen play by Eric Ambler. Jack Hawkins and Donald Sinden star in this realistic film of Britain's Battle of the Atlantic. Also in the cast: Denholm Elliot, Virginia McKenna, John Stratton. At the FINE ARTS.

tached to a wire worked by a block and pulley.

The wire, in turn, is fastened to a leather belt buckled around the actor's middle. When the imaginary slug plows into him, the wire jerks him backward, just as he would jerk if real lead hit him."

How does Stevens work with actors? "He cares nothing for personal popularity. He has no

---

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

by the

BOSTON SYMPHONY

Orchestra

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

CLOSING CONCERTS

FRI. EVE., Aug. 14, Soloists: LOIS MARSHALL, Soprano, WILLIAM WARFIELD, Baritone
SAT. EVE., Aug. 15, LEONARD BERNSTEIN, Conducting
SUN. AFT., Aug. 16, Soloist, SEYMOUR LIPKIN, Piano
Reserved seats from $2.50; Gen'l Adm. $2

Thurs., Aug. 13—"Tanglewood on Parade"

Many events include Boston Symphony Concert, Conducted by CHARLES MUNCH and LEONARD BERNSTEIN; Soloists—ISAAC STERN, Violin; WILLIAM WARFIELD, Baritone, in "Porgy and LEONTYNE PRICE, Soprano, appearing with Bess," Act II, Scenes 1 & 2. Reserved Seats $4 and $3; Unreserved—$2.50.

Address Box Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Tanglewood Program Of Light Music Pleases

Union 8/10

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 9 — After the tense excitement of Mahler's "Resurrection" symphony last night, it was pleasant this afternoon to listen to a program that for the most part was light hearted. It was the sort of music which Charles Munch interprets knowingly.

Schubert Symphony Is Opener

The program opened with Schubert's "Symphony No. 5 in B-Flat Major." Ten came Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings" and the first and recorded portion of the program concluded with "Don Quixote" with Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist and Joseph De Pasquale, violist, as soloists. The second portion of the program was given over to Milhaud's "Concerto for Cello and Orchestra, No. 1" with Mr. Piatigorsky as soloist and the "Bacchus Et Ariane" ballet, second suite, as the concluding number.

The Schubert symphony is one of pleasant charm and ingenousness. Schubertian melodies flow gently through each movement, while the menuetto and final allegro are redolent of Mozart, the interpretation gained by its simplicity. It never went beyond its modest framework and there was the usual meticulous attention to detail and nuance.

Continued On Page 8

Samuel Barber wrote his "Adagio for Strings" some years ago. Indeed, the present version for strings, was first made known by Arturo Toscanini in 1938, although the movement in the quartet in B minor was first played in 1936, it remains one of Barber's most rewarding works, rich in feeling and elegant in style. In spite of the richness of the orchestra cello section, we felt that the work, as a whole emerged a bit colorless under Mr. Munch's direction. Of intensity there was little. Mr. Barber was present to share in the applause for his adagio.

Another Matter

Strauss's "Don Quixote" was quite another matter. When Mr. Piatigorsky wasn't fighting wind mills, chasing sheep or scaring poor pilgrims to death, he found time to play with that beauty of tone and elegance of phrasing for which he is justly noted. Mr. De Pasquale was a capital Sancho Panza, playing with a complete conception of his role. Mr. Munch missed no opportunity of the score and there are many for sheer virtuoso display. The result was a brilliant performance. Darius Milhaud, who has been a visiting teacher here, has often been represented on the Tanglewood programs. His music has a certain spice and crispness that sets it apart and his concerto for cello is no exception. It is melodically interesting and rhythmically arresting. The first two movements are quiet, with the cello singing softly to the accompaniment, but the finale is a joyous, brilliant bit of writing in which soloist and orchestra collaborate in rhythmic romp. Mr. Piatigorsky was evidently delighted with the work and he played it with marvelous style and irridescent tone.

The final number was the balle suite "Bacchus Et Ariane" by A

PIATIGORSKY PLAYS MILHAUD CONCERTO

'Cellist Is Heard With Boston Symphony at Tanglewood—Also Offers 'Don Quixote'

NYT 8/10

By JOHN BRIGGS

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 9—Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra concluded this afternoon a week-end of music-making at Tanglewood with a concert featuring Gregor Piatigorsky, 'cellist, as soloist.

Mr. Piatigorsky was heard in the Milhaud 'Cello Concerto No. 1, and in Strauss' "Don Quixote." The renowned 'cellist was in good form this afternoon, his playing was fluent and expressive. His warm, sensitive, singing tone made a telling effect in the Strauss and Milhaud works. It was a distinguished performance by Mr. Piatigorsky.

The viola solos in "Don Quixote" were very capably performed by Joseph de Pasquale.

This afternoon's music began with a deft, light-fingered and altogether charming performance by Mr. Munch and the orchestra of the Schubert Fifth Symphony in B flat.

Samuel Barber's Adagio for String Orchestra received an eloquent performance. Mr. Barber was present to acknowledge the warm applause of the Tanglewood audience. The afternoon's music ended with the Overture to "Tannhaeuser."

One of the outstanding events of the Tanglewood week-end was last night's performance of the Mahler "Resurrection" Symphony No. 2, in C minor, with Leonard Bernstein conducting.

The performance was in the category of special events. It was played in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, and was preceded by a silent tribute to the conductor.

Then there was the fact that Mr. Bernstein himself is one of the "Tanglewood Boys," and that Mr. Koussevitzky labored untiringly to win recognition for his talented protégé.

All these facts gave the performance of the Mahler special poignancy. But when all is said and done, the main thing is that this is music that Mr. Bernstein understands and for which he has a special affinity. He is able to communicate the fire, grandeur and intensity of his conception of the Mahler to the players, who in turn transmit it to the audience.

It was a lengthy program, the hour-and-twenty-minute Mahler symphony being preceded by Ravel's "Scheherazade" and Mussorgsky's Prelude to "Khovantchina." But at its conclusion, Mr. Bernstein received the kind of reception that conductors dream of. The immense Mahler symphony had left its hearers stirred and exalted; there was no doubt of that.

Jennie Tourel sang the vocal parts of the Ravel work with polished artistry, and also sang the cantralto solos in the Mahler symphony. The soprano soloist in the Mahler was Theresa Green.

MUSIC

Globe 8/10

Boston Symphony Pays Koussevitzky Tribute

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX, Aug. 9—The second week-end of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood was perhaps the biggest of the three series, in the size of certain compositions and splendor of their performance.

Not often can you hear Berlioz' entire "Romeo and Juliet" Symphony, the "Resurrection" Symphony of Mahler, and Strauss' "Don Quixote" in the course of three concerts, not to mention Ravel's "Scheherazade" sung by Jennie Tourel, and the Milhaud first cello concerto along the way.

This afternoon's performance of "Don Quixote" was the first that Charles Munch had conducted since he came to America, and the soloist was that distinguished protagonist of the cello "title role," Gregor Piatigorsky. Truth to tell, conductor, soloist and orchestra finished the piece rather better than they had begun it, for the first few minutes were a trifle edgy and the solo cello was a bit overshadowed. The Munch reading is full-bodied and graphic (the sheep were satisfyingly loud), though more of a symphonic continuity than a series of vividly outlined episodes. I did miss the good, mellow, German sound of brass that Strauss needs. But otherwise the tone was rich and silken.

The program began with Schubert's Fifth Symphony, in a brave and tidy reading; included Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings, which the composer was present to hear and to be roundly applauded therefor; the Milhaud First Cello Concerto and that Munch favorite, the Second Suite from Roussel's "Bacchus et Ariane."

Mahler's "Resurrection" Symphony was the main piece Saturday night, at a concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky conducted by Leonard Bernstein. The soloists were contralto Jennie Tourel and Theresa Green, soprano, and the chorus that of the Berkshire Music Festival, prepared by Hugh Ross.

This huge and mercilessly demanding score received a performance that I can describe only as magnificent.

Serge Koussevitzky, I think, would have been very happy could he have heard this triumphant feat of his former protege.

The memory of the late conductor of the Boston Symphony was invoked not only by the concert itself, but a rising, silent tribute of audience and musicians, accorded in response to the gesture of Bernstein when first he appeared upon the stage.

The memorial program began with the prelude to Moussorgsky's "Khovantschina" (one of the smaller interpretive jewels of Koussevitzky in the old days), and included Ravel's song cycle "Scheherazade," sung with gorgeous voice and her usual superb musicianship by Miss Tourel.

After the concert, in the green room of the music shed, Bernstein was presented with the Mahler Medal of the Bruckner Society of America, an organization devoted to propagating the music of Anton Bruckner and Gustav Mahler.

Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet" took the whole of the Friday evening program, Munch conducting. The soloists were Miss Tourel, John McCollum (Romeo) and Nicola oscona (Friar Laurence), and the horus was the Berkshire Festival Group, again prepared by Ross.

The total attendance for this week-end was 28,000.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. Eagle

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

by the

BOSTON SYMPHONY

Orchestra

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

8/10

CLOSING CONCERTS

FRI. EVE., Aug. 14—BRAHMS' REQUIEM, Soloists: LOIS MARSHALL, Sorano, WILLIAM WARFIELD, Baritone
SAT. EVE., Aug. 15, LEONARD BERNSTEIN, Conducting
SUN. AFT., Aug. 16, Soloist, SEYMOUR LIPKIN, Piano
Reserved seats from $2.50; General Admission $2.00

Thur, Aug. 13, "TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"

Many events include Boston Symphony Concert, Conducted by CHARLES MUNCH and LEONARD BERNSTEIN; Soloists—ISAAC STERN, Violin; LEONTYNE PRICE, Soprano, appearing with WILLIAM WARFIELD, Baritone, in "Porgy and Bess," Act 11, Scenes 1 and 2.

Reserved Seats $4 and $3. Unreserved—$2.50

Address Box Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

---

290 WESTMINSTER ST.
6th Floor, Lapham Bldg.

From: Geo. L. Managin

Allen Sapp, will Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade," the gala benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer school of music, at Tanglewood, Lenox.

The short works will be performed by students of the Berkshire Music Center as a part of a simultaneous demonstration by each of the school's five departments, orchestra, chamber music, opera, chorus, and study group, commencing at 6 p. m.

Following their performance will be the gala concert in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Charles Munch will conduct Handel and Beethoven, with Isaac Stern as soloist and Leonard Bernstein will have the podium for act II, scenes 1 and 2 of Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," with Leontyne Price and William Warfield as soloists, and the festival chorus.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

by the

BOSTON SYMPHONY

Orchestra

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

CLOSING CONCERTS

FRI. EVE., Aug. 14, Soloists: LOIS MARSHALL, Soprano, WILLIAM WARFIELD, Baritone
SAT. EVE., Aug. 15, LEONARD BERNSTEIN, Conducting
SUN. AFT., Aug. 16, Soloist, SEYMOUR LIPKIN, Piano
Reserved seats from $2.50; Gen'l Adm. $2

Thurs., Aug. 13—"Tanglewood on Parade"

Many events include Boston Symphony Concert, Conducted by CHARLES MUNCH and LEONARD BERNSTEIN; Soloists—ISAAC STERN, Violin; WILLIAM WARFIELD, Baritone, in "Porgy and LEONTYNE PRICE, Soprano, appearing with Bess," Act II, Scenes 1 & 2. Reserved Seats $4 and $3; Unreserved—$2.50.

Address Box Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

MUSIC

globe 8/10

Boston Symphony Pays Koussevitzky Tribute

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX, Aug. 9—The second week-end of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood was perhaps the biggest of the three series, in the size of certain compositions and splendor of their performance.

Not often can you hear Berlioz' entire "Romeo and Juliet" Symphony, the "Resurrection" Symphony of Mahler, and Strauss' "Don Quixote" in the course of three concerts, not to mention Ravel's "Scheherazade" sung by Jennie Tourel, and the Milhaud first cello concerto along the way.

This afternoon's performance of "Don Quixote" was the first that Charles Munch had conducted since he came to America, and the soloist was that distinguished protagonist of the cello "title role," Gregor Piatigorsky. Truth to tell, conductor, soloist and orchestra finished the piece rather better than they had begun it, for the first few minutes were a trifle edgy and the solo cello was a bit overshadowed. The Munch reading is full-bodied and graphic (the sheep were satisfyingly loud), though more of a symphonic continuity than a series of vividly outlined episodes. I did miss the good, mellow, German sound of brass that Strauss needs. But otherwise the tone was rich and silken.

The program began with Schubert's Fifth Symphony, in a brave and tidy reading; included Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings; which the composer was present to hear and to be roundly applauded therefor; the Milhaud First Cello Concerto and that Munch favorite, the Second Suite from Roussel's "Bacchus et Ariane."

Mahler's "Resurrection" Symphony was the main piece Saturday night, at a concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky conducted by Leonard Bernstein. The soloists were contralto Jennie Tourel and Theresa Green, soprano, and the chorus that of the Berkshire Music Festival, prepared by Hugh Ross.

This huge and mercilessly demanding score received a performance that I can describe only as magnificent.

Serge Koussevitzky, I think, would have been very happy could he have heard this triumphant feat of his former protege.

The memory of the late conductor of the Boston Symphony was invoked not only by the concert itself, but a rising, silent tribute of audience and musicians, accorded in response to the gesture of Bernstein when first he appeared upon the stage.

The memorial program began with the prelude to Moussorgsky's "Khovantschina" (one of the smaller interpretive jewels of Koussevitzky in the old days), and included Ravel's song cycle "Scheherazade," sung with gorgeous voice and her usual superb musicianship by Miss Tourel.

After the concert, in the green room of the music shed, Bernstein was presented with the Mahler Medal of the Bruckner Society of America, an organization devoted to propagating the music of Anton Bruckner and Gustav Mahler.

Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet" took the whole of the Friday evening program, Munch conducting. The soloists were Miss Tourel, John McCollum (Romeo) and Nicola Moscona (Friar Laurence), and the chorus was the Berkshire Festival Group, again prepared by Ross.

The total attendance for this week-end was 28,000.

Tanglewood Program Of Light Music Pleases

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Union 8/10

Tanglewood, Aug. 9 — After the tense excitement of Mahler's "Resurrection" symphony last night, it was pleasant this afternoon to listen to a program that for the most part was light hearted. It was the sort of music which Charles Munch interprets knowingly.

Schubert Symphony Is Opener

The program opened with Schubert's "Symphony No. 5 in B-Flat Major." Ten came Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings" and the first and recorded portion of the program concluded with "Don Quixote" with Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist and Joseph De Pasquale, violist, as soloists. The second portion of the program was given over to Milhaud's "Concerto for Cello and Orchestra, No. 1" with Mr. Piatigorsky as soloist and the "Bacchus Et Ariane" ballet, second suite, as the concluding number.

The Schubert symphony is one of pleasant charm and ingenousness. Schubertian melodies flow gently through each movement, while the menuetto and final allegro are redolent of Mozart, the interpretation gained by its simplicity. It never went beyond its modest framework and there was the usual meticulous attention to detail and nuance.

Continued On Page 8

• Samuel Barber wrote his "Adagio for Strings" some years ago. Indeed, the present version for strings, was first made known by Arturo Toscanini in 1938, although the movement in the quartet in B minor was first played in 1936, it remains one of Barber's most rewarding works, rich in feeling and elegant in style. In spite of the richness of the orchestra cello section, we felt that the work, as a whole emerged a bit colorless under Mr. Munch's direction. Of intensity there was little. Mr. Barber was present to share in the applause for his adagio.

Another Matter

Strauss's "Don Quixote" was quite another matter. When Mr. Piatigorsky wasn't fighting wind mills, chasing sheep or scaring poor pilgrims to death, he found time to play with that beauty of tone and elegance of phrasing for which he is justly noted. Mr. De Pasquale was a capital Sancho Panza, playing with a complete conception of his role. Mr. Munch missed no opportunity of the score and there are many for sheer virtuoso display. The result was a brilliant performance. Darius Milhaud, who has been a visiting teacher here, has often been represented on the Tanglewood programs. His music has a certain spice and crispness that sets it apart and his concerto for cello is no exception. It is melodically interesting and rhythmically arresting. The first two movements are quiet, with the cello singing softly to the accompaniment, but the finale is a joyous, brilliant bit of writing in which soloist and orchestra collaborate in rhythmic romp. Mr. Piatigorsky was evidently delighted with the work and he played it with marvelous style and irridescent tone.

The final number was the ballet suite "Bacchus Et Ariane" by Albert Roussel. The legend of Ariadne on the Island of Naxos provided Roussel and ideal subject for a ballet. Just as it provided Richard Strauss a subject for an opera. Roussel has written music that is at once descriptive and elegant. It is the sort of music to which Mr. Munch brings his best interpretive effort, so the performance this afternoon was as definitive as one may expect to hear these days.

Now for some figures. With 9100 people at the concert today, the total audience for the three concerts in Series B is 28,000. This is 3000 less than the audience for Series A.

Tomorrow night the opera department will present the Gretry opera "Richard the Lion Hearted" in an English translation.

Berkshire Festival:

N.Y. J.A. aug-10

Munch Offers 'Romeo'

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 10.—in a generous outpouring of symphonic music, the second weekend of the Berkshire Festival had several highlights.

Munch's performance of Berlioz's dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet" in its entirety, Leonard Bernstein's interpretation of the Mahler Second Symphony, and the playing of Piatigorsky and the B. S. O. in Strauss's "Don Quixote" each dominated its respective concert. A total of 28,000 people attended the three events.

The Berlioz in full dress of solos and chorus attains a completeness not fully appreciated in hearing only the orchestral parts. The Berkshire Festival chorus, Jennie Tourel, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, and Nicola Moscona, bass, functioned admirably.

Though Munch did justice to the score's romanticism, the work emerged as more old-fashioned than anticipated.

Wins Medal

Temperamentally attuned to the Mahler, Bernstein conducted a fiery, emotionally-charged performance. It aroused the audience to fever pitch. He was handsomely assisted by the chorus, Miss Tourel, and Theresa Green, soprano.

In making the most of the score as conductor's music, however, Bernstein indulged in inartistic exaggerations. He was over-eager in underlining what Mahler had over-provided in the first place. For his efforts, nonetheless, he received the Bruckner Society medal after the concert.

Munch's masterly reading of the Strauss score made this account of Don Quixote's tale exciting. Better known than the other works, it lost nothing through familiarity because of a finely integrated performance.

Piatigorsky was in top form for the cello solos, most ably seconded by Joseph De Pasquale playing the viola role of Panza.

Notable Singing

The Mahler was the focal point of the Koussevitzky Memorial Concert, annually entrusted to Bernstein. He opened with Moussorgsky's prelude to "Khovanstchina," a special favorite of Koussevitzky, and followed it with Ravel's "Sheherazade" with Miss Tourel as soloist.

She sang with that artistic perfection expected of her, and the memory of her singing persisted even after the Mahler had been performed.

The Strauss was part of the Sunday afternoon program. Munch led off with the simplicity of Shubert's charming Fifth Symphony. He included Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings." A beautiful performance caught the audience's fancy.

Milhaud's piquant melodious, playful cello concerto proved an excellent foil for the Strauss, though its quality was perhaps a bit lost in the vast end. Roussel's second suite from "Bachus et Ariane" gave the concert its brilliant finale. The whole program appeared to bring much satisfaction.

QUIRINO, WELL, SAYS HE WILL STAY IN RACE

BALTIMORE, Aug. 9 (UP)—President Elpidio Quirino of the Philippines declared today that he has recovered from stomach surgery and intended to stay in his country's Presidential race as the candidate of the Liberal party.

"There is no if about my returning to campaign for re-election," he said. Mr. Quirino is in Johns Hopkins Hospital, where he has been under treatment for more

---

He added that "Hans Christian Andersen" would have its Danish premiere here on Sept. 5.

Hollywood Is My Beat

Week in Review—Brooklynite Spots Boner in TV Show

By Sidney Skolsky

TOWN NOTES OF THE WEEK: Howard Keel has his nose straightened with makeup (putty) in "Kiss Me, Kate" and will be a new romantic sensation, judging from the reaction at the preview . . . Betty Grable should worry about not making pictures. Her horses earned $110,000 already this year. More than Betty . . . Out at Fred Astaire's Blue Valley Ranch in Northridge, there's a steer named Custer

"I've managed not to acquire the mogul attitude. The mogul attitude is made up of two points of view. You have to think, 'Everybody makes mistakes but me,' and 'Nobody makes more money than I do.'"

Martin relates: "The characters in Stevens' current film, 'Shane,' live, work, fight and against a backdrop of the single evening. But the

tached to a wire worked by a block and pulley.

The wire, in turn, is fastened to a leather belt buckled around the actor's middle. When the imaginary slug plows into him, the wire jerks him backward, just as he would jerk if real lead hit him."

How does Stevens work with actors? "He cares nothing for personal popularity. He has no

---

Today's New Film

"THE CRUEL SEA," a J. Arthur Rank presentation released by Universal-International duction. Directed by Charles duction directed by Charles Frend. Based on the novel by Nicholas Monsarrat. Screen play by Eric Ambler. Jack Hawkins and Donald Sinden star in this realistic film of Britain's Battle of the Atlantic. Also in the cast: Denholm Elliot, Virginia McKenna, John Stratton. At the FINE ARTS.

Mr. Bernstein himself is one of the "Tanglewood Boys," and that Mr. Koussevitzky labored untiringly to win recognition for his talented protégé.

All these facts gave the performance of the Mahler special poignancy. But when all is said and done, the main thing is that this is music that Mr. Bernstein

[273]

Stock Averages
Dow-Jones—Goodbody & Co. (1 PM)
30 Industrials .... 275.79 + .25
20 Railroads .... 106.36 — .27
15 Utilities .... 50.41 + .32
Sales 580,000

The Berkshire Evening Eagle

Second Section

Pittsfield, Massachusetts, Monday, August 10, 1953.

Music

Week-end Concerts in Shed 'Tense, Exciting, Exulting'

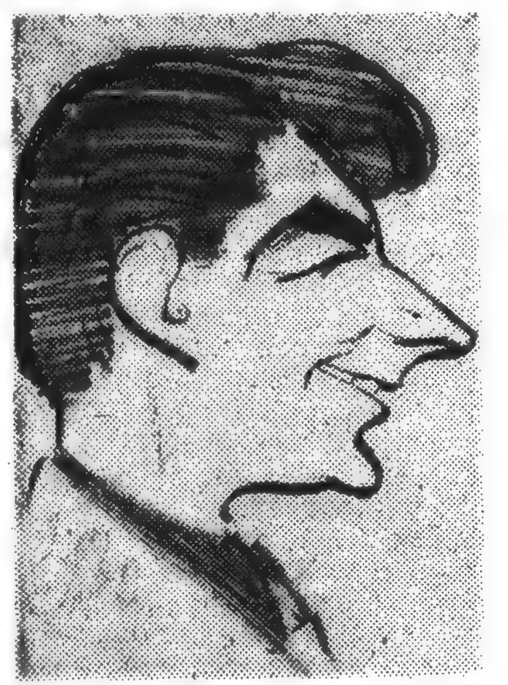
By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE AUDIENCES at the last two concerts of the middle week-end series in the big shed Saturday night and yesterday afternoon will probably have more and exciting memories to treasure and relate to their grandchildren in years to come than any comparable groups in Tanglewood history. One almost felt indelible musical impressions being made, so tense and exciting and exulting were the two programs.

Saturday Leonard Bernstein made his first appearance of the year. (He also is to conduct this coming Saturday evening). His program started with two exquisite shorter choices: The prelude to Act I of Moussorgsky's "Khovanstchina" and three poems for voice and orchestra by Ravel on Tristan Klingsor's verses from "Sheherazade." After intermission he did the stupendous second symphony of Gustav Mahler.

This concert was dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky, to whom Tanglewood owes so much guidance and encouragement. Bernstein motioned the orchestra and audience to rise at the outset of the evening and remain standing for a short minute in silent homage to the departed great artist.

Jennie Tourel in the Ravel poems was above praise. We cannot remember a musical occasion in which an artist so identified himself with the material and expressed it so fittingly and beautifully. The sounds she produced were enchanting, possibly a little on the intimate side for so large a theatre, but she remained true to the spirit of the music. Bernstein gave her remarkably sympathetic assistance, continuing a diaphanous tonal texture which had been so effective in the tender and touching Moussorgsky overture. It was good, too, to see the young conductor whose career we at Tanglewood have had opportunity to observe and follow so proudly prove that he can keep music in its proper character without spasmodic volcanic eruptions.

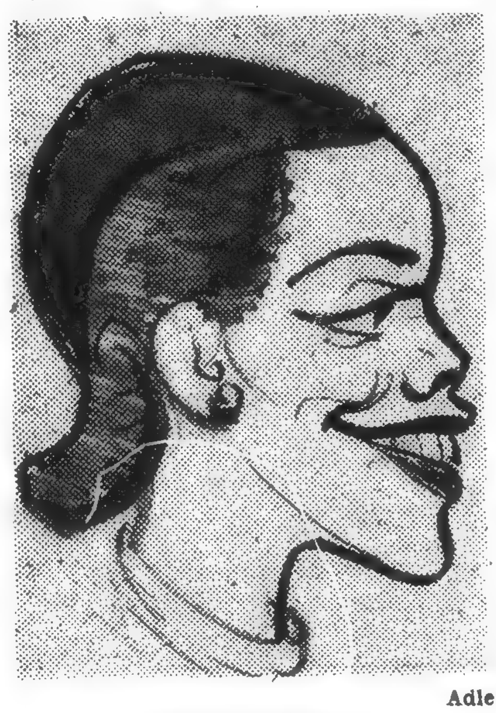


Adler
Leonard Bernstein

* * *

THE MAHLER symphony was tremendous. Bernstein achieved an orchestral eloquence by his own mastery of the score and command of the orchestra. Their response was equally commendable. We would disagree with the necessity for the frenzy in bringing in the celli in the second bar, or, in the last movement, in building the percussion crescendo, but the effect is the thing and that cannot be denied the conductor. The second movement had an especial distinction. Bernstein gave it a chamber music articulation and grace and composure, and the mood of the third movement was also most telling.

In the finale, however, he stunned and overwhelmed us. Here the Berkshire Festival chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, was employed and the soloists were Miss Tourel again and Theresa Green, soprano. Miss Tourel reconfirmed the impression of her supramacy as an interpreter as well as a vocalist; Miss Green immediately proved her artistic stature by a majestic enunciation of her too short assignment.

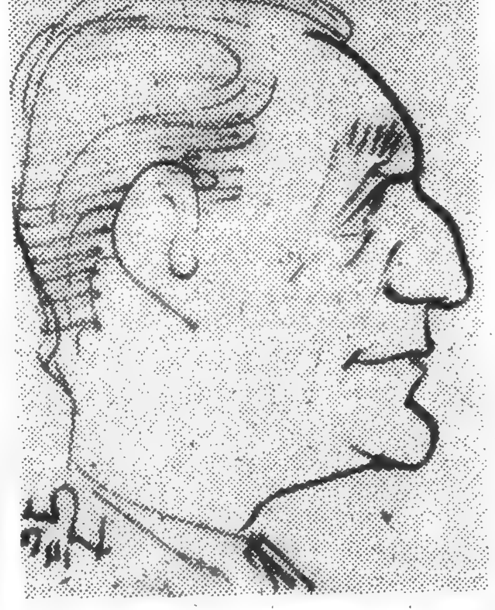


Adler
Theresa Green

Mahler, very much like Berlioz, whose music was played Friday evening, found the world difficult and life bitter. There was a bit of Don Quixote in both of them, continually struggling against non-existent obstacles and intangible forces. But this was the ferment in Mahler's case which raised his music to its grandiloquence and contrast.

* * *

YESTERDAY afternoon Mr. Munch played Richard Strauss's "Don Quixote" with Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the orchestra, as violin soloist, Joseph de Pasquale, viola, and Gregor Piatigorsky, cello. It was a dramatic performance. Burgin made his solos stand with exceptional clarity; de Pasquale,s solos lie in the most grateful registers of the viola and he made them glow warmly; Piatigorsky did the last page with a superbly poised and mature conception and gave it the genuine tragic air both Strauss and Cervantes require. In spit of his consistent scoopings to reach high notes, it was a magnificently broad and spacious performance. It was a shockingly inconsiderate and unchivalrous breach of concert etiquette, however, to deprive the enthralled audience of an opportunity to show their appreciation to the outstanding violin and viola soloists as well as to the cellist and conductor.



Adler
Gregor Piatigorsky

The concert started with the charming Schubert fifth symphony and proceeded to Samuel Barber's adagio for strings. Mr. Barber was called from the audience to accept the plaudits his short piece merited. The string sections of the orchestra displayed a wonderfully symmetrical resonance and built it up for Mr. Munch with cumulative transparency. Barber's overture "The School for Scandal" was one of the American exports the Boston orchestra used with the greatest success in its European tour last year.

After intermission came the inconsequential Milhaud violoncello concerto and the Roussel "Bacchus et Ariane" ballet music. Roussel was bitten by the jazz bug when he was writing in the decades after the first world war as were all the French composers of that epoch. Roussel, however, had a native refinement and an aversion to vulgarity. No matter how boisterous his music got, it was still the music of a master of orchestration color. Munch flung caution to the winds and ended the afternoon and this series, the last but one, in a riot of orchestral abandon.

Eagle - Aug. 10. 53

Plouffe

BOSTON VISITORS: Edward A. Thaw, Boston Symphony Orchestra trustee, discusses the week-end concert program with Mrs. Alvin T. Fuller, center, wife of the former governor of Massachusetts. At left is Mrs. Franklin W. Hobbs and at right, Mrs. Albert C. Titcomb, both of Boston.

Plo

BERNSTEIN HONORED: Immediately after Saturday night's program at Tanglewood, Leonard Bernstein, second from left, who appeared as guest conductor with the BSO, was presented the Bruckner Society medal for his outstanding performance of German music. Tucker Keiser, acting music critic of the Boston Post, right, made the presentation as Mrs. Bernstein, left, and Miss Jennie Tourel, soloist at Saturday's concert, look on.

Tanglewood

Schedule for Final Week

Eagle 11/10

Tonight

8.30—Grétry's opera, "Richard Coeur re Lion" by Berkshire Music Center students. Theatre.

Tomorrow

8.30 PM—Grétry's opera, "Richard Coeur de Lion. Theatre.

Wednesday

*8.30 PM — Composers Forum, Aaron Copland, moderator. Chamber Music Hall.

Thursday

5.45 PM—Tanglewood on Parade, annual benefit for Berkshire Music Center.

Friday

8.30 PM—Berkshire Festival Concert by Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting with soloists: Lois Marshall, soprano, and William Warfield, baritone. Music Shed.

Saturday

*3.00 PM—Symphony concert by student orchestra. Music Shed.

8.30 PM—Berkshire Festival concert by Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting. Music Shed.

Sunday

10 AM—Chamber music by Berkshire Music Center students. Chamber Music Hall.

2.30 PM—Final concert of 1953 Berkshire Festival, by Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, with Seymour Lipkin, pianist.

*Open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center whose voluntary contributions help to support the school.

Open to members of the Friends Society with advance reservations.

At the week-end concerts was Betty Comden (Mrs. Steve Kiley) of New York, who, with her partner, Adolph Green, has written the libretta for the Broadway shows, "Wonderful Town" and "On the Town," both with scores by Leonard Bernstein.

Alexander Tcherepnin, composer-son of the late Nickolas Tcherepnin, one time conductor at the Opera-Comique in Paris, attended the week-end concerts.

Guests of Stefan Lorant of Lenox at yesterday afternoon's concert were Sir Cedric Hardwicke and Lady Hardwicke, who are on a tour of summer theatres in a play, "Island Visit," which opens next week in Newport, R.I.

Roberta Peters, soprano star of the Metropolitan Opera Company took in the week-end concerts.

Foreign Editors Leaving for Capital

The 14 editors of European newspapers who spent the week end in the Berkshires and attended two of the concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will leave Pittsfield Airport tonight for Washington, D.C. Escorted by two representatives of the State Department and one of the Defense Department, they were guests in Pittsfield homes during their stay here.

The group arrived Saturday afternoon by plane from Louisville, Ky., and were entertained at supper at the Richmond home of Donald B. Miller, publisher of The Eagle, Saturday evening before going to Tanglewood for the concert. Yesterday they were guests of the Philco Corporation at a cocktail party in the music room of the Curtis Hotel where Philco's new Phonorama is having its world premiere, and then the group went to the Tanglewood grounds for a picnic before the afternoon concert. Last evening they were dinner guests in private homes.

Before leaving today the editors attended dance rehearsals at Jacob's Pillow where they were guests at lunch and then they started a tour of the county arranged by the Berkshire Hills Conference. They will dine at Crane Inn, Dalton, before leaving for Washington tonight.

Plouffe

EDITORS FROM ABROAD: Guests of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the week-end concerts were these editors of prominent newspapers in European countries belonging to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Front row, left to right, Camille Flunkert of Metz, France, Jacques J. Fauvet, Paris, John F. Goulden, Manchester, England; rear, Henri Maire, Metz, Jose Desearba, State Department escort, Giovanni Spetia, Genoa, H. N. Appel, Groningen, Holland, Albert Michiels, Liege, Belgium, and Guido Zangrando, Verona, Italy.

Berkshire Festival NY H.T. 8/10

11,400 at Bernstein Concert In Memory of Koussevitsky

By Francis D. Perkins

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 9.—Over 20,000 persons, not counting today's radio audience, heard the Boston Symphony Orchestra in last night's and this afternoon's Berkshire Festival concerts in the Tanglewood Music Shed.

With ideal weather, yesterday's program given in memory of Serge Koussevitsky and conducted by Leonard Bernstein drew the summer's largest crowd thus far, 11,400. Ominous afternoon clouds today held down the attendance to 9,100.

Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist, was today's soloist, with the musicians under Charles Munch's direction, in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote" and Darius Milhaud's First Cello Concerto. Joseph De Pasquale, head of his section in the orchestra, played the solo viola which represents Sancho Panza in the Strauss tone poem. The program opened with Schuberts's Fifth Symphony and Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings, which brought an ovation for its composer, and closed with Albert Roussel's Second Suite from "Bacchus et Ariane."

Mahler's Second Played

Gustav Mahler's monumental Second Symphony was the principal work in Saturday's program which represented the annual memorial tribute to the great conductor who founded the Berkshire Music Center and played such a paramount part in the musical development of the Berkshire Festival.

Jennie Tourel, contralto, who had also sung in Friday's performance of the Berlioz Romeo and Juliet Symphony; Theresa Green, soprano, and the Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, sang in the finale. Miss Tourel also sang with the orchestra in Ravel's set of three songs. Scheherazade, which followed the well played prelude to Moussorgsky's "Khovantschina."

Miss Tourel's singing in "Scheherazade" evoked the intimate and exotic mood, both of Ravel's music and Tristan Leclere's text, with warmth and range of color and dynamic subtlety. The orchestra, which here is a co-ordinate partner of the singer rather than an accompanist, gave an expressively sympathetic performance. At one or two points it seemed slightly overbearing but elsewhere its playing was well proportioned and had the lucidity which was necessary for this work.

Miss Green Pleasing

Miss Tourel was also vocally and expressively appealing in the Mahler work, especially in the sustained simplicity of the fourth movement. Miss Green's singing was also pleasing while slightly tentative at first; the chorus deserved praise for its tone quality and dynamic range and control.

The performance of the Mahler symphony revealed the composer's expressive aims, impressive while sometimes unattainable; his copious, if not unlimited, melodic inventiveness, his consummate orchestral craftsmanship. It also revealed the familiar drawback of length in the extensive first movement and still more extensive finale. In the latter pages of the first movement there are times when Mahler seems to have said his say; one of these deceived the audience into premature applause.

Long, But Worth It

But Mahler's largeness is so essential a characteristic of his music that its length must be taken in stride; the enthusiastic audience seems to realize this. Mr. Bernstein's interpretation with an expert and responsive orchestra generally implied imaginative understanding of the music and of its structure; there were a few excessive changes of pace, but as a rule it had the necessary continuity. After the concert Mr. Bernstein received the Bruckner Society's medal from Tucker Keiser, acting music critic of "The Boston Post."

In today's concert Mr. Piatigorsky's cello completely revealed Strauss' memorable musical characterization of Don Quixote, with its pervasive sympathy, its combination of humor and affection. His tone, particularly notable for the clarity and timbre of its higher register, had a remarkable and subtly varied gamut of color. It was also happy in the Milhaud concerto, which has no ultra-musical intention, but is expertly wrought music with contrast of moods, emphasizing the cello in its lyric and most grateful aspect.

Mr. Barber's elegaic Adagio has not lost its poetic appeal with repeated hearings, and the program as a whole found Mr. Munch and the orchestra in their best form.

Bos Post 8/10

Music in Review

By TUCKER KEISER

Lenox Festival

LENOX, Aug. 9—After an emotionally powerful Koussevitzky memorial concert Saturday night under the direction of Leonard Bernstein, any program which followed it Sunday afternoon must be something of an anti-climax. Mr. Munch wisely chose a quiet program for today's concert with the exception of one piece, "Don Quixote" by Richard Strauss. In this work we heard Gregor Piatigorsky as the cello soloist.

The concert began with Schubert's Symphony No. 5 in B-major. Not as well known as the "Unfinished" or the "Great" in C major, the symphony is a joyous piece constructed along the classical lines of Haydn and Mozart and uses the same instrumentation with the exception of trumpets and drums. There is not much development in the German symphonic tradition, but in its place we have typically Schubertian continuous song. Mr. Munch led the orchestra though a somewhat mannered but agreebly pleasant paced performance.

Although Samuel Barber is a prolific composer, the adagio for strings turns up time and time again on our symphony programs. Originally a slow movement in his Quartet in B Minor, the adagio has a decided romantic flavor. However, its clarity of detail, its economy of means sets it apart from the flambouyant compositions which bear the romantic label.

In Mr. Barber's work, the conductor allowed his marvelous string section one of its rare opportunities to sing with a richness in sound associated with the Boston Symphony in the past. And what is more the conductor held himself in hand through the soul wrenching measures and did not let the music overthrow his emotional equilibrium.

In both Strauss' "Don Quixote" and in the Milhaud Cello Concerto No. 1 in F which followed after intermission, Mr. Piatigorsky was given admirable support. Joseph De Pasquale, the first violist of the Boston Symphony played the brief viola solo parts in the "Don Quixote."

Little need be said about Mr. Piatigorsky's "Don Quixote" except that it remains the best performance of that score today.

Eagle 8/10

A FRIENDLY CALL: Among the scores of concert-goers who stopped for a brief visit at Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky's box during intermission at the Festival Saturday night was Mrs. Charles F. Bassett, left, of Sundrum House, Lenox. Saturday's program was a memorial to Mrs. Koussevitzky's late husband, conductor of the BSO for 25 years and founder of the Berkshire Music Center.

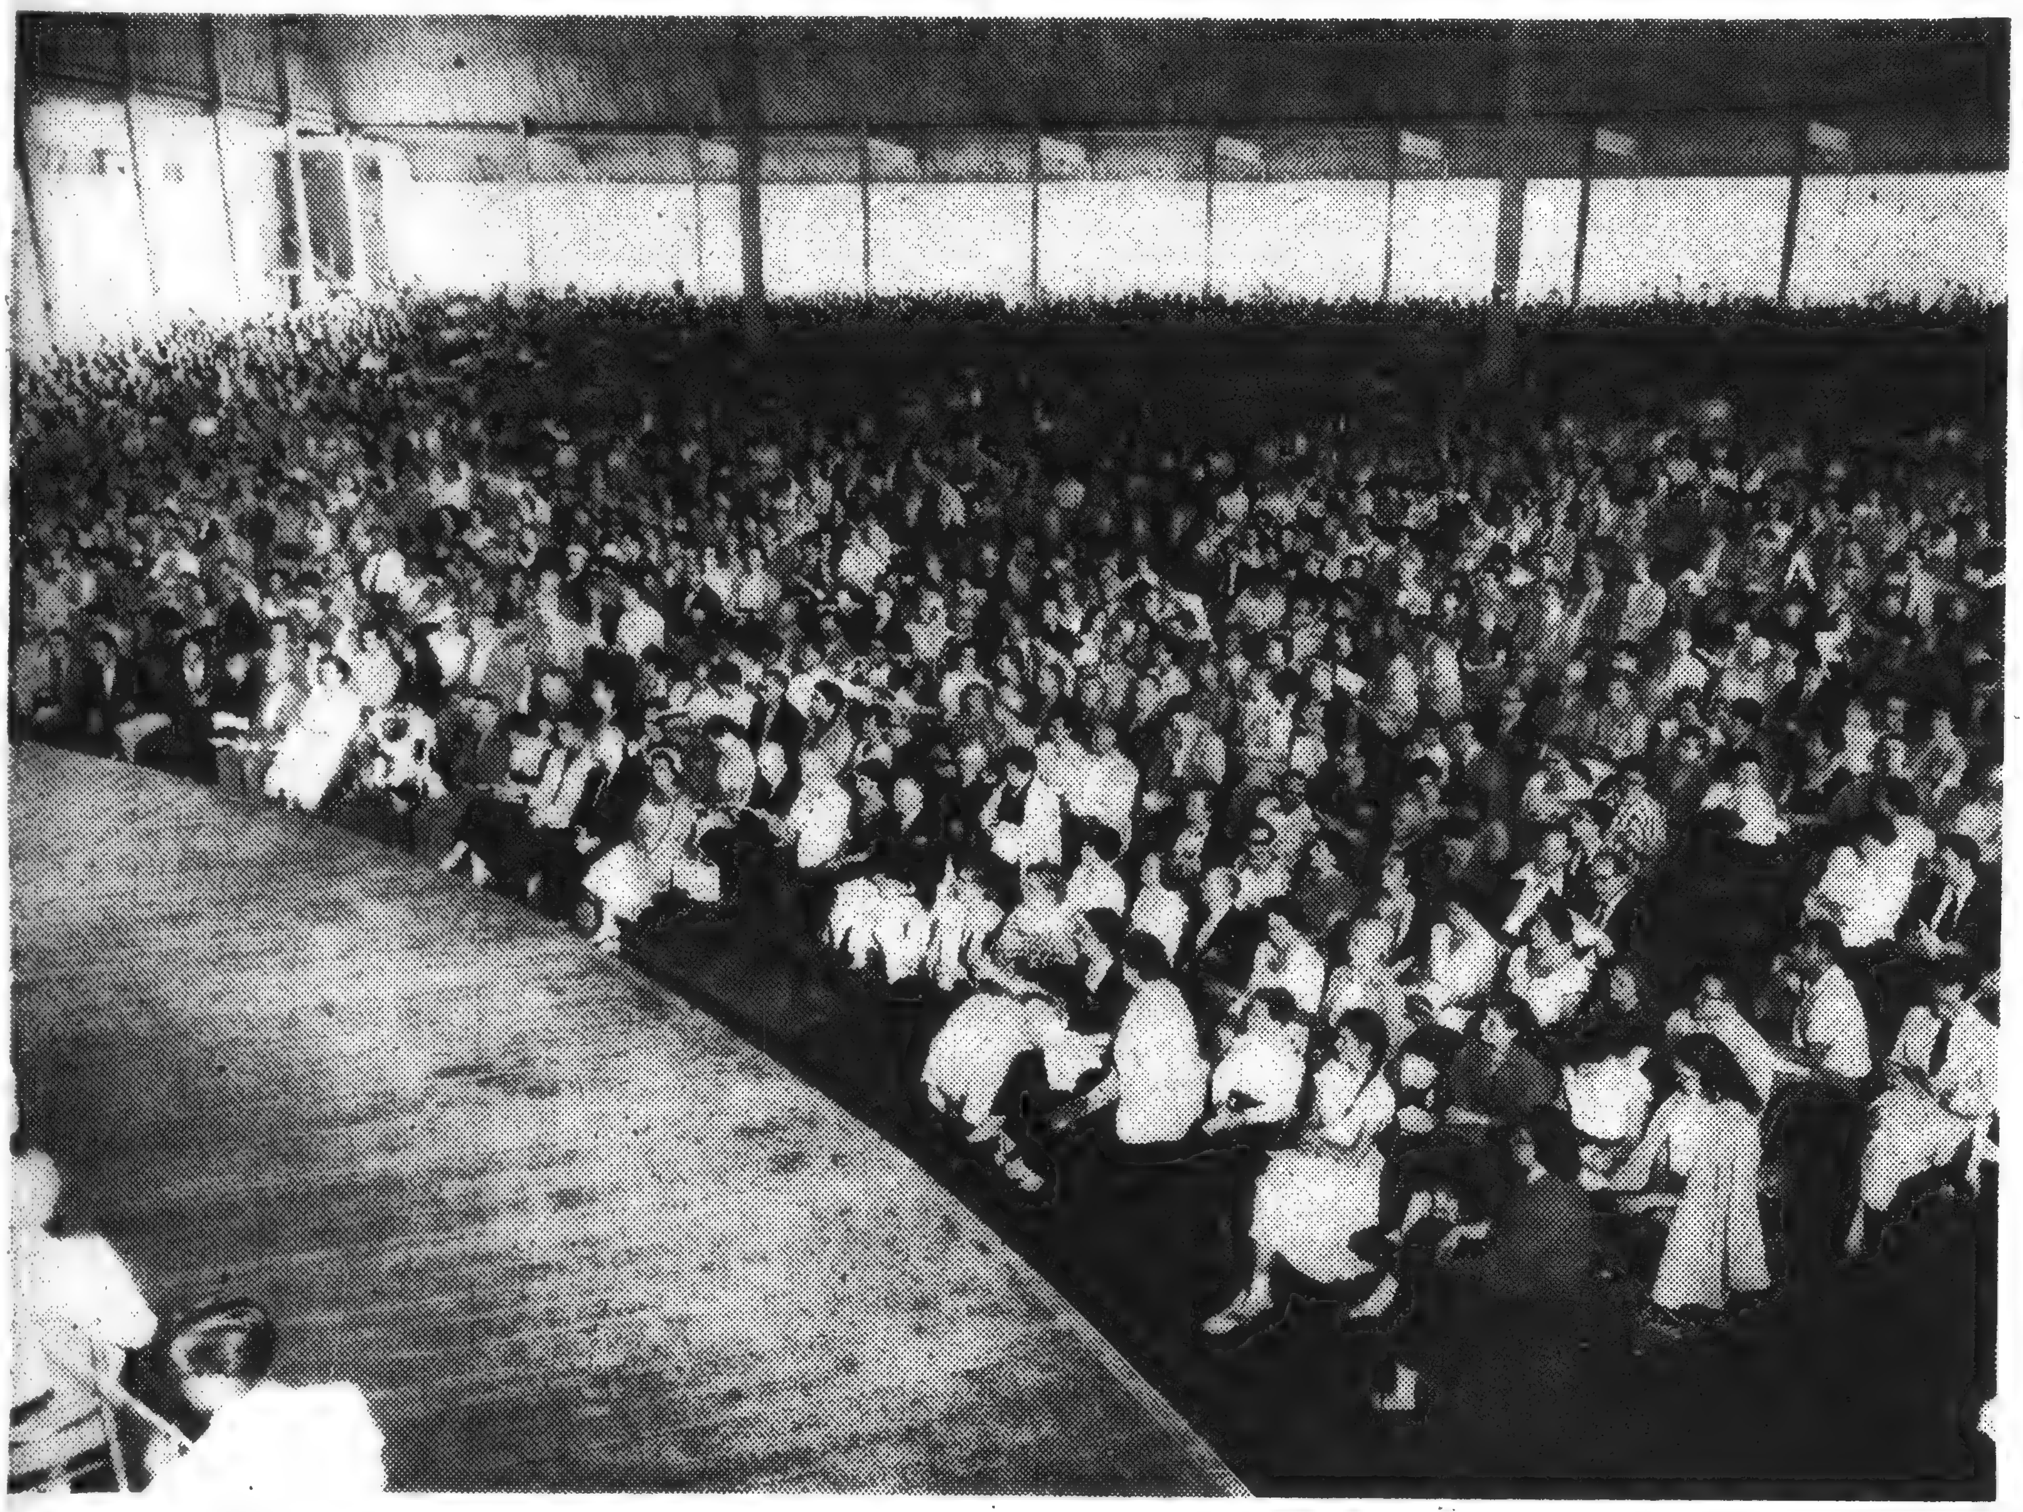
[274]

TIGHT BINDING

LEADERSHIP
Martin Best Fitted To Lead Republicans in Congress
(Michelson)--Page 15

The Berkshire Evening Ea

Volume 62—No. 75 Pittsfield, Massachusetts, Monday, August 10, 1953.



Plouffe

RECORDS FALLING: This crowd of music lovers helped to boost the attendance figures for the second series of concerts at anglewood ahead of last year's record, at the performance given in the Music Shed yesterday afternoon by the Boston Symphony Orchesra with Charles Munch conducting. A total of 9100 turned out yesterday, 11,400 Saturday night and 7500 on Friday, making a grand total of 28,000 compared to 27,925 for the second series last year.

Cir. (D 26,526)
This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 10 1953

Plouffe

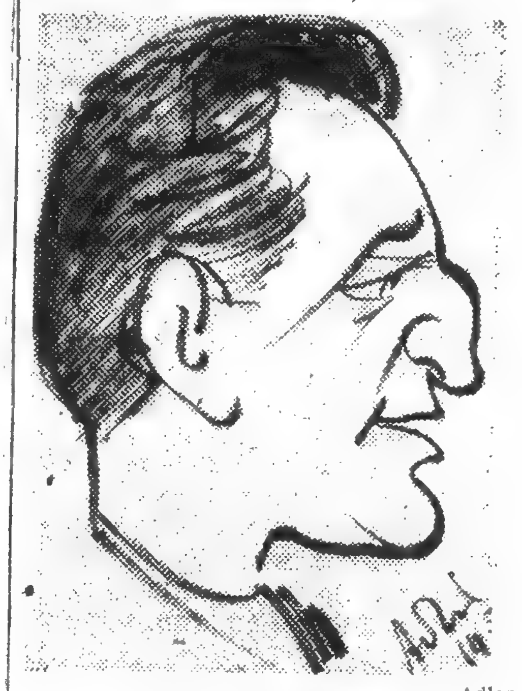
MUNCH AND FRIENDS: Charles Munch, left, director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra enjoyed Saturday night's concert with Leonard Bernstein conducting, from his box with the French consul in Boston, M. Francois Charles-Roux and Mrs. Charles-Roux as his guests. The French consul is greeting friends during the intermission.

Berlioz Symphony Given Brilliant Interpretation

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE DRAMATIC symphony "Romeo and Juliet" of Hector Berlioz in its entirety was the fare of the first concert of the pivot week-end series in the big Shed at Tanglewood Friday night. Charles Munch led the Boston Symphony orchestra, augmented by all the additional instruments Berlioz called for, in a performance which reached grandeur at its most inspired moments and which at times he conducted with exceptionally fervently felt emotion.

The symphony, in addition to the extra large orchestra, calls for a mixed chorus and three soloists. The chorus was chosen from the student body of the Berkshire Music Center and was trained by Hugh Ross and his assistant, Lorna de Varon. Mr. Munch invited them to share the recalls and the ovation at the end that the vital performance evoked. The soloists were Jennie Tourel, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, and Nicola Moscona, as Friar Laurence, bass.



Adler

John McCollum

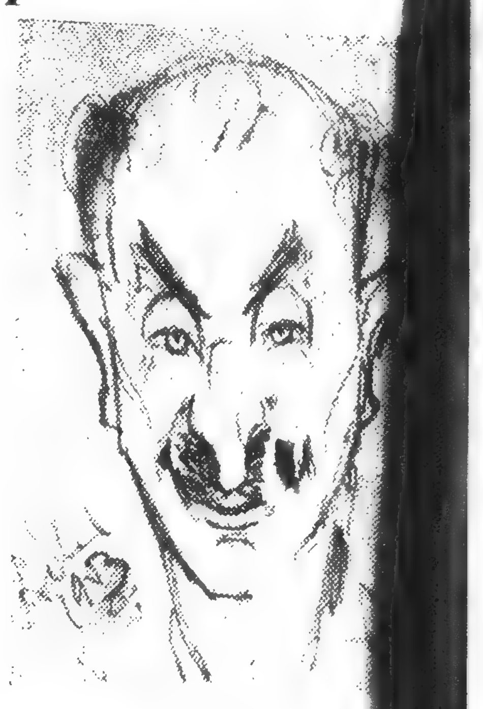
* * *

BERLIOZ does not borrow any of Shakespeare's words but sketches swiftly through the plot. Only the bass soloist is lent identification as the Friar; the others have declamations pertinent to the action but are not personalized. The bass appeared in the second half after the intermission; the other two before. Berlioz called it a dramatic symphony. It does not fit well into any category because there are factors which just will not conform to any accepted formula. When it is done as vividly as Mr. Munch did it last night, and Berlioz' imagination is so vitally conveyed to the audience, it is nearer opera, even though there are no scenery, props, costumes or action.

The music tells the story, and its modernity is all the more astounding when one considers that it was written over a century ago, only 12 years after Beethoven had passed on, and before Wagner had mounted an opera, and while Brahms was still an infant. Berlioz only feared that Mendelssohn would steal the idea of a scherzo on a "Queen Mab" dream theme before he got it on paper. Mr. Munch has an especial sympathy for Berlioz and has played him oftener than other conductors, a propensity which pleases this reviewer very much. He made his Boston debut with the "Fantastic" symphony and indubitably reveals a bond and affinity for the music of the great and inspired innovator.

* * *

THE FRESH Berkshire temperature added a degree of parkle to the fascinating "Queen b." Munch was sure of him there, as he was after in sion in the treacherous ral recitative, and the played for him with a



Hugh Ross

The love scene is moving and the magic of Berlioz' o tration gives the musicians opportunity to translate th ardent passions of the young ers into swelling sounds. Th chestra rode the rapids of introduction and qui smoothed its disheveled hai frazzled composure and s into secure and impressive m making. The chorus was tive more or less consistent best efforts coming in the half.

* * *

FRIAR LAURENCE has most generous allotment an Moscona had the vocal st and dramatic ability to cope the formidable concurrence chestra and chorus. Miss T sang with lovely tone qualit gave character to her aria McCollum devoted himself lessly to a graphic presen of his material without co for personal favor.

Mr. Munch gave this symphony in Boston durin past season. Its repetition last night not only was a come and rewarding even is an achievement of the which will keep Tanglewo in the ascendancy in the musical world and continue to make it the mecca of the music lovers the world over. We love and enjoy Tchaikowsky, et ais, nd not only grant their programi ng but demand it, but such list ngs come a dime a dozen, not with the distinctive playing of the Boston Symphony, to be sure, but such Berlioz, and tonight's Mahler and other ventures and explorations of that type are to be commended and encouraged in the fullest.

Adler

Jennie Tourel

Tanglewood

Schedule for Final Week

Eagle 11/10

Tonight

8:30—Grétry's opera, "Richard Coeur re Lion" by Berkshire Music Center students. Theatre.

Tomorrow

M—Grétry's opera, "Richard Coeur de Lion. Theatre.

Wednesday

M — Composers Forum, Aaron Copland, moderator. Chamber Music Hall.

Thursday

5:45 PM—Tanglewood on Parade, annual benefit for Berkshire Music Center.

Friday

PM—Berkshire Festival Concert by Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting with soloists: Lois Marshall, soprano, and William Warfield, baritone. Music Shed.

Saturday

*3.00 PM—Symphony concert by student orchestra. Music Shed.

8.30 PM—Berkshire Festival concert by Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting. Music Shed.

Sunday

10 AM—Chamber music by Berkshire Music Center students. Chamber Music Hall.

2.30 PM—Final concert of 1953 Berkshire Festival, by Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, with Seymour Lipkin, pianist.

*Open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center whose voluntary contributions help to support the school.

Open to members of the Friends Society with advance reservations.

At the week-end concerts was Betty Comden (Mrs. Steve Kiley) of New York, who, with her partner, Adolph Green, has written the libretta for the Broadway shows, "Wonderful Town" and "On the Town," both with scores by Leonard Bernstein.

Alexander Tcherepnin, composerson of the late Nickolas Tcherepnin, one time conductor at the Opera-Comique in Paris, attended the week-end concerts.

Guests of Stefan Lorant of Lenox at yesterday afternoon's concert were Sir Cedric Hardwicke and Lady Hardwicke, who are on a tour of summer theatres in a play, "Island Visit," which opens next week in Newport, R.I.

Roberta Peters, soprano star of the Metropolitan Opera Company took in the week-end concerts.

Foreign Editors Leaving for Capital

The 14 editors of European newspapers who spent the week end in the Berkshires and attended two of the concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will leave Pittsfield Airport tonight for Washington, D.C. Escorted by two representatives of the State Department and one of the Defense Department, they were guests in Pittsfield homes during their stay here.

The group arrived Saturday afternoon by plane from Louisville, Ky., and were entertained at supper at the Richmond home of Donald B. Miller, publisher of The Eagle, Saturday evening before going to Tanglewood for the concert. Yesterday they were guests of the Philco Corporation at a cocktail party in the music room of the Curtis Hotel where Philco's new Phonorama is having its world premiere, and then the group went to the Tanglewood grounds for a picnic before the afternoon concert. Last evening they were dinner guests in private homes.

Before leaving today the editors attended dance rehearsals at Jacob's Pillow where they were guests at lunch and then they started a tour of the county arranged by the Berkshire Hills Conference. They will dine at Crane Inn, Dalton, before leaving for Washington tonight.

Plouffe

EDITORS FROM ABROAD: Guests of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the week-end concerts were these editors of prominent newspapers in European countries belonging to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Front row, left to right, Camille Flunkert of Metz, France, Jacques J. Fauvet, Paris, John F. Goulden, Manchester, England; rear, Henri Maire, Metz, Jose Desearba, State Department escort, Giovanni Spetia, Genoa, H. N. Appel, Groningen, Holland, Albert Michiels, Liege, Belgium, and Guido Zangrando, Verona, Italy.

Berkshire Festival NY H.T. 8/10

11,400 at Bernstein Concert In Memory of Koussevitsky

By Francis D. Perkins

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 9.—Over 20,000 persons, not counting today's radio audience, heard the Boston Symphony Orchestra in last night's and this afternoon's Berkshire Festival concerts in the Tanglewood Music Shed.

With ideal weather, yesterday's program given in memory of Serge Koussevitsky and conducted by Leonard Bernstein drew the summer's largest crowd thus far, 11,400. Ominous afternoon clouds today held down the attendance to 9,100.

Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist, was today's soloist, with the musicians under Charles Munch's direction, in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote" and Darius Milhaud's First Cello Concerto. Joseph De Pasquale, head of his section in the orchestra, played the solo viola which represents Sancho Panza in the Strauss tone poem. The program opened with Schuberts's Fifth Symphony and Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings, which brought an ovation for its composer, and closed with Albert Roussel's Second Suite from "Bacchus et Ariane."

Mahler's Second Played

Gustav Mahler's monumental Second Symphony was the principal work in Saturday's program which represented the annual memorial tribute to the great conductor who founded the Berkshire Music Center and played such a paramount part in the musical development of the Berkshire Festival.

Jennie Tourel, contralto, who had also sung in Friday's performance of the Berlioz Romeo and Juliet Symphony; Theresa Green, soprano, and the Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, sang in the finale. Miss Tourel also sang with the orchestra in Ravel's set of three songs. Scheherazade, which followed the well played prelude to Moussorgsky's "Khovantschina."

Miss Tourel's singing in "Scheherazade" evoked the intimate and exotic mood, both of Ravel's music and Tristan Leclere's text, with warmth and range of color and dynamic subtlety. The orchestra, which here is a co-ordinate partner of the singer rather than an accompanist, gave an expressively sympathetic performance. At one or two points it seemed slightly overbearing but elsewhere its playing was well proportioned and had the lucidity which was necessary for this work.

Miss Green Pleasing

Miss Tourel was also vocally and expressively appealing in the Mahler work, especially in the sustained simplicity of the fourth movement. Miss Green's singing was also pleasing while slightly tentative at first; the chorus deserved praise for its tone quality and dynamic range and control.

The performance of the Mahler symphony revealed the composer's expressive aims, impressive while sometimes unattainable; his copious, if not unlimited, melodic inventiveness, his consummate orchestral craftsmanship. It also revealed the familiar drawback of length in the extensive first movement and still more extensive finale. In the latter pages of the first movement there are times when Mahler seems to have said his say; one of these deceived the audience into premature applause.

Long, But Worth It

But Mahler's largeness is so essential a characteristic of his music that its length must be taken in stride; the enthusiastic audience seems to realize this. Mr. Bernstein's interpretation with an expert and responsive orchestra generally implied imaginative understanding of the music and of its structure; there were a few excessive changes of pace, but as a rule it had the necessary continuity. After the concert Mr. Bernstein received the Bruckner Society's medal from Tucker Keiser, acting music critic of "The Boston Post."

In today's concert Mr. Piatigorsky's cello completely revealed Strauss' memorable musical characterization of Don Quixote, with its pervasive sympathy, its combination of humor and affection. His tone, particularly notable for the clarity and timbre of its higher register, had a remarkable and subtly varied gamut of color. It was also happy in the Milhaud concerto, which has no ultra-musical intention, but is expertly wrought music with contrast of moods, emphasizing the cello in its lyric and most grateful aspect.

Mr. Barber's elegaic Adagio has not lost its poetic appeal with repeated hearings, and the program as a whole found Mr. Munch and the orchestra in their best form.

Bsn Post 8/10

Music in Review

By TUCKER KEISER

Lenox Festival

LENOX, Aug. 9—After an emotionally powerful Koussevitzky memorial concert Saturday night under the direction of Leonard Bernstein, any program which followed it Sunday afternoon must be something of an anti-climax. Mr. Munch wisely chose a quiet program for today's concert with the exception of one piece, "Don Quixote" by Richard Strauss. In this work we heard Gregor Piatigorsky as the cello soloist.

The concert began with Schubert's Symphony No. 5 in B-major. Not as well known as the "Unfinished" or the "Great" in C major, the symphony is a joyous piece constructed along the classical lines of Haydn and Mozart and uses the same instrumentation with the exception of trumpets and drums. There is not much development in the German symphonic tradition, but in its place we have typically Schubertian continuous song. Mr. Munch led the orchestra though a somewhat mannered but agreebly pleasant paced performance.

Although Samuel Barber is a prolific composer, the adagio for strings turns up time and time again on our symphony programs. Originally a slow movement in his Quartet in B Minor, the adagio has a decided romantic flavor. However, its clarity of detail, its economy of means sets it apart from the flambouyant compositions which bear the romantic label.

In Mr. Barber's work, the conductor allowed his marvelous string section one of its rare opportunities to sing with a richness in sound associated with the Boston Symphony in the past. And what is more the conductor held himself in hand through the soul wrenching measures and did not let the music overthrow his emotional equilibrium.

In both Strauss' "Don Quixote" and in the Milhaud Cello Concerto No. 1 in F which followed after intermission, Mr. Piatigorsky was given admirable support. Joseph De Pasquale, the first violist of the Boston Symphony played the brief viola solo parts in the "Don Quixote."

Little need be said about Mr. Piatigorsky's "Don Quixote" except that it remains the best performance of that score today.

Eagle 8/10

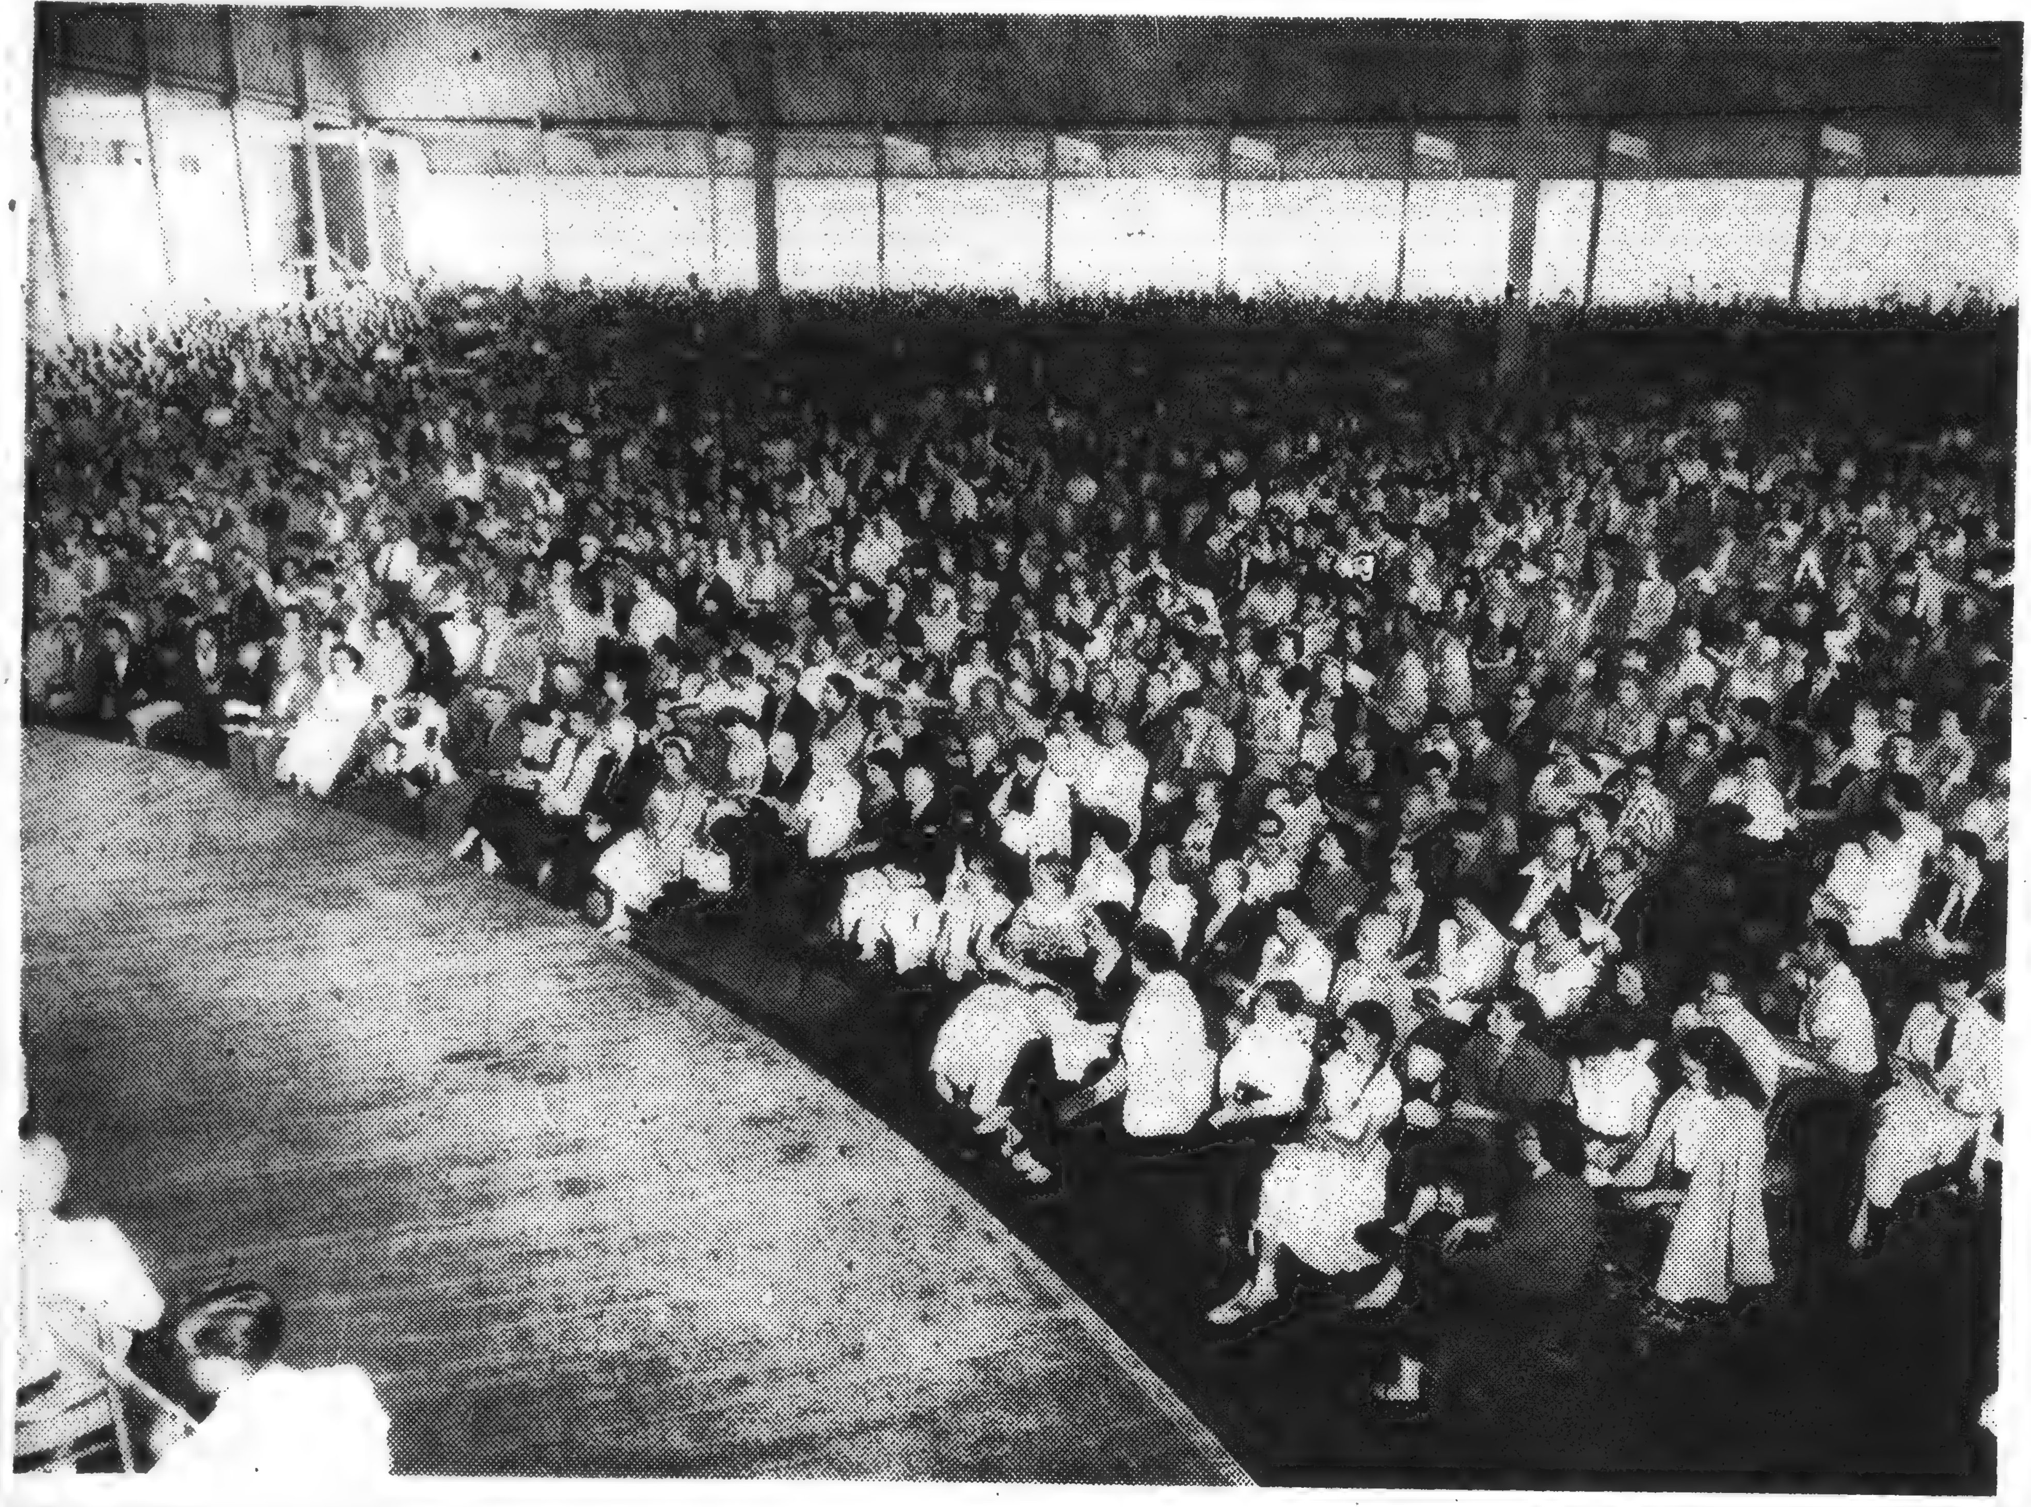
A FRIENDLY CALL: Among the scores of concert-goers who stopped for a brief visit at Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky's box during intermission at the Festival Saturday night was Mrs. Charles F. Bassett, left, of Sundrum House, Lenox. Saturday's program was a memorial to Mrs. Koussevitzky's late husband, conductor of the BSO for 25 years and founder of the Berkshire Music Center.

TIGHT BINDING

LEADERSHIP
Martin Best Fitted To Lead Republicans in Congress
(Michelson)--Page 15

The Berkshire Evening Ea

Volume 62—No. 75 Pittsfield, Massachusetts, Monday, August 10, 1953.



Plouffe

RECORDS FALLING: This crowd of music lovers helped to boost the attendance figures for the second series of concerts at anglewood ahead of last year's record, at the performance given in the Music Shed yesterday afternoon by the Boston Symphony Orchesra with Charles Munch conducting. A total of 9100 turned out yesterday, 11,400 Saturday night and 7500 on Friday, making a grand total of 28,000 compared to 27,925 for the second series last year.

Cir. (D 26,526)

This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 10 1953

Plouffe

MUNCH AND FRIENDS: Charles Munch, left, director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra enjoyed Saturday night's concert with Leonard Bernstein conducting, from his box with the French consul in Boston, M. Francois Charles-Roux and Mrs. Charles-Roux as his guests. The French consul is greeting friends during the intermission.

Berlioz Symphony Given Brilliant Interpretation

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE DRAMATIC symphony "Romeo and Juliet" of Hector Berlioz in its entirety was the fare of the first concert of the pivot week-end series in the big Shed at Tanglewood Friday night. Charles Munch led the Boston Symphony orchestra, augmented by all the additional instruments Berlioz called for, in a performance which reached grandeur at its most inspired moments and which at times he conducted with exceptionally fervently felt emotion.

The symphony, in addition to the extra large orchestra, calls for a mixed chorus and three soloists. The chorus was chosen from the student body of the Berkshire Music Center and was trained by Hugh Ross and his assistant, Lorna de Varon. Mr. Munch invited them to share the recalls and the ovation at the end that the vital performance evoked. The soloists were Jennie Tourel, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, and Nicola Moscona, as Friar Laurence, bass.

Adler

John McCollum

* * *

BERLIOZ does not borrow any of Shakespeare's words but sketches swiftly through the plot. Only the bass soloist is lent identification as the Friar; the others have declamations pertinent to the action but are not personalized. The bass appeared in the second half after the intermission; the other two before. Berlioz called it a dramatic symphony. It does not fit well into any category because there are factors which just will not conform to any accepted formula. When it is done as vividly as Mr. Munch did it last night, and Berlioz' imagination is so vitally conveyed to the audience, it is nearer opera, even though there are no scenery, props, costumes or action.

The music tells the story, and its modernity is all the more astounding when one considers that it was written over a century ago, only 12 years after Beethoven had passed on, and before Wagner had mounted an opera, and while Brahms was still an infant. Berlioz only feared that Mendelssohn would steal the idea of a scherzo on a "Queen Mab" dream theme before he got it on paper. Mr. Munch has an especial sympathy for Berlioz and has played him oftener than other conductors, a propensity which pleases this reviewer very much. He made his Boston debut with the "Fantastic" symphony and indubitably reveals a bond and affinity for the music of the great and inspired innovator.

* * *

THE FRESH Berkshire temperature added a degree of parkle to the fascinating "Queen b." Munch was sure of him- there, as he was after in- sion in the treacherous ral recitative, and the played for him with a and a confident

Hugh Ross

The love scene is moving and the magic of Berlioz' tration gives the musicians opportunity to translate t dent passions of the youn ers into swelling sounds. T chestra rode the rapids introduction and qu smoothed its disheveled na frazzled composure and into secure and impressive making. The chorus was tive more or less consisten best efforts coming in the half.

* * *

FRIAR LAURENCE ha most generous allotment a Moscona had the vocal s and dramatic ability to cop the formidable concurrence chestra and chorus. Miss sang with lovely tone quali gave character to her ar McCollum devoted himsel lessly to a graphic prese of his material without c for personal favor.

Mr. Munch gave this symphony in Boston duri past season. Its repetition last night not only was come and rewarding eve is an achievement of th which will keep Tanglew

Jennie Tourel

[illegible]

Cir. (D 26,526)

This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 11 1953

Music Inn Sets Folk, Jazz Festival

Two-Week Session Starts on Aug. 18 At Lenox Resort

While the Boston Symphony musicians are packing their instruments on Aug. 16, after the last Tanglewood concert at Lenox, folk and jazz musicians and dancers will be arriving for a two-week session at near-by Music Inn.

This year's round table starts Tuesday, Aug. 18, with Alan Miles of Montreal, singer of French-American folk songs, and Andrew Rowan Summers, with British folk songs. Thursday's program is early Negro folk songs, with Brownie McGhee and non-professional old-time folk singers, and Willis James of Atlanta, Ga. Harold Courlander, authority on ethnic music, has selected an authentic group of Haitian singers and dancers, among whom will be Narcisse, for the Saturday night program. Sunday afternoon is the transition between folk music and jazz, illustrated by representative artists from the first and second weeks, and by Pete Seeger and Al Mins, dancer.

Jazz Week

The jazz week leads off Monday with Conrad Janis and his band covering the range of New Orleans jazz, followed by Eubie Blake on Tuesday evening presenting ragtime. On Thursday Jimmy Rushing of Kansas City and Cliff Jackson will interpret the jazz blues and boogie woogie. The final Saturday night will highlight Afro-Cuban music today, with Candido at the drums, and the progressive jazz combination of Randy Weston.

This is the more formal part of the program. In between, battles in music and words between the different musical points of view are certain to develop, judging by past round tables.

For the amateur musicians attending—there will be opportunities to sit in at jam sessions, to trade and try out folk songs, and opportunity to learn and to practice folk guitar under the guidance of Willis James, director of the Ford Valley Folk Festival, and jazz dancing under the tutelage of Al Mins, champion Harvest Moon and Savoy dancer.

Plenty of Talk

Meanwhile folk and jazz authorities, musicologists, and professors will draw what learned conclusions they can from this source material, tracing the impact of European and African music on our folk and jazz. Among the experts attending will be Professor Tremaine McDowell, chairman of the American studies department at the University of Minnesota, Harold Courlander, editor of the Ethnic Folkways Library, Professor Willis James of Spelman College, Charles Seeger, former chief of the division of music of the Pan-American Union, Professor George Herzog, musicologist and anthropologist of the University of Indiana, jazz historian Rudi Blesh, and Professor Marshall W. Stearns, executive director of the Institute of Jazz Studies, who is directing the two-week session.

This will be the fifth round table at Music Inn, and the first time that the folk and jazz round tables

---

Big Man in Music From St. Louis

Sam Krachmalnick Winning Praise as Student Conductor at Tanglewood

By Charles Menees
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

SAMUEL KRACHMALNICK, WHO USED TO PLAY THE GLOCKENSPIEL IN THE SOLDAN HIGH SCHOOL BAND, CONDUCTS THE STUDENT ORCHESTRA AT TANGLEWOOD, FAMOUS MUSIC CENTER IN MASSACHUSETTS.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 10.
IT was exactly 10 years ago that Samuel Krachmalnick set out from St. Louis, a teenager with music already decided as his profession. Since then he has come a long way from playing glockenspiel in the Soldan High School band. He now ranks among the nation's most promising young conductors.

Big things are being predicted by experts for the 27-year-old Krachmalnick this summer at Tanglewood, famous music center two miles from here. Sam (only the printed program calls him Samuel) is here for the first time, with a scholarship and getting one of the most sought-after opportunities offered by Tanglewood—the chance to study conducting under a 34-year-old genius of the art, Leonard Bernstein.

Bernstein, who was a conducting protege of the late Dr. Serge Koussevitzky at this very same 210-acre garden of music not too many years ago, and others are generous in their praises of the big man from St. Louis. Says Bernstein: "He's all music, all 300 pounds of him. He's going far—real far. Watch him."

Bernstein's statement contains one glaring inaccuracy: Sam weighs only 220 pounds, a figure that has him slightly worried. "How did I look from the audience?" Sam asked of a colleague as he rested the other night after conducting the 100-piece student orchestra.

"Pretty trim, Sam," came the reply.

"Pretty trim! Pretty trim!" bellowed Sam as he half arose from the cot. "It's got to be better than that. Man, I've got to shear off some blubber."

Sam doesn't depend on his bear-like physique to put across the message to those following his baton. He knows his score thoroughly, has an excellent sense of rhythm and an ultra-sensitive ear. He has a decided advantage over some young conductors in that he is a skilled instrumentalist. His podium mannerisms range from the bombastic to the delicately refined, but all are full of meaning and a part of the high degree of control he has over players and singers. Most of the time he is sympathetic with those he is directing ("I've worked under some nasty, uncompromising conductors and I don't want to be like them"), but he can be firm.

During a rehearsal the other day he stopped the orchestra with a roaring "No!" and glared at the violas. "Play it this way," he said, and then sang the melody with ta-de-das.

"Do you understand?" he questioned. No answer.

"Well say 'yes' or 'no' violas, so I'll at least know you're there," double-roared Krachmalnick.

Sam is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Abe Krachmal[illegible] His par[illegible] two sons are making the name Krachmalnick (crock-moll-nick) stick in the music business. Sam's brother, Jacob, who is 31 years old, is concertmaster of the Philadelphia Orchestra. Their cousin, Morris Krachmalnick, also from St. Louis, is first violist of the Pittsburgh Symphony, plays professionally as Kras Malno.

★ ★ ★

THE music in Sam began to come to the surface when he was about six years old. Somewhere along the line it was discovered that he had perfect pitch. He studied piano with Morris Kessler and then Leo Miller, in 1943 gave a Young Artist recital at the Wednesday Club. As a boy he also took easily to the French horn and played it in the Scholarship Symphony conducted by Edward Murphy. It was while at Soldan that Sam volunteered to play the glockenspiel, an instrument with a name that goes well with Krachmalnick.

Tossing his Soldan diploma in a drawer in 1943, Sam hurried off with a scholarship to the Eastman School of Music. Graduating there in 1946 with many accomplishments to his credit, he joined the National Symphony in Washington, D.C., as first desk French horn, playing under Hans Kindler. In 1949, Sam moved to New York to study conducting under Jean Morel at Juilliard School of Music, and for the last two years has been Morel's assistant under a fellowship grant. He also finds time to serve as artists and repertoire man of Remington Records.

Sam's biggest conducting opportunity to date came last spring when Arthur Fiedler invited him to come along as his assistant when the Boston "Pops" Orchestra toured for 10 weeks to as far west as Texas. When the orchestra performed in Des Moines, Sam's parents were in the audience, watching their favorite conductor front a major orchestra for the first time. He also recently made a guest appearance on the National Symphony podium and his former associates stood up and cheered when he first walked on stage.

Here at Tanglewood, everyone knows how to pronounce Krachmalnick properly. Sam is ubiquitous on this beautiful "campus" nestled in the Berkshires. He stops only to eat lunch, and even then is apt to be spearheading a debate on such subjects as the future of the 12-tone scale. In Bernstein's conducting classes, held in a replica of the little red cottage where Nathaniel Hawthorne conceived his "Tanglewood Tales" a hundred years ago, Sam is an outspoken participant in discussions. Or he may be found further down the road at the red barn (the original, with a shed added and accoustically improved for recording purposes) helping the percussion section of the student orchestra iron out problems.

Next hour he can probably be found at the theater, running over an opera score under the watchful eye of Boris Goldovsky, who heads the opera department. From there he may huddle with Composer Aaron Copland, top man in the composition department, about the modern music forums which Sam assembles for Copland. This involves listening to works by budding young composers studying here, scheduling some of them for performance and deciding on which student singers and instrumentalists will do them.

And over in the Shed, where 6000 persons spend weekends under the roof and thousands of others stretch out on the lawn outside to listen to concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Sam conducts the student orchestra in dress rehearsals and concerts. The other night he led a concert performance of Debussy's one-act opera, "L'Enfant Prodigue." On a previous program he conducted the orchestra in three excerpts from Berlioz's "The Damnation of Faust." Several nights after directing the Debussy work, he conducted the student performance of the opera itself at the theater. Big Sam is a big favorite with student musicians. They play and sing their hearts out for him.

★ ★ ★

SAM and three other St. Louisans are among 400 students from around the world attending Tanglewood this summer. Harold Blumenfeld, assistant professor of music at Washington University and head of the opera department of the university and the St. Louis Grand Opera Guild, is here for his fifth summer. He, too, is studying conducting under Bernsctein who has praised his progress. Blumenfeld has driected the student orchestra in Hindemith's "Konzertmusik for Strings and Brass" and a Mozart violin concerto. In previous summers here Blumenfeld has been an assistant to Goldovsky in the opera department.

In the student orchestra when Krachmalnick and Blumenfeld conduct are Mary Dodge, 703 Harvard avenue, who plays viola, and Rachall Don, violinist, who lives at 7145 Stanford avenue. Both of these University City girls are members of the St. Louis Philharmonic. In St. Louis, Mary studies viola with Herbert van Den Burg, Rachel the violin with Isadore Grossman.

Cir. (D 98,282)

This Clipping From
WORCESTER, MASS.
GAZETTE
AUG 11 1953

LEONARD BERNSTEIN AT TANGLEWOOD

The world premieres of "Bab Boys in School," a one-act opera by Jan Meyerowitz, and of "A Little Boy Lost," a cantata by Allen Sapp, will be features of Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade," the gala benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer school if music, at Tanglewood.

The short works will be performed by students of the Berkshire Music Center as part of a simultaneous demonstration by each of the school's five departments — orchestra, chamber music, opera, chorus, and study group—commencing at 6 p. m. Following their performance will be the gala concert in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Charles Munch will conduct Handel and Beethoven, with Isaac Stern as soloist; and Leonard Bernstein will have the podium for Act II, scenes 1 and 2 of Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," with Leontyne Price and William Warfield as soloists, and the Festival Chorus.

Cir. (D 26,526)

This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 11 1953

Phonorama and Hi-Fi Console Top Tanglewood Parade Prizes

Forty-two door prizes, topped by two new deluxe record players, will be awarded at Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit which makes possible scholarships for the study of music at the Berkshire Music Center. The event, which will include an evening concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch and Leonard Bernstein and demonstrations by students of the school, will be held from 5.45 Thursday. A special performance of opera scenes will be given at 4 in the formal gardens for holders of reserved seat and box tickets.

A Hi-Fi console is donated by RCA-Victor Company and a Phonorama by the Philco Corporation. Other prizes, which will be drawn by Miss Anna Russell, assisted by Boris Goldovsky, opera department head, and Thomas D. Perry Jr., executive secretary of the school, will include a GE radio alarm clock, an RCA Victor 45-J2 record player, a Ture Bengtz etching, recordings by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, an 18-pound ham, pairs of tickets for the Berkshire Festival, Jacob's Pillow and 10 leading Berkshire inns, a Dutch pewter pitcher, a Laura Lee Linder leather waste basket and a tribal print ensemble by Calypso of Bermuda. Mrs. Frederic Schenck of Lenox is in charge of prizes.

The opera in the garden will include scenes from Pagliacci, Mozart's "Cosi Fan Tutte" and Menotti's "The Telephone."

Cir. (D 19,921)

This Clipping From NORWICH, CONN.
BULLETIN
AUG 11 1953

YANTIC

Miss Mary Tracy, TUrner 7-0490

YANTIC WOMAN VISITED TANGLEWOOD FESTIVAL

On Sunday Miss Elinor Freeman of Yantic was at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., where she attended the Berkshire festival concert given by the Boston Symphony orchestra under the direction of Charles Muench.

INFORMATION OBSCURED

Cir. (D 26,526)

This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 11 1953

Music Inn Sets Folk, Jazz Festival

Two-Week Session Starts on Aug. 18 At Lenox Resort

While the Boston Symphony musicians are packing their instruments on Aug. 16, after the last Tanglewood concert at Lenox, folk and jazz musicians and dancers will be arriving for a two-week session at near-by Music Inn.

This year's round table starts Tuesday, Aug. 18, with Alan Miles of Montreal, singer of French-American folk songs, and Andrew Rowan Summers, with British folk songs. Thursday's program is early Negro folk songs, with Brownie McGhee and non-professional old-time folk singers, and Willis James of Atlanta, Ga. Harold Courlander, authority on ethnic music, has selected an authentic group of Haitian singers and dancers, among whom will be Narcisse, for the Saturday night program. Sunday afternoon is the transition between folk music and jazz, illustrated by representative artists from the first and second weeks, and by Pete Seeger and Al Mins, dancer.

Jazz Week

The jazz week leads off Monday with Conrad Janis and his band covering the range of New Orleans jazz, followed by Eubie Blake on Tuesday evening presenting ragtime. On Thursday Jimmy Rushing of Kansas City and Cliff Jackson will interpret the jazz blues and boogie woogie. The final Saturday night will highlight Afro-Cuban music today, with Candido at the drums, and the progressive jazz combination of Randy Weston.

This is the more formal part of the program. In between, battles in music and words between the different musical points of view are certain to develop, judging by past round tables.

For the amateur musicians attending—there will be opportunities to sit in at jam sessions, to trade and try out folk songs, and opportunity to learn and to practice folk guitar under the guidance of Willis James, director of the Ford Valley Folk Festival, and jazz dancing under the tutelage of Al Mins, champion Harvest Moon and Savoy dancer.

Plenty of Talk

Meanwhile folk and jazz authorities, musicologists, and professors will draw what learned conclusions they can from this source material, tracing the impact of European and African music on our folk and jazz. Among the experts attending will be Professor Tremaine McDowell, chairman of the American studies department at the University of Minnesota, Harold Courlander, editor of the Ethnic Folkways Library, Professor Willis James of Spelman College, Charles Seeger, former chief of the division of music of the Pan-American Union, Professor George Herzog, musicologist and anthropologist of the University of Indiana, jazz historian Rudi Blesh, and Professor Marshall W. Stearns, executive director of the Institute of Jazz Studies, who is directing the two-week session.

This will be the fifth round table at Music Inn, and the first time that the folk and jazz round tables have joined together.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH MONDAY, AUGUST 10, 1953 THE EVE

Big Man in Music From St. Louis

Sam Krachmalnick Winning Praise as Student Conductor at Tanglewood

By Charles Menees
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

SAMUEL KRACHMALNICK, WHO USED TO PLAY THE GLOCKENSPIEL IN THE SOLDAN HIGH SCHOOL BAND, CONDUCTS THE STUDENT ORCHESTRA AT TANGLEWOOD, FAMOUS MUSIC CENTER IN MASSACHUSETTS.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 10.

IT was exactly 10 years ago that Samuel Krachmalnick set out from St. Louis, a teenager with music already decided as his profession. Since then he has come a long way from playing glockenspiel in the Soldan High School band. He now ranks among the nation's most promising young conductors.

Big things are being predicted by experts for the 27-year-old Krachmalnick this summer at Tanglewood, famous music center two miles from here. Sam (only the printed program calls him Samuel) is here for the first time, with a scholarship and getting one of the most sought-after opportunities offered by Tanglewood—the chance to study conducting under a 34-year-old genius of the art, Leonard Bernstein.

Bernstein, who was a conducting protege of the late Dr. Serge Koussevitzky at this very same 210-acre garden of music not too many years ago, and others are generous in their praises of the big man from St. Louis. Says Bernstein: "He's all music, all 300 pounds of him. He's going far—real far. Watch him."

Bernstein's statement contains one glaring inaccuracy: Sam weighs only 220 pounds, a figure that has him slightly worried. "How did I look from the audience?" Sam asked of a colleague as he rested the other night after conducting the 100-piece student orchestra.

"Pretty trim, Sam," came the reply.

"Pretty trim! Pretty trim!" bellowed Sam as he half arose from the cot. "It's got to be better than that. Man, I've got to shear off some blubber."

Sam doesn't depend on his bear-like physique to put across the message to those following his baton. He knows his score thoroughly, has an excellent sense of rhythm and an ultra-sensitive ear. He has a decided advantage over some young conductors in that he is a skilled instrumentalist. His podium mannerisms range from the bombastic to the delicately refined, but all are full of meaning and a part of the high degree of control he has over players and singers. Most of the time he is sympathetic with those he is directing ("I've worked under some nasty, uncompromising conductors and I don't want to be like them"), but he can be firm.

During a rehearsal the other day he stopped the orchestra with a roaring "No!" and glared at the violas. "Play it this way," he said, and then sang the melody with ta-de-das.

"Do you understand?" he questioned. No answer.

"Well say 'yes' or 'no' violas, so I'll at least know you're there," double-roared Krachmalnick.

Sam is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Abe Krachmalnick, 5753 McPherson. His parent[illegible] are not [illegible] but their two sons are making the name Krachmalnick (crock-moll-nick) stick in the music business. Sam's brother, Jacob, who is 31 years old, is concertmaster of the Philadelphia Orchestra. Their cousin, Morris Krachmalnick, also from St. Louis, is first violist of the Pittsburgh Symphony, plays professionally as Kras Malno.

★ ★ ★

THE music in Sam began to come to the surface when he was about six years old. Somewhere along the line it was discovered that he had perfect pitch. He studied piano with Morris Kessler and then Leo Miller, in 1943 gave a Young Artist recital at the Wednesday Club. As a boy he also took easily to the French horn and played it in the Scholarship Symphony conducted by Edward Murphy. It was while at Soldan that Sam volunteered to play the glockenspiel, an instrument with a name that goes well with Krachmalnick.

Tossing his Soldan diploma in a drawer in 1943, Sam hurried off with a scholarship to the Eastman School of Music. Graduating there in 1946 with many accomplishments to his credit, he joined the National Symphony in Washington, D.C., as first desk French horn, playing under Hans Kindler. In 1949, Sam moved to New York to study conducting under Jean Morel at Juilliard School of Music, and for the last two years has been Morel's assistant under a fellowship grant. He also finds time to serve as artists and repertoire man of Remington Records.

Sam's biggest conducting opportunity to date came last spring when Arthur Fiedler invited him to come along as his assistant when the Boston "Pops" Orchestra toured for 10 weeks to as far west as Texas. When the orchestra performed in Des Moines, Sam's parents were in the audience, watching their favorite conductor front a major orchestra for the first time. He also recently made a guest appearance on the National Symphony podium and his former associates stood up and cheered when he first walked on stage.

Here at Tanglewood, everyone knows how to pronounce Krachmalnick properly. Sam is ubiquitous on this beautiful "campus" nestled in the Berkshires. He stops only to eat lunch, and even then is apt to be spearheading a debate on such subjects as the future of the 12-tone scale. In Bernstein's conducting classes, held in a replica of the little red cottage where Nathaniel Hawthorne conceived his "Tanglewood Tales" a hundred years ago, Sam is an outspoken participant in discussions. Or he may be found further down the road at the red barn (the original, with a shed added and accoustically improved for recording purposes) helping the percussion section of the student orchestra iron out problems.

Next hour he can probably be found at the theater, running over an opera score under the watchful eye of Boris Goldovsky, who heads the opera department. From there he may huddle with Composer Aaron Copland, top man in the composition department, about the modern music forums which Sam assembles for Copland. This involves listening to works by budding young composers studying here, scheduling some of them for performance and deciding on which student singers and instrumentalists will do them.

And over in the Shed, where 6000 persons spend weekends under the roof and thousands of others stretch out on the lawn outside to listen to concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Sam conducts the student orchestra in dress rehearsals and concerts. The other night he led a concert performance of Debussy's one-act opera, "L'Enfant Prodigue." On a previous program he conducted the orchestra in three excerpts from Berlioz's "The Damnation of Faust." Several nights after directing the Debussy work, he conducted the student performance of the opera itself at the theater. Big Sam is a big favorite with student musicians. They play and sing their hearts out for him.

★ ★ ★

SAM and three other St. Louisans are among 400 students from around the world attending Tanglewood this summer. Harold Blumenfeld, assistant professor of music at Washington University and head of the opera department of the university and the St. Louis Grand Opera Guild, is here for his fifth summer. He, too, is studying conducting under Bernsctein who has praised his progress. Blumenfeld has driected the student orchestra in Hindemith's "Konzertmusik for Strings and Brass" and a Mozart violin concerto. In previous summers here Blumenfeld has been an assistant to Goldovsky in the opera department.

In the student orchestra when Krachmalnick and Blumenfeld conduct are Mary Dodge, 703 Harvard avenue, who plays viola, and Rachael Don, violinist, who lives at 7145 Stanford avenue. Both of these University City girls are members of the St. Louis Philharmonic. In St. Louis, Mary studies viola with Herbert van Den Burg, Rachel the violin with Isadore Grossman.

From STER, MASS.
GAZETTE
AUG 11 1953

LEONARD BERNSTEIN AT TANGLEWOOD

The world premieres of "Bab Boys in School," a one-act opera by Jan Meyerowitz, and of "A Little Boy Lost," a cantata by Allen Sapp, will be features of Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade," the gala benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer school if music, at Tanglewood.

The short works will be performed by students of the Berkshire Music Center as part of a simultaneous demonstration by each of the school's five departments — orchestra, chamber music, opera, chorus, and study group—commencing at 6 p. m. Following their performance will be the gala concert in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Charles Munch will conduct Handel and Beethoven, with Isaac Stern as soloist; and Leonard Bernstein will have the podium for Act II, scenes 1 and 2 of Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," with Leontyne Price and William Warfield as soloists, and the Festival Chorus.

Cir. (D 26,526)

This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 11 1953

Phonqrama and Hi-Fi Console Top Tanglewood Parade Prizes

Forty-two door prizes, topped by two new deluxe record players, will be awarded at Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit which makes possible scholarships for the study of music at the Berkshire Music Center. The event, which will include an evening concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch and Leonard Bernstein and demonstrations by students of the school, will be held from 5.45 Thursday. A special performance of opera scenes will be given at 4 in the formal gardens for holders of reserved seat and box tickets.

A Hi-Fi console is donated by RCA-Victor Company and a Phonorama by the Philco Corporation. Other prizes, which will be drawn by Miss Anna Russell, assisted by Boris Goldovsky, opera department head, and Thomas D. Perry Jr., executive secretary of the school, will include a GE radio alarm clock, an RCA Victor 45-J2 record player, a Ture Bengtz etching, recordings by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, an 18-pound ham, pairs of tickets for the Berkshire Festival, Jacob's Pillow and 10 leading Berkshire inns, a Dutch pewter pitcher, a Laura Lee Linder leather waste basket and a tribal print ensemble by Calypso of Bermuda. Mrs. Frederic Schenck of Lenox is in charge of prizes.

The opera in the garden will include scenes from Pagliacci, Mozart's "Cosi Fan Tutte" and Menotti's "The Telephone."

YANTIC

Miss Mary Tracy, TUrner 7-0490

YANTIC WOMAN VISITED TANGLEWOOD FESTIVAL

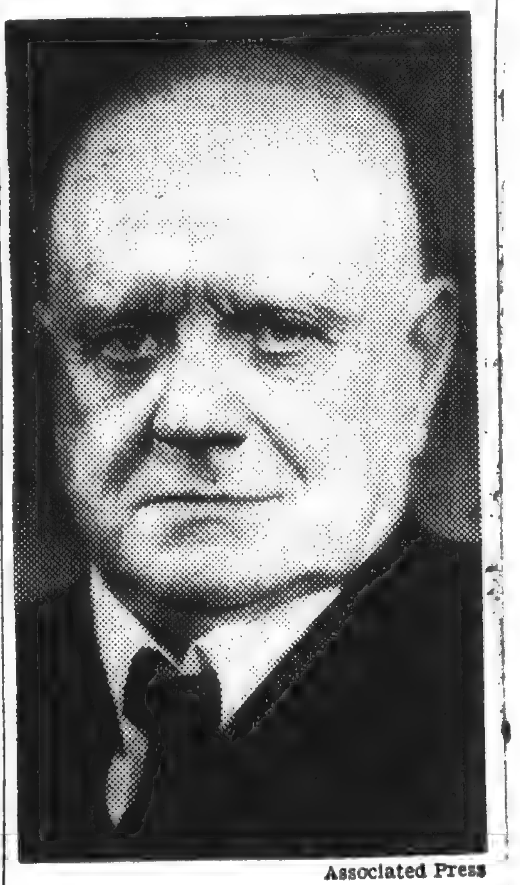
On Sunday Miss Elinor Freeman of Yantic was at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., where she attended the Berkshire festival concert given by the Boston Symphony orchestra under the direction of Charles Muench.

PIATIGORSKY PLAYS MILHAUD CONCERTO

'Cellist Is Heard With Boston Symphony at Tanglewood—Also Offers 'Don Quixote'

By JOHN BRIGGS
Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 9—Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra concluded this afternoon a week-end of music-making at Tanglewood with a concert featuring Gregor Piatigorsky, 'cellist, as soloist.



Associated Press

WINS AWARD: Jan Sibelius, noted composer, who was named as winner of the first international Wihuri Foundation music prize, amounting to $21,250, yesterday.

Mr. Piatigorsky was heard in the Milhaud 'Cello Concerto No. 1, and in Strauss' "Don Quixote." The renowned 'cellist was in good form this afternoon, his playing was fluent and expressive. His warm, sensitive, singing tone made a telling effect in the Strauss and Milhaud works. It was a distinguished performance by Mr. Piatigorsky.

The viola solos in "Don Quixote" were very capably performed by Joseph de Pasquale.

This afternoon's music began with a deft, light-fingered and altogether charming performance by Mr. Munch and the orchestra of the Schubert Fifth Symphony in B flat.

Samuel Barber's Adagio for String Orchestra received an eloquent performance. Mr. Barber was present to acknowledge the warm applause of the Tanglewood audience. The afternoon's music ended with "Bacchus et Ariane," Suite No. 2, by Roussel.

One of the outstanding events of the Tanglewood week-end was last night's performance of the Mahler "Resurrection" Symphony No. 2, in C minor, with Leonard Bernstein conducting.

The performance was in the category of special events. It was played in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, and was preceded by a silent tribute to the conductor.

Then there was the fact that Mr. Bernstein himself is one of the "Tanglewood Boys," and that Mr. Koussevitzky labored untiringly to win recognition for his talented protégé.

All these facts gave the performance of the Mahler special poignancy. But when all is said and done, the main thing is that this is music that Mr. Bernstein understands and for which he has a special affinity. He is able to communicate the fire, grandeur and intensity of his conception of the Mahler to the players, who in turn transmit it to the audience.

It was a lengthy program, the hour-and-twenty-minute Mahler symphony being preceded by Ravel's "Scheherazade" and Mussorgsky's Prelude to "Khovantchina." But at its conclusion, Mr. Bernstein received the kind of reception that conductors dream of. The immense Mahler symphony had left its hearers stirred and exalted; there was no doubt of that.

Jennie Tourel sang the vocal parts of the Ravel work with polished artistry, and also sang the contralto solos in the Mahler symphony. The soprano soloist in the Mahler was Theresa Green.

Music Events Here Tonight

A Guggenheim Memorial Concert, Edwin Franko Goldman, conductor, will be given on the Ma in Central Park at 8:30 o'cloc and "Il Trovatore," in conc form, will be offered by the C munity Service Opera at the cational Alliance at 8:15.

Tanglewood, Lenox—Thurs. Aug. 13
Events from 6 to 11 P.M.
Eagle (Rain or Shine) 8/11

Tanglewood on Parade

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
will give a concert in the Shed, to be conducted by CHARLES MUNCH and LEONARD BERNSTEIN

Soloists will include
ISAAC STERN
in Beethoven's Violin Concerto

LEONTYNE PRICE	WILLIAM WARFIELD
Soprano, now starring as "Bess" on Broadway	Baritone, popular star of "Show Boat" and "Porgy and Bess"

with chorus and orchestra in Act II, Scenes 1 and 2, from Gershwin's "PORGY AND BESS"

LAWN PARTY . . . PICNIC SUPPER . . .
WALTZING ON THE LAWN

40 DOOR PRIZES

TICKETS . . . Box Seats—$5 . . . Front Sections (All seats reserved)—$4 and $3 . . . Unreserved Section—$2.50
All who purchase tickets will be invited to attend the activities of the school at 6 o'clock

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA ● OPERA SCENES
● THE CHORUS ● CHAMBER MUSIC

CLOSING FESTIVAL CONCERTS

NEXT FRI. EVE. (Aug. 14), at 8:30—BRAHMS' REQUIEM
SAT. EVE. (Aug. 15), at 8:30—LEONARD BERNSTEIN Conducting
SUN. AFT. (Aug. 16), at 2:30—Soloist—SEYMOUR LIPKIN, piano
Seats from $2.50—General Admission, $2

Eagle 8/12

The list of door prizes for Tanglewood on Parade tomorrow night ought to boost the attendance . . .

Parade Thurs

Eagle 8/11

Former Tanglewood School Opera Student Returning as Musical Star for Benefit

TANGLEWOOD — Leontyne Price, Negro soprano, currently playing Bess in the George Gershwin opera, "Porgy and Bess," will return here Thursday night to sing with her husband, William Warfield, in two scenes of the second act which Leonard Bernstein will conduct. The Gershwin numbers will form the second half of the program in the Tanglewood Music Shed for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center. The Boston Symphony Orchestra, whose members give the concert each year, will be conducted by Charles Munch, with Isaac Stern as violin soloist.

Daughter of Sawmill Laborer

Born in Laurel, Miss., 25 years ago, daughter of a day laborer in a sawmill, Miss Price was educated and sponsored by the Chisholm family, by whom her parents were employed. After graduating from Wilberforce (Ohio) College she won a scholarship at the Juilliard School of Music in 1948 and two years later came to Tanglewood to study in the opera department. In that summer she sang the title role in the Richard Strauss opera, "Ariadne Auf Naxos."

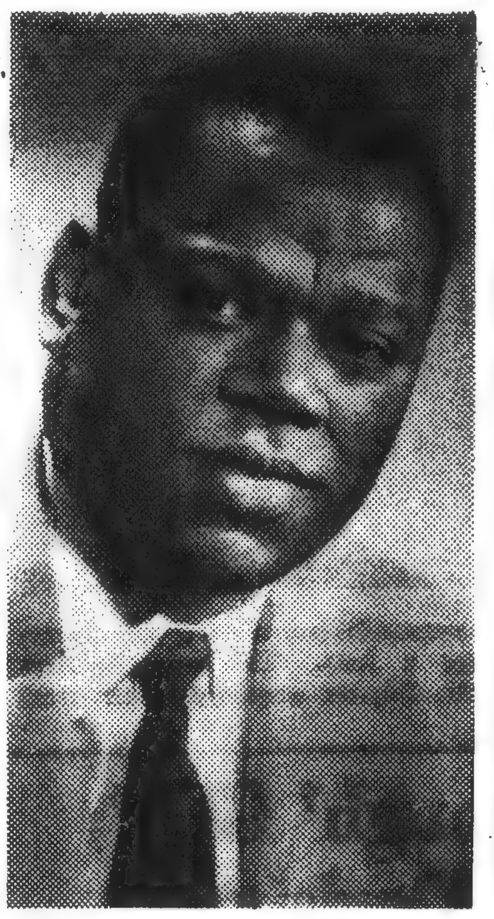
In February, 1952, Miss Price received both a John Hay Whitney and a Fullbright fellowship for vocal study abroad, after which she made her Broadway debut in the American National Theatre and Academy revival of the Virgil Thomson-Gertrude Stein opera, "Four Saints in Three Acts." She played the role of St. Cecilia I in Paris, in the month-long Exposition of the Arts sponsored by the American Congress for Cultural Freedom, and later flew to Dallas to rehearse the role of Bess.

Leontyne Price

She met her husband in Texas and with him played summer engagements in Dallas, Chicago and Washington, D.C. Later they took off by plane for Vienna, to play the opera abroad.

Son of Baptist Pastor

Mr. Warfield left the opera during its London run to return to the United States for previous concert commitments. Born in West Helena, Ark., son of a Baptist pastor, he moved to Rochester, N.Y., at the age of three, when his father was appointed minister at the Mount Vernon Baptist Church. He won the Music Educators' National Association scholarship and graduated from the Eastman School of Music. During World War II he was with Military Intelligence Training because of his knowledge of French, German and Italian. He also speaks Latin and Hebrew. After the war he went on tour with the Broadway revue, "Call Me Mister," was in the musical, "Set My People Free" and later played Cal in Marc Blitzstein's "Regina."



William Warfield

Following his Town Hall, New York, debut in 1950 he toured Australia for the Australian Broadcasting Commission, singing 35 engagements, including 14 appearances with symphony orchestras. He then sang the role of Joe in the latest film version of "Show Boat," with the Jerome Kern song, "Ol' Man River." While in Vienna and Berlin with "Porgy and Bess" he gave lieder recitals. At Tanglewood he also will sing at Friday's Berkshire Festival concert in Brahms', "Requiem."

Tickets for admission to the benefit, which include admission to demonstrations by all five departments of the school at 6 o'clock, are on sale at the Tanglewood box office. Holders of reserved and box seats are invited to an opera performance at 4 in the Tanglewood formal gardens. All seats in the rear section of the music Shed are unreserved, for holders of general admission tickets.

LEONTYNE PRICE, WARFIELD SING AT TANGLEWOOD

Will Appear Thursday in 'Porgy and Bess' Scenes

Lenox, Aug. 10—Leontyne Price, the lovely soprano who is currently a toast of Broadway as the Bess of the George Gershwin opera, "Porgy and Bess," in the Blevins Davis-Robert Breen successful revival at the Ziegfeld Theater, returns to Tanglewood, where she was a student in 1951 in the Berkshire Music Center's opera department, as a star of the gala "Tanglewood on Parade" concert Thursday. It is a benefit for the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

Bernstein To Conduct

Miss Price will sing, with her husband, concert baritone William Warfield, at Thursday evening's concert in the Music Shed, Act II, scenes 1 and 2, of "Porgy and Bess." Leonard Bernstein is conducting the Boston Symphony for this occasion, and the Festival Chorus, of students of the choral department of the school, will assist.

Born in Laurel, Miss., 25 years ago, daughter of a day laboror in a sawmill in Mississippi, she early showed a bent for music. Her career has been completely sponsored and nurtured by a white family, the Chisholms, for whom her parents worked occasionally as laborers and house servants. "Aunt" Elizabeth Chisholm was instrumental in getting Leontyne a scholarship to study at New York's famed Juilliard School of Music in 1948, and two years later she came to Tanglewood, in the opera department. During that summer she sang the title role in the Richard Strauss opera "Ariadne Auf Naxos."

In February, 1952, she received both a John Hay Whitney and a Fullbright Fellowship for vocal study abroad, an opportunity she has not been able to avail herself of as yet. For in April, 1952, she made her Broadway debut in the American National Theatre and Academy revival of the Virgil Thomson-Gertrude Stein opera "Four Saints in Three Acts," as an alternate to Inez [illegible] in the role of St. Cecelia I. [illegible] the production was taken in its entirety to Paris to be [illegible] month-long Exposition [illegible] sponsored by the [illegible] Cultural Freedom [illegible] Symphony Orchestra [illegible] important American entry [illegible] stupendous festival. Leontyne [illegible] along and introduced [illegible] Saints" to Paris audiences [illegible] mediately after its [illegible] French capital, she flew to [illegible] to rehearse the role of Bess.

In Texas she met [illegible] liam Warfield, for the [illegible] the Porgy of the new [illegible] Their friendship blossomed [illegible] the musical's summer engagements in Dallas, Chicago [illegible] Washington, D. C., and [illegible] single day between the Washington engagement and the day the entire Negro troupe took off by plane for Vienna to present the opera abroad, they were married, approximately a year ago.

"Porgy and Bess," never given in Europe, was a sensation in Vienna, Berlin, London and Paris, and returned to the U. S. for its current Broadway showing, in January.

Rise Is Meteoric

William Warfield, who also won new fans abroad for his singing of Porgy, left the opera during its London run to return to the U. S. to fulfill previous concert commitments. Since his New York Town Hall debut recital in March, 1950, one of the most unanimously well-received of the entire season, his rise in the musical world has been meteoric. Born in West Helena, Ark., son of a Baptist pastor, who now holds the post of minister at the Mount Vernon Baptist Church in Rochester, he came to that city at the age of three. He won the Music Educators' National Association scholarship and studied at the Eastman School of Music, graduating as an A. B. During the war he was with Military Intelligence Training because of his knowledge of French, German and Italian,—he also is proficient in Latin and Hebrew. At war's close he went on tour with the Broadway revue, "Call Me Mister," was in a musical called "Set My People Free," later was Cal in Marc Blitzstein's "Regina."

Following his Town Hall debut, he went on a tour of Australia for the Australian Broadcasting Commission. The tour was twice extended to take care of repeat performances: the tour consisted of 35 engagements, 14 as soloist with symphonies.

He then sang the role of Joe in the latest film version of "Show Boat,' , singing the memorable P. G. Wodehouse-Jerome Kern song, "Ol' Man River." His engagements in "Porgy and Bess" followed, and while in Vienna and Berlin he gave lieder recitals.

William Warfield makes his Berkshire Festival debut with Canadian soprano Lois Marshall in the Brahms' "Requiem," which Charles Munch conducts at Friday's Tanglewood concert.

N.Y. Post Aug. 11

William Warfield will sing excerpts from "Porgy and Bess" at the "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center Thursday. The baritone and Lois Marshall will be soloists at Friday's performance of the Brahms' "Requiem" at the Lenox, Mass., Music Shed.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY

NYHT 8/12

ANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
Orchestra
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
CLOSING CONCERTS
FRI. EVE., Aug. 14—Soloists:
LOIS MARSHALL, Soprano
WILLIAM WARFIELD, Baritone
SAT. EVE., Aug. 15—
LEONARD BERNSTEIN, Conducting
SUN. AFT., Aug. 16—Soloist,
SEYMOUR LIPKIN, Piano
Reserved Seats from $2.50; Gen'l Adm. $2

Bkn Post 8/12

THURS., Aug. 13—"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE." Many events include Boston Symphony Concert, conducted by CHARLES MUNCH and LEONARD BERNSTEIN; Soloists—ISAAC STERN, Violin; LEONTYNE PRICE, Soprano, appearing with WILLIAM WARFIELD, Baritone, in "Porgy and Bess," Act II, Scenes 1 and 2. Reserved Seats $4 and $3. Unreserved—$2.50. Address Box Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

[277]

AMUSEMENTS THE NEW YORK TIMES, MONDAY, AUGUST 10, 1953.

PIATIGORSKY PLAYS MILHAUD CONCERTO

'Cellist Is Heard With Boston Symphony at Tanglewood— Also Offers 'Don Quixote'

By JOHN BRIGGS
Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 9—Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra concluded this afternoon a week-end of music-making at Tanglewood with a concert featuring Gregor Piatigorsky, 'cellist, as soloist.

Mr. Piatigorsky was heard in the Milhaud 'Cello Concerto No. 1, and in Strauss' "Don Quixote." The renowned 'cellist was in good form this afternoon, his playing was fluent and expressive. His warm, sensitive, singing tone made a telling effect in the Strauss and Milhaud works. It was a distinguished performance by Mr. Piatigorsky.

The viola solos in "Don Quixote" were very capably performed by Joseph de Pasquale.

This afternoon's music began with a deft, light-fingered and altogether charming performance by Mr. Munch and the orchestra of the Schubert Fifth Symphony in B flat.

Samuel Barber's Adagio for String Orchestra received an eloquent performance. Mr. Barber was present to acknowledge the warm applause of the Tanglewood audience. The afternoon's music ended with "Bacchus et Ariane," Suite No. 2, by Roussel.

One of the outstanding events of the Tanglewood week-end was last night's performance of the Mahler "Resurrection" Symphony No. 2, in C minor, with Leonard Bernstein conducting.

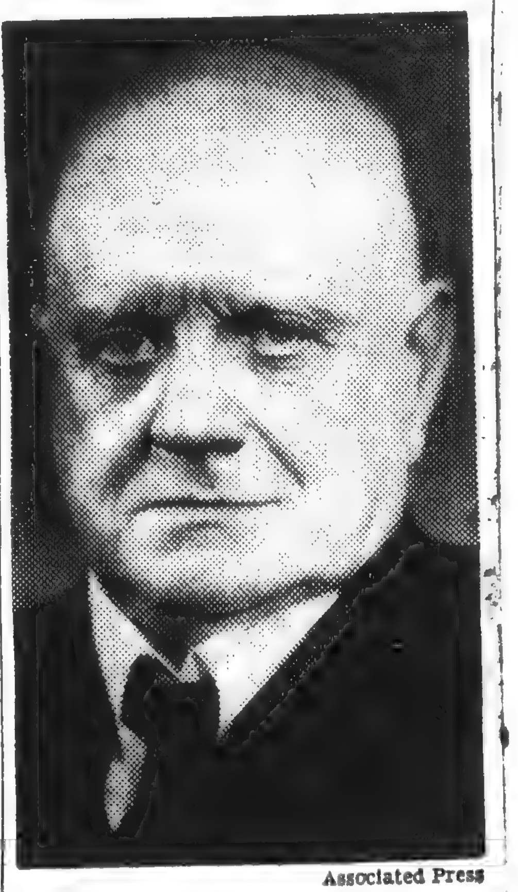
The performance was in the category of special events. It was played in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, and was preceded by a silent tribute to the conductor.

Then there was the fact that Mr. Bernstein himself is one of the "Tanglewood Boys," and that Mr. Koussevitzky labored untiringly to win recognition for his talented protégé.

All these facts gave the performance of the Mahler special poignancy. But when all is said and done, the main thing is that this is music that Mr. Bernstein understands and for which he has a special affinity. He is able to communicate the fire, grandeur and intensity of his conception of the Mahler to the players, who in turn transmit it to the audience.

It was a lengthy program, the hour-and-twenty-minute Mahler symphony being preceded by Ravel's "Scheherazade" and Mussorgsky's Prelude to "Khovantchina." But at its conclusion, Mr. Bernstein received the kind of reception that conductors dream of. The immense Mahler symphony had left its hearers stirred and exalted; there was no doubt of that.

Jennie Tourel sang the vocal parts of the Ravel work with polished artistry, and also sang the contralto solos in the Mahler symphony. The soprano soloist in the Mahler was Theresa Green.



Associated Press

WINS AWARD: Jan Sibelius, noted composer, who was named as winner of the first international Wihuri Foundation music prize, amounting to $21,250, yesterday.

Music Events Here Tonight

A Guggenheim Memorial Concert, Edwin Franko Goldman, conductor, will be given on the Ma in Central Park at 8:30 o'cloc and "Il Trovatore," in conc form, will be offered by the C munity Service Opera at the cational Alliance at 8:15.

Tanglewood, Lenox—Thurs. Aug. 13
Events from 6 to 11 P.M.
(Rain or Shine)

Eagle 8/11

Tanglewood on Parade

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
will give a concert in the Shed, to be conducted by
CHARLES MUNCH and LEONARD BERNSTEIN

Soloists will include
ISAAC STERN
in Beethoven's Violin Concerto

LEONTYNE PRICE
Soprano, now starring as "Bess" on Broadway

WILLIAM WARFIELD
Baritone, popular star of "Show Boat" and "Porgy and Bess"

with chorus and orchestra in Act II, Scenes 1 and 2, from Gershwin's "PORGY AND BESS"

LAWN PARTY . . . PICNIC SUPPER . . .
WALTZING ON THE LAWN

40 DOOR PRIZES

TICKETS . . . Box Seats—$5 . . . Front Sections (All seats reserved)—$4 and $3 . . . Unreserved Section—$2.50
All who purchase tickets will be invited to attend the activities of the school at 6 o'clock

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA ● OPERA SCENES
● THE CHORUS ● CHAMBER MUSIC

CLOSING FESTIVAL CONCERTS

NEXT FRI. EVE. (Aug. 14), at 8:30—BRAHMS' REQUIEM
SAT. EVE. (Aug. 15), at 8:30—LEONARD BERNSTEIN Conducting
SUN. AFT. (Aug. 16), at 2:30—Soloist — SEYMOUR LIPKIN, piano
Seats from $2.50—General Admission, $2

Eagle 8/12

The list of door prizes for Tanglewood ~~on Parade tomorrow~~ night ought to boost the attendance...

Parade Thurs

Eagle 8/11

Former Tanglewood School Opera Student Returning as Musical Star for Benefit

TANGLEWOOD — Leontyne Price, Negro soprano, currently playing Bess in the George Gershwin opera, "Porgy and Bess," will return here Thursday night to sing with her husband, William Warfield, in two scenes of the second act which Leonard Bernstein will conduct. The Gershwin numbers will form the second half of the program in the Tanglewood Music Shed for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center. The Boston Symphony Orchestra, whose members give the concert each year, will be conducted by Charles Munch, with Isaac Stern as violin soloist.

Daughter of Sawmill Laborer

Born in Laurel, Miss., 25 years ago, daughter of a day laborer in a sawmill, Miss Price was educated and sponsored by the Chisholm family, by whom her parents were employed. After graduating from Wilberforce (Ohio) College she won a scholarship at the Juilliard School of Music in 1948 and two years later came to Tanglewood to study in the opera department. In that summer she sang the title role in the Richard Strauss opera, "Ariadne Auf Naxos."

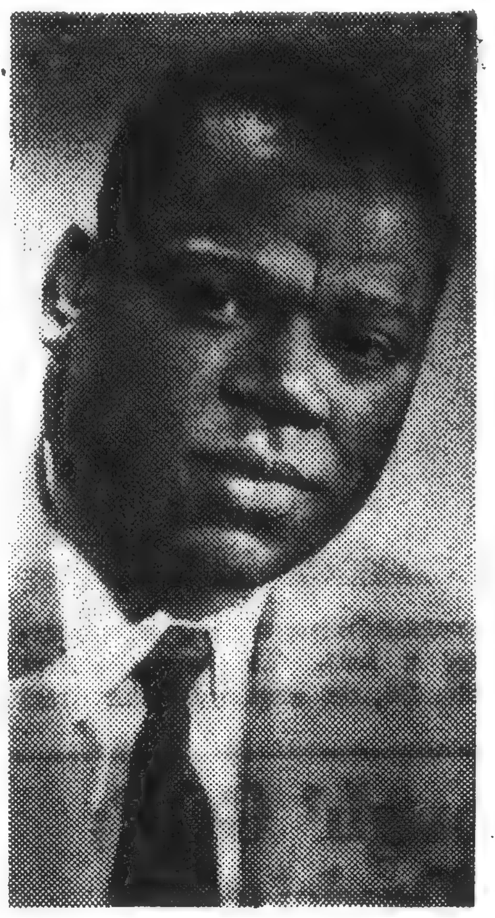
In February, 1952, Miss Price received both a John Hay Whitney and a Fullbright fellowship for vocal study abroad, after which she made her Broadway debut in the American National Theatre and Academy revival of the Virgil Thomson-Gertrude Stein opera, "Four Saints in Three Acts." She played the role of St. Cecilia I in Paris, in the month-long Exposition of the Arts sponsored by the American Congress for Cultural Freedom, and later flew to Dallas to rehearse the role of Bess.

Leontyne Price

She met her husband in Texas and with him played summer engagements in Dallas, Chicago and Washington, D.C. Later they took off by plane for Vienna, to play the opera abroad.

Son of Baptist Pastor

Mr. Warfield left the opera during its London run to return to the United States for previous concert commitments. Born in West Helena, Ark., son of a Baptist pastor, he moved to Rochester, N.Y., at the age of three, when his father was appointed minister at the Mount Vernon Baptist Church. He won the Music Educators' National Association scholarship and graduated from the Eastman School of Music. During World War II he was with Military Intelligence Training because of his knowledge of French, German and Italian. He also speaks Latin and Hebrew. After the war he went on tour with the Broadway revue, "Call Me Mister," was in the musical, "Set My People Free" and later played Cal in Marc Blitzstein's "Regina."



William Warfield

Following his Town Hall, New York, debut in 1950 he toured Australia for the Australian Broadcasting Commission, singing 35 engagements, including 14 appearances with symphony orchestras. He then sang the role of Joe in the latest film version of "Show Boat," with the Jerome Kern song, "Ol' Man River." While in Vienna and Berlin with "Porgy and Bess" he gave lieder recitals. At Tanglewood he also will sing at Friday's Berkshire Festival concert in Brahms', "Requiem."

Tickets for admission to the benefit, which include admission to demonstrations by all five departments of the school at 6 o'clock, are on sale at the Tanglewood box office. Holders of reserved and box seats are invited to an opera performance at 4 in the Tanglewood formal gardens. All seats in the rear section of the music Shed are unreserved, for holders of general admission tickets.

LEONTYNE PRICE, WARFIELD SING AT TANGLEWOOD

Will Appear Thursday in 'Porgy and Bess' Scenes

Lenox, Aug. 10—Leontyne Price, the lovely soprano who is currently a toast of Broadway as the Bess of the George Gershwin opera, "Porgy and Bess," in the Blevins Davis-Robert Breen successful revival at the Ziegfeld Theater, returns to Tanglewood, where she was a student in 1951 in the Berkshire Music Center's opera department, as a star of the gala "Tanglewood on Parade" concert Thursday. It is a benefit for the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

Bernstein To Conduct

Miss Price will sing, with her husband, concert baritone William Warfield, at Thursday evening's concert in the Music Shed, Act II, scenes 1 and 2, of "Porgy and Bess." Leonard Bernstein is conducting the Boston Symphony for this occasion, and the Festival Chorus, of students of the choral department of the school, will assist.

Born in Laurel, Miss., 25 years ago, daughter of a day laboror in a sawmill in Mississippi, she early showed a bent for music. Her career has been completely sponsored and nurtured by a white family, the Chisholms, for whom her parents worked occasionally as laborers and house servants. "Aunt" Elizabeth Chisholm was instrumental in getting Leontyne a scholarship to study at New York's famed Juilliard School of Music in 1948, and two years later she came to Tanglewood, in the opera department. During that summer she sang the title role in the Richard Strauss opera "Ariadne Auf Naxos."

In February, 1952, she received both a John Hay Whitney and a Fullbright Fellowship for vocal study abroad, an opportunity she has not been able to avail herself of as yet. In April, [illegible] she made her Broadway debut in the American National Theatre and Academy revival of the Virgil Thomson-Gertrude Stein opera "Four Saints in Three Acts," as an alternate to Inez [illegible] in the role of St. Cecilia I [illegible] the production was taken in its entirety to Paris [illegible] month-long Exposition of the Arts sponsored by the [illegible] Cultural Freedom. [illegible] Symphony Orchestra [illegible] important American [illegible] stupendous festival. Leontyne [illegible] along and introduced "Four Saints" to Paris audiences. Immediately after [illegible] French capital, she flew to [illegible] to rehearse the role of Bess.

In Texas she met [illegible] William Warfield, the Porgy of the new [illegible]. Their friendship blossomed [illegible] the musical's summer engagements in Dallas, Chicago and in Washington, D. C., and on a single day between the end of the Washington engagement and the day the entire Negro troupe took off by plane for Vienna to present the opera abroad, they were married, approximately a year ago.

"Porgy and Bess," never given in Europe, was a sensation in Vienna, Berlin, London and Paris, and returned to the U. S. for its current Broadway showing, in January.

Rise Is Meteoric

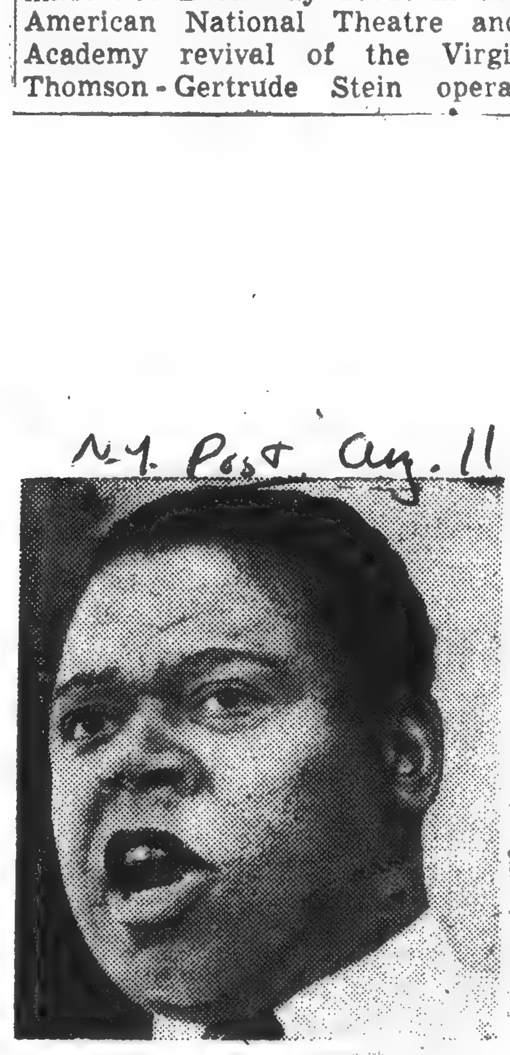
William Warfield, who also won new fans abroad for his singing of Porgy, left the opera during its London run to return to the U. S. to fulfill previous concert commitments. Since his New York Town Hall debut recital in March, 1950, one of the most unanimously well-received of the entire season, his rise in the musical world has been meteoric. Born in West Helena, Ark., son of a Baptist pastor, who now holds the post of minister at the Mount Vernon Baptist Church in Rochester, he came to that city at the age of three. He won the Music Educators' National Association scholarship and studied at the Eastman School of Music, graduating as an A. B. During the war he was with Military Intelligence Training because of his knowledge of French, German and Italian,—he also is proficient in Latin and Hebrew. At war's close he went on tour with the Broadway revue, "Call Me Mister," was in a musical called "Set My People Free," later was Cal in Marc Blitzstein's "Regina."

Following his Town Hall debut, he went on a tour of Australia for the Australian Broadcasting Commission. The tour was twice extended to take care of repeat performances: the tour consisted of 35 engagements, 14 as soloist with symphonies.

He then sang the role of Joe in the latest film version of "Show Boat," singing the memorable P. G. Wodehouse-Jerome Kern song, "Ol' Man River." His engagements in "Porgy and Bess" followed, and while in Vienna and Berlin he gave lieder recitals.

William Warfield makes his Berkshire Festival debut with Canadian soprano Lois Marshall in the Brahms' "Requiem," which Charles Munch conducts at Friday's Tanglewood concert.

N.Y. Post Aug. 11



William Warfield will sing excerpts from "Porgy and Bess" at the "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center Thursday. The baritone and Lois Marshall will be soloists at Friday's performance of the Brahms', "Requiem" at the Lenox, Mass., Music Shed.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY Orchestra
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

NYHT 8/12

CLOSING CONCERTS
FRI. EVE., Aug. 14, Soloists: LOIS MARSHALL, Soprano, WILLIAM WARFIELD, Baritone
SAT. EVE., Aug. 15, LEONARD BERNSTEIN, Conducting
SUN. AFT., Aug. 16, Soloist SEYMOUR LIPKIN, Piano
Reserved seats from $2.50; Gen'l Adm. $2

Thurs., Aug. 13—"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE" Many events include Boston Symphony Concert Conducted by CHARLES MUNCH and LEONARD BERNSTEIN; Soloists—ISAAC STERN, Violin; LEONTYNE PRICE, Soprano, appearing with WILLIAM WARFIELD, Baritone, in "Porgy and Bess," Act II, Scenes 1 & 2. Rseerved Seats $4 and $3, Unreserved—$2.50

Address Box Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

[277]

6—The Berkshire Evening Eagle, Tuesday, Aug. 11, 1953

The Lively Arts

By Milton R. Bass

* * *

THE TANGLEWOOD student concerts are fascinating to attend as is attested by the large crowds on weekday nights. It is a pleasure to watch these intense young musicians who obviously subsist on music alone for the weeks they are here.

The wonderful thing about the student concerts is the air of relaxation in the audience as compared to the tenseness of the orchestra. It is just the opposite for the main concerts. There you have 100 musicians completely at ease while a nervous audience sits on the edge of its seats. It's sort of nice to be able to just sit there and listen to the music and watch the performers and applaud everybody no matter how good or bad they might be. (Not that any of them are really bad).

Most of the playing is highly competent and there are moments of beauty and grandeur

the musicianship of the BSO itself, but there are also moments when everything seems to be at sixes and sevens. This is especially true when one of the original compositions of someone in the group is being played.

* * *

JAY ROSENFELD, the music critic of The Eagle, attributes this to sheer loss of nerve on the part of the young musicians. When you give them something they know, like Beethoven's Fifth, he says, they tear into it with utter abandon and devil take the hindmost.

But when you give them a modern composition with its peculiar rhythmic combinations and atonal qualities, they are extremely unsure of themselves. They hear one of the other musicians play something that doesn't sound just right and rather than make a mistake themselves, they sit this dance out, holding the instrument in position but not using it. It's a case of the troops being wonderfully equipped but being too scared to use their firepower potential. The result is a ragged rendition of a ragged composition.

All of this adds up to part of the whole, however, and it is things like this that add to the enjoyment of the entire performance. The concerts give you

Cir. (D 8,721)

This Clipping From
GLENS FALLS, N. Y.
TIMES

AUG 11 1953

Tanglewood Music Festival in Its Last Week; Famous Soloists Are Featured on Presentations

By BRUENNHILDE D. McCUNE

The Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., is in its last week. Under the direction of Charles Munch, programs have been given since July 11 in the theatre and in the large shed, which seats 6,000 people. Pierre Monteux, famous Frenchman, recently resigned conductor of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, and Leonard Bernstein, well-know American, have been guest conductors. Mr. Bernstein will again conduct concerts this coming week-end. Soloists have been Isaac Stern and Zino Francescatti, violinists; Gregor Piatigorsky, famous violincellist, and Jennie Tourel, soprano.

Those who enjoy fine music can have a wonderful time at Tanglewood by attending, not only the week-end programs on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons, but also the special events, such as the one scheduled for this coming Thursday evening, "Tanglewood on Parade." At this time there will be a concert in the Shed, with Munch and Bernstein conducting. Isaac Stern will play the Beethoven Violin Concerto. William Warfield, popular star of "Show Boat" and "Porgy and Bess," and Leontyne Price, now starring on Broadway as Bess, will be soloists in Act II of "Porgy and Bess," to be given with chorus and orchestra.

Picnic on Lawn

You may take a picnic supper and eat on the lawn, a custom which prevails at Tanglewood. At every concert a thousand or more listeners make themselves comfortable on the grass with blankets, pillows and good things to eat. To do this the listener is required to buy only a general admission ticket.

Sunday afternoon the Shed concert presented Schubert's Fifth Symphony, an Adagio for Strings by Samuel Barber, Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote," "Concerto for Cello" by Darius Milhaud and Albert Roussel's "Bacchus et Ariane" ballet. It was a program full of interest and was played, of course, as only a first-rate orchestra like the Boston Symphony can play.

Of special interest to those in this locality who knew the late Louise Homer or who are acquainted with her daughter, Louise Homer Stires, of Lake George, was the Adagio written by Samuel Barber. Mr. Barber is a nephew of the late Mme. Homer and a cousin of Mrs. Stires. A graduate of Curtis Institute of Music, he has won many prizes for his musical creations, including the Pulitzer Prize and the American Prix de Rome. He is the first composer to achieve the distinction of winning the Pulitzer Prize twice. Mr. Barber's compositions include a symphony premiered by Serge Koussevitzky, works for strings and piano and songs.

The Adagio played Sunday appears as the slow movement in his String Quartet in B minor. Based upon a single melodic theme it is musical from start to finish and romantic in that it possesses elegance of style. Mr. Barber, who was in the audience, was called to the podium by Mr. Munch to share in the enthusiastic reception of the piece.

Variations Played

Strauss fantastic variations "Don Quixote" were played instead of a symphony. This long composition, with an introduction, 10 variations and a finale, depicts episodes in the life of this lunatic knight. The three themes in the work represent Quixote, Dulcinea, the lady of his dreams, and Sancho Panza, his servant. Gregor Piatigorsky and Joseph De Pasquale, first viola of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, played the solo parts in the Variations. The two closing numbers were Darius Milhaud's Concerto, played by Mr. Piatigorsky and the orchestra, and the Ballet by Roussel.

Works to be performed this coming week-end are: Friday at 8:30 P. M., Brahm's Requiem with Lois Marshall, soprano, and William Warfield, baritone, as soloists and Charles Munch conducting. Saturday at 8:30 P. M., Sibelius Symphony No. 4, Chavez, Sinfonia India, Brahms, Symphony No. 2 with Bernstein conducting. Sunday at 2:30 P. M., Schubert's Unfinished Symphony, Chabrier, Bourree Fantasque, Wagner, "A Siegfried Idyll" and excerpts from Act III of "Die Meistersinger", Ravel, Piano Concerto for the Left Hand with Seymour Sipkin, soloist; and "La Valse." Mr. Munch will conduct.

A coast-to-coast radio network will broadcast part of the Sunday afternoon concert from 2:30 to 4 P. M. There has been no difficulty in securing seats for the concerts

---

Notes and Footnotes

Eagle 8/12

MUSIC RUNS in families at Tanglewood. Four husband and wife teams are at the music school or in the orchestra, and a set of twin brothers. Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Moore of Davidson, N.C., study clarinet and piano; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lawrie of Lake Geneva, Wis., attend general music classes, and Mr. L. is in opera coaching; and Mr. and Mrs. Georg A. Kleinfeld of Cleveland are orchestra players. Twins Robert and Rodney Pierce of Wichita, Kan., are studying oboe and french horn. Also, from Oslo, Norway, come Mr. and Mrs. Arne Johnstad to study organ with E. Power Biggs. Further, two years ago Leontyne Price sang at Tanglewood, and returns this year as Bess of "Porgy and Bess" to star in Tanglewood on Parade with her baritone husband William Warfield.

Observed in the chorus at Tanglewood is a singer who wears clerical garb and who, it turns out, is Rev. Michael Palotai, professor of choral music at Mount St. Joseph's College, Lackawanna, N.Y. He was born in Hungary, studied at a Roman Catholic seminary, received a B.A. from Budapest University and studied music at Budapest, Vienna and Salzburg, Austria. At Tanglewood he is studying choral conducting with Hugh Ross.

Cir. (D 26,042)

This Clipping From
HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM

AUG 11

STIVAL GROUP—Charles Munch (third from left), music director of the and director of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, is shown me of the students enrolled from foreign countries: (left to right) Serge certmaster of the student orchestra under Leonard Bernstein; Lilly Hsia, a department headed by Boris Goldovsky; Mr. Munch; Juliette Rodrigue, ianist and organist enrolled in the Tanglewood Study Group; The Rev. Migary, now a professor at Mt. St. Joseph's College in Lacawann, N. Y. and , Stockholm, Sweden, studying orches- l Government through a Smith-Mundt

---

Cir. (D 11,874)

This Clipping From
BRISTOL, CONN.
PRESS

AUG 11 1953

Music For Everybody

By Dr. Sigmund Spaeth

During the month of August a great many Americans will be spending their time at the various music festivals of Europe, while a still larger number will attend those available in their own country. It is not difficult to explain the fascination that European summer music has always had for American tourists—a fascination which has grown in proportion as the facilities and conveniences of travel developed.

Even a well known musical work, perhaps in a fairly routine performance, takes on an added glamor when presented in historic surroundings, with natural beauties and local traditions to enhance the atmosphere. Actually many of the foreign festivals make a point of producing real novelties and maintain high standards even in the conventional repertoire of opera and the concert stage.

There is, however, unquestionably an extra thrill in hearing Mozart's "Don Giovanni," "Figaro" or "The Magic Flute" in Salzburg, the city of his birth, regardless of how familiar these masterpieces may be to most of the listeners. Wagner's dramas achieve a new importance in the Bayreuth Festival Theatre, which the composer himself designed, with perfect acoustics and the artistic asset of a completely invisible orchestra and conductor. The liberties taken by his grandsons in their production are accepted as legitimately controversial, and there is enthusiastic approval of the American singers who have assumed more and more of the leading Wagnerian roles.

The famous lion of Lucerne forms an almost unique background to concerts of all kinds, with a constant awareness of the beautiful lake and mountains in the distance and the handy proximity of a Casino where one can gamble or enjoy the simpler pleasures of Tyrolean folk-music. Edinburgh's historic castle looks down each summer on a series of important concerts and operas, while staging within its own walls the exciting military pageant known as "Tattoo." Rome lends a special significance to Italian opera by presenting its masterpieces in the ruins of the Baths of Caracalla, containing perhaps the largest stage in the world. Venice, Stockholm, Prades and other places, large and small, achieve new fame in the summer months by their emphasis on music, usually marked by some elements of individuality.

As competition to such alluring prospects, supplemented by the basic satisfaction of European travel in general, we can now offer more and more summer music of real significance, often in gorgeous natural settings which may compensate for a necessary lack of historical background. The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood has acquired an atmosphere of its own, and this is true also in varying degrees of Colorado's Aspen, Red Rocks and Central City, the Hollywood Bowl, the New York Stadium, the Cincinnati Zoo, Chicagoland and other centres of summer music. We may not have a Salzburg or a Bayreuth as yet, but we do have the resources, the equipment and the audiences for an unlimited development of Music Festivals far beyond the traditional summer months.

* * *

Ted Fetter, who now produces the Hit Parade television program, with the problem of staging the same songs differently each week, was once a lyric writer for Vernon Duke and other composers.

* * *

The Question Box

(Q) "Is Flotow's opera, "Stradella," available today either as a complete score or in part?"—Leo Kohn, Columbus, Ga.

(A) This obscure opera by the composer of "Martha" might be found in the Library of Congress, but is certainly not in general circulation. G. Schirmer published a separate duet, "On the Left Bank of the Tiber," but this was discontinued in 1946. Isolated copies may still be in existence.

(Questions may be sent to Sigmund Spaeth in care of this newspaper.)

* * *

Two of the operas likely to be televised by NBC next season are Debussy's "Pelleas and Melisande" and the Richard Strauss "Salome." Elaine Malbin is mentioned as the probable interpreter of the daughter of Herodias, at the moment dancing across the screen in the person of Rita Hayworth.

* * *

Ernest Gold, a Hollywood composer who has had his share of acceptances and rejections, gives the subject a new twist in this advertisement: "Is your music being neglected by conductors and publishers? Are you at a loss to know what to do with it? If so, have Cameo Music Reproductions do your music printing for you. You will be delighted with how smart your den will look when you paper the walls with your compositions. Only Cameo Music Reproductions has the know-how to give your music that interior decorator look.

* * *

In the screen version of "From Here to Eternity," Frank Sinatra plays his first straight acting role, lifting his voice only for an occasional improvised snatch of song. At that he steals the picture from such experienced film actors as Montgomery Clift, Burt Lancaster and Deborah Kerr.

* * *

A new television show called "Name That Tune" is getting a big mail, but makes the mistake of presenting the melodies to be guessed in too elaborate arrangements. Harry (Stop the Music) Salter is the conductor. Hoagy Carmichael also suffered recently from a bad arrangement of his "I Get Along Without You Very Well," containing an overdose of clarinets.

* * *

Three of the members of "The Golden Day Four," current New York champion barber shop quartet, are also in Robert Shaw's Collegiate Chorale, thus setting a new standard for the more popular type of singing.

Betty Johnson, a Charlotte, N. C., girl, who looks and sings considerably like Dinah Shore, is being built up to New York stardom. Her voice is likely to become a familiar one in the near future.

* * *

Today's Quotation: Thomas Carlyle: "The meaning of music goes deep. Who is there that, in logical words, can express the effect music has on us? A kind of inarticulate, unfathomable speech, which leads us to the edge of the infinite and lets us for moments gaze into it."

Copyright 1953, General Features Corp.

New Opera, Cantata At Berkshire Benefit

Bos. Herald 8/12

The world premieres of "Bad Boys in School," a one-act opera by Jan Meyerowitz, and of "A Little Boy Lost," a cantata by Allen Sapp, will be features of "Tanglewood On Parade," the gala benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

These works will be performed, starting at 6 p.m. tomorrow by students of the Berkshire Music Center as part of a simultaneous demonstration by each of the school's five departments—orchestra, chamber music, opera, chorus and study group—which precedes a concert by the Boston Symphony in the Shed, led by Charles Munch and Leonard Bernstein and featuring Isaac Stern as soloist in a Beethoven concerto, and scenes from Act II of George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," with William Warfield and Leontyne Price, assisted by the Festival Chorus.

[278]

Union 8/12

The president of the New York Zoological Society stated in "This Week" that vandalism was curbed in the Bronx Zoo simply by making the surroundings more beautiful. He maintains that by improving the appearance of the grounds vandalism and carelessness all but disappear.

We'd like to agree with Mr. Osborn but after a visit to Tanglewood, surely the most beautiful spot in the Berkshires, we can't agree that beauty inspires neatness.

Following Sunday's concert, where thousands of music-lovers sat in front of the shed listening to the finest artists produce the best music, the green lawns were turned into an ugly mass of litter after two hours.

The caretakers of the grounds must be a tough team of men if they refrain from violence after cleaning up thousands of paper containers, newspapers, programs, remains of lunches.

6—The Berkshire Evening Eagle, Tuesday, Aug. 11, 1953

The Lively Arts

By Milton R. Bass

* * *

THE TANGLEWOOD student concerts are fascinating to attend as is attested by the large crowds on weekday nights. It is a pleasure to watch these intense young musicians who obviously subsist on music alone for the weeks they are here.

The wonderful thing about the student concerts is the air of relaxation in the audience as compared to the tenseness of the orchestra. It is just the opposite for the main concerts. There you have 100 musicians completely at ease while a nervous audience sits on the edge of its seats. It's sort of nice to be able to just sit there and listen to the music and watch the performers and applaud everybody no matter how good or bad they might be. (Not that any of them are really bad).

Most of the playing is highly competent and there are moments of beauty and grandeur

the musicianship of the BSO itself, but there are also moments when everything seems to be at sixes and sevens. This is especially true when one of the original compositions of someone in the group is being played.

* * *

JAY ROSENFELD, the music critic of The Eagle, attributes this to sheer loss of nerve on the part of the young musicians. When you give them something they know, like Beethoven's Fifth, he says, they tear into it with utter abandon and devil take the hindmost.

But when you give them a modern composition with its peculiar rhythmic combinations and atonal qualities, they are extremely unsure of themselves. They hear one of the other musicians play something that doesn't sound just right and rather than make a mistake themselves, they sit this dance out, holding the instrument in position but not using it. It's a case of the troops being wonderfully uipped but being too scared use their firepower potential. e result is a ragged rendition a ragged composition.

All of this adds up to part of e whole, however, and it is ings like this that add to the njoyment of the entire perormance. The concerts give you

---

Cir. (D 8,721)

This Clipping From

GLENS FALLS, N. Y.
TIMES

AUG 11 1953

Tanglewood Music Festival in Its Last Week; Famous Soloists Are Featured on Presentations

By BRUENNHILDE D. McCUNE

The Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., is in its last week. Under the direction of Charles Munch, programs have been given since July 11 in the theatre and in the large shed, which seats 6,000 people. Pierre Monteux, famous Frenchman, recently resigned conductor of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, and Leonard Bernstein, well-know American, have been guest conductors. Mr. Bernstein will again conduct concerts this coming week-end. Soloists have been Isaac Stern and Zino Francescatti, violinists; Gregor Piatigorsky, famous violincellist, and Jennie Tourel, soprano.

Those who enjoy fine music can have a wonderful time at Tanglewood by attending, not only the week-end programs on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons, but also the special events, such as the one scheduled for this coming Thursday evening, "Tanglewood on Parade." At this time there will be a concert in the Shed, with Munch and Bernstein conducting. Isaac Stern will play the Beethoven Violin Concerto. William Warfield, popular star of "Show Boat" and "Porgy and Bess," and Leontyne Price, now starring on Broadway as Bess, will be soloists in Act II of "Porgy and Bess," to be given with chorus and orchestra.

Picnic on Lawn

You may take a picnic supper and eat on the lawn, a custom which prevails at Tanglewood. At every concert a thousand or more listeners make themselves comfortable on the grass with blankets, pillows and good things to eat. To do this, the listener is required to buy only a general admission ticket.

Sunday afternoon the Shed concert presented Schubert's Fifth Symphony, an Adagio for Strings by Samuel Barber, Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote," "Concerto for Cello" by Darius Milhaud and Albert Roussel's "Bacchus et Ariane" ballet. It was a program full of interest and was played, of course, as only a first-rate orchestra like the Boston Symphony can play.

Of special interest to those in this locality who knew the late Louise Homer or who are acquainted with her daughter, Louise Homer Stires, of Lake George, was the Adagio written by Samuel Barber. Mr. Barber is a nephew of the late Mme. Homer and a cousin of Mrs. Stires. A graduate of Curtis Institute of Music, he has won many prizes for his musical creations, including the Pulitzer Prize and the American Prix de Rome. He is the first composer to achieve the distinction of winning the Pulitzer Prize twice. Mr. Barber's compositions include a symphony premiered by Serge Koussevitzky, works for strings and piano and songs.

The Adagio played Sunday appears as the slow movement in his String Quartet in B minor. Based upon a single melodic theme, it is musical from start to finish and romantic in that it possesses elegance of style. Mr. Barber, who was in the audience, was called to the podium by Mr. Munch to share in the enthusiastic reception of the piece.

Variations Played

Strauss' fantastic variations, "Don Quixote," were played instead of a symphony. This long composition, with an introduction, 10 variations and a finale, depicts episodes in the life of this lunatic knight. The three themes in the work represent Quixote, Dulcinea, the lady of his dreams, and Sancho Panza, his servant. Gregor Piatigorsky and Joseph De Pasquale, first viola of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, played the solo parts in the Variations. The two closing numbers were Darius Milhaud's Concerto, played by Mr. Piatigorsky and the orchestra, and the Ballet by Roussel.

Works to be performed this coming week-end are: Friday at 8:30 P. M., Brahm's Requiem with Lois Marshall, soprano, and William Warfield, baritone, as soloists and Charles Munch conducting. Saturday at 8:30 P. M., Sibelius, Symphony No. 4, Chavez, Sinfonia India, Brahms, Symphony No. 2 with Bernstein conducting; Sunday at 2:30 P. M., Schubert's Unfinished Symphony; Chabrier, Bourree Fantasque; Wagner, "A Siegfried Idyll" and excerpts from Act III of "Die Meistersinger"; Ravel, Piano Concerto for the Left Hand with Seymour Sipkin, soloist; and "La Valse." Mr. Munch will conduct.

A coast-to-coast radio network will broadcast part of the Sunday afternoon concert from 2:30 to 4 P. M. There has been no difficulty in securing seats for the concerts

---

Notes and Footnotes

Eagle 8/12

MUSIC RUNS in families at Tanglewood. Four husband and wife teams are at the music school or in the orchestra, and a set of twin brothers. Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Moore of Davidson, N.C., study clarinet and piano; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lawrie of Lake Geneva, Wis., attend general music classes, and Mr. L. is in opera coaching; and Mr. and Mrs. Georg A. Kleinfeld of Cleveland are orchestra players. Twins Robert and Rodney Pierce of Wichita, Kan., are studying oboe and french horn. Also, from Oslo, Norway, come Mr. and Mrs. Arne Johnstad to study organ with E. Power Biggs. Further, two years ago Leontyne Price sang at Tanglewood, and returns this year as Bess of "Porgy and Bess" to star in Tanglewood on Parade with her baritone husband William Warfield.

Observed in the chorus at Tanglewood is a singer who wears clerical garb and who, it turns out, is Rev. Michael Palotal, professor of choral music at Mount St. Joseph's College, Lackawanna, N.Y. He was born in Hungary, studied at a Roman Catholic seminary, received a B.A. from Budapest University and studied music at Budapest, Vienna and Salzburg, Austria. At Tanglewood he is studying choral conducting with Hugh Ross.

Cir. (D 26,042)

This Clipping From

HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM

AUG 11 1953

STIVAL GROUP—Charles Munch (third from left), music director of the and director of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, is shown me of the students enrolled from foreign countries: (left to right) Serge certmaster of the student orchestra under Leonard Bernstein; Lilly Hsia, a department headed by Boris Goldovsky; Mr. Munch; Juliette Rodrigue, ianist and organist enrolled in the Tanglewood Study Group; The Rev. Migary, now a professor at Mt. St. Joseph's College in Lacawann, N. Y. and ~~Hugh Ross and Herbert Blomstedt~~, Stockholm, Sweden, studying orches- l Government through a Smith-Mundt

---

Cir. (D 11,874)

This Clipping From

BRISTOL, CONN.
PRESS

AUG 11 1953

Music For Everybody

By Dr. Sigmund Spaeth

During the month of August a great many Americans will be spending their time at the various music festivals of Europe, while a still larger number will attend those available in their own country. It is not difficult to explain the fascination that European summer music has always had for American tourists—a fascination which has grown in proportion as the facilities and conveniences of travel developed.

Even a well known musical work, perhaps in a fairly routine performance, takes on an added glamor when presented in historic surroundings, with natural beauties and local traditions to enhance the atmosphere. Actually many of the foreign festivals make a point of producing real novelties and maintain high standards even in the conventional repertoire of opera and the concert stage.

There is, however, unquestionably an extra thrill in hearing Mozart's "Don Giovanni," "Figaro" or "The Magic Flute" in Salzburg, the city of his birth, regardless of how familiar these masterpieces may be to most of the listeners. Wagner's dramas achieve a new importance in the Bayreuth Festival Theatre, which the composer himself designed, with perfect acoustics and the artistic asset of a completely invisible orchestra and conductor. The liberties taken by his grandsons in their production are accepted as legitimately controversial, and there is enthusiastic approval of the American singers who have assumed more and more of the leading Wagnerian roles.

The famous lion of Lucerne forms an almost unique background to concerts of all kinds, with a constant awareness of the beautiful lake and mountains in the distance and the handy proximity of a Casino where one can gamble or enjoy the simpler pleasures of Tyrolean folk-music. Edinburgh's historic castle looks down each summer on a series of important concerts and operas, while staging within its own walls the exciting military pageant known as "Tattoo." Rome lends a special significance to Italian opera by presenting its masterpieces in the ruins of the Baths of Caracalla, containing perhaps the largest stage in the world. Venice, Stockholm, Prades and other places, large and small, achieve new fame in the summer months by their emphasis on music, usually marked by some elements of individuality.

As competition to such alluring prospects, supplemented by the basic satisfaction of European travel in general, we can now offer more and more summer music of real significance, often in gorgeous natural settings which may compensate for a necessary lack of historical background. The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood has acquired an atmosphere of its own, and this is true also in varying degrees of Colorado's Aspen, Red Rocks and Central City, the Hollywood Bowl, the New York Stadium, the Cincinnati Zoo, Chicagoland and other centres of summer music. We may not have a Salzburg or a Bayreuth as yet, but we do have the resources, the equipment and the audiences for an unlimited development of Music Festivals far beyond the traditional summer months.

* * *

Ted Fetter, who now produces the Hit Parade television program, with the problem of staging the same songs differently each week, was once a lyric writer for Vernon Duke and other composers.

* * *

The Question Box

(Q) "Is Flotow's opera, "Stradella," available today either as a complete score or in part?"—Leo Kohn, Columbus, Ga.

(A) This obscure opera by the composer of "Martha" might be found in the Library of Congress, but is certainly not in general circulation. G. Schirmer published a separate duet, "On the Left Bank of the Tiber," but this was discontinued in 1946. Isolated copies may still be in existence.

(Questions may be sent to Sigmund Spaeth in care of this newspaper.)

* * *

Two of the operas likely to be televised by NBC next season are Debussy's "Pelleas and Melisande" and the Richard Strauss "Salome." Elaine Malbin is mentioned as the probable interpreter of the daughter of Herodias, at the moment dancing across the screen in the person of Rita Hayworth.

* * *

Ernest Gold, a Hollywood composer who has had his share of acceptances and rejections, gives the subject a new twist in this advertisement: "Is your music being neglected by conductors and publishers? Are you at a loss to know what to do with it? If so, have Cameo Music Reproductions do your music printing for you. You will be delighted with how smart your den will look when you paper the walls with your compositions. Only Cameo Music Reproductions has the know-how to give your music that interior decorator look.

* * *

In the screen version of "From Here to Eternity," Frank Sinatra plays his first straight acting role, lifting his voice only for an occasional improvised snatch of song. At that he steals the picture from such experienced film actors as Montgomery Clift, Burt Lancaster and Deborah Kerr.

* * *

A new television show called "Name That Tune" is getting a big mail, but makes the mistake of presenting the melodies to be guessed in too elaborate arrangements. Harry (Stop the Music) Salter is the conductor. Hoagy Carmichael also suffered recently from a bad arrangement of his "I Get Along Without You Very Well," containing an overdose of clarinets.

* * *

Three of the members of "The Golden Day Four," current New York champion barber shop quartet, are also in Robert Shaw's Collegiate Chorale, thus setting a new standard for the more popular type of singing.

Betty Johnson, a Charlotte, N. C., girl, who looks and sings considerably like Dinah Shore, is being built up to New York stardom. Her voice is likely to become a familiar one in the near future.

* * *

Today's Quotation: Thomas Carlyle: "The meaning of music goes deep. Who is there that, in logical words, can express the effect music has on us? A kind of inarticulate, unfathomable speech, which leads us to the edge of the infinite and lets us for moments gaze into it."

Copyright 1953, General Features Corp.

New Opera, Cantata At Berkshire Benefit

Bost Herald 8/12

The world premieres of "Bad Boys in School," a one-act opera by Jan Meyerowitz, and of "A Little Boy Lost," a cantata by Allen Sapp, will be features of "Tanglewood On Parade," the gala benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

These works will be performed, starting at 6 p.m. tomorrow by students of the Berkshire Music Center as part of a simultaneous demonstration by each of the school's five departments—orchestra, chamber music, opera, chorus and study group—which precedes a concert by the Boston Symphony in the Shed, led by Charles Munch and Leonard Bernstein and featuring Isaac Stern as soloist in a Beethoven concerto, and scenes from Act II of George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," with William Warfield and Leontyne Price, assisted by the Festival Chorus.

[278]

Union 8/12

* * *

The president of the New York Zoological Society stated in "This Week" that vandalism was curbed in the Bronx Zoo simply by making the surroundings more beautiful. He maintains that by improving the appearance of the grounds vandalism and carelessness all but disappear.

We'd like to agree with Mr. Osborn but after a visit to Tanglewood, surely the most beautiful spot in the Berkshires, we can't agree that beauty inspires neatness.

Following Sunday's concert, where thousands of music-lovers sat in front of the shed listening to the finest artists produce the best music, the green lawns were turned into an ugly mass of litter after two hours.

The caretakers of the grounds must be a tough team of men if they refrain from violence after cleaning up thousands of paper containers, newspapers, programs, remains of lunches.

6—The Berkshire Evening Eagle, Tuesday, Aug. 11, 1953

The Lively Arts

By Milton R. Bass

* * *

THE TANGLEWOOD student concerts are fascinating to attend as is attested by the large crowds on weekday nights. It is a pleasure to watch these intense young musicians who obviously subsist on music alone for the weeks they are here.

The wonderful thing about the student concerts is the air of relaxation in the audience as compared to the tenseness of the orchestra. It is just the opposite for the main concerts. There you have 100 musicians completely at ease while a nervous audience sits on the edge of its seats. It's sort of nice to be able to just sit there and listen to the music and watch the performers and applaud everybody no matter how good or bad they might be. (Not that any of them are really bad).

Most of the playing is highly competent and there are moments of beauty and grandeur that almost seem to approach the musicianship of the BSO itself, but there are also moments when everything seems to be at sixes and sevens. This is especially true when one of the original compositions of someone in the group is being played.

* * *

JAY ROSENFELD, the music critic of The Eagle, attributes this to sheer loss of nerve on the part of the young musicians. When you give them something they know, like Beethoven's Fifth, he says, they tear into it with utter abandon and devil take the hindmost.

But when you give them a modern composition with its peculiar rhythmic combinations and atonal qualities, they are extremely unsure of themselves. They hear one of the other musicians play something that doesn't sound just right and rather than make a mistake themselves, they sit this dance out, holding the instrument in position but not using it. It's a case of the troops being wonderfully equipped but being too scared to use their firepower potential. The result is a ragged rendition of a ragged composition.

All of this adds up to part of the whole, however, and it is things like this that add to the enjoyment of the entire performance. The concerts give you an opportunity to hear many things that cannot be heard elsewhere, they give the musicians a tremendous lift to perform before a large, appreciative audience and they allow young American talent a chance to come into its own. We are extremely lucky in this area to have all this on our doorstep.

Cir. (D 26,042)

This Clipping From
HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM

AUG 11 1953

TANGLEWOOD MUSIC FESTIVAL GROUP—Charles Munch (third from left), music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and director of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, is shown welcoming to the campus some of the students enrolled from foreign countries: (left to right) Serge Blanc, Paris, France, is concertmaster of the student orchestra under Leonard Bernstein; Lilly Hsia, Shanghai, China of the opera department headed by Boris Goldovsky; Mr. Munch; Juliette Rodrigue, LaChute, Quebec, Canada, pianist and organist enrolled in the Tanglewood Study Group; The Rev. Michael Palotai, Budapest, Hungary, now a professor at Mt. St. Joseph's College in Lacawann, N. Y. and a choral-conducting pupil of Hugh Ross; and Herbert Blomstedt, Stockholm, Sweden, studying orchestral conducting in the United States on invitation of the Federal Government through a Smith-Mundt Award.

---

well-kn... ...een guest co... ...stein will again ... certs this coming week-... have been Isaac Stern ... Francescatti, violinists; Gr... tigorsky, famous violincell... Jennie Tourel, soprano.

Those who enjoy fine musi... have a wonderful time at Tan... wood by attending not only ... week-end programs on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons, but also the special events, such as the one scheduled for this coming Thursday evening, "Tanglewood on Parade." At this time there will be a concert in the Shed, with Munch and Bernstein conducting. Isaac Stern will play the Beethoven Violin Concerto. William Warfield, popular star of "Show Boat" and "Porgy and Bess," and Leontyne Price, now starring on ...

...ed con-... ...ert's Fifth ...gio for Strings ... Richard Strauss' "Concerto for Cello" ... Milhaud and Albert Roussel's "Bacchus et Ariane" ballet. It ... a program full of interest and was played, of course, as only a first-rate orchestra like the Boston Symphony can play.

Of special interest to those in this locality who knew the late Louise Homer or who are acquainted with her daughter, Louise Homer Stires, of Lake George, was the Adagio written by Samuel Barber. Mr. Barber is a nephew of the late Mme. Homer and a cousin of Mrs. Stires. A graduate of Curtis Institute of Music, he has won many prizes for his musical creations, including the Pulitzer Prize and the American Prix de Rome. He is the first composer to achieve the distinction of winning the Pulitzer Prize twice. Mr. Barber's compositions include a symphony premiered by Serge Koussevitzky, works for strings and piano and songs.

The Adagio played Sunday appears as the slow movement in his String Quartet in B minor. Based upon a single melodic theme it is musical from start to finish and romantic in that it possesses elegance of style. Mr. Barber, who was in the audience, was called to the podium by Mr. Munch to share in the enthusiastic reception of the piece.

Variations Played

Strauss's fantastic variations "Don Quixote" were played instead of a symphony. This long composition, with an introduction, 10 variations and a finale, depicts episodes in the life of this lunatic knight. The three themes in the work represent Quixote, Dulcinea, the lady of his dreams, and Sancho Panza, his servant. Gregor Piatigorsky and Joseph De Pasquale, first viola of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, played the solo parts in the Variations. The two closing numbers were Darius Milhaud's Concerto, played by Mr. Piatigorsky and the orchestra, and the Ballet by Roussel.

Works to be performed this coming week-end are: Friday at 8:30 P. M., Brahm's Requiem with Lois Marshall, soprano, and William Warfield, baritone, as soloists and Charles Munch conducting. Saturday at 8:30 P. M. Sibelius Symphony No. 4, Chavez Sinfonia India, Brahms Symphony No. 2 with Bernstein conducting. Sunday at 2:30 P. M., Schubert's Unfinished Symphony, Chabrier Bourree Fantasque, Wagner, "A Siegfried Idyl" and excerpts from Act III of "Die Meistersinger," Ravel, Piano Concerto for the Left Hand with Seymour Sipkin, soloist; and "La Valse." Mr. Munch will conduct.

A coast-to-coast radio network will broadcast part of the Sunday afternoon concert from 2:30 to 4 P. M. There has been no difficulty in securing seats for the concerts ...

Notes and Footnotes

Eagle 8/12

MUSIC RUNS in families at Tanglewood. Four husband and wife teams are at the music school or in the orchestra, and a set of twin brothers. Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Moore of Davidson, N.C., study clarinet and piano; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lawrie of Lake Geneva, Wis., attend general music classes, and Mr. L. is in opera coaching; and Mr. and Mrs. Georg A. Kleinfeld of Cleveland are orchestra players. Twins Robert and Rodney Pierce of Wichita, Kan., are studying oboe and french horn. Also, from Oslo, Norway, come Mr. and Mrs. Arne Johnstad to study organ with E. Power Biggs. Further, two years ago Leontyne Price sang at Tanglewood, and returns this year as Bess of "Porgy and Bess" to star in Tanglewood on Parade with her baritone husband William Warfield.

Observed in the chorus at Tanglewood is a singer who wears clerical garb and who, it turns out, is Rev. Michael Palotai, professor of choral music at Mount St. Joseph's College, Lackawanna, N.Y. He was born in Hungary, studied at a Roman Catholic seminary, received a B.A. from Budapest University and studied music at Budapest, Vienna and Salzburg, Austria. At Tanglewood he is studying choral conducting with Hugh Ross.

...ences ...development of ...festivals far beyond the ...itional summer months.

* * *

...ed Fetter, who now produces ... Hit Parade television pro... with the problem of stag... the same songs differently ... week, was once a lyric... for Vernon Duke and ... composers.

* * *

...uestion Box

(Q) "Is Flotow's opera, 'Stradella,' available today either as a complete score or in part?"—Leo Kohn, Columbus, Ga.

(A) This obscure opera by the composer of "Martha" might be found in the Library of Congress, but is certainly not in general circulation. G. Schirmer published a separate duet, "On the Left Bank of the Tiber," but this was discontinued in 1946. Isolated copies may still be in existence.

(Questions may be sent to Sigmund Spaeth in care of this newspaper.)

* * *

Two of the operas likely to be televised by NBC next season are Debussy's "Pelleas and Melisande" and the Richard Strauss "Salome." Elaine Malbin is mentioned as the probable interpreter of the daughter of Herodias, at the moment dancing across the screen in the person of Rita Hayworth.

* * *

Ernest Gold, a Hollywood composer who has had his share of acceptances and rejections, gives the subject a new twist in this advertisement: "Is your music being neglected by conductors and publishers? Are you at a loss to know what to do with it? If so, have Cameo Music Reproductions do your music printing for you. You will be delighted with how smart your den will look when you paper the walls with your compositions. Only Cameo Music Reproductions has the know-how to give your music that interior decorator look.

* * *

In the screen version of "From Here to Eternity," Frank Sinatra plays his first straight acting role, lifting his voice only for an occasional improvised snatch of song. At that he steals the picture from such experienced film actors as Montgomery Clift, Burt Lancaster and Deborah Kerr.

* * *

A new television show called "Name That Tune" is getting a big mail, but makes the mistake of presenting the melodies to be guessed in too elaborate arrangements. Harry (Stop the Music) Salter is the conductor. Hoagy Carmichael also suffered recently from a bad arrangement of his "I Get Along Without You Very Well," containing an overdose of clarinets.

* * *

Three of the members of "The Golden Day Four," current New York champion barber shop quartet, are also in Robert Shaw's Collegiate Chorale, thus setting a new standard for the more popular type of singing.

Betty Johnson, a Charlotte, N. C., girl, who looks and sings considerably like Dinah Shore, is being built up to New York stardom. Her voice is likely to become a familiar one in the near future.

* * *

Today's Quotation: Thomas Carlyle: "The meaning of music goes deep. Who is there that, in logical words, can express the effect music has on us? A kind of inarticulate, unfathomable speech, which leads us to the edge of the infinite and lets us for moments gaze into it."

Copyright 1953, General Features Corp.

...musical work, ...ps in a fairly routine performance, takes on an added glamor when presented in historic surroundings, with natural beauties and local traditions to enhance the atmosphere. Actually many of the foreign festivals make a point of producing real novelties and maintain high standards even in the conventional repertoire of opera and the concert stage.

There is, however, unquestionably an extra thrill in hearing Mozart's "Don Giovanni," "Figaro" or "The Magic Flute" in Salzburg, the city of his birth, regardless of how familiar these masterpieces may be to most of the listeners. Wagner's dramas achieve a new importance in the Bayreuth Festival Theatre, which the composer himself designed, with perfect acoustics and the artistic asset of a completely invisible orchestra and conductor. The liberties taken by his grandsons in their production are accepted as legitimately controversial, and there is enthusiastic approval of the American singers who have assumed more and more of the leading Wagnerian roles.

The famous lion of Lucerne forms an almost unique background to concerts of all kinds, with a constant awareness of the beautiful lake and mountains in the distance and the handy proximity of a Casino where one can gamble or enjoy the simpler pleasures of Tyrolean folk-music. Edinburgh's historic castle looks down each summer on a series of important concerts and operas, while staging within its own walls the exciting military pageant known as "Tattoo." Rome lends a special significance to Italian opera by presenting its masterpieces in the ruins of the Baths of Caracalla, containing perhaps the largest stage in the world. Venice, Stockholm, Prades and other places, large and small, achieve new fame in the summer months by their emphasis on music, usually marked by some elements of individuality.

As competition to such alluring prospects, supplemented by the basic satisfaction of European travel in general, we can now offer more and more summer music of real significance, often in gorgeous natural settings which may compensate for a necessary lack of historical background. The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood has acquired an atmosphere of its own, and ...

New Opera, Cantata At Berkshire Benefit

Bost Herald 8/12

The world premieres of "Bad Boys in School," a one-act opera by Jan Meyerowitz, and of "A Little Boy Lost," a cantata by Allen Sapp, will be features of "Tanglewood On Parade," the gala benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

These works will be performed, starting at 6 p.m. tomorrow by students of the Berkshire Music Center as part of a simultaneous demonstration by each of the school's five departments—orchestra, chamber music, opera, chorus and study group—which precedes a concert by the Boston Symphony in the Shed, led by Charles Munch and Leonard Bernstein and featuring Isaac Stern as soloist in a Beethoven concerto, and scenes from Act II of George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," with William Warfield and Leontyne Price, assisted by the Festival Chorus.

[278]

Union 8/12

The president of the New York Zoological Society stated in "This Week" that vandalism was curbed in the Bronx Zoo simply by making the surroundings more beautiful. He maintains that by improving the appearance of the grounds vandalism and carelessness all but disappear.

We'd like to agree with Mr. Osborn but after a visit to Tanglewood, surely the most beautiful spot in the Berkshires, we can't agree that beauty inspires neatness.

Following Sunday's concert, where thousands of music-lovers sat in front of the shed listening to the finest artists produce the best music, the green lawns were turned into an ugly mass of litter after two hours.

The caretakers of the grounds must be a tough team of men if they refrain from violence after cleaning up thousands of paper containers, newspapers, programs, remains of lunches.

Cir. (D 13,075)

This Clipping From
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT

AUG 11 1953

Students From 41 of States, 11 Nations, at Tanglewood

Students from 41 states and 11 foreign countries are enrolled this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, this country's only school of music maintained by a major orchestra. Established by the Boston Symphony orchestra in 1940, when Serge Koussevitzky was its director, the school is now in its 11th six-week session, which will extend to the end of the Berkshire Music Festival on Aug. 16.

400 Enrolled

The enrollment of 400 students represents a true cross-section of advanced music students, teachers and professional musicians who work in the divisions of orchestra playing and conducting, chamber music, and opera under a distinguished faculty of 36 which includes such outstanding musicians as Aaron Copland, Leonard Bernstein, Carlos Chavez, Boris Goldovsky, Hugh Ross, Lukas Foss, Irving Fine, Paul Ulanowsky, Seymour Lipkin, William Kroll, Richard Burgin and first chair players of the Boston orchestra.

The symphony's music director, Charles Munch, is director of the school, and Ralph Berkowitz is dean. A special department, the Tanglewood Stury group, set up last year for amateurs of music who wish to spend their vacations in the absorption of music, continues this year under the leadership of Ingolf Dahl, with an enrollment of 105, of whom 38 are spending the full six weeks, 12 four weeks, and 55 two weeks.

New York state leads the registration, with more than 100 students. Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Ohio are represented by 90 students. Nineteen each come from Connecticut and New Jersey; 18 each from Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and Washington, D. C. As a result of the Boston Symphony orchestra's first trans-continental tour last spring, when auditions were held for the first time in 10 cities on its route, enrollment from California increased to 10 students. From Salt Lake City and Provo, Utah, have come five pupils. Nine Canadians are studying at Tanglewood this summer, mostly from Toronto and Montreal where the symphony played. The New Orleans orchestral auditions produced seven students now on the Berkshire campus, and five from Florida.

19 From Abroad

Nineteen foreign students are enrolled. Besides the Canadians, Mexico, France, Israel, Sweden, Japan, Korea, Holland, Bolivia, Latvia and China have representatives. Serge Blanc, of Paris, s concertmaster of the student orchestra. From Pusan, South Korea, is John Kim, who is president and conductor of the Republic of Korea Naval Symphony Orchestra and Chorus. A composition pupil with Mexico's composer-conductor Carlos Chavez is Tossi Ichiyanagi of Tokyo.

As the result of seeing in Shanghai in 1950 a U. S. State department film on Tanglewood, Miss Lily Hsia is now a member of the opera department. On invitation of the federal government through a Smith-Mundt award to study conducting is Herbert Blomstedt of Stockholm, Sweden. Fernado Illanes is a chorus student from Bolivia; Johannes Emmen-Riedel is a Study group student from The Hague. George Mester and Alga Zilboorg of Mexico City are studying violin and 'cello. Pnina God is a trumpet player. Usiahu Wiesel is a student 'cellist, both from Israel. Endel Kalam, of Latvia, now resident in Indianapolis, s a viola player.

Ranging in age from 17 to 65, the majority of students are between 19 and 24. The 75 per cent in the full course are highly talented since competition was keen for the tuition scholarships awarded for the second time annually to those who play in the orchestra and chamber music groups or lead in the choral or opera departments. Most of the students live at the Lenox Preparatory school and Wheatleigh, a nearby estate owned by the orchestra. For recreation they swim and boat in Stockbridge bowl, the lake whose shoreline includes the edge of the Tanglewood estate.

Many Vocations

Students at Tanglewood include many vocations. For the first time in the Berkshire Music Center's 11 years the armed services are officially represented, by Warrant Officer John Norris, of Arlington, Va., assistant conductor of the U. S. Navy band, a student of orchestral conducting under Leonard Bernstein.

D. Robert Smith, from the faculty of Bates college, Lewiston, Me., is a student; also Elwood W. Hill, director of music at Bradford Junior college, Bradford, and Mrs. Willa Taylor, a professor at the Pennsylvania State college.

Three husband-and-wife teams are included. Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Moore, of Davidson, N. C., take advance study in clarinet and piano. Mrs. Charles Lawie, Lake Geneva, Wisc., attends general music classes while her husband is busy with Boris Goldovsky in the opera coaching class. Mr. and Mrs. Georg A. Kleinfeld of Cleveland are orchestra players. Twin brothers, Robert and Rodney Pierce of Wichita, Kan., are receiving advanced training on the French horn and oboe from senior members of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

The students drawn from four continents to Tanglewood by the fame of its staff and the hope that a career might be launched from this coveted study include Theresa Green of Baltimore, a three-time winner of the Arthur Godfrey talent scout award; and Sara Mae Endich, an employe of the advertising department of the European edition of the New York Herald-Tribune, here on annual vacation.

Ex-Students 4,217

Former students now scattered through the U. S., Canada, South America, Europe and Australia, many of whom have taken prominent places in the musical life of their communities, total 4,217.

Ten percent of the membership of all major U.S. symphony orchestras is composed of former Tanglewood students, and conductors who have graduated there include Leonard Bernstein, Thor Johnson (Cincinnati), Walter Hendl (Dallas), Eleazar de Carvalho (Rio de Janeiro), Lukas Foss, Robert Zeller, Herman Herz (Duluth), Robert Whitney (Louisville), Richard Bales (National Gallery, Washington), Thomas Schippers, Lorin Maazel, Alexander Leslie (Springfield).

The roster of former students at the Metropolitan opera includes Frank Guarerra, Mack Harrell, Mildred Miller, Anne Bollinger, Paul Knowles, Paula Leachner, and Heidi Kral (Toledo) and Robert McFerrin (St. Louis), winners of the 1953 auditions of the air. New York City Opera company graduates from Tanglewood include Ellen Faull, David Lloyd, Patricia Neway, Mac Morgan, James Pease, David Poleri, Robert Rounseville and Frances Yeend. Mario Lanza of Hollywood was a student in 1940-41. Leontyne Price, the Bess of Broadway's "Porgy and Bess", was a singer in the summer of 1951.

Choral Conductors Too

Choral conductors who are Tanglewood alumni include James Aliferis (University of Minnesota); Jacob Avshalomoff (Columbia University); Lorna Cooke de Varon (New England Conservatory, Boston).

Composers Norman dello Joio, Alan Hovaness, Ulysses Kay, Ned Rorem, Peter Mannin, Jurriaan Andriessen have profited from summers at Tanglewood; and instrumentalists number among them Jacob Krachmalnick, concertmaster of the Philadelphia orchestra; Leonard Pennario, Seymour Lipkin, Norman Carol, Constance Keene, Aldo Parisot and Julius Katchen.

Tanglewood's opera department has given the American premieres of Benjamin Britten's "Peter Grimes" and "Albert Herring," Mozart's "Idiomeneo" and Jacques Ibert's "Le Roi d'Yvetot," and this year, through a grant of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, has commissioned young composers Leonard Rosenan, of New York city, and Louis Mennini, of Rochester, N. Y. to write one-act operas there this summer for performance in 1954.

Cir. (D 74,995) (S 59,910)

This Clipping From
BRIDGEPORT, CONN.
POST

AUG 11 1953

This Clipping From WATERVILLE, ME.
SENTINEL

AUG 11 1953

AUG 11 1953

These Days

—By George E. Sokolsky

A Useful Grant

The Rockefeller Foundation has announced that it has voted a grant of $200,000 to the New York City Center of Mu and Drama. This is a valuable cultural aid, supporting an institution that needs to be preserved because it gives to young Americans an opportunity to develop themselves in the arts of expression. Unlike nearly all European countries, the United States provides few opportunities for young artists in all the arts to go through a period of apprenticeship under great masters. It is for this reason that so many talented young people are forced to go to Europe for their training.

It is a curious commentary upon our way of thinking that at a time when we are pouring billions of dollars into foreign countries for the preservation of their cultures, we are permitting our own cultural institutions to decay for lack of funds. Few museums are safe today. There are no longer any Carnegies or Fricks or Otto Kahns available to assist our art museums and libraries. There are no Vanderbilts to come to the support of the Metropolitan Opera. Every privately-endowed college and university is worried about its finances and some are very frightened by the prospect. A completely integrated university, maintaining all departments of learning and providing time and facilities for research by

George Sokolsky

From every standpoint, it would be preferable if our universities, museums, orchestras, schools and other voluntary institutions were continued to be supported by donations from the people as they always have been in American life. Yet, it does come to mind that when billions of dollars, provided by the American taxpayer, are being used to support cultural activities in Europe and Asia, why are our own institutions being permitted to wither on the vine? We finance UNESCO, Point Four, International Students Exchange, libraries and all sorts of activities in the foreign cultural field.

A new committee of Congress has been appointed, under the chairmanship of Rep. Carroll Reece, to investigate the general activities of private Foundations. A similar committee, under the chairmanship of Eugene Cox, had begun to look into this subject, but Cox died and the committee's work was abortive. There is no secrecy about the work of any of the Foundations because they issue reports. The committee's activities therefore will be to analyze these reports in detail and to try to find a pattern of expenditures. While, in these days, emphasis will be laid on subversives, if any, who gain an advantage, which they ought not to have, the taxpa would be interested in an an sis of the relationship betw expenditures within the Un States and abroad.

It would be an error to jump to conclusions on this subject with all the data being carefully studied. It may be found that the Foun tions meet all the criticisms level at them; it may be that they assuming that as they control money, they are entitled to foll their own judgment. Yet, the fact that the Foundations are reliev of taxes on the single assumpti that their expenditures will be the public interest. Whatever t outcome, the Reece committee tends to produce the facts, to a alyze them and to make recomme dations to Congress for legislati on the subject.

(Copyright, 1953, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

This RAVEN
RECORD & COURIER-TRIBUNE

AUG 11 1953

Cir. (D 90,282)

This Clipping From
NEW HAVEN, CONN.
REGISTER

This Clipping From
NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y.
GAZETTE

Public Events

Tonight

- 5.30—Smorgasbord supper sponsored by Heart of the Berkshires Grange Ladies' Club, East Housatonic Street Hall.
- 8.40—Elmer Rice's "Street Scene." Festival Theatre, Lenox.
- 8.45—Comedy, "Affairs of of State." Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.
- 8.45—Opening of "Dracula," starring Doris Jean Bryden. Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Theatre.
- 9.00—Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival. East Lee.

Tomorrow

- 2.30—Anna Russell, comedienne. Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.
- 4.00—Opera scenes in formal garden for reserved seat and box holders. Tanglewood on Parade, Lenox.
- 4.00—Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival. East Lee.
- 5.45—Tanglewood on Parade, Lenox.

Box Holders Aid Fund for Musicians

Eagle

Area Residents Offer Support of Tanglewood Benefit

8/12

Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky is heading the community committee for Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music School to be held tomorrow. Mrs. Bruce Sanborn of Lenox is vice-chairman and Mrs. George W. Edman, secretary.

Honorary members of the committee are Mrs. Henry B. Cabot of Boston, wife of the president of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, Mrs. William N. Bullard of Lenox; Mrs. Lewis Perry of Boston, Ma [illegible] ert T. Capeless and S [illegible] O. Conte.

Berkshire County representatives on the county committee are M [illegible] Benjamin N. Bowers, Mrs. D [illegible] F. McPherson, Mrs. La [illegible] K. Miller, Miss Margo Miller, M [illegible] John H. Rice, Mrs. Jay C. R [illegible] feld, Mrs. Stanley Simkin, and [illegible] J. Blau, all of Pittsfield; M [illegible] Crane, Dalton; M [illegible] and Mrs. Albert S [illegible] Mrs. Joseph [illegible] Gladys Greene, [illegible] Mrs. Freder [illegible] L. Senior a [illegible] Stokes, Lenox [illegible] rick and M [illegible] Stockbridge;

Also Mrs. W [illegible] rett, Great Ba [illegible] Davie Lloyd, L [illegible] Homer, South [illegible] James W. Hu [illegible] Karl Weston, W [illegible]

Boxes are being reserved [illegible] communities by [illegible] contribute to the fund for scholarships for talented [illegible] who cannot afford [illegible] tion. Boxes have [illegible] residents in Pittsfield, [illegible] Lee, Richmond and S [illegible] the Pittsfield Little Symphony Orchestra. Five boxes have been donated for the use of Berkshire Music Center students by summer residents unable to be present. Such reservations may be made at the Tanglewood box office.

Allard and Droeghmans Retire from Symphony

Raymond Allard, first bassoon, and cellist Hyppolyte Droeghmans will retire from the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the conclusion of the Berkshire Festival Sunday.

They were honored at a luncheon at Tanglewood, Lenox, yesterday, following morning rehearsal.

Pasquale Cardillo was master of ceremonies. Allard and Droeghmans were presented gold watches by Charles Munch, conductor. Speakers included violinist Harry Ellis Dickson; Thomas D. Perry, assistant manager of the orchestra, and Dr. Lewis Perry, trustee.

Allard, born at Sin-le-Noble, France, in 1898, joined the Boston Symphony in 1922. He lives in Brookline. Droeghmans, born in Liege, Belgium, in 1884, has been with the orchestra since 1927. He lives in Newton Center.

'Tanglewood on Parade' for Benefit Tomorrow

With Isaac Stern, violinist; soprano Leontyne Price and her husband, baritone William Warfield as stars, the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be held at Tanglewood tomorrow evening.

There will be demonstrations by every department of the Summer school of music maintained [illegible] Boston Symphony Orchestra [illegible] lawn supper and a gala evening concert by the orchestra followed by the drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

Isaac Stern will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D major with the Boston Symphony, Charles Munch conducting, at the evening concert beginning at 8:15 in the Music Shed. [illegible] the Sym [illegible] George Gershwin's [illegible] 2, w [illegible] of th [illegible] and co [illegible] n. Th [illegible] featu [illegible] Warfie

Lois
Tangle
William
Brahm
ton Sy Munch
Festival
ing, Au of the B sic Shed

"Tan
Parad

With I ano Le Broadway' er husban field as st
wood on P
Berkshire
the hom orchestra's
Mass.,
Festivities
every depa school of m chestra, a evening co
from 6 p.
by the draw dancing on

Isaac Ste
ven's Concer
Boston Sym
Munch, 'Mus
at the even mences at seat Music S conduct the
"Water Musi
George G
Bess", Act occupy the cert program
by Leonard'
Berkshire M classes.

The gala
4:00 p. m.
Gardens (for seat patrons
5:45 p. m
Boris Goldov
Center's ope
6:00 p. m strations by shire Music
7:15 p.
supper, con
8:15 p. m
cert, Bosto
11:00 p.
Prizes by concert
Waltzing

Cir. (D 13,075)

This Clipping From
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT

AUG 11 1953

Students From 41 of States, 11 Nations, at Tanglewood

Students from 41 states and 11 foreign countries are enrolled this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, this country's only school of music maintained by a major orchestra. Established by the Boston Symphony orchestra in 1940, when Serge Koussevitzky was its director, the school is now in its 11th six-week session, which will extend to the end of the Berkshire Music Festival on Aug. 16.

400 Enrolled

The enrollment of 400 students represents a true cross-section of advanced music students, teachers and professional musicians, who work in the divisions of orchestra playing and conducting, chamber music, and opera under a distinguished faculty of 36 which includes such outstanding musicians as Aaron Copland, Leonard Bernstein, Carlos Chavez, Boris Goldovsky, Hugh Ross, Lukas Foss, Irving Fine, Paul Ulanowsky, Seymour Lipkin, William Kroll, Richard Burgin and first chair players of the Boston orchestra.

The symphony's music director, Charles Munch, is director of the school, and Ralph Berkowitz is dean. A special department, the Tanglewood Stury group, set up last year for amateurs of music who wish to spend their vacations in the absorption of music, continues this year under the leadership of Ingolf Dahl, with an enrollment of 105, of whom 38 are spending the full six weeks, 12 four weeks, and 55 two weeks.

New York state leads the registration, with more than 100 students. Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Ohio are represented by 90 students. Nineteen each come from Connecticut and New Jersey; 18 each from Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and Washington, D. C. As a result of the Boston Symphony orchestra's first trans-continental tour last spring, when auditions were held for the first time in 10 cities on its route, enrollment from California increased to 10 students. From Salt Lake City and Provo, Utah, have come five pupils. Nine Canadians are studying at Tanglewood this summer, mostly from Toronto and Montreal where the symphony played. The New Orleans orchestral auditions produced seven students now on the Berkshire campus, and five from Florida.

19 From Abroad

Nineteen foreign students are enrolled. Besides the Canadians, Mexico, France, Israel, Sweden, Japan, Korea, Holland, Bolivia, Latvia and China have representatives. Serge Blanc, of Paris, s concertmaster of the student orchestra. From Pusan, South Korea, is John Kim, who is president and conductor of the Republic of Korea Naval Symphony Orchestra and Chorus. A composition pupil with Mexico's composer-conductor Carlos Chavez is Tossi Ichiyanagi of Tokyo.

As the result of seeing in Shanghai in 1950 a U. S. State department film on Tanglewood, Miss Lily Hsia is now a member of the opera department. On invitation of the federal government through a Smith-Mundt award to study conducting is Herbert Blomstedt of Stockholm, Sweden. Fernado Illanes is a chorus student from Bolivia; Johannes Emmen-Riedel is a Study group student from The Hague. George Mester and Alga Zilboorg of Mexico City are studying violin and 'cello. Pnina God is a trumpet player, Usiahu Wiesel is a student 'cellist, both from Israel. Endel Kalam, of Latvia, now resident in Indianapolis, s a viola player.

Ranging in age from 17 to 65, the majority of students are between 19 and 24. The 75 per cent in the full course are highly talented since competition was keen for the tuition scholarships awarded for the second time annually to those who play in the orchestra and chamber music groups or lead in the choral or opera departments. Most of the students live at the Lenox Preparatory school and Wheatleigh, a nearby estate owned by the orchestra. For recreation they swim and boat in Stockbridge bowl, the lake whose shoreline includes the edge of the Tanglewood estate.

Many Vocations

Students at Tanglewood include many vocations. For the first time in the Berkshire Music Center's 11 years the armed services are officially represented, by Warrant Officer John Norris, of Arlington, Va., assistant conductor of the U. S. Navy band, a student of orchestral conducting under Leonard Bernstein.

D. Robert Smith, from the faculty of Bates college, Lewiston, Me., is a student; also Elwood W. Hill, director of music at Bradford Junior college, Bradford, and Mrs. Willa Taylor, a professor at the Pennsylvania State college.

Three husband-and-wife teams are included. Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Moore, of Davidson, N. C., take advance study in clarinet and piano. Mrs. Charles Lawie, Lake Geneva, Wisc., attends general music classes while her husband is busy with Boris Goldovsky in the opera coaching class. Mr. and Mrs. Georg A. Kleinfeld of Cleveland are orchestra players. Twin brothers, Robert and Rodney Pierce of Wichita, Kan., are receiving advanced training on the French horn and oboe from senior members of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

The students drawn from four continents to Tanglewood by the fame of its staff and the hope that a career might be launched from this coveted study include Theresa Green of Baltimore, a three-time winner of the Arthur Godfrey talent scout award; and Sara Mae Endich, an employe of the advertising department of the European edition of the New York Herald-Tribune, here on annual vacation.

Ex-Students 4,217

Former students now scattered through the U. S., Canada, South America, Europe and Australia, many of whom have taken prominent places in the musical life of their communities, total 4,217.

Ten percent of the membership of all major U.S. symphony orchestras is composed of former Tanglewood students, and conductors who have graduated there include Leonard Bernstein, Thor Johnson (Cincinnati), Walter Hendl (Dallas), Eleazar de Carvalho (Rio de Janeiro), Lukas Foss, Robert Zeller, Herman Herz (Duluth), Robert Whitney (Louisville), Richard Bales (National Gallery, Washington), Thomas Schippers, Lorin Maazel, Alexander Leslie (Springfield).

The roster of former students at the Metropolitan opera includes Frank Guarerra, Mack Harrell, Mildred Miller, Anne Bollinger, Paul Knowles, Paula Leachner, and Heidi Kral (Toledo) and Robert McFerrin (St. Louis), winners of the 1953 auditions of the air. New York City Opera company graduates from Tanglewood include Ellen Faull, David Lloyd, Patricia Neway, Mac Morgan, James Pease, David Poleri, Robert Rounseville and Frances Yeend. Mario Lanza of Hollywood was a student in 1940-41. Leontyne Price, the Bess of Broadway's "Porgy and Bess", was a singer in the summer of 1951.

Choral Conductors Too

Choral conductors who are Tanglewood alumni include James Aliferis (University of Minnesota); Jacob Avshalomoff (Columbia University); Lorna Cooke de Varon (New England Conservatory, Boston).

Composers Norman dello Joio, Alan Hovaness, Ulysses Kay, Ned Rorem, Peter Mannin, Jurriaan Andriessen have profited from summers at Tanglewood; and instrumentalists number among them Jacob Krachmalnick, concertmaster of the Philadelphia orchestra; Leonard Pennario, Seymour Lipkin, Norman Carol, Constance Keene, Aldo Parisot and Julius Katchen.

Tanglewood's opera department has given the American premieres of Benjamin Britten's "Peter Grimes" and "Albert Herring," Mozart's "Idiomeneo" and Jacques Ibert's "Le Roi d'Yvetot," and this year, through a grant of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, has commissioned young composers Leonard Rosenan, of New York city, and Louis Mennini, of Rochester, N. Y. to write one-act operas there this summer for performance in 1954.

Cir. (D 11,407)

This Clipping From
BATAVIA, N. Y.
NEWS

AUG 11 1953

These Days

—By George E. Sokolsky

A Useful Grant

The Rockefeller Foundation has announced that it has voted a grant of $200,000 to the New York City Center of Music and Drama. This is a valuable cultural aid, supporting an institution that needs to be preserved because it gives to young Americans an opportunity to develop themselves in the arts of expression. Unlike nearly all European countries, the United States provides few opportunities for young artists in all the arts to go through a period of apprenticeship under great masters. It is for this reason that so many talented young people are forced to go to Europe for their training.

It is a curious commentary upon our way of thinking that at a time when we are pouring billions of dollars into foreign countries for the preservation of their cultures, we are permitting our own cultural institutions to decay for lack of funds. Few museums are safe today. There are no longer any Carnegies or Fricks or Otto Kahns available to assist our art museums and libraries. There are no Vanderbilts to come to the support of the Metropolitan Opera. Every privately-endowed college and university is worried about its finances and some are very frightened by the prospect. A completely integrated university, maintaining all departments of learning and providing time and facilities for research by its faculty, cannot live on student fees.

George Sokolsky

The New York City Center is a particularly noteworthy institution because it gives young Americans a chance. It is a feeder for the Metroplitan Opera as minor league baseball teams are feeders for the major league teams. It is at this place that such new operas as Menotti's are tried out, just as at Tanglewood, Copland, Bernstein, Foss and other young Americans can have their compositions played by such a fine orchestra as the Boston Symphony.

Yet, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood is running in the red and will have to find some way of making a public appeal. It may be difficult to arrange for public subscriptions for such an institution because, unless one actually sees what is being done for young Americans here, it is impossible to realize how much those who expect to make music their careers can accomplish here during the short summer session when they have the opportunity of association with the greatest men in their respective fields. It is an apprenticeship opportunity on the best European standards.

From every standpoint, it would be preferable if our universities, museums, orchestras, schools and other voluntary institutions were continued to be supported by donations from the people as they always have been in American life. Yet, it does come to mind that when billions of dollars, provided by the American taxpayer, are being used to support cultural activities in Europe and Asia, why are our own institutions being permitted to wither on the vine? We finance UNESCO, Point Four, International Students Exchange, libraries and all sorts of activities in the foreign cultural field.

A new committee of Congress has been appointed, under the chairmanship of Rep. Carroll Reece, to investigate the general activities of private Foundations. A similar committee, under the chairmanship of Eugene Cox, had begun to look into this subject, but Cox died and the committee's work was abortive. There is no secrecy about the work of any of the Foundations because they issue reports. The committee's activities therefore will be to analyze these reports in detail and to try to find a pattern of expenditures. While, in these days, emphasis will be laid on subversives, if any, who gain an advantage, which they ought not to have, the taxpayer would be interested in an analysis of the relationship between expenditures within the United States and abroad.

It would be an error to jump to conclusions on this subject without all the data being carefully studied. It may be found that the Foundations meet all the criticisms levelled at them; it may be that they are assuming that as they control the money, they are entitled to follow their own judgment. Yet, the fact is that the Foundations are relieved of taxes on the single assumption that their expenditures will be in the public interest. Whatever the outcome, the Reece committee intends to produce the facts, to analyze them and to make recommendations to Congress for legislation on the subject.

(Copyright, 1953, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

M

Cl

Benjamin N. Bowers, Mrs. Don F. McPherson, Mrs. Lawrence [illegible] Miller, Miss Margo Miller, Mrs. John H. Rice, Mrs. Jay C. Rosenfeld, Mrs. Stanley Simkin, and Alan J. Blau, all of Pittsfield; Mr. [illegible] Crane, Dalton; Mrs. [illegible] and Mrs. Albert Stern [illegible] Mrs. Joseph [illegible] Gladys Greene, [illegible] Mrs. Frederi[illegible] L. Senior [illegible] Stokes, Lenox [illegible] rick and Mrs. [illegible] Stockbridge;

Also Mrs. William [illegible] rett, Great Barrington [illegible] Davie Lloyd, [illegible] Homer, South [illegible] James W. Hu[illegible] Karl Weston, Wi[illegible]

Boxes are bein[illegible] communities b[illegible] contribute to [illegible] ships for talen[illegible] who cannot a[illegible] tion. Boxes hav[illegible] idents in Pi[illegible] Richmond and S[illegible] the Pittsfield [illegible] chestra. Five boxes have been [illegible] nated for the use of Berkshire Music Center students by summer residents unable to be present. Such reservations may be made at the Tanglewood box office.

Allard and Droeghmans Retire from Symphony

Raymond Allard, first bassoon, and cellist Hyppolyte Droeghmans will retire from the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the conclusion of the Berkshire Festival Sunday. They were honored at a luncheon at Tanglewood, Lenox, yesterday, following morning rehearsal.

Pasquale Cardillo was master of ceremonies. Allard and Droeghmans were presented gold watches by Charles Munch, conductor. Speakers included violinist Harry Ellis Dickson; Thomas D. Perry, assistant manager of the orchestra, and Dr. Lewis Perry, trustee.

Allard, born at Sin-le-Noble, France, in 1898, joined the Boston Symphony in 1922. He lives in Brookline. Droeghmans, born in Liege, Belgium, in 1884, has been with the orchestra since 1927. He lives in Newton Center.

'Tanglewood on Parade' for Benefit Tomorrow

With Isaac Stern, violinist; soprano Leontyne Price and her husband, baritone William Warfield as stars, the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be held at Tanglewood tomorrow evening.

There will be demonstrations by every department of the Summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, a lawn supper and a gala evening concert by the orchestra followed by the drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

Isaac Stern will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D major with the Boston Symphony, Charles Munch conducting, at the evening concert beginning at 8:15 in the [illegible]

Music Shed [illegible] conduct the [illegible] Water Music [illegible]

George G[illegible] occupy the [illegible] concert pr[illegible] ducted by Leonard Bernstein [illegible] concert perform[illegible] Leontyne Price [illegible] and the Festival Ch[illegible]

Cir. (D 13,075)

This Clipping From
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT

AUG 11 1953

Students From 41 of States, 11 Nations, at Tanglewood

Students from 41 states and 11 foreign countries are enrolled this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, this country's only school of music maintained by a major orchestra. Established by the Boston Symphony orchestra in 1940, when Serge Koussevitzky was its director, the school is now in its 11th six-week session, which will extend to the end of the Berkshire Music Festival on Aug. 16.

400 Enrolled

The enrollment of 400 students represents a true cross-section of advanced music students, teachers and professional musicians, who work in the divisions of orchestra playing and conducting, chamber music, and opera under a distinguished faculty of 36 which includes such outstanding musicians as Aaron Copland, Leonard Bernstein, Carlos Chavez, Boris Goldovsky, Hugh Ross, Lukas Foss, Irving Fine, Paul Ulanowsky, Seymour Lipkin, William Kroll, Richard Burgin and first chair players of the Boston orchestra.

The symphony's music director, Charles Munch, is director of the school, and Ralph Berkowitz is dean. A special department, the Tanglewood Stury group, set up last year for amateurs of music who wish to spend their vacations in the absorption of music, continues this year under the leadership of Ingolf Dahl, with an enrollment of 105, of whom 38 are spending the full six weeks, 12 four weeks, and 55 two weeks.

New York state leads the registration, with more than 100 students. Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Ohio are represented by 90 students. Nineteen each come from Connecticut and New Jersey; 18 each from Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and Washington, D. C. As a result of the Boston Symphony orchestra's first trans-continental tour last spring, when auditions were held for the first time in 10 cities on its route, enrollment from California increased to 10 students. From Salt Lake City and Provo, Utah, have come five pupils. Nine Canadians are studying at Tanglewood this summer, mostly from Toronto and Montreal where the symphony played. The New Orleans orchestral auditions produced seven students now on the Berkshire campus, and five from Florida.

19 From Abroad

Nineteen foreign students are enrolled. Besides the Canadians, Mexico, France, Israel, Sweden, Japan, Korea, Holland, Bolivia, Latvia and China have representatives. Serge Blanc, of Paris, s concertmaster of the student orchestra. From Pusan, South Korea, is John Kim, who is president and conductor of the Republic of Korea Naval Symphony Orchestra and Chorus. A composition pupil with Mexico's composer-conductor Carlos Chavez is Tossi Ichiyanagi of Tokyo.

As the result of seeing in Shanghai in 1950 a U. S. State department film on Tanglewood, Miss Lily Hsia is now a member of the opera department. On invitation of the federal government through a Smith-Mundt award to study conducting is Herbert Blomstedt of Stockholm, Sweden. Fernado Illanes is a chorus student from Bolivia; Johannes Emmen-Riedel is a Study group student from The Hague. George Mester and Alga Zilboorg of Mexico City are studying violin and 'cello. Pnina God is a trumpet player, Usiahu Wiesel is a student 'cellist, both from Israel. Endel Kalam, of Latvia, now resident in Indianapolis, s a viola player.

Ranging in age from 17 to 65, the majority of students are between 19 and 24. The 75 per cent in the full course are highly talented since competition was keen for the tuition scholarships awarded for the second time annually to those who play in the orchestra and chamber music groups or lead in the choral or opera departments. Most of the students live at the Lenox Preparatory school and Wheatleigh, a nearby estate owned by the orchestra. For recreation they swim and boat in Stockbridge bowl, the lake whose shoreline includes the edge of the Tanglewood estate.

Many Vocations

Students at Tanglewood include many vocations. For the first time in the Berkshire Music Center's 11 years the armed services are officially represented, by Warrant Officer John Norris, of Arlington, Va., assistant conductor of the U. S. Navy band, a student of orchestral conducting under Leonard Bernstein.

D. Robert Smith, from the faculty of Bates college, Lewiston, Me., is a student; also Elwood W. Hill, director of music at Bradford Junior college, Bradford, and Mrs. Willa Taylor, a professor at the Pennsylvania State college.

Three husband-and-wife teams are included. Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Moore, of Davidson, N. C., take advance study in clarinet and piano. Mrs. Charles Lawie, Lake Geneva, Wisc., attends general music classes while her husband is busy with Boris Goldovsky in the opera coaching class. Mr. and Mrs. Georg A. Kleinfeld of Cleveland are orchestra players. Twin brothers, Robert and Rodney Pierce of Wichita, Kan., are receiving advanced training on the French horn and oboe from senior members of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

The students drawn from four continents to Tanglewood by the fame of its staff and the hope that a career might be launched from this coveted study include Theresa Green of Baltimore, a three-time winner of the Arthur Godfrey talent scout award; and Sara Mae Endich, an employe of the advertising department of the European edition of the New York Herald-Tribune, here on annual vacation.

Ex-Students 4,217

Former students now scattered through the U. S., Canada, South America, Europe and Australia, many of whom have taken prominent places in the musical life of their communities, total 4,217.

Ten percent of the membership of all major U.S. symphony orchestras is composed of former Tanglewood students, and conductors who have graduated there include Leonard Bernstein, Thor Johnson (Cincinnati), Walter Hendl (Dallas), Eleazar de Carvalho (Rio de Janeiro), Lukas Foss, Robert Zeller, Herman Herz (Duluth), Robert Whitney (Louisville), Richard Bales (National Gallery, Washington), Thomas Schippers, Lorin Maazel, Alexander Leslie (Springfield).

The roster of former students at the Metropolitan opera includes Frank Guarerra, Mack Harrell, Mildred Miller, Anne Bollinger, Paul Knowles, Paula Leachner, and Heidi Kral (Toledo) and Robert McFerrin (St. Louis), winners of the 1953 auditions of the air. New York City Opera company graduates from Tanglewood include Ellen Faull, David Lloyd, Patricia Neway, Mac Morgan, James Pease, David Poleri, Robert Rounseville and Frances Yeend. Mario Lanza of Hollywood was a student in 1940-41. Leontyne Price, the Bess of Broadway's "Porgy and Bess", was a singer in the summer of 1951.

Choral Conductors Too

Choral conductors who are Tanglewood alumni include James Aliferis (University of Minnesota); Jacob Avshalomoff (Columbia University); Lorna Cooke de Varon (New England Conservatory, Boston).

Composers Norman dello Joio, Alan Hovaness, Ulysses Kay, Ned Rorem, Peter Mannin, Jurriaan Andriessen have profited from summers at Tanglewood; and instrumentalists number among them Jacob Krachmalnick, concertmaster of the Philadelphia orchestra; Leonard Pennario, Seymour Lipkin, Norman Carol, Constance Keene, Aldo Parisot and Julius Katchen.

Tanglewood's opera department has given the American premieres of Benjamin Britten's "Peter Grimes" and "Albert Herring," Mozart's "Idiomeneo" and Jacques Ibert's "Le Roi d'Yvetot," and this year, through a grant of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, has commissioned young composers Leonard Rosenan, of New York city, and Louis Mennini, of Rochester, N. Y. to write one-act operas there this summer for performance in 1954.

This Clipping From
OIL CITY, PA.
BLIZZARD
AUG 13 1953

AUG 11 1953

This RAVE
RECORD & COURIER-TRIBUNE

These Days

—By George E. Sokolsky

A Useful Grant

The Rockefeller Foundation has announced that it has voted a grant of $200,000 to the New York City Center of Music and Drama. This is a valuable cultural aid, supporting an institution that needs to be preserved because it gives to young Americans an opportunity to develop themselves in the arts of expression. Unlike nearly all European countries, the United States provides few opportunities for young artists in all the arts to go through a period of apprenticeship under great masters. It is for this reason that so many talented young people are forced to go to Europe for their training.

It is a curious commentary upon our way of thinking that at a time when we are pouring billions of dollars into foreign countries for the preservation of their cultures, we are permitting our own cultural institutions to decay for lack of funds. Few museums are safe today. There are no longer any Carnegies or Fricks or Otto Kahns available to assist our art museums and libraries. There are no Vanderbilts to come to the support of the Metropolitan Opera. Every privately-endowed college and university is worried about its finances and some are very frightened by the prospect. A completely integrated university, maintaining all departments of learning and providing time and facilities for research by its faculty, cannot live on student fees.

George Sokolsky

The New York City Center is a particularly noteworthy institution because it gives young Americans a chance. It is a feeder for the Metroplitan Opera as minor league baseball teams are feeders for the major league teams. It is at this place that such new operas as Menotti's are tried out, just as at Tanglewood, Copland, Bernstein, Foss and other young Americans can have their compositions played by such a fine orchestra as the Boston Symphony.

Yet, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood is running in the red and will have to find some way of making a public appeal. It may be difficult to arrange for public subscriptions for such an institution because, unless one actually sees what is being done for young Americans here, it is impossible to realize how much those who expect to make music their careers can accomplish here during the short summer session when they have the opportunity of association with the greatest men in their respective fields. It is an apprenticeship opportunity on the best European standards.

From every standpoint, it would be preferable if our universities, museums, orchestras, schools and other voluntary institutions were continued to be supported by donations from the people as they always have been in American life. Yet, it does come to mind that when billions of dollars, provided by the American taxpayer, are being used to support cultural activities in Europe and Asia, why are our own institutions being permitted to wither on the vine? We finance UNESCO, Point Four, International Students Exchange, libraries and all sorts of activities in the foreign cultural field.

A new committee of Congress has been appointed, under the chairmanship of Rep. Carroll Reece, to investigate the general activities of private Foundations. A similar committee, under the chairmanship of Eugene Cox, had begun to look into this subject, but Cox died and the committee's work was abortive. There is no secrecy about the work of any of the Foundations because they issue reports. The committee's activities therefore will be to analyze these reports in detail and to try to find a pattern of expenditures. While, in these days, emphasis will be laid on subversives, if any, who gain an advantage, which they ought not to have, the taxpayer would be interested in an analysis of the relationship between expenditures within the United States and abroad.

It would be an error to jump to conclusions on this subject without all the data being carefully studied. It may be found that the Foundations meet all the criticisms levelled at them; it may be that they are assuming that as they control the money, they are entitled to follow their own judgment. Yet, the fact is that the Foundations are relieved of taxes on the single assumption that their expenditures will be in the public interest. Whatever the outcome, the Reece committee intends to produce the facts, to analyze them and to make recommendations to Congress for legislation on the subject.

(Copyright, 1953, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

M

CH

Benjamin N. Bowers, Mrs. Dona
F. McPherson, Mrs. Lawrence K.
Miller, Miss Margo Miller, Mrs.
John H. Rice, Mrs. Jay C.
feld, Mrs. Stanley Simkin, and
J. Blau, all of Pittsfield; Mr.
Crane, Dalton;
and Mrs. Albert
Mrs. Joseph
Gladys Greene,
Mrs. Frederi
L. Senior and Stokes, Lenox
rick and Mrs.
Stockbridge;

Also Mrs.
rett, Great
Davie Lloyd
Homer, South
James W. Hull
Karl Weston, W

Boxes are communities contribute to ships for tale who cannot a tion. Boxes h
idents in Pi
Richmond and the Pittsfield chestra. Five boxes have been nated for the use of Berkshire Music Center students by summer residents unable to be present. Such reservations may be made at the Tanglewood box office.

Six   Amusements   THE BOSTON DAILY GLOBE—WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 12, 1953

Allard and Droeghmans Retire from Symphony

Raymond Allard, first bassoon, and cellist Hyppolyte Droeghmans will retire from the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the conclusion of the Berkshire Festival Sunday.

They were honored at a luncheon at Tanglewood, Lenox, yesterday, following morning rehearsal.

Pasquale Cardillo was master of ceremonies. Allard and Droeghmans were presented gold watches by Charles Munch, conductor. Speakers included violinist Harry Ellis Dickson; Thomas D. Perry, assistant manager of the orchestra, and Dr. Lewis Perry, trustee.

Allard, born at Sin-le-Noble, France, in 1898, joined the Boston Symphony in 1922. He lives in Brookline. Droeghmans, born in Liege, Belgium, in 1884, has been with the orchestra since 1927. He lives in Newton Center.

'Tanglewood on Parade' for Benefit Tomorrow

With Isaac Stern, violinist; soprano Leontyne Price and her husband, baritone William Warfield as stars, the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be held at Tanglewood tomorrow evening.

There will be demonstrations by every department of the Summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, a lawn supper and a gala evening concert by the orchestra followed by the drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

Isaac Stern will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D major with the Boston Symphony, Charles Munch conducting, at the evening concert beginning at 8:15 in the [279]

Cir. (D 13,075)

This Clipping From
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT

AUG 11 1953

Students From 41 of States, 11 Nations, at Tanglewood

Students from 41 states and 11 foreign countries are enrolled this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, this country's only school of music maintained by a major orchestra. Established by the Boston Symphony orchestra in 1940, when Serge Koussevitzky was its director, the school is now in its 11th six-week session, which will extend to the end of the Berkshire Music Festival on Aug. 16.

400 Enrolled

The enrollment of 400 students represents a true cross-section of advanced music students, teachers and professional musicians who work in the divisions of orchestra playing and conducting, chamber music, and opera under a distinguished faculty of 36 which includes such outstanding musicians as Aaron Copland, Leonard Bernstein, Carlos Chavez, Boris Goldovsky, Hugh Ross, Lukas Foss, Irving Fine, Paul Ulanowsky, Seymour Lipkin, William Kroll, Richard Burgin and first chair players of the Boston orchestra.

The symphony's music director, Charles Munch, is director of the school, and Ralph Berkowitz is dean. A special department, the Tanglewood Stury group, set up last year for amateurs of music who wish to spend their vacations in the absorption of music, continues this year under the leadership of Ingolf Dahl, with an enrollment of 105, of whom 38 are spending the full six weeks, 12 four weeks, and 55 two weeks.

New York state leads the registration, with more than 100 students. Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Ohio are represented by 90 students. Nineteen each come from Connecticut and New Jersey; 18 each from Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and Washington, D. C. As a result of the Boston Symphony orchestra's first trans-continental tour last spring, when auditions were held for the first time in 10 cities on its route, enrollment from California increased to 10 students. From Salt Lake City and Provo, Utah, have come five pupils. Nine Canadians are studying at Tanglewood this summer, mostly from Toronto and Montreal where the symphony played. The New Orleans orchestral auditions produced seven students now on the Berkshire campus, and five from Florida.

19 From Abroad

Nineteen foreign students are enrolled. Besides the Canadians, Mexico, France, Israel, Sweden, Japan, Korea, Holland, Bolivia, Latvia and China have representatives. Serge Blanc, of Paris, is concertmaster of the student orchestra. From Pusan, South Korea, is John Kim, who is president and conductor of the Republic of Korea Naval Symphony Orchestra and Chorus. A composition pupil with Mexico's composer-conductor Carlos Chavez is Tossi Ichiyanagi of Tokyo.

As the result of seeing in Shanghai in 1950 a U. S. State department film on Tanglewood, Miss Lily Hsia is now a member of the opera department. On invitation of the federal government through a Smith-Mundt award to study conducting is Herbert Blomstedt of Stockholm, Sweden. Fernado Illanes is a chorus student from Bolivia; Johannes Emmen-Riedel is a Study group student from The Hague. George Mester and Alga Zilboorg of Mexico City are studying violin and 'cello. Pnina God is a trumpet player. Usiahu Wiesel is a student 'cellist, both from Israel. Endel Kalam, of Latvia, now resident in Indianapolis, s a viola player.

Ranging in age from 17 to 65, the majority of students are between 19 and 24. The 75 per cent in the full course are highly talented since competition was keen for the tuition scholarships awarded for the second time annually to those who play in the orchestra and chamber music groups or lead in the choral or opera departments. Most of the students live at the Lenox Preparatory school and Wheatleigh, a nearby estate owned by the orchestra. For recreation they swim and boat in Stockbridge bowl, the lake whose shoreline includes the edge of the Tanglewood estate.

Many Vocations

Students at Tanglewood include many vocations. For the first time in the Berkshire Music Center's 11 years the armed services are officially represented, by Warrant Officer John Norris, of Arlington, Va., assistant conductor of the U. S. Navy band, a student of orchestral conducting under Leonard Bernstein.

D. Robert Smith, from the faculty of Bates college, Lewiston, Me., is a student; also Elwood W. Hill, director of music at Bradford Junior college, Bradford, and Mrs. Willa Taylor, a professor at the Pennsylvania State college.

Three husband-and-wife teams are included. Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Moore, of Davidson, N. C., take advance study in clarinet and piano. Mrs. Charles Lawie, Lake Geneva, Wisc., attends general music classes while her husband is busy with Boris Goldovsky in the opera coaching class. Mr. and Mrs. Georg A. Kleinfeld of Cleveland are orchestra players. Twin brothers, Robert and Rodney Pierce of Wichita, Kan., are receiving advanced training on the French horn and oboe from senior members of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

The students drawn from four continents to Tanglewood by the fame of its staff and the hope that a career might be launched from this coveted study include Theresa Green of Baltimore, a three-time winner of the Arthur Godfrey talent scout award; and Sara Mae Endich, an employe of the advertising department of the European edition of the New York Herald-Tribune, here on annual vacation.

Ex-Students 4,217

Former students now scattered through the U. S., Canada, South America, Europe and Australia, many of whom have taken prominent places in the musical life of their communities, total 4,217.

Ten percent of the membership of all major U.S. symphony orchestras is composed of former Tanglewood students, and conductors who have graduated there include Leonard Bernstein, Thor Johnson (Cincinnati), Walter Hendl (Dallas), Eleazar de Carvalho (Rio de Janeiro), Lukas Foss, Robert Zeller, Herman Herz (Duluth), Robert Whitney (Louisville), Richard Bales (National Gallery, Washington), Thomas Schippers, Lorin Maazel, Alexander Leslie (Springfield).

The roster of former students at the Metropolitan opera includes Frank Guarerra, Mack Harrell, Mildred Miller, Anne Bollinger, Paul Knowles, Paula Leachner, and Heidi Kral (Toledo) and Robert McFerrin (St. Louis), winners of the 1953 auditions of the air. New York City Opera company graduates from Tanglewood include Ellen Faull, David Lloyd, Patricia Neway, Mac Morgan, James Pease, David Poleri, Robert Rounseville and Frances Yeend. Mario Lanza of Hollywood was a student in 1940-41. Leontyne Price, the Bess of Broadway's "Porgy and Bess", was a singer in the summer of 1951.

Choral Conductors Too

Choral conductors who are Tanglewood alumni include James Aliferis (University of Minnesota); Jacob Avshalomoff (Columbia University); Lorna Cooke de Varon (New England Conservatory, Boston).

Composers Norman dello Joio, Alan Hovaness, Ulysses Kay, Ned Rorem, Peter Mannin, Jurriaan Andriessen have profited from summers at Tanglewood; and instrumentalists number among them Jacob Krachmalnick, concertmaster of the Philadelphia orchestra; Leonard Pennario, Seymour Lipkin, Norman Carol, Constance Keene, Aldo Parisot and Julius Katchen.

Tanglewood's opera department has given the American premieres of Benjamin Britten's "Peter Grimes" and "Albert Herring," Mozart's "Idiomeneo" and Jacques Ibert's "Le Roi d'Yvetot," and this year, through a grant of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, has commissioned young composers Leonard Rosenan, of New York city, and Louis Mennini, of Rochester, N. Y. to write one-act operas there this summer for performance in 1954.

Cir. (D 20,402) (S 41,868)

This Clipping From
WATERBURY, CONN.
REPUBLICAN

AUG 11 1953

These Days

—By George E. Sokolsky

A Useful Grant

The Rockefeller Foundation has announced that it has voted a grant of $200,000 to the New York City Center of Music and Drama. This is a valuable cultural aid, supporting an institution that needs to be preserved because it gives to young Americans an opportunity to develop themselves in the arts of expression. Unlike nearly all European countries, the United States provides few opportunities for young artists in all the arts to go through a period of apprenticeship under great masters. It is for this reason that so many talented young people are forced to go to Europe for their training.

It is a curious commentary upon our way of thinking that at a time when we are pouring billions of dollars into foreign countries for the preservation of their cultures, we are permitting our own cultural institutions to decay for lack of funds. Few museums are safe today. There are no longer any Carnegies or Fricks or Otto Kahns available to assist our art museums and libraries. There are no Vanderbilts to come to the support of the Metropolitan Opera. Every privately-endowed college and university is worried about its finances and some are very frightened by the prospect. A completely integrated university, maintaining all departments of learning and providing time and facilities for research by its faculty, cannot live on student fees.

George Sokolsky

The New York City Center is a particularly noteworthy institution because it gives young Americans a chance. It is a feeder for the Metroplitan Opera as minor league baseball teams are feeders for the major league teams. It is at this place that such new operas as Menotti's are tried out, just as at Tanglewood, Copland, Bernstein, Foss and other young Americans can have their compositions played by such a fine orchestra as the Boston Symphony.

Yet, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood is running in the red and will have to find some way of making a public appeal. It may be difficult to arrange for public subscriptions for such an institution because, unless one actually sees what is being done for young Americans here, it is impossible to realize how much those who expect to make music their careers can accomplish here during the short summer session when they have the opportunity of association with the greatest men in their respective fields. It is an apprenticeship opportunity on the best European standards.

From every standpoint, it would be preferable if our universities, museums, orchestras, schools and other voluntary institutions were continued to be supported by donations from the people as they always have been in American life. Yet, it does come to mind that when billions of dollars, provided by the American taxpayer, are being used to support cultural activities in Europe and Asia, why are our own institutions being permitted to wither on the vine? We finance UNESCO, Point Four, International Students Exchange, libraries and all sorts of activities in the foreign cultural field.

A new committee of Congress has been appointed, under the chairmanship of Rep. Carroll Reece, to investigate the general activities of private Foundations. A similar committee, under the chairmanship of Eugene Cox, had begun to look into this subject, but Cox died and the committee's work was abortive. There is no secrecy about the work of any of the Foundations because they issue reports. The committee's activities therefore will be to analyze these reports in detail and to try to find a pattern of expenditures. While, in these days, emphasis will be laid on subversives, if any, who gain an advantage, which they ought not to have, the taxpayer would be interested in an analysis of the relationship between expenditures within the United States and abroad.

It would be an error to jump to conclusions on this subject without all the data being carefully studied. It may be found that the Foundations meet all the criticisms levelled at them; it may be that they are assuming that as they control the money, they are entitled to follow their own judgment. Yet, the fact is that the Foundations are relieved of taxes on the single assumption that their expenditures will be in the public interest. Whatever the outcome, the Reece committee intends to produce the facts, to analyze them and to make recommendations to Congress for legislation on the subject.

(Copyright, 1953, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

This C
RAVE
RECORD & COURIER-TRIBUNE

M

C

Benjamin N. Bowers, Mrs. [illegible] F. McPherson, Mrs. Lawrence K. Miller, Miss Margo Miller, Mrs. John H. Rice, Mrs. Jay C. Rosenfeld, Mrs. Stanley Simkin, and Alan J. Blau, all of Pittsfield; Mrs. Bruce Crane, Dalton; Mrs. Shaun [illegible] and Mrs. Albert Stern [illegible] Mrs. Joseph [illegible] Gladys Greene, [illegible] Mrs. Freder[illegible] L. Senior [illegible] Stokes, Lenox [illegible] rick and Mrs. [illegible] Stockbridge;

Also Mrs. [illegible] rett, Great Barr[illegible] Davie Lloyd, [illegible] Homer, South [illegible] James W. Hull, North Adams; and Karl Weston, Williamstown.

Boxes are [illegible] communities [illegible] contribute to [illegible] ships for tal[illegible] who cannot a[illegible] tion. Boxes [illegible] idents in [illegible] Richmond an[illegible] the Pittsfield Little [illegible] Orchestra. Five boxes have been [illegible] nated for the use of Berkshire Music Center students by summer residents unable to be present. Such reservations may [illegible] the Tanglewood box office.

Allard and Droeghmans Retire from Symphony

Raymond Allard, first bassoon, and cellist Hyppolyte Droeghmans will retire from the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the conclusion of the Berkshire Festival Sunday. They were honored at a luncheon at Tanglewood, Lenox, yesterday, following morning rehearsal.

Pasquale Cardillo was master of ceremonies. Allard and Droeghmans were presented gold watches by Charles Munch, conductor. Speakers included violinist Harry Ellis Dickson; Thomas D. Perry, assistant manager of the orchestra, and Dr. Lewis Perry, trustee.

Allard, born at Sin-le-Noble, France, in 1898, joined the Boston Symphony in 1922. He lives in Brookline. Droeghmans, born in Liege, Belgium, in 1884, has been with the orchestra since 1927. He lives in Newton Center.

'Tanglewood on Parade' for Benefit Tomorrow

With Isaac Stern, violinist; soprano Leontyne Price and her husband, baritone William Warfield as stars, the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be held at Tanglewood tomorrow evening.

There will be demonstrations by every department of the Summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, a lawn supper and a gala evening concert by the orchestra followed by the drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

Isaac Stern will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D major with the Boston Symphony, Charles Munch conducting, at the evening concert beginning at 8:15 in the Music Shed. Mr. Munch [illegible] the Suite from "Water Music" [illegible] George Gershwin's [illegible] the second [illegible] Leonard Bernstein [illegible] Leontyne Price [illegible] and the Festival Chorus [illegible]

[279]

Cir. (D 13,075)

This Clipping From
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT

AUG 11 1953

Students From 41 of States, 11 Nations, at Tanglewood

Students from 41 states and 11 foreign countries are enrolled this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, this country's only school of music maintained by a major orchestra. Established by the Boston Symphony orchestra in 1940, when Serge Koussevitzky was its director, the school is now in its 11th six-week session, which will extend to the end of the Berkshire Music Festival on Aug. 16.

400 Enrolled

The enrollment of 400 students represents a true cross-section of advanced music students, teachers and professional musicians, who work in the divisions of orchestra playing and conducting, chamber music, and opera under a distinguished faculty of 36 which includes such outstanding musicians as Aaron Copland, Leonard Bernstein, Carlos Chavez, Boris Goldovsky, Hugh Ross, Lukas Foss, Irving Fine, Paul Ulanowsky, Seymour Lipkin, William Kroll, Richard Burgin and first chair players of the Boston orchestra.

The symphony's music director, Charles Munch, is director of the school, and Ralph Berkowitz is dean. A special department, the Tanglewood Stury group, set up last year for amateurs of music who wish to spend their vacations in the absorption of music, continues this year under the leadership of Ingolf Dahl, with an enrollment of 105, of whom 38 are spending the full six weeks, 12 four weeks, and 55 two weeks.

New York state leads the registration, with more than 100 students. Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Ohio are represented by 90 students. Nineteen each come from Connecticut and New Jersey; 18 each from Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and Washington, D. C. As a result of the Boston Symphony orchestra's first trans-continental tour last spring, when auditions were held for the first time in 10 cities on its route, enrollment from California increased to 10 students. From Salt Lake City and Provo, Utah, have come five pupils. Nine Canadians are studying at Tanglewood this summer, mostly from Toronto and Montreal where the symphony played. The New Orleans orchestral auditions produced seven students now on the Berkshire campus, and five from Florida.

19 From Abroad

Nineteen foreign students are enrolled. Besides the Canadians, Mexico, France, Israel, Sweden, Japan, Korea, Holland, Bolivia, Latvia and China have representatives. Serge Blanc, of Paris, s concertmaster of the student orchestra. From Pusan, South Korea, is John Kim, who is president and conductor of the Republic of Korea Naval Symphony Orchestra and Chorus. A composition pupil with Mexico's composer-conductor Carlos Chavez is Tossi Ichiyanagi of Tokyo.

As the result of seeing in Shanghai in 1950 a U. S. State department film on Tanglewood, Miss Lily Hsia is now a member of the opera department. On invitation of the federal government through a Smith-Mundt award to study conducting is Herbert Blomstedt of Stockholm, Sweden. Fernado Illanes is a chorus student from Bolivia; Johannes Emmen-Riedel is a Study group student from The Hague. George Mester and Alga Zilboorg of Mexico City are studying violin and 'cello. Pnina God is a trumpet player, Usiahu Wiesel is a student 'cellist, both from Israel. Endel Kalam, of Latvia, now resident in Indianapolis, s a viola player.

Ranging in age from 17 to 65, the majority of students are between 19 and 24. The 75 per cent in the full course are highly talented since competition was keen for the tuition scholarships awarded for the second time annually to those who play in the orchestra and chamber music groups or lead in the choral or opera departments. Most of the students live at the Lenox Preparatory school and Wheatleigh, a nearby estate owned by the orchestra. For recreation they swim and boat in Stockbridge bowl, the lake whose shoreline includes the edge of the Tanglewood estate.

Many Vocations

Students at Tanglewood include many vocations. For the first time in the Berkshire Music Center's 11 years the armed services are officially represented, by Warrant Officer John Norris, of Arlington, Va., assistant conductor of the U. S. Navy band, a student of orchestral conducting under Leonard Bernstein.

D. Robert Smith, from the faculty of Bates college, Lewiston, Me., is a student; also Elwood W. Hill, director of music at Bradford Junior college, Bradford, and Mrs. Willa Taylor, a professor at the Pennsylvania State college.

Three husband-and-wife teams are included. Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Moore, of Davidson, N. C., take advance study in clarinet and piano. Mrs. Charles Lawie, Lake Geneva, Wisc., attends general music classes while her husband is busy with Boris Goldovsky in the opera coaching class. Mr. and Mrs. Georg A. Kleinfeld of Cleveland are orchestra players. Twin brothers, Robert and Rodney Pierce of Wichita, Kan., are receiving advanced training on the French horn and oboe from senior members of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

The students drawn from four continents to Tanglewood by the fame of its staff and the hope that a career might be launched from this coveted study include Theresa Green of Baltimore, a three-time winner of the Arthur Godfrey talent scout award; and Sara Mae Endich, an employe of the advertising department of the European edition of the New York Herald-Tribune, here on annual vacation.

Ex-Students 4,217

Former students now scattered through the U. S., Canada, South America, Europe and Australia, many of whom have taken prominent places in the musical life of their communities, total 4,217.

Ten percent of the membership of all major U.S. symphony orchestras is composed of former Tanglewood students, and conductors who have graduated there include Leonard Bernstein, Thor Johnson (Cincinnati), Walter Hendl (Dallas), Eleazar de Carvalho (Rio de Janeiro), Lukas Foss, Robert Zeller, Herman Herz (Duluth), Robert Whitney (Louisville), Richard Bales (National Gallery, Washington), Thomas Schippers, Lorin Maazel, Alexander Leslie (Springfield).

The roster of former students at the Metropolitan opera includes Frank Guarerra, Mack Harrell, Mildred Miller, Anne Bollinger, Paul Knowles, Paula Leachner, and Heidi Kral (Toledo) and Robert McFerrin (St. Louis), winners of the 1953 auditions of the air. New York City Opera company graduates from Tanglewood include Ellen Faull, David Lloyd, Patricia Neway, Mac Morgan, James Pease, David Poleri, Robert Rounseville and Frances Yeend. Mario Lanza of Hollywood was a student in 1940-41. Leontyne Price, the Bess of Broadway's "Porgy and Bess", was a singer in the summer of 1951.

Choral Conductors Too

Choral conductors who are Tanglewood alumni include James Aliferis (University of Minnesota); Jacob Avshalomoff (Columbia University); Lorna Cooke de Varon (New England Conservatory, Boston).

Composers Norman dello Joio, Alan Hovaness, Ulysses Kay, Ned Rorem, Peter Mannin, Jurriaan Andriessen have profited from summers at Tanglewood; and instrumentalists number among them Jacob Krachmalnick, concertmaster of the Philadelphia orchestra; Leonard Pennario, Seymour Lipkin, Norman Carol, Constance Keene, Aldo Parisot and Julius Katchen.

Tanglewood's opera department has given the American premieres of Benjamin Britten's "Peter Grimes" and "Albert Herring," Mozart's "Idiomeneo" and Jacques Ibert's "Le Roi d'Yvetot," and this year, through a grant of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, has commissioned young composers Leonard Rosenan, of New York city, and Louis Mennini, of Rochester, N. Y. to write one-act operas there this summer for performance in 1954.

Cir. (D 5,936)

This Clipping From
HERKIMER, N. Y.
TELEGRAM

AUG 11 1953

RECORD & COURIER-TRIBUNE

These Days

—By George E. Sokolsky

A Useful Grant

The Rockefeller Foundation has announced that it has voted a grant of $200,000 to the New York City Center of Music and Drama. This is a valuable cultural aid, supporting an institution that needs to be preserved because it gives to young Americans an opportunity to develop themselves in the arts of expression. Unlike nearly all European countries, the United States provides few opportunities for young artists in all the arts to go through a period of apprenticeship under great masters. It is for this reason that so many talented young people are forced to go to Europe for their training.

It is a curious commentary upon our way of thinking that at a time when we are pouring billions of dollars into foreign countries for the preservation of their cultures, we are permitting our own cultural institutions to decay for lack of funds. Few museums are safe today. There are no longer any Carnegies or Fricks or Otto Kahns available to assist our art museums and libraries. There are no Vanderbilts to come to the support of the Metropolitan Opera. Every privately-endowed college and university is worried about its finances and some are very frightened by the prospect. A completely integrated university, maintaining all departments of learning and providing time and facilities for research by its faculty, cannot live on student fees.

George Sokolsky

The New York City Center is a particularly noteworthy institution because it gives young Americans a chance. It is a feeder for the Metroplitan Opera as minor league baseball teams are feeders for the major league teams. It is at this place that such new operas as Menotti's are tried out, just as at Tanglewood, Copland, Bernstein, Foss and other young Americans can have their compositions played by such a fine orchestra as the Boston Symphony.

Yet, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood is running in the red and will have to find some way of making a public appeal. It may be difficult to arrange for public subscriptions for such an institution because, unless one actually sees what is being done for young Americans here, it is impossible to realize how much those who expect to make music their careers can accomplish here during the short summer session when they have the opportunity of association with the greatest men in their respective fields. It is an apprenticeship opportunity on the best European standards.

From every standpoint, it would be preferable if our universities, museums, orchestras, schools and other voluntary institutions were continued to be supported by donations from the people as they always have been in American life. Yet, it does come to mind that when billions of dollars, provided by the American taxpayer, are being used to support cultural activities in Europe and Asia, why are our own institutions being permitted to wither on the vine? We finance UNESCO, Point Four, International Students Exchange, libraries and all sorts of activities in the foreign cultural field.

A new committee of Congress has been appointed, under the chairmanship of Rep. Carroll Reece, to investigate the general activities of private Foundations. A similar committee, under the chairmanship of Eugene Cox, had begun to look into this subject, but Cox died and the committee's work was abortive. There is no secrecy about the work of any of the Foundations because they issue reports. The committee's activities therefore will be to analyze these reports in detail and to try to find a pattern of expenditures. While, in these days, emphasis will be laid on subversives, if any, who gain an advantage, which they ought not to have, the taxpayer would be interested in an analysis of the relationship between expenditures within the United States and abroad.

It would be an error to jump to conclusions on this subject without all the data being carefully studied. It may be found that the Foundations meet all the criticisms levelled at them; it may be that they are assuming that as they control the money, they are entitled to follow their own judgment. Yet, the fact is that the Foundations are relieved of taxes on the single assumption that their expenditures will be in the public interest. Whatever the outcome, the Reece committee intends to produce the facts, to analyze them and to make recommendations to Congress for legislation on the subject.

(Copyright, 1953, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

M

C

or Benjamin N. Bowers, Mrs. [illegible] F. McPherson, Mrs. Lawrence K. Miller, Miss Margo Miller, Mrs. John H. Rice, Mrs. Jay C. Rosenfeld, Mrs. Stanley Simkin, and Alan J. Blau, all of Pittsfield; Mrs. [illegible] Crane, Dalton; Mrs. [illegible] and Mrs. Albert [illegible] Mrs. Joseph [illegible] Gladys Greene, [illegible] Mrs. Frederi[illegible] L. Senior [illegible] Stokes, Lenox [illegible] rick and [illegible] Stockbridge;

Also Mrs. William [illegible] Barrett, Great Barrington [illegible] Davie Lloyd, Le[illegible] Homer, South [illegible] James W. Hu[illegible] Karl Weston, Williamstown.

Boxes are being reserved [illegible] communities [illegible] contribute to [illegible] ships for talented [illegible] who cannot a[illegible] tion. Boxes [illegible] idents in Pittsfield [illegible] Richmond and [illegible] the Pittsfield Little [illegible] Orchestra. Five boxes have been do-nated for the use of Berkshire Music Center students by summer residents unable to be present. Such reservations may be made at the Tanglewood box office.

Allard and Droeghmans Retire from Symphony

Raymond Allard, first bassoon, and cellist Hyppolyte Droeghmans will retire from the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the conclusion of the Berkshire Festival Sunday. They were honored at a luncheon at Tanglewood, Lenox, yesterday, following morning rehearsal.

Pasquale Cardillo was master of ceremonies. Allard and Droeghmans were presented gold watches by Charles Munch, conductor. Speakers included violinist Harry Ellis Dickson; Thomas D. Perry, assistant manager of the orchestra, and Dr. Lewis Perry, trustee.

Allard, born at Sin-le-Noble, France, in 1898, joined the Boston Symphony in 1922. He lives in Brookline. Droeghmans, born in Liege, Belgium, in 1884, has been with the orchestra since 1927. He lives in Newton Center.

'Tanglewood on Parade' for Benefit Tomorrow

With Isaac Stern, violinist; soprano Leontyne Price and her husband, baritone William Warfield as stars, the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be held at Tanglewood tomorrow evening.

There will be demonstrations by every department of the Summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, a lawn supper and a gala evening concert by the orchestra followed by the drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

Isaac Stern will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D major with the Boston Symphony, Charles Munch conducting, at the evening concert beginning at 8:15 in the Music Shed. [illegible] the Suite from Water Music [illegible] George Gershwin's [illegible] Leontyne Price [illegible] and the Festival Chorus [illegible]

[279]

Cir. (D 13,075)

This Clipping From
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT

AUG 11 1953

Students From 41 of States, 11 Nations, at Tanglewood

Students from 41 states and 11 foreign countries are enrolled this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, this country's only school of music maintained by a major orchestra. Established by the Boston Symphony orchestra in 1940, when Serge Koussevitzky was its director, the school is now in its 11th six-week session, which will extend to the end of the Berkshire Music Festival on Aug. 16.

400 Enrolled

The enrollment of 400 students represents a true cross-section of advanced music students, teachers and professional musicians who work in the divisions of orchestra playing and conducting, chamber music, and opera under a distinguished faculty of 36 which includes such outstanding musicians as Aaron Copland, Leonard Bernstein, Carlos Chavez, Boris Goldovsky, Hugh Ross, Lukas Foss, Irving Fine, Paul Ulanowsky, Seymour Lipkin, William Kroll, Richard Burgin and first chair players of the Boston orchestra.

The symphony's music director, Charles Munch, is director of the school, and Ralph Berkowitz is dean. A special department, the Tanglewood Stury group, set up last year for amateurs of music who wish to spend their vacations in the absorption of music, continues this year under the leadership of Ingolf Dahl, with an enrollment of 105, of whom 38 are spending the full six weeks, 12 four weeks, and 55 two weeks.

New York state leads the registration, with more than 100 students. Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Ohio are represented by 90 students. Nineteen each come from Connecticut and New Jersey; 18 each from Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and Washington, D. C. As a result of the Boston Symphony orchestra's first trans-continental tour last spring, when auditions were held for the first time in 10 cities on its route, enrollment from California increased to 10 students. From Salt Lake City and Provo, Utah, have come five pupils. Nine Canadians are studying at Tanglewood this summer, mostly from Toronto and Montreal where the symphony played. The New Orleans orchestral auditions produced seven students now on the Berkshire campus, and five from Florida.

19 From Abroad

Nineteen foreign students are enrolled. Besides the Canadians, Mexico, France, Israel, Sweden, Japan, Korea, Holland, Bolivia, Latvia and China have representatives. Serge Blanc, of Paris, is concertmaster of the student orchestra. From Pusan, South Korea, is John Kim, who is president and conductor of the Republic of Korea Naval Symphony Orchestra and Chorus. A composition pupil with Mexico's composer-conductor Carlos Chavez is Tossi Ichiyanagi of Tokyo.

As the result of seeing in Shanghai in 1950 a U. S. State department film on Tanglewood, Miss Lily Hsia is now a member of the opera department. On invitation of the federal government through a Smith-Mundt award to study conducting is Herbert Blomstedt of Stockholm, Sweden. Fernado Illanes is a chorus student from Bolivia; Johannes Emmen-Riedel is a Study group student from The Hague. George Mester and Alga Zilboorg of Mexico City are studying violin and 'cello. Pnina God is a trumpet player. Usiahu Wiesel is a student 'cellist, both from Israel. Endel Kalam, of Latvia, now resident in Indianapolis, s a viola player.

Ranging in age from 17 to 65, the majority of students are between 19 and 24. The 75 per cent in the full course are highly talented since competition was keen for the tuition scholarships awarded for the second time annually to those who play in the orchestra and chamber music groups or lead in the choral or opera departments. Most of the students live at the Lenox Preparatory school and Wheatleigh, a nearby estate owned by the orchestra. For recreation they swim and boat in Stockbridge bowl, the lake whose shoreline includes the edge of the Tanglewood estate.

Many Vocations

Students at Tanglewood include many vocations. For the first time in the Berkshire Music Center's 11 years the armed services are officially represented, by Warrant Officer John Norris, of Arlington, Va., assistant conductor of the U. S. Navy band, a student of orchestral conducting under Leonard Bernstein.

D. Robert Smith, from the faculty of Bates college, Lewiston, Me., is a student; also Elwood W. Hill, director of music at Bradford Junior college, Bradford, and Mrs. Willa Taylor, a professor at the Pennsylvania State college.

Three husband-and-wife teams are included. Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Moore, of Davidson, N. C., take advance study in clarinet and piano. Mrs. Charles Lawie, Lake Geneva, Wisc., attends general music classes while her husband is busy with Boris Goldovsky in the opera coaching class. Mr. and Mrs. Georg A. Kleinfeld of Cleveland are orchestra players. Twin brothers, Robert and Rodney Pierce of Wichita, Kan., are receiving advanced training on the French horn and oboe from senior members of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

The students drawn from four continents to Tanglewood by the fame of its staff and the hope that a career might be launched from this coveted study include Theresa Green of Baltimore, a three-time winner of the Arthur Godfrey talent scout award; and Sara Mae Endich, an employe of the advertising department of the European edition of the New York Herald-Tribune, here on annual vacation.

Ex-Students 4,217

Former students now scattered through the U. S., Canada, South America, Europe and Australia, many of whom have taken prominent places in the musical life of their communities, total 4,217.

Ten percent of the membership of all major U.S. symphony orchestras is composed of former Tanglewood students, and conductors who have graduated there include Leonard Bernstein, Thor Johnson (Cincinnati), Walter Hendl (Dallas), Eleazar de Carvalho (Rio de Janeiro), Lukas Foss, Robert Zeller, Herman Herz (Duluth), Robert Whitney (Louisville), Richard Bales (National Gallery, Washington), Thomas Schippers, Lorin Maazel, Alexander Leslie (Springfield).

The roster of former students at the Metropolitan opera includes Frank Guarerra, Mack Harrell, Mildred Miller, Anne Bollinger, Paul Knowles, Paula Leachner, and Heidi Kral (Toledo) and Robert McFerrin (St. Louis), winners of the 1953 auditions of the air. New York City Opera company graduates from Tanglewood include Ellen Faull, David Lloyd, Patricia Neway, Mac Morgan, James Pease, David Poleri, Robert Rounseville and Frances Yeend. Mario Lanza of Hollywood was a student in 1940-41. Leontyne Price, the Bess of Broadway's "Porgy and Bess", was a singer in the summer of 1951.

Choral Conductors Too

Choral conductors who are Tanglewood alumni include James Aliferis (University of Minnesota); Jacob Avshalomoff (Columbia University); Lorna Cooke de Varon (New England Conservatory, Boston).

Composers Norman dello Joio, Alan Hovaness, Ulysses Kay, Ned Rorem, Peter Mannin, Jurriaan Andriessen have profited from summers at Tanglewood; and instrumentalists number among them Jacob Krachmalnick, concertmaster of the Philadelphia orchestra; Leonard Pennario, Seymour Lipkin, Norman Carol, Constance Keene, Aldo Parisot and Julius Katchen.

Tanglewood's opera department has given the American premieres of Benjamin Britten's "Peter Grimes" and "Albert Herring," Mozart's "Idiomeneo" and Jacques Ibert's "Le Roi d'Yvetot," and this year, through a grant of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, has commissioned young composers Leonard Rosenan, of New York city, and Louis Mennini, of Rochester, N. Y. to write one-act operas there this summer for performance in 1954.

This Clipping From
DUNKIRK, N. Y.
OBSERVER

AUG 11 1953

These Days

—By George E. Sokolsky

A Useful Grant

The Rockefeller Foundation has announced that it has voted a grant of $200,000 to the New York City Center of Music and Drama. This is a valuable cultural aid, supporting an institution that needs to be preserved because it gives to young Americans an opportunity to develop themselves in the arts of expression. Unlike nearly all European countries, the United States provides few opportunities for young artists in all the arts to go through a period of apprenticeship under great masters. It is for this reason that so many talented young people are forced to go to Europe for their training.

George Sokolsky

It is a curious commentary upon our way of thinking that at a time when we are pouring billions of dollars into foreign countries for the preservation of their cultures, we are permitting our own cultural institutions to decay for lack of funds. Few museums are safe today. There are no longer any Carnegies or Fricks or Otto Kahns available to assist our art museums and libraries. There are no Vanderbilts to come to the support of the Metropolitan Opera. Every privately-endowed college and university is worried about its finances and some are very frightened by the prospect. A completely integrated university, maintaining all departments of learning and providing time and facilities for research by its faculty, cannot live on student fees.

The New York City Center is a particularly noteworthy institution because it gives young Americans a chance. It is a feeder for the Metroplitan Opera as minor league baseball teams are feeders for the major league teams. It is at this place that such new operas as Menotti's are tried out, just as at Tanglewood, Copland, Bernstein, Foss and other young Americans can have their compositions played by such a fine orchestra as the Boston Symphony.

Yet, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood is running in the red and will have to find some way of making a public appeal. It may be difficult to arrange for public subscriptions for such an institution because, unless one actually sees what is being done for young Americans here, it is impossible to realize how much those who expect to make music their careers can accomplish here during the short summer session when they have the opportunity of association with the greatest men in their respective fields. It is an apprenticeship opportunity on the best European standards.

From every standpoint, it would be preferable if our universities, museums, orchestras, schools and other voluntary institutions were continued to be supported by donations from the people as they always have been in American life. Yet, it does come to mind that when billions of dollars, provided by the American taxpayer, are being used to support cultural activities in Europe and Asia, why are our own institutions being permitted to wither on the vine? We finance UNESCO, Point Four, International Students Exchange, libraries and all sorts of activities in the foreign cultural field.

A new committee of Congress has been appointed, under the chairmanship of Rep. Carroll Reece, to investigate the general activities of private Foundations. A similar committee, under the chairmanship of Eugene Cox, had begun to look into this subject, but Cox died and the committee's work was abortive. There is no secrecy about the work of any of the Foundations because they issue reports. The committee's activities therefore will be to analyze these reports in detail and to try to find a pattern of expenditures. While, in these days, emphasis will be laid on subversives, if any, who gain an advantage, which they ought not to have, the taxpayer would be interested in an analysis of the relationship between expenditures within the United States and abroad.

It would be an error to jump to conclusions on this subject without all the data being carefully studied. It may be found that the Foundations meet all the criticisms levelled at them; it may be that they are assuming that as they control the money, they are entitled to follow their own judgment. Yet, the fact is that the Foundations are relieved of taxes on the single assumption that their expenditures will be in the public interest. Whatever the outcome, the Reece committee intends to produce the facts, to analyze them and to make recommendations to Congress for legislation on the subject.

(Copyright, 1953, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Cir.

This C

RAVEN

RECORD & COURIER-TRIBUNE

M

C

on

Benjamin N. Bowers, Mrs. Dona F. McPherson, Mrs. Lawrence K. Miller, Miss Margo Miller, Mrs. John H. Rice, Mrs. Jay C. Rosenfeld, Mrs. Stanley Simkin, and Alan J. Blau, all of Pittsfield; Mrs. [illegible] Crane, Dalton; Mrs. [illegible] and Mrs. Albert [illegible] Mrs. Joseph [illegible] Gladys Greene, [illegible] Mrs. Frederi[illegible] L. Senior and [illegible] Stokes, Lenox; [illegible] rick and Mr. [illegible] Stockbridge;

Also Mrs. [illegible] rett, Great Ba[illegible] Davie Lloyd, L[illegible] Homer, South [illegible] James W. Hun[illegible] Karl Weston, W[illegible]

Boxes are [illegible] communities [illegible] contribute to [illegible] ships for tale[illegible] who cannot a[illegible] tion. Boxes [illegible] idents in [illegible] Richmond an[illegible] the Pittsfield [illegible] chestra. Five boxes have been do-nated for the use of Berkshire Music Center students by summer residents unable to be [illegible] Such reservations may [illegible] made [illegible] the Tanglewood box office.

Allard and Droeghmans Retire from Symphony

Raymond Allard, first bassoon, and cellist Hyppolyte Droeghmans will retire from the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the conclusion of the Berkshire Festival Sunday. They were honored at a luncheon at Tanglewood, Lenox, yesterday, following morning rehearsal.

Pasquale Cardillo was master of ceremonies. Allard and Droeghmans were presented gold watches by Charles Munch, conductor. Speakers included violinist Harry Ellis Dickson; Thomas D. Perry, assistant manager of the orchestra, and Dr. Lewis Perry, trustee.

Allard, born at Sin-le-Noble, France, in 1898, joined the Boston Symphony in 1922. He lives in Brookline. Droeghmans, born in Liege, Belgium, in 1884, has been with the orchestra since 1927. He lives in Newton Center.

'Tanglewood on Parade' for Benefit Tomorrow

With Isaac Stern, violinist; soprano Leontyne Price and her husband, baritone William Warfield as stars, the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be held at Tanglewood tomorrow evening.

There will be demonstrations by every department of the Summer school of music maintained by Boston Symphony Orchestra, lawn supper and a gala evening concert by the orchestra followed by the drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

Isaac Stern will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D major with the Boston Symphony, Charles Munch conducting, at the evening concert beginning at 8:15 in the [illegible] Shed. [illegible] the Suite fro[illegible] Water M[illegible] G[illegible] Gershwin's [illegible] the second [illegible] Leonard Be[illegible] concert [illegible] Leontyne Price W[illegible] and the Festival Cho[illegible]

[279]

Cir. (D 13,075)

This Clipping From
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT

AUG 11 1953

Students From 41 of States, 11 Nations, at Tanglewood

Students from 41 states and 11 foreign countries are enrolled this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, this country's only school of music maintained by a major orchestra. Established by the Boston Symphony orchestra in 1940, when Serge Koussevitzky was its director, the school is now in its 11th six-week session, which will extend to the end of the Berkshire Music Festival on Aug. 16.

400 Enrolled

The enrollment of 400 students represents a true cross-section of advanced music students, teachers and professional musicians, who work in the divisions of orchestra playing and conducting, chamber music, and opera under a distinguished faculty of 36 which includes such outstanding musicians as Aaron Copland, Leonard Bernstein, Carlos Chavez, Boris Goldovsky, Hugh Ross, Lukas Foss, Irving Fine, Paul Ulanowsky, Seymour Lipkin, William Kroll, Richard Burgin and first chair players of the Boston orchestra.

The symphony's music director, Charles Munch, is director of the school, and Ralph Berkowitz is dean. A special department, the Tanglewood Stury group, set up last year for amateurs of music who wish to spend their vacations in the absorption of music, continues this year under the leadership of Ingolf Dahl, with an enrollment of 105, of whom 38 are spending the full six weeks, 12 four weeks, and 55 two weeks.

New York state leads the registration, with more than 100 students. Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Ohio are represented by 90 students. Nineteen each come from Connecticut and New Jersey; 18 each from Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and Washington, D. C. As a result of the Boston Symphony orchestra's first trans-continental tour last spring, when auditions were held for the first time in 10 cities on its route, enrollment from California increased to 10 students. From Salt Lake City and Provo, Utah, have come five pupils. Nine Canadians are studying at Tanglewood this summer, mostly from Toronto and Montreal where the symphony played. The New Orleans orchestral auditions produced seven students now on the Berkshire campus, and five from Florida.

19 From Abroad

Nineteen foreign students are enrolled. Besides the Canadians, Mexico, France, Israel, Sweden, Japan, Korea, Holland, Bolivia, Latvia and China have representatives. Serge Blanc, of Paris, is concertmaster of the student orchestra. From Pusan, South Korea, is John Kim, who is president and conductor of the Republic of Korea Naval Symphony Orchestra and Chorus. A composition pupil with Mexico's composer-conductor Carlos Chavez is Tossi Ichiyanagi of Tokyo.

As the result of seeing in Shanghai in 1950 a U. S. State department film on Tanglewood, Miss Lily Hsia is now a member of the opera department. On invitation of the federal government through a Smith-Mundt award to study conducting is Herbert Blomstedt of Stockholm, Sweden. Fernado Illanes is a chorus student from Bolivia; Johannes Emmen-Riedel is a Study group student from The Hague. George Mester and Alga Zilboorg of Mexico City are studying violin and 'cello. Pnina God is a trumpet player. Usiahu Wiesel is a student 'cellist, both from Israel. Endel Kalam, of Latvia, now resident in Indianapolis, s a viola player.

Ranging in age from 17 to 65, the majority of students are between 19 and 24. The 75 per cent in the full course are highly talented since competition was keen for the tuition scholarships awarded for the second time annually to those who play in the orchestra and chamber music groups or lead in the choral or opera departments. Most of the students live at the Lenox Preparatory school and Wheatleigh, a nearby estate owned by the orchestra. For recreation they swim and boat in Stockbridge bowl, the lake whose shoreline includes the edge of the Tanglewood estate.

Many Vocations

Students at Tanglewood include many vocations. For the first time in the Berkshire Music Center's 11 years the armed services are officially represented, by Warrant Officer John Norris, of Arlington, Va., assistant conductor of the U. S. Navy band, a student of orchestral conducting under Leonard Bernstein.

D. Robert Smith, from the faculty of Bates college, Lewiston, Me., is a student; also Elwood W. Hill, director of music at Bradford Junior college, Bradford, and Mrs. Willa Taylor, a professor at the Pennsylvania State college.

Three husband-and-wife teams are included. Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Moore, of Davidson, N. C., take advance study in clarinet and piano. Mrs. Charles Lawie, Lake Geneva, Wisc., attends general music classes while her husband is busy with Boris Goldovsky in the opera coaching class. Mr. and Mrs. Georg A. Kleinfeld of Cleveland are orchestra players. Twin brothers, Robert and Rodney Pierce of Wichita, Kan., are receiving advanced training on the French horn and oboe from senior members of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

The students drawn from four continents to Tanglewood by the fame of its staff and the hope that a career might be launched from this coveted study include Theresa Green of Baltimore, a three-time winner of the Arthur Godfrey talent scout award; and Sara Mae Endich, an employe of the advertising department of the European edition of the New York Herald-Tribune, here on annual vacation.

Ex-Students 4,217

Former students now scattered through the U. S., Canada, South America, Europe and Australia, many of whom have taken prominent places in the musical life of their communities, total 4,217.

Ten percent of the membership of all major U.S. symphony orchestras is composed of former Tanglewood students, and conductors who have graduated there include Leonard Bernstein, Thor Johnson (Cincinnati), Walter Hendl (Dallas), Eleazar de Carvalho (Rio de Janeiro), Lukas Foss, Robert Zeller, Herman Herz (Duluth), Robert Whitney (Louisville), Richard Bales (National Gallery, Washington), Thomas Schippers, Lorin Maazel, Alexander Leslie (Springfield).

The roster of former students at the Metropolitan opera includes Frank Guarerra, Mack Harrell, Mildred Miller, Anne Bollinger, Paul Knowles, Paula Leachner, and Heidi Kral (Toledo) and Robert McFerrin (St. Louis), winners of the 1953 auditions of the air. New York City Opera company graduates from Tanglewood include Ellen Faull, David Lloyd, Patricia Neway, Mac Morgan, James Pease, David Poleri, Robert Rounseville and Frances Yeend. Mario Lanza of Hollywood was a student in 1940-41. Leontyne Price, the Bess of Broadway's "Porgy and Bess", was a singer in the summer of 1951.

Choral Conductors Too

Choral conductors who are Tanglewood alumni include James Aliferis (University of Minnesota); Jacob Avshalomoff (Columbia University); Lorna Cooke de Varon (New England Conservatory, Boston).

Composers Norman dello Joio, Alan Hovaness, Ulysses Kay, Ned Rorem, Peter Mannin, Jurriaan Andriessen have profited from summers at Tanglewood; and instrumentalists number among them Jacob Krachmalnick, concertmaster of the Philadelphia orchestra; Leonard Pennario, Seymour Lipkin, Norman Carol, Constance Keene, Aldo Parisot and Julius Katchen.

Tanglewood's opera department has given the American premieres of Benjamin Britten's "Peter Grimes" and "Albert Herring," Mozart's "Idiomeneo" and Jacques Ibert's "Le Roi d'Yvetot," and this year, through a grant of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, has commissioned young composers Leonard Rosenan, of New York city, and Louis Mennini, of Rochester, N. Y. to write one-act operas there this summer for performance in 1934.

Cir. (D 23,602) (S 24,091)

This Clipping From
POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
NEW YORKER

UG 11 1953

These Days

—By George E. Sokolsky

A Useful Grant

The Rockefeller Foundation has announced that it has voted a grant of $200,000 to the New York City Center of Music and Drama. This is a valuable cultural aid, supporting an institution that needs to be preserved because it gives to young Americans an opportunity to develop themselves in the arts of expression. Unlike nearly all European countries, the United States provides few opportunities for young artists in all the arts to go through a period of apprenticeship under great masters. It is for this reason that so many talented young people are forced to go to Europe for their training.

It is a curious commentary upon our way of thinking that at a time when we are pouring billions of dollars into foreign countries for the preservation of their cultures, we are permitting our own cultural institutions to decay for lack of funds. Few museums are safe today. There are no longer any Carnegies or Fricks or Otto Kahns available to assist our art museums and libraries. There are no Vanderbilts to come to the support of the Metropolitan Opera. Every privately-endowed college and university is worried about its finances and some are very frightened by the prospect. A completely integrated university, maintaining all departments of learning and providing time and facilities for research by its faculty, cannot live on student fees.

George Sokolsky

The New York City Center is a particularly noteworthy institution because it gives young Americans a chance. It is a feeder for the Metroplitan Opera as minor league baseball teams are feeders for the major league teams. It is at this place that such new operas as Menotti's are tried out, just as at Tanglewood, Copland, Bernstein, Foss and other young Americans can have their compositions played by such a fine orchestra as the Boston Symphony.

Yet, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood is running in the red and will have to find some way of making a public appeal. It may be difficult to arrange for public subscriptions for such an institution because, unless one actually sees what is being done for young Americans here, it is impossible to realize how much those who expect to make music their careers can accomplish here during the short summer session when they have the opportunity of association with the greatest men in their respective fields. It is an apprenticeship opportunity on the best European standards.

From every standpoint, it would be preferable if our universities, museums, orchestras, schools and other voluntary institutions were continued to be supported by donations from the people as they always have been in American life. Yet, it does come to mind that when billions of dollars, provided by the American taxpayer, are being used to support cultural activities in Europe and Asia, why are our own institutions being permitted to wither on the vine? We finance UNESCO, Point Four, International Students Exchange, libraries and all sorts of activities in the foreign cultural field.

A new committee of Congress has been appointed, under the chairmanship of Rep. Carroll Reece, to investigate the general activities of private Foundations. A similar committee, under the chairmanship of Eugene Cox, had begun to look into this subject, but Cox died and the committee's work was abortive. There is no secrecy about the work of any of the Foundations because they issue reports. The committee's activities therefore will be to analyze these reports in detail and to try to find a pattern of expenditures. While, in these days, emphasis will be laid on subversives, if any, who gain an advantage, which they ought not to have, the taxpayer would be interested in an analysis of the relationship between expenditures within the United States and abroad.

It would be an error to jump to conclusions on this subject without all the data being carefully studied. It may be found that the Foundations meet all the criticisms levelled at them; it may be that they are assuming that as they control the money, they are entitled to follow their own judgment. Yet, the fact is that the Foundations are relieved of taxes on the single assumption that their expenditures will be in the public interest. Whatever the outcome, the Reece committee intends to produce the facts, to analyze them and to make recommendations to Congress for legislation on the subject.

(Copyright, 1953, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Benjamin N. Bowers, Mrs. Don[illegible] F. McPherson, Mrs. Lawrence K. Miller, Miss Margo Miller, Mrs. John H. Rice, Mrs. Jay C. Rosenfeld, Mrs. Stanley Simkin, and Alan J. Blau, all of Pittsfield; Mrs. [illegible] Crane, Dalton; Mrs. [illegible] and Mrs. Albert [illegible] Mrs. Joseph [illegible] Gladys Greene, [illegible] Mrs. Freder[illegible] L. Senior a[illegible] Stokes, Lenox; Mrs. [illegible] rick and Mrs. [illegible] Stockbridge;

Also Mrs. W[illegible] rett, Great Ba[illegible] Davie Lloyd, [illegible] Homer, South [illegible] James W. H[illegible] N[illegible] Adams, and Karl Weston, Wi[illegible].

Boxes are [illegible] communities [illegible] contribute to [illegible] ships for tal[illegible] who cannot a[illegible] tion. Boxes ha[illegible] idents in [illegible] Richmond and [illegible] the Pittsfield [illegible] Orchestra. Five boxes have been [illegible]nated for the use of Berkshire Music Center students by [illegible] residents unable to be present. Such reservations may [illegible] the Tanglewood box office.

Six Amusements THE BOSTON DAILY GLOBE—WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 12, 1953

Allard and Droeghmans Retire from Symphony

Raymond Allard, first bassoon, and cellist Hyppolyte Droeghmans will retire from the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the conclusion of the Berkshire Festival Sunday. They were honored at a luncheon at Tanglewood, Lenox, yesterday, following morning rehearsal.

Pasquale Cardillo was master of ceremonies. Allard and Droeghmans were presented gold watches by Charles Munch, conductor. Speakers included violinist Harry Ellis Dickson; Thomas D. Perry, assistant manager of the orchestra, and Dr. Lewis Perry, trustee.

Allard, born at Sin-le-Noble, France, in 1898, joined the Boston Symphony in 1922. He lives in Brookline. Droeghmans, born in Liege, Belgium, in 1884, has been with the orchestra since 1927. He lives in Newton Center.

'Tanglewood on Parade' for Benefit Tomorrow

With Isaac Stern, violinist; soprano Leontyne Price and her husband, baritone William Warfield as stars, the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be held at Tanglewood tomorrow evening.

There will be demonstrations by every department of the Summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, [illegible] lawn supper and a gala evening concert by the orchestra followed by the drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

Isaac Stern will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D major with the Boston Symphony, Charles Munch conducting, at the evening concert beginning at 8:15 in the [illegible]

[279]

Cir. (D 13,075)

This Clipping From
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
AUG 11 1953

Students From 41 of States, 11 Nations, at Tanglewood

Students from 41 states and 11 foreign countries are enrolled this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, this country's only school of music maintained by a major orchestra. Established by the Boston Symphony orchestra in 1940, when Serge Koussevitzky was its director, the school is now in its 11th six-week session, which will extend to the end of the Berkshire Music Festival on Aug. 16.

400 Enrolled

The enrollment of 400 students represents a true cross-section of advanced music students, teachers and professional musicians, who work in the divisions of orchestra playing and conducting, chamber music, and opera under a distinguished faculty of 36 which includes such outstanding musicians as Aaron Copland, Leonard Bernstein, Carlos Chavez, Boris Goldovsky, Hugh Ross, Lukas Foss, Irving Fine, Paul Ulanowsky, Seymour Lipkin, William Kroll, Richard Burgin and first chair players of the Boston orchestra.

The symphony's music director, Charles Munch, is director of the school, and Ralph Berkowitz is dean. A special department, the Tanglewood Stury group, set up last year for amateurs of music who wish to spend their vacations in the absorption of music, continues this year under the leadership of Ingolf Dahl, with an enrollment of 105, of whom 38 are spending the full six weeks, 12 four weeks, and 55 two weeks.

New York state leads the registration, with more than 100 students. Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Ohio are represented by 90 students. Nineteen each come from Connecticut and New Jersey; 18 each from Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and Washington, D. C. As a result of the Boston Symphony orchestra's first trans-continental tour last spring, when auditions were held for the first time in 10 cities on its route, enrollment from California increased to 10 students. From Salt Lake City and Provo, Utah, have come five pupils. Nine Canadians are studying at Tanglewood this summer, mostly from Toronto and Montreal where the symphony played. The New Orleans orchestral auditions produced seven students now on the Berkshire campus, and five from Florida.

19 From Abroad

Nineteen foreign students are enrolled. Besides the Canadians, Mexico, France, Israel, Sweden, Japan, Korea, Holland, Bolivia, Latvia and China have representatives. Serge Blanc, of Paris, s concertmaster of the student orchestra. From Pusan, South Korea, is John Kim, who is president and conductor of the Republic of Korea Naval Symphony Orchestra and Chorus. A composition pupil with Mexico's composer-conductor Carlos Chavez is Tossi Ichiyanagi of Tokyo.

As the result of seeing in Shanghai in 1950 a U. S. State department film on Tanglewood, Miss Lily Hsia is now a member of the opera department. On invitation of the federal government through a Smith-Mundt award to study conducting is Herbert Blomstedt of Stockholm, Sweden. Fernado Illanes is a chorus student from Bolivia; Johannes Emmen-Riedel is a Study group student from The Hague. George Mester and Alga Zilboorg of Mexico City are studying violin and 'cello. Pnina God is a trumpet player, Usiahu Wiesel is a student 'cellist, both from Israel. Endel Kalam, of Latvia, now resident in Indianapolis, s a viola player.

Ranging in age from 17 to 65, the majority of students are between 19 and 24. The 75 per cent in the full course are highly talented since competition was keen for the tuition scholarships awarded for the second time annually to those who play in the orchestra and chamber music groups or lead in the choral or opera departments. Most of the students live at the Lenox Preparatory school and Wheatleigh, a nearby estate owned by the orchestra. For recreation they swim and boat in Stockbridge bowl, the lake whose shoreline includes the edge of the Tanglewood estate.

Many Vocations

Students at Tanglewood include many vocations. For the first time in the Berkshire Music Center's 11 years the armed services are officially represented, by Warrant Officer John Norris, of Arlington, Va., assistant conductor of the U. S. Navy band, a student of orchestral conducting under Leonard Bernstein.

D. Robert Smith, from the faculty of Bates college, Lewiston, Me., is a student; also Elwood W. Hill, director of music at Bradford Junior college, Bradford, and Mrs. Willa Taylor, a professor at the Pennsylvania State college.

Three husband-and-wife teams are included. Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Moore, of Davidson, N. C., take advance study in clarinet and piano. Mrs. Charles Lawie, Lake Geneva, Wisc., attends general music classes while her husband is busy with Boris Goldovsky in the opera coaching class. Mr. and Mrs. Georg A. Kleinfeld of Cleveland are orchestra players. Twin brothers, Robert and Rodney Pierce of Wichita, Kan., are receiving advanced training on the French horn and oboe from senior members of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

The students drawn from four continents to Tanglewood by the fame of its staff and the hope that a career might be launched from this coveted study include Theresa Green of Baltimore, a three-time winner of the Arthur Godfrey talent scout award; and Sara Mae Endich, an employe of the advertising department of the European edition of the New York Herald-Tribune, here on annual vacation.

Ex-Students 4,217

Former students now scattered through the U. S., Canada, South America, Europe and Australia, many of whom have taken prominent places in the musical life of their communities, total 4,217.

Ten percent of the membership of all major U.S. symphony orchestras is composed of former Tanglewood students, and conductors who have graduated there include Leonard Bernstein, Thor Johnson (Cincinnati), Walter Hendl (Dallas), Eleazar de Carvalho (Rio de Janeiro), Lukas Foss, Robert Zeller, Herman Herz (Duluth), Robert Whitney (Louisville), Richard Bales (National Gallery, Washington), Thomas Schippers, Lorin Maazel, Alexander Leslie (Springfield).

The roster of former students at the Metropolitan opera includes Frank Guarerra, Mack Harrell, Mildred Miller, Anne Bollinger, Paul Knowles, Paula Leachner, and Heidi Kral (Toledo) and Robert McFerrin (St. Louis), winners of the 1953 auditions of the air. New York City Opera company graduates from Tanglewood include Ellen Faull, David Lloyd, Patricia Neway, Mac Morgan, James Pease, David Poleri, Robert Rounseville and Frances Yeend. Mario Lanza of Hollywood was a student in 1940-41. Leontyne Price, the Bess of Broadway's "Porgy and Bess", was a singer in the summer of 1951.

Choral Conductors Too

Choral conductors who are Tanglewood alumni include James Aliferis (University of Minnesota); Jacob Avshalomoff (Columbia University); Lorna Cooke de Varon (New England Conservatory, Boston).

Composers Norman dello Joio, Alan Hovaness, Ulysses Kay, Ned Rorem, Peter Mannin, Jurriaan Andriessen have profited from summers at Tanglewood; and instrumentalists number among them Jacob Krachmalnick, concertmaster of the Philadelphia orchestra; Leonard Pennario, Seymour Lipkin, Norman Carol, Constance Keene, Aldo Parisot and Julius Katchen.

Tanglewood's opera department has given the American premieres of Benjamin Britten's "Peter Grimes" and "Albert Herring," Mozart's "Idiomeneo" and Jacques Ibert's "Le Roi d'Yvetot," and this year, through a grant of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, has commissioned young composers Leonard Rosenan, of New York city, and Louis Mennini, of Rochester, N. Y. to write one-act operas there this summer for performance in 1954.

This Clipping From
ELMIRA, N. Y.
ADVERTISER
AUG 11 1953

AUG 11 1953

RECORD & COURIER-TRIBUNE

These Days

—By George E. Sokolsky

A Useful Grant

The Rockefeller Foundation has announced that it has voted a grant of $200,000 to the New York City Center of Music and Drama. This is a valuable cultural aid, supporting an institution that needs to be preserved because it gives to young Americans an opportunity to develop themselves in the arts of expression. Unlike nearly all European countries, the United States provides few opportunities for young artists in all the arts to go through a period of apprenticeship under great masters. It is for this reason that so many talented young people are forced to go to Europe for their training.

It is a curious commentary upon our way of thinking that at a time when we are pouring billions of dollars into foreign countries for the preservation of their cultures, we are permitting our own cultural institutions to decay for lack of funds. Few museums are safe today. There are no longer any Carnegies or Fricks or Otto Kahns available to assist our art museums and libraries. There are no Vanderbilts to come to the support of the Metropolitan Opera. Every privately-endowed college and university is worried about its finances and some are very frightened by the prospect. A completely integrated university, maintaining all departments of learning and providing time and facilities for research by its faculty, cannot live on student fees.

George Sokolsky

The New York City Center is a particularly noteworthy institution because it gives young Americans a chance. It is a feeder for the Metroplitan Opera as minor league baseball teams are feeders for the major league teams. It is at this place that such new operas as Menotti's are tried out, just as at Tanglewood, Copland, Bernstein, Foss and other young Americans can have their compositions played by such a fine orchestra as the Boston Symphony.

Yet, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood is running in the red and will have to find some way of making a public appeal. It may be difficult to arrange for public subscriptions for such an institution because, unless one actually sees what is being done for young Americans here, it is impossible to realize how much those who expect to make music their careers can accomplish here during the short summer session when they have the opportunity of association with the greatest men in their respective fields. It is an apprenticeship opportunity on the best European standards.

From every standpoint, it would be preferable if our universities, museums, orchestras, schools and other voluntary institutions were continued to be supported by donations from the people as they always have been in American life. Yet, it does come to mind that when billions of dollars, provided by the American taxpayer, are being used to support cultural activities in Europe and Asia, why are our own institutions being permitted to wither on the vine? We finance UNESCO, Point Four, International Students Exchange, libraries and all sorts of activities in the foreign cultural field.

A new committee of Congress has been appointed, under the chairmanship of Rep. Carroll Reece, to investigate the general activities of private Foundations. A similar committee, under the chairmanship of Eugene Cox, had begun to look into this subject, but Cox died and the committee's work was abortive. There is no secrecy about the work of any of the Foundations because they issue reports. The committee's activities therefore will be to analyze these reports in detail and to try to find a pattern of expenditures. While, in these days, emphasis will be laid on subversives, if any, who gain an advantage, which they ought not to have, the taxpayer would be interested in an analysis of the relationship between expenditures within the United States and abroad.

It would be an error to jump to conclusions on this subject without all the data being carefully studied. It may be found that the Foundations meet all the criticisms levelled at them; it may be that they are assuming that as they control the money, they are entitled to follow their own judgment. Yet, the fact is that the Foundations are relieved of taxes on the single assumption that their expenditures will be in the public interest. Whatever the outcome, the Reece committee intends to produce the facts, to analyze them and to make recommendations to Congress for legislation on the subject.

(Copyright, 1953, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

M

Cl

Benjamin N. Bowers, Mrs. Don[illegible] F. McPherson, Mrs. Lawrence [illegible] Miller, Miss Margo Miller, Mrs. John H. Rice, Mrs. Jay C. [illegible]feld, Mrs. Stanley Simkin, [illegible] J. Blau, all of Pittsfield; [illegible] Crane, Dalton; [illegible] and Mrs. Albert [illegible] Mrs. Joseph [illegible] Gladys Greene, [illegible] Mrs. Freder[illegible] L. Senior [illegible] Stokes, [illegible] rick and [illegible] Stockbridge;

Also Mrs. [illegible] rett, Great [illegible] Davie Lloyd, [illegible] Homer, South [illegible] James W. H[illegible] Karl Weston, [illegible]

Boxes are [illegible] communities [illegible] contribute [illegible] ships for tal[illegible] who cannot [illegible] tion. Boxes [illegible] idents in [illegible] Richmond and [illegible] the Pittsfield [illegible] chestra. Five boxes [illegible] nated for the use of Berkshire Music Center students [illegible] dents unable [illegible] reservations may [illegible] Tanglewood box office.

Allard and Droeghmans Retire from Symphony

Raymond Allard, first bassoon, and cellist Hyppolyte Droeghmans will retire from the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the conclusion of the Berkshire Festival Sunday. They were honored at a luncheon at Tanglewood, Lenox, yesterday, following morning rehearsal.

Pasquale Cardillo was master of ceremonies. Allard and Droeghmans were presented gold watches by Charles Munch, conductor. Speakers included violinist Harry Ellis Dickson; Thomas D. Perry, assistant manager of the orchestra, and Dr. Lewis Perry, trustee.

Allard, born at Sin-le-Noble, France, in 1898, joined the Boston Symphony in 1922. He lives in Brookline. Droeghmans, born in Liege, Belgium, in 1884, has been with the orchestra since 1927. He lives in Newton Center.

'Tanglewood on Parade' for Benefit Tomorrow

With Isaac Stern, violinist; soprano Leontyne Price and her husband, baritone William Warfield as stars, the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be held at Tanglewood tomorrow evening.

There will be demonstrations by every department of the Summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, a lawn supper and a gala evening concert by the orchestra followed by the drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

Isaac Stern will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D major with the Boston Symphony, Charles Munch conducting, at the evening concert beginning at 8:15 in the

Cir. (D 13,075)

This Clipping From
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT

AUG 11 1953

Students From 41 of States, 11 Nations, at Tanglewood

Students from 41 states and 11 foreign countries are enrolled this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, this country's only school of music maintained by a major orchestra. Established by the Boston Symphony orchestra in 1940, when Serge Koussevitzky was its director, the school is now in its 11th six-week session, which will extend to the end of the Berkshire Music Festival on Aug. 16.

400 Enrolled

The enrollment of 400 students represents a true cross-section of advanced music students, teachers and professional musicians who work in the divisions of orchestra playing and conducting, chamber music, and opera under a distinguished faculty of 36 which includes such outstanding musicians as Aaron Copland, Leonard Bernstein, Carlos Chavez, Boris Goldovsky, Hugh Ross, Lukas Foss, Irving Fine, Paul Ulanowsky, Seymour Lipkin, William Kroll, Richard Burgin and first chair players of the Boston orchestra.

The symphony's music director, Charles Munch, is director of the school, and Ralph Berkowitz is dean. A special department, the Tanglewood Stury group, set up last year for amateurs of music who wish to spend their vacations in the absorption of music, continues this year under the leadership of Ingolf Dahl, with an enrollment of 105, of whom 38 are spending the full six weeks, 12 four weeks, and 55 two weeks.

New York state leads the registration, with more than 100 students. Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Ohio are represented by 90 students. Nineteen each come from Connecticut and New Jersey; 18 each from Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and Washington, D. C. As a result of the Boston Symphony orchestra's first trans-continental tour last spring, when auditions were held for the first time in 10 cities on its route, enrollment from California increased to 10 students. From Salt Lake City and Provo, Utah, have come five pupils. Nine Canadians are studying at Tanglewood this summer, mostly from Toronto and Montreal where the symphony played. The New Orleans orchestral auditions produced seven students now on the Berkshire campus, and five from Florida.

19 From Abroad

Nineteen foreign students are enrolled. Besides the Canadians, Mexico, France, Israel, Sweden, Japan, Korea, Holland, Bolivia, Latvia and China have representatives. Serge Blanc, of Paris, s concertmaster of the student orchestra. From Pusan, South Korea, is John Kim, who is president and conductor of the Republic of Korea Naval Symphony Orchestra and Chorus. A composition pupil with Mexico's composer-conductor Carlos Chavez is Tossi Ichiyanagi of Tokyo.

As the result of seeing in Shanghai in 1950 a U. S. State department film on Tanglewood, Miss Lily Hsia is now a member of the opera department. On invitation of the federal government through a Smith-Mundt award to study conducting is Herbert Blomstedt of Stockholm, Sweden. Fernado Illanes is a chorus student from Bolivia; Johannes Emmen-Riedel is a Study group student from The Hague. George Mester and Alga Zilboorg of Mexico City are studying violin and 'cello. Pnina God is a trumpet player, Usiahu Wiesel is a student 'cellist, both from Israel. Endel Kalam, of Latvia, now resident in Indianapolis, s a viola player.

Ranging in age from 17 to 65, the majority of students are between 19 and 24. The 75 per cent in the full course are highly talented since competition was keen for the tuition scholarships awarded for the second time annually to those who play in the orchestra and chamber music groups or lead in the choral or opera departments. Most of the students live at the Lenox Preparatory school and Wheatleigh, a nearby estate owned by the orchestra. For recreation they swim and boat in Stockbridge bowl, the lake whose shoreline includes the edge of the Tanglewood estate.

Many Vocations

Students at Tanglewood include many vocations. For the first time in the Berkshire Music Center's 11 years the armed services are officially represented, by Warrant Officer John Norris, of Arlington, Va., assistant conductor of the U. S. Navy band, a student of orchestral conducting under Leonard Bernstein.

D. Robert Smith, from the faculty of Bates college, Lewiston, Me., is a student; also Elwood W. Hill, director of music at Bradford Junior college, Bradford, and Mrs. Willa Taylor, a professor at the Pennsylvania State college.

Three husband-and-wife teams are included. Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Moore, of Davidson, N. C., take advance study in clarinet and piano. Mrs. Charles Lawie, Lake Geneva, Wisc., attends general music classes while her husband is busy with Boris Goldovsky in the opera coaching class. Mr. and Mrs. Georg A. Kleinfeld of Cleveland are orchestra players. Twin brothers, Robert and Rodney Pierce of Wichita, Kan., are receiving advanced training on the French horn and oboe from senior members of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

The students drawn from four continents to Tanglewood by the fame of its staff and the hope that a career might be launched from this coveted study include Theresa Green of Baltimore, a three-time winner of the Arthur Godfrey talent scout award; and Sara Mae Endich, an employe of the advertising department of the European edition of the New York Herald-Tribune, here on annual vacation.

Ex-Students 4,217

Former students now scattered through the U. S., Canada, South America, Europe and Australia, many of whom have taken prominent places in the musical life of their communities, total 4,217.

Ten percent of the membership of all major U.S. symphony orchestras is composed of former Tanglewood students, and conductors who have graduated there include Leonard Bernstein, Thor Johnson (Cincinnati), Walter Hendl (Dallas), Eleazar de Carvalho (Rio de Janeiro), Lukas Foss, Robert Zeller, Herman Herz (Duluth), Robert Whitney (Louisville), Richard Bales (National Gallery, Washington), Thomas Schippers, Lorin Maazel, Alexander Leslie (Springfield).

The roster of former students at the Metropolitan opera includes Frank Guarerra, Mack Harrell, Mildred Miller, Anne Bollinger, Paul Knowles, Paula Leachner, and Heidi Kral (Toledo) and Robert McFerrin (St. Louis), winners of the 1953 auditions of the air. New York City Opera company graduates from Tanglewood include Ellen Faull, David Lloyd, Patricia Neway, Mac Morgan, James Pease, David Poleri, Robert Rounseville and Frances Yeend. Mario Lanza of Hollywood was a student in 1940-41. Leontyne Price, the Bess of Broadway's "Porgy and Bess", was a singer in the summer of 1951.

Choral Conductors Too

Choral conductors who are Tanglewood alumni include James Aliferis (University of Minnesota); Jacob Avshalomoff (Columbia University); Lorna Cooke de Varon (New England Conservatory, Boston).

Composers Norman dello Joio, Alan Hovaness, Ulysses Kay, Ned Rorem, Peter Mannin, Jurriaan Andriessen have profited from summers at Tanglewood; and instrumentalists number among them Jacob Krachmalnick, concertmaster of the Philadelphia orchestra; Leonard Pennario, Seymour Lipkin, Norman Carol, Constance Keene, Aldo Parisot and Julius Katchen.

Tanglewood's opera department has given the American premieres of Benjamin Britten's "Peter Grimes" and "Albert Herring," Mozart's "Idiomeneo" and Jacques Ibert's "Le Roi d'Yvetot," and this year, through a grant of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, has commissioned young composers Leonard Rosenan, of New York city, and Louis Mennini, of Rochester, N. Y. to write one-act operas there this summer for performance in 1954.

This Clipping From
SIOUX CITY, IOWA
JOURNAL-TRIBUNE

AUG 11 1953

AUG 11 1953

Cir.

This C
RAVEN
RECORD & COURIER-TRIBUNE

These Days

—By George E. Sokolsky

A Useful Grant

The Rockefeller Foundation has announced that it has voted a grant of $200,000 to the New York City Center of Music and Drama. This is a valuable cultural aid, supporting an institution that needs to be preserved because it gives to young Americans an opportunity to develop themselves in the arts of expression. Unlike nearly all European countries, the United States provides few opportunities for young artists in all the arts to go through a period of apprenticeship under great masters. It is for this reason that so many talented young people are forced to go to Europe for their training.

It is a curious commentary upon our way of thinking that at a time when we are pouring billions of dollars into foreign countries for the preservation of their cultures, we are permitting our own cultural institutions to decay for lack of funds. Few museums are safe today. There are no longer any Carnegies or Fricks or Otto Kahns available to assist our art museums and libraries. There are no Vanderbilts to come to the support of the Metropolitan Opera. Every privately-endowed college and university is worried about its finances and some are very frightened by the prospect. A completely integrated university, maintaining all departments of learning and providing time and facilities for research by its faculty, cannot live on student fees.

George Sokolsky

The New York City Center is a particularly noteworthy institution because it gives young Americans a chance. It is a feeder for the Metroplitan Opera as minor league baseball teams are feeders for the major league teams. It is at this place that such new operas as Menotti's are tried out, just as at Tanglewood, Copland, Bernstein, Foss and other young Americans can have their compositions played by such a fine orchestra as the Boston Symphony.

Yet, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood is running in the red and will have to find some way of making a public appeal. It may be difficult to arrange for public subscriptions for such an institution because, unless one actually sees what is being done for young Americans here, it is impossible to realize how much those who expect to make music their careers can accomplish here during the short summer session when they have the opportunity of association with the greatest men in their respective fields. It is an apprenticeship opportunity on the best European standards.

From every standpoint, it would be preferable if our universities, museums, orchestras, schools and other voluntary institutions were continued to be supported by donations from the people as they always have been in American life. Yet, it does come to mind that when billions of dollars, provided by the American taxpayer, are being used to support cultural activities in Europe and Asia, why are our own institutions being permitted to wither on the vine? We finance UNESCO, Point Four, International Students Exchange, libraries and all sorts of activities in the foreign cultural field.

A new committee of Congress has been appointed, under the chairmanship of Rep. Carroll Reece, to investigate the general activities of private Foundations. A similar committee, under the chairmanship of Eugene Cox, had begun to look into this subject, but Cox died and the committee's work was abortive. There is no secrecy about the work of any of the Foundations because they issue reports. The committee's activities therefore will be to analyze these reports in detail and to try to find a pattern of expenditures. While, in these days, emphasis will be laid on subversives, if any, who gain an advantage, which they ought not to have, the taxpayer would be interested in an analysis of the relationship between expenditures within the United States and abroad.

It would be an error to jump to conclusions on this subject without all the data being carefully studied. It may be found that the Foundations meet all the criticisms levelled at them; it may be that they are assuming that as they control the money, they are entitled to follow their own judgment. Yet, the fact is that the Foundations are relieved of taxes on the single assumption that their expenditures will be in the public interest. Whatever the outcome, the Reece committee intends to produce the facts, to analyze them and to make recommendations to Congress for legislation on the subject.

(Copyright, 1953, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

M

Cl

Benjamin N. Bowers, Mrs. Don F. McPherson, Mrs. Lawrence K. Miller, Miss Margo Miller, Mrs. John H. Rice, Mrs. Jay C. Rosenfeld, Mrs. Stanley Simkin, and Alan J. Blau, all of Pittsfield; Mrs. Bru[illegible] Crane, Dalton; Mrs. S[illegible] and Mrs. Albert St[illegible] Mrs. Joseph [illegible] Gladys Greene, [illegible] Mrs. Frederi[illegible] L. Senior and [illegible] Stokes, Lenox; [illegible] rick and Mrs. [illegible] Stockbridge;

Also Mrs. W[illegible] Barrett, Great Barr[illegible] Davie Lloyd, [illegible] Homer, South [illegible] James W. Hunt, North Adams, and Karl Weston, W[illegible]

Boxes are [illegible] communities [illegible] contribute [illegible] ships for tal[illegible] who cannot a[illegible] tion. Boxes [illegible] idents in [illegible] Richmond and S[illegible] the Pittsfield [illegible] chestra. Five boxes have been [illegible] nated for the use of Berkshire Music Center students by [illegible] dents unable to [illegible] Such reservations may [illegible] the Tanglewood box office.

Six Amusements THE BOSTON DAILY GLOBE—WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 12, 1953

Allard and Droeghmans Retire from Symphony

Raymond Allard, first bassoon, and cellist Hyppolyte Droeghmans will retire from the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the conclusion of the Berkshire Festival Sunday.

They were honored at a luncheon at Tanglewood, Lenox, yesterday, following morning rehearsal.

Pasquale Cardillo was master of ceremonies. Allard and Droeghmans were presented gold watches by Charles Munch, conductor. Speakers included violinist Harry Ellis Dickson; Thomas D. Perry, assistant manager of the orchestra, and Dr. Lewis Perry, trustee.

Allard, born at Sin-le-Noble, France, in 1898, joined the Boston Symphony in 1922. He lives in Brookline. Droeghmans, born in Liege, Belgium, in 1884, has been with the orchestra since 1927. He lives in Newton Center.

'Tanglewood on Parade' for Benefit Tomorrow

With Isaac Stern, violinist; soprano Leontyne Price and her husband, baritone William Warfield as stars, the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be held at Tanglewood tomorrow evening.

There will be demonstrations by every department of the Summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, a lawn supper and a gala evening concert by the orchestra followed by the drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

Isaac Stern will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D major with the Boston Symphony, Charles Munch conducting, at the evening concert beginning at 8:15 in the Music Shed. Mr. [illegible] conduct the Suite from "Water Music."

[illegible] George Gershwin's [illegible] [illegible] the second half [illegible] concert program [illegible] conducted by Leonard Bernstein [illegible] Leontyne Price, [illegible] and the Festival Chorus.

Cir. (D 13,075)

This Clipping From
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT

AUG 11 1953

Students From 41 of States, 11 Nations, at Tanglewood

Students from 41 states and 11 foreign countries are enrolled this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, this country's only school of music maintained by a major orchestra. Established by the Boston Symphony orchestra in 1940, when Serge Koussevitzky was its director, the school is now in its 11th six-week session, which will extend to the end of the Berkshire Music Festival on Aug. 16.

400 Enrolled

The enrollment of 400 students represents a true cross-section of advanced music students, teachers and professional musicians who work in the divisions of orchestra playing and conducting, chamber music, and opera under a distinguished faculty of 36 which includes such outstanding musicians as Aaron Copland, Leonard Bernstein, Carlos Chavez, Boris Goldovsky, Hugh Ross, Lukas Foss, Irving Fine, Paul Ulanowsky, Seymour Lipkin, William Kroll, Richard Burgin and first chair players of the Boston orchestra.

The symphony's music director, Charles Munch, is director of the school, and Ralph Berkowitz is dean. A special department, the Tanglewood Stury group, set up last year for amateurs of music who wish to spend their vacations in the absorption of music, continues this year under the leadership of Ingolf Dahl, with an enrollment of 105, of whom 38 are spending the full six weeks, 12 four weeks, and 55 two weeks.

New York state leads the registration, with more than 100 students. Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Ohio are represented by 90 students. Nineteen each come from Connecticut and New Jersey; 18 each from Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and Washington, D. C. As a result of the Boston Symphony orchestra's first trans-continental tour last spring, when auditions were held for the first time in 10 cities on its route, enrollment from California increased to 10 students. From Salt Lake City and Provo, Utah, have come five pupils. Nine Canadians are studying at Tanglewood this summer, mostly from Toronto and Montreal where the symphony played. The New Orleans orchestral auditions produced seven students now on the Berkshire campus, and five from Florida.

19 From Abroad

Nineteen foreign students are enrolled. Besides the Canadians, Mexico, France, Israel, Sweden, Japan, Korea, Holland, Bolivia, Latvia and China have representatives. Serge Blanc, of Paris, s concertmaster of the student orchestra. From Pusan, South Korea, is John Kim, who is president and conductor of the Republic of Korea Naval Symphony Orchestra and Chorus. A composition pupil with Mexico's composer-conductor Carlos Chavez is Tossi Ichiyanagi of Tokyo.

As the result of seeing in Shanghai in 1950 a U. S. State department film on Tanglewood, Miss Lily Hsia is now a member of the opera department. On invitation of the federal government through a Smith-Mundt award to study conducting is Herbert Blomstedt of Stockholm, Sweden. Fernado Illanes is a chorus student from Bolivia; Johannes Emmen-Riedel is a Study group student from The Hague. George Mester and Alga Zilboorg of Mexico City are studying violin and 'cello. Pnina God is a trumpet player, Usiahu Wiesel is a student 'cellist, both from Israel. Endel Kalam, of Latvia, now resident in Indianapolis, s a viola player.

Ranging in age from 17 to 65, the majority of students are between 19 and 24. The 75 per cent in the full course are highly talented since competition was keen for the tuition scholarships awarded for the second time annually to those who play in the orchestra and chamber music groups or lead in the choral or opera departments. Most of the students live at the Lenox Preparatory school and Wheatleigh, a nearby estate owned by the orchestra. For recreation they swim and boat in Stockbridge bowl, the lake whose shoreline includes the edge of the Tanglewood estate.

Many Vocations

Students at Tanglewood include many vocations. For the first time in the Berkshire Music Center's 11 years the armed services are officially represented, by Warrant Officer John Norris, of Arlington, Va., assistant conductor of the U. S. Navy band, a student of orchestral conducting under Leonard Bernstein.

D. Robert Smith, from the faculty of Bates college, Lewiston, Me., is a student; also Elwood W. Hill, director of music at Bradford Junior college, Bradford, and Mrs. Willa Taylor, a professor at the Pennsylvania State college.

Three husband-and-wife teams are included. Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Moore, of Davidson, N. C., take advance study in clarinet and piano. Mrs. Charles Lawie, Lake Geneva, Wisc., attends general music classes while her husband is busy with Boris Goldovsky in the opera coaching class. Mr. and Mrs. Georg A. Kleinfeld of Cleveland are orchestra players. Twin brothers, Robert and Rodney Pierce of Wichita, Kan., are receiving advanced training on the French horn and oboe from senior members of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

The students drawn from four continents to Tanglewood by the fame of its staff and the hope that a career might be launched from this coveted study include Theresa Green of Baltimore, a three-time winner of the Arthur Godfrey talent scout award; and Sara Mae Endich, an employe of the advertising department of the European edition of the New York Herald-Tribune, here on annual vacation.

Ex-Students 4,217

Former students now scattered through the U. S., Canada, South America, Europe and Australia, many of whom have taken prominent places in the musical life of their communities, total 4,217.

Ten percent of the membership of all major U.S. symphony orchestras is composed of former Tanglewood students, and conductors who have graduated there include Leonard Bernstein, Thor Johnson (Cincinnati), Walter Hendl (Dallas), Eleazar de Carvalho (Rio de Janeiro), Lukas Foss, Robert Zeller, Herman Herz (Duluth), Robert Whitney (Louisville), Richard Bales (National Gallery, Washington), Thomas Schippers, Lorin Maazel, Alexander Leslie (Springfield).

The roster of former students at the Metropolitan opera includes Frank Guarerra, Mack Harrell, Mildred Miller, Anne Bollinger, Paul Knowles, Paula Leachner, and Heidi Kral (Toledo) and Robert McFerrin (St. Louis), winners of the 1953 auditions of the air. New York City Opera company graduates from Tanglewood include Ellen Faull, David Lloyd, Patricia Neway, Mac Morgan, James Pease, David Poleri, Robert Rounseville and Frances Yeend. Mario Lanza of Hollywood was a student in 1940-41. Leontyne Price, the Bess of Broadway's "Porgy and Bess", was a singer in the summer of 1951.

Choral Conductors Too

Choral conductors who are Tanglewood alumni include James Aliferis (University of Minnesota); Jacob Avshalomoff (Columbia University); Lorna Cooke de Varon (New England Conservatory, Boston).

Composers Norman dello Joio, Alan Hovaness, Ulysses Kay, Ned Rorem, Peter Mannin, Jurriaan Andriessen have profited from summers at Tanglewood; and instrumentalists number among them Jacob Krachmalnick, concertmaster of the Philadelphia orchestra; Leonard Pennario, Seymour Lipkin, Norman Carol, Constance Keene, Aldo Parisot and Julius Katchen.

Tanglewood's opera department has given the American premieres of Benjamin Britten's "Peter Grimes" and "Albert Herring," Mozart's "Idiomeneo" and Jacques Ibert's "Le Roi d'Yvetot," and this year, through a grant of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, has commissioned young composers Leonard Rosenan, of New York city, and Louis Mennini, of Rochester, N. Y. to write one-act operas there this summer for performance in 1954.

Cir. (D 3,443)

This Clipping From NORWICH, N. Y.
SUN

AUG 11 1953

These Days

—By George E. Sokolsky

A Useful Grant

The Rockefeller Foundation has announced that it has voted a grant of $200,000 to the New York City Center of Music and Drama. This is a valuable cultural aid, supporting an institution that needs to be preserved because it gives to young Americans an opportunity to develop themselves in the arts of expression. Unlike nearly all European countries, the United States provides few opportunities for young artists in all the arts to go through a period of apprenticeship under great masters. It is for this reason that so many talented young people are forced to go to Europe for their training.

It is a curious commentary upon our way of thinking that at a time when we are pouring billions of dollars into foreign countries for the preservation of their cultures, we are permitting our own cultural institutions to decay for lack of funds. Few museums are safe today. There are no longer any Carnegies or Fricks or Otto Kahns available to assist our art museums and libraries. There are no Vanderbilts to come to the support of the Metropolitan Opera. Every privately-endowed college and university is worried about its finances and some are very frightened by the prospect. A completely integrated university, maintaining all departments of learning and providing time and facilities for research by its faculty, cannot live on student fees.

George Sokolsky

The New York City Center is a particularly noteworthy institution because it gives young Americans a chance. It is a feeder for the Metroplitan Opera as minor league baseball teams are feeders for the major league teams. It is at this place that such new operas as Menotti's are tried out, just as at Tanglewood, Copland, Bernstein, Foss and other young Americans can have their compositions played by such a fine orchestra as the Boston Symphony.

Yet, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood is running in the red and will have to find some way of making a public appeal. It may be difficult to arrange for public subscriptions for such an institution because, unless one actually sees what is being done for young Americans here, it is impossible to realize how much those who expect to make music their careers can accomplish here during the short summer session when they have the opportunity of association with the greatest men in their respective fields. It is an apprenticeship opportunity on the best European standards.

From every standpoint, it would be preferable if our universities, museums, orchestras, schools and other voluntary institutions were continued to be supported by donations from the people as they always have been in American life. Yet, it does come to mind that when billions of dollars, provided by the American taxpayer, are being used to support cultural activities in Europe and Asia, why are our own institutions being permitted to wither on the vine? We finance UNESCO, Point Four, International Students Exchange, libraries and all sorts of activities in the foreign cultural field.

A new committee of Congress has been appointed, under the chairmanship of Rep. Carroll Reece, to investigate the general activities of private Foundations. A similar committee, under the chairmanship of Eugene Cox, had begun to look into this subject, but Cox died and the committee's work was abortive. There is no secrecy about the work of any of the Foundations because they issue reports. The committee's activities therefore will be to analyze these reports in detail and to try to find a pattern of expenditures. While, in these days, emphasis will be laid on subversives, if any, who gain an advantage, which they ought not to have, the taxpayer would be interested in an analysis of the relationship between expenditures within the United States and abroad.

It would be an error to jump to conclusions on this subject without all the data being carefully studied. It may be found that the Foundations meet all the criticisms levelled at them; it may be that they are assuming that as they control the money, they are entitled to follow their own judgment. Yet, the fact is that the Foundations are relieved of taxes on the single assumption that their expenditures will be in the public interest. Whatever the outcome, the Reece committee intends to produce the facts, to analyze them and to make recommendations to Congress for legislation on the subject.

(Copyright, 1953, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

This Cl
RAVEN
RECORD & COURIER-TRIBUNE

Cir.

M

CI

Benjamin N. Bowers, Mrs. Don F. McPherson, Mrs. Lawrence K. Miller, Miss Margo Miller, Mrs. John H. Rice, Mrs. Jay C. R[illegible]feld, Mrs. Stanley Simkin, an[illegible] J. Blau, all of Pittsfield; Mrs. [illegible] Crane, Dalton; Mrs. [illegible] and Mrs. Albert Ste[illegible] Mrs. Joseph [illegible] Gladys Greene, [illegible] Mrs. Freder[illegible] L. Senior [illegible] Stokes, Len[illegible] rick and [illegible] Stockbridge;

Also Mrs. William [illegible] rett, Great Bar[illegible] Davie Lloyd, L[illegible] Homer, South [illegible] James W. Hull, [illegible] Karl Weston, W[illegible]

Boxes are be[illegible] communities [illegible] contribute to [illegible] ships for tale[illegible] who cannot a[illegible] tion. Boxes [illegible] idents in Pitts[illegible] Richmond and S[illegible] the Pittsfield L[illegible] chestra. Five boxes have been [illegible]nated for the use of Berkshire Music Center students by summer residents unable to be pr[illegible] Such reservations may [illegible] the Tanglewood box office.

Allard and Droeghmans Retire from Symphony

Raymond Allard, first bassoon, and cellist Hyppolyte Droeghmans will retire from the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the conclusion of the Berkshire Festival Sunday. They were honored at a luncheon at Tanglewood, Lenox, yesterday, following morning rehearsal.

Pasquale Cardillo was master of ceremonies. Allard and Droeghmans were presented gold watches by Charles Munch, conductor. Speakers included violinist Harry Ellis Dickson; Thomas D. Perry, assistant manager of the orchestra, and Dr. Lewis Perry, trustee.

Allard, born at Sin-le-Noble, France, in 1898, joined the Boston Symphony in 1922. He lives in Brookline. Droeghmans, born in Liege, Belgium, in 1884, has been with the orchestra since 1927. He lives in Newton Center.

'Tanglewood on Parade' for Benefit Tomorrow

With Isaac Stern, violinist; soprano Leontyne Price and her husband, baritone William Warfield as stars, the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be held at Tanglewood tomorrow evening.

There will be demonstrations by every department of the Summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, a lawn supper and a gala evening concert by the orchestra followed by the drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

Isaac Stern will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D major with the Boston Symphony, Charles Munch conducting, at the evening concert beginning at 8:15 in the [279]

Cir. (D 13,075)

This Clipping From
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT

AUG 11 1953

Students From 41 of States, 11 Nations, at Tanglewood

Students from 41 states and 11 foreign countries are enrolled this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, this country's only school of music maintained by a major orchestra. Established by the Boston Symphony orchestra in 1940, when Serge Koussevitzky was its director, the school is now in its 11th six-week session, which will extend to the end of the Berkshire Music Festival on Aug. 16.

400 Enrolled

The enrollment of 400 students represents a true cross-section of advanced music students, teachers and professional musicians who work in the divisions of orchestra playing and conducting, chamber music, and opera under a distinguished faculty of 36 which includes such outstanding musicians as Aaron Copland, Leonard Bernstein, Carlos Chavez, Boris Goldovsky, Hugh Ross, Lukas Foss, Irving Fine, Paul Ulanowsky, Seymour Lipkin, William Kroll, Richard Burgin and first chair players of the Boston orchestra.

The symphony's music director, Charles Munch, is director of the school, and Ralph Berkowitz is dean. A special department, the Tanglewood Stury group, set up last year for amateurs of music who wish to spend their vacations in the absorption of music, continues this year under the leadership of Ingolf Dahl, with an enrollment of 105, of whom 38 are spending the full six weeks, 12 four weeks, and 55 two weeks.

New York state leads the registration, with more than 100 students. Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Ohio are represented by 90 students. Nineteen each come from Connecticut and New Jersey; 18 each from Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and Washington, D. C. As a result of the Boston Symphony orchestra's first trans-continental tour last spring, when auditions were held for the first time in 10 cities on its route, enrollment from California increased to 10 students. From Salt Lake City and Provo, Utah, have come five pupils. Nine Canadians are studying at Tanglewood this summer, mostly from Toronto and Montreal where the symphony played. The New Orleans orchestral auditions produced seven students now on the Berkshire campus, and five from Florida.

19 From Abroad

Nineteen foreign students are enrolled. Besides the Canadians, Mexico, France, Israel, Sweden, Japan, Korea, Holland, Bolivia, Latvia and China have representatives. Serge Blanc, of Paris, is concertmaster of the student orchestra. From Pusan, South Korea, is John Kim, who is president and conductor of the Republic of Korea Naval Symphony Orchestra and Chorus. A composition pupil with Mexico's composer-conductor Carlos Chavez is Tossi Ichiyanagi of Tokyo.

As the result of seeing in Shanghai in 1950 a U. S. State department film on Tanglewood, Miss Lily Hsia is now a member of the opera department. On invitation of the federal government through a Smith-Mundt award to study conducting is Herbert Blomstedt of Stockholm, Sweden. Fernado Illanes is a chorus student from Bolivia; Johannes Emmen-Riedel is a Study group student from The Hague. George Mester and Alga Zilboorg of Mexico City are studying violin and 'cello. Pnina God is a trumpet player, Usiahu Wiesel is a student 'cellist, both from Israel. Endel Kalam, of Latvia, now resident in Indianapolis, s a viola player.

Ranging in age from 17 to 65, the majority of students are between 19 and 24. The 75 per cent in the full course are highly talented since competition was keen for the tuition scholarships awarded for the second time annually to those who play in the orchestra and chamber music groups or lead in the choral or opera departments. Most of the students live at the Lenox Preparatory school and Wheatleigh, a nearby estate owned by the orchestra. For recreation they swim and boat in Stockbridge bowl, the lake whose shoreline includes the edge of the Tanglewood estate.

Many Vocations

Students at Tanglewood include many vocations. For the first time in the Berkshire Music Center's 11 years the armed services are officially represented, by Warrant Officer John Norris, of Arlington, Va., assistant conductor of the U. S. Navy band, a student of orchestral conducting under Leonard Bernstein.

D. Robert Smith, from the faculty of Bates college, Lewiston, Me., is a student; also Elwood W. Hill, director of music at Bradford Junior college, Bradford, and Mrs. Willa Taylor, a professor at the Pennsylvania State college.

Three husband-and-wife teams are included. Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Moore, of Davidson, N. C., take advance study in clarinet and piano. Mrs. Charles Lawie, Lake Geneva, Wisc., attends general music classes while her husband is busy with Boris Goldovsky in the opera coaching class. Mr. and Mrs. Georg A. Kleinfeld of Cleveland are orchestra players. Twin brothers, Robert and Rodney Pierce of Wichita, Kan., are receiving advanced training on the French horn and oboe from senior members of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

The students drawn from four continents to Tanglewood by the fame of its staff and the hope that a career might be launched from this coveted study include Theresa Green of Baltimore, a three-time winner of the Arthur Godfrey talent scout award; and Sara Mae Endich, an employe of the advertising department of the European edition of the New York Herald-Tribune, here on annual vacation.

Ex-Students 4,217

Former students now scattered through the U. S., Canada, South America, Europe and Australia, many of whom have taken prominent places in the musical life of their communities, total 4,217.

Ten percent of the membership of all major U.S. symphony orchestras is composed of former Tanglewood students, and conductors who have graduated there include Leonard Bernstein, Thor Johnson (Cincinnati), Walter Hendl (Dallas), Eleazar de Carvalho (Rio de Janeiro), Lukas Foss, Robert Zeller, Herman Herz (Duluth), Robert Whitney (Louisville), Richard Bales (National Gallery, Washington), Thomas Schippers, Lorin Maazel, Alexander Leslie (Springfield).

The roster of former students at the Metropolitan opera includes Frank Guarerra, Mack Harrell, Mildred Miller, Anne Bollinger, Paul Knowles, Paula Leachner, and Heidi Kral (Toledo) and Robert McFerrin (St. Louis), winners of the 1953 auditions of the air. New York City Opera company graduates from Tanglewood include Ellen Faull, David Lloyd, Patricia Neway, Mac Morgan, James Pease, David Poleri, Robert Rounseville and Frances Yeend. Mario Lanza of Hollywood was a student in 1940-41. Leontyne Price, the Bess of Broadway's "Porgy and Bess", was a singer in the summer of 1951.

Choral Conductors Too

Choral conductors who are Tanglewood alumni include James Aliferis (University of Minnesota); Jacob Avshalomoff (Columbia University); Lorna Cooke de Varon (New England Conservatory, Boston).

Composers Norman dello Joio, Alan Hovaness, Ulysses Kay, Ned Rorem, Peter Mannin, Jurriaan Andriessen have profited from summers at Tanglewood; and instrumentalists number among them Jacob Krachmalnick, concertmaster of the Philadelphia orchestra; Leonard Pennario, Seymour Lipkin, Norman Carol, Constance Keene, Aldo Parisot and Julius Katchen.

Tanglewood's opera department has given the American premieres of Benjamin Britten's "Peter Grimes" and "Albert Herring," Mozart's "Idiomeneo" and Jacques Ibert's "Le Roi d'Yvetot," and this year, through a grant of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, has commissioned young composers Leonard Rosenan, of New York city, and Louis Mennini, of Rochester, N. Y. to write one-act operas there this summer for performance in 1954.

Cir. (D 10,785)

This Clipping From
GLOVERSVILLE, N. Y.
LEADER-REPUBLICAN

AUG 11 1953

These Days

—By George E. Sokolsky

A Useful Grant

The Rockefeller Foundation has announced that it has voted a grant of $200,000 to the New York City Center of Music and Drama. This is a valuable cultural aid, supporting an institution that needs to be preserved because it gives to young Americans an opportunity to develop themselves in the arts of expression. Unlike nearly all European countries, the United States provides few opportunities for young artists in all the arts to go through a period of apprenticeship under great masters. It is for this reason that so many talented young people are forced to go to Europe for their training.

It is a curious commentary upon our way of thinking that at a time when we are pouring billions of dollars into foreign countries for the preservation of their cultures, we are permitting our own cultural institutions to decay for lack of funds. Few museums are safe today. There are no longer any Carnegies or Fricks or Otto Kahns available to assist our art museums and libraries. There are no Vanderbilts to come to the support of the Metropolitan Opera. Every privately-endowed college and university is worried about its finances and some are very frightened by the prospect. A completely integrated university, maintaining all departments of learning and providing time and facilities for research by its faculty, cannot live on student fees.

George Sokolsky

The New York City Center is a particularly noteworthy institution because it gives young Americans a chance. It is a feeder for the Metroplitan Opera as minor league baseball teams are feeders for the major league teams. It is at this place that such new operas as Menotti's are tried out, just as at Tanglewood, Copland, Bernstein, Foss and other young Americans can have their compositions played by such a fine orchestra as the Boston Symphony.

Yet, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood is running in the red and will have to find some way of making a public appeal. It may be difficult to arrange for public subscriptions for such an institution because, unless one actually sees what is being done for young Americans here, it is impossible to realize how much those who expect to make music their careers can accomplish here during the short summer session when they have the opportunity of association with the greatest men in their respective fields. It is an apprenticeship opportunity on the best European standards.

From every standpoint, it would be preferable if our universities, museums, orchestras, schools and other voluntary institutions were continued to be supported by donations from the people as they always have been in American life. Yet, it does come to mind that when billions of dollars, provided by the American taxpayer, are being used to support cultural activities in Europe and Asia, why are our own institutions being permitted to wither on the vine? We finance UNESCO, Point Four, International Students Exchange, libraries and all sorts of activities in the foreign cultural field.

A new committee of Congress has been appointed, under the chairmanship of Rep. Carroll Reece, to investigate the general activities of private Foundations. A similar committee, under the chairmanship of Eugene Cox, had begun to look into this subject, but Cox died and the committee's work was abortive. There is no secrecy about the work of any of the Foundations because they issue reports. The committee's activities therefore will be to analyze these reports in detail and to try to find a pattern of expenditures. While, in these days, emphasis will be laid on subversives, if any, who gain an advantage, which they ought not to have, the taxpayer would be interested in an analysis of the relationship between expenditures within the United States and abroad.

It would be an error to jump to conclusions on this subject without all the data being carefully studied. It may be found that the Foundations meet all the criticisms levelled at them; it may be that they are assuming that as they control the money, they are entitled to follow their own judgment. Yet, the fact is that the Foundations are relieved of taxes on the single assumption that their expenditures will be in the public interest. Whatever the outcome, the Reece committee intends to produce the facts, to analyze them and to make recommendations to Congress for legislation on the subject.

(Copyright, 1953, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Cir.
This C
RAVEN
RECORD & COURIER-TRIBUNE

M

Cl

on

Benjamin N. Bowers, Mrs. Don [illegible] F. McPherson, Mrs. Lawrence K. Miller, Miss Margo Miller, Mrs. John H. Rice, Mrs. Jay C. Rosenfeld, Mrs. Stanley S[illegible] and Alan J. Blau, all of Pittsfield; Mr. [illegible] Crane, Dalton; Mrs. [illegible] and Mrs. Albert [illegible] Mrs. Joseph de[illegible] Gladys Greene, [illegible] Mrs. Frederi[illegible] L. Senior and Mrs. [illegible] Stokes, Lenox [illegible] rick and Mrs. [illegible] Stockbridge;

Also Mrs. [illegible] rett, Great Barrington [illegible] Davie Lloyd, Lee [illegible] Homer, South [illegible] James W. Hull, North Adams, and Karl Weston, W[illegible]

Boxes are [illegible] communities [illegible] contribute to [illegible] ships for talented [illegible] who cannot afford [illegible] tion. Boxes [illegible] idents in [illegible] Richmond and [illegible] the Pittsfield Little Symphony Orchestra. Five boxes have been donated for the use of Berkshire Music Center students by summer residents unable to be present. Such reservations may be made at the Tanglewood box office.

Six Amusements THE BOSTON DAILY GLOBE—WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 12, 1953

Allard and Droeghmans Retire from Symphony

Raymond Allard, first bassoon, and cellist Hyppolyte Droeghmans will retire from the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the conclusion of the Berkshire Festival Sunday. They were honored at a luncheon at Tanglewood, Lenox, yesterday, following morning rehearsal.

Pasquale Cardillo was master of ceremonies. Allard and Droeghmans were presented gold watches by Charles Munch, conductor. Speakers included violinist Harry Ellis Dickson; Thomas D. Perry, assistant manager of the orchestra, and Dr. Lewis Perry, trustee.

Allard, born at Sin-le-Noble, France, in 1898, joined the Boston Symphony in 1922. He lives in Brookline. Droeghmans, born in Liege, Belgium, in 1884, has been with the orchestra since 1927. He lives in Newton Center.

'Tanglewood on Parade' for Benefit Tomorrow

With Isaac Stern, violinist; soprano Leontyne Price and her husband, baritone William Warfield as stars, the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be held at Tanglewood tomorrow evening.

There will be demonstrations by every department of the Summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, a lawn supper and a gala evening concert by the orchestra followed by the drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

Isaac Stern will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D major with the Boston Symphony, Charles Munch conducting, at the evening concert beginning at 8:15 in the Music Shed. Mr. M[illegible] conduct the Suite fr[illegible] "Water Music" [illegible] George Gershwin's "P[illegible] [illegible] Act II, Scenes [illegible] occupy the second half [illegible] concert program [illegible] ducted by Leonard Bernst[illegible] concert performance wi[illegible] Leontyne Price, Willi[illegible] and the Festival Chorus[illegible]

Cir. (D 13,075)

This Clipping From
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT

AUG 11 1953

Students From 41 of States, 11 Nations, at Tanglewood

Students from 41 states and 11 foreign countries are enrolled this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, this country's only school of music maintained by a major orchestra. Established by the Boston Symphony orchestra in 1940, when Serge Koussevitzky was its director, the school is now in its 11th six-week session, which will extend to the end of the Berkshire Music Festival on Aug. 16.

400 Enrolled

The enrollment of 400 students represents a true cross-section of advanced music students, teachers and professional musicians, who work in the divisions of orchestra playing and conducting, chamber music, and opera under a distinguished faculty of 36 which includes such outstanding musicians as Aaron Copland, Leonard Bernstein, Carlos Chavez, Boris Goldovsky, Hugh Ross, Lukas Foss, Irving Fine, Paul Ulanowsky, Seymour Lipkin, William Kroll, Richard Burgin and first chair players of the Boston orchestra.

The symphony's music director, Charles Munch, is director of the school, and Ralph Berkowitz is dean. A special department, the Tanglewood Stury group, set up last year for amateurs of music who wish to spend their vacations in the absorption of music, continues this year under the leadership of Ingolf Dahl, with an enrollment of 105, of whom 38 are spending the full six weeks, 12 four weeks, and 55 two weeks.

New York state leads the registration, with more than 100 students. Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Ohio are represented by 90 students. Nineteen each come from Connecticut and New Jersey; 18 each from Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and Washington, D. C. As a result of the Boston Symphony orchestra's first trans-continental tour last spring, when auditions were held for the first time in 10 cities on its route, enrollment from California increased to 10 students. From Salt Lake City and Provo, Utah, have come five pupils. Nine Canadians are studying at Tanglewood this summer, mostly from Toronto and Montreal where the symphony played. The New Orleans orchestral auditions produced seven students now on the Berkshire campus, and five from Florida.

19 From Abroad

Nineteen foreign students are enrolled. Besides the Canadians, Mexico, France, Israel, Sweden, Japan, Korea, Holland, Bolivia, Latvia and China have representatives. Serge Blanc, of Paris, is concertmaster of the student orchestra. From Pusan, South Korea, is John Kim, who is president and conductor of the Republic of Korea Naval Symphony Orchestra and Chorus. A composition pupil with Mexico's composer-conductor Carlos Chavez is Tossi Ichiyanagi of Tokyo.

As the result of seeing in Shanghai in 1950 a U. S. State department film on Tanglewood, Miss Lily Hsia is now a member of the opera department. On invitation of the federal government through a Smith-Mundt award to study conducting is Herbert Blomstedt of Stockholm, Sweden. Fernado Illanes is a chorus student from Bolivia; Johannes Emmen-Riedel is a Study group student from The Hague. George Mester and Alga Zilboorg of Mexico City are studying violin and 'cello. Pnina God is a trumpet player. Usiahu Wiesel is a student 'cellist, both from Israel. Endel Kalam, of Latvia, now resident in Indianapolis, s a viola player.

Ranging in age from 17 to 65, the majority of students are between 19 and 24. The 75 per cent in the full course are highly talented since competition was keen for the tuition scholarships awarded for the second time annually to those who play in the orchestra and chamber music groups or lead in the choral or opera departments. Most of the students live at the Lenox Preparatory school and Wheatleigh, a nearby estate owned by the orchestra. For recreation they swim and boat in Stockbridge bowl, the lake whose shoreline includes the edge of the Tanglewood estate.

Many Vocations

Students at Tanglewood include many vocations. For the first time in the Berkshire Music Center's 11 years the armed services are officially represented, by Warrant Officer John Norris, of Arlington, Va., assistant conductor of the U. S. Navy band, a student of orchestral conducting under Leonard Bernstein.

D. Robert Smith, from the faculty of Bates college, Lewiston, Me., is a student; also Elwood W. Hill, director of music at Bradford Junior college, Bradford, and Mrs. Willa Taylor, a professor at the Pennsylvania State college.

Three husband-and-wife teams are included. Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Moore, of Davidson, N. C., take advance study in clarinet and piano. Mrs. Charles Lawie, Lake Geneva, Wisc., attends general music classes while her husband is busy with Boris Goldovsky in the opera coaching class. Mr. and Mrs. Georg A. Kleinfeld of Cleveland are orchestra players. Twin brothers, Robert and Rodney Pierce of Wichita, Kan., are receiving advanced training on the French horn and oboe from senior members of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

The students drawn from four continents to Tanglewood by the fame of its staff and the hope that a career might be launched from this coveted study include Theresa Green of Baltimore, a three-time winner of the Arthur Godfrey talent scout award; and Sara Mae Endich, an employe of the advertising department of the European edition of the New York Herald-Tribune, here on annual vacation.

Ex-Students 4,217

Former students now scattered through the U. S., Canada, South America, Europe and Australia, many of whom have taken prominent places in the musical life of their communities, total 4,217.

Ten percent of the membership of all major U.S. symphony orchestras is composed of former Tanglewood students, and conductors who have graduated there include Leonard Bernstein, Thor Johnson (Cincinnati), Walter Hendl (Dallas), Eleazar de Carvalho (Rio de Janeiro), Lukas Foss, Robert Zeller, Herman Herz (Duluth), Robert Whitney (Louisville), Richard Bales (National Gallery, Washington), Thomas Schippers, Lorin Maazel, Alexander Leslie (Springfield).

The roster of former students at the Metropolitan opera includes Frank Guarerra, Mack Harrell, Mildred Miller, Anne Bollinger, Paul Knowles, Paula Leachner, and Heidi Kral (Toledo) and Robert McFerrin (St. Louis), winners of the 1953 auditions of the air. New York City Opera company graduates from Tanglewood include Ellen Faull, David Lloyd, Patricia Neway, Mac Morgan, James Pease, David Poleri, Robert Rounseville and Frances Yeend. Mario Lanza of Hollywood was a student in 1940-41. Leontyne Price, the Bess of Broadway's "Porgy and Bess", was a singer in the summer of 1951.

Choral Conductors Too

Choral conductors who are Tanglewood alumni include James Aliferis (University of Minnesota); Jacob Avshalomoff (Columbia University); Lorna Cooke de Varon (New England Conservatory, Boston).

Composers Norman dello Joio, Alan Hovaness, Ulysses Kay, Ned Rorem, Peter Mannin, Jurriaan Andriessen have profited from summers at Tanglewood; and instrumentalists number among them Jacob Krachmalnick, concertmaster of the Philadelphia orchestra; Leonard Pennario, Seymour Lipkin, Norman Carol, Constance Keene, Aldo Parisot and Julius Katchen.

Tanglewood's opera department has given the American premieres of Benjamin Britten's "Peter Grimes" and "Albert Herring," Mozart's "Idiomeneo" and Jacques Ibert's "Le Roi d'Yvetot," and this year, through a grant of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, has commissioned young composers Leonard Rosenan, of New York city, and Louis Mennini, of Rochester, N. Y. to write one-act operas there this summer for performance in 1954.

Cir. (D 7,887)

This Clipping From
HORNELL, N. Y.
TRIBUNE

AUG 11 1953

AUG 11 1953

Cir. (D
This Clip
RAVENN
RECORD & COURIER-TRIBUNE

These Days

—By George E. Sokolsky

A Useful Grant

The Rockefeller Foundation has announced that it voted a grant of $200,000 to the New York City Center of Music and Drama. This is a valuable cultural aid, supporting an institution that needs to be preserved because it gives to young Americans an opportunity to develop themselves in the arts of expression. Unlike nearly all European countries, the United States provides few opportunities for young artists in all the arts to go through a period of apprenticeship under great masters. It is for this reason that so many talented young people are forced to go to Europe for their training.

It is a curious commentary upon our way of thinking that at a time when we are pouring billions of dollars into foreign countries for the preservation of their cultures, we are permitting our own cultural institutions to decay for lack of funds. Few museums are safe today. There are no longer any Carnegies or Fricks or Otto Kahns available to assist our art museums and libraries. There are no Vanderbilts to come to the support of the Metropolitan Opera. Every privately-endowed college and university is worried about its finances and some are very frightened by the prospect. A completely integrated university, maintaining all departments of learning and providing time and facilities for research by its faculty, cannot live on student fees.

George Sokolsky

The New York City Center is a particularly noteworthy institution because it gives young Americans a chance. It is a feeder for the Metroplitan Opera as minor league baseball teams are feeders for the major league teams. It is at this place that such new operas as Menotti's are tried out, just as at Tanglewood, Copland, Bernstein, Foss and other young Americans can have their compositions played by such a fine orchestra as the Boston Symphony.

Yet, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood is running in the red and will have to find some way of making a public appeal. It may be difficult to arrange for public subscriptions for such an institution because, unless one actually sees what is being done for young Americans here, it is impossible to realize how much those who expect to make music their careers can accomplish here during the short summer session when they have the opportunity of association with the greatest men in their respective fields. It is an apprenticeship opportunity on the best European standards.

From every standpoint, it would be preferable if our universities, museums, orchestras, schools and other voluntary institutions were continued to be supported by donations from the people as they always have been in American life. Yet, it does come to mind that when billions of dollars, provided by the American taxpayer, are being used to support cultural activities in Europe and Asia, why are our own institutions being permitted to wither on the vine? We finance UNESCO, Point Four, International Students Exchange, libraries and all sorts of activities in the foreign cultural field.

A new committee of Congress has been appointed, under the chairmanship of Rep. Carroll Reece, to investigate the general activities of private Foundations. A similar committee, under the chairmanship of Eugene Cox, had begun to look into this subject, but Cox died and the committee's work was abortive. There is no secrecy about the work of any of the Foundations because they issue reports. The committee's activities therefore will be to analyze these reports in detail and to try to find a pattern of expenditures. While, in these days, emphasis will be laid on subversives, if any, who gain an advantage, which they ought not to have, the taxpayer would be interested in an analysis of the relationship between expenditures within the United States and abroad.

It would be an error to jump to conclusions on this subject without all the data being carefully studied. It may be found that the Foundations meet all the criticisms levelled at them; it may be that they are assuming that as they control the money, they are entitled to follow their own judgment. Yet, the fact is that the Foundations are relieved of taxes on the single assumption that their expenditures will be in the public interest. Whatever the outcome, the Reece committee intends to produce the facts, to analyze them and to make recommendations to Congress for legislation on the subject.

(Copyright, 1953, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

M

C

o

Benjamin N. Bowers, Mrs. Don F. McPherson, Mrs. Lawrence K. Miller, Miss Margo Miller, Mrs. John H. Rice, Mrs. Jay C. Rosenfeld, Mrs. Stanley Simkin, and Alan J. Blau, all of Pittsfield; Mrs. [illegible] Crane, Dalton; [illegible] and Mrs. Albert Stern, [illegible] Mrs. Joseph dePasquale [illegible] Gladys Greene, [illegible] Mrs. Frederi[illegible] L. Senior and [illegible] Stokes, Lenox; [illegible] rick and Mr. [illegible] Stockbridge;

Also Mrs. William [illegible] rett, Great Barr[illegible] Davie Lloyd, [illegible] Homer, South [illegible] James W. Hull, [illegible] Karl Weston, [illegible]

Boxes are [illegible] communities [illegible] contribute to [illegible] ships for talen[illegible] who cannot a[illegible] tion. Boxes hav[illegible] idents in [illegible] Richmond an[illegible] the Pittsfield [illegible] chestra. Five boxes [illegible] nated for the use of Berkshire Music Center students by [illegible] residents unable to be pr[illegible] Such reservations may [illegible] the Tanglewood box office.

Allard and Droeghmans Retire from Symphony

Raymond Allard, first bassoon, and cellist Hyppolyte Droeghmans will retire from the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the conclusion of the Berkshire Festival Sunday. They were honored at a luncheon at Tanglewood, Lenox, yesterday, following morning rehearsal.

Pasquale Cardillo was master of ceremonies. Allard and Droeghmans were presented gold watches by Charles Munch, conductor. Speakers included violinist Harry Ellis Dickson; Thomas D. Perry, assistant manager of the orchestra, and Dr. Lewis Perry, trustee.

Allard, born at Sin-le-Noble, France, in 1898, joined the Boston Symphony in 1922. He lives in Brookline. Droeghmans, born in Liege, Belgium, in 1884, has been with the orchestra since 1927. He lives in Newton Center.

'Tanglewood on Parade' for Benefit Tomorrow

With Isaac Stern, violinist; soprano Leontyne Price and her husband, baritone William Warfield as stars, the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be held at Tanglewood tomorrow evening.

There will be demonstrations by every department of the Summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, a lawn supper and a gala evening concert by the orchestra followed by the drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

Isaac Stern will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D major with the Boston Symphony, Charles Munch conducting, at the evening concert beginning at 8:15 in the [illegible]

[illegible] ducted [illegible] Leontyne Price [illegible] and the Festival Chorus.

Cir. (D 13,075)

This Clipping From
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT

AUG 11 1953

Students From 41 of States, 11 Nations, at Tanglewood

Students from 41 states and 11 foreign countries are enrolled this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, this country's only school of music maintained by a major orchestra. Established by the Boston Symphony orchestra in 1940, when Serge Koussevitzky was its director, the school is now in its 11th six-week session, which will extend to the end of the Berkshire Music Festival on Aug. 16.

400 Enrolled

The enrollment of 400 students represents a true cross-section of advanced music students, teachers and professional musicians, who work in the divisions of orchestra playing and conducting, chamber music, and opera under a distinguished faculty of 36 which includes such outstanding musicians as Aaron Copland, Leonard Bernstein, Carlos Chavez, Boris Goldovsky, Hugh Ross, Lukas Foss, Irving Fine, Paul Ulanowsky, Seymour Lipkin, William Kroll, Richard Burgin and first chair players of the Boston orchestra.

The symphony's music director, Charles Munch, is director of the school, and Ralph Berkowitz is dean. A special department, the Tanglewood Stury group, set up last year for amateurs of music who wish to spend their vacations in the absorption of music, continues this year under the leadership of Ingolf Dahl, with an enrollment of 105, of whom 38 are spending the full six weeks, 12 four weeks, and 55 two weeks.

New York state leads the registration, with more than 100 students. Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Ohio are represented by 90 students. Nineteen each come from Connecticut and New Jersey; 18 each from Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and Washington, D. C. As a result of the Boston Symphony orchestra's first trans-continental tour last spring, when auditions were held for the first time in 10 cities on its route, enrollment from California increased to 10 students. From Salt Lake City and Provo, Utah, have come five pupils. Nine Canadians are studying at Tanglewood this summer, mostly from Toronto and Montreal where the symphony played. The New Orleans orchestral auditions produced seven students now on the Berkshire campus, and five from Florida.

19 From Abroad

Nineteen foreign students are enrolled. Besides the Canadians, Mexico, France, Israel, Sweden, Japan, Korea, Holland, Bolivia, Latvia and China have representatives. Serge Blanc, of Paris, is concertmaster of the student orchestra. From Pusan, South Korea, is John Kim, who is president and conductor of the Republic of Korea Naval Symphony Orchestra and Chorus. A composition pupil with Mexico's composer-conductor Carlos Chavez is Tossi Ichiyanagi of Tokyo.

As the result of seeing in Shanghai in 1950 a U. S. State department film on Tanglewood, Miss Lily Hsia is now a member of the opera department. On invitation of the federal government through a Smith-Mundt award to study conducting is Herbert Blomstedt of Stockholm, Sweden. Fernado Illanes is a chorus student from Bolivia; Johannes Emmen-Riedel is a Study group student from The Hague. George Mester and Alga Zilboorg of Mexico City are studying violin and 'cello. Pnina God is a trumpet player, Usiahu Wiesel is a student 'cellist, both from Israel. Endel Kalam, of Latvia, now resident in Indianapolis, s a viola player.

Ranging in age from 17 to 65, the majority of students are between 19 and 24. The 75 per cent in the full course are highly talented since competition was keen for the tuition scholarships awarded for the second time annually to those who play in the orchestra and chamber music groups or lead in the choral or opera departments. Most of the students live at the Lenox Preparatory school and Wheatleigh, a nearby estate owned by the orchestra. For recreation they swim and boat in Stockbridge bowl, the lake whose shoreline includes the edge of the Tanglewood estate.

Many Vocations

Students at Tanglewood include many vocations. For the first time in the Berkshire Music Center's 11 years the armed services are officially represented, by Warrant Officer John Norris, of Arlington, Va., assistant conductor of the U. S. Navy band, a student of orchestral conducting under Leonard Bernstein.

D. Robert Smith, from the faculty of Bates college, Lewiston, Me., is a student; also Elwood W. Hill, director of music at Bradford Junior college, Bradford, and Mrs. Willa Taylor, a professor at the Pennsylvania State college.

Three husband-and-wife teams are included. Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Moore, of Davidson, N. C., take advance study in clarinet and piano. Mrs. Charles Lawie, Lake Geneva, Wisc., attends general music classes while her husband is busy with Boris Goldovsky in the opera coaching class. Mr. and Mrs. Georg A. Kleinfeld of Cleveland are orchestra players. Twin brothers, Robert and Rodney Pierce of Wichita, Kan., are receiving advanced training on the French horn and oboe from senior members of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

The students drawn from four continents to Tanglewood by the fame of its staff and the hope that a career might be launched from this coveted study include Theresa Green of Baltimore, a three-time winner of the Arthur Godfrey talent scout award; and Sara Mae Endich, an employe of the advertising department of the European edition of the New York Herald-Tribune, here on annual vacation.

Ex-Students 4,217

Former students now scattered through the U. S., Canada, South America, Europe and Australia, many of whom have taken prominent places in the musical life of their communities, total 4,217.

Ten percent of the membership of all major U.S. symphony orchestras is composed of former Tanglewood students, and conductors who have graduated there include Leonard Bernstein, Thor Johnson (Cincinnati), Walter Hendl (Dallas), Eleazar de Carvalho (Rio de Janeiro), Lukas Foss, Robert Zeller, Herman Herz (Duluth), Robert Whitney (Louisville), Richard Bales (National Gallery, Washington), Thomas Schippers, Lorin Maazel, Alexander Leslie (Springfield).

The roster of former students at the Metropolitan opera includes Frank Guarerra, Mack Harrell, Mildred Miller, Anne Bollinger, Paul Knowles, Paula Leachner, and Heidi Kral (Toledo) and Robert McFerrin (St. Louis), winners of the 1953 auditions of the air. New York City Opera company graduates from Tanglewood include Ellen Faull, David Lloyd, Patricia Neway, Mac Morgan, James Pease, David Poleri, Robert Rounseville and Frances Yeend. Mario Lanza of Hollywood was a student in 1940-41. Leontyne Price, the Bess of Broadway's "Porgy and Bess", was a singer in the summer of 1951.

Choral Conductors Too

Choral conductors who are Tanglewood alumni include James Aliferis (University of Minnesota); Jacob Avshalomoff (Columbia University); Lorna Cooke de Varon (New England Conservatory, Boston).

Composers Norman dello Joio, Alan Hovaness, Ulysses Kay, Ned Rorem, Peter Mannin, Jurriaan Andriessen have profited from summers at Tanglewood; and instrumentalists number among them Jacob Krachmalnick, concertmaster of the Philadelphia orchestra; Leonard Pennario, Seymour Lipkin, Norman Carol, Constance Keene, Aldo Parisot and Julius Katchen.

Tanglewood's opera department has given the American premieres of Benjamin Britten's "Peter Grimes" and "Albert Herring," Mozart's "Idiomeneo" and Jacques Ibert's "Le Roi d'Yvetot," and this year, through a grant of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, has commissioned young composers Leonard Rosenan, of New York city, and Louis Mennini, of Rochester, N. Y. to write one-act operas there this summer for performance in 1954.

This Clipping From
AMSTERDAM, N. Y.
RECORDER

AUG 11 1953

AUG 11 1953

Cir. (D

This Clip
RAVENNA, OHIO
RECORD & COURIER-TRIBUNE

These Days

—By George E. Sokolsky

A Useful Grant

The Rockefeller Foundation has announced that it has voted a grant of $200,000 to the New York City Center of Music and Drama. This is a valuable cultural aid, supporting an institution that needs to be preserved because it gives to young Americans an opportunity to develop themselves in the arts of expression. Unlike nearly all European countries, the United States provides few opportunities for young artists in all the arts to go through a period of apprenticeship under great masters. It is for this reason that so many talented young people are forced to go to Europe for their training.

George Sokolsky

It is a curious commentary upon our way of thinking that at a time when we are pouring billions of dollars into foreign countries for the preservation of their cultures, we are permitting our own cultural institutions to decay for lack of funds. Few museums are safe today. There are no longer any Carnegies or Fricks or Otto Kahns available to assist our art museums and libraries. There are no Vanderbilts to come to the support of the Metropolitan Opera. Every privately-endowed college and university is worried about its finances and some are very frightened by the prospect. A completely integrated university, maintaining all departments of learning and providing time and facilities for research by its faculty, cannot live on student fees.

The New York City Center is a particularly noteworthy institution because it gives young Americans a chance. It is a feeder for the Metroplitan Opera as minor league baseball teams are feeders for the major league teams. It is at this place that such new operas as Menotti's are tried out, just as at Tanglewood, Copland, Bernstein, Foss and other young Americans can have their compositions played by such a fine orchestra as the Boston Symphony.

Yet, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood is running in the red and will have to find some way of making a public appeal. It may be difficult to arrange for public subscriptions for such an institution because, unless one actually sees what is being done for young Americans here, it is impossible to realize how much those who expect to make music their careers can accomplish here during the short summer session when they have the opportunity of association with the greatest men in their respective fields. It is an apprenticeship opportunity on the best European standards.

From every standpoint, it would be preferable if our universities, museums, orchestras, schools and other voluntary institutions were continued to be supported by donations from the people as they always have been in American life. Yet, it does come to mind that when billions of dollars, provided by the American taxpayer, are being used to support cultural activities in Europe and Asia, why are our own institutions being permitted to wither on the vine? We finance UNESCO, Point Four, International Students Exchange, libraries and all sorts of activities in the foreign cultural field.

A new committee of Congress has been appointed, under the chairmanship of Rep. Carroll Reece, to investigate the general activities of private Foundations. A similar committee, under the chairmanship of Eugene Cox, had begun to look into this subject, but Cox died and the committee's work was abortive. There is no secrecy about the work of any of the Foundations because they issue reports. The committee's activities therefore will be to analyze these reports in detail and to try to find a pattern of expenditures. While, in these days, emphasis will be laid on subversives, if any, who gain an advantage, which they ought not to have, the taxpayer would be interested in an analysis of the relationship between expenditures within the United States and abroad.

It would be an error to jump to conclusions on this subject without all the data being carefully studied. It may be found that the Foundations meet all the criticisms levelled at them; it may be that they are assuming that as they control the money, they are entitled to follow their own judgment. Yet, the fact is that the Foundations are relieved of taxes on the single assumption that their expenditures will be in the public interest. Whatever the outcome, the Reece committee intends to produce the facts, to analyze them and to make recommendations to Congress for legislation on the subject.

(Copyright, 1953, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

M

C

on [illegible] Benjamin N. Bowers, Mrs. Don F. McPherson, Mrs. Lawrence K. Miller, Miss Margo Miller, Mrs. John H. Rice, Mrs. Jay C. Rosenfeld, Mrs. Stanley Simkin, and Alan J. Blau, all of Pittsfield; Mr. [illegible] Crane, Dalton; Mrs. [illegible] and Mrs. Albert Stern [illegible] Mrs. Joseph [illegible] Gladys Greene, [illegible] Mrs. Frederi[illegible] L. Senior [illegible] Stokes, Lenox [illegible] rick and Mrs. [illegible] Stockbridge;

Also Mrs. [illegible] rett, Great Barrington [illegible] Davie Lloyd, Lee; [illegible] Homer, South [illegible] James W. Hull, North Adams, [illegible] Karl Weston, Williamstown.

Boxes are bei[illegible] communities [illegible] contribute to [illegible] ships for tale[illegible] who cannot a[illegible] tion. Boxes [illegible] idents in Pitts[illegible] Richmond and [illegible] the Pittsfield [illegible] chestra. Five boxes [illegible] nated for the use of Berkshire Music Center students by summer residents unable to be present. Such reservations may [illegible] the Tanglewood box office.

Six Amusements THE BOSTON DAILY GLOBE—WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 12, 1953

Allard and Droeghmans Retire from Symphony

Raymond Allard, first bassoon, and cellist Hyppolyte Droeghmans will retire from the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the conclusion of the Berkshire Festival Sunday. They were honored at a luncheon at Tanglewood, Lenox, yesterday, following morning rehearsal.

Pasquale Cardillo was master of ceremonies. Allard and Droeghmans were presented gold watches by Charles Munch, conductor. Speakers included violinist Harry Ellis Dickson; Thomas D. Perry, assistant manager of the orchestra, and Dr. Lewis Perry, trustee.

Allard, born at Sin-le-Noble, France, in 1898, joined the Boston Symphony in 1922. He lives in Brookline. Droeghmans, born in Liege, Belgium, in 1884, has been with the orchestra since 1927. He lives in Newton Center.

'Tanglewood on Parade' for Benefit Tomorrow

With Isaac Stern, violinist; soprano Leontyne Price and her husband, baritone William Warfield as stars, the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be held at Tanglewood tomorrow evening.

There will be demonstrations by every department of the Summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, a lawn supper and a gala evening concert by the orchestra followed by the drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

Isaac Stern will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D major with the Boston Symphony, Charles Munch conducting, at the evening concert beginning at 8:15 in the [illegible]

Cir. (D 13,075)

This Clipping From
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT

AUG 11 1953

Students From 41 of States, 11 Nations, at Tanglewood

Students from 41 states and 11 foreign countries are enrolled this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, this country's only school of music maintained by a major orchestra. Established by the Boston Symphony orchestra in 1940, when Serge Koussevitzky was its director, the school is now in its 11th six-week session, which will extend to the end of the Berkshire Music Festival on Aug. 16.

400 Enrolled

The enrollment of 400 students represents a true cross-section of advanced music students, teachers and professional musicians, who work in the divisions of orchestra playing and conducting, chamber music, and opera under a distinguished faculty of 36 which includes such outstanding musicians as Aaron Copland, Leonard Bernstein, Carlos Chavez, Boris Goldovsky, Hugh Ross, Lukas Foss, Irving Fine, Paul Ulanowsky, Seymour Lipkin, William Kroll, Richard Burgin and first chair players of the Boston orchestra.

The symphony's music director, Charles Munch, is director of the school, and Ralph Berkowitz is dean. A special department, the Tanglewood Stury group, set up last year for amateurs of music who wish to spend their vacations in the absorption of music, continues this year under the leadership of Ingolf Dahl, with an enrollment of 105, of whom 38 are spending the full six weeks, 12 four weeks, and 55 two weeks.

New York state leads the registration, with more than 100 students. Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Ohio are represented by 90 students. Nineteen each come from Connecticut and New Jersey; 18 each from Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and Washington, D. C. As a result of the Boston Symphony orchestra's first trans-continental tour last spring, when auditions were held for the first time in 10 cities on its route, enrollment from California increased to 10 students. From Salt Lake City and Provo, Utah, have come five pupils. Nine Canadians are studying at Tanglewood this summer, mostly from Toronto and Montreal where the symphony played. The New Orleans orchestral auditions produced seven students now on the Berkshire campus, and five from Florida.

19 From Abroad

Nineteen foreign students are enrolled. Besides the Canadians, Mexico, France, Israel, Sweden, Japan, Korea, Holland, Bolivia, Latvia and China have representatives. Serge Blanc, of Paris, s concertmaster of the student orchestra. From Pusan, South Korea, is John Kim, who is president and conductor of the Republic of Korea Naval Symphony Orchestra and Chorus. A composition pupil with Mexico's composer-conductor Carlos Chavez is Tossi Ichiyanagi of Tokyo.

As the result of seeing in Shanghai in 1950 a U. S. State department film on Tanglewood, Miss Lily Hsia is now a member of the opera department. On invitation of the federal government through a Smith-Mundt award to study conducting is Herbert Blomstedt of Stockholm, Sweden. Fernado Illanes is a chorus student from Bolivia; Johannes Emmen-Riedel is a Study group student from The Hague. George Mester and Alga Zilboorg of Mexico City are studying violin and 'cello. Pnina God is a trumpet player, Usiahu Wiesel is a student 'cellist, both from Israel. Endel Kalam, of Latvia, now resident in Indianapolis, s a viola player.

Ranging in age from 17 to 65, the majority of students are between 19 and 24. The 75 per cent in the full course are highly talented since competition was keen for the tuition scholarships awarded for the second time annually to those who play in the orchestra and chamber music groups or lead in the choral or opera departments. Most of the students live at the Lenox Preparatory school and Wheatleigh, a nearby estate owned by the orchestra. For recreation they swim and boat in Stockbridge bowl, the lake whose shoreline includes the edge of the Tanglewood estate.

Many Vocations

Students at Tanglewood include many vocations. For the first time in the Berkshire Music Center's 11 years the armed services are officially represented, by Warrant Officer John Norris, of Arlington, Va., assistant conductor of the U. S. Navy band, a student of orchestral conducting under Leonard Bernstein.

D. Robert Smith, from the faculty of Bates college, Lewiston, Me., is a student; also Elwood W. Hill, director of music at Bradford Junior college, Bradford, and Mrs. Willa Taylor, a professor at the Pennsylvania State college.

Three husband-and-wife teams are included. Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Moore, of Davidson, N. C., take advance study in clarinet and piano. Mrs. Charles Lawie, Lake Geneva, Wisc., attends general music classes while her husband is busy with Boris Goldovsky in the opera coaching class. Mr. and Mrs. Georg A. Kleinfeld of Cleveland are orchestra players. Twin brothers, Robert and Rodney Pierce of Wichita, Kan., are receiving advanced training on the French horn and oboe from senior members of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

The students drawn from four continents to Tanglewood by the fame of its staff and the hope that a career might be launched from this coveted study include Theresa Green of Baltimore, a three-time winner of the Arthur Godfrey talent scout award; and Sara Mae Endich, an employe of the advertising department of the European edition of the New York Herald-Tribune, here on annual vacation.

Ex-Students 4,217

Former students now scattered through the U. S., Canada, South America, Europe and Australia, many of whom have taken prominent places in the musical life of their communities, total 4,217.

Ten percent of the membership of all major U.S. symphony orchestras is composed of former Tanglewood students, and conductors who have graduated there include Leonard Bernstein, Thor Johnson (Cincinnati), Walter Hendl (Dallas), Eleazar de Carvalho (Rio de Janeiro), Lukas Foss, Robert Zeller, Herman Herz (Duluth), Robert Whitney (Louisville), Richard Bales (National Gallery, Washington), Thomas Schippers, Lorin Maazel, Alexander Leslie (Springfield).

The roster of former students at the Metropolitan opera includes Frank Guarerra, Mack Harrell, Mildred Miller, Anne Bollinger, Paul Knowles, Paula Leachner, and Heidi Kral (Toledo) and Robert McFerrin (St. Louis), winners of the 1953 auditions of the air. New York City Opera company graduates from Tanglewood include Ellen Faull, David Lloyd, Patricia Neway, Mac Morgan, James Pease, David Poleri, Robert Rounseville and Frances Yeend. Mario Lanza of Hollywood was a student in 1940-41. Leontyne Price, the Bess of Broadway's "Porgy and Bess", was a singer in the summer of 1951.

Choral Conductors Too

Choral conductors who are Tanglewood alumni include James Aliferis (University of Minnesota); Jacob Avshalomoff (Columbia University); Lorna Cooke de Varon (New England Conservatory, Boston).

Composers Norman dello Joio, Alan Hovaness, Ulysses Kay, Ned Rorem, Peter Mannin, Jurriaan Andriessen have profited from summers at Tanglewood; and instrumentalists number among them Jacob Krachmalnick, concertmaster of the Philadelphia orchestra; Leonard Pennario, Seymour Lipkin, Norman Carol, Constance Keene, Aldo Parisot and Julius Katchen.

Tanglewood's opera department has given the American premieres of Benjamin Britten's "Peter Grimes" and "Albert Herring," Mozart's "Idiomeneo" and Jacques Ibert's "Le Roi d'Yvetot," and this year, through a grant of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, has commissioned young composers Leonard Rosenan, of New York city, and Louis Mennini, of Rochester, N. Y. to write one-act operas there this summer for performance in 1954.

This Clipping From

AUG 11 1953

Cir. (D 11,671)

This Clipping From
RAVENNA, OHIO
RECORD & COURIER-TRIBUNE

These Days

—By George E. Sokolsky

A Useful Grant

The Rockefeller Foundation has announced that it has voted a grant of $200,000 to the New York City Center of Music and Drama. This is a valuable cultural aid, supporting an institution that needs to be preserved because it gives to young Americans an opportunity to develop themselves in the arts of expression. Unlike nearly all European countries, the United States provides few opportunities for young artists in all the arts to go through a period of apprenticeship under great masters. It is for this reason that so many talented young people are forced to go to Europe for their training.

It is a curious commentary upon our way of thinking that at a time when we are pouring billions of dollars into foreign countries for the preservation of their cultures, we are permitting our own cultural institutions to decay for lack of funds. Few museums are safe today. There are no longer any Carnegies or Fricks or Otto Kahns available to assist our art museums and libraries. There are no Vanderbilts to come to the support of the Metropolitan Opera. Every privately-endowed college and university is worried about its finances and some are very frightened by the prospect. A completely integrated university, maintaining all departments of learning and providing time and facilities for research by its faculty, cannot live on student fees.

George Sokolsky

The New York City Center is a particularly noteworthy institution because it gives young Americans a chance. It is a feeder for the Metroplitan Opera as minor league baseball teams are feeders for the major league teams. It is at this place that such new operas as Menotti's are tried out, just as at Tanglewood, Copland, Bernstein, Foss and other young Americans can have their compositions played by such a fine orchestra as the Boston Symphony.

Yet, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood is running in the red and will have to find some way of making a public appeal. It may be difficult to arrange for public subscriptions for such an institution because, unless one actually sees what is being done for young Americans here, it is impossible to realize how much those who expect to make music their careers can accomplish here during the short summer session when they have the opportunity of association with the greatest men in their respective fields. It is an apprenticeship opportunity on the best European standards.

From every standpoint, it would be preferable if our universities, museums, orchestras, schools and other voluntary institutions were continued to be supported by donations from the people as they always have been in American life. Yet, it does come to mind that when billions of dollars, provided by the American taxpayer, are being used to support cultural activities in Europe and Asia, why are our own institutions being permitted to wither on the vine? We finance UNESCO, Point Four, International Students Exchange, libraries and all sorts of activities in the foreign cultural field.

A new committee of Congress has been appointed, under the chairmanship of Rep. Carroll Reece, to investigate the general activities of private Foundations. A similar committee, under the chairmanship of Eugene Cox, had begun to look into this subject, but Cox died and the committee's work was abortive. There is no secrecy about the work of any of the Foundations because they issue reports. The committee's activities therefore will be to analyze these reports in detail and to try to find a pattern of expenditures. While, in these days, emphasis will be laid on subversives, if any, who gain an advantage, which they ought not to have, the taxpayer would be interested in an analysis of the relationship between expenditures within the United States and abroad.

It would be an error to jump to conclusions on this subject without all the data being carefully studied. It may be found that the Foundations meet all the criticisms levelled at them; it may be that they are assuming that as they control the money, they are entitled to follow their own judgment. Yet, the fact is that the Foundations are relieved of taxes on the single assumption that their expenditures will be in the public interest. Whatever the outcome, the Reece committee intends to produce the facts, to analyze them and to make recommendations to Congress for legislation on the subject.

(Copyright, 1953, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Benjamin N. Bowers, Mrs. [illegible] F. McPherson, Mrs. Lawrence K. Miller, Miss Margo Miller, Mrs. John H. Rice, Mrs. Jay C. Rosenfeld, Mrs. Stanley Simkin, and Alan J. Blau, all of Pittsfield; Mrs. [illegible] Crane, Dalton; Mrs. [illegible] and Mrs. Albert [illegible] Mrs. Joseph [illegible] Gladys Greene, Miss [illegible] Mrs. Frederic [illegible] L. Senior and Mrs. [illegible] Stokes, Lenox; Mrs. [illegible] rick and Mrs. [illegible] Stockbridge;

Also Mrs. William [illegible] rett, Great Barrington; [illegible] Davie Lloyd, Lee; [illegible] Homer, South [illegible] James W. Hull, North Adams; and Karl Weston, Williamstown.

Boxes are [illegible] communities [illegible] contribute to [illegible] ships for talented [illegible] who cannot a[illegible] tion. Boxes have [illegible] idents in [illegible] Richmond and [illegible] the Pittsfield [illegible] Orchestra. Five boxes have been [illegible] nated for the use of Berkshire Music Center students by summer residents unable to be present. Such reservations may [illegible] the Tanglewood box office.

Allard and Droeghmans Retire from Symphony

Raymond Allard, first bassoon, and cellist Hyppolyte Droeghmans will retire from the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the conclusion of the Berkshire Festival Sunday. They were honored at a luncheon at Tanglewood, Lenox, yesterday, following morning rehearsal.

Pasquale Cardillo was master of ceremonies. Allard and Droeghmans were presented gold watches by Charles Munch, conductor. Speakers included violinist Harry Ellis Dickson; Thomas D. Perry, assistant manager of the orchestra, and Dr. Lewis Perry, trustee.

Allard, born at Sin-le-Noble, France, in 1898, joined the Boston Symphony in 1922. He lives in Brookline. Droeghmans, born in Liege, Belgium, in 1884, has been with the orchestra since 1927. He lives in Newton Center.

'Tanglewood on Parade' for Benefit Tomorrow

With Isaac Stern, violinist; soprano Leontyne Price and her husband, baritone William Warfield as stars, the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be held at Tanglewood tomorrow evening.

There will be demonstrations by every department of the Summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, a lawn supper and a gala evening concert by the orchestra followed by the drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

Isaac Stern will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D major with the Boston Symphony, Charles Munch conducting, at the evening concert beginning at 8:15 in the

Cir. (D 13,075)

This Clipping From
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT

AUG 11 1953

Students From 41 of States, 11 Nations, at Tanglewood

Students from 41 states and 11 foreign countries are enrolled this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, this country's only school of music maintained by a major orchestra. Established by the Boston Symphony orchestra in 1940, when Serge Koussevitzky was its director, the school is now in its 11th six-week session, which will extend to the end of the Berkshire Music Festival on Aug. 16.

400 Enrolled

The enrollment of 400 students represents a true cross-section of advanced music students, teachers and professional musicians, who work in the divisions of orchestra playing and conducting, chamber music, and opera under a distinguished faculty of 36 which includes such outstanding musicians as Aaron Copland, Leonard Bernstein, Carlos Chavez, Boris Goldovsky, Hugh Ross, Lukas Foss, Irving Fine, Paul Ulanowsky, Seymour Lipkin, William Kroll, Richard Burgin and first chair players of the Boston orchestra.

The symphony's music director, Charles Munch, is director of the school, and Ralph Berkowitz is dean. A special department, the Tanglewood Stury group, set up last year for amateurs of music who wish to spend their vacations in the absorption of music, continues this year under the leadership of Ingolf Dahl, with an enrollment of 105, of whom 38 are spending the full six weeks, 12 four weeks, and 55 two weeks.

New York state leads the registration, with more than 100 students. Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Ohio are represented by 90 students. Nineteen each come from Connecticut and New Jersey; 18 each from Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and Washington, D. C. As a result of the Boston Symphony orchestra's first trans-continental tour last spring, when auditions were held for the first time in 10 cities on its route, enrollment from California increased to 10 students. From Salt Lake City and Provo, Utah, have come five pupils. Nine Canadians are studying at Tanglewood this summer, mostly from Toronto and Montreal where the symphony played. The New Orleans orchestral auditions produced seven students now on the Berkshire campus, and five from Florida.

19 From Abroad

Nineteen foreign students are enrolled. Besides the Canadians, Mexico, France, Israel, Sweden, Japan, Korea, Holland, Bolivia, Latvia and China have representatives. Serge Blanc, of Paris, s concertmaster of the student orchestra. From Pusan, South Korea, is John Kim, who is president and conductor of the Republic of Korea Naval Symphony Orchestra and Chorus. A composition pupil with Mexico's composer-conductor Carlos Chavez is Tossi Ichiyanagi of Tokyo.

As the result of seeing in Shanghai in 1950 a U. S. State department film on Tanglewood, Miss Lily Hsia is now a member of the opera department. On invitation of the federal government through a Smith-Mundt award to study conducting is Herbert Blomstedt of Stockholm, Sweden. Fernado Illanes is a chorus student from Bolivia; Johannes Emmen-Riedel is a Study group student from The Hague. George Mester and Alga Zilboorg of Mexico City are studying violin and 'cello. Pnina God is a trumpet player, Usiahu Wiesel is a student 'cellist, both from Israel. Endel Kalam, of Latvia, now resident in Indianapolis, s a viola player.

Ranging in age from 17 to 65, the majority of students are between 19 and 24. The 75 per cent in the full course are highly talented since competition was keen for the tuition scholarships awarded for the second time annually to those who play in the orchestra and chamber music groups or lead in the choral or opera departments. Most of the students live at the Lenox Preparatory school and Wheatleigh, a nearby estate owned by the orchestra. For recreation they swim and boat in Stockbridge bowl, the lake whose shoreline includes the edge of the Tanglewood estate.

Many Vocations

Students at Tanglewood include many vocations. For the first time in the Berkshire Music Center's 11 years the armed services are officially represented, by Warrant Officer John Norris, of Arlington, Va., assistant conductor of the U. S. Navy band, a student of orchestral conducting under Leonard Bernstein.

D. Robert Smith, from the faculty of Bates college, Lewiston, Me., is a student; also Elwood W. Hill, director of music at Bradford Junior college, Bradford, and Mrs. Willa Taylor, a professor at the Pennsylvania State college.

Three husband-and-wife teams are included. Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Moore, of Davidson, N. C., take advance study in clarinet and piano. Mrs. Charles Lawie, Lake Geneva, Wisc., attends general music classes while her husband is busy with Boris Goldovsky in the opera coaching class. Mr. and Mrs. Georg A. Kleinfeld of Cleveland are orchestra players. Twin brothers, Robert and Rodney Pierce of Wichita, Kan., are receiving advanced training on the French horn and oboe from senior members of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

The students drawn from four continents to Tanglewood by the fame of its staff and the hope that a career might be launched from this coveted study include Theresa Green of Baltimore, a three-time winner of the Arthur Godfrey talent scout award; and Sara Mae Endich, an employe of the advertising department of the European edition of the New York Herald-Tribune, here on annual vacation.

Ex-Students 4,217

Former students now scattered through the U. S., Canada, South America, Europe and Australia, many of whom have taken prominent places in the musical life of their communities, total 4,217.

Ten percent of the membership of all major U.S. symphony orchestras is composed of former Tanglewood students, and conductors who have graduated there include Leonard Bernstein, Thor Johnson (Cincinnati), Walter Hendl (Dallas), Eleazar de Carvalho (Rio de Janeiro), Lukas Foss, Robert Zeller, Herman Herz (Duluth), Robert Whitney (Louisville), Richard Bales (National Gallery, Washington), Thomas Schippers, Lorin Maazel, Alexander Leslie (Springfield).

The roster of former students at the Metropolitan opera includes Frank Guarerra, Mack Harrell, Mildred Miller, Anne Bollinger, Paul Knowles, Paula Leachner, and Heidi Kral (Toledo) and Robert McFerrin (St. Louis), winners of the 1953 auditions of the air. New York City Opera company graduates from Tanglewood include Ellen Faull, David Lloyd, Patricia Neway, Mac Morgan, James Pease, David Poleri, Robert Rounseville and Frances Yeend. Mario Lanza of Hollywood was a student in 1940-41. Leontyne Price, the Bess of Broadway's "Porgy and Bess", was a singer in the summer of 1951.

Choral Conductors Too

Choral conductors who are Tanglewood alumni include James Aliferis (University of Minnesota); Jacob Avshalomoff (Columbia University); Lorna Cooke de Varon (New England Conservatory, Boston).

Composers Norman dello Joio, Alan Hovaness, Ulysses Kay, Ned Rorem, Peter Mannin, Jurriaan Andriessen have profited from summers at Tanglewood; and instrumentalists number among them Jacob Krachmalnick, concertmaster of the Philadelphia orchestra; Leonard Pennario, Seymour Lipkin, Norman Carol, Constance Keene, Aldo Parisot and Julius Katchen.

Tanglewood's opera department has given the American premieres of Benjamin Britten's "Peter Grimes" and "Albert Herring," Mozart's "Idiomeneo" and Jacques Ibert's "Le Roi d'Yvetot," and this year, through a grant of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, has commissioned young composers Leonard Rosenan, of New York city, and Louis Mennini, of Rochester, N. Y. to write one-act operas there this summer for performance in 1954.

This Clipping From

AUG 11 1953

These Days

—By George E. Sokolsky

A Useful Grant

The Rockefeller Foundation has announced that it has voted a grant of $200,000 to the New York City Center of Music and Drama. This is a valuable cultural aid, supporting an institution that needs to be preserved because it gives to young Americans an opportunity to develop themselves in the arts of expression. Unlike nearly all European countries, the United States provides few opportunities for young artists in all the arts to go through a period of apprenticeship under great masters. It is for this reason that so many talented young people are forced to go to Europe for their training.

It is a curious commentary upon our way of thinking that at a time when we are pouring billions of dollars into foreign countries for the preservation of their cultures, we are permitting our own cultural institutions to decay for lack of funds. Few museums are safe today. There are no longer any Carnegies or Fricks or Otto Kahns available to assist our art museums and libraries. There are no Vanderbilts to come to the support of the Metropolitan Opera. Every privately-endowed college and university is worried about its finances and some are very frightened by the prospect. A completely integrated university, maintaining all departments of learning and providing time and facilities for research by its faculty, cannot live on student fees.

George Sokolsky

The New York City Center is a particularly noteworthy institution because it gives young Americans a chance. It is a feeder for the Metroplitan Opera as minor league baseball teams are feeders for the major league teams. It is at this place that such new operas as Menotti's are tried out, just as at Tanglewood, Copland, Bernstein, Foss and other young Americans can have their compositions played by such a fine orchestra as the Boston Symphony.

Yet, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood is running in the red and will have to find some way of making a public appeal. It may be difficult to arrange for public subscriptions for such an institution because, unless one actually sees what is being done for young Americans here, it is impossible to realize how much those who expect to make music their careers can accomplish here during the short summer session when they have the opportunity of association with the greatest men in their respective fields. It is an apprenticeship opportunity on the best European standards.

From every standpoint, it would be preferable if our universities, museums, orchestras, schools and other voluntary institutions were continued to be supported by donations from the people as they always have been in American life. Yet, it does come to mind that when billions of dollars, provided by the American taxpayer, are being used to support cultural activities in Europe and Asia, why are our own institutions being permitted to wither on the vine? We finance UNESCO, Point Four, International Students Exchange, libraries and all sorts of activities in the foreign cultural field.

A new committee of Congress has been appointed, under the chairmanship of Rep. Carroll Reece, to investigate the general activities of private Foundations. A similar committee, under the chairmanship of Eugene Cox, had begun to look into this subject, but Cox died and the committee's work was abortive. There is no secrecy about the work of any of the Foundations because they issue reports. The committee's activities therefore will be to analyze these reports in detail and to try to find a pattern of expenditures. While, in these days, emphasis will be laid on subversives, if any, who gain an advantage, which they ought not to have, the taxpayer would be interested in an analysis of the relationship between expenditures within the United States and abroad.

It would be an error to jump to conclusions on this subject without all the data being carefully studied. It may be found that the Foundations meet all the criticisms levelled at them; it may be that they are assuming that as they control the money, they are entitled to follow their own judgment. Yet, the fact is that the Foundations are relieved of taxes on the single assumption that their expenditures will be in the public interest. Whatever the outcome, the Reece committee intends to produce the facts, to analyze them and to make recommendations to Congress for legislation on the subject.

(Copyright, 1953, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

---

on

Benjamin N. Bowers, Mrs. Dona[illegible] F. McPherson, Mrs. Lawrence K. Miller, Miss Margo Miller, Mrs. John H. Rice, Mrs. Jay C. Rosenfeld, Mrs. Stanley Simkin, and Alan J. Blau, all of Pittsfield; Mrs. Bruce Crane, Dalton; Mrs. Shaun K[illegible] and Mrs. Albert Sterne, Richmond; Mrs. Joseph [illegible] Gladys Greene, Miss [illegible] Mrs. Frederi[illegible] L. Senior and Mrs. [illegible] Stokes, Lenox; Mrs. David B. K[illegible]rick and Mrs. Robert P. [illegible] Stockbridge;

Also Mrs. William [illegible] Barrett, Great Barrington; Mrs. [illegible] Davie Lloyd, Lee; [illegible] Homer, South Egremont; Mrs. James W. Hull, North Adams; and Karl Weston, Williamstown.

Boxes are being reserved [illegible] communities [illegible] contribute to [illegible] ships for talented [illegible] who cannot a[illegible] tion. Boxes [illegible] idents in [illegible] Richmond and [illegible] the Pittsfield Little Symphony Orchestra. Five boxes have been [illegible]nated for the use of Berkshire Music Center students by summer residents unable to be present. Such reservations may [illegible] ma[illegible] at the Tanglewood box office.

Allard and Droeghmans Retire from Symphony

Raymond Allard, first bassoon, and cellist Hyppolyte Droeghmans will retire from the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the conclusion of the Berkshire Festival Sunday.

They were honored at a luncheon at Tanglewood, Lenox, yesterday, following morning rehearsal.

Pasquale Cardillo was master of ceremonies. Allard and Droeghmans were presented gold watches by Charles Munch, conductor. Speakers included violinist Harry Ellis Dickson; Thomas D. Perry, assistant manager of the orchestra, and Dr. Lewis Perry, trustee.

Allard, born at Sin-le-Noble, France, in 1898, joined the Boston Symphony in 1922. He lives in Brookline. Droeghmans, born in Liege, Belgium, in 1884, has been with the orchestra since 1927. He lives in Newton Center.

'Tanglewood on Parade' for Benefit Tomorrow

With Isaac Stern, violinist; soprano Leontyne Price and her husband, baritone William Warfield as stars, the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be held at Tanglewood tomorrow evening.

There will be demonstrations by every department of the Summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, a lawn supper and a gala evening concert by the orchestra followed by the drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

Isaac Stern will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D major with the Boston Symphony, Charles Munch conducting, at the evening concert beginning at 8:15 in the Music Shed. [illegible] conduct the [illegible] "Water Music" [illegible] George Gershwin's [illegible] concert [illegible] Leontyne Price [illegible] and the Festival [illegible]

Music in Review

Bsn Post 8/12

By TUCKER KEISER

Reprint from late editions yesterday's Post

"Richard The Lion-Hearted"

LENOX, Aug. 11 — "Richard The Lion-Hearted," Gretry's three-act comic opera with a text by Sedaine, was lifted from dusty archives and presented as the major operatic production of the current tanglewood season tonight in the theater here. Mr. Goldovsky's opera department aimed for a bull's eye but poor windage calculation placed his shot under the target.

"Richard" was the Parisian "South Pacific" in 1787. Establishing a run of 100 performances before it was heard in Boston (1797), Philadelphia (1798), and New York (1800). From existing records, it appears that this production is the first American one since 1800 and quite possibly the last.

For an opera department which has brilliantly mounted American premieres of Britten's "Peter Grimes," "Albert Herring" and Mozart's "Idomeneo" the present third-rate musical comedy is a shock.

Mildly Amusing

"Richard" was often mildly amusing. The staging by Sarah the original. The dialogue is full of the most outrageous gags this side of Martin and Lewis. John McCollum's Blondel burlesquing a violinist and Lee Cass' toothy Sir Hugh, so full of gallic facetious remarks about the English, kept the audience mildly amused, but whether they were laughing at the play or nervous embarrassment was hard to determine.

The singing honors of the evening, when they had anything to sing, went to Mr. McCollum and Mr. Cass in the masculine roles and Rosalind Elias, a luscious mezzo-soprano. in the role of Antonio and Christine Cardillo, a warm-voiced lyric soprano, in the part of Laurette. The large cast did their vocal and acting chores well when there was anything to do.

Contrary to all the propaganda about 1953 opera being essentially theatre, opera lives for its music. There was nothing in the entire work that could not have been turned out by any one of a dozen hack composers of the period, and I suspect many of them wrote more interesting music, since "Richard" is supposed to be a parent of comic opera, one expected and got the standard musical numbers.

At Tanglewood

Lois Marshall, soprano, makes her Tanglewood debut, as soloist with William Warfield bass-baritone, in Brahms' "Requiem", which the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, will perform with Festival Chorus, at the Friday evening, August 14 (8:30 p. m.) concert of the Berkshire Festival, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood.

"Tanglewood On Parade" Planned

ith Isaac Stern, violinist; so- no Leontyne Price, the Bess of adway's "Porgy and Bess", and husband, baritone William War- as stars, the annual "Tangle- on Parade" benefit for the shire Music Center will be held home of the Boston Symphony stra's Berkshire Festival, Len- ss., on Thursday (August 13.) ties include demonstrations by epartment of the summer f music maintained by the or- , a lawn supper and a gala concert by the orchestra, n 6 p. m. to 11 p. m., followed the drawing of 40 door prizes and ing on the lawn.

ac Stern will perform Beetho- s Concerto in D major with the ston Symphony Orchestra, Charles nch, Music Director, conducting, the evening concert, which com- es at 8:15 p. m. in the 6,000- Music Shed. Mr. Munch will also ct the Suite from Handel's ter Music".

orge Gershwin's "Porgy and Act II, Scenes 1 and 2, will the second half of the con- program, directed and conducted Leonard Bernstein, head of the shire Music Center's conducting s.

gala program is as follows:

p. m.—Opera Scenes, Formal dens (for boxholders and reserved patrons only)

:45 p. m.—Fanfare; welcome by s Goldovsky, head of the Music er's opera department.

p. m.—Simultaneous demon- ons by each department, Berk- e Music Center.

:15 p. m.—Lawn party, picnic per, concert by student chorus.

15 p. m.—Music Shed, Gala Con- Boston Symphony Orchestra.

11:00 p. m.—Drawing for Door Prizes by Anna Russell, international concert comedienne, followed by Waltzing on the lawn.

NEWLEBANON, NEW Y

TUESDAY, AUGUST 11, 1953

This Week At TANGLEWOOD

Program — Tanglewood — Final week: August 10-August 16, 1953.

Tues., *8:30 p. m.—Theatre-Concert Hall (All seats reserved)
"Richard Coeur-De-Lion" Opera in 3 acts, Students of Dept. IV.

Wednesday, August 12—*8:30 p. m. Chamber Music Hall.
Composers' Forum by Students of Department III.
*4:30 p. m.—Theatre-Concert Hall. Opera scenes by students of the Associate Division of Dept. IV.

Thursday, August 13—6:00 to 11:00 p. m.—"Tanglewood On Parade".

Fri., *8:30 p. m.—Music Shed
Berkshire Festival Concert — Charles Munch, Conductor
Brahms—Requiem with Festival Chorus and Soloists. Soloists: Lois Marshall, soprano; William Warfield, Baritone.

Sat., 10:00 a. m.—Music Shed.
Boston Symphony orchestra—Charles Munch, Conductor. Public Rehearsal
*3:00 p. m.—Music Shed
Orchestra Concert by Students of Dept. 1.
8:30 p. m.—Music Shed
Berkshire Festival Concert—Leonard Bernstein, Conductor.
Sibelius—Symphony No. 4, in A minor; Chavez—Sinfonia India; Brahms—Symphony No. 2, in D major.

Sun., *10:00 a. m.—Theatre-Concert Hall
Chamber Music Concert by Students of Dept. 1.
2:30 p. m.—Music Shed.
Final Berkshire Festival Concert, Charles Munch, Conductor.

Cir. (D 182,922) (S 379,464)

This Clipping From

BOSTON, MASS.
EVENING GLOBE

AUG 11 1953

OPERA

Richard Cour-de-Lion Revived at Tanglewood

"Richard Coeur-de-Lion" ("Richard the Lion-Hearted"), opera with music by Andre Gretry and text by J. M. Sedaine. Revived under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, who conducted, at the theatre-concert hall, Tanglewood, by the Berkshire Music Center. English translation by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell. Staged by Miss Caldwell. Settings, lighting and projections designed by John Blankenchip. Costumes by Leo Van Witsen. Choreography by Leo Khraribian. The cast:

Colette	Arlene Stone
Mathurin	Alfred Knopf
Yvette	Anne English
Blondel	John McCollum
Antonio	Rosalind Elias
Guillot	Robert Simpson
Sir Hugh	Lee Cass
Laurette	Christine Cardillo
Marguerite	Theresa Green
The Seneschal	McHenry Boatwright
Beatrix	Suzanne Derderian
Philene	Lois McCauley
First Page	Paul Huddleston
Second Page	Richard Braud
Two Noblemen	Hunter Moore Wendell Gray
King Richard	Richard Cassilly
Florestan	Robert Rue
Georges	Clifford Orr
Maurice	Arthur Schoep

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX, Aug. 10—Andre Gretry's long-forgotten opera "Richard The Lion-Hearted" was revived here tonight, and thus another distinction was added to the lengthening list of achievements of the Berkshire Music Center.

The production, which will be repeated Tuesday night, with slightly altered cast, was made by students of Department 4, which is the opera department, under the direction of Boris Goldovsky.

It would be pleasant to be able to state that "Richard," along with "Domeneo," Rossini's "The Turk in Italy" and the "Peter Grimes" and "Albert Herring" of Benjamin Britten, is an American premiere by the Berkshire Music Center.

This is not quite the case, for although "Richard" has been unknown over here for more than 150 years, it was given in Boston in 1797 (13 years after the Paris premiere), in Philadelphia in 1798, and New York in 1800.

It took some doing to get this production together and follow Gretry's original, but Mr. Goldovsky, who is a bear on original versions, was able to obtain the composer's manuscript from the City of Brussels.

Musically, "Richard" is a comic opera in about the sense that Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Yeomen of the Guard" is a comic opera.

"It is about of the same dramatic weight as well, which, considering the craftsmanship of each, is a compliment that goes both ways. Although there is a certain brave innocence about Gretry's music, the score of "Richard" is far from quaint or thin.

It has substance, a good measure of melodic invention, and while the range of harmonic expression is not wide, the play of rhythm is constant varied and unceasingly vigorous.

Indeed there is a certain tension, almost a suspense, about story and music that makes you wonder if "Richard" might not be playable in a commercial opera house today.

That is, of course, in a highly stylized production, and sung, as here, in English.

I wish Mr. Goldovsky would think about it for his New England Opera Theatre. Gretry was no Mozart and yet no Rossini, but here he wrote a decidedly entertaining piece.

Production-wise, "Richard" stands among the finest of the music center's accomplishments. John Blankenchip's settings, of delightfully primitive perspective, are just right. The use of colored scenic projection upon a screen, makes possible a lively approximation of the storming of the castle where Richard the Lionhearted is imprisoned. Leo Van Witsen has done an exceptionally good job, both of color and design, with the medieval costumes.

The story is relatively simple, a mere framework for the spoken dialogue, the arias, duets and concerted numbers of the score.

It tells how, after much wandering disguised as a blind singer, Richard's minstrel Blondel finds where his master is imprisoned and, with the help of Richard's beloved, Marguerite of Flanders, and Sir Hugh Williams, an exiled English knight, the King is released.

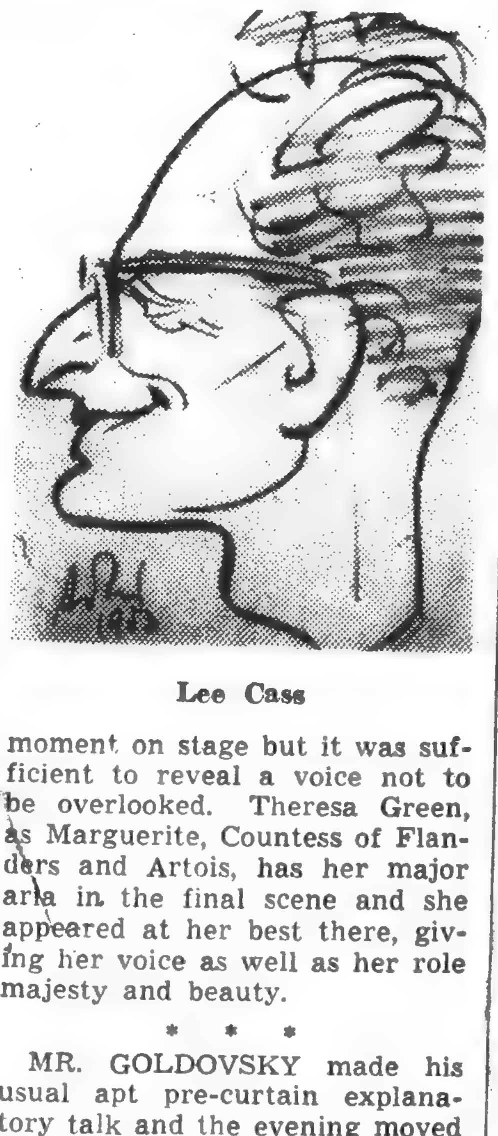
Tonight's singing was superb, with the Blondel of John McCollum and the Richard of Richard Cassilly blending superbly in the remarkable second-act duet for two tenors.

Theresa Green used her sumptuous voice well as Marguerite; Christine Cardillo was both musically and dramatically vivacious and the smaller roles were most creditably filled. It is pleasant to report, in conclusion, that nearly all the English words could easily be heard.

Music Eagle 8/11

'Richard the Lion-Hearted' Given Stimulating Rendition

By JAY C. ROSENFELD



Lee Cass

THE OPERA department of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, assisted by the orchestra of Department I, presented a revival last night of Grétry's long neglected, finest opera "Richard the Lion-Hearted." Under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the department, and with the assistance of Sarah Caldwell, both in this preparation and in the translation of Sedaine's text, the opera was given a fresh and youthfully stimulating presentation, providing a vehicle for a galaxy of young beautiful voices.

The plot has to do with intrigues to liberate Richard from a fortress-prison in France where he is being held after his crusade against the Saracens in Palestine. Blondel, his faithful lieutenant, who has sought him out tirelessly, has the lead and it was outstandingly sung and acted by John McCollum. His aria, sung outside the prison moat, "O mon Roi, l'univers t'abadonné," was sung in 1789, five years after Grétry wrot it, on an occasion of historical importance. It was a banquet given by the bodyguard of Louis XVI to the officers of the Versailles garrison, an event which culminated four years later in Louis' "coughing in the basket."

Goldovsky, leading the orchestra in the pit, gave the performance an energetic character by brisk and vigorous direction and the voices, both in the solos, concerted pieces and the chorus, were alert and sonorous without exception. The male octet of the prison guard, as an example, was compelling vocally.

* * *

THE STORY is most obvious and superficial and the music, while matching it well in type, is still full of pleasant melodies and enjoyable musical devices. Rosalind Elias, singing the part of the boy, Antonio, who undertakes to guide Blondel, feigning blindness, gave what might have been a minor part a major stature in every respect.

Christine Cardillo of North Adams, singing Laurette, the handsome daughter of Sir Hugh Williams, displayed a liquid soprano, eagerly responsive and evidently even more capable of florid work than the role required, and acted and looked the part of a damosel for whom a prison warden might well be pardoned for releasing so important a prisoner. Her father, the British nobleman, was Cass, lent ster.

moment on stage but it was sufficient to reveal a voice not to be overlooked. Theresa Green, as Marguerite, Countess of Flanders and Artois, has her major aria in the final scene and she appeared at her best there, giving her voice as well as her role majesty and beauty.

* * *

MR. GOLDOVSKY made his usual apt pre-curtain explanatory talk and the evening moved on swiftly, aided by John Blankenship's deft settings, lightings and projections and Leo Van Witsen's colorful and appropriately bombastic costumes. Mr. Goldovsky's musical assistants were Paul Ulanowsky, Felix Wolfes and Ludwig Zirner. To the entire faculty must go the credit of giving the evening distinction and flair.

The title role was sung by Richard Cassilly, whose sole opportunities came in his response and duet with Blondel in the prison scene and then in the finale where by his size and his voice he easily dominated the stage. The opera will be repeated tonight when Richard will be sung by Alvin Edmondsen and Miss Green will be replaced as the Countess by Lois McCauley. All the other roles will be repeated by those who sung them last night.

A final word must be inserted to mention the viol playing of John McCollum who as the blind minstrel carried what appeared to be a viol de braccia which may or may not have been available in the 12th century. His instrument was contrived of stage materials but he bowed it in perfect synchronism with the music emanating from the pit to the visual satisfaction and hilarious joy of his huge and captivated audience.

AUGUST 12, 1953

MUSIC

The Berkshire Festival

MHT

By Francis D. Perkins

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 11.—Grétry's "Richard Coeur de Lion," which was warmly welcomed by its first American audience in well over a century last night in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, was repeated there this evening by the Berkshire Music Center's Opera Department under Boris Goldovsky's conductorship. Theresa Green and Lois McCauley, yesterday's Countess Marguerite and Philéné, exchanged these roles, and Alvin Edmonson replaced Richard Cassily as King Richard in the otherwise unchanged cast of this prominent example of early French opera-comique.

Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell, who staged the productions, were the authors of the effective English translation of the text, which fitted the music without any sense of contrived adaptation. It was also in harmony with the style and atmosphere of what now seems an unsophisticated work which one might call romantic light opera. It was idiomatic and readily singable, and last night's standard of enunciation, including that of the choristers, was high. Even if it had not been, there would have been little trouble in following the uncomplicated plot.

A Pleasant Legend

John Blankenchip's sets were in accord with the atmosphere of the opera and its story, a pleasant historical legend with trimmings not to be taken too seriously. The Paul Planer projection of the brief battle scene on a screen with fighting shadows made this more persuasive than the usual operatic combat. Leo Van Witsen's costumes agreed with the style of the production of this remarkable short work, whose three acts take under an hour and a half, not counting intermissions.

Yesterday's performance by advanced students and some young professional singers moved with smoothness and spirit; the orchestral playing, often vigorous, preserved a good quality and balance of tone and dynamic judiciousness. The stage action had no hint of uncertainty.

McCollum As Blondel

John McCollum, as Richard's rescuing minstrel Blondel, played his role, including the simulated fiddling, with gusto; his singing was prevalently clear and had ample volume. Miss Green, with some vocal clouding, provided brilliant top notes as Marguerite. Christine Cardillo and Rosalind Elias sang very pleasantly as Laurette and Antonio, the pretendedly blind Blondel's guide, in appealing characterizations. Robert Rue was a resolute Florestan, and Lee Cass played Sir Hugh Williams, who is intended to be a stage Englishman, in that vein.

Grétry's tunes in this score are copious and sometimes memorable. With its melodic charm and spirit, "Richard" now has a certain quaintness, and it may prove too naive for today's listeners to prevent a return to the operatic shelf. But it was interesting to hear it and gain an idea of the genre of opera it represents, and Mr. Goldovsky and his colleagues deserve thanks for their valuable policy of enlarging operatic horizons beyond the confines of the standard repertory.

[280]

Music in Review

Bos Post 8/12

By TUCKER KEISER

Reprint from late editions yesterday's Post

"Richard The Lion-Hearted"

LENOX, Aug. 11 — "Richard The Lion-Hearted," Gretry's three-act comic opera with a text by Sedaine, was lifted from dusty archives and presented as the major operatic production of the current tanglewood season tonight in the theater here. Mr. Goldovsky's opera department aimed for a bull's eye but poor windage calculation placed his shot under the target.

"Richard" was the Parisian "South Pacific" in 1787. Establishing a run of 100 performances before it was heard in Boston (1797), Philadelphia (1798), and New York (1800). From existing records, it appears that this production is the first American one since 1800 and quite possibly the last.

For an opera department which has brilliantly mounted American premieres of Britten's "Peter Grimes," "Albert Herring" and Mozart's "Idomeneo" the present third-rate musical comedy is a shock.

Mildly Amusing

"Richard" was often mildly amusing. The staging by Sarah Caldwell would do credit to a broadway show, and Leo Van Witsen's costumes and John Blankenchip's scenery are as bright as a penny. But the listener is prepared for opera, not the Keystone cops.

Every music lover is grateful for revivals which restore half-forgotten masterpieces to the current repertory. But revivals should not be in the nature of exhumations.

A sillier plot, I have never seen.

Outrageous Gags

Mr. Goldovsky and Miss Caldwell have prepared an Engish text which, according to the former, has not been unfaithful to the original. The dialogue is full of the most outrageous gags this side of Martin and Lewis. John McCollum's Blondel burlesquing a violinist and Lee Cass' toothy Sir Hugh, so full of gallic facetious remarks about the English, kept the audience mildly amused, but whether they were laughing at the play or nervous embarrassment was hard to determine.

The singing honors of the evening, when they had anything to sing, went to Mr. McCollum and Mr. Cass in the masculine roles and Rosalind Elias, a luscious mezzo-soprano, in the role of Antonio and Christine Cardillo, a warm-voiced lyric soprano, in the part of Laurette. The large cast did their vocal and acting chores well when there was anything to do.

Contrary to all the propaganda about 1953 opera being essentially theatre, opera lives for its music. There was nothing in the entire work that could not have been turned out by any one of a dozen hack composers of the period, and I suspect many of them wrote more interesting music, since "Richard" is supposed to be a parent of comic opera, one expected and got the standard musical numbers.

Cir. (D 152,922) (S 379,464)

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
EVENING GLOBE

AUG 11 1953

OPERA

Richard Cour-de-Lion Revived at Tanglewood

"Richard Coeur-de-Lion" ("Richard the Lion-Hearted"), opera with music by Andre Gretry and text by J. M. Sedaine. Revived under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, who conducted, at the theatre-concert hall, Tanglewood, by the Berkshire Music Center. English translation by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell. Staged by Miss Caldwell. Settings, lighting and projections designed by John Blankenchip. Costumes by Leo Van Witsen. Choreography by Leo Khraribian. The cast:

Colette	Arlene Stone
Mathurin	Alfred Knopf
Yvette	Anne English
Blondel	John McCollum
Antonio	Rosalind Elias
Guillot	Robert Simpson
Sir Hugh	Lee Cass
Laurette	Christine Cardillo
Marguerite	Theresa Green
The Seneschal	McHenry Boatwright
Beatrix	Suzanne Derderian
Philene	Lois McCauley
First Page	Paul Huddleston
Second Page	Richard Braud
Two Noblemen	Hunter Moore Wendell Gray
King Richard	Richard Cassilly
Florestan	Robert Rue
Georges	Clifford Orr
Maurice	Arthur Schoep

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX, Aug. 10—Andre Gretry's long-forgotten opera "Richard The Lion-Hearted" was revived here tonight, and thus another distinction was added to the lengthening list of achievements of the Berkshire Music Center.

The production, which will be repeated Tuesday night, with slightly altered cast, was made by students of Department 4, which is the opera department, under the direction of Boris Goldovsky.

It would be pleasant to be able to state that "Richard," along with "Domeneo," Rossini's "The Turk in Italy" and the "Peter Grimes" and "Albert Herring" of Benjamin Britten, is an American premiere by the Berkshire Music Center.

This is not quite the case, for although "Richard" has been unknown over here for more than 150 years, it was given in Boston in 1797 (13 years after the Paris premiere), in Philadelphia in 1798, and New York in 1800.

It took some doing to get this production together and follow Gretry's original, but Mr. Goldovsky, who is a bear on original versions, was able to obtain the composer's manuscript from the City of Brussels.

Musically, "Richard" is a comic opera in about the sense that Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Yeomen of the Guard" is a comic opera.

"It is about of the same dramatic weight as well, which, considering the craftsmanship of each, is a compliment that goes both ways. Although there is a certain brave innocence about Gretry's music, the score of "Richard" is far from quaint or thin.

It has substance, a good measure of melodic invention, and while the range of harmonic expression is not wide, the play of rhythm is constant varied and unceasingly vigorous.

Indeed there is a certain tension, almost a suspense, about story and music that makes you wonder if "Richard" might not be playable in a commercial opera house today.

That is, of course, in a highly stylized production, and sung, as here, in English.

I wish Mr. Goldovsky would think about it for his New England Opera Theatre. Gretry was no Mozart and yet no Rossini, but here he wrote a decidedly entertaining piece.

Production-wise, "Richard" stands among the finest of the music center's accomplishments. John Blankenchip's settings, of delightfully primitive perspective, are just right. The use of colored scenic projection upon a screen, makes possible a lively approximation of the storming of the castle where Richard the Lionhearted is imprisoned. Leo Van Witsen has done an exceptionally good job, both of color and design, with the medieval costumes.

The story is relatively simple, a mere framework for the spoken dialogue, the arias, duets and concerted numbers of the score.

It tells how, after much wandering disguised as a blind singer, Richard's minstrel Blondel finds where his master is imprisoned and, with the help of Richard's beloved, Marguerite of Flanders, and Sir Hugh Williams, an exiled English knight, the King is released.

Tonight's singing was superb, with the Blondel of John McCollum and the Richard of Richard Cassilly blending superbly in the remarkable second-act duet for two tenors.

Theresa Green used her sumptuous voice well as Marguerite, Christine Cardillo was both musically and dramatically vivacious and the smaller roles were most creditably filled. It is pleasant to report, in conclusion, that nearly all the English words could easily be heard.

Music

Eagle 8/11

'Richard the Lion-Hearted' Given Stimulating Rendition

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

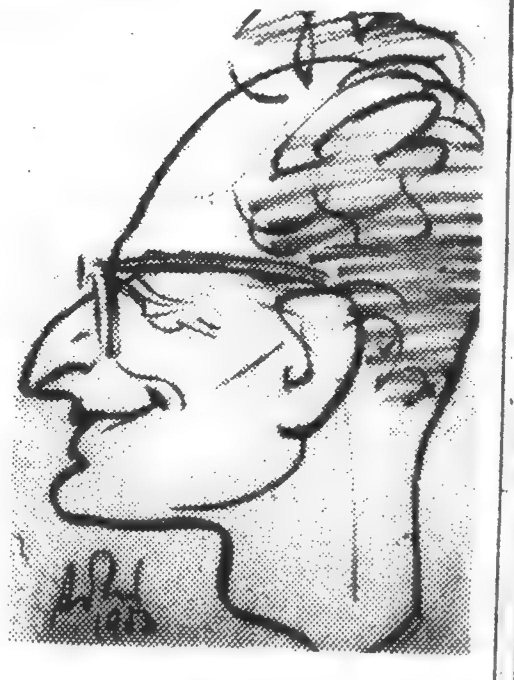
THE OPERA department of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, assisted by the orchestra of Department I, presented a revival last night of Grétry's long neglected, finest opera "Richard the Lion-Hearted." Under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the department, and with the assistance of Sarah Caldwell, both in this preparation and in the translation of Sedaine's text, the opera was given a fresh and youthfully stimulating presentation, providing a vehicle for a galaxy of young beautiful voices.



Lee Cass

The plot has to do with intrigues to liberate Richard from a fortress-prison in France where he is being held after his crusade against the Saracens in Palestine. Blondel, his faithful lieutenant, who has sought him out tirelessly, has the lead and it was outstandingly sung and acted by John McCollum. His aria, sung outside the prison moat, "O mon Roi, l'univers t'abadonné," was sung in 1789, five years after Grétry wrot it, on an occasion of historical importance. It was a banquet given by the bodyguard of Louis XVI to the officers of the Versailles garrison, an event which culminated four years later in Louis' "coughing in the basket."

Goldovsky, leading the orchestra in the pit, gave the performance an energetic character by brisk and vigorous direction and the voices, both in the solos, concerted pieces and the chorus, were alert and sonorous without exception. The male octet of the prison guard, as an example, was compelling vocally.

* * *

THE STORY is most obvious and superficial and the music, while matching it well in type, is still full of pleasant melodies and enjoyable musical devices. Rosalind Elias, singing the part of the boy, Antonio, who undertakes to guide Blondel, feigning blindness, gave what might have been a minor part a major stature in every respect.

Christine Cardillo of North Adams, singing Laurette, the handsome daughter of Sir Hugh Williams, displayed a liquid soprano, eagerly responsive and evidently even more capable of florid work than the role required, and acted and looked the part of a damosel for whom a prison warden might well be pardoned for releasing so important a prisoner. Her father, the British nobleman, was sung excellently by Lee Cass, whose characterization lent extra color and hue to the roster. Her lover, the prison warden, Robert Rue, had but a short moment on stage but it was sufficient to reveal a voice not to be overlooked. Theresa Green, as Marguerite, Countess of Flanders and Artois, has her major aria in the final scene and she appeared at her best there, giving her voice as well as her role majesty and beauty.

* * *

MR. GOLDOVSKY made his usual apt pre-curtain explanatory talk and the evening moved on swiftly, aided by John Blankenship's deft settings, lightings and projections and Leo Van Witsen's colorful and appropriately bombastic costumes. Mr. Goldovsky's musical assistants were Paul Ulanowsky, Felix Wolfes and Ludwig Zirner. To the entire faculty must go the credit of giving the evening distinction and flair.

The title role was sung by Richard Cassilly, whose sole opportunities came in his response and duet with Blondel in the prison scene and then in the finale where by his size and his voice he easily dominated the stage. The opera will be repeated tonight when Richard will be sung by Alvin Edmondsen and Miss Green will be replaced as the Countess by Lois McCauley. All the other roles will be repeated by those who sung them last night.

A final word must be inserted to mention the viol playing of John McCollum who as the blind minstrel carried what appeared to be a viol de braccia which may or may not have been available in the 12th century. His instrument was contrived of stage materials but he bowed it in perfect synchronism with the music emanating from the pit to the visual satisfaction and hilarious joy of his huge and captivated audience.

Tanglewood

Tonight

8.30—Gretty's opera, "Richard the Lion-Hearted," by students of Berkshire Music Center. Theatre.

Tomorrow Afternoon

*3.15—Lecture by Boris Goldovsky on "The Riddle of Tempo." Chamber Music Hall.

*Open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center with advance reservations.

---

ties include demonstrations by department of the summer f music maintained by the or-, a lawn supper and a gala concert by the orchestra, 6 p. m. to 11 p. m., followed the drawing of 40 door prizes and ng on the lawn.

saac Stern will perform Beetho-'s Concerto in D major with the ston Symphony Orchestra, Charles nch, Music Director, conducting, the evening concert, which com-nces at 8:15 p. m. in the 6,000-t Music Shed. Mr. Munch will also the Suite from Handel's ter Music".

rge Gershwin's "Porgy and Act II, Scenes 1 and 2, will the second half of the con- program, directed and conducted Leonard Bernstein, head of the shire Music Center's conducting

gala program is as follows:

p. m.—Opera Scenes, Formal dens (for boxholders and reserved patrons only)

45 p. m.—Fanfare; welcome by s Goldovsky, head of the Music ter's opera department.

00 p. m.—Simultaneous demon-tions by each department, Berk-re Music Center.

15 p. m.—Lawn party, picnic pper, concert by student chorus.

15 p. m.—Music Shed, Gala Con-t, Boston Symphony Orchestra.

11:00 p. m.—Drawing for Door Prizes by Anna Russell, international concert comedienne, followed by Waltzing on the lawn.

NEW LEBANON, NEW Y

TUESDAY, AUGUST 11, 1953

This Week At TANGLEWOOD

Program — Tanglewood — Final week: August 10-August 16, 1953.

Tues., *8:30 p. m.—Theatre-Concert Hall (All seats reserved)
"Richard Coeur-De-Lion" Opera in 3 acts, Students of Dept. IV.

Wednesday, August 12 - *8:30 p. m. Chamber Music Hall.
Composers' Forum by Students of Department III.
*4:30 p. m.—Theatre-Concert Hall. Opera scenes by students of the Associate Division of Dept. IV.

Thursday, August 13- 6:00 to 11:00 p. m.—"Tanglewood On Parade".

Fri., *8:30 p. m.—Music Shed
Berkshire Festival Concert — Charles Munch, Conductor
Brahms—Requiem with Festival Chorus and Soloists. Soloists: Lois Marshall, soprano; William Warfield, Bariton

Sat., 10:00 a. m.—Music Shed.
Boston Symphony orchestra— Charles Munch, Conductor.
Public Rehearsal
*3:00 p. m.—Music Shed
Orchestra Concert by Students of Dept. 1.
8:30 p. m.—Music Shed
Berkshire Festival Concert— Leonard Bernstein, Conductor.
Sibelius—Symphony No. 4, in A minor; Chavez—Sinfonia India; Brahms—Symphony No. 2, in D major.

Sun., *10:00 a. m.—Theatre-Concert Hall
Chamber Music Concert by Students of Dept. 1.
2:30 p. m.—Music Shed.
Final Berkshire Festival Concert, Charles Munch, Conductor.

---

ght's standard of enunciation, including that of the choristers, was high. Even if it had not been, there would have been little trouble in following the uncomplicated plot.

A Pleasant Legend

John Blankenchip's sets were in accord with the atmosphere of the opera and its story, a pleasant historical legend with trimmings not to be taken too seriously. The Paul Planer projection of the brief battle scene on a screen with fighting shadows made this more persuasive and Lee Cass played Sir Hugh Williams, who is intended to be a stage Englishman, in that vein.

Grétry's tunes in this score are copious and sometimes memorable. With its melodic charm and spirit, "Richard" now has a certain quaintness, and it may prove too naive for today's listeners to prevent a return to the operatic shelf. But it was interesting to hear it and gain an idea of the genre of opera it represents, and Mr. Goldovsky and his colleagues deserve thanks for their valuable policy of enlarging operatic horizons beyond the confines of the standard repertory.

[280]

TIGHT BINDING

Pittsfield, Massachusetts, Wednesday, August 12, 1953. Eagle City Edition

HONORED BY BSO: Hippolyte Droeghmans, left, cellist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra since 1927, and Raymond Allard, right, bassoonist with the BSO since 1922, hold gold watches presented to them yesterday by Music Director Charles Munch, center, on the occasion of their retirement at the close of the 1953 Berkshire Festival this week end.

Two Musicians End 56 Years Of Service

TANGLEWOOD—Two members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who will retire Sunday following a total of 56 years of service yesterday noon at Tanglewood, were honored at a luncheon by their colleagues. Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra, presented gold watches to Raymond Allard, principal bassoonist, with the orchestra since 1922, and Hippolyte Droeghmans, cellist, a member since 1927.

Pasquale Cardillo of North Adams, clarinetist, chairman of the orchestral committee, presided. Speakers were Harry Ellis Dickson, violinist, who conducts the Pops and Esplanade concerts; Dr. Lewis Perry of Boston, representing the orchestra trustees; and Thomas D. Perry Jr., assistant manager.

Mr. Allard was born in Sin-le-Noble, France in 1888 and learned to play the saxophone as a child After service in World War I he attended the Paris Conservatory, from which he graduated with a first prize. He was engaged for the Boston orchestra by its conductor at the time, Pierre Monteux. He lives in Newton Center with his two sons, Rene and Georges.

Mr. Droeghmans was born in Liege, Belgium. He won first prize at the Royal Conservatory and later at the Paris Conservatory. He has been soloist at the Concerts Colonne, Paris; the Grand Cercle of Aix-les-Bains and the opera at Nice. He studied cello from the age of eight, at first with his mother. He and Mrs. Droeghmans live in Brookline.

Two World Premieres Slated For Tanglewood Parade

Two world premieres will be presented by the Berkshire Music Center opera department at Tanglewood on Parade tomorrow night at 6. At the same time, a symphony concert and a chamber music concert, which will include works by student composers, will be presented in other halls to demonstrate the activities of the school. The simultaneous performances will follow a greeting in the center of the Tanglewood grounds by Boris Goldovsky, opera department head. At 7.15, during the hour allowed for picnicking on the lawn, a choral concert will be offered on the steps of the main house.

The Meyerowitz and Sapp operas are world premieres. "Bad Boys in School" is from a play by Johann Nestroy, with libretto and music by Jan Meyerowitz, composer-conductor who was a coach in the Berkshire Music Center's opera department in 1948, 1949 and 1951. It will be performed by the entire associate division of the opera department, supervised [illegible] and Laura Zirner [illegible] conducted by Boris G[illegible]

The compos[illegible] Lost" was a comp[illegible] under Aaron Cop[illegible] now is assistant [illegible] ing head of [illegible] at Harvard Colle[illegible]

The program follows:

In the Theatre

Cantata with text by William B[illegible]

Opera—Bad Boys in Scho[illegible]

In the Music Shed

Lieutenant Kije ....

Harold F[illegible] conductor

Concerto for Violoncello in B m[illegible]

Uziahu Wiesel, cellist; Ermo Daniel, conductor

Prelude to The Afternoon of a Faun ..... Deb

Herbert Blomstedt, conductor

Alborada del Gracioso .... R

Robert Mandell, conductor

In the Chamber Music Hall

Three Children's Pieces and One Grown Up Piece .... Jack U

Played by the composer

Piano Pieces .... T[illegible]

Played by the composer

Liebeslieder Waltzes .... Br

Margo W[illegible], contralto; Betty [illegible] Allen, mezzo soprano; John McCollum, tenor; Mac Morgan, baritone

Sonata for Trumpet and Piano Hinde

Paul Willwerth, trumpet; Betsy Meyer, piano

Quintet in F minor for Piano Strings .... F

Nancy Heaton and Maxime Kor[illegible], violins; Nancy Pease, viola; Cam[illegible]a, cello; Gilbert Kalish, piano

On the Porch

Lark .... Co

McHenry Boatwright, baritone; Lorna Cooke DeVaron, conductor

As Vesta Was Descending ...... W

James Owens, conductor

Lasciate mi Morire .... Mont

Kalman Novak, conductor

Fire, Fire My Heart .... M

Barry Volkman, conductor

Three Nocturnes C

William Tooker, conductor

As I Went A'Walking .... K[illegible]

Wee Cooper O'Fife

Eileen Dusio[illegible]

Roxiney Boodi .... St

David Burleigh, conductor

Le Chant des Oiseaux .... Jann

James Alfers, conductor

Munch Conducts at 8.15

At 8.15 Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Handel's 'Water Music' and Beethoven's violin concerto, with Isaac Stern as soloist. After intermission Leonard Bernstein will take the baton for the second act of "Porgy and Bess," with Leon[illegible] Price and William Warfield as soloists.

After the drawing of 42 door prizes, including two new high fidelity console record players, RCA Hi-Fi and Philco Phonor[illegible], there will be dancing on the lawn south of the main house, with professional pianists, members of the faculty, at two pianos.

Adler To Sketch People Attending Benefit Tomorrow

A feature of Tanglewood on Parade tomorrow will be sketches by Wolf Adler, clarinetist in the student orchestra, who has done many caricatures of faculty, BSO musicians, staff and students. Many have appeared this year in The Eagle. They take a minute or two. The proceeds will be added to the grand total of the benefit.

Born in Romania, Mr. Adler started playing the violin on an instrument made at the factory of the family of Joseph Szigheti. He played the flute from the age of 11 to 15, and then started the clarinet. He studied music and art in Bucharest and graduated in 1944 from the Budapest Academy. Deported to Yugoslavia with his family during the war, he later studied at the Brussels (Belgium) Conservatory.

After going to Dublin to perform on Radio-Eire, the radio symphony orchestra of Ireland, he returned to Paris, and then went to Israel and later to study conducting in Sienna, Italy. He now lives in Toronto, Canada, where he will present a chamber music recital following the Tanglewood season.

He paints in oils, especially portraits, and fluently speaks seven languages. He has painted George Enesco and Pablo Casals.

Bsn Herald 8/12

Opera Has U. S. Premiere, Pleases Tanglewod Audience

By RUDOLPH ELIE, JR.

TANGLEWOOD, Aug. 11—"Richard the Lion Hearted," a long-silent opera by the 18th century French court composer Andre Gretry, was given its American premiere last night by Boris Goldovsky's opera department and displayed, in one of this group's most ingenious and attractive productions, a naive freshness equalled only by its overall lack of substance.

Given in a straightforward English text, translated without conceit by Sarah Caldwell who staged it and Boris Goldovsky who conducted it, the opera, more properly described as a musical comedy, deals with the single episode of the discovery and delivery of Richard from his Austrian prison by Blondel the troubador. Although two romances and a 50th anniversary wedding ceremony are also more or less involved, "Richard" clearly ranks with the least complicated full-length operas in existence.

SPECIAL CHARM

Moreover, for its length, it has much less music than is c tained, say, in one scene of "Ta hauser." That clarity, simplic and succinctness are qualities be desired in an opera is t enough, and they make for a s cial charm in this rare piece, it must remain merely one those grateful one-time expe ences this boundlessly resource and infectious company produc so inimitably.

The music, what there is of consists of songs rather than veloped arias, the principal son a ballad with which Blondel esta lishes contact with Richard se ing as a sort of rudimentary le motive. These songs, displayi a courtly elegance—within a s prisingly small framework of tervals, suggest the style of troubadors of Richard's, own riod. Some of them, as for stance "Wine Drives All Ca Away," develop into rollicki choruses, and there are occasion duets and ensembles.

The opera, however, only tak on a real musical and drama urgency in the second act, in whi Richard is found by Blondel. T chorus of prison guards in t scene is far and away the fine moment in the whole piece though the finale almost equals it. The rest, delicious although it is, is soon forgotten, leaving the impression that Gretry's orchestral and vocal force, always in evidence in a strange mingling of the sounds of Mozart and Rossini, rises and falls on the strength of his librettist.

LARGE CAST

While the cast is very large, the opera is essentially a one-man show with Blondel carrying the burden. John McCollum, a tenor with a fine and a true voice ... of Sir Hugh, sang splendidly. In their miniature roles Robert Rue, Ann English, Richard Cassilly, Theresa Green and McHenry Boatwright were entirely competent.

FINE ENUNCIATION

The whole cast deserves special compliments for the clarity of the enunciation, hardly a word being lost either in the lyrics or the extensive dialogue. The sets and special effects by John Blankenchip were particularly outstanding, while Leo Van Witsen's costumes were gay and amusing and entirely in the vein. It may be added that Mr. Goldovsky's student orchestra in the pit was of the liveliest character as, indeed, was the entire evening.

Had Gretry's opera a little more force and a lot more music, it would well deserve a more extensive outing. To have the opportunity to see it and savor it at this time, however, was a very choice occasion as was more than evident from the prolonged applause of the capacity audience. The opera was repeated tonight with virtually the same cast.

Cir. (D 38,502)

This Clipping From
WATERBURY, CONN.
AMERICAN

AUG 13 1953

Tanglewood Benefit Set

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 13—Tanglewood on Parade, the annual program for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, will get ~~under way here~~ tonight with a fanfare at 5:45 p. m. and a welcome by Boris Goldovsky. Beginning at 6 p. m. the audience will have an opportunity to see the music center in operation with short symphonic works to be presented in the Music Shed by the orchestra, world premieres of an opera and cantata in the theater-concert hall, and chamber music hall simultaneously.

Those going to the concert are invited to bring their picnic supper and enjoy the lawns at Tanglewood. At 7:15 p. m. the chorus will sing on the porch of the main house and at 8:15 the Boston Symphony will present a program with Isaac Stern as violin soloist. Charles Munch will conduct the first part of the program and Leonard Bernstein the second, which will be from "Porgy and Bess."

Leontyne Price, soprano, now singing "Bess" on Broadway, will be the soloist, along with William Warfield, baritone, "Porgy" of the European production.

There will be waltzing on the lawn by the main house after the concert.

---

450 Attend Concert at Seranak For ~~Stockbridge~~ Eagle Bowl 8/12 Benefit

An audience of 450 members of the Stockbridge Bowl Association and their friends attended an informal concert yesterday afternoon on the lawn of Seranak, the Lenox estate of Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky. The artists were summer and permanent members of the community. The audience was largely made up of new members of the organization to preserve the beauty of Lake Mahkeenac, who joined for the designed occasion.

Appeals for Support

Nathan Horwitt, the president, welcoming the guests, spoke of the importance of keeping the lake beautiful. The job can be done, he said, only by a strong membership. He hoped that the audience would continue to be members for the benefit of music generally.

Mrs. Koussevitzky, welcoming the audience to Seranak, quoted her late husband, who considered it his home and described it as "the most beautiful point of view." The point of view, she said, stretches beyond the present, to the future. It is progress, and the beauty of progress is to remain true to the historic trusts and cultural evolution, she said.

She told how Nathaniel Hawthorne had predicted that his little red cottage would be consumed by fire and that Tanglewood would live again, but be occupied by a different family. Today, she said, it is a place of pilgrimage and a mecca for musicians. It lives again through the art of music and American youth. She said that when Miss Kate Buckingham cleared the sheep pasture of Bald Head Farm to build a spacious New England house the neighbors feared that she would erect a Buckingham palace.

Musician, Visionary, Builder

"Next it became the home of a musician, visionary and builder, Serge Koussevitzky, who worked here to bring to life his ideas and music school. Here many of his plans and visions took shape, through labor, thought and perception of the future. He would return from travels abroad and say, 'This is my home.' It is still his home, surrounded by the living beauty of the lake and the hills and near-by Tanglewood."

Emily Dickinson, Mrs. Koussevitzky concluded, in one of her poems, wrote, "Beauty and truth. The two are one. We would like to think that by trying to preserve nature's beauty we are following the path of truth."

The program, unannounced, included the duo-piano performance of Mozart's D-major sonata and Aaron Copland's "Human Dance," by Leonard Bernstein and Lukas Foss, with pages turned by their wives; songs by Mac Morgan and Richard Dyer-Bennet, year-round Stockbridge residents; and solos by Miss Doriot Anthony, principal flautist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Boris Goldovsky was master of ceremonies.

Cir. (D 74,847) (S 117,225)

This Clipping From
HARTFORD, CONN.
COURANT

AUG [illegible]

Tanglewood Goes On Parade Again At Lenox Today

TANGLEWOO[illegible] Mass

Berk[illegible]

VACATIONTIME IN THE BERKSHIRES

THE TANGLEWOOD STORY

Concerts in the Shed

Friday and Saturday Evenings at 8
Sunday Afternoons at 2:30

SERIES C

Friday Evening, August 14—[illegible]
BRAHMS..........
(with Chorus [illegible])

Saturday Evening, August 15—LEONARD BERNSTEIN
SIBELIUS.......... Symphony No. 4, in A minor
CHAVEZ.........
BRAHMS............ Symphony No. 2, in D major

Sunday Afternoon, August 16—CHARLES MUNCH
SCHUBERT......Symphony in B minor "Unfinished"
CHABRIER.......... Bourrée Fantasque
WAGNER. Prelude and Love-Death "Tristan [illegible]" WAGNER..........
WAGNER........ "Die M[illegible]"

RAVEL
RAVEL

[281]

TIGHT BINDING

Pittsfield, Massachusetts, Wednesday, August 12, 1953. Eagle City Edition

HONORED BY BSO: Hippolyte Droeghmans, left, cellist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra since 1927, and Raymond Allard, right, bassoonist with the BSO since 1922, hold gold watches presented to them yesterday by Music Director Charles Munch, center, on the occasion of their retirement at the close of the 1953 Berkshire Festival this week end.

Two Musicians End 56 Years Of Service

TANGLEWOOD—Two members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who will retire Sunday following a total of 56 years of service yesterday noon at Tanglewood, were honored at a luncheon by their colleagues. Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra, presented gold watches to Raymond Allard, principal bassoonist, with the orchestra since 1922, and Hippolyte Droeghmans, cellist, a member since 1927.

Pasquale Cardillo of North Adams, clarinetist, chairman of the orchestral committee, presided. Speakers were Harry Ellis Dickson, violinist, who conducts the Pops and Esplanade concerts; Dr. Lewis Perry of Boston, representing the orchestra trustees; and Thomas D. Perry Jr., assistant manager.

Mr. Allard was born in Sin-le-Noble, France in 1888 and learned to play the saxophone as a child After service in World War I he attended the Paris Conservatory, from which he graduated with a first prize. He was engaged for the Boston orchestra by its conductor at the time, Pierre Monteux. He lives in Newton Center with his two sons, Rene and Georges.

Mr. Droeghmans was born in Liege, Belgium. He won first prize at the Royal Conservatory and later at the Paris Conservatory. He has been soloist at the Concerts Colonne, Paris; the Grand Cercle of Aix-les-Bains and the opera at Nice. He studied cello from the age of eight, at first with his mother. He and Mrs. Droeghmans live in Brookline.

Two World Premieres Slated For Tanglewood Parade

Two world premieres will be presented by the Berkshire Music Center opera department at Tanglewood on Parade tomorrow night at 6. At the same time, a symphony concert and a chamber music concert, which will include works by student composers, will be presented in other halls to demonstrate the activities of the school. The simultaneous performances will follow a greeting in the center of the Tanglewood grounds by Boris Goldovsky, opera department head. At 7.15, during the hour allowed for picnicking on the lawn, a choral concert will be offered on the steps of the main house.

The Meyerowitz and Sapp operas are world premieres. "Bad Boys in School" is from a play by Johann Nestroy, with libretto and music by Jan Meyerowitz, composer-conductor who was a coach in the Berkshire Music Center's opera department in 1948, 1949 and 1951. It will be performed by the entire associate division of the opera department, supervised by Ludw and Laura Zirner and staged a conducted by Boris Goldovsky.

The composer of "A Little B Lost" was a composition stude under Aaron Copland in 1942 now is assistant professor and a ing head of the music departm at Harvard College.

The program follows:

In the Theatre
Cantata with text by William Bl
A
Opera—Bad Boys in School.
Jan Meyero

In the Music Shed
Lieutenant Kije .... Proko
Harold Blumenfeld, conductor.
Concerto for Violoncello in B minor
Dv
Uziahu Wiesel, soloist.
Erno Daniel, conductor.
Prelude to The Afternoon of a Faun.
Deb
Herbert Blomstedt, conductor.
Alborada del Gracioso .... R
Robert Mandell, conductor.

In the Chamber Music Hall
Three Children's Pieces and One Grow-up Piece .... Jack U
Played by the composer.
Piano Pieces .... Tossi Ichiy
Played by the composer.
Liebeslieder Waltzes .... Br
Margo Willauer, soprano.
Betty Lou Allen, mezzo soprano.
John McCollum, tenor.
Mac Morgan, baritone.
Sonata for Trumpet and Piano..Hinde
Paul Willwerth, trumpet.
Betsy Moyer, piano.
Quintet in F minor for Piano
Strings .... F
Nancy Heaton and Maxime Kouns lins; Nancy Pease, viola; Camilla cello; Gilbert Kalish, piano.

On the Porch
Lark .... Co
McHenry Boatwright, baritone.
Lorna Cooke DeVaron, conductor.
As Vesta Was Descending ...... W
James Owens, conductor.
Lasciate mi Morire .... Mont
Kalman Novak, conductor.
Fire, Fire My Heart ....
Barry Volkman, conductor.
Three Nocturnes ....
William Tooker, conductor.
As I Went A'Walking ...... Kubic
Wee Cooper O'Fife.
Eileen Dusio, conductor.
Roxiney Boody ....
David Buttolph, conductor.
Le Chant des Oiseaux .... Jans
James Alferis, conductor.

Munch Conducts at 8.15

At 8.15 Charles Munch will duct the Boston Symphony Or tra in Handel's "Water Music" Beethoven's violin concerto, Isaac Stern as soloist. After mission Leonard Bernstein will the baton for the second a "Porgy and Bess," with Leon Price and William Warfield soloists.

After the drawing of 42 prizes, including two new fidelity console record pl RCA Hi-Fi and Philco Phono there will be dancing on the south of the main house, with fessional pianists, members o faculty, at two pianos.

Adler To Sketch People Attending Benefit Tomorrow

A feature of Tanglewood on Parade tomorrow will be sketches by Wolf Adler, clarinetist in the student orchestra, who has done many caricatures of faculty, BSO musicians, staff and students. Many have appeared this year in The Eagle. They take a minute or two. The proceeds will be added to the grand total of the benefit.

Born in Romania, Mr. Adler started playing the violin on an instrument made at the factory of the family of Joseph Szigheti. He played the flute from the age of 11 to 15, and then started the clarinet. He studied music and art in Bucharest and graduated in 1944 from the Budapest Academy. Deported to Yugoslavia with his family during the war, he later studied at the Brussels (Belgium) Conservatory.

After going to Dublin to perform on Radio-Eire, the radio symphony orchestra of Ireland, he returned to Paris, and then went to Israel and later to study conducting in Sienna, Italy. He now lives in Toronto, Canada, where he will present a chamber music recital following the Tanglewood season.

He paints in oils, especially portraits, and fluently speaks seven languages. He has painted George Enesco and Pablo Casals.

Bsn Herald 8/12

Opera Has U. S. Premiere, Pleases Tanglewod Audience

By RUDOLPH ELIE, JR.

TANGLEWOOD, Aug. 11—"Richard the Lion Hearted," a long-silent opera by the 18th century French court composer Andre Gretry, was given its American premiere last night by Boris Goldovsky's opera department and displayed, in one of this group's most ingenious and attractive productions, a naive freshness equalled only by its overall lack of substance.

Given in a straightforward English text, translated without conceit by Sarah Caldwell who staged it and Boris Goldovsky who conducted it, the opera, more properly described as a musical comedy, deals with the single episode of the discovery and delivery of Richard from his Austrian prison by Blondel the troubador. Although two romances and a 50th anniversary wedding ceremony are also more or less involved, "Richard" clearly ranks with the least complicated full-length operas in existence.

SPECIAL CHARM

Moreover, for its length, it has much less music than is co tained, say, in one scene of "Ta hauser." That clarity, simplic and succinctness are qualities be desired in an opera is tr enough, and they make for a s cial charm in this rare piece, it must remain merely one those grateful one-time expe ences this boundlessly resource and infectious company produc so inimitably.

The music, what there is of consists of songs rather than veloped arias, the principal son a ballad with which Blondel esta lishes contact with Richard se ing as a sort of rudimentary le motive. These songs, displayi a courtly elegance—within a s prisingly small framework of tervals, suggest the style of troubadors of Richard's own riod. Some of them, as for stance "Wine Drives All Ca Away," develop into rollicki choruses, and there are occasion duets and ensembles.

The opera, however, only tak on a real musical and dramat urgency in the second act, in whi Richard is found by Blondel. T chorus of prison guards in t scene is far and away the fin moment in the whole piece though the finale almost equals it. The rest, delicious although it is, is soon forgotten, leaving the impression that Gretry's orchestral and vocal force, always in evidence in a strange mingling of the sounds of Mozart and Rossini, rises and falls on the strength of his librettist.

LARGE CAST

While the cast is very large, the opera is essentially a one-man show with Blondel carrying the burden. John McCollum, a tenor of Sir Hugh, sang splendidly. In their miniature roles Robert Rue, Ann English, Richard Cassilly, Theresa Green and McHenry Boatwright were entirely competent.

FINE ENUNCIATION

The whole cast deserves special compliments for the clarity of the enunciation, hardly a word being lost either in the lyrics or the extensive dialogue. The sets and special effects by John Blankenchip were particularly outstanding, while Leo Van Witsen's costumes were gay and amusing and entirely in the vein. It may be added that Mr. Goldovsky's student orchestra in the pit was of the liveliest character as, indeed, was the entire evening.

Had Gretry's opera a little more force and a lot more music, it would well deserve a more extensive outing. To have the opportunity to see it and savor it at this time, however, was a very choice occasion as was more than evident from the prolonged applause of the capacity audience. The opera was repeated tonight with virtually the same cast.

Cir. (D 38,502)
This Clipping From
WATERBURY, CONN.
AMERICAN
AUG 13 1953

Tanglewood Benefit Set

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 13—Tanglewood on Parade, the annual program for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, will get under way here tonight with a fanfare at 5:45 p. m. and a welcome by Boris Goldovsky. Beginning at 6 p. m. the audience will have an opportunity to see the music center in operation with short symphonic works to be presented in the Music Shed by the orchestra, world premieres of an opera and cantata in the theater-concert hall, and chamber music hall simultaneously.

Those going to the concert are invited to bring their picnic supper and enjoy the lawns at Tanglewood. At 7:15 p. m. the chorus will sing on the porch of the main house and at 8:15 the Boston Symphony will present a program with Isaac Stern as violin soloist. Charles Munch will conduct the first part of the program and Leonard Bernstein the second, which will be from "Porgy and Bess."

Leontyne Price, soprano, now singing "Bess" on Broadway, will be the soloist, along with William Warfield, baritone, "Porgy" of the European production.

There will be waltzing on the lawn by the main house after the concert.

---

450 Attend Concert at Seranak For ~~Stockbridge~~ Eagle Bowl 8/12 Benefit

An audience of 450 members of the Stockbridge Bowl Association and their friends attended an informal concert yesterday afternoon on the lawn of Seranak, the Lenox estate of Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky. The artists were summer and permanent members of the community. The audience was largely made up of new members of the organization to preserve the beauty of Lake Mahkeenac, who joined for the designed occasion.

Appeals for Support

Nathan Horwitt, the president, welcoming the guests, spoke of the importance of keeping the lake beautiful. The job can be done, he said, only by a strong membership. He hoped that the audience would continue to be members for the benefit of music generally.

Mrs. Koussevitzky, welcoming the audience to Seranak, quoted her late husband, who considered it his home and described it as "the most beautiful point of view." The point of view, she said, stretches beyond the present, to the future. It is progress, and the beauty of progress is to remain true to the historic trusts and cultural evolution, she said.

She told how Nathaniel Hawthorne had predicted that his little red cottage would be consumed by fire and that Tanglewood would live again, but be occupied by a different family. Today, she said, it is a place of pilgrimage and a mecca for musicians. It lives again through the art of music and American youth. She said that when Miss Kate Buckingham cleared the sheep pasture of Bald Head Farm to build a spacious New England house the neighbors feared that she would erect a Buckingham palace.

Musician, Visionary, Builder

"Next it became the home of a musician, visionary and builder, Serge Koussevitzky, who worked here to bring to life his ideas and music school. Here many of his plans and visions took shape, through labor, thought and perception of the future. He would return from travels abroad and say, 'This is my home.' It is still his home, surrounded by the living beauty of the lake and the hills and near-by Tanglewood."

Emily Dickinson, Mrs. Koussevitzky concluded, in one of her poems, wrote, "Beauty and truth. The two are one. We would like to think that by trying to preserve nature's beauty we are following the path of truth."

The program, unannounced, included the duo-piano performance of Mozart's D-major sonata and Aaron Copland's "Human Dance," by Leonard Bernstein and Lukas Foss, with pages turned by their wives; songs by Mac Morgan and Richard Dyer-Bennet, year-round Stockbridge residents; and solos by Miss Doriot Anthony, principal flautist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Boris Goldovsky was master of ceremonies.

Cir. (D 74,847) (S 117,225)
This Clipping From
HARTFORD, CONN.
COURANT
AUG 13 1953

Tanglewood Goes On Parade Again At Lenox Today

TANGLEWOOD, L... Mass

Berk.

VACATIONTIME IN THE BERKSHIRES

8/1

THE
TANGLEWOOD
STORY

Concerts in the Shed

Friday and Saturday Evenings at 8:30
Sunday Afternoons at 2:30

SERIES C

Friday Evening, August 14—CHARLES MUNCH
BRAHMS .... Requiem
(with Chorus and Lois Marshall, ...

Saturday Evening, August 15—LEONARD BERNSTEIN
SIBELIUS .... Symphony No. 4, in A minor
CHAVEZ .... Sinfonia India
BRAHMS .... Symphony No. 2, in D major

Sunday Afternoon, August 16—CHARLES MUNCH
SCHUBERT ...... Symphony in B minor ("Unfinished")
CHABRIER .... Bourrée Fantasque
WAGNER . Prelude and Love-Death, "Tristan und Isolde"
WAGNER .... A Siegfried Idyll
WAGNER .... "Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg," Excerpts from Act III

RAVEL .... Piano Concerto for the Left Hand
(Soloist: SEYMOUR LIPKIN)
RAVEL .... "La Valse"

[281]

TIGHT BINDING

HONORED BY BSO: Hippolyte Droeghmans, left, cellist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra since 1927, and Raymond Allard, right, bassoonist with the BSO since 1922, hold gold watches presented to them yesterday by Music Director Charles Munch, center, on the occasion of their retirement at the close of the 1953 Berkshire Festival this week end.

Two Musicians End 56 Years Of Service

TANGLEWOOD—Two members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who will retire Sunday following a total of 56 years of service yesterday noon at Tanglewood, were honored at a luncheon by their colleagues. Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra, presented gold watches to Raymond Allard, principal bassoonist, with the orchestra since 1922, and Hippolyte Droeghmans, cellist, a member since 1927.

Pasquale Cardillo of North Adams, clarinetist, chairman of the orchestral committee, presided. Speakers were Harry Ellis Dickson, violinist, who conducts the Pops and Esplanade concerts; Dr. Lewis Perry of Boston, representing the orchestra trustees; and Thomas D. Perry Jr., assistant manager.

Mr. Allard was born in Sin-le-Noble, France in 1888 and learned to play the saxophone as a child After service in World War I he attended the Paris Conservatory, from which he graduated with a first prize. He was engaged for the Boston orchestra by its conductor at the time, Pierre Monteux. He lives in Newton Center with his two sons, Rene and Georges.

Mr. Droeghmans was born in Liege, Belgium. He won first prize at the Royal Conservatory and later at the Paris Conservatory. He has been soloist at the Concerts Colonne, Paris; the Grand Cercle of Aix-les-Bains and the opera at Nice. He studied cello from the age of eight, at first with his mother. He and Mrs. Droeghmans live in Brookline.

Two World Premieres Slated For Tanglewood Parade

Two world premieres will be presented by the Berkshire Music Center opera department at Tanglewood on Parade tomorrow night at 6. At the same time, a symphony concert and a chamber music concert, which will include works by student composers, will be presented in other halls to demonstrate the activities of the school. The simultaneous performances will follow a greeting in the center of the Tanglewood grounds by Boris Goldovsky, opera department head. At 7.15, during the hour allowed for picnicking on the lawn, a choral concert will be offered on the steps of the main house.

The Meyerowitz and Sapp operas are world premieres. "Bad Boys in School" is from a play by Johann Nestroy, with libretto and music by Jan Meyerowitz, composer-conductor who was a coach in the Berkshire Music Center's opera department in 1948, 1949 and 1951. It will be performed by the entire associate division of the opera department, supervised by [illegible] and Laura Zirner and [illegible] conducted by Boris G[illegible]

The composer of "A [illegible] Lost" was a comp[illegible] under Aaron Copland [illegible] now is assistant pr[illegible] ing head of the [illegible] at Harvard College.

The program follows:

In the Theatre

Cantata with text by W[illegible] E[illegible]

Opera—Bad Boys in School [illegible]

Ja[illegible] Me[illegible]

In the Music Shed

Lieutenant Kije .... [illegible]

Harold Blumenfeld, conductor

Concerto for Violoncello in B m[illegible]

Uziahu Wiesel, soloist; Ernö Daniel, conductor

Prelude to The Afternoon of a Faun ... Deb

Herbert Blomstedt, conductor

Alborada del Gracioso .... R

Robert Mandell, conductor

In the Chamber Music Hall

Three Children's Pieces and One Grown-up Piece .... Jack U

Played by the composer.

Piano Pieces .... Tom Jon

Played by the composer.

Liebeslieder Waltzes .... Br

Margo Willauer, soprano; Betty Lou Allen, mezzo soprano; John McCollum, tenor; Mac Morgan, baritone.

Sonata for Trumpet and Piano .. Hinde

Paul Willwerth, trumpet; Betsy Meyer, piano

Quintet in F minor for Piano and Strings .... F

Nancy Heaton and Maxime Koins[illegible] lins; Nancy Pease, viola; Cam[illegible] cello; Gilbert Kalish, piano

On the Porch

Lark .... Co

McHenry Boatwright, baritone; Lorna Cooke DeVaron, conductor

As Vesta Was Descending ...... W

James Owens, conductor

Lasciate mi Morire .... Mont

Kalman Novak, conductor

Fire, Fire My Heart .... M

Barry Volkman, conductor

Three Nocturnes C

William Tooker, conductor

As I Went A'Walking .... K

Wee Cooper O'Fife

Eileen Dusto, conductor

Roxiney Boody .... S

David Buttolph, conductor

Le Chant des Oiseaux .... Jan

Adler To Sketch People Attending Benefit Tomorrow

A feature of Tanglewood on Parade tomorrow will be sketches by Wolf Adler, clarinetist in the student orchestra, who has done many caricatures of faculty, BSO musicians, staff and students. Many have appeared this year in The Eagle. They take a minute or two. The proceeds will be added to the grand total of the benefit.

Born in Romania, Mr. Adler started playing the violin on an instrument made at the factory of the family of Joseph Szigheti. He played the flu to 15, and the He studied charest and the Budapes to Yugoslavi ing the war, Brussels (Be

After goi form on Ra phony orch turned to F Israel and ing in Sien in Toronto, present a c lowing the

He paint traits, and languages. Enesco an

VACATIONTIME IN THE BERKSHIRES

business, George Brooks at Tick-Tock has accepted a number of men's watches in trade on new purchases. George puts these perfectly good timepieces in a drawer and then during a slack period he takes them out, completely overhauls them, polishes the case, cleans the face and attaches a new band. Each watch, almost as good as new, carries a year guarantee. He has them for sale at a fraction of what they cost new. And they're perfect timekeepers.

But hardly anyone ever says, "Do you have a good-like-new second-hand watch?" If they did, George wouldn't have so many for sale at such bargain prices!

Whitestone PHOTO
MAIN STREET
LENOX, MASS.
Telephone 584

Bsn Herald 8/12

Opera Has U. S. Premiere, Pleases Tanglewod Audience

By RUDOLPH ELIE, JR.

TANGLEWOOD, Aug. 11—"Richard the Lion Hearted," a long-silent opera by the 18th century French court composer Andre Gretry, was given its American premiere last night by Boris Goldovsky's opera department and displayed, in one of this group's most ingenious and attractive productions, a naive freshness equalled only by its overall lack of substance.

Given in a straightforward English text, translated without conceit by Sarah Caldwell who staged it and Boris Goldovsky who conducted it, the opera, more properly described as a musical comedy, deals with the single episode of the discovery and delivery of Richard from his Austrian prison by Blondel the troubador. Although two romances and a 50th anniversary wedding ceremony are also more or less involved, "Richard" clearly ranks with the least complicated full-length operas in existence.

SPECIAL CHARM

Moreover, for its length, it has much less music than is contained, say, in one scene of "Tannhauser." That clarity, simplicity and succinctness are qualities to be desired in an opera is true enough, and they make for a special charm in this rare piece, but it must remain merely one of those grateful one-time experiences this boundlessly resourceful and infectious company produces so inimitably.

The music, what there is of it, consists of songs rather than developed arias, the principal song, a ballad with which Blondel establishes contact with Richard serving as a sort of rudimentary leitmotive. These songs, displaying a courtly elegance—within a surprisingly small framework of intervals, suggest the style of the troubadors of Richard's, own period. Some of them, as for instance "Wine Drives All Car Away," develop into rollicking choruses, and there are occasional duets and ensembles.

The opera, however, only take on a real musical and dramatic urgency in the second act, in whi Richard is found by Blondel. chorus of prison guards in scene is far and away the fine moment in the whole piece though the finale almost equals it. The rest, delicious although it is, is soon forgotten, leaving the impression that Gretry's orchestral and vocal force, always in evidence in a strange mingling of the sounds of Mozart and Rossini, rises and falls on the strength of his librettist.

LARGE CAST

While the cast is very large, the opera is essentially a one-man show with Blondel carrying the burden. John McCollum, a tenor with a fine and a true voice combined with an admirable sense of stagemanship, proved to be a very happy choice in the role.

He managed to suggest his fake blindness as adroitly as his fake fiddling and lent the opera a personality it might otherwise not have had. The other principals, limited to one or two brief songs, were uniformly excellent.

Showing off to best advantage, perhaps, was Christine Cardillo, whose soprano voice was firm and clear and of lovely quality. Rosalind Elias gave the role of Blondel's guide a most pleasant vocal and visual air while Lee Cass, who often over-parodied the figure of Sir Hugh, sang splendidly. In their miniature roles Robert Rue, Ann English, Richard Cassilly, Theresa Green and McHenry Boatwright were entirely competent.

FINE ENUNCIATION

The whole cast deserves special compliments for the clarity of the enunciation, hardly a word being lost either in the lyrics or the extensive dialogue. The sets and special effects by John Blankenchip were particularly outstanding, while Leo Van Witsen's costumes were gay and amusing and entirely in the vein. It may be added that Mr. Goldovsky's student orchestra in the pit was of the liveliest character as, indeed, was the entire evening.

Had Gretry's opera a little more force and a lot more music, it would well deserve a more extensive outing. To have the opportunity to see it and savor it at this time, however, was a very choice occasion as was more than evident from the prolonged applause of the capacity audience. The opera was repeated tonight with virtually the same cast.

---

ant, hall, simul Thos invited per and wood. A sing on house and phony will Isaac Ste Charles M first part of nard Bernst will be from which Bess."

Leontyne P soprano, now singing "Bess" on Broadway, will be the soloist, along with William Warfield, baritone, "Porgy" of the European production.

There will be waltzing on the lawn by the main house after the concert.

---

450 Attend Concert at Seranak For ~~Stockbridge~~ Bowl Benefit

Eagle 8/12

An audience of 450 members of the Stockbridge Bowl Association and their friends attended an informal concert yesterday afternoon on the lawn of Seranak, the Lenox estate of Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky. The artists were summer and permanent members of the community. The audience was largely made up of new members of the organization to preserve the beauty of Lake Mahkeenac, who joined for the designed occasion.

Appeals for Support

Nathan Horwitt, the president, welcoming the guests, spoke of the importance of keeping the lake autiful. The job can be done, said, only by a strong member- He hoped that the audience d continue to be members for enefit of music generally.

Koussevitzky, welcoming dience to Seranak, quoted husband, who considered ome and described it as t beautiful point of view." t of view, she said, beyond the present, to It is progress, and the progress is to remain historic trusts and cul- evolution, she said.

She told how Nathaniel Hawthorne had predicted that his little red cottage would be consumed by fire and that Tanglewood would live again, but be occupied by a different family. Today, she said, it is a place of pilgrimage and a mecca for musicians. It lives again through the art of music and American youth. She said that when Miss Kate Buckingham cleared the sheep pasture of Bald Head Farm to build a spacious New England house the neighbors feared that she would erect a Buckingham palace.

Musician, Visionary, Builder

"Next it became the home of a musician, visionary and builder, Serge Koussevitzky, who worked here to bring to life his ideas and music school. Here many of his plans and visions took shape, through labor, thought and perception of the future. He would return from travels abroad and say, 'This is my home.' It is still his home, surrounded by the living beauty of the lake and the hills and near-by Tanglewood."

Emily Dickinson, Mrs. Koussevitzky concluded, in one of her poems, wrote, "Beauty and truth. The two are one. We would like to think that by trying to preserve nature's beauty we are following the path of truth."

The program, unannounced, included the duo-piano performance of Mozart's D-major sonata and Aaron Copland's "Human Dance," by Leonard Bernstein and Lukas Foss, with pages turned by their wives; songs by Mac Morgan and Richard Dyer-Bennet, year-round Stockbridge residents; and solos by Miss Doriot Anthony, principal flautist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Boris Goldovsky was master of ceremonies.

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, Mass. Aug. 12 (Special) — Tanglewood will be on parade Thursday. The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center includes afternoon festivities by every department of the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, a lawn supper and an evening concert by the orchestra followed by dancing on the lawn.

Isaac Stern, celebrated [illegible] ist, will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D major with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Charles Munch will conduct.

The second half of the [illegible] program, to be conducted [illegible] Leonard Bernstein head of the Berkshire Music Center's conducting classes, will offer as soloists baritone William Warfield and his wife, soprano Leontyne Price. The occasion will be the [illegible] public appearance of the [illegible] since their success last [illegible] in Vienna, Berlin, London and Paris in the title roles of the George Gershwin opera "Porgy and Bess." They will sing scenes 1 and 2 from Act II of that work.

"Tanglewood on Parade" is [illegible] to aid the Berkshire Music Center, now in its eleventh season. Ticket prices range from $5 to $2.50.

Cir. (D 78,153)

This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION
AUG 12 1953

LOIS MARSHALL IN DEBUT FRIDAY AT TANGLEWOOD

Will Appear With William Warfield in Brahms 'Requiem'

Lenox, Aug. 11—Lois Marshall, who will make her Tanglewood debut, singing with baritone William Warfield in the Brahms "Requiem" at the Berkshire Festival concert Friday night, with Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has had an exceptionally busy summer. She has sung with the Montreal Symphony, at Grant Park, Chicago, Illinois State Normal School, the Stratford (Ont.) Festival, with Thor Johnson at the Ephraim (Wis.) Festival. After her Tanglewood date, she will appear at Buck Hill Falls, Pa., with duo-pianists Whittemore and Lowe and with the Toronto Symphony Orchestra.

The young Canadian soprano is a Naumburg award winner, and made her Town Hall recital debut last winter. In the spring she performed Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" with Toscanini and the NBC Symphony. Critics and concert managers hail her as the most talked-of discovery of the past musical season. A native of Toronto, she was stricken with polio at the age of two, which has left her with a slight limp. She schooled at the Toronto Conservatory of Music under Weldon Kilburn, who still travels with her as pianist. She won the Eaton award in Canada in 1950, and has since sung with symphonies in Toronto, Winnipeg, Vancouver, Victoria, Ottawa, and Kitchner.

Seymour Lipkin, soloist at the concluding Berkshire Festival concert, with Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Ravel's Concerto for the Left Hand, which has not been previously presented at Tanglewood, is 25 and teaches at the Berkshire Music Center. He also teaches at Indian Hill Workshop in Stockbridge, where he makes his home. A native of Detroit, he started piano instruction at the age of three, gave his first concert at four, and entered Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia at 11. While in his teens, he toured as a pianist with Jascha Heifetz, and he has been a pupil of Rudolph Serkin for six years. At 21 he won the Rachmaninoff Fund award and commenced his association with the Berkshire Music Center as a conducting student under the late Serge Koussevitzky, later taking his present post on the faculty. Before coming here he was an apprentice conductor and pianist with the Cleveland Symphony. He has appeared with 30 American symphony orchestras. Last summer he appeared for the first time on a festival program in a Haydn concerto, under Charles Munch.

Leonard Rosenman, New York City and Louis Mennini, Rochester, N. Y., the two young American composers on commission by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, to compose one-act operas under a grant by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation for presentation by Boris Goldovsky's department at Tanglewood next summer, are well advanced. On their projects. Mr. Rosenman, whose subject is a biblical allegory set in contemporary scene, expects to have the prolog ready for staging by opera department students this week. Mr. Mennini had cleared with Eugene O'Neill, Pulitzer prize playwright, to adapt to opera from the dramatist's, early one-act drama "The Rope," part of his "The Moon of the Carribees" series.

Cir. (D 79,206)

This Clipping From
DAYTON, OHIO
JOURNAL HERALD
AUG 12 1953

This Clipping From
POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
NEW YORKER
AUG 12 1953

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

Just about now 25 students and five faculty members of St. John's college in Annapolis, Md., are spending four days at Stratford-on-Avon in England.

This is the next-to-the-last of their 14 stops at places of special literary interest during a seven-week "Great Books Seminar" in Europe.

They are tired, travel-worn, but eager to read "King Lear" and "Hamlet" and perhaps see them enacted while on the spot where their author, Shakespeare, was born.

During this much-discussed "Great Books Seminar" these student-travelers have been in Rome, Florence, Geneva, Augsburg, Frankfurt, Paris, Canterbury and now Stratford. Next stop London, and then home!

A young New York friend of mine who is along on this first study-tour writes me to say it has exceeded all expectations for stimulating knowledge, and that he finds the $1,000 trip highly profitable.

Dr. Richard Weigle, president of St. John's, third oldest college in the U. S., conceived this plan to help students become acquainted with present as well as traditional affairs in modern Europe.

At each of the stops they read some of the great books on Western civilization in the places associated with their subjects and their authors.

Lively discussions among faculty and students follow, enriching their minds with politics, literature, science, philosophy and ethics.

This system of learn-while-you-travel not only puts zest into the flowing currents of modern life, but accumulates college credits as well for the students from St. John's.

Also they meet other students from renowned European universities and, in a few days, acquire knowledge that might take months to gain in the classroom.

It is the opinion of Dr. Weigle that facts alone are not enough to constitute a good education. One may stuff the mind with information, he believes, but to further understanding, one must know how to read a book in such a way as to distinguish knowledge from opinion, and to use logic in analyzing problems under consideration.

MUSIC AND PANTS

Mary Olberg, pretty blonde Fifth avenue stylist, spent last weekend at Tanglewood, the scene of the Berkshire Music Festival.

Appearing at a concert wearing fashionable white pants, she (along with all other female slacks, trousers and pedal-pusher wearers) was given a yellow denim wrap-around skirt by the ticket-takers at the gate, with the polite suggestion that in the minds of the Berkshire Festival association, good music and pants-wearing females do not harmonize.

Mary wrapped her skirt about her, her longish pants still showing a bit, but the suggestion was an either-or. Wear a skirt—or no admission to the festival.

Cir. (D 13,075)

This Clipping From
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
AUG 13 1953

Final Tanglewood Series Opens Tomorrow Evening

The final series of major concerts of the 1953 Berkshire Symphonic festival season will open tomorrow evening at Tanglewood, Lenox, where the Boston Symphony orchestra, the Berkshire festival chorus and soloists will present Brahms' "Requiem."

See New Record

Festival officials believe attendance records may be broken in this final series, which continues Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon, and they see a chance that the total attendance at Tanglewood this season may approach 150,000 before the last note is sounded on Sunday.

The three concerts in Series A attracted 30,700 music lovers, and there were 28,100 at the three concerts in Series B. Some 10,000 are expected tonight for the annual Tanglewood on Parade program, and it has been estimated that musical offerings of the Berkshire Music center students will have attracted some 40,000 before the school closes Sunday evening. If those totals are realized and the final series of major music shed concerts brings an attendance above the 31,000 mark, as seems likely, given good weather, then the season's total will be in the 140,000 range.

Singers Tomorrow

Lois Marshall and William Warfield will be the soloists with the Boston orchestra and the festival chorus, composed of Music center students, under the direction of Charles Munch, Boston Symphony music director, in the performance of the Brahms work tomorrow evening at 8:30.

Miss Marshall, who made her Town hall recital debut in New York last winter, has sung this summer with the Montreal symphony and at the Stratford (Ont.) and Ephraim (Wisc.) festivals. A Naumberg award winner, she sang Beethoven's "Missa Solemnic" with Toscanini and the NBC orchestra in the spring. Mr. Warfield, a concert baritone of wide experience, was in the European company that revived "Porgy and Bess" last year and will sing in the presentation of two scenes from that Gershwin work at Tanglewood tonight on the Parade program.

On Saturday evening, with Leonard Bernstein conducting, the Boston orchestra will play Sibelius' Fourth Symphony, in A minor, Chavez' "Sinfonia India" and Brahms' Second symphony, in D major.

Sunday Program

The Sunday afternoon wind-up program at 2.30 with Dr. Munch will conduct, will include Schubert's "Unfinished" symphony, in B minor; Chabrier's "Bourree Fantasque," the Prelude and Love-Death music from "Tristan und Isolde" and excerpts from Act 3 of "Die Meistersingers," both Wagner's; Ravel's Piano concerto for the left hand, with Seymour Lipkin as soloist, and Ravel's "LaValse." The program through the Wagnerian works, will be broadcast on a coast-to-coast hook-up.

The final offerings by Music center students, open to Friends of the Music Center, will be an orchestra concert in the shed Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock and a chamber music concert in the theater concert hall Sunday morning at 10. A rehearsal of the Boston orchestra with Dr. Munch conducting at 10 o'clock Saturday morning in the shed will be open to the public, with the proceeds going to the orchestra's pension fund.

Cir. (D 19,921)

This Clipping From
NORWICH, CONN.
BULLETIN
AUG 13 1953

Miss Alma Boutilier, staying in Lenox, Mass., over last weekend, attended the concerts at the Berkshire Music festival in Tanglewood and heard the Resurrection symphony by Mahler conducted by Leonard Bernstein for the memorial concert honoring the late great conductor, Serge Koussevitzky.

Cir. (D 56,590) (S 47,289)

This Clipping From
NEW BEDFORD, MASS.
STANDARD-TIMES
AUG 13 1953

Goldovsky Revives Old Opera, Capably Sung by Young Cast

By DONALD H. WHITE
Standard-Times Special Writer

LENOX, Aug. 13—Boris Goldovsky, one of the most unusual operatic personalities in America, has done it again. An opera nobody except musical experts ever has known, an opera not performed in this country since 1800—Andre Gretry's "Richard, the Lion-Hearted" was chosen as this season's stage vehicle for the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood.

In past seasons the Goldovsky forces have offered eminently successful revivals of such masterworks as Mozart's "Titus," "La Finta Giardiniera" and "Idomeneo," Gluck's "Iphigenia in Tauris," Britten's "Albert Herring" and "Peter Grimes" and Rossini's "Turk in Italy." From the tragic genius of Mozart's "Titus," performed last Summer at Tanglewood, the genial director has now turned to this little-known though highly rewarding work of the 18th Century comic opera master, Gretry.

In his opening-night remarks, Goldovsky again gave tribute to the crusading musical spirit of Serge Koussevitsky, late conductor of the Boston Symphony, whose artistic dream included the experimental Theater-Concert Hall as part of the Tanglewood installations.

"It is always a great pleasure to bring to life something known hitherto only in history books," Goldovsky said, referring to the genre score and background of the Gretry work. The opera is a potpourri of many styles and approaches incorporating the leit motiv (descriptive motive recurring throughout the piece) so exploited later by Wagner.

Plot Is Outlined

The plot of "Richard, the Lion-Hearted" harks back to the famed story of the search for the captured English monarch made by his minstrel, Blondel. During Crusades in the Holy Land, the king was captured by the Saracens and later incarcerated in an Austrian prison. The device of the leit motiv is used extensively here to identify the song which Blondel repeatedly sings during his wanderings, hoping that some day his king will hear it and reply: A popular ballad of its day which even became involved in political matters during the French Revolution—"O Richard, O Mon Roi."

As is the custom at Tanglewood, the cast was made up of young, somewhat inexperienced singers, some of whom were receiving their first stage opportunities. Leading roles were assumed by such capable and dramatically agile singers as Lee Cass, remembered by local music lovers for his soloist's role in the Godreau "Messiah" last Christmas; John McCollum, a fine tenor who dominated the action continually in the role of the minstrel, Blondel, and Rosalind Elias, as his romantically-inclined guide, Antonio.

A feature of the performance was the exceptionally well-enunciated choral singing by a male octet, trained by Sarah Caldwell, Mr. Goldovsky's able assistant. Since the opera was translated into English, it was a distinct pleasure to be able to understand a great deal of the action through its crisp and tidy diction. Such is rarely the case of the usual translated work.

The settings were highly imaginative and made use of scenery by light projections, designed by John Blankenchip, a new name in the stage department of Tanglewood. His first act set featured a rather stylized castle rampart, fantastic pineapple-shaped trees and a projected fortress which might be labeled a la Maxfield Parish or Disney. However, the later projection of the gates of the castle, viewed through a transparent scrim curtain while soldiers fought a convincing battle in silhouette, was most impressive. This particular effect was by far the best projection work we have ever seen. Its greatest opportunity for success, however, is not in the comic opera repertoire but in Wagnerian works and late Verdi dramas.

The second act scenery showing the fortress-castle in closeup was ingenious and judging by the appreciative audience response, most charming of the evening. Here a small drawbridge was lowered in response to trumpet calls by members of the Austrian guard and the chain-mailed chorus entered a cleverly constructed miniature fort. One was reminded of a drill of tin-soldiers in combination with Klingsor's magic castle as seen in Wagner's "Parsifal." This was far more solid canvas real estate than usually is allotted to the characters of the opera stage.

Cir. (D 21,010)

This Clipping From
WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.
REPORTER-DISPATCH
AUG 13 1953

TO ATTEND FESTIVAL

Mr. and Mrs. Richard C. Kleinberger of 9 Columbus Avenue and their son, George Herman Kleinberger, leave today to attend the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. They will return home Sunday.

[282]

Ove

Stock Averages
Dow-Jones—Goodbody & Co. (1 PM)
30 Industrials .... 277.15 + .73
20 Railroads .... 106.12 + .39
15 Utilities .... 50.87 + .03
Sales 610,000

The Berkshire Evening Eagle

Second Section

Pittsfield, Massachusetts, Thursday, August 13,

Final Berkshire Festival Series Opens Tomorrow With Brahms

The final 1953 Berkshire Festival series will open tomorrow night in the Tanglewood Music Shed with the Brahms "Requiem." Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the composition for solo voices, chorus and orchestra, with Lois Marshall, soprano soloist and William Warfield as baritone soloist. The Berkshire Festival Chorus, of which Hugh Ross is conductor, will sing the choral numbers.

The work, written by Johannes Brahms when he was 33, was first performed as a complete work at the Cathedral in Bremen in April, 1868. The text was chosen by the composer from various parts of the Lutheran Bible. John Burk, the Boston orchestra's program annotator, writes of it:

"Here was another case of complete achievement of a medium, matched with that reflective, inward mood which showed Brahms' stiller pools to be his deepest: Some have tried to prove, by the date of its composition, that Brahms was moved by the death of his mother; others that Robert Schumann's death, which certainly profoundly affected him, was the motive cause. In any case, it is personal music, transcending ritual and sect, albeit so thorough-going a North German as Brahms could scarcely have composed religious music entirely free of Protestant implications. The century shows no great choral work so innocent of the sensational. The prevailing mood is gently elegiac, with a quiet but entirely convincing affirmation of faith."

Ross Trains Chorus

The Festival Chorus, which has sung the choral parts in Festival programs, is prepared by Hugh Ross, assisted by Mrs. Lorna Cooke deVaron. Mr. Ross, who has headed the Berkshire Music Center's department of choral conducting and choral music since the school opened in 1940, currently is professor of music at Sarah Lawrence College, Bronxville, N.Y. and conductor of the Schola Cantorum of New York.

Hugh Ross

Born in Langport, England, Mr. Ross attended New College, Oxford and the Royal Academy of Music, London, where he won first prize in organ, and of which he was made a Fellow in 1915. In 1921 he came to America as director of the Winnipeg Male Voice Choir. He was founder and from 1923 to 1927 conductor of the Winnipeg Symphony Orchestra. In the latter year he went to New York to head the Schola Cantorum. He founded the National Choral Union of Washington, D.C., and has guest-conducted the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, the Winnipeg Festival and Worcester Festivals.

Soprano a Canadian

Miss Marshall was born in Toronto, where she studied at the Royal Conservatory of Music under Weldon Kilburn, who is her accompanist. She has sung with the Toronto, Winnipeg, Vancouver, Victoria and Ottawa orchestras, and last May in Beethoven's Missa Solemnis with Arturo Toscanini. A Naumburg Award winner, she made her Town Hall debut in New York last summer. She won the Eaton Award in Canada in 1950. She has sung this summer at Grant Park, Chicago, State Normal School; the Stratgford, Ontario, Festival and with Thor Johnson at the Ephraim (Wis.) Festival. She plans to appear at Buck Hill Falls, Pa. on a program with duo-pianists Whittemore and Lowe and with the Toronto Symphony Orchestra.

Mr. Warfield will appear tonight with his wife, Leontyne Price, and the Boston Symphony Orchestra

Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD TODAY

Tanglewood on Parade.

PM
4.00—Opera scenes in the formal garden for holders of reserved seats and box tickets.
5.45—Greeting by Boris Goldovsky. Center of lawn.
6.00—Simultaneous demonstrations by Berkshire Music Center students. Music Shed, theatre and Chamber Music Hall.
7.15—Choral concert on the porch and opportunity to picnic on the lawn. (Beverages and limited amount of food obtainable at cafeteria.)
8.15—Concert by Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch and Leonard Bernstein conducting and Isaac Stern, Leontyne Price and William Warfield, soloists. Music Shed.
Drawing of 42 door prizes, including two new high fidelity console record players (RCA-Victor and Philco Phonorama). Music Shed.
Waltzing to two pianos played by faculty members. Lawn south of main house.

TOMORROW

PM
*3.00—Opera scenes. Theatre.
*4.30—Informal composers' forum. Chamber Music Hall.

*Open to Friends of Berkshire Music Center who give voluntary contributions to school's support.

Carlos Chavez, conductor of the Mexico City Symphony Orchestra and teacher of composition at Tanglewood, will conduct his own "Sinfonia Antigona" and Stravinsky's "Firebird" Suite at the final concert by the Berkshire Music Center's student orchestra Saturday afternoon at 3 in the Music Shed. Student conductors will be Harold Blumenfeld and Robert Mandell.

The program follows:

Overture to Semiramide .... Rossini
Mr. Blumenfeld, conductor.
Double Concerto for Two Violins .. Bach
Barbara Lieberman and Barbara Sorlien, soloists.
Mr. Mandell, conductor.
Symphony No. 4 (4th movement) . Mahler
Anne English, soprano soloist.
Sinfonia Antigona .... Chavez
Firebird Suite .... Stravinsky
Mr. Chavez, conductor.

In the audience at the closing concerts of the Berkshire Festival this week end will be Irving Brown, of Chappel Inc., music publishers, New York; Dr. Lewis Perry of

In Brief . . .

The addition of Council President Pat Callaghan to the at-large field insures a tight race among strong candidates, which should have the happy result of bringing out the voters if the mayoralty turns into no contest . . . Having Wolf Adler, whose caricatures of Tanglewood personalities in The Eagle have won wide and favorable comment, do drawings at tonight's "Tanglewood on Parade" program for a price was a smart idea . . . Equally smart and certainly appropriate is the City Council's request to the state for a traffic survey of lower South Street, which is justifiably being referred to as a speedway . . .

We sympathize with the Berkshire Red Cross, which is faced with heavy demands for blood despite a natural letdown among volunteers because of the Korean truce. It seems to be a good wind that blows nobody ill . . . What with cattle being rustled in West Stockbridge and a $10,000 bus rustled in Albany and put out to graze here, Berkshire seems to be running some sort of gamut . . .

A blind date is one when you expect to meet a vision—but who proves to be a sight.—Office Economist.

Cir. (D & S 93,000)
This Clipping From
SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH
DESERET NEWS
AUG 13 1953

MUSIC NEWS

Philadelphia Symphony

S. L. Music Followers In for Special Treat

By CONRAD B. HARRISON
Music Editor

With the Philadelphia Orchestra scheduled here next May and the New York Philharmonic-Symphony feeling out the area for a 1955 tour, Salt Lake City listeners may hear the world's three great orchestras in as many years.

Last May, the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the other member of the top three, was heard at the Tabernacle. The Boston also performed at Provo, where the Philadelphia is booked for a second concert in Utah next spring. The Philadelphia will be sponsored in Salt Lake City by the McCune School of Music and Art Branch of the Brigham Young University and in Provo by the B Y U.

Appearance of such orchestras are healthy and encouraging to the musical well-being of any community. Often this extends a good deal further than meets the ear. In addition to supplying great music for the populace, great symphonic organizations have an uplifting effect on local orchestral production and strengthen the desire for musical excellence.

Instrumental quality achieved by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, for instance, should have some effect on the tone of the Utah Symphony Orchestra in the future. Much of the Boston's sound must be credited to uniformly fine instruments. The players work on the theory that an inferior instrument will not produce top quality tone, no matter how well it is played.

Conductor Maurice Abravanel of the Utah ensemble has worked long and hard on tone quality, and has been remarkably successful. He knows there is still much room for improvement, however, and constantly encourages investment in better instruments where they are needed. His clinching argument was the Boston Symphony.

Perhaps the appearance of the Boston also had an effect on summer music study. No less than six Utahns are studying at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood, which is maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with its Birkshire Festival. One member of the Utah Symphony, Donald Basinger, Bountiful, bass, is in the group.

Glenn Williams, student, bassoon, Nephi, violin; Ed ...ren, Ogden; Warren ...5 E. Truman Ave ...ke City, cello, and ... Beauregard, Fillmore

---

10—The Berkshire Evening Eagle, Thursday, Aug. 13, 1953

County Box Holders Listed For Tanglewood on Parade

and Frederick W. Beinecke; Richmond, Mr. and Mrs. Shaun Kelly; North Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sprague; Otis, Mr. and Mrs. George Sokolsky; Mrs. George T. Sewall, South Lee.

A few entire boxes or seats in them are available at the Tanglewood box office.

News-Rep. 8/13

Of course, if you pick the right night or afternoon, and music's on your mind, you keep going driver.

Uni — LEE 8/12

THIRD IN SUPPER SERIES

Prelude and Love Death, Tristain and Isolde
A Siegfried Idyll.
Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg, Excepts. Wagner
Piano Concerto for the left hand .. Ravel
Soloist, Seymour Lipkin.
La Valse .... Ravel

NYT 8/13

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
Orchestra
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
CLOSING CONCERTS
FRI. EVE., Aug. 14, Soloists: LOIS MARSHALL, Soprano, WILLIAM WARFIELD, Baritone
SAT. EVE., Aug. 15, LEONARD BERNSTEIN, Conducting
SUN. AFT., Aug. 16, Soloist, SEYMOUR LIPKIN, Piano
Reserved seats from $2.50; Gen'l Adm. $2
Thurs., Aug. 13-'TANGLEWOOD on PARADE'
Many events include Boston Symphony Concert Conducted by CHARLES MUNCH and LEONARD BERNSTEIN; Soloists—ISAAC STERN, Violin; LEONTYNE PRICE, Soprano, appearing with WILLIAM WARFIELD, Baritone, in "Porgy and Bess," Act II, Scenes 1 & 2.
Reserved Seats, $4 and $3, Unreserved $2.50
Address Box Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

season to date!

[283]

Stock Averages
Dow-Jones—Goodbody & Co. (1 PM)
30 Industrials .... 277.15 + .73
20 Railroads .... 106.12 + .39
15 Utilities .... 50.87 + .03
Sales 610,000

Ove

The Berkshire Evening Eagle

Second Section

Pittsfield, Massachusetts, Thursday, August 13,

Final Berkshire Festival Series Opens Tomorrow With Brahms

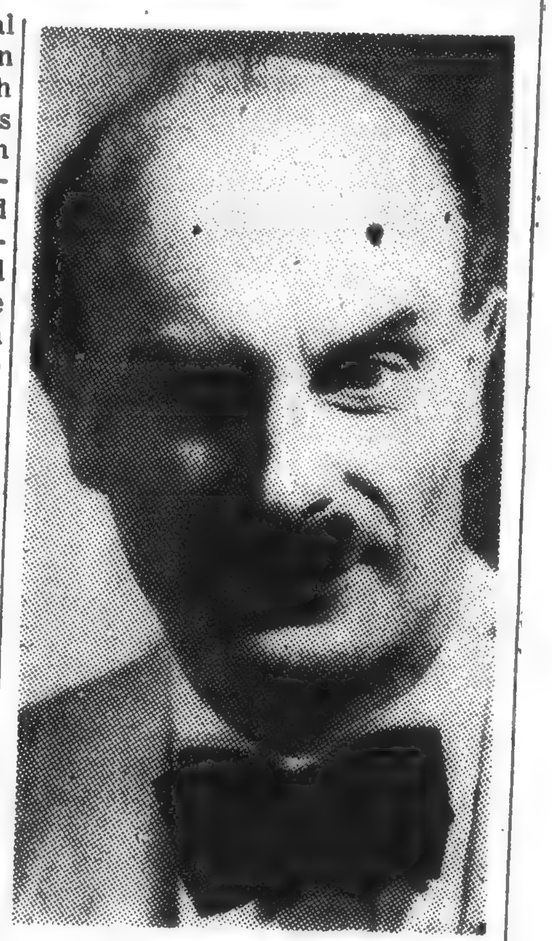
The final 1953 Berkshire Festival series will open tomorrow night in the Tanglewood Music Shed with the Brahms "Requiem." Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the composition for solo voices, chorus and orchestra, with Lois Marshall, soprano soloist and William Warfield as baritone soloist. The Berkshire Festival Chorus, of which Hugh Ross is conductor, will sing the choral numbers.

The work, written by Johannes Brahms when he was 33, was first performed as a complete work at the Cathedral in Bremen in April, 1868. The text was chosen by the composer from various parts of the Lutheran Bible. John Burk, the Boston orchestra's program annotator, writes of it:

"Here was another case of complete achievement of a medium, matched with that reflective, inward mood which showed Brahms' stiller pools to be his deepest. Some have tried to prove, by the date of its composition, that Brahms was moved by the death of his mother; others that Robert Schumann's death, which certainly profoundly affected him, was the motive cause. In any case, it is personal music, transcending ritual and sect, albeit so thorough-going a North German as Brahms could scarcely have composed religious music entirely free of Protestant implications. The century shows no great choral work so innocent of the sensational. The prevailing mood is gently elegiac, with a quiet but entirely convincing affirmation of faith."

Ross Trains Chorus

The Festival Chorus, which has sung the choral parts in Festival programs, is prepared by Hugh Ross, assisted by Mrs. Lorna Cooke deVaron. Mr. Ross, who has headed the Berkshire Music Center's department of choral conducting and choral music since the school opened in 1940, currently is professor of music at Sarah Lawrence College, Bronxville, N.Y. and conductor of the Schola Cantorum of New York.



Hugh Ross

Born in Langport, England, Mr. Ross attended New College, Oxford and the Royal Academy of Music, London, where he won first prize in organ, and of which he was made a Fellow in 1915. In 1921 he came to America as director of the Winnipeg Male Voice Choir. He was founder and from 1923 to 1927 conductor of the Winnipeg Symphony Orchestra. In the latter year he went to New York to head the Schola Cantorum. He founded the National Choral Union of Washington, D.C., and has guest-conducted the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, the Winnipeg Festival and Worcester Festivals.

Soprano a Canadian

Miss Marshall was born in Toronto, where she studied at the Royal Conservatory of Music under Weldon Kilburn, who is her accompanist. She has sung with the Toronto, Winnipeg, Vancouver, Victoria and Ottawa orchestras, and last May in Beethoven's Missa Solemnis with Arturo Toscanini. A Naumburg Award winner, she made her Town Hall debut in New York last summer. She won the Eaton Award in Canada in 1950. She has sung this summer at Grant Park, Chicago, State Normal School; the Stratgford, Ontario, Festival and with Thor Johnson at the Ephraim (Wis.) Festival. She plans to appear at Buck Hill Falls, Pa. on a program with duo-pianists Whittemore and Lowe and with the Toronto Symphony Orchestra.

Mr. Warfield will appear tonight with his wife, Leontyne Price, and the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Leonard Bernstein, at the Tanglewood on Parade concert.

Tickets for the three remaining Festival programs are on sale at the Tanglewood box office. Admission for listening from the lawn may be obtained two hours before the concerts.

Week-end Programs

The week-end programs follow:

TOMORROW NIGHT at 8.30

Requiem .... Brahms
With Festival Chorus and soloists.

SATURDAY NIGHT
Leonard Bernstein, guest conductor.

Symphony No. 4, in A minor .... Sibelius
Sinfonia India .... Chavez
Symphony No. 2, in D major .... Brahms

SUNDAY AFTERNOON AT 2.30
Charles Munch, conducting.

Symphony in B minor (unfinished), Schubert
Bourree Fantasque .... Chabrier
Prelude and Love Death, Tristain and Isolde.
A Siegfried Idyll.
Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg, Excepts, Wagner
Piano Concerto for the left hand .. Ravel
Soloist, Seymour Lipkin.
La Valse .... Ravel

Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD
TODAY
Tanglewood on Parade.

PM
4.00—Opera scenes in the formal garden for holders of reserved seats and box tickets.
5.45—Greeting by Boris Goldovsky. Center of lawn.
6.00—Simultaneous demonstrations by Berkshire Music Center students. Music Shed, theatre and Chamber Music Hall.
7.15—Choral concert on the porch and opportunity to picnic on the lawn. (Beverages and limited amount of food obtainable at cafeteria.)
8.15—Concert by Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch and Leonard Bernstein conducting and Isaac Stern, Leontyne Price and William Warfield, soloists. Music Shed.

Drawing of 42 door prizes, including two new high fidelity console record players (RCA-Victor and Philco Phonorama). Music Shed.

Waltzing to two pianos played by faculty members. Lawn south of main house.

TOMORROW

PM
*3.00—Opera scenes. Theatre.
*4.30—Informal composers' forum, Chamber Music Hall.

*Open to Friends of Berkshire Music Center who give voluntary contributions to school's support.

Carlos Chavez, conductor of the Mexico City Symphony Orchestra and teacher of composition at Tanglewood, will conduct his own "Sinfonia Antigona" and Stravinsky's "Firebird" Suite at the final concert by the Berkshire Music Center's student orchestra Saturday afternoon at 3 in the Music Shed. Student conductors will be Harold Blumenfeld and Robert Mandell.

The program follows:

Overture to Semiramide .... Rossini
Mr. Blumenfeld, conductor.
Double Concerto for Two Violins .. Bach
Barbara Lieberman and Barbara Sorlien, soloists.
Mr. Mandell, conductor.
Symphony No. 4 (4th movement) . Mahler
Anne English, soprano soloist.
Sinfonia Antigona .... Chavez
Firebird Suite .... Stravinsky
Mr. Chavez, conductor.

In the audience at the closing concerts of the Berkshire Festival this week end will be Irving Brown, of Chappel Inc., music publishers, New York; Dr. Lewis Perry of Boston and West Chop, BSO trustee and chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center; Anna Russell, concert comedienne, who will appear in two matinee performances at the Berkshire Playhouse today and tomorrow; and her manager, Eastman Bloomer of New York; Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Howatson of the Montreal Symphony Orchestra; Larney Goodkind, personal manager of Leontyne Price and William Warfield, soloists at Tanglewood on Parade; and Miss Nelly Walter of Columbia Artists management.

Visiting music editors this week end include Howard Taubman, New York Times; Jay S. Harrison, New York Herald Tribune; Gene Cook, Life magazine; Julian Seaman, Toledo (Ohio) Blade; and Lester Velie of the Reader's Digest.

Cir. (D & S 93,000)
This Clipping From
SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH
DESERET NEWS
AUG 13 1953

MUSIC NEWS

Philadelphia Symphony

S. L. Music Followers In for Special Treat

By CONRAD B. HARRISON
Music Editor

With the Philadelphia Orchestra scheduled here next May and the New York Philharmonic-Symphony feeling the area for a 1955 tour, Lake City listeners may the world's three great orchestras in as many years.

Last May, the Boston Symphony Orchestra, member of the top was heard at the Tabernacle. The Boston also performed at Provo, where the Philadelphia is booked for a second concert in Utah next spring. The Philadelphia will be sponsored in Salt Lake City by the McCune School of Music and Art Branch of the Brigham Young University and in Provo by the B Y U.

Appearance of such orchestras are healthy and encouraging to the musical well-being of any community. Often this extends a good deal further than meets the ear. In addition to supplying great music for the populace, great symphonic organizations have an uplifting effect on local orchestral production and strengthen the desire for musical excellence.

Instrumental quality achieved by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, for instance, should have some effect on the tone of the Utah Symphony Orchestra in the future. Much of the Boston's sound must be credited to uniformly fine instruments. The players work on the theory that an inferior instrument will not produce top quality tone, no matter how well it is played.

Conductor Maurice Abravanel of the Utah ensemble has worked long and hard on tone quality, and has been remarkably successful. He knows there is still much room for improvement, however, and constantly encourages investment in better instruments where they are needed. His clinching argument was the Boston Symphony.

Perhaps the appearance of the Boston also had an effect on summer music study. No less than six Utahns are studying at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood, which is maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with its Birkshire Festival. One member of the Utah Symphony, Donald Basinger, Bountiful, bass, is in the group.

Glenn Williams
student, bassoon
Nephi, violin; Ed
ren, Ogden; Warren
25 E. Truman Ave.
ke City, cello, and
Beauregard, Fillmore

The Berkshire Evening Eagle,

TANGLEWOOD Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
Orchestra
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
CLOSING CONCERTS
FRI. EVE., Aug. 14, Soloists: LOIS MARSHALL, Soprano, WILLIAM WARFIELD, Baritone
SAT. EVE., Aug. 15, LEONARD BERNSTEIN, Conducting
SUN. AFT., Aug. 16, Soloist, SEYMOUR LIPKIN, Piano
Reserved seats from $2.50; Gen'l Adm. $2
Thurs., Aug. 13-'TANGLEWOOD on PARADE'
Many events include Boston Symphony Concert Conducted by CHARLES MUNCH and LEONARD BERNSTEIN; Soloists—ISAAC STERN, Violin; LEONTYNE PRICE, Soprano, appearing with WILLIAM WARFIELD, Baritone, in "Porgy and Bess," Act II, Scenes 1 & 2.
Reserved Seats, $4 and $3, Unreserved $2.50
Address Box Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

mt 8/13

season to date!

Tussy
TUSSY
TUSSY 'MEDICARE'
ANTI-BLEMISH
SET $2.00 TAX FREE
BETTER DRUG AND COSMETIC COUN

[283]

Ove

Stock Averages
Dow-Jones—Goodbody & Co. (1 PM)

30 Industrials	277.15	+ .73
20 Railroads	106.12	+ .39
15 Utilities	50.87	+ .03

The Berkshire Evening Eagle

Second Section

Pittsfield, Massachusetts, Thursday, August 13.

Final Berkshire Festival Series Opens Tomorrow With Brahms

The final 1953 Berkshire Festival series will open tomorrow night in the Tanglewood Music Shed with the Brahms "Requiem." Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the composition for solo voices, chorus and orchestra, with Lois Marshall, soprano soloist and William Warfield as baritone soloist. The Berkshire Festival Chorus, of which Hugh Ross is conductor, will sing the choral numbers.

The work, written by Johannes Brahms when he was 33, was first performed as a complete work at the Cathedral in Bremen in April, 1868. The text was chosen by the composer from various parts of the Lutheran Bible. John Burk, the Boston orchestra's program annotator, writes of it:

"Here was another case of complete achievement of a medium, matched with that reflective, inward mood which showed Brahms' stiller pools to be his deepest. Some have tried to prove, by the date of its composition, that Brahms was moved by the death of his mother; others that Robert Schumann's death, which certainly profoundly affected him, was the motive cause. In any case, it is personal music, transcending ritual and sect, albeit so thorough-going a North German as Brahms could scarcely have composed religious music entirely free of Protestant implications. The century shows no great choral work so innocent of the sensational. The prevailing mood is gently elegiac, with a quiet but entirely convincing affirmation of faith."

Ross Trains Chorus

The Festival Chorus, which has sung the choral parts in Festival programs, is prepared by Hugh Ross, assisted by Mrs. Lorna Cooke deVaron. Mr. Ross, who has headed the Berkshire Music Center's department of choral conducting and choral music since the school opened in 1940, currently is professor of music at Sarah Lawrence College, Bronxville, N.Y. and conductor of the Schola Cantorum of New York.

Hugh Ross

Born in Langport, England, Mr. Ross attended New College, Oxford and the Royal Academy of Music, London, where he won first prize in organ, and of which he was made a Fellow in 1915. In 1921 he came to America as director of the Winnipeg Male Voice Choir. He was founder and from 1923 to 1927 conductor of the Winnipeg Symphony Orchestra. In the latter year he went to New York to head the Schola Cantorum. He founded the National Choral Union of Washington, D.C., and has guest-conducted the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, the Winnipeg Festival and Worcester Festivals.

Soprano a Canadian

Miss Marshall was born in Toronto, where she studied at the Royal Conservatory of Music under Weldon Kilburn, who is her accompanist. She has sung with the Toronto, Winnipeg, Vancouver, Victoria and Ottawa orchestras, and last May in Beethoven's Missa Solemnis with Arturo Toscanini. A Naumburg Award winner, she made her Town Hall debut in New York last summer. She won the Eaton Award in Canada in 1950. She has sung this summer at Grant Park, Chicago, State Normal School; the Stratgford, Ontario, Festival and with Thor Johnson at the Ephraim (Wis.) Festival. She plans to appear at Buck Hill Falls, Pa. on a program with duo-pianists Whittemore and Lowe and with the Toronto Symphony Orchestra.

Mr. Warfield will appear tonight with his wife, Leontyne Price, and the Boston Symphony Orchestra

---

Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD TODAY

Tanglewood on Parade.

PM
4.00—Opera scenes in the formal garden for holders of reserved seats and box tickets.
5.45—Greeting by Boris Goldovsky. Center lawn.
6.00—Simultaneous demonstrations by Berkshire Music Center students. Music Shed, theatre and Chamber Music Hall.
7.15—Choral concert on the porch and opportunity to picnic on the lawn. (Beverages and limited amount of food obtainable at cafeteria.)
8.15—Concert by Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch and Leonard Bernstein conducting and Isaac Stern, Leontyne Price and William Warfield, soloists. Music Shed.
Drawing of 42 door prizes, including two new high fidelity console record players (RCA-Victor and Philco Phonorama). Music Shed.
Waltzing to two pianos played by faculty members. Lawn south of main house.

TOMORROW

PM
*3.00—Opera scenes. Theatre.
*4.30—Informal composers' forum, Chamber Music Hall.

*Open to Friends of Berkshire Music Center who give voluntary contributions to school's support.

Carlos Chavez, conductor of the Mexico City Symphony Orchestra and teacher of composition at Tanglewood, will conduct his own "Sinfonia Antigona" and Stravinsky's "Firebird" Suite at the final concert by the Berkshire Music Center's student orchestra Saturday afternoon at 3 in the Music Shed. Student conductors will be Harold Blumenfeld and Robert Mandell.

The program follows:

Overture to Semiramide .... Rossini
Mr. Blumenfeld, conductor.
Double Concerto for Two Violins .. Bach
Barbara Lieberman and Barbara Sorlien, soloists.
Mr. Mandell, conductor.
Symphony No. 4 (4th movement) . Mahler
Anne English, soprano soloist.
Sinfonia Antigona .... Chavez
Firebird Suite .... Stravinsky
Mr. Chavez, conductor.

In the audience at the closing concerts of the Berkshire Festival this week end will be Irving Brown, of Chappel Inc., music publishers, New York; Dr. Lewis Perry of Boston and West Chop, BSO trustee and chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center; Anna Russell, concert comedienne, who will appear in two matinee performances at the Berkshire Playhouse today and tomorrow; and her manager, Eastman Bloomer of New York; Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Howatson of the Montreal Symphony Orchestra; Larney Goodkind, personal manager of Leontyne Price and William Warfield, soloists at Tanglewood on Parade; and Miss Nelly Walter of Columbia Artists management.

Visiting music editors this week end include Howard Taubman, New York Times; Jay S. Harrison, New York Herald Tribune; Gene Cook, Life magazine; Julian Seaman, Toledo (Ohio) Blade; and Lester Velie of the Reader's Digest.

Cir. (D & S 93,000)
This Clipping From
SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH
DESERET NEWS
AUG 13 1953

MUSIC NEWS

Philadelphia Symphony

S. L. Music Followers In for Special Treat

By CONRAD B. HARRISON
Music Editor

With the Philadelphia Orchestra scheduled here next May and the New York Philharmonic-Symphony feeling out the area for a 1955 tour, Salt Lake City listeners may hear the world's three greatest orchestras in as many years.

Last May, the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the other member of the top three, was heard at the Tabernacle. The Boston also performed at Provo, where the Philadelphia is booked for a second concert in Utah next spring. The Philadelphia will be sponsored in Salt Lake City by the McCune School of Music and Art Branch of the Brigham Young University and in Provo by the B Y U.

Appearance of such orchestras are healthy and encouraging to the musical well-being of any community. Often this extends a good deal further than meets the ear. In addition to supplying great music for the populace, great symphonic organizations have an uplifting effect on local orchestral production and strengthen the desire for musical excellence.

Instrumental quality achieved by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, for instance, should have some effect on the tone of the Utah Symphony Orchestra in the future. Much of the Boston's sound must be credited to uniformly fine instruments. The players work on the theory that an inferior instrument will not produce top quality tone, no matter how well it is played.

Conductor Maurice Abravanel of the Utah ensemble has worked long and hard on tone quality, and has been remarkably successful. He knows there is still much room for improvement, however, and constantly encourages investment in better instruments where they are needed. His clinching argument was the Boston Symphony.

Perhaps the appearance of the Boston also had an effect on summer music study. No less than six Utahns are studying at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood, which is maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with its Birkshire Festival. One member of the Utah Symphony, Donald Basinger, Bountiful, bass, is in the group.

Glenn Williams student, bassoon Nephi, violin; Ed gren, Ogden; Warren 25 E. Truman Ave. ake City, cello, and Beauregard, Fillmore

---

Eagle, Thursday, Aug. 13, 1953

Holders Listed ood on Parade

and Frederick W. Beinecke; Richmond, Mr. and Mrs. Shaun Kelly; North Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sprague; Otis, Mr. and Mrs. George Sokolsky; Mrs. George T. Sewall, South Lee.

A few entire boxes or seats in m are available at the Tangle- d box office.

.... Chabrier
Prelude and Love Death, Tristain and Isolde
A Siegfried Idyll.
Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg. Excepts. Wagner
Piano Concerto for the left hand .. Ravel
Soloist, Seymour Lipkin.
La Valse .... Ravel

THIRD IN SUPPER SERIES

Lee, Aug. 11—The third in a series of suppers being held particularly for summer visitors will take place from 5 to 7 at the Congregational Church parlors Saturday. The proceeds go to the church improvement fund. Pot roast will be served. The supper is planned early so that people may easily finish in time for the Tanglewood concert. Mrs. Lloyd Christensen, chairman, has as her committee Mrs. Orville Gardner, Mrs. Edward LeStage, Mrs. Sylvester Church, Miss Alice Gardner, with other church members assisting.

Bernstein. Sunday afternoon: Schubert, Chabrier, Wagner, and Ravel, with Seymour Lipkin as piano soloist, under Munch. Thus ends Tanglewood's most successful season to date!

20 on the special economy size while the supply

Tussy CREAMY MASK MEDICATED TUSSY "MEDICARE" ANTI-BLEMISH SET $2.00 TAX FREE
BETTER DRUG AND COSMETIC COUN

[283]

Ove

Stock Averages
Dow-Jones—Goodbody & Co. (1 PM)
30 Industrials .... 277.15 + .73
20 Railroads .... 106.12 + .39
15 Utilities .... 50.87 + .03

The Berkshire Evening Eagle
Pittsfield, Massachusetts, Thursday, August 13, 1

Second Section

Final Berkshire Festival Series Opens Tomorrow With Brahms

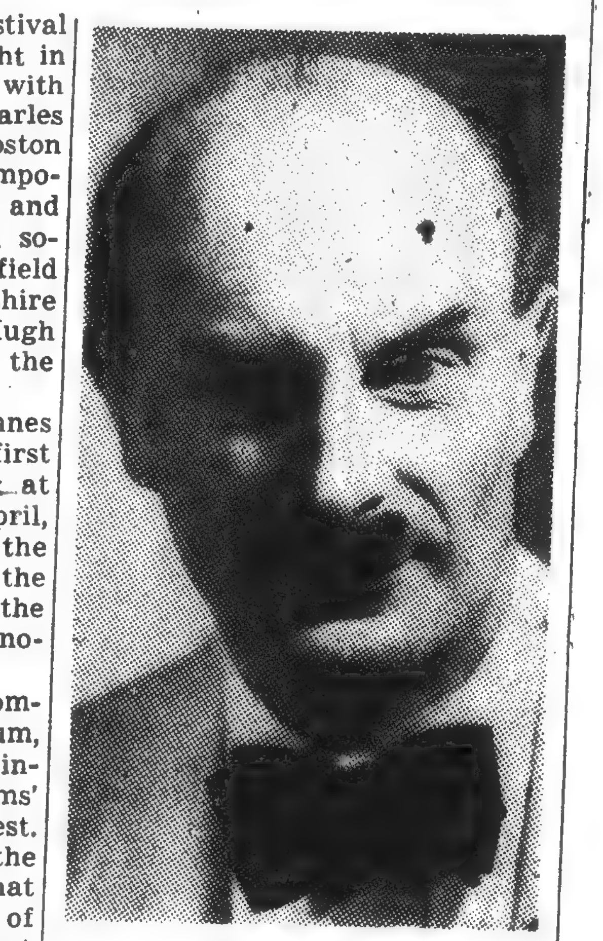
The final 1953 Berkshire Festival series will open tomorrow night in the Tanglewood Music Shed with the Brahms "Requiem." Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the composition for solo voices, chorus and orchestra, with Lois Marshall, soprano soloist and William Warfield as baritone soloist. The Berkshire Festival Chorus, of which Hugh Ross is conductor, will sing the choral numbers.

The work, written by Johannes Brahms when he was 33, was first performed as a complete work at the Cathedral in Bremen in April, 1868. The text was chosen by the composer from various parts of the Lutheran Bible. John Burk, the Boston orchestra's program annotator, writes of it:

"Here was another case of complete achievement of a medium, matched with that reflective, inward mood which showed Brahms' stiller pools to be his deepest. Some have tried to prove, by the date of its composition, that Brahms was moved by the death of his mother; others that Robert Schumann's death, which certainly profoundly affected him, was the motive cause. In any case, it is personal music, transcending ritual and sect, albeit so thorough-going a North German as Brahms could scarcely have composed religious music entirely free of Protestant implications. The century shows no great choral work so innocent of the sensational. The prevailing mood is gently elegiac, with a quiet but entirely convincing affirmation of faith."

Ross Trains Chorus

The Festival Chorus, which has sung the choral parts in Festival programs, is prepared by Hugh Ross, assisted by Mrs. Lorna Cooke deVaron. Mr. Ross, who has headed the Berkshire Music Center's department of choral conducting and choral music since the school opened in 1940, currently is professor of music at Sarah Lawrence College, Bronxville, N.Y. and conductor of the Schola Cantorum of New York.



Hugh Ross

Born in Langport, England, Mr. Ross attended New College, Oxford and the Royal Academy of Music, London, where he won first prize in organ, and of which he was made a Fellow in 1915. In 1921 he came to America as director of the Winnipeg Male Voice Choir. He was founder and from 1923 to 1927 conductor of the Winnipeg Symphony Orchestra. In the latter year he went to New York to head the Schola Cantorum. He founded the National Choral Union of Washington, D.C., and has guest-conducted the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, the Winnipeg Festival and Worcester Festivals.

Soprano a Canadian

Miss Marshall was born in Toronto, where she studied at the Royal Conservatory of Music under Weldon Kilburn, who is her accompanist. She has sung with the Toronto, Winnipeg, Vancouver, Victoria and Ottawa orchestras, and last May in Beethoven's Missa Solemnis with Arturo Toscanini. A Naumburg Award winner, she made her Town Hall debut in New York last summer. She won the Eaton Award in Canada in 1950. She has sung this summer at Grant Park, Chicago, State Normal School; the Stratgford, Ontario, Festival and with Thor Johnson at the Ephraim (Wis.) Festival. She plans to appear at Buck Hill Falls, Pa. on a program with duo-pianists Whittemore and Lowe and with the Toronto Symphony Orchestra.

Mr. Warfield will appear tonight with his wife, Leontyne Price, and the Boston Symphony Orchestra

---

Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD
TODAY
Tanglewood on Parade.

PM
4.00—Opera scenes in the formal garden for holders of reserved seats and box tickets.
5.45—Greeting by Boris Goldovsky. Center of lawn.
6.00—Simultaneous demonstrations by Berkshire Music Center students. Music Shed, theatre and Chamber Music Hall.
7.15—Choral concert on the porch and opportunity to picnic on the lawn. (Beverages and limited amount of food obtainable at cafeteria.)
8.15—Concert by Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch and Leonard Bernstein conducting and Isaac Stern, Leontyne Price and William Warfield, soloists. Music Shed.
Drawing of 42 door prizes, including two new high fidelity console record players (RCA-Victor and Philco Phonorama). Music Shed.
Waltzing to two pianos played by faculty members. Lawn south of main house.

TOMORROW

PM
*3.00—Opera scenes. Theatre.
*4.30—Informal composers' forum. Chamber Music Hall.

*Open to Friends of Berkshire Music Center who give voluntary contributions to school's support.

Carlos Chavez, conductor of the Mexico City Symphony Orchestra and teacher of composition at Tanglewood, will conduct his own "Sinfonia Antigona" and Stravinsky's "Firebird" Suite at the final concert by the Berkshire Music Center's student orchestra Saturday afternoon at 3 in the Music Shed. Student conductors will be Harold Blumenfeld and Robert Mandell.

The program follows:

Overture to Semiramide .... Rossini
Mr. Blumenfeld, conductor.
Double Concerto for Two Violins .. Bach
Barbara Lieberman and Barbara Sorlien, soloists.
Mr. Mandell, conductor.
Symphony No. 4 (4th movement) . Mahler
Anne English, soprano soloist.
Sinfonia Antigona .... Chavez
Firebird Suite .... Stravinsky
Mr. Chavez, conductor.

In the audience at the closing concerts of the Berkshire Festival this week end will be Irving Brown, of Chappel Inc., music publishers, New York; Dr. Lewis Perry of Boston and West Chop, BSO trustee and chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center; Anna Russell, concert comedienne, who will appear in two matinee performances at the Berkshire Playhouse today and tomorrow; and her manager, Eastman Bloomer of New York; Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Howatson of the Montreal Symphony Orchestra; Larney Goodkind, personal manager of Leontyne Price and William Warfield, soloists at Tanglewood on Parade; and Miss Nelly Walter of Columbia Artists management.

Visiting music editors this week end include Howard Taubman, New York Times; Jay S. Harrison, New York Herald Tribune; Gene Cook, Life magazine; Julian Seaman, Toledo (Ohio) Blade; and Lester Velie of the Reader's Digest.

---

agle, Thursday, Aug. 13, 1953

olders Listed od on Parade

and Frederick W. Beinecke; Richmond, Mr. and Mrs. Shaun Kelly; North Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sprague; Otis, Mr. and Mrs. George Sokolsky; Mrs. George T. Sewall, South Lee.

A few entire boxes or seats in m are available at the Tangleod box office.

Bourree [illegible] .... Chabrier
Prelude and Love Death, Tristain and Isolde.
A Siegfried Idyll.
Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg, Excepts, Wagner
Piano Concerto for the left hand .. Ravel
Soloist, Seymour Lipkin.
La Valse .... Ravel

---

on your [illegible], you keep going right ahead past that big red store in Glendale; in minutes you'll be in that fairyland of the music world, Tanglewood. Tremendously exciting things are going on there these days in the Big Shed—but, as they say on the circus lot, "you'll have to hurry." The great Festival ends with the concert of this coming Sunday afternoon. Today the annual high jinks, "Tanglewood on Parade" is in progress. (If you can still get there, better call Lenox, Mass. 600. Seats, at $4 and $3, may be gone. Unreserved seats are $2.50. Tomorrow night: Brahms' Requiem, under Munch. Saturday night: Sibelius, Chavez, and Brahmns, under Leonard Bernstein. Sunday afternoon: Schubert, Chabrier, Wagner, and Ravel, with Seymour Lipkin as piano soloist, under Munch. Thus ends Tanglewood's most successful season to date!

Cir. (D & S 93,000)
This Clipping From
SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH
DESERET NEWS
AUG 13 1953

MUSIC NEWS

Philadelphia Symphony

S. L. Music Followers In for Special Treat

By CONRAD B. HARRISON
Music Editor

With the Philadelphia Orchestra scheduled here next May and the New York Philharmonic-Symphony feeling [illegible] the area for a 1955 tour, Salt Lake City listeners may [illegible] the world's three greatest orchestras in as many years.

Last May, the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the other member of the top three, was heard at the Tabernacle. The Boston also performed at Provo, where the Philadelphia is booked for a second concert in Utah next spring. The Philadelphia will be sponsored in Salt Lake City by the McCune School of Music and Art Branch of the Brigham Young University and in Provo by the B Y U.

Appearance of such orchestras are healthy and encouraging to the musical well-being of any community. Often this extends a good deal further than meets the ear. In addition to supplying great music for the populace, great symphonic organizations have an uplifting effect on local orchestral production and strengthen the desire for musical excellence.

Instrumental quality achieved by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, for instance, should have some effect on the tone of the Utah Symphony Orchestra in the future. Much of the Boston's sound must be credited to uniformly fine instruments. The players work on the theory that an inferior instrument will not produce top quality tone, no matter how well it is played.

Conductor Maurice Abravanel of the Utah ensemble has worked long and hard on tone quality, and has been remarkably successful. He knows there is still much room for improvement, however, and constantly encourages investment in better instruments where they are needed. His clinching argument was the Boston Symphony.

Perhaps the appearance of the Boston also had an effect on summer music study. No less than six Utahns are studying at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood, which is maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with its Birkshire Festival. One member of the Utah Symphony, Donald Basinger, Bountiful, bass, is in the group.

[illegible] Glenn Williams
[illegible] student, bassoon
[illegible] Nephi, violin; Ed
[illegible]gren, Ogden; Warren
[illegible] 25 E. Truman Ave.
[illegible]ake City, cello, and [illegible] Beauregard, Fillmore

TUSSY "MEDICARE"
ANTI-BLEMISH
SET $200 TAX FREE
BETTER DRUG AND COSMETIC COUN

Stock Averages
Dow-Jones—Goodbody & Co. (1 PM)

30 Industrials	277.15	+ .73
20 Railroads	106.12	+ .39
15 Utilities	50.87	+ .03

Sales 610,000

The Berkshire Evening Eagle

Second Section

Pittsfield, Massachusetts, Thursday, August 13.

Final Berkshire Festival Series Opens Tomorrow With Brahms

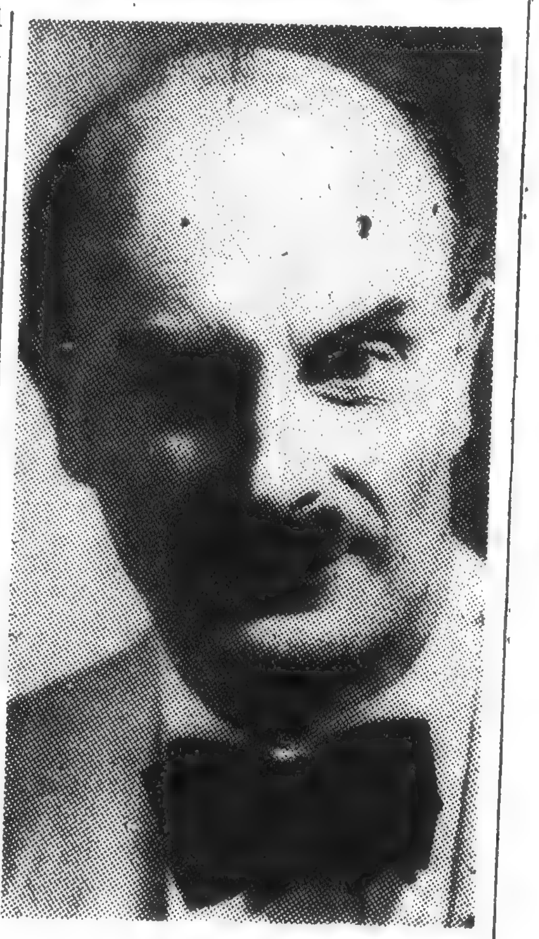
The final 1953 Berkshire Festival series will open tomorrow night in the Tanglewood Music Shed with the Brahms "Requiem." Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the composition for solo voices, chorus and orchestra, with Lois Marshall, soprano soloist and William Warfield as baritone soloist. The Berkshire Festival Chorus, of which Hugh Ross is conductor, will sing the choral numbers.

The work, written by Johannes Brahms when he was 33, was first performed as a complete work at the Cathedral in Bremen in April, 1868. The text was chosen by the composer from various parts of the Lutheran Bible. John Burk, the Boston orchestra's program annotator, writes of it:

"Here was another case of complete achievement of a medium, matched with that reflective, inward mood which showed Brahms' stiller pools to be his deepest. Some have tried to prove, by the date of its composition, that Brahms was moved by the death of his mother; others that Robert Schumann's death, which certainly profoundly affected him, was the motive cause. In any case, it is personal music, transcending ritual and sect, albeit so thorough-going a North German as Brahms could scarcely have composed religious music entirely free of Protestant implications. The century shows no great choral work so innocent of the sensational. The prevailing mood is gently elegiac, with a quiet but entirely convincing affirmation of faith."

Ross Trains Chorus

The Festival Chorus, which has sung the choral parts in Festival programs, is prepared by Hugh Ross, assisted by Mrs. Lorna Cooke deVaron. Mr. Ross, who has headed the Berkshire Music Center's department of choral conducting and choral music since the school opened in 1940, currently is profes-



Hugh Ross

Born in Langport, England, Mr. Ross attended New College, Oxford and the Royal Academy of Music, London, where he won first prize in organ, and of which he was made a Fellow in 1915. In 1921 he came to America as director of the Winnipeg Male Voice Choir. He was founder and from 1923 to 1927 conductor of the Winnipeg Symphony Orchestra. In the latter year he went to New York to head the Schola Cantorum. He founded the National Choral Union of Washington, D.C., and has guest-conducted the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, the Winnipeg Festival and Worcester Festivals.

Soprano a Canadian

Miss Marshall was born in Toronto, where she studied at the Royal Conservatory of Music under Weldon Kilburn, who is her accompanist. She has sung with the Toronto, Winnipeg, Vancouver, Victoria and Ottawa orchestras, and last May in Beethoven's Missa Solemnis with Arturo Toscanini. A Naumburg Award winner, she made her Town Hall debut in New York last summer. She won the Eaton Award in Canada in 1950. She has sung this summer at Grant Park, Chicago, State Normal School; the Stratgford, Ontario, Festival and with Thor Johnson at the Ephraim (Wis.) Festival. She plans to appear at Buck Hill Falls, Pa. on a program with duo-pianists Whittemore and Lowe and with the Toronto Symphony Orchestra.

Mr. Warfield will appear tonight with his wife, Leontyne Price, and the Boston Symphony Orchestra

---

One of the most fascinating stories of the year is the manner in which producers Wilbur Stark and Jerry Layton exercise control over their NBC-TV production, "Ladies Choice", from 3,000 miles away. The program emanates daily from Hollywood, while Stark-Layton have their offices in New York and must remain in New York because of their other radio-TV productions. So, before each day's "Ladies Choice" telecast, Stark-Layton put through a telephone call to the control room of the studio from which it originates. They then proceed to watch the show on the TV set in their New York offices, giving suggestions and orders to the executive producer and director over the telephone, when they spot something they believe needs looking into. Some days a complete half-hour goes by without them having to offer a single comment, other days they keep a constant stream of chatter insure that everything goes off perfectly. So successful has been

---

gle, Thursday, Aug. 13, 1953

lders Listed d on Parade

At least one-third of the 86 boxes in the Music Shed tonight at the Tanglewood on Parade concert will be occupied by permanent or summer residents of Berkshire County. Those who have made advance reservations are: Pittsfield, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Rice Donald B. Miller, Monroe B. England, Mr. and Mrs. Leon Podolsky, Mr. and Mrs. Alan J. Blau and Victor Elting; Lenox, Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Sanborn, Miss Constance Parrish, Miss Gladys Greene, Alfred Kay, Mrs. Frederic Schenck, Miss Anna Alexandre and Mrs. Owen Johnson.

Dalton, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Crane; Stockbridge, Mr. and Mrs. David B. Karrick, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Percival, Mr. and Mrs. James Deely, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hoving, Miss Mabel Choate, Miss Ima Hogg, and Mrs. George O. Rockwood; Great Barrington, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Blodgett, Mr. and Mrs. William Felton Barrett, Mr. and Mrs. Robert K. Wheeler, and Frederick W. Beinecke; Richmond, Mr. and Mrs. Shaun Kelly; North Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sprague; Otis, Mr. and Mrs. George Sokolsky; Mrs. George T. Sewall, South Lee.

A few entire boxes or seats in them are available at the Tanglewood box office.

Joyeuse Passaque .... Chabrier
Prelude and Love Death, Tristain and Isolde
A Siegfried Idyll.
Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg, Excepts, Wagner
Piano Concerto for the left hand .. Ravel
Soloist, Seymour Lipkin.
La Valse .... Ravel

Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD TODAY

Tanglewood on Parade.

PM

4.00—Opera scenes in the formal garden for holders of reserved seats and box tickets.

5.45—Greeting by Boris Goldovsky. Center of lawn.

6.00—Simultaneous demonstrations by Berkshire Music Center students. Music Shed, theatre and Chamber Music Hall.

7.15—Choral concert on the porch and opportunity to picnic on the lawn. (Beverages and limited amount of food obtainable at cafeteria.)

8.15—Concert by Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch and Leonard Bernstein conducting and Isaac Stern, Leontyne Price and William Warfield, soloists. Music Shed.

Drawing of 42 door prizes, including two new high fidelity console record players (RCA-Victor and Philco Phonorama). Music Shed.

Waltzing to two pianos played by faculty members. Lawn south of main house.

TOMORROW

PM

*3.00—Opera scenes. Theatre.

*4.30—Informal composers' forum. Chamber Music Hall.

*Open to Friends of Berkshire Music Center who give voluntary contributions to school's support.

Carlos Chavez, conductor of the Mexico City Symphony Orchestra and teacher of composition at Tanglewood, will conduct his own "Sinfonia Antigona" and Stravinsky's "Firebird" Suite at the final concert by the Berkshire Music Center's student orchestra Saturday afternoon at 3 in the Music Shed. Student conductors will be Harold Blumenfeld and Robert Mandell.

The program follows:

Overture to Semiramide .... Rossini
Mr. Blumenfeld, conductor.
Double Concerto for Two Violins .. Bach
Barbara Lieberman and Barbara Sorlien, soloists.
Mr. Mandell, conductor.
Symphony No. 4 (4th movement) . Mahler
Anne English, soprano soloist.
Sinfonia Antigona .... Chavez
Firebird Suite .... Stravinsky
Mr. Chavez, conductor.

In the audience at the closing concerts of the Berkshire Festival this week end will be Irving Brown, of Chappel Inc., music publishers, New York; Dr. Lewis Perry of Boston and West Chop, BSO trustee and chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center; Anna Russell, concert comedienne, who will appear in two matinee performances at the Berkshire Playhouse today and tomorrow; and her manager, Eastman Bloomer of New York; Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Howatson of the Montreal Symphony Orchestra; Larney Goodkind, personal manager of Leontyne Price and William Warfield, soloists at Tanglewood on Parade; and Miss Nelly Walter of Columbia Artists management.

Visiting music editors this week end include Howard Taubman, New York Times; Jay S. Harrison, New York Herald Tribune; Gene Cook, Life magazine; Julian Seaman, Toledo (Ohio) Blade; and Lester Velie of the Reader's Digest.

Cir. (D & S 93,000)

This Clipping From
SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH
DESERET NEWS
AUG 13 1953

MUSIC NEWS

Philadelphia Symphony

S. L. Music Followers In for Special Treat

By CONRAD B. HARRISON
Music Editor

With the Philadelphia Orchestra scheduled here next May and the New York Philharmonic-Symphony feeling the area for a 1955 tour, Salt Lake City listeners may hear the world's three great orchestras in as many years.

Last May, the Boston Symphony Orchestra, a member of the top three, was heard at the Tabernacle. The Boston also performed at Provo, where the Philadelphia is booked for a second concert in Utah next spring. The Philadelphia will be sponsored in Salt Lake City by the McCune School of Music and Art Branch of the Brigham Young University and in Provo by the B Y U.

Appearance of such orchestras are healthy and encouraging to the musical well-being of any community. Often this extends a good deal further than meets the ear. In addition to supplying great music for the populace, great symphonic organizations have an uplifting effect on local orchestral production and strengthen the desire for musical excellence.

Instrumental quality achieved by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, for instance, should have some effect on the tone of the Utah Symphony Orchestra in the future. Much of the Boston's sound must be credited to uniformly fine instruments. The players work on the theory that an inferior instrument will not produce top quality tone, no matter how well it is played.

Conductor Maurice Abravanel of the Utah ensemble has worked long and hard on tone quality, and has been remarkably successful. He knows there is still much room for improvement, however, and constantly encourages investment in better instruments where they are needed. His clinching argument was the Boston Symphony.

Perhaps the appearance of the Boston also had an effect on summer music study. No less than six Utahns are studying at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood, which is maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with its Birkshire Festival. One member of the Utah Symphony, Donald Basinger, Bountiful, bass, is in the group.

Glenn Williams student, bassoon Nephi, violin; Ed gren, Ogden; Warre 25 E. Truman Ave. Lake City, cello, an Beauregard, Fillmore

USSY "MEDICARE"
NTI-BLEMISH
SET $2 00 TAX FREE
TUSS
BETTER DRUG AND COSMETIC COUN

PARADE EVENT BEGINS FINALE AT TANGLEWOOD

Union —— 8/13

Music Lovers Gather as Festival Enters Last 4 Days; Musical Variety Theme

Lenox, Aug. 12 As the Berkshire Music Festival reaches a crescendo with this week end's finale, Tanglewood will present the annual "Parade Program" tomorrow. This jam-packed program will afford music lovers a complete picture of the attainments at the Berkshire Festival. The proceeds from this gala benefit program will assure an even greater growth in the years to come.

There will be seven continuous hours tomorrow of the parading of the highlights of music festival and associated arts. There will be simultaneous sessions of each department of the centre-department orchestras, chamber music, opera scenes, the Boston Symphony Orchestra. A lawn party will take place, and there will be waltzing on the vast lawns.

One of the highlights will be the world premiere of the one-act opera and cantata, "Bad Boys in School" by Jan Meyerowitz. Then there will be Charles Munch and the BSO in Handel and Beethoven numbers with Isaac Stern as soloist. Following will be Leonard Bernstein conducting the orchestra in Gershwins's "Porgy and Bess," with Leontyne Price and William Warfield as soloists, and the Festival Chorus, which has been so superbly trained in six weeks by Hugh Ross.

Activities of the Berkshire Music Center, currently in its 11th season, come to a close this week end, with the termination of the Berkshire Festival. The Summer School of Music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Berkshires shuts its doors on Sunday.

Thursday

Tanglewood on Parade (for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center); 3 p. m., (for boxholders and reserved seat patrons) formal gardens; 5:45 p. m., fanfare welcome by Boris Goldovsky; 6 p. m., simultaneous sessions of each department, Berkshire Music Center.

Music Shed—short symphonic works, orchestra of Department I, Theatre-Concert Hall; world premiere of one-act opera and cantata, "Bad Boys in School," by Jan Meyerowitz, by students of the associate division of Department IV; cantata, "A Little Boy Lost," by Alan Sapp, by students of Department V; Chamber Music hall, chamber music program, students of Department I; 7:15 p. m., lawn party, picnic supper, concert by chorus (students of Department II); 8:15 p. m., Music Shed—gala concert, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor; Handel, "Water Music"; Beethoven — violin concerto, soloist Isaac Stern; Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein, conductor, Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," Act II, Scenes 1 & 2, with festival chorus and soloists William Warfield, baritone, Leontyne Price, soprano; 11 p. m., awarding of special prizes by Anna Russell, international concert comedienne, followed by waltzing on the lawn.

Friday, Saturday

Friday, 8:30 p. m., Music Shed, Berkshire Festival Concert C-I, Charles Munch, conductor, in Brahms Requiem, with festival chorus and soloists Lois Marshall, soprano, William Warfield, baritone.

Saturday, 10 a. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor, in public rehearsal (benefit pension fund); 3 p. m., Music Shed, orchestra concert by students of Department I for the friends of music center; 8:30 p. m., Music Shed, Berkshire Festival Concert C2, Leonard Bernstein, conductor, Sibelius, Symphony No. 4 in A Minor, Chavez, Sinfonia India, Brahms, Symphony No. 2 in D Major.

Sunday

Sunday, 10 a. m., Theatre-Concert Hall, chamber music concert by students of Department I, 2:30 p. m.; Music Shed, Berkshire Festival Concert C3, Charles Munch, conductor, Schubert, Symphony in B Minor (unfinished), Chabrier, Bourree Fantasque, Wagner, Prelude and Love-Death, "Tristan und Isolde," Wagner, A Siegfried Idyll, Wagner, "Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg," excerpts from Act II (broadcast coast-to-coast by CBS radio), Ravel piano concerto for the left hand, soloist Seymour Lipkin, Ravel, "La Valse."

[254]

---

mountain states.

Foreign Representation Highest

More foreign countries and students are represented at the Summer School than ever before. The 212 foreign students this year compare to a previous high of 192 in 1951, and 181 last year.

This year's figures show a slight drop in enrollment from Europe and Africa, and a slight increase in Asia and Canada. A larger increase over the other years is shown by the 36 students from Central and South America. The six countries with the largest representations are Canada with 22, Japan with 16, Great Britain with 15, France with 13, China with 12, and Cuba with 10.

As compared with 280 for 1952, there are 221 veterans enrolled with government aid.

Holger Wigertz of Sweden will discuss "Scandinavia: Its Economy and Foreign Policy."

Ghorayeb is General Manager and Editor of the Middle East Press Office.

One of he became lege, he s extensive that teachi

Construction Begins o Hockey Rink; Exca

Harvard's hockey rink is now a 20-foot hole in the ground. Workmen began construction last Friday, when they staked out the 60-by-180-foot area behind Dillon Field House and dug up the top grass and soil. Monday, excavation was begun.

The Canter Construction Company, the same firm that is building Harvard's new herbarium, is handling the job. Presently,

a crew of Field, altho the prelimi
A crane, a trucks are

The wor serious pr
the groun
a solid sur of digging,
20 feet de
Charles Ri
they will ha in parts be
The proble
will have t
they said.

Late las nounced pl outdoor ho pense of call for a seating. U ous difficul be complet
winter.

Low

Carroll M
Harvard fo
near the play footba

Lowenst
the East, b
of interru
Army afte season.
dates back

A 155-served in G football, r mention hi
All-Army t

Lowenste ankle whic was fine, a football.
as to whet
on defense

Tanglewood's Big Day

CRIMSON—STEPHEN S. SHOHET

Tanglewood had its biggest day this weekend. With Leonard Bernstein '39 conducting, the B.S.O. honored Serge Koussevitsky Saturday night with a Memorial Concert. Some 15,000 persons attended. Sunday cellist Gregor Piatigorsky performed (above) with Charles Munch conducting.

Harvard Summer News
Aug 13/53

(over)

Cir. (D & S 93,000)

This Clipping From
SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH
DESERET NEWS

AUG 13 1953

DESERET NEWS AND TELEGRAM, Salt Lake City, Thursday, August 13,

STUDY AT MUSIC CENTER—Six Utahns are currently studying at Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., summer school maintained by the Boston Symphony. They are, standing left to right: Glenn Williams, student at B Y U, Provo; Danold Basinger, Bountiful; Anna Hoyt, Nephi; Edward Sandgren, Ogden; Warren Burton, Salt Lake City, and, seated, left, Cherry Beauregard, Fillmore, with faculty member Seymour Lipkin.

THE ROVING EYE

By RUDOLPH ELIE

Munch, the Golf Pro, Learns 'Humoresque'

NOTES ON A TANGLEWOOD BUSH—After years of squirming in embarrassment at the necessity of having to inform visitors to this leafy music center that shorts and/or bathing suits are not exactly suitable, even if those who wear them make by their appearance a strong case to the contrary; the ingenious brass of the Berkshire Festival has come up with a solution that has made everyone happy. Practically everyone, that is.

Nowadays, when visitors arrive at the gate appareled largely in long bare legs, the gate keeper passes out large yellow apron-like skirts of a summery denim. Christian Dior's name is not on them, but they make a great hit with the ladies, who tie them on merrily and pass through into the hallowed lawns beyond.

The yellow skirts are issued to men in shorts, too, and all but the more aggressively masculine types march around in them without a murmur. Indeed, there are more photos taken of the men equipped with their yellow skirts than there are of the pines, the shed, the theater or the more photogenic girl students lounging about between classes. The nice point that remains to be settled is whether men in the English style knee-length shorts with high socks must tie on the yellow skirts. The gate keepers haven't yet had to face this crisis and, with but a few days remaining in the festival, hope they will not have to.

According to all reports, one of the higher levels of merriment in this season's student affairs has been the production of a one-act opera by Chabrier entitled "An Incomplete Education." The work proved to be musically one of the delights of the season, but the plot made it clear that it would never make the grade in Boston. For it seems the opera tells the piquant yarn of a boy and a girl who get married but have somehow along the line never been tipped off as to the more subtle functions of the married estate. It is not until a crash of thunder sends the girl scurrying into the protective arms of her husband that it dawns on both that there is more to marriage than meets the eye . . .

Weather Exceptional

This, the 16th Berkshire Festival and the 14th since the Boston Symphony Orchestra moved in to replace the New York Philharmonic (which gave the first two series), has broken all attendance records. Favored by exceptionally good weather, the Festival has clocked something over 150,000 visitors so far with the final weekend beginning tonight pointing to further records.

The box office statisticians figure that a third of the visitors are from the Berkshire area, a third from the Greater New York area, and the final third from all over the United States. The attendance of people from the Boston area is too small to be included in the generality, as western Massachusetts seems to be as remote for the Greater Bostonians as California. It seems the Greater Bostonians move north and south of Boston rather than west of it. All in all, this is all for the best, too, as it provides the orchestra with two entirely different audiences . . .

While it is three years since the death of Serge Koussevitzky, it is strange how powerfully his personality is still felt at Tanglewood. A legend in his own day, he has become increasingly legendary not only to the men of the orchestra who served under him (and who, perhaps, when he was alive, found him a hard master), but to all concerned in this extraordinary musical enterprise, which now ranks with the greatest musical festivals of the world. His grave in the Lenox cemetery has long since become a sort of shrine, while his estate Serenak on a hill overlooking Tanglewood and the Stockbridge bowl, now presided over by Mrs. Koussevitzky, has become the headquarters of his Music Foundation, one that continues the cause of modern music he championed all his career . . .

Lesson from Golf

It was at Serenak, one afternoon this week, that Mrs. Koussevitzky was hostess to several hundred invited guests of the Stockbridge Bowl Association, a group dedicated to keeping the area the beautifully unspoiled area it is. An al fresco concert in a natural bowl in the woods nearby the white house found Leonard Bernstein and Lukas Foss playing music for two pianos while their exceedingly attractive wives served as page turners. As Boris Goldovsky, who was master of ceremonies, put it, the pianists weren't going to perform, they were only going to rehearse in public, as they'd never played two piano music together before and hadn't had a chance with their Tanglewood duties to rehearse. So the main performance, he said, would be that of the two page turners, accompanied by Bernstein and Foss. As it turned out, the pianists frequently had to turn the pages themselves with laughs all around. Others taking part in the special event—and one of the charms of Tanglewood for the visitor is that some special event or other is always taking place—were Doriot Anthony, first flutist of the Boston Symphony, MacMorgan, one of Mr. Goldovsky's operatic stars, and Richard Dyer-Bennet, who lives in Stockbridge.

Not the least touching event of the final week of the Tanglewood season was the retirement from the orchestra of Hippolyte Droeghmans, a cellist of the orchestra, and Raymond Allard, the orchestra's brilliant first bassoonist. Charles Munch, making one of his infrequent speeches (he cannot bear to speak), presented the two noted musicians with watches on behalf of the orchestra, and all three practically broke down as the men of the orchestra gave them a standing ovation.

As for Mr. Munch, he has fallen as hard as Eisenhower for golf and spends every spare minute on the links nearby.

THE BOSTON HERALD
FRIDAY, AUGUST 14, 1953

PARADE EVENT BEGINS FINALE AT TANGLEWOOD

Union — 8/13

Music Lovers Gather as Festival Enters Last 4 Days; Musical Variety Theme

Lenox, Aug. 12—As the Berkshire Music Festival reaches a crescendo with this week end's finale, Tanglewood will present the annual "Parade Program" tomorrow. This jam-packed program will afford music lovers a complete picture of the attainments at the Berkshire Festival. The proceeds from this gala benefit program will assure an even greater growth in the years to come.

There will be seven continuous hours tomorrow of the parading of the highlights of music festival and associated arts. There will be simultaneous sessions of each department of the centre-department orchestras, chamber music, opera scenes, the Boston Symphony Orchestra. A lawn party will take place, and there will be waltzing on the vast lawns.

One of the highlights will be the world premiere of the one-act opera and cantata, "Bad Boys in School" by Jan Meyerowitz. Then there will be Charles Munch and the BSO in Handel and Beethoven numbers with Isaac Stern as soloist. Following will be Leonard Bernstein conducting the orchestra in Gershwins's "Porgy and Bess," with Leontyne Price and William Warfield as soloists, and the Festival Chorus, which has been so superbly trained in six weeks by Hugh Ross.

Activities of the Berkshire Music Center, currently in its 11th season, come to a close this week end, with the termination of the Berkshire Festival. The Summer School of Music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Berkshires shuts its doors on Sunday.

Thursday

Tanglewood on Parade (for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center); 3 p. m., (for boxholders and reserved seat patrons) formal gardens; 5:45 p. m., fanfare welcome by Boris Goldovsky; 6 p. m., simultaneous sessions of each department, Berkshire Music Center.

Music Shed—short symphonic works, orchestra of Department I, Theatre-Concert Hall; world premiere of one-act opera and cantata, "Bad Boys in School," by Jan Meyerowitz, by students of the associate division of Department IV; cantata, "A Little Boy Lost," by Alan Sapp, by students of Department V; Chamber Music hall, chamber music program, students of Department I; 7:15 p. m., lawn party, picnic supper, concert by chorus (students of Department II); 8:15 p. m., Music Shed—gala concert, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor; Handel, "Water Music"; Beethoven — violin concerto, soloist Isaac Stern; Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein, conductor, Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," Act II, Scenes 1 & 2, with festival chorus and soloists William Warfield, baritone, Leontyne Price, soprano; 11 p. m., awarding of special prizes by Anna Russell, international concert comedienne, followed by waltzing on the lawn.

Friday, Saturday

Friday, 8:30 p. m., Music Shed, Berkshire Festival Concert C-I, Charles Munch, conductor, in Brahms Requiem, with festival chorus and soloists Lois Marshall, soprano, William Warfield, baritone.

Saturday, 10 a. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor, in public rehearsal (benefit pension fund); 3 p. m., Music Shed, orchestra concert by students of Department I for the friends of music center; 8:30 p. m., Music Shed, Berkshire Festival Concert C2, Leonard Bernstein, conductor, Sibelius, Symphony No. 4 in A Minor, Chavez, Sinfonia India, Brahms, Symphony No. 2 in D Major.

Sunday

Sunday, 10 a. m., Theatre-Concert Hall, chamber music concert by students of Department I, 2:30 p. m.; Music Shed, Berkshire Festival Concert C3, Charles Munch, conductor, Schubert, Symphony in B Minor (unfinished), Chabrier, Bourree Fantasque, Wagner, Prelude and Love-Death, "Tristan und Isolde," Wagner, A Siegfried Idyll, Wagner, "Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg," excerpts from Act II (broadcast coast-to-coast by CBS radio), Ravel piano concerto for the left hand, soloist Seymour Lipkin, Ravel, "La Valse."

[284]

Mountain states.

Foreign Representation Highest

More foreign countries and students are represented at the Summer School than ever before. The 212 foreign students this year compare to a previous high of 192 in 1951, and 181 last year.

This year's figures show a slight drop in enrollment from Europe and Africa, and a slight increase in Asia and Canada. A larger increase over the other years is shown by the 36 students from Central and South America. The six countries with the largest representations are Canada with 22, Japan with 16, Great Britain with 15, France with 13, China with 12, and Cuba with 10.

As compared with 280 for 1952, there are 221 veterans enrolled with government aid.

Holger Wigertz of Sweden will discuss "Scandinavia: Its Economy and Foreign Policy."

Ghorayeb is General Manager and Editor of the Middle East Press Office.

he became
lege, he s extensive
that teachi

Construction Begins o Hockey Rink; Exca

Harvard's hockey rink is now a 20-foot hole in the ground. Workmen began construction last Friday, when they staked out the 60-by-180-foot area behind Dillon Field House and dug up the top grass and soil. Monday, excavation was begun.

The Canter Construction Company, the same firm that is building Harvard's new herbarium, is handling the job. Presently,

a crew of Field, alth
the prelimi
A crane, a trucks are

The wor serious pr
the groun
a solid su
of digging,
20 feet de
Charles R
they will h
in parts be
The proble
will have t
they said.

Late las nounced p outdoor h pense of call for a seating.
ous difficu
be complet
winter.

Low

Carroll
Harvard fo
near the play footba

Lowenst
the East, b
of interrup
Army afte
season.
dates back

A 155-
served in G football, r mention h
All-Army t

Lowenst
ankle whic
was fine, a football.
as to whet
on defense

Tanglewood's Big Day

CRIMSON—STEPHEN S. SHOHET

Tanglewood had its biggest day this weekend. With Leonard Bernstein '39 conducting, the B.S.O. honored Serge Koussevitsky Saturday night with a Memorial Concert. Some 15,000 persons attended. Sunday cellist Gregor Piatigorsky performed (above) with Charles Munch conducting.

Harvard Summer News
Aug 13/53

(over)

Cir. (D & S 93,000)

This Clipping From
SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH
DESERET NEWS

AUG 13 1953

DESERET NEWS AND TELEGRAM, Salt Lake City, Thursday, August 13,

STUDY AT MUSIC CENTER—Six Utahns are currently studying at Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., summer school maintained by the Boston Symphony. They are, standing left to right: Glenn Williams, student at B Y U, Provo; Danold Basinger, Bountiful; Anna Hoyt, Nephi; Edward Sandgren, Ogden; Warren Burton, Salt Lake City, and, seated, left, Cherry Beauregard, Fillmore, with faculty member Seymour Lipkin.

THE ROVING EYE

By RUDOLPH ELIE

Munch, the Golf Pro, Learns 'Humoresque'

NOTES ON A TANGLEWOOD BUSH —After years of squirming in embarrassment at the necessity of having to inform visitors to this leafy music center that shorts and/or bathing suits are not exactly suitable, even if those who wear them make by their appearance a strong case to the contrary, the ingenious brass of the Berkshire Festival has come up with a solution that has made everyone happy. Practically everyone, that is.

Nowadays, when visitors arrive at the gate appareled largely in long bare legs, the gate keeper passes out large yellow apron-like skirts of a summery denim. Christian Dior's name is not on them, but they make a great hit with the ladies, who tie them on merrily and pass through into the hallowed lawns beyond.

The yellow skirts are issued to men in shorts, too, and all but the more aggressively masculine types march around in them without a murmur. Indeed, there are more photos taken of the men equipped with their yellow skirts than there are of the pines, the shed, the theater or the more photogenic girl students lounging about between classes. The nice point that remains to be settled is whether men in the English style knee-length shorts with high socks must tie on the yellow skirts. The gate keepers haven't yet had to face this crisis and, with but a few days remaining in the festival, hope they will not have to.

According to all reports, one of the higher levels of merriment in this season's student affairs has been the production of a one-act opera by Chabrier entitled "An Incomplete Education." The work proved to be musically one of the delights of the season, but the plot made it clear that it would never make the grade in Boston. For it seems the opera tells the piquant yarn of a boy and a girl who get married but have somehow along the line never been tipped off as to the more subtle functions of the married estate. It is not until a crash of thunder sends the girl scurrying into the protective arms of her husband that it dawns on both that there is more to marriage than meets the eye . . .

Weather Exceptional

This, the 16th Berkshire Festival and the 14th since the Boston Symphony Orchestra moved in to replace the New York Philharmonic (which gave the first two series), has broken all attendance records. Favored by exceptionally good weather, the Festival has clocked something over 150,000 visitors so far with the final weekend beginning tonight pointing to further records.

The box office statisticians figure that a third of the visitors are from the Berkshire area, a third from the Greater New York area, and the final third from all over the United States. The attendance of people from the Boston area is too small to be included in the generality, as western Massachusetts seems to be as remote for the Greater Bostonians as California. It seems the Greater Bostonians move north and south of Boston rather than west of it. All in all, this is all for the best, too, as it provides the orchestra with two entirely different audiences . . .

While it is three years since the death of Serge Koussevitzky, it is strange how powerfully his personality is still felt at Tanglewood. A legend in his own day, he has become increasingly legendary not only to the men of the orchestra who served under him (and who, perhaps, when he was alive, found him a hard master), but to all concerned in this extraordinary musical enterprise, which now ranks with the greatest musical festivals of the world. His grave in the Lenox cemetery has long since become a sort of shrine, while his estate Serenak on a hill overlooking Tanglewood and the Stockbridge bowl, now presided over by Mrs. Koussevitzky, has become the headquarters of his Music Foundation, one that continues the cause of modern music he championed all his career . . .

Lesson from Golf

It was at Serenak, one afternoon this week, that Mrs. Koussevitzky was hostess to several hundred invited guests of the Stockbridge Bowl Association, a group dedicated to keeping the area the beautifully unspoiled area it is. An al fresco concert in a natural bowl in the woods nearby the white house found Leonard Bernstein and Lukas Foss playing music for two pianos while their exceedingly attractive wives served as page turners. As Boris Goldovsky, who was master of ceremonies, put it, the pianists weren't going to perform, they were only going to rehearse in public, as they'd never played two piano music together before and hadn't had a chance with their Tanglewood duties to rehearse. So the main performance, he said, would be that of the two page turners, accompanied by Bernstein and Foss. As it turned out, the pianists frequently had to turn the pages themselves with laughs all around. Others taking part in the special event—and one of the charms of Tanglewood for the visitor is that some special event or other is always taking place—were Doriot Anthony, first flutist of the Boston Symphony, MacMorgan, one of Mr. Goldovsky's operatic stars, and Richard Dyer-Bennet, who lives in Stockbridge.

Not the least touching event of the final week of the Tanglewood season was the retirement from the orchestra of Hippolyte Droeghmans, a cellist of the orchestra, and Raymond Allard, the orchestra's brilliant first bassoonist. Charles Munch, making one of his infrequent speeches (he cannot bear to speak), presented the two noted musicians with watches on behalf of the orchestra, and all three practically broke down as the men of the orchestra gave them a standing ovation.

As for Mr. Munch, he has fallen as hard as Eisenhower for golf and spends every spare minute on the links nearby.

THE BOSTON HERALD
FRIDAY, AUGUST 14, 1953

PARADE EVENT BEGINS FINALE AT TANGLEWOOD

Union —— 8/13

Music Lovers Gather as Festival Enters Last 4 Days; Musical Variety Theme

Lenox, Aug. 12—As the Berkshire Music Festival reaches a crescendo with this week end's finale, Tanglewood will present the annual "Parade Program" tomorrow. This jam-packed program will afford music lovers a complete picture of the attainments at the Berkshire Festival. The proceeds from this gala benefit program will assure an even greater growth in the years to come.

There will be seven continuous hours tomorrow of the parading of the highlights of music festival and associated arts. There will be simultaneous sessions of each department of the centre-department orchestras, chamber music, opera scenes, the Boston Symphony Orchestra. A lawn party will take place, and there will be waltzing on the vast lawns.

One of the highlights will be the world premiere of the one-act opera and cantata, "Bad Boys in School" by Jan Meyerowitz. Then there will be Charles Munch and the BSO in Handel and Beethoven numbers with Isaac Stern as soloist. Following will be Leonard Bernstein conducting the orchestra in Gershwins's "Porgy and Bess," with Leontyne Price and William Warfield as soloists, and the Festival Chorus, which has been so superbly trained in six weeks by Hugh Ross.

Activities of the Berkshire Music Center, currently in its 11th season, come to a close this week end, with the termination of the Berkshire Festival. The Summer School of Music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Berkshires shuts its doors on Sunday.

Thursday

Tanglewood on Parade (for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center); 3 p. m., (for boxholders and reserved seat patrons) formal gardens; 5:45 p. m., fanfare welcome by Boris Goldovsky; 6 p. m., simultaneous sessions of each department, Berkshire Music Center.

Music Shed—short symphonic works, orchestra of Department I, Theatre-Concert Hall; world premiere of one-act opera and cantata, "Bad Boys in School," by Jan Meyerowitz, by students of the associate division of Department IV; cantata, "A Little Boy Lost," by Alan Sapp, by students of Department V; Chamber Music hall, chamber music program, students of Department I; 7:15 p. m., lawn party, picnic supper, concert by chorus (students of Department II); 8:15 p. m., Music Shed—gala concert, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor; Handel, "Water Music"; Beethoven — violin concerto, soloist Isaac Stern; Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein, conductor, Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," Act II, Scenes 1 & 2, with festival chorus and soloists William Warfield, baritone, Leontyne Price, soprano; 11 p. m., awarding of special prizes by Anna Russell, international concert comedienne, followed by waltzing on the lawn.

Friday, Saturday

Friday, 8:30 p. m., Music Shed, Berkshire Festival Concert C-I, Charles Munch, conductor, in Brahms Requiem, with festival chorus and soloists Lois Marshall, soprano, William Warfield, baritone.

Saturday, 10 a. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor, in public rehearsal (benefit pension fund); 3 p. m., Music Shed, orchestra concert by students of Department I for the friends of music center; 8:30 p. m., Music Shed, Berkshire Festival Concert C2, Leonard Bernstein, conductor, Sibelius, Symphony No. 4 in A Minor, Chavez, Sinfonia India, Brahms, Symphony No. 2 in D Major.

Sunday

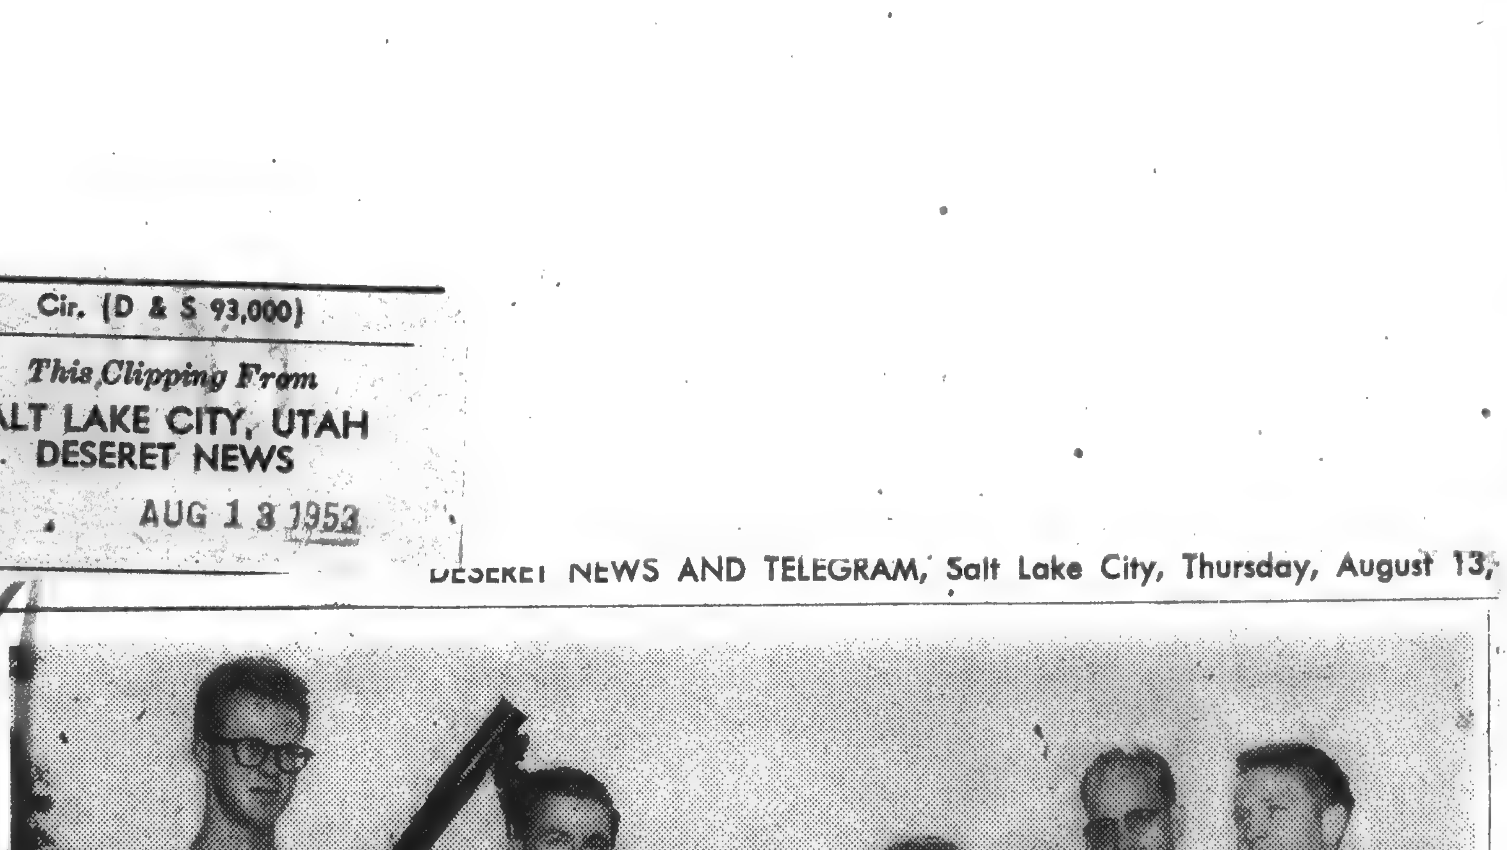
Sunday, 10 a. m., Theatre-Concert Hall, chamber music concert by students of Department I, 2:30 p. m.; Music Shed, Berkshire Festival Concert C3, Charles Munch, conductor, Schubert, Symphony in B Minor (unfinished), Chabrier, Bourree Fantasque, Wagner, Prelude and Love-Death, "Tristan und Isolde," Wagner, A Siegfried Idyll, Wagner, "Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg," excerpts from Act II (broadcast coast-to-coast by CBS radio), Ravel piano concerto for the left hand, soloist Seymour Lipkin, Ravel, "La Valse."

[284]

Cir. (D & S 93,000)

This Clipping From
SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH
DESERET NEWS
AUG 13 1953

DESERET NEWS AND TELEGRAM, Salt Lake City, Thursday, August 13,



STUDY AT MUSIC CENTER—Six Utahns are currently studying at Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., summer school maintained by the Boston Symphony. They are, standing left to right: Glenn Williams, student at B Y U, Provo; Dandold Basinger, Bountiful; Anna Hoyt, Nephi; Edward Sandgren, Ogden; Warren Burton, Salt Lake City, and, seated, left, Cherry Beauregard, Fillmore, with faculty member Seymour Lipkin.

THE ROVING EYE

By RUDOLPH ELIE

Munch, the Golf Pro, Learns 'Humoresque'

NOTES ON A TANGLEWOOD BUSH—After years of squirming in embarrassment at the necessity of having to inform visitors to this leafy music center that shorts and/or bathing suits are not exactly suitable, even if those who wear them make by their appearance a strong case to the contrary, the ingenious brass of the Berkshire Festival has come up with a solution that has made everyone happy. Practically everyone, that is.

Nowadays, when visitors arrive at the gate appareled largely in long bare legs, the gate keeper passes out large yellow apron-like skirts of a summery denim. Christian Dior's name is not on them, but they make a great hit with the ladies, who tie them on merrily and pass through into the hallowed lawns beyond.

The yellow skirts are issued to men in shorts, too, and all but the more aggressively masculine types march around in them without a murmur. Indeed, there are more photos taken of the men equipped with their yellow skirts than there are of the pines, the shed, the theater or the more photogenic girl students lounging about between classes. The nice point that remains to be settled is whether men in the English style knee-length shorts with high socks must tie on the yellow skirts. The gate keepers haven't yet had to face this crisis and, with but a few days remaining in the festival, hope they will not have to.

According to all reports, one of the higher levels of merriment in this season's student affairs has been the production of a one-act opera by Chabrier entitled "An Incomplete Education." The work proved to be musically one of the delights of the season, but the plot made it clear that it would never make the grade in Boston. For it seems the opera tells the piquant yarn of a boy and a girl who get married but have somehow along the line never been tipped off as to the more subtle functions of the married estate. It is not until a crash of thunder sends the girl scurrying into the protective arms of her husband that it dawns on both that there is more to marriage than meets the eye . . .

Weather Exceptional

This, the 16th Berkshire Festival and the 14th since the Boston Symphony Orchestra moved in to replace the New York Philharmonic (which gave the first two series), has broken all attendance records. Favored by exceptionally good weather, the Festival has clocked something over 150,000 visitors so far with the final weekend beginning tonight pointing to further records.

The box office statisticians figure that a third of the visitors are from the Berkshire area, a third from the Greater New York area, and the final third from all over the United States. The attendance of people from the Boston area is, too small to be included in the generality, as western Massachusetts seems to be as remote for the Greater Bostonians as California. It seems the Greater Bostonians move north and south of Boston rather than west of it. All in all, this is all for the best, too, as it provides the orchestra with two entirely different audiences . . .

While it is three years since the death of Serge Koussevitzky, it is strange how powerfully his personality is still felt at Tanglewood. A legend in his own day, he has become increasingly legendary not only to the men of the orchestra who served under him (and who, perhaps, when he was alive, found him a hard master), but to all concerned in this extraordinary musical enterprise, which now ranks with the greatest musical festivals of the world. His grave in the Lenox cemetery has long since become a sort of shrine, while his estate Serenak on a hill overlooking Tanglewood and the Stockbridge bowl, now presided over by Mrs. Koussevitzky, has become the headquarters of his Music Foundation, one that continues the cause of modern music he championed all his career . . .

Lesson from Golf

It was at Serenak, one afternoon this week, that Mrs. Koussevitzky was hostess to several hundred invited guests of the Stockbridge Bowl Association, a group dedicated to keeping the area the beautifully unspoiled area it is. An al fresco concert in a natural bowl in the woods nearby the white house found Leonard Bernstein and Lukas Foss playing music for two pianos while their exceedingly attractive wives served as page turners. As Boris Goldovsky, who was master of ceremonies, put it, the pianists weren't going to perform, they were only going to rehearse in public, as they'd never played two piano music together before and hadn't had a chance with their Tanglewood duties to rehearse. So the main performance, he said, would be that of the two page turners, accompanied by Bernstein and Foss. As it turned out, the pianists frequently had to turn the pages themselves with laughs all around. Others taking part in the special event—and one of the charms of Tanglewood for the visitor is that some special event or other is always taking place—were Doriot Anthony, first flutist of the Boston Symphony, MacMorgan, one of Mr. Goldovsky's operatic stars, and Richard Dyes-Bennet, who lives in Stockbridge.

Not the least touching event of the final week of the Tanglewood season was the retirement from the orchestra of Hippolyte Droeghmans, a cellist of the orchestra, and Raymond Allard, the orchestra's brilliant first bassoonist. Charles Munch, making one of his infrequent speeches (he cannot bear to speak), presented the two noted musicians with watches on behalf of the orchestra, and all three practically broke down as the men of the orchestra gave them a standing ovation.

As for Mr. Munch, he has fallen as hard as Eisenhower for golf and spends every spare minute on the links nearby.

THE BOSTON HERALD

---

begins Sunday at the Brattle.

So This Is Love—Includes a good singing performance by Kathryn Grayson (as Grace Moore) but a second-rate acting job by most everyone else. At the Metropolitan.

MUSIC and MISCELLANEOUS

Tanglewood—The music-masters put on their last show this week, and a big one. Tonight, "Tanglewood on Parade," a giant extravaganza. Friday, Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Brahms "Requiem." Saturday, Leonard Bernstein conducting Sibelius, "Symphony No. 4 in A Minor"; Chavez, "Sinfonia India"; Brahms, "Symphony No. 2 in D Major." Sunday, Munch again in a program including Schubert, Wagner, and Ravel.

Jacob's Pillow—The Berkshires' modern dance workshop puts on a good show just about every week. Ted Shawn, organizer of the group, is featured this Saturday, Jose Limon next Saturday. In Lee, down Route 20, just before Stockbridge.

PLAYS

Peg O' My Heart—Margaret O'Brien is now sixteen. She was better with pigtails. At the New England Mutual Hall.

Three Men on a Horse—Wally Cox is a pretty funny fellow, but he's better on his own. At the County Playhouse, Framingham.

The Devil's Disciple—Shaw is funny, no matter who is mouthing his lines. A competent, but by no means superlative job from the Group 20 Players. At Wellesley's Theatre-on-the-Green.

CAMBRIDGE, MASS. KI 7-1169
BILLINGS & STOVER
A Drug Store
First, Last, and Always

If You're Smart, You'll
TO Your Hairdresser
ANTOINE,
HOTEL COMMANDER KI 7-4800

Over

Claude Monteux Conductor in Columbus

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 14 (AP)—Claude Monteux, 33-year-old son of conductor Pierre Monteux, has been named director of the Columbus Little Symphony Orchestra.

Monteux will leave the faculty of his father's conducting school in Hancock, Me., to take the new post.

ON DAILY GLOBE—SATU

Cir. (D 47,518)

This Clipping From
TOLEDO, OHIO
TIMES
AUG 13 1953

Relax Or Be Dull

By FREDERICK J. KOUNTZ

THE WINTER music program from Ann Arbor has come to hand and it is quite abundant. In the two series in Hill Auditorium one may near, if he so desires, the Boston Orchestra, Virtuosi di Roma, dePaur Chorus, Chicago Orchestra, Badura-Skoda, Myra Hess, Guiomar Novaes, Guard Republican Band of Paris, and the Boston Pops Orchestra, among other matters.

I having been perusing the general program rather closely. And I have found it all rather enigmatic. Among the other matters which I did not mention at once are Roberta Peters, George London, Elena Nikolaidi, Marian Anderson, and the Cleveland Orchestra. The enigma is, as it has always been to me, the exact direction taken by entrepreneurs is ordering their concerts.

'Charles Sink is the Ann Arbor entrepreneur. And by and large Mr. Sink has assembled over many years an annual series of concerts which have given ample space to the best sellers of the year all without creating what appears to be merely a succession of showcases in which the current stars may be observed. Should I say that I have heard more excellent concerts in Ann Arbor than in any other section of the territory with easy reach, I would not be overly enthusiastic. All things considered the series in Ann Arbor have been year after year as stable and dependable as any concert series with which I am acquainted.

* * *

AND THE SERIES which Mr. Sink has arranged for the coming season present the same immediate face. The Boston Orchestra seems to have regained its stride within the last year. In any event it is a best seller wherever it goes. On the basis of their previous visit to the country the Virtuosi di Roma are impeccable. How they will be received in a hall as large as Hill Auditorium one waits to learn: The Chicago Orchestra under Reiner should be an experience. Myra Hess and Guiomar Novaes and Marian Anderson have honored the concert halls of this and other countries for many years. The Boston Pops Orchestra is, we might say, a natural any place and any time of the year. And I suspect that the Guard Republican Band of Paris, because it is a big league novelty, will be thoroughly investigated by a considerable audience. Mr. Sink faces no problems of material returns in the very near future.

And what of the rest of the assemblage? The young Badura-Skoda is a new phenomenon. He had a reputation in this country by recordings before he first set foot on our shores. I have not heard the records. But I have heard him. And it was sad; graceless Mozart and badly misquoted Cesar Franck. One was moved to wonder if the young man was moved to wonder if the was being sold as a musician or merely as a passable proficient technician.

With the Cleveland Orchestra and its conductor we h been well acquaint Szell's mastery of alr score in the literat fabulous memory, and the unvarying preciseness of his work are all sources of constant wonderment. But the fact remains that inevitably Mr. Szell gives the impression of having prepared a technically faultless performance and of having tacked on the music only as an afterthought. And so it is that he almost never turns in a living, glowing deep reaching performance.

* * *

THE SAME is true in a sense of the dePaur group. They sing with excellent enunciation of sounds and words; their performances are vigorously inclined; their exactitude is unquestioned. But in their hands all music sounds pretty much the same. One hears them the first time and is amazed. One hears them again and they begin to pall because, regardless of program material, the highly polished surface—how much is there beneath it?—has been seen before. Of the singers, Roberta Peters, George London, and Elena Nikolaidi, one is aware of blooming reputations without ever being able to discover from one performance to the next consistent reasons for the blooming.

We find the Ann Arbor offerings sure fire and questionable. The enigma to me is how the questionable ones who never progress much beyond a questionable state continue to appear season after season—until they are irreparably worn out, actually and in the estimation of their audiences. Incidentally this wearing out is consummated more quickly in some than in others. And one is not sad about it. But there are so many others, young and old, who are thorough musicians. And on these standard concert series they are too little heard. I have never discovered the reason — except that inescapable box office statistics matter. And I would like to think that it is not so important as it used to be.

In the case of these allegedly talented younger people and of the capable [illegible] old older ones somethin pening. And i Consider the p arisen in Cle years it has l fill Severance guest conducto soloists. That why he no longer attended the concerts. "I am not sure I can explain it exactly," he said. "But I kept noticing that whereas I hear some concerts with delight and appetite, unschooled though I am, I was finding it a progressive chore to listen to these. So far as I know, everything was right. And maybe that was the trouble. It was so right that it was cold and lifeless and I usually fell asleep."

I cannot be sure that my informer was entirely correct even about his own reactions. But he was getting at a point. And I do not segregate the Cleveland Orchestra as the lone example of the point in question. There are hundreds of other examples all over the country.

But this happened: In the last 20 years we have tended to put a high premium on technical prefection. In many cases we put it first. In due time the technical prefection of itself began to be heavy. And now this is happening. We still desire the technical security, the background of knowledge and sound experience. But we want with it a warmth, a musical and personal insight, humanity and humility perhaps. And as often as not we have found the expert, unrelaxed mechanic an unmitigated bore. We are beginning to learn that music is something in itself quite superior to the means which reproduce it.

This, I suspect, is musical progress, genuine artistic awakening. Also it is something for the Entrepreneurs to keep in mind.

Preparing for Lenox Opera

—Whitestone Photo

Boris Goldovsky prepares a dramatic moment in rehearsal of Gretry's opera, "Richard, the Lion-Hearted," performed at Tanglewood in Lenox, Berkshire Music Center. Shown with Goldovsky are Alvin Edmonson as the king and Lois McCauley as the Countess of Flanders.

Goldovsky Revives Old Opera, Capably Sung by Young Cast

By DONALD H. WHITE
Standard-Times Special Writer

LENOX, Aug. 13—Boris Goldovsky, one of the most unusual operatic personalities in America, has done it again. An opera nobody except musical experts ever has known, an opera not performed in this country since 1800—Andre Gretry's "Richard, the Lion-Hearted" was chosen as this season's stage vehicle for the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood.

In past seasons the Goldovsky forces have offered eminently successful revivals of such masterworks as Mozart's "Titus," "La Finta Giardiniera" and "Idomeneo," Gluck's "Iphigenia in Tauris," Britten's "Albert Herring" and "Peter Grimes" and Rossini's "Turk in Italy." From the tragic genius of Mozart's "Titus," performed last Summer at Tanglewood, the genial director has now turned to this little-known though highly rewarding work of the 18th Century comic opera master, Gretry.

In his opening-night remarks, Goldovsky again gave tribute to the crusading musical spirit of Serge Koussevitsky, late conductor of the Boston Symphony, whose artistic dream included the experimental Theater-Concert Hall as part of the Tanglewood installations.

"It is always a great pleasure to bring to life something known hitherto only in history books," Goldovsky said, referring to the genre score and background of the Gretry work. The opera is a potpourri of many styles and approaches incorporating the leit motiv (descriptive motive recurring throughout the piece, so exploited later by Wagner.

Plot Is Outlined

The plot of "Richard, the Lion-Hearted" harks back to the famed story of the search for the captured English monarch made by his minstrel, Blondel. During Crusades in the Holy Land, the king was captured by the Saracens and later incarcerated in an Austrian prison. The device of the leit motiv is used extensively here to identify the song which Blondel repeatedly sings during his wanderings, hoping [illegible] day his king will hear [illegible] reply: A popular ballad of its day which even became involved in political matters during the French Revolution—"O Richard O Mon Roi."

As is the custom at [illegible] wood, the cast was made up of young, somewhat inexperienced singers, some of whom were receiving their first stage opportunities. Leading roles were assumed by such capable and dramatically agile singers as Le[illegible] Cass, remembered by local music lovers for his soloist's role in the Godreau "Messiah" a s[illegible] Christmas; John McCollum, a fin[illegible] tenor who dominated the action continually in the role of the minstrel, Blondel, and R[illegible] Elias, as his romantically-inclined guide, Antonio.

A feature of the performance was the exceptionally well-enunciated choral singing by a ma[illegible] octet, trained by Sarah Caldwe[illegible] Mr. Goldovsky's able assistan[illegible] Since the opera was translate[illegible] into English, it was a distin[illegible] pleasure to be able to understan[illegible] a great deal of the action throu[illegible] its crisp and tidy diction. Such [illegible] rarely the case of the usual translated work.

The settings were highly imaginative and made use of scenery by light projections, designed by John Blankenchip, a new name in the stage department of Tanglewood. His first act set featured a rather stylized castle rampart, fantastic pineapple-shaped trees and a projected fortress which might be labeled a la Maxfield Parish or Disney. However, the later projection of the gates of the castle, viewed through a transparent scrim curtain while soldiers fought a convincing battle in silhouette, was most impressive. This particular effect was by far the best projection work we have ever seen. Its greatest opportunity for success, however, is not in the comic opera repertoire but in Wagnerian works and late Verdi dramas.

The second act scenery showing the fortress-castle in closeup was ingenious and judging by the appreciative audience response, most charming of the evening. Here a small drawbridge was lowered in response to trumpet calls by members of the Austrian guard and the chain-mailed chorus entered a cleverly constructed miniature fort. One was reminded of a drill of tin-soldiers in combination with Klingsor's magic castle as seen in Wagner's "Parsifal." This was far more solid canvas real estate than usually is allotted to the characters of the opera stage.

Sumptuous to the Eye

Sumptuous to the eye and overwhelmingly accurate in historical detail were the magnificent costumes designed by the talented Leo Van Witsen. Their combination of pastel and luxurious dark shades were vivid in their extreme contrast. The chain mail hauberks of the guards, combined with tabard-like emblazonings of lions pointed up the brilliant palette used for this production. The final tableau was reminiscent of the "commedia del arte" style with its blending of bright red velvet, blue and pale green tones.

Presiding at his invisible station in the orchestra pit, Mr. Goldovsky served several times as a rather vocal prompter. However, the slips were few and the fine moments quite numerous. These young singers can thank him for the introduction to another fascinating historical work and also the opportunity to participate in one of his integrated productions. "Richard, the Lion-Hearted" joins the long roster of Tanglewood opera successes only through the unique privilege of having been given "the Goldosky treatment."

Big Tourist Week End Shaping

Eagle 8/14

Continued muggy weather in metropolitan New York will bring one of the biggest week-end influxes in the history of the Berkshires, John F. Downing, executive director of the Berkshire Hills Conference, predicted today.

"We have been staying on top of all requests and reservations all week," Downing said, "but this morning a deluge of calls began. Unfortunately last-minute calls, especially from those who plan to stay over only on Saturday night, have to be relegated, more or less, to the potluck department."

Most people who take in guests, other than the professional hostelries and tourist houses, hold off on accepting reservations for the one-nighters until they are sure they won't have people who will stay two nights or more.

Downing said his office has been receiving many thank-you notes from guests who were in the area last week end for the service and accommodations that were afforded them. He said he would forward the letters to the various information centers through the county with which the Conference co-operates.

---

25 NEW YORK POST, THURSDAY, AUGUST 13, 1953

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Berkshire Festival Ends Sunday

The Berkshire Festival begins its final week-end of music-making today with its annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, "Tanglewood on Parade." Festivities for the event will include demonstrations by every [illegible] r music school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, climaxing in a gala concert at 8:15 in the Music Shed. Charles Munch will conduct the Bostonians for the initial half of this program assisted by Isaac Stern as soloist in the Beethoven Violin Concerto.

For the latter half, Leonard Bernstein will be on the podium to lead the Bostonians in excerpts from Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess." Leontyne Price, soprano, currently playing Bess in the Broadway revival at the Ziegfeld, and William Warfield, baritone, will be soloists, assisted by the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

Beginning at 4 p.m., the "Tanglewood on Parade" program includes a world premiere of a one-act opera by Jan Meyerowitz, "Bad Boys in School," and "A Little Boy Lost," a cantata by Alan Sapp. There will be a lawn party and picnic supper at 7:15 followed by waltzing on the lawn at 11 p.m. Anna Russell, international concert comedienne, will be present at a [illegible] z party to draw [illegible]

Brahms 'Requiem' Friday

[illegible] series tomorrow [illegible] with [illegible] performance [illegible] German Requiem [illegible] conduct-[illegible] Mar-[illegible] soprano, [illegible] field soloists, [illegible] by the [illegible] Chorus. [illegible] will [illegible] all-[illegible] pro-[illegible] turday [illegible] follows: [illegible] Fourth Symphony, the [illegible] in D [illegible] India" [illegible] concert, Sunday [illegible] finished [illegible] plus miscellaneous excerpts from Wagner operas. Seymour Lipkin, pianist, will be soloist [illegible] Ravel Piano Concerto for the left hand.

MARSHALL

14, 1953

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS.

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
Eagle by the 8/14
Boston Sympl
CHARLES MUN
Closing
TONIGHT (Aug. 14) at
Soloists—LOIS MARSHAI
TOMORROW (Aug. 15) at 8:3
SUN. (Aug. 16) at 2:30—Sol
Reserved seats from Boston Symphony Rehear
Admis

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
Union by the 8/14
BOSTON SYMPHONY
Orchestra
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
CLOSING CONCERTS
TONIGHT (Aug. 14) at 8:30 BRAHMS' REQUIEM, Soloists - LOIS MARSHALL, WILLIAM WARFIELD
TOMORROW (Aug. 15) at 8:30 - LEONARD BERNSTEIN Conducting
SUN., (Aug. 16) at 2.30 - Soloist, SEYMOUR LIPKIN, Piano.
Reserved seats from $2.50, Gen'l Adm. $2.

[205]

Claude Monteux Conductor in Columbus

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 14 (AP)—Claude Monteux, 33-year-old son of conductor Pierre Monteux, has been named director of the Columbus Little Symphony Orchestra.

Monteux will leave the faculty of his father's conducting school in Hancock, Me., to take the new post.

N DAILY GLOBE—SATU

Preparing for Lenox Opera

nal, trying, mostly without success, to spot relatives.

T-Sgt. William R. Ray, 22, of Brentwood road, Woburn, was the first to meet with success, rushing into the arms of his attractive wife, ginia, 20. Seconds later he was acquainted with a daughter, little over two years old. just over a year, Ray d in the skirmishes and Heartbreak nze Star and he was cces-

Germ Warfare Story Forced

3 Fliers Say Choice Was 'Confess or Die'

By ROBERT B. TUCKMAN

INCHON, Korea, Sept. 8 (AP)—Three returned fliers said yesterday they "confessed" under torture d death threats that they waged warfare" and one expected rested for treason when

So

In

Can vealed year Somerv kidnapi old Ca The ing hero ing the an unid brought ters. There them a

---

Cir. (D 47,518)

This Clipping From
TOLEDO, OHIO
TIMES
AUG 13 195

Relax Or Be Dull

By FREDERICK J. KOUNTZ

THE WINTER music program from Ann Arbor has come to hand and it is quite abundant. In the two series in Hill Auditorium one may near, if he so desires, the Boston Orchestra, Virtuosi di Roma, dePaur Chorus, Chicago Orchestra, Badura-Skoda, Myra Hess, Guiomar Novaes, Guard Republican Band of Paris, and the Boston Pops Orchestra, among other matters.

I having been perusing the general program rather closely. And I have found it all rather enigmatic. Among the other matters which I did not mention at once are Roberta Peters, George London, Elena Nikolaidi, Marian Anderson, and the Cleveland Orchestra. The enigma is, as it has always been to me, the exact direction taken by entrepreneurs is ordering their concerts.

'Charles Sink is the Ann Arbor entrepreneur. And by and large Mr. Sink has assembled over many years an annual series of concerts which have given ample space to the best sellers of the year all without creating what appears to be merely a succession of showcases in which the current stars may be observed. Should I say that I have heard more excellent concerts in Ann Arbor than in any other section of the territory with easy reach, I would not be overly enthusiastic. All things considered the series in Ann Arbor have been year after year as stable and dependable as any concert series with which I am acquainted.

* * *

AND THE SERIES which Mr. Sink has arranged for the coming season present the same immediate face. The Boston Orchestra seems to have regained its stride within the last year. In any event it is a best seller wherever it goes. On the basis of their previous visit to the country the Virtuosi di Roma are impeccable. How they will be received in a hall as large as Hill Auditorium one waits to learn: The Chicago Orchestra under Reiner should be an experience. Myra Hess and Guiomar Novaes and Marian Anderson have honored the concert halls of this and other countries for many years. The Boston Pops Orchestra is, we might say, a natural any place and any time of the year. And I suspect that the Guard Republican Band of Paris, because it is a big league novelty, will be thoroughly investigated by a considerable audience. Mr. Sink faces no problems of material returns in the very near future.

And what of the rest of the assemblage? The young Badura-Skoda is a new phenomenon. He had a reputation in this country by recordings before he first set foot on our shores. I have not heard the records. But I have heard him. And it was sad; graceless Mozart and badly misquoted Cesar Franck. One was moved to wonder if the young man was moved to wonder if the was being sold as a musician or merely as a passable proficient technician.

With the Cleveland Orchestra and its conductor we have long been well acquainted. Mr. Szell's mastery of almost any score in the literature, his fabulous memory, and the unvarying preciseness of his work are all sources of constant wonderment. But the fact remains that inevitably Mr. Szell gives the impression of having prepared a technically faultless performance and of having tacked on the music only as an afterthought. And so it is that he almost never turns in a living, glowing deep reaching performance.

* * *

THE SAME is true in a sense of the dePaur group. They sing with excellent enunciation of sounds and words; their performances are vigorously inclined; their exactitude is unquestioned. But in their hands all music sounds pretty much the same. One hears them the first time and is amazed. One hears them again and they begin to pall because, regardless of program material, the highly polished surface—how much is there beneath it?—has been seen before. Of the singers, Roberta Peters, George London, and Elena Nikolaidi, one is aware of blooming reputations without ever being able to discover from one performance to the next consistent reasons for the blooming.

We find the Ann Arbor offerings sure fire and questionable. The enigma to me is how the questionable ones who never progress much beyond a questionable state continue to appear season after season—until they are irreparably worn out, actually and in the estimation of their audiences. Incidentally this wearing out is consummated more quickly in some than in others. And one is not sad about it. But there are so many others, young and old, who are thorough musicians. And on these standard concert series they are too little heard. I have never discovered the reason — except that inescapable box office statistics matter. And I would like to think that it is not so important as it used to be.

In the case of these allegedly talented younger people and of the capable and cold older ones something has been happening. And it is heartening. Consider the problem that has arisen in Cleveland. Of late years it has been difficult to fill Severance Hall without guest conductors or established soloists. That is fact, not opinion. An alarming fact in some sections of Cleveland. Yet there is no allegation that Mr. Szell is slipping, is losing his grip. Nor is it heard that the Cleveland Ochestra has not become a very proficient unit under his guidance.

Last winter I asked an average fellow in Cleveland why he no longer attended the concerts. "I am not sure I can explain it exactly," he said. "But I kept noticing that whereas I hear some concerts with delight and appetite, unschooled though I am, I was finding it a progressive chore to listen to these. So far as I know, everything was right. And maybe that was the trouble. It was so right that it was cold and lifeless and I usually fell asleep."

I cannot be sure that my informer was entirely correct even about his own reactions. But he was getting at a point. And I do not segregate the Cleveland Orchestra as the lone example of the point in question. There are hundreds of other examples all over the country.

But this happened. In the last 20 years we have tended to put a high premium on technical prefection. In many cases we put it first. In due time the technical prefection of itself began to be heavy. And now this is happening. We still desire the technical security, the background of knowledge and sound experience. But we want with it a warmth, a musical and personal insight, humanity and humility perhaps. And as often as not we have found the expert, unrelaxed mechanic an unmitigated bore. We are beginning to learn that music is something in itself quite superior to the means which reproduce it.

This, I suspect, is musical progress, genuine artistic awakening. Also it is something for the Entrepreneurs to keep in mind.

THE STANDARD-TIMES, NEW BEDFORD, MASS., THURSDAY, AUGUST 13, 1953

Goldovsky Revives Old Opera, Capably Sung by Young Cast

By DONALD H. WHITE

Standard-Times Special Writer

LENOX, Aug. 13—Boris Goldovsky, one of the most unusual operatic personalities in Amer- has done it again. An opera cept musical experts nown, an opera not in this country since e Gretry's "Richard, earted" was chosen as n's stage vehicle for the partment of the Berk- usic Center at Tangle-

st seasons the Goldovsky have offered eminently ful revivals of such mas- rks as Mozart's "Titus," inta Giardiniera" and "Ido- o," Gluck's "Iphigenia in is," Britten's "Albert Herring" and "Peter Grimes" and sini's "Turk in Italy." From tragic genius of Mozart's itus," performed last Summer Tanglewood, the genial direc- or has now turned to this little-known though highly rewarding work of the 18th Century comic opera master, Gretry.

In his opening-night remarks, Goldovsky again gave tribute to the crusading musical spirit of Serge Koussevitsky, late conductor of the Boston Symphony, whose artistic dream included the experimental Theater-Concert Hall as part of the Tanglewood installations.

"It is always a great pleasure to bring to life something known hitherto only in history books," Goldovsky said, referring to the genre score and background of the Gretry work. The opera is a potpourri of many styles and approaches incorporating the leit motiv (descriptive motive recurring throughout the piece) so exploited later by Wagner.

Plot Is Outlined

The plot of "Richard, the Lion-Hearted" harks back to the famed story of the search for the captured English monarch made by his minstrel, Blondel. During Crusades in the Holy Land, the king was captured by the Saracens and later incarcerated in an Austrian prison. The device of the leit motiv is used extensively here to identify the song which Blondel repeatedly sings during his wanderings, hoping that som day his king will hear it and r ply: A popular ballad of its da which even became involved i political matters during th French Revolution—"O Richar O Mon Roi."

As is the custom at Tangl wood, the cast was made up o young, somewhat inexperience singers, some of whom were r ceiving their first stage oppo tunities. Leading roles were a sumed by such capable and dr matically agile singers as Le Cass, remembered by local m sic lovers for his soloist's role the Godreau "Messiah" a s Christmas; John McCollum, a fin tenor who dominated the actio continually in the role of th minstrel, Blondel, and Rosalin Elias, as his romantically-i clined guide, Antonio.

A feature of the performan was the exceptionally well-enu ciated choral singing by a ma octet, trained by Sarah Caldwe Mr. Goldovsky's able assista Since the opera was translat into English, it was a distin pleasure to be able to understa a great deal of the action throu its crisp and tidy diction. Such rarely the case of the usual tra lated work.

The settings were highly i aginative and made use of scen ry by light projections, design by John Blankenchip, a new nam in the stage department Tanglewood. His first act set fea tured a rather stylized castle rampart, fantastic pineapple-shaped trees and a projected fortress which might be labeled a la Maxfield Parish or Disney. However, the later projection of the gates of the castle, viewed through a transparent scrim curtain while soldiers fought a convincing battle in silhouette, was most impressive. This particular effect was by far the best projection work we have ever seen. Its greatest opportunity for success, however, is not in the comic opera repertoire but in Wagnerian works and late Verdi dramas.

The second act scenery showing the fortress-castle in closeup was ingenious and judging by the appreciative audience response, most charming of the evening. Here a small drawbridge was lowered in response to trumpet calls by members of the Austrian guard and the chain-mailed chorus entered a cleverly constructed miniature fort. One was reminded of a drill of tin-soldiers in combination with Klingsor's magic castle as seen in Wagner's "Parsifal." This was far more solid canvas real estate than usually is allotted to the characters of the opera stage.

Sumptuous to the Eye

Sumptuous to the eye and overwhelmingly accurate in historical detail were the magnificent costumes designed by the talented Leo Van Witsen. Their combination of pastel and luxurious dark shades were vivid in their extreme contrast. The chain mail hauberks of the guards, combined with tabard-like emblazonings of lions pointed up the brilliant palette used for this production. The final tableau was reminiscent of the "commedia del arte" style with its blending of bright red velvet, blue and pale green tones.

Presiding at his invisible station in the orchestra pit, Mr. Goldovsky served several times as a ther vocal prompter. However, e slips were few and the fine oments quite numerous. These ung singers can thank him for e introduction to another fas- nating historical work and also e opportunity to participate in e of his integrated productions. "Richard, the Lion-Hearted" ns the long roster of Tanglewood opera successes only rough the unique privilege of ing been given "the Goldosky eatment."

Big Tourist Week End Shaping

Eagle 8/14

Continued muggy weather in metropolitan New York will bring one of the biggest week-end influxes in the history of the Berkshires, John F. Downing, executive director of the Berkshire Hills Conference, predicted today.

"We have been staying on top of all requests and reservations all week," Downing said, "but this morning a deluge of calls began. Unfortunately last-minute calls, especially from those who plan to stay over only on Saturday night, have to be relegated, more or less, to the potluck department."

Most people who take in guests, other than the professional hostelries and tourist houses, hold off on accepting reservations for the one-nighters until they are sure they won't have people who will stay two nights or more.

Downing said his office has been receiving many thank-you notes from guests who were in the area last week end for the service and accommodations that were afforded them. He said he would forward the letters to the various information centers through the county with which the Conference co-operates.

---

25 NEW YORK POST, THURSDAY, AUGUST 13, 1953

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Berkshire Festival Ends Sunday

The Berkshire Festival begins its final week-end of music-making today with its annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, "Tanglewood on Parade." Festivities for the event will include demonstrations by every r music school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, climaxing in a gala concert at 8:15 in the Music Shed. Charles Munch will conduct the Bostonians for the initial half of this program assisted by Isaac Stern as soloist in the Beethoven Violin Concerto.

For the latter half, Leonard Bernstein will be on the podium to lead the Bostonians in excerpts from Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess." Leontyne Price, soprano, currently playing Bess in the Broadway revival at the Ziegfeld, and William Warfield, baritone, will be soloists, assisted by the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

Beginning at 4 p.m., the "Tanglewood on Parade" program includes a world premiere of a one-act opera by Jan Meyerowitz, "Bad Boys in School," and "A Little Boy Lost," a cantata by Alan Sapp. There will be a lawn party and picnic supper at 7:15 followed by waltzing on the lawn at 11 p.m. Anna Russell, international concert comedie will be present at the waltz p to draw for door prizes.

Brahms 'Requiem' Friday

The third and final m se of the Festival opens t nor night w a performa of the "Germ Requiem m Munch cond in S Mar soprano, and W field will be soloists, assisted by the Festival Chorus.

Bernstein will conduct an all- program Saturday night as follows: Sibelius Fourth Symphony, the Symphony in D "India" Brahms' Second Major, and concert, Sunday by unfinished day, Symphony by Schubert plus miscellaneous excerpts from Wagner operas. Seymour Lipkin, pianist, will be soloist in the Piano Concerto for the hand.

MARSHALL

OOD, LENOX, MASS.

IRE

sing

TO (Aug. 14) at

Soloists S MARSHAL

TOMORROW (Aug. 15) at 8:3

SUN. (Aug. 16) at 2:30—So

Reserved seats from

Boston Symphony Rehear

Admis

NOX, MASS.

FESTIVAL

the 8/14

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

Union by the 8/14

BOSTON SYMPHONY

Orchestra

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

CLOSING CONCERTS

TONIGHT (Aug. 14) at 8:30 BRAHMS' REQUIEM, Soloists - LOIS MARSHALL, WILLIAM WARFIELD

TOMORROW (Aug. 15) at 8:30 - LEONARD BERNSTEIN Conducting

SUN., (Aug. 16) at 2.30 - Soloist, SEYMOUR LIPKIN, Piano.

Reserved seats from $2.50, Gen'l Adm. $2.

[285]

Claude Monteux Conductor in Columbus

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 14 (AP)—Claude Monteux, 33-year-old son of conductor Pierre Monteux, has been named director of the Columbus Little Symphony Orchestra.

Monteux will leave the faculty of his father's conducting school in Hancock, Me., to take the new post.

ON DAILY GLOBE—SATU

Cir. (D 47,518)

This Clipping From
TOLEDO, OHIO
TIMES
AUG 13 19[illegible]

Relax Or Be Dull

By FREDERICK J. KOUNTZ

THE WINTER music program from Ann Arbor has come to hand and it is quite abundant. In the two series in Hill Auditorium one may near, if he so desires, the Boston Orchestra, Virtuosi di Roma, dePaur Chorus, Chicago Orchestra, Badura-Skoda, Myra Hess, Guiomar Novaes, Guard Republican Band of Paris, and the Boston Pops Orchestra, among other matters.

I having been perusing the general program rather closely. And I have found it all rather enigmatic. Among the other matters which I did not mention at once are Roberta Peters, George London, Elena Nikolaidi, Marian Anderson, and the Cleveland Orchestra. The enigma is, as it has always been to me, the exact direction taken by entrepreneurs is ordering their concerts.

'Charles Sink is the Ann Arbor entrepreneur. And by and large Mr. Sink has assembled over many years an annual series of concerts which have given ample space to the best sellers of the year all without creating what appears to be merely a succession of showcases in which the current stars may be observed. Should I say that I have heard more excellent concerts in Ann Arbor than in any other section of the territory with easy reach, I would not be overly enthusiastic. All things considered the series in Ann Arbor have been year after year as stable and dependable as any concert series with which I am acquainted.

* * *

AND THE SERIES which Mr. Sink has arranged for the coming season present the same immediate face. The Boston Orchestra seems to have regained its stride within the last year. In any event it is a best seller wherever it goes. On the basis of their previous visit to the country the Virtuosi di Roma are impeccable. How they will be received in a hall as large as Hill Auditorium one waits to learn: The Chicago Orchestra under Reiner should be an experience. Myra Hess and Guiomar Novaes and Marian Anderson have honored the concert halls of this and other countries for many years. The Boston Pops Orchestra is, we might say, a natural any place and any time of the year. And I suspect that the Guard Republican Band of Paris, because it is a big league novelty, will be thoroughly investigated by a considerable audience. Mr. Sink faces no problems of material returns in the very near future.

And what of the rest of the assemblage? The young Badura-Skoda is a new phenomenon. He had a reputation in this country by recordings before he first set foot on our shores. I have not heard the records. But I have heard him. And it was sad; graceless Mozart and badly misquoted Cesar Franck. One was moved to wonder if the young man was moved to wonder if the was being sold as a musician or merely as a passable proficient technician.

With the Cleveland Orchestra and its conductor we have long been well acquainted. Mr. Szell's mastery of almost any score in the literature, his fabulous memory, and the unvarying preciseness of his work are all sources of constant wonderment. But the fact remains that inevitably Mr. Szell gives the impression of having prepared a technically faultless performance and of having tacked on the music only as an afterthought. And so it is that he almost never turns in a living, glowing deep reaching performance.

* * *

THE SAME is true in a sense of the dePaur group. They sing with excellent enunciation of sounds and words; their performances are vigorously inclined; their exactitude is unquestioned. But in their hands all music sounds pretty much the same. One hears them the first time and is amazed. One hears them again and they begin to pall because, regardless of program material, the highly polished surface—how much is there beneath it?—has been seen before. Of the singers, Roberta Peters, George London, and Elena Nikolaidi, one is aware of blooming reputations without ever being able to discover from one performance to the next consistent reasons for the blooming.

We find the Ann Arbor offerings sure fire and questionable. The enigma to me is how the questionable ones who never progress much beyond a questionable state continue to appear season after season—until they are irreparably worn out, actually and in the estimation of their audiences. Incidentally this wearing out is consummated more quickly in some than in others. And one is not sad about it. But there are so many others, young and old, who are thorough musicians. And on these standard concert series they are too little heard. I have never discovered the reason — except that inescapable box office statistics matter. And I would like to think that it is not so important as it used to be.

In the case of these allegedly talented younger people and of the capable ones somethin pening. And i
Consider the p
arisen in Cle
years it has fill Severance
guest conducto soloists. That opinion. An alarming fact in some sections of Cleveland. Yet there is no allegation that Mr. Szell is slipping, is losing his grip. Nor is it heard that the Cleveland Ochestra has not become a very proficient unit under his guidance.

Last winter I asked an average fellow in Cleveland why he no longer attended the concerts. "I am not sure I can explain it exactly," he said. "But I kept noticing that whereas I hear some concerts with delight and appetite, unschooled though I am, I was finding it a progressive chore to listen to these. So far as I know, everything was right. And maybe that was the trouble. It was so right that it was cold and lifeless and I usually fell asleep."

I cannot be sure that my informer was entirely correct even about his own reactions. But he was getting at a point. And I do not segregate the Cleveland Orchestra as the lone example of the point in question. There are hundreds of other examples all over the country.

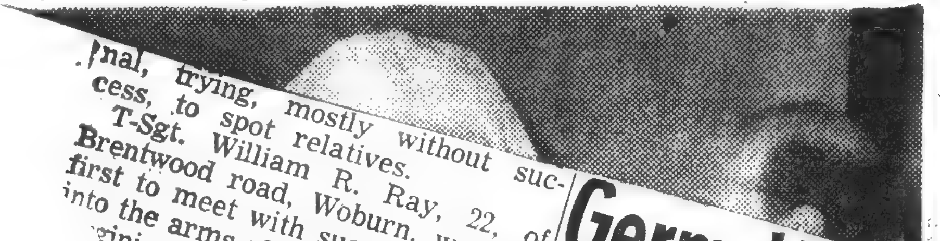
But this happened. In the last 20 years we have tended to put a high premium on technical prefection. In many cases we put it first. In due time the technical prefection of itself began to be heavy. And now this is happening. We still desire the technical security, the background of knowledge and sound experience. But we want with it a warmth, a musical and personal insight, humanity and humility perhaps. And as often as not we have found the expert, unrelaxed mechanic an unmitigated bore. We are beginning to learn that music is something in itself quite superior to the means which reproduce it.

This, I suspect, is musical progress, genuine artistic awakening. Also it is something for the Entrepreneurs to keep in mind.

[285]

THE STANDARD-TIMES, NEW BEDFORD, MASS., THURSDAY, AUG T 13, 1953 *

Preparing for Lenox Opera



nal, trying, mostly without success, to spot relatives.
T-Sgt. William R. Ray, 22, of Brentwood road, Woburn, was the first to meet with success, rushing into the arms of his attractive wife, ginia, 20. Seconds later he was acquainted with a daughter, little over two years old.
just over a year, Ray
d in the skirmishes and Heartbreak nze Star and he was cces-

Germ Warfare Story Forced

3 Fliers Say Choice Was 'Confess or Die'

By ROBERT B. TUCKMAN

INCHON, Korea, Sept. 8 (AP)—Three returned fliers said yesterday they "confessed" under torture d death threats that they waged warfare" and one expected rested for treason when

So
In

Can
veal year Somerv
kidnapi old Car
The g ing he ing the an unid brough
ters.
There them a re vas nual

e add e univ

Goldovsky Revives Old Opera, Capably Sung by Young Cast

By DONALD H. WHITE
Standard-Times Special Writer

LENOX, Aug. 13—Boris Goldovsky, one of the most unusual operatic personalities in Amer-has done it again. An opera ept musical experts nown, an opera not in this country since
e Gretry's "Richard, earted" was chosen as n's stage vehicle for the partment of the Berk-usic Center at Tangle-

st seasons the Goldovsky have offered eminently ful revivals of such mas-rks as Mozart's "Titus," inta Giardiniera" and "Idoo," Gluck's "Iphigenia in is," Britten's "Albert Her-
" and "Peter Grimes" and sini's "Turk in Italy." From tragic genius of Mozart's itus," performed last Summer
Tanglewood, the genial direc-or has now turned to this little-known though highly rewarding work of the 18th Century comic opera master, Gretry.

In his opening-night remarks, Goldovsky again gave tribute to the crusading musical spirit of Serge Koussevitsky, late conductor of the Boston Symphony, whose artistic dream included the experimental Theater-Concert Hall as part of the Tanglewood installations.

"It is always a great pleasure to bring to life something known hitherto only in history books." Goldovsky said, referring to the genre score and background of the Gretry work. The opera is a potpourri of many styles and approaches incorporating the leit motiv (descriptive motive recurring throughout the piece) so exploited later by Wagner.

Plot Is Outlined

The plot of "Richard, the Lion-Hearted" harks back to the famed story of the search for the captured English monarch made by his minstrel, Blondel. During Crusades in the Holy Land, the king was captured by the Saracens and later incarcerated in an Austrian prison. The device of the leit motiv is used extensively here to identify the song which Blondel repeatedly sings during his wanderings, hoping that so day his king will hear it and ply: A popular ballad of it's which even became involved political matters during French Revolution—"O Richa
O Mon Roi."

As is the custom at Tang wood, the cast was made up young, somewhat inexperien singers, some of whom were ceiving their first stage op tunities. Leading roles were sumed by such capable and matically agile singers as Cass, remembered by local sic lovers for his soloist's rol
the Godreau "Messiah" Christmas; John McCollum, a tenor who dominated the ac continually in the role of minstrel, Blondel, and Rosa Elias, as his romanticall clined guide, Antonio.

A feature of the performa was the exceptionally well-e ciated choral singing by a octet, trained by Sarah Cald
Mr. Goldovsky's able assis
Since the opera was transl into English, it was a dis pleasure to be able to unders a great deal of the action thro its crisp and tidy diction. Su rarely the case of the usual t lated work.

The settings were highly aginative and made use of s ry by light projections, desi by John Blankenchip, a new in the stage department Tanglewood. His first act set tured a rather stylized castle ra part, fantastic pineapple-shaped trees and a projected fortress which might be labeled a la Ma field Parish or Disney. However, the later projection of the gates of the castle, viewed through a transparent scrim curtain while soldiers fought a convincing battle in silhouette, was most impressive. This particular effect was by far the best projection work we have ever seen. Its greatest opportunity for success, however, is not in the comic opera repertoire but in Wagnerian works and late Verdi dramas.

The second act scenery showing the fortress-castle in closeup was ingenious and judging by the appreciative audience response, most charming of the evening. Here a small drawbridge was lowered in response to trumpet calls by members of the Austrian guard and the chain-mailed chorus entered a cleverly constructed miniature fort. One was reminded of a drill of tin-soldiers in combination with Klingsor's magic castle as seen in Wagner's "Parsifal." This was far more solid canvas real estate than usually is allotted to the characters of the opera stage.

Sumptuous to the Eye

Sumptuous to the eye and overwhelmingly accurate in historical detail were the magnificent costumes designed by the talented Leo Van Witsen. Their combination of pastel and luxurious dark shades were vivid in their extreme contrast. The chain mail hauberks of the guards, combined with tabard-like embla-onings of lions pointed up the rilliant palette used for this prouction. The final tableau was miniscent of the "commedia el arte" style with its blending bright red velvet, blue and pale een tones.

Presiding at his invisible stan in the orchestra pit, Mr. Golvsky served several times as a ther vocal prompter. However, e slips were few and the fine ments quite numerous. These ung singers can thank him for e introduction to another fasating historical work and also e opportunity to participate in e of his integrated productions.
Richard, the Lion-Hearted"
s the long roster of Tangle-od opera successes only ough the unique privilege of ing been given "the Goldosky tment."

Big Tourist Week End Shaping

Eagle 8/14

Continued muggy weather in metropolitan New York will bring one of the biggest week-end influxes in the history of the Berkshires, John F. Downing, executive director of the Berkshire Hills Conference, predicted today.

"We have been staying on top of all requests and reservations all week," Downing said, "but this morning a deluge of calls began. Unfortunately last-minute calls, especially from those who plan to stay over only on Saturday night, have to be relegated, more or less, to the potluck department."

Most people who take in guests, other than the professional hostelries and tourist houses, hold off on accepting reservations for the one-nighters until they are sure they won't have people who will stay two nights or more.

Downing said his office has been receiving many thank-you notes from guests who were in the area last week end for the service and accommodations that were afforded them. He said he would forward the letters to the various information centers through the county with which the Conference co-operates.

---

25 NEW YORK POST, THURSDAY, AUGUST 13, 1953

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Berkshire Festival Ends Sunday

The Berkshire Festival begins its final week-end of music-making today with its annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, "Tanglewood on Parade." Festivities for the event will include demonstrations by every r music school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, climaxing in a gala concert at 8:15 in the Music Shed. Charles Munch will conduct the Bostonians for the initial half of this program assisted by Isaac Stern as soloist in the Beethoven Violin Concerto.

For the latter half, Leonard Bernstein will be on the podium in excerpts orgy and
, soprano,
ss in the the Ziegfield, bari-assisted by Chorus.
p.m., the rade" prold premiere
Jan Meyero-
chool," and a cantata by ll be a lawn per at 7:15
ng on the Russell, inte national concert con will be present at the w

to draw for door prizes.

Brahms 'Requiem' Friday

The third and final ma of the Festival opens to n g t a perfo of the "G an Requi
Munch c cting.
Lo Marshall, s ano, and Wa d
will be sts, assisted the Festival Chorus.
Bernste will conduct allorchestral ogram S day night as ws:
Sibelius rth
Symphon he Symphon D
Brahms' Second
Major, and the "Sinfonia a"
by Chavez. The final conce day, will feature the "Un ished Symphony" by Schubert p is.
cellaneous excerpts from er operas. Seymour Lipkin, ist, will be solo ano
Concerto for the left ha

MARSHALL

14, 1953

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS.

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS.

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

Eagle 8/14

by the

Boston Symphony Orchestra

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

Closing Concerts

TONIGHT (Aug. 14) at 8:30 BRAHNS' REQUIEM
Soloists—LOIS MARSHALL, WILLIAM WARFIELD
TOMORROW (Aug. 15) at 8:30—Leonard Bernstein Conducting
SUN. (Aug. 16) at 2:30—Soloist—Seymour Lipkin, Piano
Reserved seats from $2.50, Gen'l Adm. $2

Boston Symphony Rehearsal, Sat., Aug. 15 at 10 AM.
Admission $1

Long Island, N. Y., to William
Lucey of Boston, son of Mrs.
n J. Lucey of Revere St., this , and the late Mr. Lucey. The lding will be an event of Sat-ay morning, the 22d, at 11 in Mel's Church, Flushing.
iss Duff has chosen Miss Dor-
K. Reynolds of West Haven, n., as her maid of honor.
lesmaids will be Mrs. Richard Love of Great Neck, N. Y., and s Mary M. Foody of Watery, Conn. Lambert H. Reavey his city will serve as best man.
ers will be Hugh Culverhouse his city, Dr. Harold Quinn of

Claude Monteux Conductor in Columbus

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 14 (AP)—Claude Monteux, 33-year-old son of conductor Pierre Monteux, has been named director of the Columbus Little Symphony Orchestra.

Monteux will leave the faculty of his father's conducting school in Hancock, Me., to take the new post.

ON DAILY GLOBE—SATU

Cir. (D 47,518)

This Clipping From
TOLEDO, OHIO
TIMES
AUG 13 1953

Relax Or Be Dull

By FREDERICK J. KOUNTZ

THE WINTER music program from Ann Arbor has come to hand and it is quite abundant. In the two series in Hill Auditorium one may near, if he so desires, the Boston Orchestra, Virtuosi di Roma, dePaur Chorus, Chicago Orchestra, Badura-Skoda, Myra Hess, Guiomar Novaes, Guard Republican Band of Paris, and the Boston Pops Orchestra, among other matters.

I having been perusing the general program rather closely. And I have found it all rather enigmatic. Among the other matters which I did not mention at once are Roberta Peters, George London, Elena Nikolaidi, Marian Anderson, and the Cleveland Orchestra. The enigma is, as it has always been to me, the exact direction taken by entrepreneurs is ordering their concerts.

Charles Sink is the Ann Arbor entrepreneur. And by and large Mr. Sink has assembled over many years an annual series of concerts which have given ample space to the best sellers of the year all without creating what appears to be merely a succession of showcases in which the current stars may be observed. Should I say that I have heard more excellent concerts in Ann Arbor than in any other section of the territory with easy reach, I would not be overly enthusiastic. All things considered the series in Ann Arbor have been year after year as stable and dependable as any concert series with which I am acquainted.

* * *

AND THE SERIES which Mr. Sink has arranged for the coming season present the same immediate face. The Boston Orchestra seems to have regained its stride within the last year. In any event it is a best seller wherever it goes. On the basis of their previous visit to the country the Virtuosi di Roma are impeccable. How they will be received in a hall as large as Hill Auditorium one waits to learn. The Chicago Orchestra under Reiner should be an experience. Myra Hess and Guiomar Novaes and Marian Anderson have honored the concert halls of this and other countries for many years. The Boston Pops Orchestra is, we might say, a natural any place and any time of the year. And I suspect that the Guard Republican Band of Paris, because it is a big league novelty, will be thoroughly investigated by a considerable audience. Mr. Sink faces no problems of material returns in the very near future.

And what of the rest of the assemblage? The young Badura-Skoda is a new phenomenon. He had a reputation in this country by recordings before he first set foot on our shores. I have not heard the records. But I have heard him. And it was sad; graceless Mozart and badly misquoted Cesar Franck. One was moved to wonder if the young man was moved to wonder if the was being sold as a musician or merely as a passable proficient technician.

With the Cleveland Orchestra and its conductor we have long been well acquainted. Mr. Szell's mastery of almost any score in the literature, his fabulous memory, and the unvarying preciseness of his work are all sources of constant wonderment. But the fact remains that inevitably Mr. Szell gives the impression of having prepared a technically faultless performance and of having tacked on the music only as an afterthought. And so it is that he almost never turns in a living, glowing deep reaching performance.

* * *

THE SAME is true in a sense of the dePaur group. They sing with excellent enunciation of sounds and words; their performances are vigorously inclined; their exactitude is unquestioned. But in their hands all music sounds pretty much the same. One hears them the first time and is amazed. One hears them again and they begin to pail because, regardless of program material, the highly polished surface—how much is there beneath it?—has been seen before. Of the singers, Roberta Peters, George London, and Elena Nikolaidi, one is aware of blooming reputations without ever being able to discover from one performance to the next consistent reasons for the blooming.

We find the Ann Arbor offerings sure fire and questionable. The enigma to me is how the questionable ones who never progress much beyond a questionable state continue to appear season after season—until they are irreparably worn out, actually and in the estimation of their audiences. Incidentally this wearing out is consummated more quickly in some than in others. And one is not sad about it. But there are so many others, young and old, who are thorough musicians. And on these standard concert series they are too little heard. I have never discovered the reason — except that inescapable box office statistics matter. And I would like to think that it is not so important as it used to be.

In the case of these allegedly talented younger people and of the capable ... old older ones somethin ... pening. And i ... Consider the p ... arisen in Cle ... years it has ... fill Severance ... guest conducto ... soloists. That opinion. An alarming fact in some sections of Cleveland. Yet there is no allegation that Mr. Szell is slipping, is losing his grip. Nor is it heard that the Cleveland Ochestra has not become a very proficient unit under his guidance.

Last winter I asked an average fellow in Cleveland why he no longer attended the concerts. "I am not sure I can explain it exactly," he said. "But I kept noticing that whereas I hear some concerts with delight and appetite, unschooled though I am, I was finding it a progressive chore to listen to these. So far as I know, everything was right. And maybe that was the trouble. It was so right that it was cold and lifeless and I usually fell asleep."

I cannot be sure that my informer was entirely correct even about his own reactions. But he was getting at a point. And I do not segregate the Cleveland Orchestra as the lone example of the point in question. There are hundreds of other examples all over the country.

But this happened. In the last 20 years we have tended to put a high premium on technical prefection. In many cases we put it first. In due time the technical prefection of itself began to be heavy. And now this is happening. We still desire the technical security, the background of knowledge and sound experience. But we want with it a warmth, a musical and personal insight, humanity and humility perhaps. And as often as not we have found the expert, unrelaxed mechanic an unmitigated bore. We are beginning to learn that music is something in itself quite superior to the means which reproduce it.

This, I suspect, is musical progress, genuine artistic awakening. Also it is something for the Entrepreneurs to keep in mind.

[285]

Preparing for Lenox Opera

...nal, trying, mostly without success, to spot relatives.

T-Sgt. William R. Ray, 22, of Brentwood road, Woburn, was the first to meet with success, rushing into the arms of his attractive wife, ...ginia, 20. Seconds later he was ... acquainted with a daughter, ... little over two years old. ... just over a year. Ray ... d in the skirmishes ... and Heartbreak ... nze Star and ... he was ... cces-

Germ Warfare Story Forced

3 Fliers Say Choice Was 'Confess or Die'

By ROBERT B. TUCKMAN

INCHON, Korea, Sept. 8 (AP)—Three returned fliers said yesterday they "confessed" under torture ...d death threats that they waged ... warfare" and one expected ... rrested for treason when ...

So... In

Can... veal... year... Some... kidnap... old Ca... The ... ing he... ing the... an unid... brough... ters. There... them a...

...ce ...vas ...nual ...e add ...e unive

THE STANDARD-TIMES, NEW BEDFORD, MASS., THURSDAY, AUGUST 13, 1953

Goldovsky Revives Old Opera, Capably Sung by Young Cast

By DONALD H. WHITE
Standard-Times Special Writer

LENOX, Aug. 13—Boris Goldovsky, one of the most unusual operatic personalities in Amer... has done it again. An opera ...cept musical experts ...nown, an opera not ...in this country since ...e Gretry's "Richard, ...earted" was chosen as ...'s stage vehicle for the ...partment of the Berk... ...usic Center at Tangle...

...st seasons the Goldovsky ... have offered eminently ...ful revivals of such mas...rks as Mozart's "Titus," ...inta Giardiniera" and "Ido...o," Gluck's "Iphigenia in ...is," Britten's "Albert Her..." and "Peter Grimes" and ...sini's "Turk in Italy." From ...e tragic genius of Mozart's ...itus," performed last Summer ... Tanglewood, the genial direc...or has now turned to this little-known though highly rewarding work of the 18th Century comic opera master, Gretry.

In his opening-night remarks, Goldovsky again gave tribute to the crusading musical spirit of Serge Koussevitsky, late conductor of the Boston Symphony, whose artistic dream included the experimental Theater-Concert Hall as part of the Tanglewood installations.

"It is always a great pleasure to bring to life something known hitherto only in history books," Goldovsky said, referring to the genre score and background of the Gretry work. The opera is a potpourri of many styles and approaches incorporating the leit motiv (descriptive motive recurring throughout the piece) so exploited later by Wagner.

Plot Is Outlined

The plot of "Richard, the Lion-Hearted" harks back to the famed story of the search for the captured English monarch made by his minstrel, Blondel. During Crusades in the Holy Land, the king was captured by the Saracens and later incarcerated in an Austrian prison. The device of the leit motiv is used extensively here to identify the song which Blondel repeatedly sings during his wanderings, hoping that so... day his king will hear it and ...ply. A popular ballad of ...'s ... which even became ... political matters dur... ... French Revolution—"O Richa... O Mon Roi."

As is the custom at ...wood, the cast was made up ... young, somewhat inexperienc... singers, some of whom were ... ceiving their first stage op... tunities. Leading roles were ... sumed by such capable and ... matically agile singers a... Cass, remembered by local ... sic lovers for his soloist's rol... the Godreau "Messiah" ... Christmas; John McCollum, a ... tenor who dominated the ac... continually in the role of ... minstrel, Blondel, and Rosa... Elias, as his romanticall... clined guide, Antonio.

A feature of the perform... was the exceptionally well-e... ciated choral singing by a ... octet, trained by Sarah Cald... Mr. Goldovsky's able assis... Since the opera was transl... into English, it was a dis... pleasure to be able to unders... a great deal of the action thr... its crisp and tidy diction. Su... rarely the case of the usual t... lated work.

The settings were highly ...aginative and made use of sce...ry by light projections, desi... by John Blankenchip, a new ... in the stage department of Tanglewood. His first act set ... tured a rather stylized castle ram...part, fantastic pineapple-shaped trees and a projected fortress which might be labeled a la Max...field Parish or Disney. However, the later projection of the gates of the castle, viewed through a transparent scrim curtain while soldiers fought a convincing battle in silhouette, was most impressive. This particular effect was by far the best projection work we have ever seen. Its greatest opportunity for success, however, is not in the comic opera repertoire but in Wagnerian works and late Verdi dramas.

The second act scenery showing the fortress-castle in closeup was ingenious and judging by the appreciative audience response, most charming of the evening. Here a small drawbridge was lowered in response to trumpet calls by members of the Austrian guard and the chain-mailed chorus entered a cleverly constructed miniature fort. One was reminded of a drill of tin-soldiers in combination with Klingsor's magic castle as seen in Wagner's "Parsifal." This was far more solid canvas real estate than usually is allotted to the characters of the opera stage.

Sumptuous to the Eye

Sumptuous to the eye and overwhelmingly accurate in historical detail were the magnificent costumes designed by the talented Leo Van Witsen. Their combination of pastel and luxurious dark shades were vivid in their extreme contrast. The chain mail hauberks of the guards, combined with tabard-like emblazonings of lions pointed up the brilliant palette used for this production. The final tableau was reminiscent of the "commedia del arte" style with its blending of bright red velvet, blue and pale green tones.

Presiding at his invisible station in the orchestra pit, Mr. Goldovsky served several times as a rather vocal prompter. However, ... slips were few and the fine ...ments quite numerous. These young singers can thank him for ... introduction to another fascinating historical work and also ... opportunity to participate in ... of his integrated productions. "Richard, the Lion-Hearted" ...s the long roster of Tanglewood opera successes only through the unique privilege of having been given "the Goldosky ...tment."

FE

Charles ... Tangle...

Bruno ... Walt...

Malcolm ... Ed...

Big Tourist Week End Shaping

Eagle 8/14

Continued muggy weather in metropolitan New York will bring one of the biggest week-end influxes in the history of the Berkshires, John F. Downing, executive director of the Berkshire Hills Conference, predicted today.

"We have been staying on top of all requests and reservations all week," Downing said, "but this morning a deluge of calls began. Unfortunately last-minute calls, especially from those who plan to stay over only on Saturday night, have to be relegated, more or less, to the potluck department."

Most people who take in guests, other than the professional hostelries and tourist houses, hold off on accepting reservations for the one-nighters until they are sure they won't have people who will stay two nights or more.

Downing said his office has been receiving many thank-you notes from guests who were in the area last week end for the service and accommodations that were afforded them. He said he would forward the letters to the various information centers through the county with which the Conference co-operates.

---

25 NEW YORK POST, THURSDAY, AUGUST 13, 1953

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Berkshire Festival Ends Sunday

The Berkshire Festival begins its final week-end of music-making today with its annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, "Tanglewood on Parade." Festivities for the event will include demonstrations by every ... music school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, climaxing in a ...

...national concert com... will be present at the wa... to draw for door prizes.

Brahms 'Requiem' Friday

The third and final ... of the Festival opens ... night ... a perfo... of the ... Requi... Munch ... in ... si... ...nd W... will be ... assisted ... Festival ...

... p.m. Anna Russell, in-

10—The Berkshire Evening Eagle, Friday, Aug. 14, 1953

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS.

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

by the

Boston Symphony Orchestra

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

Closing Concerts

TONIGHT (Aug. 14) at 8:30 BRAHMS' REQUIEM
Soloists—LOIS MARSHALL, WILLIAM WARFIELD
...ROW (Aug. 15) at 8:30—Leonard Bernstein Conducti...
...N. (Aug. 16) at 2:30—Soloist—Seymour Lipkin, Piano

Reserved seats from $2.50, Gen'l Adm. $2

Boston Symphony Rehearsal, Sat., Aug. 15 at 10 AM.
Admission $1

...al season-end sale.

ELD'S

Pittsfield

Claude Monteux Conductor in Columbus

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 14 (AP)—Claude Monteux, 33-year-old son of conductor Pierre Monteux, has been named director of the Columbus Little Symphony Orchestra.

Monteux will leave the faculty of his father's conducting school in Hancock, Me., to take the new post.

N DAILY GLOBE—SATU

Cir. (D 47,518)

This Clipping From
TOLEDO, OHIO
TIMES
AUG 13 [illegible]

Relax Or Be Dull

By FREDERICK J. KOUNTZ

THE WINTER music program from Ann Arbor has come to hand and it is quite abundant. In the two series in Hill Auditorium one may near, if he so desires, the Boston Orchestra, Virtuosi di Roma, dePaur Chorus, Chicago Orchestra, Badura-Skoda, Myra Hess, Guiomar Novaes, Guard Republican Band of Paris, and the Boston Pops Orchestra, among other matters.

I having been perusing the general program rather closely. And I have found it all rather enigmatic. Among the other matters which I did not mention at once are Roberta Peters, George London, Elena Nikolaidi, Marian Anderson, and the Cleveland Orchestra. The enigma is, as it has always been to me, the exact direction taken by entrepreneurs is ordering their concerts.

'Charles Sink is the Ann Arbor entrepreneur. And by and large Mr. Sink has assembled over many years an annual series of concerts which have given ample space to the best sellers of the year all without creating what appears to be merely a succession of showcases in which the current stars may be observed. Should I say that I have heard more excellent concerts in Ann Arbor than in any other section of the territory with easy reach, I would not be overly enthusiastic. All things considered the series in Ann Arbor have been year after year as stable and dependable as any concert series with which I am acquainted.

* * *

AND THE SERIES which Mr. Sink has arranged for the coming season present the same immediate face. The Boston Orchestra seems to have regained its stride within the last year. In any event it is a best seller wherever it goes. On the basis of their previous visit to the country the Virtuosi di Roma are impeccable. How they will be received in a hall as large as Hill Auditorium one waits to learn. The Chicago Orchestra under Reiner should be an experience. Myra Hess and Guiomar Novaes and Marian Anderson have honored the concert halls of this and other countries for many years. The Boston Pops Orchestra is, we might say, a natural any place and any time of the year. And I suspect that the Guard Republican Band of Paris, because it is a big league novelty, will be thoroughly investigated by a considerable audience. Mr. Sink faces no problems of material returns in the very near future.

And what of the rest of the assemblage? The young Badura-Skoda is a new phenomenon. He had a reputation in this country by recordings before he first set foot on our shores. I have not heard the records. But I have heard him. And it was sad; graceless Mozart and badly misquoted Cesar Franck. One was moved to wonder if the young man was moved to wonder if the was being sold as a musician or merely as a passable proficient technician.

With the Cleveland Orchestra and its conductor we have long been well acquainted. Mr. Szell's mastery of almost any score in the literature, his fabulous memory, and the unvarying preciseness of his work are all sources of constant wonderment. But the fact remains that inevitably Mr. Szell gives the impression of having prepared a technically faultless performance and of having tacked on the music only as an afterthought. And so it is that he almost never turns in a living, glowing deep reaching performance.

* * *

THE SAME is true in a sense of the dePaur group. They sing with excellent enunciation of sounds and words; their performances are vigorously inclined; their exactitude is unquestioned. But in their hands all music sounds pretty much the same. One hears them the first time and is amazed. One hears them again and they begin to pall because, regardless of program material, the highly polished surface—how much is there beneath it?—has been seen before. Of the singers, Roberta Peters, George London, and Elena Nikolaidi, one is aware of blooming reputations without ever being able to discover from one performance to the next consistent reasons for the blooming.

We find the Ann Arbor offerings sure fire and questionable. The enigma to me is how the questionable ones who never progress much beyond a questionable state continue to appear season after season—until they are irreparably worn out, actually and in the estimation of their audiences. Incidentally this wearing out is consummated more quickly in some than in others. And one is not sad about it. But there are so many others, young and old, who are thorough musicians. And on these standard concert series they are too little heard. I have never discovered the reason — except that inescapable box office statistics matter. And I would like to think that it is not so important as it used to be.

In the case of these allegedly talented younger people and of the capable ld older ones somethin pening. And i Consider the p arisen in Cle years it has fill Severance guest conducto soloists. Tha opinion. An alarming fact in some sections of Cleveland. Yet there is no allegation that Mr. Szell is slipping, is losing his grip. Nor is it heard that the Cleveland Ochestra has not become a very proficient unit under his guidance.

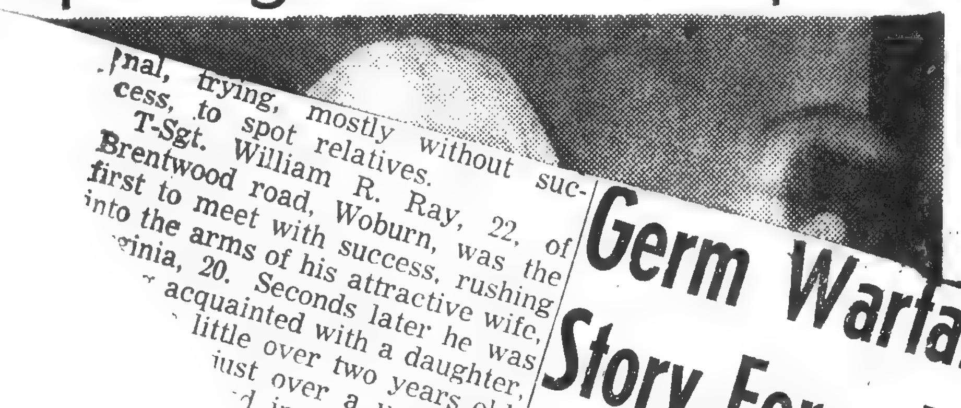
Last winter I asked an average fellow in Cleveland why he no longer attended the concerts. "I am not sure I can explain it exactly," he said. "But I kept noticing that whereas I hear some concerts with delight and appetite, unschooled though I am, I was finding it a progressive chore to listen to these. So far as I know, everything was right. And maybe that was the trouble. It was so right that it was cold and lifeless and I usually fell asleep."

I cannot be sure that my informer was entirely correct even about his own reactions. But he was getting at a point. And I do not segregate the Cleveland Orchestra as the lone example of the point in question. There are hundreds of other examples all over the country.

But this happened. In the last 20 years we have tended to put a high premium on technical prefection. In many cases we put it first. In due time the technical prefection of itself began to be heavy. And now this is happening. We still desire the technical security, the background of knowledge and sound experience. But we want with it a warmth, a musical and personal insight, humanity and humility perhaps. And as often as not we have found the expert, unrelaxed mechanic an unmitigated bore. We are beginning to learn that music is something in itself quite superior to the means which reproduce it.

This, I suspect, is musical progress, genuine artistic awakening. Also it is something for the Entrepreneurs to keep in mind.

Preparing for Lenox Opera



nal, trying, mostly without success, to spot relatives.

T-Sgt. William R. Ray, 22, of Brentwood road, Woburn, was the first to meet with success, rushing into the arms of his attractive wife, ginia, 20. Seconds later he was acquainted with a daughter, little over two years old. just over a year, Ray d in the skirmishes and Heartbreak nze Star and

he was cces-

Germ Warfare Story Forced

3 Fliers Say Choice Was 'Confess or Die'

By ROBERT B. TUCKMAN

INCHON, Korea, Sept. 8 (AP)—Three returned fliers said yesterday they "confessed" under torture d death threats that they waged warfare" and one expected rested for treason when

Sol

In

Can veal year Somerv kidnapi old Car The g ing hero ing theis an unid brough ters. There them a

was nual add e univ

Goldovsky Revives Old Opera, Capably Sung by Young Cast

By DONALD H. WHITE
Standard-Times Special Writer

LENOX, Aug. 13—Boris Goldovsky, one of the most unusual operatic personalities in Amer- has done it again. An opera cept musical experts nown, an opera not in this country since e Gretry's "Richard, earted" was chosen as 's stage vehicle for the partment of the Berk- usic Center at Tangle-

st seasons the Goldovsky have offered eminently ful revivals of such mas- rks as Mozart's "Titus," inta Giardiniera" and "Ido- o," Gluck's "Iphigenia in is," Britten's "Albert Her- " and "Peter Grimes" and sini's "Turk in Italy." From tragic genius of Mozart's itus," performed last Summer Tanglewood, the genial director has now turned to this little-known though highly rewarding work of the 18th Century comic opera master, Gretry.

In his opening-night remarks, Goldovsky again gave tribute to the crusading musical spirit of Serge Koussevitsky, late conductor of the Boston Symphony, whose artistic dream included the experimental Theater-Concert Hall as part of the Tanglewood installations.

"It is always a great pleasure to bring to life something known hitherto only in history books," Goldovsky said, referring to the genre score and background of the Gretry work. The opera is a potpourri of many styles and approaches incorporating the leit motiv (descriptive motive recurring throughout the piece) so exploited later by Wagner.

Plot Is Outlined

The plot of "Richard, the Lion-Hearted" harks back to the famed story of the search for the captured English monarch made by his minstrel, Blondel. During Crusades in the Holy Land, the king was captured by the Saracens and later incarcerated in an Austrian prison. The device of the leit motiv is used extensively here to identify the song which Blondel repeatedly sings during his wanderings, hoping that so day his king will hear it and ply. A popular ballad of its which even became involved political matters during French Revolution—"O Richa O Mon Roi."

As is the custom at Tang wood, the cast was made up young, somewhat inexperien singers, some of whom were ceiving their first stage op tunities. Leading roles were sumed by such capable and matically agile singers as Cass, remembered by local sic lovers for his soloist's rol the Godreau "Messiah Christmas; John McCollum, a tenor who dominated the ac continually in the role of minstrel, Blondel, and Rosa Elias, as his romanticall clined guide, Antonio.

A feature of the perform was the exceptionally well-e ciated choral singing by a octet, trained by Sarah Cald Mr. Goldovsky's able assis Since the opera was trans into English, it was a dis pleasure to be able to unders a great deal of the action thr its crisp and tidy diction. Su rarely the case of the usual t lated work.

The settings were highly im aginative and made use of s ry by light projections, des by John Blankenchip, a new in the stage departmen of Tanglewood. His first act set tured a rather stylized castle part, fantastic pineapple-sh trees and a projected for which might be labeled a la field Parish or Disney. Howe the later projection of the g of the castle, viewed throug transparent scrim curtain w soldiers fought a convincing tle in silhouette, was most pressive. This particular effect was by far the best projection work we have ever seen. Its great est opportunity for success, how ever, is not in the comic opera repertoire but in Wagnerian works and late Verdi dramas.

The second act scenery show ing the fortress-castle in closeup was ingenious and judging by the appreciative audience re sponse, most charming of the evening. Here a small drawbridge was lowered in response to trumpet calls by members of the Austrian guard and the chain-mailed chorus entered a cleverly constructed miniature fort. One was reminded of a drill of tin-soldiers in combination with Klingsor's magic castle as seen in Wagner's "Parsifal." This was far more solid canvas real estate than usually is allotted to the characters of the opera stage.

Sumptuous to the Eye

Sumptuous to the eye and overwhelmingly accurate in historical detail were the magnificent costumes designed by the talented Leo Van Witsen. Their combination of pastel and luxurious dark shades were vivid in their extreme contrast. The chain mail hauberks of the guards, combined with tabard-like embla- nings of lions pointed up the brilliant palette used for this production. The final tableau was reminiscent of the "commedia l arte" style with its blending bright red velvet, blue and pale een tones.

Presiding at his invisible sta n in the orchestra pit, Mr. Gol vsky served several times as a her vocal prompter. However, slips were few and the fine ments quite numerous. These ng singers can thank him for introduction to another fas ating historical work and also opportunity to participate in of his integrated productions. Richard, the Lion-Hearted" s the long roster of Tangle d opera successes only ough the unique privilege of ing been given "the Goldosky tment."

Big Tourist Week End Shaping

Eagle 8/14

Continued muggy weather in metropolitan New York will bring one of the biggest week-end influxes in the history of the Berkshires, John F. Downing, executive director of the Berkshire Hills Conference, predicted today.

"We have been staying on top of all requests and reservations all week," Downing said, "but this morning a deluge of calls began. Unfortunately last-minute calls, especially from those who plan to stay over only on Saturday night, have to be relegated, more or less, to the potluck department."

Most people who take in guests, other than the professional hostelries and tourist houses, hold off on accepting reservations for the one-nighters until they are sure they won't have people who will stay two nights or more.

Downing said his office has been receiving many thank-you notes from guests who were in the area last week end for the service and accommodations that were afforded them. He said he would forward the letters to the various information centers through the county with which the Conference co-operates.

---

25 NEW YORK POST, THURSDAY, AUGUST 13, 1953

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Berkshire Festival Ends Sunday

The Berkshire Festival begins its final week-end of music-making today with its annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, "Tanglewood on Parade." Festivities for the event will include demonstrations by every r music school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, climaxing in a ternational concert com will be present at the wal for door prizes.

Brahms 'Requiem' Friday

The third and final of the Festival opens to n.g.t a perf of the Requi Munch in. s and W will be assisted Festival Bernst

p.m. Anna Russell, in-

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
Boston Symphony Orchestra
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
Closing Concerts
TONIGHT (Aug. 14) at 8:30 BRAHNS' REQUIEM
Soloists—LOIS MARSHALL, WILLIAM WARFIELD
TOMORROW (Aug. 15) at 8:30—Leonard Bernstein Conducti
SUN. (Aug. 16) at 2:30—Soloist—Seymour Lipkin, Piano
Reserved seats from $2.50, Gen'l Adm. $2
Boston Symphony Rehearsal, Sat., Aug. 15 at 10 AM.
Admission $1

al season-end sale.
ELD'S
Pittsfield

Claude Monteux Conductor in Columbus

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 14 (AP)—Claude Monteux, 33-year-old son of conductor Pierre Monteux, has been named director of the Columbus Little Symphony Orchestra.

Monteux will leave the faculty of his father's conducting school in Hancock, Me., to take the new post.

N DAILY GLOBE—SATU

Cir. (D 47,518)

This Clipping From
TOLEDO, OHIO
TIMES
AUG 13 19

Relax Or Be Dull

By FREDERICK J. KOUNTZ

THE WINTER music program from Ann Arbor has come to hand and it is quite abundant. In the two series in Hill Auditorium one may near, if he so desires, the Boston Orchestra, Virtuosi di Roma, dePaur Chorus, Chicago Orchestra, Badura-Skoda, Myra Hess, Guiomar Novaes, Guard Republican Band of Paris, and the Boston Pops Orchestra, among other matters.

I having been perusing the general program rather closely. And I have found it all rather enigmatic. Among the other matters which I did not mention at once are Roberta Peters, George London, Elena Nikolaidi, Marian Anderson, and the Cleveland Orchestra. The enigma is, as it has always been to me, the exact direction taken by entrepreneurs is ordering their concerts.

'Charles Sink is the Ann Arbor entrepreneur. And by and large Mr. Sink has assembled over many years an annual series of concerts which have given ample space to the best sellers of the year all without creating what appears to be merely a succession of showcases in which the current stars may be observed. Should I say that I have heard more excellent concerts in Ann Arbor than in any other section of the territory with easy reach, I would not be overly enthusiastic. All things considered the series in Ann Arbor have been year after year as stable and dependable as any concert series with which I am acquainted.

* * *

AND THE SERIES which Mr. Sink has arranged for the coming season present the same immediate face. The Boston Orchestra seems to have regained its stride within the last year. In any event it is a best seller wherever it goes. On the basis of their previous visit to the country the Virtuosi di Roma are impeccable. How they will be received in a hall as large as Hill Auditorium one waits to learn: The Chicago Orchestra under Reiner should be an experience. Myra Hess and Guiomar Novaes and Marian Anderson have honored the concert halls of this and other countries for many years. The Boston Pops Orchestra is, we might say, a natural any place and any time of the year. And I suspect that the Guard Republican Band of Paris, because it is a big league novelty, will be thoroughly investigated by a considerable audience. Mr. Sink faces no problems of material returns in the very near future.

And what of the rest of the assemblage? The young Badura-Skoda is a new phenomenon. He had a reputation in this country by recordings before he first set foot on our shores. I have not heard the records. But I have heard him. And it was sad; graceless Mozart and badly misquoted Cesar Franck. One was moved to wonder if the young man was moved to wonder if the was being sold as a musician or merely as a passable proficient technician.

With the Cleveland Orchestra and its conductor we have long been well acquainted. Mr. Szell's mastery of almost any score in the literature, his fabulous memory, and the unvarying preciseness of his work are all sources of constant wonderment. But the fact remains that inevitably Mr. Szell gives the impression of having prepared a technically faultless performance and of having tacked on the music only as an afterthought. And so it is that he almost never turns in a living, glowing deep reaching performance.

* * *

THE SAME is true in a sense of the dePaur group. They sing with excellent enunciation of sounds and words; their performances are vigorously inclined; their exactitude is unquestioned. But in their hands all music sounds pretty much the same. One hears them the first time and is amazed. One hears them again and they begin to pall because, regardless of program material, the highly polished surface—how much is there beneath it?—has been seen before. Of the singers, Roberta Peters, George London, and Elena Nikolaidi, one is aware of blooming reputations without ever being able to discover from one performance to the next consistent reasons for the blooming.

We find the Ann Arbor offerings sure fire and questionable. The enigma to me is how the questionable ones who never progress much beyond a questionable state continue to appear season after season—until they are irreparably worn out, actually and in the estimation of their audiences. Incidentally this wearing out is consummated more quickly in some than in others. And one is not sad about it. But there are so many others, young and old, who are thorough musicians. And on these standard concert series they are too little heard. I have never discovered the reason — except that inescapable box office statistics matter. And I would like to think that it is not so important as it used to be.

In the case of these allegedly talented younger people and of the capable ones somethin

pening. And i
Consider the p
arisen in Cle
years it has fill Severance
guest conducto
soloists. Tha

opinion. An alarming fact in some sections of Cleveland. Yet there is no allegation that Mr. Szell is slipping, is losing his grip. Nor is it heard that the Cleveland Ochestra has not become a very proficient unit under his guidance.

Last winter I asked an average fellow in Cleveland why he no longer attended the concerts. "I am not sure I can explain it exactly," he said. "But I kept noticing that whereas I hear some concerts with delight and appetite, unschooled though I am, I was finding it a progressive chore to listen to these. So far as I know, everything was right. And maybe that was the trouble. It was so right that it was cold and lifeless and I usually fell asleep."

I cannot be sure that my informer was entirely correct even about his own reactions. But he was getting at a point. And I do not segregate the Cleveland Orchestra as the lone example of the point in question. There are hundreds of other examples all over the country.

But this happened. In the last 20 years we have tended to put a high premium on technical prefection. In many cases we put it first. In due time the technical prefection of itself began to be heavy. And now this is happening. We still desire the technical security, the background of knowledge and sound experience. But we want with it a warmth, a musical and personal insight, humanity and humility perhaps. And as often as not we have found the expert, unrelaxed mechanic an unmitigated bore. We are beginning to learn that music is something in itself quite superior to the means which reproduce it.

This, I suspect, is musical progress, genuine artistic awakening. Also it is something for the Entrepreneurs to keep in mind.

Preparing for Lenox Opera

nal, trying, mostly without success, to spot relatives.

T-Sgt. William R. Ray, 22, of Brentwood road, Woburn, was the first to meet with success, rushing into the arms of his attractive wife, ginia, 20. Seconds later he was acquainted with a daughter, little over two years old. just over a year, Ray d in the skirmishes and Heartbreak nze Star and

he was cces-

Germ Warfare Story Forced

3 Fliers Say Choice Was 'Confess or Die'

By ROBERT B. TUCKMAN

INCHON, Korea, Sept. 8 (AP)—Three returned fliers said yesterday they "confessed" under torture d death threats that they waged warfare" and one expected rested for treason when

---

Goldovsky Revives Old Opera, Capably Sung by Young Cast

By DONALD H. WHITE
Standard-Times Special Writer

LENOX, Aug. 13—Boris Goldovsky, one of the most unusual operatic personalities in Amer- has done it again. An opera cept musical experts nown, an opera not in this country since e Gretry's "Richard, earted" was chosen as n's stage vehicle for the partment of the Berk- usic Center at Tanglest seasons the Goldovsky have offered eminently ful revivals of such masks as Mozart's "Titus," inta Giardiniera" and "Ido- o," Gluck's "Iphigenia in is," Britten's "Albert Her-" and "Peter Grimes" and sini's "Turk in Italy." From tragic genius of Mozart's itus," performed last Summer a Tanglewood, the genial director has now turned to this little-known though highly rewarding work of the 18th Century comic opera master, Gretry.

In his opening-night remarks, Goldovsky again gave tribute to the crusading musical spirit of Serge Koussevitsky, late conductor of the Boston Symphony, whose artistic dream included the experimental Theater-Concert Hall as part of the Tanglewood installations.

"It is always a great pleasure to bring to life something known hitherto only in history books," Goldovsky said, referring to the genre score and background of the Gretry work. The opera is a potpourri of many styles and approaches incorporating the leit motiv (descriptive motive recurring throughout the piece) so exploited later by Wagner.

Plot Is Outlined

The plot of "Richard, the Lion-Hearted" harks back to the famed story of the search for the captured English monarch made by his minstrel, Blondel. During Crusades in the Holy Land, the king was captured by the Saracens and later incarcerated in an Austrian prison. The device of the leit motiv is used extensively here to identify the song which Blondel repeatedly sings during his wanderings, hoping that som day his king will hear it and r ply: A popular ballad of it's da which even became involved political matters during th French Revolution—"O Richar O Mon Roi."

As is the custom at Tangl wood, the cast was made up young, somewhat inexperience singers, some of whom were r ceiving their first stage oppo tunities: Leading roles were a sumed by such capable and dr matically agile singers as L Cass, remembered by local m sic lovers for his soloist's role the Godreau "Messiah" a Christmas; John McCollum a fi tenor who dominated the acti continually in the role of t minstrel, Blondel, and R Elias, as his romantically- clined guide, Antonio.

A feature of the performan was the exceptionally well-enu ciated choral singing by a m octet, trained by Sarah Caldwe Mr. Goldovsky's able assista Since the opera was translat into English, it was a disti pleasure to be able to understa a great deal of the action throu it's crisp and tidy diction Such rarely the case of the usual tra lated work.

The settings were highly im aginative and made use of scene ry by light projections, design by John Blankenchip, a new name in the stage department of Tanglewood. His first act set featured a rather stylized castle rampart, fantastic pineapple-shaped trees and a projected fortress which might be labeled a la Maxfield Parish or Disney. However, the later projection of the gates of the castle, viewed through a transparent scrim curtain while soldiers fought a convincing battle in silhouette, was most impressive. This particular effect was by far the best projection work we have ever seen. Its greatest opportunity for success, however, is not in the comic opera repertoire but in Wagnerian works and late Verdi dramas.

The second act scenery showing the fortress-castle in closeup was ingenious and judging by the appreciative audience response, most charming of the evening. Here a small drawbridge was lowered in response to trumpet calls by members of the Austrian guard and the chain-mailed chorus entered a cleverly constructed miniature fort. One was reminded of a drill of tin-soldiers in combination with Klingsor's magic castle as seen in Wagner's "Parsifal." This was far more solid canvas real estate than usually is allotted to the characters of the opera stage.

Sumptuous to the Eye

Sumptuous to the eye and overwhelmingly accurate in historical detail were the magnificent costumes designed by the talented Leo Van Witsen. Their combination of pastel and luxurious dark shades were vivid in their extreme contrast. The chain mail hauberks of the guards, combined with tabard-like emblazonings of lions pointed up the brilliant palette used for this production. The final tableau was reminiscent of the "commedia del arte" style with its blending of bright red velvet, blue and pale green tones.

Presiding at his invisible station in the orchestra pit, Mr. Goldovsky served several times as a rather vocal prompter. However, the slips were few and the fine moments quite numerous. These young singers can thank him for the introduction to another fascinating historical work and also the opportunity to participate in one of his integrated productions. "Richard, the Lion-Hearted" joins the long roster of Tanglewood opera successes only through the unique privilege of having been given "the Goldosky treatment."

Big Tourist Week End Shaping

Eagle 8/14

Continued muggy weather in metropolitan New York will bring one of the biggest week-end influxes in the history of the Berkshires, John F. Downing, executive director of the Berkshire Hills Conference, predicted today.

"We have been staying on top of all requests and reservations all week," Downing said, "but this morning a deluge of calls began. Unfortunately last-minute calls, especially from those who plan to stay over only on Saturday night, have to be relegated, more or less, to the potluck department."

Most people who take in guests, other than the professional hostelries and tourist houses, hold off on accepting reservations for the one-nighters until they are sure they won't have people who will stay two nights or more.

Downing said his office has been receiving many thank-you notes from guests who were in the area last week end for the service and accommodations that were afforded them. He said he would forward the letters to the various information centers through the county with which the Conference co-operates.

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Berkshire Festival Ends Sunday

The Berkshire Festival begins its final week-end of music-making today with its annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, "Tanglewood on Parade." Festivities for the event will include demonstrations by every department of the summer music school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, climaxing in a gala concert at 8:15 in the Music Shed. Charles Munch will conduct the Bostonians for the initial half of this program assisted by Isaac Stern as soloist in the Beethoven Violin Concerto.

For the latter half, Leonard Bernstein will be on the podium to lead the Bostonians in excerpts from Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess." Leontyne Price, soprano, currently playing Bess in the Broadway revival at the Ziegfeld, and William Warfield, baritone, will be soloists, assisted by the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

Beginning at 4 p.m., the "Tanglewood on Parade" program includes a world premiere of a one-act opera by Jan Meyerowitz, "Bad Boys in School," and "A Little Boy Lost," a cantata by Alan Sapp. There will be a lawn party and picnic supper at 7:15 followed by waltzing on the lawn at 11 p.m. Anna Russell, in- ternational concert comedienne, will be present at the waltz party to draw for door prizes.

Brahms 'Requiem' Friday

The third and final series of the Festival opens tomorrow night with a performance of the "German Requiem" Munch conducting. Lois Marshall, soprano, and William Warfield will be soloists, assisted by the Festival Chorus.

MARSHALL

Bernstein will conduct an all- program Saturday as follows: Fourth Symphony, the Symphony in D "India" Brahms' Second Major, and concert, Sunday, Unfinished Symphony plus mis- Wagner pianist, Piano the end.

14, 1953

TANGLEW

TANGLEW
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
Boston Symp
CHARLES MUN
Closing
TONIGHT (Aug. 14) at
Soloists—LOIS MARSHA
TOMORROW (Aug. 15) at 8:3
SUN. (Aug. 16) at 2:30—So
Reserved seats fron
Boston Symphony Rehea
Admis

Eagle 8/14

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
Orchestra
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
CLOSING CONCERTS
TONIGHT (Aug. 14) at 8:30 BRAHMS' REQUIEM, Soloists - LOIS MARSHALL, WILLIAM WARFIELD
TOMORROW (Aug. 15) at 8:30 - LEONARD BERNSTEIN Conducting
SUN., (Aug. 16) at 2.30 - Soloist, SEYMOUR LIPKIN, Piano.
Reserved seats from $2.50, Gen'l Adm. $2.

Union 8/14

[285]

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE FRIDAY AUGUST 14, 1953

MUSIC

The Berkshire Festival

By a Staff Correspondent

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 13.—Once again Tanglewood is on parade! The annual open house event, designed to display the various talents and accomplishments of the Berkshire Music Center, got under way this evening after a welcoming address by Boris Goldovsky, head of Tanglewood's Opera Department. The short speech was prelude to feverish campus-wide activity which saw all of Tanglewood's departments simultaneously offering their wares to an audience that braved

even a threatening sky t them.
During the course of one
there was, in the Theater
cert Hall, the world pren of a cantata on a text by liam Blake by Allen Sapp an opera, "Bad Boys in Sc
by Jan Meyerowitz. At the time the Large Music She host to four conducting stu
— Harold Blumenfeld,
Daniel, Herbert Blomsted
Robert Mandell—who di
a student orchestra in mu
Prokofiev, Dvorak, Debuss
Ravel. And coincidental center's chamber music d ment programmed piec
Jack Urbongb, Tossi Ichiy
Brahms, Hindemith and F

As a finale to the day's ity, and after a picnic
served on the spacious T wood lawn, the Boston phony Orchestra was hea special concert featurin
second act of Gershwin's and Bess" with Leonard stein conducting and W
Warfield, baritone, and Le
Price, soprano, as soloist included were performa
Handel's Water Music Su
Beethoven's Concerto in rected by Charles Munc
Isaac Stern as violinist.

Taken in sum it was an occasion for high spirits. When Tanglewood parades its skills, a gala ceremony is in the making.

J. S. H.

NSON, MICH
URNAL
7/23/53

CSB Radio Pix (& others) about July 13-16

FESTIVALS LURE TRAVELERS

Charles Munch
Tanglewood

Bruno Walter
Salzburg

Malcolm Sargent
Edinburgh

Fassett

Highlights of the world-famous music festivals held this summer at Salzburg, Bayreuth, Edinburgh, Helsinki and Bergen, Norway, are now being enjoyed by American radio listeners from coast to coast, reports the European Travel Commission. Part of a summer-long series of "World Music Festivals" broadcast each Sunday over CBS Radio, these programs give armchair travelers in the United States an unparalleled opportunity to preview the festivals which they may some day attend.

Leading this broadcasting tour is James Fassett, who adds his own colorful "sound and word pictures" to the music on the programs.

Beginning Sunday, July 26, Fassett returns for four broadcasts from America's own Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., three conducted by Charles Munch, one by Pierre Monteux.

On August 23 and 30, excerpts from the famous Salzburg Festival in Austria will include a concert by the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra, the world's oldest orchestra, conducted by Bruno Walter.

On Sept. 6 the CBS Radio series will present the Richard Wagner Festival in Bayreuth, Germany, featuring operas under the direction of the composer's grandsons, Wolfgang and Wieland Wagner.

For four broadcasts beginning Sept. 13, symphonic concerts, dramas, chamber music and operas will be heard from the Edinburgh, Scotland, Festival of Music and Drama under the direction of Sir Malcolm Sargent, Sir Adrian Boult and Bruno Walter

---

In Brief . . . Eagle 8/14

Since "Tanglewood on Parade" is in the nature of graduation for the students of the Berkshire Music Center, yesterday's program makes it practically mandatory that their diplomas be presented summa cum laude . . . We congratulate

---

Record-ially Yours

MARTIN BOOKSPAN

STRAUSS: Wiener Blut; Wine, Women and Song; Tales From the Vienna Woods; and Emperor Waltzes. Antal Dorati conducting the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra. (Mercury MG 50019, $5.95.)

Just as the music of Gustav Mahler, whose Second Symphony is discussed in the adjoining column, mirrors the Vienna of the first decade of this century, so does the music of Johann Strauss the Younger mirror an earlier, and much happier period in the history of this most musical of cities. Here is the Vienna of the Emperor Franz Josef, a Vienna much given to political and social intrigue, slightly artificial in its manner, insinuatingly naughty in its morals, but above all a dancing Vienna. In this milieu Johan Strauss the Younger lived and loved and composed the best dance music in history.

Because this music is so closely period, it
eped in the tradition to ss Waltzes
e — sym-
re-create in
Such a con-er, or Erich
Krauss; to conducted experience
t aesthetic

ntal Dorati
, although conductor
he arranged scores from auss — "Le
"Graduation
gives us in ntained on c are strait-lid and unnances, per-y, but with-red up by a
r a Krauss.
or now per-
the United
any better,
he readings particularly on LP we roduction to Song" and solo is inom the Vi-
ly, the disc
Mercury's.

onies Nos.
g conduct-
adio Sym-
ercury MG

ea that has the advent ave begun
the reper-vely amaz-ave had to mpany deplete issue
honies of ct is curby Mer-listed the olm Radio
nd Swed-younger
ing.
this com-
represent-with per-nish mas-
Seventh
release of mphonies
e Second
be done
those for imminent release.

What position posterity will assign to Sibelius is a topic of discussion which has for many years been argued. His detractors say that Sibelius is an unimportant figure because he has brought nothing new to the art; his champions, on the other hand, maintain that while he has remained within traditional boundaries, Sibelius has nevertheless indelibly impressed his own personality on traditional forms and means of expression. In performance and general acceptance Sibelius' music has had a rather curious history: in Finland, England and the United States Sibelius has been lionized and his symphonies are as standard repertory pieces as are those of Beethoven or Brahms; in Continental Europe, however, Sibelius is almost never performed. It will be interesting to watch the trend of the next several years as far as the popularity of the music of Sibelius in this country is concerned.

As was the case with the earlier released Mercury Sibelius recordings, Ehrling is a very sensitive interpreter of the Symphonies. This reading of the Fifth does not have the dramatic power of the Koussevitzky performances which many of us will long remember, but it is nevertheless a fine one. The little-known Sixth, a delightfully pastoral work, is very well done, and the recording of both is up to the best of Mercury's high standard.

THE JEWISH ADVOCATE, THURSDAY, AUGUST 13, 1953

MUSIC IN REVIEW

By GERALD A. BERLIN

CHORAL WORKS HIGHLIGHT TANGLEWOOD CONCERTS

(Editor's Note:—This week's column is by Martin Bookspan, noted radio personality, whose column on records appears regularly in the Advocate on this page.)

Perhaps the most remarkable aspect of this season's concerts at Tanglewood is the fact that the student chorus, formed only five weeks ago, has thus far been called upon to perform with the Boston Symphony Orchestra such elaborate and difficult works as Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet," the Second Symphony of Mahler and several Bach Cantatas. Add to these the Brahms "Requiem," which figures on the Friday night program this week-end, and the magnitude of the work of Hugh Ross, Tanglewood's choral director, is quite startling.

The Berlioz occupied the entire program last Friday night. Charles Munch conducted, and the soloists were Jennie Tourel, John McCollum and Nicola Moscona. Complete performances of "Romeo and Juliet" are rare indeed, although the second and fourth parts and the Love Scene are staples of the orchestral repertory. Until Mr. Munch conducted the score in its entirety here in Boston last February, the only previous complete performance I had heard was one conducted by Toscanini about a dozen years ago in New York. Having heard the "compleat" score now on three different occasions, I am more than ever convinced that the judgment of posterity has been correct: the essence of the score is to be found in those three sections with which we have been familiar for many years.

The performance last Friday evening was excellent in almost every respect. Mr. Munch, who surely is the outstanding Berlioz interpreter among present-day conductors, led a highly charged reading. Indeed, his performance of the Love Scene suggested that the love of Romeo and Juliet was more tempestuous than passionate; and who is to say him nay? An interesting illustration of how deeply Mr. Munch feels this music is the fact that at several points during the course of the Love music his voice could be heard clearly singing along with the orchestra; he sings, incidentally, no better than Toscanini!

Leonard Bernstein has now conducted the Second Symphony of Mahler with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on four different occasions—twice here in Boston and twice at Tanglewood. The most recent performance, last Saturday evening, was nothing short of sensational, unquestionably the finest achievement of Mr. Bernstein's career thus far. Here is a score of which he is a part and which is part of him. I am tempted to say that the Second Symphony is the most characteristic score Mahler ever composed: it is rather unabashedly loose and unbuttoned in construction; it is scored for extraordinary instrumental and vocal forces; it is long and unwieldy, almost impractical from a performance standpoint; it makes use of poetry from two widely different sources in German literature—the collection of folk poetry, "Des Knaben Wunderhorn," and the "Resurrection Ode" of Klopstock; it is decadent (in the literary sense) in its conception and its execution. But how perfectly it mirrors the attitudes and philosophy prevalent in Vienna during the pre-1914 days, and what a self-portrait it is of its creator! The ardent Mahlerite—and I yield second place to nobody in my enthusiasm for the music of this composer—clasps the Second Symphony to his breast in ardent devotion.

As mentioned above, the performance last Saturday evening was one of those occasions when almost all the elements are exactly right. Orchestra and chorus were inspired to give of their electrifying best by the dedicated figure on the podium; Miss Tourel sang her "Urlicht" movement from "Des Knaben Wunderhorn" like an angel, and Theresa Green, a student at the Berkshire Music Center, was superb in the brief soprano solos of the last movement.

There does remain a negative note to add, however. Mr. Bernstein's excessively idiosyncratic podium mannerisms, which always were objectionable, have now become downright ludicrous. Last Saturday night he all but got down on his hands and knees and sang "Mammy" before the assembled forces on stage. I am sure Mr. Bernstein is capable of communicating his conception without behaving as though he had swallowed a bagful of Mexican jumping beans.

The concert, which was this year's Koussevitzky Memorial Concert, began with a performance—beautifully done—of an old-time Koussevitzky specialty, the Prelude to Moussorgsky's "Khovantchina," and also included a marvelously sensitive interpretation of Ravel's Song Cycle "Scheherazade," with the ubiquitous Miss Tourel as soloist. At the conclusion of the work Mr. Bernstein motioned to Miss Doriot Anthony, the orchestra's first flute, to step forward and share with him and Miss Tourel the warm applause; Miss Anthony had spun her solo in "La Flute Enchantee" out of the purest gossamer. It remains to be added that after the concert the Bruckner Society of America presented to Mr. Bernstein the Mahler medal in recognition of his devotion to the composer's music.

On Sunday afternoon Mr. Munch returned to conduct the Fifth Symphony of Schubert, Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings, the Second Suite from Roussel's Ballet "Bacchus et Araine" and with Gregor Piatigorsky as soloist Strauss' "Don Quixote" and the First Cello Concerto of Milhaud. Mr. Munch's more moderate approach since the end of the recent Boston season, noted in this space last week, was again in evidence in his performance of the Schubert. The two outer movements were rushed, but the second and third movements had a gentleness and tranquillity of spirit not formally usual with Mr. Munch. Especially rewarding was his insistence that the repetitions of the main theme of the Trio be taken pianissimo. In the Barber Adagio, performed, incidentally, with the composer in the audience, Mr. Munch got a ravishingly beautiful tone from the strings.

It was good to welcome Mr. Piatigorsky back to the concert stage; he had been absent for almost a year because of illness. At the concert Sunday afternoon his tone was smaller and more constricted than it had been at the open rehearsal on Saturday morning; was he using a different instrument? Otherwise the Munch-Piatigorsky "Don Quixote" was wholly satisfactory, with an especially vivid realization of the sheep bleating section. The casual nonchalance of Milhaud's Concerto, which I think is a very important addition to the limited repertory for cello and orchestra, was expertly conveyed by the Messrs. Munch and Piatigorsky, and the whole was rounded off with a brilliant performance of the Roussel score, one of Mr. Munch's great specialties.

[286]

—MUSIC—

The Berkshire Festival

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, FRIDAY, AUGUST 14, 1953

By a Staff Correspondent

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 13.—Once again Tanglewood is on parade! The annual open house event, designed to display the various talents and accomplishments of the Berkshire Music Center, got under way this evening after a welcoming address by Boris Goldovsky, head of Tanglewood's Opera Department. The short speech was prelude to feverish campus-wide activity which saw all of Tanglewood's departments simultaneously offering their wares to an audience that braved

even a threatening sky
them.

During the course of on
there was, in the Theater
cert Hall, the world pre of a cantata on a text b
liam Blake by Allen Sap
an opera, "Bad Boys in S
by Jan Meyerowitz. At th time the Large Music Sh
host to four conducting st
— Harold Blumenfeld,
Daniel, Herbert Blomste
Robert Mandell—who d
a student orchestra in m
Prokofiev, Dvorak, Debus
Ravel. And coincidenta center's chamber music
ment programmed pie
Jack Urbongh, Tossi Ich
Brahms, Hindemith and

As a finale to the day
ity, and after a picnic
served on the spacious wood lawn, the Bosto
phony Orchestra was h
special concert featu second act of Gershwin'
and Bess" with Leonar
stein conducting and
Warfield, baritone, and
Price, soprano, as soloi
included were perform
Handel's Water Musi
Beethoven's Concerto i rected by Charles Mun
Isaac Stern as violinist.

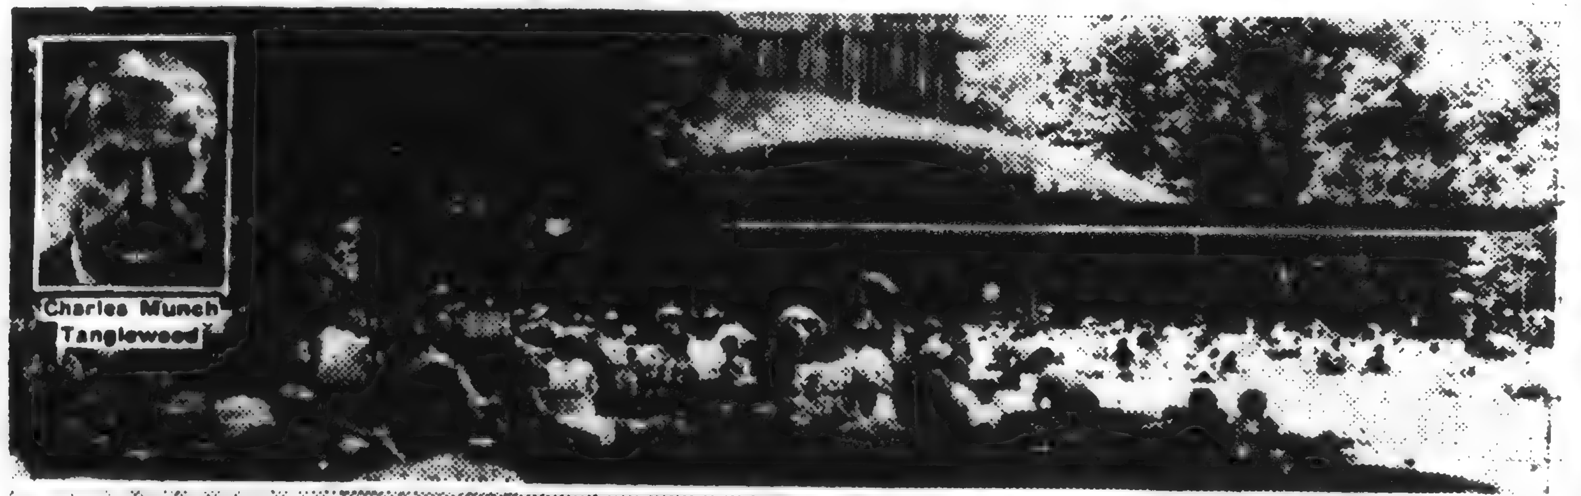
Taken in sum it was an occasion for high spirits. When Tanglewood parades its skills, a gala ceremony is in the making.

J. S. H.

ONSON, MICH
RNAL
/23/53

CSB Radio Pix (+ others) about July 13-16

FESTIVALS LURE TRAVELERS



Charles Munch
Tanglewood

Bruno Walter
Salzburg

Malcolm Sargent
Edinburgh

Fassett

Highlights of the world-famous music festivals held this summer at Salzburg, Bayreuth, Edinburgh, Helsinki and Bergen, Norway, are now being enjoyed by American radio listeners from coast to coast, reports the European Travel Commission. Part of a summer-long series of "World Music Festivals" broadcast each Sunday over CBS Radio, these programs give armchair travelers in the United States an unparalleled opportunity to preview the festivals which they may some day attend.

Leading this broadcasting tour is James Fassett, who adds his own colorful "sound and word pictures" to the music on the programs.

Beginning Sunday, July 26, Fassett returns for four broadcasts from America's own Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., three conducted by Charles Munch, one by Pierre Monteux.

On August 23 and 30, excerpts from the famous Salzburg Festival in Austria will include a concert by the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra, the world's oldest orchestra, conducted by Bruno Walter.

On Sept. 6 the CBS Radio series will present the Richard Wagner Festival in Bayreuth, Germany, featuring operas under the direction of the composer's grandsons, Wolfgang and Wieland Wagner.

For four broadcasts beginning Sept. 13,)symphonic concerts, dramas, chamber music and operas will be heard from the Edinburgh, Scotland, Festival of Music and Drama under the direction of Sir Malcolm Sargent, Sir Adrian Boult and Bruno Walter

---

In Brief . . . Eagle 8/14

Since "Tanglewood on Parade" is in the nature of graduation for the students of the Berkshire Music Center, yesterday's program makes it practically mandatory that their diplomas be presented summa cum laude . . . We congratulate

---

Record-ially Yours

MARTIN BOOKSPAN

STRAUSS: Wiener Blut; Wine, Women and Song; Tales From the Vienna Woods; and Emperor Waltzes. Antal Dorati conducting the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra. (Mercury MG 50019, $5.95.)

Just as the music of Gustav Mahler, whose Second Symphony is discussed in the adjoining column, mirrors the Vienna of the first decade of this century, so does the music of Johann Strauss the Younger mirror an earlier, and much happier period in the history of this most musical of cities. Here is the Vienna of the Emperor Franz Josef, a Vienna much given to political and social intrigue, slightly artificial in its manner, insinuatingly naughty in its morals, but above all a dancing Vienna. In this milieu Johan Strauss the Younger lived and loved and composed the best dance music in history.

Because this music is so closely
period, it
eped in the tradition to ss Waltzes
e — sym-
re-create in
Such a con-er, or Erich
Krauss; to conducted experience
t aesthetic

ntal Dorati
, although conductor
e arranged cores from uss — "Le Graduation
gives us in ntained on are strait-
d and unances, per-
, but with-ed up by a
r a Krauss.
r now per-
he United
any better,
e readings
articularly
on LP we oduction to Song" and solo is in-
m the Vi-
y, the disc Mercury's

nies Nos.
g conduct-
adio Symrcury MG

a that has he advent ave begun
the reper-
vely amaz-ve had to mpany deplete issue
onies of t is cur-
by Meristed the lm Radio
nd Swed-younger
ing.
this comepresentwith per-nish mas-
Seventh
release of mphonies
e Second
be done
those for

What position posterity will assign to Sibelius is a topic of discussion which has for many years been argued. His detractors say that Sibelius is an unimportant figure because he has brought nothing new to the art; his champions, on the other hand, maintain that while he has remained within traditional boundaries, Sibelius has nevertheless indelibly impressed his own personality on traditional forms and means of expression. In performance and general acceptance Sibelius' music has had a rather curious history: in Finland, England and the United States Sibelius has been lionized and his symphonies are as standard repertory pieces as are those of Beethoven or Brahms; in Continental Europe, however, Sibelius is almost never performed. It will be interesting to watch the trend of the next several years as far as the popularity of the music of Sibelius in this country is concerned.

As was the case with the earlier released Mercury Sibelius recordings, Ehrling is a very sensitive interpreter of the Symphonies. This reading of the Fifth does not have the dramatic power of the Koussevitzky performances which many of us will long remember, but it is nevertheless a fine one. The little-known Sixth, a delightfully pastoral work, is very well done, and the recording of both is up to the best of Mercury's high standard.

MUSIC IN REVIEW

By GERALD A. BERLIN

CHORAL WORKS HIGHLIGHT TANGLEWOOD CONCERTS

(Editor's Note:—This week's column is by Martin Bookspan, noted radio personality, whose column on records appears regularly in the Advocate on this page.)

Perhaps the most remarkable aspect of this season's concerts at Tanglewood is the fact that the student chorus, formed only five weeks ago, has thus far been called upon to perform with the Boston Symphony Orchestra such elaborate and difficult works as Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet," the Second Symphony of Mahler and several Bach Cantatas. Add to these the Brahms "Requiem," which figures on the Friday night program this week-end, and the magnitude of the work of Hugh Ross, Tanglewood's choral director, is quite startling.

The Berlioz occupied the entire program last Friday night. Charles Munch conducted, and the soloists were Jennie Tourel, John McCollum and Nicola Moscona. Complete performances of "Romeo and Juliet" are rare indeed, although the second and fourth parts and the Love Scene are staples of the orchestral repertory. Until Mr. Munch conducted the score in its entirety here in Boston last February, the only previous complete performance I had heard was one conducted by Toscanini about a dozen years ago in New York. Having heard the "compleat" score now on three different occasions, I am more than ever convinced that the judgment of posterity has been correct: the essence of the score is to be found in those three sections with which we have been familiar for many years.

The performance last Friday evening was excellent in almost every respect. Mr. Munch, who surely is the outstanding Berlioz interpreter among present-day conductors, led a highly charged reading. Indeed, his performance of the Love Scene suggested that the love of Romeo and Juliet was more tempestuous than passionate; and who is to say him nay? An interesting illustration of how deeply Mr. Munch feels this music is the fact that at several points during the course of the Love music his voice could be heard clearly singing along with the orchestra; he sings, incidentally, no better than Toscanini!

Leonard Bernstein has now conducted the Second Symphony of Mahler with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on four different occasions—twice here in Boston and twice at Tanglewood. The most recent performance, last Saturday evening, was nothing short of sensational, unquestionably the finest achievement of Mr. Bernstein's career thus far. Here is a score of which he is a part and which is part of him. I am tempted to say that the Second Symphony is the most characteristic score Mahler ever composed; it is rather unabashedly loose and unbuttoned in construction; it is scored for extraordinary instrumental and vocal forces; it is long and unwieldy, almost impractical from a performance standpoint; it makes use of poetry from two widely different sources in German literature—the collection of folk poetry, "Des Knaben Wunderhorn," and the "Resurrection Ode" of Klopstock; it is decadent (in the literary sense) in its conception and its execution. But how perfectly it mirrors the attitudes and philosophy prevalent in Vienna during the pre-1914 days, and what a self-portrait it is of its creator! The ardent Mahlerite—and I yield second place to nobody in my enthusiasm for the music of this composer—clasps the Second Symphony to his breast in ardent devotion.

As mentioned above, the performance last Saturday evening was one of those occasions when almost all the elements are exactly right. Orchestra and chorus were inspired to give of their electrifying best by the dedicated figure on the podium; Miss Tourel sang her "Urlicht" movement from "Des Knaben Wunderhorn" like an angel, and Theresa Green, a student at the Berkshire Music Center, was superb in the brief soprano solos of the last movement.

There does remain a negative note to add, however. Mr. Bernstein's excessively idiosyncratic podium mannerisms, which always were objectionable, have now become downright ludicrous. Last Saturday night he all but got down on his hands and knees and sang "Mammy" before the assembled forces on stage. I am sure Mr. Bernstein is capable of communicating his conception without behaving as though he had swallowed a bagful of Mexican jumping beans.

The concert, which was this year's Koussevitzky Memorial Concert, began with a performance—beautifully done—of an old-time Koussevitzky specialty, the Prelude to Moussorgsky's "Khovantchina," and also included a marvelously sensitive interpretation of Ravel's Song Cycle "Scheherazade," with the ubiquitous Miss Tourel as soloist. At the conclusion of the work Mr. Bernstein motioned to Miss Doriot Anthony, the orchestra's first flute, to step forward and share with him and Miss Tourel the warm applause; Miss Anthony had spun her solo in "La Flute Enchantee" out of the purest gossamer. It remains to be added that after the concert the Bruckner Society of America presented to Mr. Bernstein the Mahler medal in recognition of his devotion to the composer's music.

On Sunday afternoon Mr. Munch returned to conduct the Fifth Symphony of Schubert, Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings, the Second Suite from Roussel's Ballet "Bacchus et Araine" and with Gregor Piatigorsky as soloist Strauss' "Don Quixote" and the First Cello Concerto of Milhaud. Mr. Munch's more moderate approach since the end of the recent Boston season, noted in this space last week, was again in evidence in his performance of the Schubert. The two outer movements were rushed, but the second and third movements had a gentleness and tranquillity of spirit not formally usual with Mr. Munch. Especially rewarding was his insistence that the repetitions of the main theme of the Trio be taken pianissimo. In the Barber Adagio, performed, incidentally, with the composer in the audience, Mr. Munch got a ravishingly beautiful tone from the strings.

It was good to welcome Mr. Piatigorsky back to the concert stage; he had been absent for almost a year because of illness. At the concert Sunday afternoon his tone was smaller and more constricted than it had been at the open rehearsal on Saturday morning; was he using a different instrument? Otherwise the Munch-Piatigorsky "Don Quixote" was wholly satisfactory, with an especially vivid realization of the sheep bleating section. The casual nonchalance of Milhaud's Concerto, which I think is a very important addition to the limited repertory for cello and orchestra, was expertly conveyed by the Messrs. Munch and Piatigorsky, and the whole was rounded off with a brilliant performance of the Roussel score, one of Mr. Munch's great specialties.

[286]

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, FRIDAY, AUGUST 14, 1953

—MUSIC—

The Berkshire Festival

By a Staff Correspondent

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 13.—Once again Tanglewood is on parade! The annual open house event, designed to display the various talents and accomplishments of the Berkshire Music Center, got under way this evening after a welcoming address by Boris Goldovsky, head of Tanglewood's Opera Department. The short speech was prelude to feverish campus-wide activity which saw all of Tanglewood's departments simultaneously offering their wares to an audience that braved even a threatening sky them.

During the course of one
there was, in the Theater
cert Hall, the world pre
of a cantata on a text by
liam Blake by Allen Sap
an opera, "Bad Boys in S
by Jan Meyerowitz. At the time the Large Music She
host to four conducting st
— Harold Blumenfeld,
Daniel, Herbert Blomste
Robert Mandell—who d
a student orchestra in m
Prokofiev, Dvorak, Debus
Ravel. And coincidental
center's chamber music
ment programmed pie
Jack Urbongb, Tossi Ichi
Brahms, Hindemith and

As a finale to the day
ity, and after a picnic
served on the spacious
wood lawn, the Bosto
phony Orchestra was he special concert featur
second act of Gershwin's
and Bess" with Leonar
stein conducting and
Warfield, baritone, and
Price, soprano, as soloi
included were perform
Hanuel's Water Music S
Beethoven's Concerto i
rected by Charles Munc
Isaac Stern as violinist.

Taken in sum it was an occasion for high spirits. When Tanglewood parades its skills, a gala ceremony is in the making.

J. S. H.

AWRENCEBURG, KY
/62

THE JEWISH ADVOCATE, THURSDAY, AUGUST 13, 1953

Record-ially Yours

MARTIN BOOKSPAN

STRAUSS: Wiener Blut; Wine, Women and Song; Tales From the Vienna Woods; and Emperor Waltzes. Antal Dorati conducting the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra. (Mercury MG 50019, $5.95.)

Just as the music of Gustav Mahler, whose Second Symphony is discussed in the adjoining column, mirrors the Vienna of the first decade of this century, so does the music of Johann Strauss the Younger mirror an earlier, and much happier period in the history of this most musical of cities. Here is the Vienna of the Emperor Franz Josef, a Vienna much given to political and social intrigue, slightly artificial in its manner, insinuatingly naughty in its morals, but above all a dancing Vienna. In this milieu Johan Strauss the Younger lived and loved and composed the best dance music in history.

Because this music is so closely
period, it
eped in the tradition to ss Waltzes
e — sym-
re-create in
Such a con-er, or Erich
Krauss; to conducted experience
t aesthetic

ntal Dorati
, although conductor
e arranged cores from uss — "Le Graduation
gives us in ntained on are strait-
d and un-
ances, per-
, but with-
ed up by a
r a Krauss.
r now per-
he United
any better,
e readings
particularly on LP we oduction to Song" and solo is in-
m the Vi-
ly, the disc
Mercury's

onies Nos.
g conduct-
adio Symercury MG

a that has he advent ave begun
the reper-
vely amaz-ve had to mpany deplete issue
honies of t is cur-
by Meristed the olm Radio
nd Swed-younger
ing.
this com-
represent-with per-nish mas-
Seventh
release of ymphonies
e Second
be done
those for

What position posterity will assign to Sibelius is a topic of discussion which has for many years been argued. His detractors say that Sibelius is an unimportant figure because he has brought nothing new to the art; his champions, on the other hand, maintain that while he has remained within traditional boundaries, Sibelius has nevertheless indelibly impressed his own personality on traditional forms and means of expression. In performance and general acceptance Sibelius' music has had a rather curious history: in Finland, England and the United States Sibelius has been lionized and his symphonies are as standard repertory pieces as are those of Beethoven or Brahms; in Continental Europe, however, Sibelius is almost never performed. It will be interesting to watch the trend of the next several years as far as the popularity of the music of Sibelius in this country is concerned.

As was the case with the earlier released Mercury Sibelius recordings, Ehrling is a very sensitive interpreter of the Symphonies. This reading of the Fifth does not have the dramatic power of the Koussevitzky performances which many of us will long remember, but it is nevertheless a fine one. The little-known Sixth, a delightfully pastoral work, is very well done, and the recording of both is up to the best of Mercury's high standard.

MUSIC IN REVIEW

By GERALD A. BERLIN

CHORAL WORKS HIGHLIGHT TANGLEWOOD CONCERTS

(Editor's Note:—This week's column is by Martin Bookspan, noted radio personality, whose column on records appears regularly in the Advocate on this page.)

Perhaps the most remarkable aspect of this season's concerts at Tanglewood is the fact that the student chorus, formed only five weeks ago, has thus far been called upon to perform with the Boston Symphony Orchestra such elaborate and difficult works as Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet," the Second Symphony of Mahler and several Bach Cantatas. Add to these the Brahms "Requiem," which figures on the Friday night program this week-end, and the magnitude of the work of Hugh Ross, Tanglewood's choral director, is quite startling.

The Berlioz occupied the entire program last Friday night. Charles Munch conducted, and the soloists were Jennie Tourel, John McCollum and Nicola Moscona. Complete performances of "Romeo and Juliet" are rare indeed, although the second and fourth parts and the Love Scene are staples of the orchestral repertory. Until Mr. Munch conducted the score in its entirety here in Boston last February, the only previous complete performance I had heard was one conducted by Toscanini about a dozen years ago in New York. Having heard the "compleat" score now on three different occasions, I am more than ever convinced that the judgment of posterity has been correct: the essence of the score is to be found in those three sections with which we have been familiar for many years.

The performance last Friday evening was excellent in almost every respect. Mr. Munch, who surely is the outstanding Berlioz interpreter among present-day conductors, led a highly charged reading. Indeed, his performance of the Love Scene suggested that the love of Romeo and Juliet was more tempestuous than passionate; and who is to say him nay? An interesting illustration of how deeply Mr. Munch feels this music is the fact that at several points during the course of the Love music his voice could be heard clearly singing along with the orchestra; he sings, incidentally, no better than Toscanini!

Leonard Bernstein has now conducted the Second Symphony of Mahler with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on four different occasions—twice here in Boston and twice at Tanglewood. The most recent performance, last Saturday evening, was nothing short of sensational, unquestionably the finest achievement of Mr. Bernstein's career thus far. Here is a score of which he is a part and which is part of him. I am tempted to say that the Second Symphony is the most characteristic score Mahler ever composed; it is rather unabashedly loose and unbuttoned in construction; it is scored for extraordinary instrumental and vocal forces; it is long and unwieldy, almost impractical from a performance standpoint; it makes use of poetry from two widely different sources in German literature—the collection of folk poetry, "Des Knaben Wunderhorn," and the "Resurrection Ode" of Klopstock; it is decadent (in the literary sense) in its conception and its execution. But how perfectly it mirrors the attitudes and philosophy prevalent in Vienna during the pre-1914 days, and what a self-portrait it is of its creator! The ardent Mahlerite—and I yield second place to nobody in my enthusiasm for the music of this composer—clasps the Second Symphony to his breast in ardent devotion.

As mentioned above, the performance last Saturday evening was one of those occasions when almost all the elements are exactly right. Orchestra and chorus were inspired to give of their electrifying best by the dedicated figure on the podium; Miss Tourel sang her "Urlicht" movement from "Des Knaben Wunderhorn" like an angel, and Theresa Green, a student at the Berkshire Music Center, was superb in the brief soprano solos of the last movement.

There does remain a negative note to add, however. Mr. Bernstein's excessively idiosyncratic podium mannerisms, which always were objectionable, have now become downright ludicrous. Last Saturday night he all but got down on his hands and knees and sang "Mammy" before the assembled forces on stage. I am sure Mr. Bernstein is capable of communicating his conception without behaving as though he had swallowed a bagful of Mexican jumping beans.

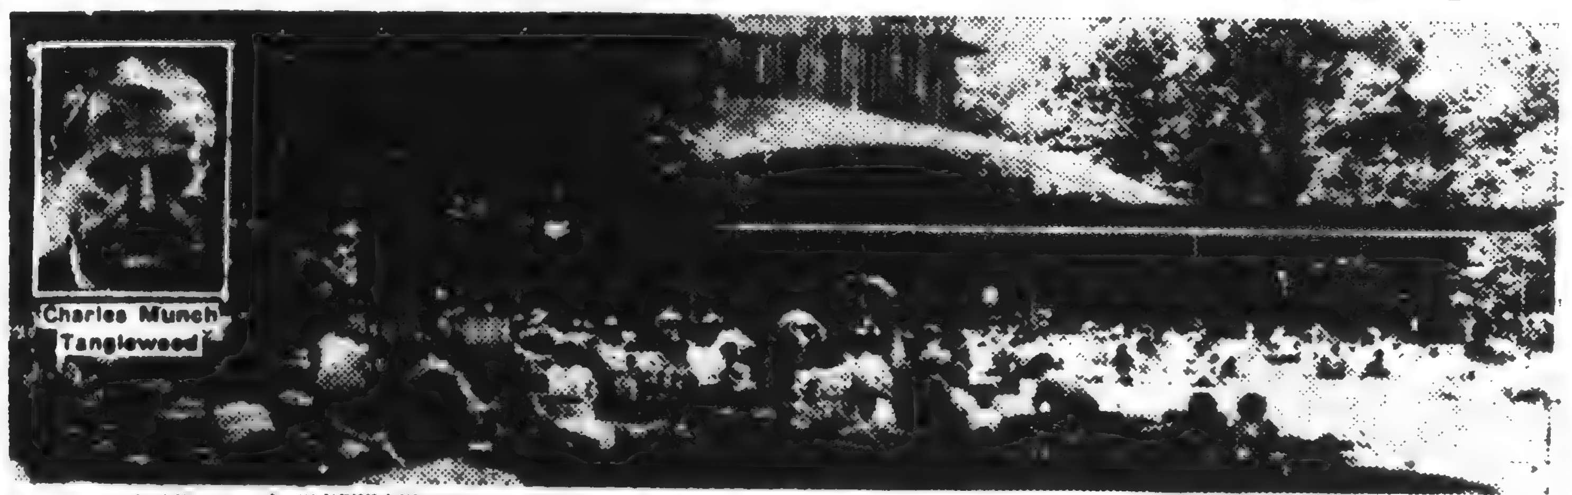
The concert, which was this year's Koussevitzky Memorial Concert, began with a performance—beautifully done—of an old-time Koussevitzky specialty, the Prelude to Moussorgsky's "Khovantchina," and also included a marvelously sensitive interpretation of Ravel's Song Cycle "Scheherazade," with the ubiquitous Miss Tourel as soloist. At the conclusion of the work Mr. Bernstein motioned to Miss Doriot Anthony, the orchestra's first flute, to step forward and share with him and Miss Tourel the warm applause; Miss Anthony had spun her solo in "La Flute Enchantee" out of the purest gossamer. It remains to be added that after the concert the Bruckner Society of America presented to Mr. Bernstein the Mahler medal in recognition of his devotion to the composer's music.

On Sunday afternoon Mr. Munch returned to conduct the Fifth Symphony of Schubert, Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings, the Second Suite from Roussel's Ballet "Bacchus et Araine" and with Gregor Piatigorsky as soloist Strauss' "Don Quixote" and the First Cello Concerto of Milhaud. Mr. Munch's more moderate approach since the end of the recent Boston season, noted in this space last week, was again in evidence in his performance of the Schubert. The two outer movements were rushed, but the second and third movements had a gentleness and tranquillity of spirit not formally usual with Mr. Munch. Especially rewarding was his insistence that the repetitions of the main theme of the Trio be taken pianissimo. In the Barber Adagio, performed, incidentally, with the composer in the audience, Mr. Munch got a ravishingly beautiful tone from the strings.

It was good to welcome Mr. Piatigorsky back to the concert stage; he had been absent for almost a year because of illness. At the concert Sunday afternoon his tone was smaller and more constricted than it had been at the open rehearsal on Saturday morning; was he using a different instrument? Otherwise the Munch-Piatigorsky "Don Quixote" was wholly satisfactory, with an especially vivid realization of the sheep bleating section. The casual nonchalance of Milhaud's Concerto, which I think is a very important addition to the limited repertory for cello and orchestra, was expertly conveyed by the Messrs. Munch and Piatigorsky, and the whole was rounded off with a brilliant performance of the Roussel score, one of Mr. Munch's great specialties.

CSB Radio Pix (+ others) about July 13-16

FESTIVALS LURE TRAVELERS



Charles Munch
Tanglewood

Bruno Walter
Salzburg

Malcolm Sargent
Edinburgh

Fassett

Highlights of the world-famous music festivals held this summer at Salzburg, Bayreuth, Edinburgh, Helsinki and Bergen, Norway, are now being enjoyed by American radio listeners from coast to coast, reports the European Travel Commission. Part of a summer-long series of "World Music Festivals" broadcast each Sunday over CBS Radio, these programs give armchair travelers in the United States an unparalleled opportunity to preview the festivals which they may some day attend.

Leading this broadcasting tour is James Fassett, who adds his own colorful "sound and word pictures" to the music on the programs.

Beginning Sunday, July 26, Fassett returns for four broadcasts from America's own Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., three conducted by Charles Munch, one by Pierre Monteux.

On August 23 and 30, excerpts from the famous Salzburg Festival in Austria will include a concert by the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra, the world's oldest orchestra, conducted by Bruno Walter.

On Sept. 6 the CBS Radio series will present the Richard Wagner Festival in Bayreuth, Germany, featuring operas under the direction of the composer's grandsons, Wolfgang and Wieland Wagner.

For four broadcasts beginning Sept. 13,)symphonic concerts, dramas, chamber music and operas will be heard from the Edinburgh, Scotland, Festival of Music and Drama under the direction of Sir Malcolm Sargent, Sir Adrian Boult and Bruno Walter

---

In Brief . . . Eagle 8/14

Since "Tanglewood on Parade" is in the nature of graduation for the students of the Berkshire Music Center, yesterday's program makes it practically mandatory that their diplomas be presented summa cum laude . . . We congratulate

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE FRIDAY AUGUST 14 1953

MUSIC

The Berkshire Festival

By a Staff Correspondent

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 13.—Once again Tanglewood is on parade! The annual open house event, designed to display the various talents and accomplishments of the Berkshire Music Center, got under way this evening after a welcoming address by Boris Goldovsky, head of Tanglewood's Opera Department. The short speech was prelude to feverish campus-wide activity which saw all of Tanglewood's departments simultaneously offering their wares to an audience that braved even a threatening sky t them.

During the course of one there was, in the Theater cert Hall, the world pren of a cantata on a text by liam Blake by Allen Sap an opera, "Bad Boys in Sc by Jan Meyerowitz. At the time the Large Music She host to four conducting stu — Harold Blumenfeld, Daniel, Herbert Blomsted Robert Mandell—who di a student orchestra in mu Prokofiev, Dvorak, Debuss Ravel. And coincidentall center's chamber music de ment programmed piece Jack Urbongb, Tossi Ichiy Brahms, Hindemith and F

As a finale to the day's ity, and after a picnic served on the spacious T wood lawn, the Boston phony Orchestra was hea special concert featurin second act of Gershwin's and Bess" with Leonard stein conducting and W Warfield, baritone, and Le Price, soprano, as soloist included were performar Handel's Water Music Su Beethoven's Concerto in rected by Charles Munch Isaac Stern as violinist.

Taken in sum it was an occasion for high spirits. When Tanglewood parades its skills, a gala ceremony is in the making.

J. S. H.

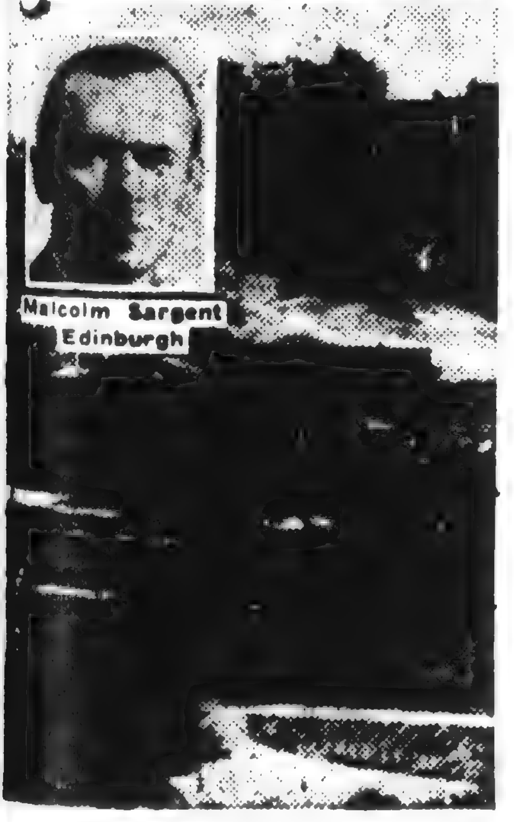
Cir. (D 16,375)

This Clipping From
IDGEWOOD-B'KLYN, N. Y.
ONG ISLAND ADVOCATE
AUG 5 - 1953

FESTIVA

Charles Munch
Tanglewood

Bruno Walter
Salzburg



In Brief . . Eagle 8/14

Since "Tanglewood on Parade" is in the nature of graduation for the students of the Berkshire Music Center, yesterday's program makes it practically mandatory that their diplomas be presented summa cum laude . . . We congratulate

---

Record-ially Yours

MARTIN BOOKSPAN

STRAUSS: Wiener Blut; Wine, Women and Song; Tales From the Vienna Woods; and Emperor Waltzes. Antal Dorati conducting the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra. (Mercury MG 50019, $5.95.)

Just as the music of Gustav Mahler, whose Second Symphony is discussed in the adjoining column, mirrors the Vienna of the first decade of this century, so does the music of Johann Strauss the Younger mirror an earlier, and much happier period in the history of this most musical of cities. Here is the Vienna of the Emperor Franz Josef, a Vienna much given to political and social intrigue, slightly artificial in its manner, insinuatingly naughty in its morals, but above all a dancing Vienna. In this milieu Johan Strauss the Younger lived and loved and composed the best dance music in history.

Because this music is so closely bound up with the period, it takes a conductor steeped in the Viennese intellectual tradition to make of the Strauss Waltzes what they really are — symphonic poems which re-create in music an entire era. Such a conductor is Bruno Walter, or Erich Kleiber, or Clemens Krauss; to hear a Strauss Waltz conducted by these men is to experience one of the greatest aesthetic thrills in all music.

Such a conductor Antal Dorati unfortunately is not, although during his days as a conductor for the Ballet Russe he arranged at least two Ballet scores from music by Johann Strauss — "Le Beau Danube" and "Graduation Ball." What Dorati gives us in the four Waltzes contained on this new Mercury disc are strait-laced, rather too solid and unimaginative performances, perfectly sound musically, but without the magic conjured up by a Walter or a Kleiber or a Krauss. However, no conductor now permanently active in the United States does this music any better, and of their kind the readings are unexceptionable, particularly as for the first time on LP we are given the full introduction to "Wine, Women and Song" and the prominent zither solo is included in "Tales From the Vienna Woods." Sonically, the disc is another triumph in Mercury's Olympian Series.

SIBELIUS: Symphonies Nos. 5 and 6. Sixten Ehrling conducting the Stockholm Radio Symphony Orchestra. (Mercury MG 10142, $4.85.)

With all the esoterica that has been recorded since the advent of LP as companies have begun to scrape the bottom of the repertory barrel, it is positively amazing that five years have had to pass before some company decided to give us a complete issue of the seven symphonies of Sibelius. This neglect is currently being remedied by Mercury, which has enlisted the services of the Stockholm Radio Symphony Orchestra and Sweden's most prominent younger conductor, Sixten Ehrling.

Several months ago this combination of forces was represented in the record lists with performances of the Finnish master's First, Third and Seventh Symphonies. With the release of this disc containing Symphonies Nos. 5 and 6, only the Second and Fourth remain to be done and Mercury promises those for imminent release.

What position posterity will assign to Sibelius is a topic of discussion which has for many years been argued. His detractors say that Sibelius is an unimportant figure because he has brought nothing new to the art; his champions, on the other hand, maintain that while he has remained within traditional boundaries, Sibelius has nevertheless indelibly impressed his own personality on traditional forms and means of expression. In performance and general acceptance Sibelius' music has had a rather curious history: in Finland, England and the United States Sibelius has been lionized and his symphonies are as standard repertory pieces as are those of Beethoven or Brahms; in Continental Europe, however, Sibelius is almost never performed. It will be interesting to watch the trend of the next several years as far as the popularity of the music of Sibelius in this country is concerned.

As was the case with the earlier released Mercury Sibelius recordings, Ehrling is a very sensitive interpreter of the Symphonies. This reading of the Fifth does not have the dramatic power of the Koussevitzky performances which many of us will long remember, but it is nevertheless a fine one. The little-known Sixth, a delightfully pastoral work, is very well done, and the recording of both is up to the best of Mercury's high standard.

MUSIC IN REVIEW

By GERALD A. BERLIN

CHORAL WORKS HIGHLIGHT TANGLEWOOD CONCERTS

(Editor's Note:—This week's column is by Martin Bookspan, noted radio personality, whose column on records appears regularly in the Advocate on this page.)

Perhaps the most remarkable aspect of this season's concerts at Tanglewood is the fact that the student chorus, formed only five weeks ago, has thus far been called upon to perform with the Boston Symphony Orchestra such elaborate and difficult works as Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet," the Second Symphony of Mahler and several Bach Cantatas. Add to these the Brahms "Requiem," which figures on the Friday night program this week-end, and the magnitude of the work of Hugh Ross, Tanglewood's choral director, is quite startling.

The Berlioz occupied the entire program last Friday night. Charles Munch conducted, and the soloists were Jennie Tourel, John McCollum and Nicola Moscona. Complete performances of "Romeo and Juliet" are rare indeed, although the second and fourth parts and the Love Scene are staples of the orchestral repertory. Until Mr. Munch conducted the score in its entirety here in Boston last February, the only previous complete performance I had heard was one conducted by Toscanini about a dozen years ago in New York. Having heard the "compleat" score now on three different occasions, I am more than ever convinced that the judgment of posterity has been correct: the essence of the score is to be found in those three sections with which we have been familiar for many years.

The performance last Friday evening was excellent in almost every respect. Mr. Munch, who surely is the outstanding Berlioz interpreter among present-day conductors, led a highly charged reading. Indeed, his performance of the Love Scene suggested that the love of Romeo and Juliet was more tempestuous than passionate; and who is to say him nay? An interesting illustration of how deeply Mr. Munch feels this music is the fact that at several points during the course of the Love music his voice could be heard clearly singing along with the orchestra; he sings, incidentally, no better than Toscanini!

Leonard Bernstein has now conducted the Second Symphony of Mahler with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on four different occasions—twice here in Boston and twice at Tanglewood. The most recent performance, last Saturday evening, was nothing short of sensational, unquestionably the finest achievement of Mr. Bernstein's career thus far. Here is a score of which he is a part and which is part of him. I am tempted to say that the Second Symphony is the most characteristic score Mahler ever composed: it is rather unabashedly loose and unbuttoned in construction; it is scored for extraordinary instrumental and vocal forces; it is long and unwieldy, almost impractical from a performance standpoint; it makes use of poetry from two widely different sources in German literature—the collection of folk poetry, "Des Knaben Wunderhorn," and the "Resurrection Ode" of Klopstock; it is decadent (in the literary sense) in its conception and its execution. But how perfectly it mirrors the attitudes and philosophy prevalent in Vienna during the pre-1914 days, and what a self-portrait it is of its creator! The ardent Mahlerite—and I yield second place to nobody in my enthusiasm for the music of this composer—clasps the Second Symphony to his breast in ardent devotion.

As mentioned above, the performance last Saturday evening was one of those occasions when almost all the elements are exactly right. Orchestra and chorus were inspired to give of their electrifying best by the dedicated figure on the podium; Miss Tourel sang her "Urlicht" movement from "Des Knaben Wunderhorn" like an angel, and Theresa Green, a student at the Berkshire Music Center, was superb in the brief soprano solos of the last movement.

There does remain a negative note to add, however. Mr. Bernstein's excessively idiosyncratic podium mannerisms, which always were objectionable, have now become downright ludicrous. Last Saturday night he all but got down on his hands and knees and sang "Mammy" before the assembled forces on stage. I am sure Mr. Bernstein is capable of communicating his conception without behaving as though he had swallowed a bagful of Mexican jumping beans.

The concert, which was this year's Koussevitzky Memorial Concert, began with a performance—beautifully done—of an old-time Koussevitzky specialty, the Prelude to Moussorgsky's "Khovantchina," and also included a marvelously sensitive interpretation of Ravel's Song Cycle "Scheherazade," with the ubiquitous Miss Tourel as soloist. At the conclusion of the work Mr. Bernstein motioned to Miss Doriot Anthony, the orchestra's first flute, to step forward and share with him and Miss Tourel the warm applause; Miss Anthony had spun her solo in "La Flute Enchantee" out of the purest gossamer. It remains to be added that after the concert the Bruckner Society of America presented to Mr. Bernstein the Mahler medal in recognition of his devotion to the composer's music.

On Sunday afternoon Mr. Munch returned to conduct the Fifth Symphony of Schubert, Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings, the Second Suite from Roussel's Ballet "Bacchus et Araine" and with Gregor Piatigorsky as soloist Strauss' "Don Quixote" and the First Cello Concerto of Milhaud. Mr. Munch's more moderate approach since the end of the recent Boston season, noted in this space last week, was again in evidence in his performance of the Schubert. The two outer movements were rushed, but the second and third movements had a gentleness and tranquillity of spirit not formally usual with Mr. Munch. Especially rewarding was his insistence that the repetitions of the main theme of the Trio be taken pianissimo. In the Barber Adagio, performed, incidentally, with the composer in the audience, Mr. Munch got a ravishingly beautiful tone from the strings.

It was good to welcome Mr. Piatigorsky back to the concert stage; he had been absent for almost a year because of illness. At the concert Sunday afternoon his tone was smaller and more constricted than it had been at the open rehearsal on Saturday morning; was he using a different instrument? Otherwise the Munch-Piatigorsky "Don Quixote" was wholly satisfactory, with an especially vivid realization of the sheep bleating section. The casual nonchalance of Milhaud's Concerto, which I think is a very important addition to the limited repertory for cello and orchestra, was expertly conveyed by the Messrs. Munch and Piatigorsky, and the whole was rounded off with a brilliant performance of the Roussel score, one of Mr. Munch's great specialties.

[286]

MUSIC

The Berkshire Festival

By a Staff Correspondent

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 13.—Once again Tanglewood is on parade! The annual open house event, designed to display the various talents and accomplishments of the Berkshire Music Center, got under way this evening after a welcoming address by Boris Goldovsky, head of Tanglewood's Opera Department. The short speech was prelude to feverish campus-wide activity which saw all of Tanglewood's departments simultaneously offering their wares to an audience that braved even a threatening sky to see them.

During the course of one hour there was, in the Theater Concert Hall, the world premieres of a cantata on a text by William Blake by Allen Sapp and an opera, "Bad Boys in School" by Jan Meyerowitz. At the same time the Large Music Shed was host to four conducting students — Harold Blumenfeld, Erno Daniel, Herbert Blomstedt and Robert Mandell—who directed a student orchestra in music by Prokofiev, Dvorak, Debussy and Ravel. And coincidentally the center's chamber music department programmed pieces by Jack Urbongb, Tossi Ichiyanagi, Brahms, Hindemith and Franck.

As a finale to the day's activity, and after a picnic supper served on the spacious Tanglewood lawn, the Boston Symphony Orchestra was heard in a special concert featuring the second act of Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess" with Leonard Bernstein conducting and William Warfield, baritone, and Leontyne Price, soprano, as soloists. Also included were performances of Handel's Water Music Suite and Beethoven's Concerto in D, directed by Charles Munch, with Isaac Stern as violinist.

Taken in sum it was an occasion for high spirits. When Tanglewood parades its skills, a gala ceremony is in the making.

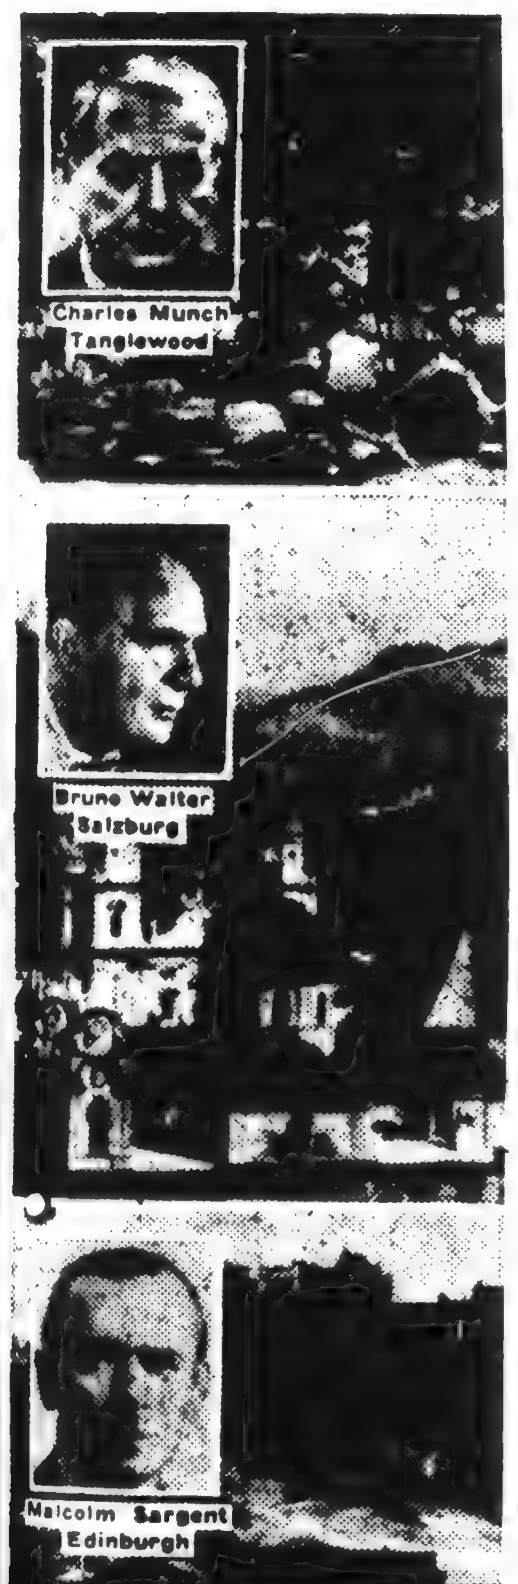
J. S. H.

Cir. (D 16,375)

This Clipping From
IDGEWOOD-B'KLYN, N. Y.
ONG ISLAND ADVOCATE

AUG 5 - 1953

FESTIVA



In Brief . . . Eagle 8/14

Since "Tanglewood on Parade" is in the nature of graduation for the students of the Berkshire Music Center, yesterday's program makes it practically mandatory that their diplomas be presented summa cum laude . . . We congratulate

---

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, FRIDAY, AUGUST 14, 19

Record-ially Yours

MARTIN BOOKSPAN

STRAUSS: Wiener Blut; Wine, Women and Song; Tales From the Vienna Woods; and Emperor Waltzes. Antal Dorati conducting the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra. (Mercury MG 50019, $5.95.)

Just as the music of Gustav Mahler, whose Second Symphony is discussed in the adjoining column, mirrors the Vienna of the first decade of this century, so does the music of Johann Strauss the Younger mirror an earlier, and much happier period in the history of this most musical of cities. Here is the Vienna of the Emperor Franz Josef, a Vienna much given to political and social intrigue, slightly artificial in its manner, insinuatingly naughty in its morals, but above all a dancing Vienna. In this milieu Johan Strauss the Younger lived and loved and composed the best dance music in history.

Because this music is so closely bound up with the period, it takes a conductor steeped in the Viennese intellectual tradition to make of the Strauss Waltzes what they really are — symphonic poems which re-create in music an entire era. Such a conductor is Bruno Walter, or Erich Kleiber, or Clemens Krauss; to hear a Strauss Waltz conducted by these men is to experience one of the greatest aesthetic thrills in all music.

Such a conductor Antal Dorati unfortunately is not, although during his days as a conductor for the Ballet Russe he arranged at least two Ballet scores from music by Johann Strauss — "Le Beau Danube" and "Graduation Ball." What Dorati gives us in the four Waltzes contained on this new Mercury disc are straitlaced, rather too solid and unimaginative performances, perfectly sound musically, but without the magic conjured up by a Walter or a Kleiber or a Krauss. However, no conductor now permanently active in the United States does this music any better, and of their kind the readings are unexceptionable, particularly as for the first time on LP we are given the full introduction to "Wine, Women and Song" and the prominent zither solo is included in "Tales From the Vienna Woods." Sonically, the disc is another triumph in Mercury's Olympian Series.

SIBELIUS: Symphonies Nos. 5 and 6. Sixten Ehrling conducting the Stockholm Radio Symphony Orchestra. (Mercury MG 10142, $4.85.)

With all the esoterica that has been recorded since the advent of LP as companies have begun to scrape the bottom of the repertory barrel, it is positively amazing that five years have had to pass before some company decided to give us a complete issue of the seven symphonies of Sibelius. This neglect is currently being remedied by Mercury, which has enlisted the services of the Stockholm Radio Symphony Orchestra and Sweden's most prominent younger conductor, Sixten Ehrling.

Several months ago this combination of forces was represented in the record lists with performances of the Finnish master's First, Third and Seventh Symphonies. With the release of this disc containing Symphonies Nos. 5 and 6, only the Second and Fourth remain to be done and Mercury promises those for imminent release.

What position posterity will assign to Sibelius is a topic of discussion which has for many years been argued. His detractors say that Sibelius is an unimportant figure because he has brought nothing new to the art; his champions, on the other hand, maintain that while he has remained within traditional boundaries, Sibelius has nevertheless indelibly impressed his own personality on traditional forms and means of expression. In performance and general acceptance Sibelius' music has had a rather curious history: in Finland, England and the United States Sibelius has been lionized and his symphonies are as standard repertory pieces as are those of Beethoven or Brahms; in Continental Europe, however, Sibelius is almost never performed. It will be interesting to watch the trend of the next several years as far as the popularity of the music of Sibelius in this country is concerned.

As was the case with the earlier released Mercury Sibelius recordings, Ehrling is a very sensitive interpreter of the Symphonies. This reading of the Fifth does not have the dramatic power of the Koussevitzky performances which many of us will long remember, but it is nevertheless a fine one. The little-known Sixth, a delightfully pastoral work, is very well done, and the recording of both is up to the best of Mercury's high standard.

THE JEWISH ADVOCATE, THURSDAY, AUGUST 13, 1953

MUSIC IN REVIEW

By GERALD A. BERLIN

CHORAL WORKS HIGHLIGHT TANGLEWOOD CONCERTS

(Editor's Note:—This week's column is by Martin Bookspan, noted radio personality, whose column on records appears regularly in the Advocate on this page.)

Perhaps the most remarkable aspect of this season's concerts at Tanglewood is the fact that the student chorus, formed only five weeks ago, has thus far been called upon to perform with the Boston Symphony Orchestra such elaborate and difficult works as Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet," the Second Symphony of Mahler and several Bach Cantatas. Add to these the Brahms "Requiem," which figures on the Friday night program this week-end, and the magnitude of the work of Hugh Ross, Tanglewood's choral director, is quite startling.

The Berlioz occupied the entire program last Friday night. Charles Munch conducted, and the soloists were Jennie Tourel, John McCollum and Nicola Moscona. Complete performances of "Romeo and Juliet" are rare indeed, although the second and fourth parts and the Love Scene are staples of the orchestral repertory. Until Mr. Munch conducted the score in its entirety here in Boston last February, the only previous complete performance I had heard was one conducted by Toscanini about a dozen years ago in New York. Having heard the "compleat" score now on three different occasions, I am more than ever convinced that the judgment of posterity has been correct: the essence of the score is to be found in those three sections with which we have been familiar for many years.

The performance last Friday evening was excellent in almost every respect. Mr. Munch, who surely is the outstanding Berlioz interpreter among present-day conductors, led a highly charged reading. Indeed, his performance of the Love Scene suggested that the love of Romeo and Juliet was more tempestuous than passionate; and who is to say him nay? An interesting illustration of how deeply Mr. Munch feels this music is the fact that at several points during the course of the Love music his voice could be heard clearly singing along with the orchestra; he sings, incidentally, no better than Toscanini!

Leonard Bernstein has now conducted the Second Symphony of Mahler with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on four different occasions—twice here in Boston and twice at Tanglewood. The most recent performance, last Saturday evening, was nothing short of sensational, unquestionably the finest achievement of Mr. Bernstein's career thus far. Here is a score of which he is a part and which is part of him. I am tempted to say that the Second Symphony is the most characteristic score Mahler ever composed: it is rather unabashedly loose and unbuttoned in construction; it is scored for extraordinary instrumental and vocal forces; it is long and unwieldy, almost impractical from a performance standpoint; it makes use of poetry from two widely different sources in German literature—the collection of folk poetry, "Des Knaben Wunderhorn," and the "Resurrection Ode" of Klopstock; it is decadent (in the literary sense) in its conception and its execution. But how perfectly it mirrors the attitudes and philosophy prevalent in Vienna during the pre-1914 days, and what a self-portrait it is of its creator! The ardent Mahlerite—and I yield second place to nobody in my enthusiasm for the music of this composer—clasps the Second Symphony to his breast in ardent devotion.

As mentioned above, the performance last Saturday evening was one of those occasions when almost all the elements are exactly right. Orchestra and chorus were inspired to give of their electrifying best by the dedicated figure on the podium; Miss Tourel sang her "Urlicht" movement from "Des Knaben Wunderhorn" like an angel, and Theresa Green, a student at the Berkshire Music Center, was superb in the brief soprano solos of the last movement.

There does remain a negative note to add, however. Mr. Bernstein's excessively idiosyncratic podium mannerisms, which always were objectionable, have now become downright ludicrous. Last Saturday night he all but got down on his hands and knees and sang "Mammy" before the assembled forces on stage. I am sure Mr. Bernstein is capable of communicating his conception without behaving as though he had swallowed a bagful of Mexican jumping beans.

The concert, which was this year's Koussevitzky Memorial Concert, began with a performance—beautifully done—of an old-time Koussevitzky specialty, the Prelude to Moussorgsky's "Khovantchina," and also included a marvelously sensitive interpretation of Ravel's Song Cycle "Scheherazade," with the ubiquitous Miss Tourel as soloist. At the conclusion of the work Mr. Bernstein motioned to Miss Doriot Anthony, the orchestra's first flute, to step forward and share with him and Miss Tourel the warm applause; Miss Anthony had spun her solo in "La Flute Enchantee" out of the purest gossamer. It remains to be added that after the concert the Bruckner Society of America presented to Mr. Bernstein the Mahler medal in recognition of his devotion to the composer's music.

On Sunday afternoon Mr. Munch returned to conduct the Fifth Symphony of Schubert, Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings, the Second Suite from Roussel's Ballet "Bacchus et Araine" and with Gregor Piatigorsky as soloist Strauss' "Don Quixote" and the First Cello Concerto of Milhaud. Mr. Munch's more moderate approach since the end of the recent Boston season, noted in this space last week, was again in evidence in his performance of the Schubert. The two outer movements were rushed, but the second and third movements had a gentleness and tranquillity of spirit not formally usual with Mr. Munch. Especially rewarding was his insistence that the repetitions of the main theme of the Trio be taken pianissimo. In the Barber Adagio, performed, incidentally, with the composer in the audience, Mr. Munch got a ravishingly beautiful tone from the strings.

It was good to welcome Mr. Piatigorsky back to the concert stage; he had been absent for almost a year because of illness. At the concert Sunday afternoon his tone was smaller and more constricted than it had been at the open rehearsal on Saturday morning; was he using a different instrument? Otherwise the Munch-Piatigorsky "Don Quixote" was wholly satisfactory, with an especially vivid realization of the sheep bleating section. The casual nonchalance of Milhaud's Concerto, which I think is a very important addition to the limited repertory for cello and orchestra, was expertly conveyed by the Messrs. Munch and Piatigorsky, and the whole was rounded off with a brilliant performance of the Roussel score, one of Mr. Munch's great specialties.

[286]

THE NEW YORK TIMES,

FRIDAY, AUGUST 14, 1953.

AMU

IN MUSIC FESTIVAL: Isaac Stern, violinist, who was heard last night in the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" concert at the Berkshire Music Festival.

TANGLEWOOD GIVES A GALA 'ON PARADE'

Afternoon, Evening Programs Marked by Two Premieres —Opera Excerpts Aperitif

By HOWARD TAUBMAN

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 13—The annual five-ring musical circus known as "Tanglewood on Parade" went on display here today for a one-day stand. The 400 students of the Berkshire Music Center, the full membership of the Boston Symphony Orchestra led by Charles Munch and Leonard Bernstein, and guest artists Isaac Stern, Leontyne Price and William Warfield provided an afternoon's and evening's entertainment in different areas of far-flung Tanglewood.

Although it began to darken as if for showers in the afternoon and there was a bit of light rain, the residents and holiday-makers in the Berkshire area came in large numbers. By 5:45 P. M., when the fanfare initiating the formal phase of thep roceedings had sounded, thousands of visitors were on the grounds.

But even before this fanfare, the Berkshire Music Center had provided musical diversion for the early arrivals. As an aperitif, there was a program of opera, which began at 4:15 P. M., in the formal garden. Students of the center's Opera Department presented a scene from Mozart's "Cosi fan tutte," and excerpts from "Pagliacci" and Chavrier's "an Incomplete Education."

They sang and played these excerpts in costume, using a platform as a stage, a few simple props and, as their backdrop, the trimmed hedges of the garden. In the distance were the mighty hills of Berkshire, as Hawthorne, who once lived and wrote on this estate, called them.

Welcoming Address Given

Louis, Erno Daniel of Wichita Falls, Tex.; Herbert Blomstedt of Sweden and Robert Mandell of New York. The 'cello soloist was Uziahu Wiesel of Israel.

In the chamber music hall, there was a program of chamber music with students as the performers. Brahms, Hindemith, Franck and two students—Jack Urbont of New York and Tossi Ichiyanagi of Japan—were the composers.

In the theatre-concert hall there were two world premières—Allen Sapp's Cantata, based on the William Blake, and the Jan Meyerowitz opera, "Bad Boys in School" —performed by the special study group at Tanglewood and the associate division of the opera department.

Both new works had Tanglewood connections. Mr. Sapp wrote his Cantata, specifically for the Tanglewood study group. As a result of receiving last year's Wechsler Commission from the Berkshire Music Center, and he had been a student here in 1942, Mr. Meyerowitz was at one time on the opera department's faculty.

Mr. Sapp's cantata is a practical piece designed for instrumentalists and singers not too far advanced, at the same time, it has a maturity and sweetness of feeling. Ingolf Dahl of the faculty conducted.

Mr. Meyerowitz' opera, for which he prepared the libretto after a play by Johann Nestroy, seems also to be designed for amateurs and semi-professionals. It is tuneful in a light-hearted way and its humors, theatrical and musical, are occasionally obvious; it is businesslike. Mr. Goldovsky staged and conducted this work.

According to tradition, the bulk of the audience took picnic suppers on the lawn. While the customers ate, the chorus department of the center sang a program of works by Copland, Weelkes, Monteverdi, Carlos Chavez (this year's eminent guest composing-teacher at Tanglewood), Kubik, Stewart and Jannequin from a station on the main porch of the administration building.

At the evening concert, Mr. Munch began the proceedings with Handel's "Water Music" and, Mr. Stern as the virile, searching soloist offered the Beethoven Violin Concerto. Mr. Bernstein led the second half—scenes from "Porgy and Bess"—with Miss Price and Mr. Warfield as the guest artists and the Berkshire Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, as the choral group of Catfish Row. The full house gave these performers, al expert and first-rate interpreters of the music they undertook, rousing receptions.

After the concert there was a drawing for door prizes. Anna Russell, who has made an art of spoofing art, was the guest of honor who did the drawing.

The evening ended with waltzing on the lawn by guests and Tanglewood students and faculty.

---

10 THE LAKEVILLE

ugust 13, 1953

GRACE NOT

Tanglewoo

(Continued from Pag

composer as stating that,
Miss Smithson, Berlioz sa marry Juliet (which he write my greatest symph play." Berlioz himself
"floating into a halcyon
wafted onward by the s breeze of imagination; w
the golden sun of love ur

e ardor and y impressions
e symphony

reat care had presentation
oists: Jennie
and Nicola
ire Festival
gh Ross, and
An audience
preciation in us hope that ue to bring s of Berlioz.

DAY

S.

Memorial Convening was in-
ble program, it
major work was
No. 2 in C Minor
phony) per-
Boston Sym-
Berkshire Fes-
Jennie Tourel
, conducted by

The symphony has a world-shaking theme written in the magnificent complexity of polyrhythms and tonality. The music is sometimes ugly, sometimes beautifully melodic, it is always powerful and stirring. Leonard Bernstein's interpretation of the brilliant and beautiful work again proved the young conductor's mastery. The deep emotionalism of the symphony coupled with intelligence and aestheticism in its performance, created a brilliant panorama. Quick changes of mood and rhythm visibly stirred the audience was Moussorgsky's Prelude to Khovanstchina, a musical landscape rich in tone and color.

All in all it was a concert that was a fitting memorial to the great Serge Koussevitsky.

SUNDAY
By A. C. S.

Although an overcast sky kept the attendance down at the afternoon concert, it had no effect on a distinguished performance by the Boston Symphony and the eminent cellist, Gregor Piatigorski. The youthfully enthusiastic Fifth Symphony of Schubert opened the program and was followed by Samuel Barber's moving Adagio for Strings, originally the slow movement of his String Quartet in B Minor.

Richard Strauss' musical narrative of Cervantes' lunatic knight Don Quixote was the central work on the program. Mr. Piatigorski, as soloist, gave a wonderfully sympathetic characterization of the title role, clearly defining the moods of humor and incongruity with a variety of tonal production and a singing clarity in the upper register. Joseph de Pasquale, first violist of the symphony, demonstrated his artistry anew in the representation of the amiable squire, Sancho Panza.

Mr. Piatigorski returned after the intermission, to play the Milhaud Concerto for Violoncello, No. 1, happily expounding the solo passages of this lyrical work. The concert was brought to a close with a spirited reading of Albert Roussel's Second Suite from "Bacchus and Ariane."

MONDAY
By A. C. S.

Andre Ernest Modeste Gretry, born in Liege, Belgium, in 1742, dominated the French operatic scene at the end of the eighteenth century, transmitting, as Henry Lang writes, "the lifelike vivacity and characterizing ability of the Italian opera buffa to the opera comique." One of Gretry's most famous operas, Richard the Lion-Hearted, was presented in an English translation by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center under the direction of Boris Goldovsky.

With a full measure of farce, pleasing tunes and some bright dialogue, the opera concerns itself with the rescue from imprisonment of King Richard I by his faithful minstrel, Blondel. Both roles were admirably sung; the former by Richard Cassily, and the latter by John McCollum who, having appeared on several Festival programs, gave us a new facet of his artistic abilities. Rosalind Elias, as the boy guide Antonio, and Lee Cass, as a most amusing British nobleman, gave persuasive performances as did the entire ensemble.

Much credit for the success of the evening may be attributed to the imaginative sets of John Blankenchip and the colorful costumes by Leo Van Witsen. A capacity audience expressed hearty approval of the production which brought a bit of past greatness to our attention.

Tanglewood Has Parade Of Opera, Concert Stage

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 13—Dull skies and humidity this afternoon and evening had little effect upon the spirits of the 8400 persons who turned out for the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" and turned in gross ticket receipts of approximately $20,000.

There was something doing from 4 p. m. on, following the words of welcome of Boris Goldovsky. Scenes from operas were performed in the gardens, while in the theater-shed two American premieres took place, and, in addition, the students' orchestra played in the shed and there was also chamber and choral music.

The evening program in the shed drew a capacity audience. The program opened with Charles Munch directing a charming performance of Handel's "Water on hand to make the evening complete.

Continued On Page 5

William Warfield is one of the greatest singing-actors of the time. His delineation of "Porgy" was sensitive, strong and deeply moving. Miss Price, who was a student at Tanglewood a couple of years ago, has a beautiful voice, clear, strong and of extended range. When the two singers joined their voices the effect was thrilling. Mr. Bernstein conducted with an eye to every effect, and none was lost.

American premieres do not happen too often at Tanglewood and so there was particular significance in the two performed this afternoon. The first was a cantata with a text by William Blake. It was composed by Allen Sapp and received a splendid build up from Aaron Copland, who introduced the work to the audience. It was conducted by Ingolf Dahl. This work was written for the students of Department 5, a department which has amateur musicians as well as those on the professional threshold. It is a work which can be played and sung by relatively inexperienced performers. We did not find it particularly rewarding. It is not generally pleasant music, but there are two clever inventions, one for strings and the other for strings and woodwinds. The song portions are negligible.

Hilarious Stuff

The opera, written by Jan Meyerowitz from a play by Johann Nestroy, was also designed for use in schools or by semi-professional groups.

It is titled "Bad Boys in School" and it is hilarious from start to finish. The music is sprightly and humorous and entirely singable. The story is trite, but gives the youngsters plenty of opportunity to be real bad boys in school, to the consternation of the schoolmaster and the supervisor. this is an opera which should find its way into many schools and here's hoping it will.

Well, its been a big day and as soon as the music is over prizes will be drawn by the fabulous English comedienne, Anna Russell, who gave a show at the Stockbridge Theater this afternoon. Finally there will be dancing with Lukas Foss and Berkewitz at the pianos, playing waltzes. People will be tired when it's over but they have had a grand time.

'Tanglewood on Parade' Draws 8400 Music Lovers

Bsn Herald By RUDOLPH ELIE 8/14

TANGLEWOOD, Aug. 13—The busiest day of he year for Tanglewood, an event known as "Tanglewood on Parade," brought out a near-record audience of 8400 tonight in threatening weather to hear a blue-ribbon series of musical events that began at 4 o'clock and lasted through until midnight.

The main event was, of course, a special concert in the shed offering the Boston Symphony in a program including Handel's "Water Music," Beethoven's D Major concerto for Violin, with Isaac Stern as soloist, and two scenes from Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess,' with William Warfield an Leontyne Price the soloists. Leonard Bernstein conducted the Gershwin; Charles Munch the rest of the first half of the program.

This, however, was but one of eight or so events that began in the late afternoon with scenes of operas performed by members of Boris Goldovsky's opera department in the formal garden. The concluding opera called for a thunderstorm in its closing moment and the weather, always responsive in this regard in the Berkshire, obliged at the strategic moment with a brief but telling storm. It cleared in time to allow several thousand, to aprawl all over the grounds for the lawn party and picnic.

At six o'clock the musical events continued with simultaneous concerts of chamber music, choral singing, orchestral music, a new opera by Jan Meyrowitz and a new canatata by Allen Sapp, all performed by the students of the music center. The audience wandered informally from one event to another, settling down at last in and about the shed for the main event at the Tanglewood bell.

Following the concert door prizes were given out by comedienne Anna Russell. Waltzing on the lawn brought the affair to a close at midnight. The all-time record for Tanglewood on parade, occurred in 1950 when 8800 people turned out for a special benefit affair. Last year rain held the attendance to 4400. The estimates for the final events of this week end put the total 1953 attendance near the 160,000 mark for the six-week music festival. This will be an all-time record for the 16-year-old Berkshire event.

DOG E
Some Of E

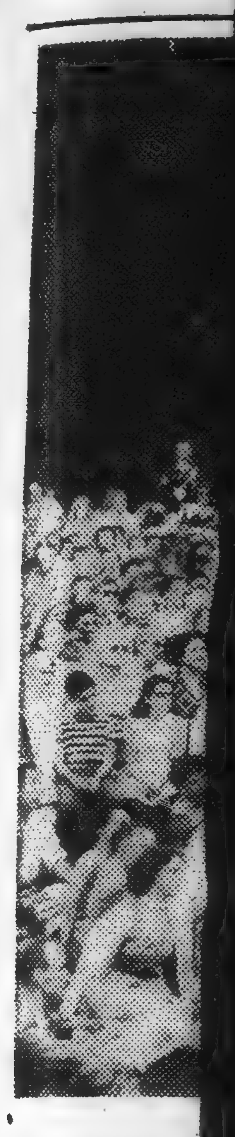
Volume



GARDEN
sentations whil
Center. Here,

THE NEW YORK TIMES

RIDAY, AUGUST 14, 1953.

IN MUSIC FESTIVAL: Isaac Stern, violinist, who was heard last night in the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" concert at the Berkshire Music Festival.

TANGLEWOOD GIVES A GALA 'ON PARADE'

Afternoon, Evening Programs Marked by Two Premieres —Opera Excerpts Aperitif

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 13—The annual five-ring musical circus known as "Tanglewood on Parade" went on display here today for a one-day stand. The 400 students of the Berkshire Music Center, the full membership of the Boston Symphony Orchestra led by Charles Munch and Leonard Bernstein, and guest artists Isaac Stern, Leontyne Price and William Warfield provided an afternoon's and evening's entertainment in different areas of far-flung Tanglewood.

Although it began to darken as if for showers in the afternoon and there was a bit of light rain, the residents and holiday-makers in the Berkshire area came in large numbers. By 5:45 P. M., when the fanfare initiating the formal phase of thep roceedings had sounded, thousands of visitors were on the grounds.

But even before this fanfare, the Berkshire Music Center had provided musical diversion for the early arrivals. As an aperitif, there was a program of opera, which began at 4:15 P. M., in the formal garden. Students of the center's Opera Department presented a scene from Mozart's "Cosi fan tutte," and excerpts from "Pagliacci" and Chavrier's "an Incomplete Education."

They sang and played these excerpts in costume, using a platform as a stage, a few simple props and, as their backdrop, the trimmed hedges of the garden. In the distance were the mighty hills of Berkshire, as Hawthorne, who once lived and wrote on this estate, called them.

Welcoming Address Given

Boris Goldovsky, head of the Opera Department, spoke the brief welcoming address for Tanglewood after the fanfare had assembled a crowd on the lawn before the shed. The visitors were invited to take pot-luck wherever their musical tastes inclined them. These were their choices:

In the main shed, where the Boston Symphony played in the evening, the Orchestra Department of the center presented works by Prokofieff, Dvorak, Debussy and Ravel. The student conductors were Harold Blumenfeld of St. Louis, Erno Daniel of Wichita Falls, Tex.; Herbert Blomstedt of Sweden and Robert Mandell of New York. The 'cello soloist was Uziahu Wiesel of Israel.

In the chamber music hall, there was a program of chamber music with students as the performers. Brahms, Hindemith, Franck and two students—Jack Urbont of New York and Tossi Ichiyanagi of Japan—were the composers.

In the theatre-concert hall there were two world premières—Allen Sapp's Cantata, based on the William Blake, and the Jan Meyerowitz opera, "Bad Boys in School"—performed by the special study group at Tanglewood and the associate division of the opera department.

Both new works had Tanglewood connections. Mr. Sapp wrote his Cantata, specifically for the Tanglewood study group. As a result of receiving last year's Wechsler Commission from the Berkshire Music Center, and he had been a student here in 1942, Mr. Meyerowitz was at one time on the opera department's faculty.

Mr. Sapp's cantata is a practical piece designed for instrumentalists and singers not too far advanced; at the same time, it has a maturity and sweetness of feeling. Ingolf Dahl of the faculty conducted.

Mr. Meyerowitz' opera, for which he prepared the libretto after a play by Johann Nestroy, seems also to be designed for amateurs and semi-professionals. It is tuneful in a light-hearted way and its humors, theatrical and musical, are occasionally obvious; it is businesslike. Mr. Goldovsky staged and conducted this work.

According to tradition, the bulk of the audience took picnic suppers on the lawn. While the customers ate, the chorus department of the center sang a program of works by Copland, Weelkes, Monteverdi, Carlos Chavez (this year's eminent guest composing-teacher at Tanglewood), Kubik, Stewart and Jannequin from a station on the main porch of the administration building.

At the evening concert, Mr. Munch began the proceedings with Handel's "Water Music" and, Mr. Stern as the virile, searching soloist offered the Beethoven Violin Concerto. Mr. Bernstein led the second half—scenes from "Porgy and Bess"—with Miss Price and Mr. Warfield as the guest artists and the Berkshire Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, as the choral group of Catfish Row. The full house gave these performers, al expert and first-rate interpreters of the music they undertook, rousing receptions.

After the concert there was a drawing for door prizes. Anna Russell, who has made an art of spoofing art, was the guest of honor who did the drawing.

The evening ended with waltzing on the lawn by guests and Tanglewood students and faculty.

"floating into a halcyon
wafted onward by the s breeze of imagination; w
the golden sun of love ur

e ardor and y impressions
e symphony

reat care had presentation
oists: Jennie
and Nicola
ire Festival
gh Ross, and
An audience
preciation in us hope that
ue to bring
s of Berlioz.

'Tanglewood on Parade' Draws 8400 Music Lovers

Bsn Herald By RUDOLPH ELIE 8/14

TANGLEWOOD, Aug. 13—The busiest day of he year for Tanglewood, an event known as "Tanglewood on Parade," brought out a near-record audience of 8400 tonight in threatening weather to hear a blue-ribbon series of musical events that began at 4 o'clock and lasted through until midnight.

The main event was, of course, a special concert in the shed offering the Boston Symphony in a program including Handel's "Water Music," Beethoven's D Major concerto for Violin, with Isaac Stern as soloist, and two scenes from Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess,' with William Warfield an Leontyne Price the soloists. Leonard Bernstein conducted the Gershwin; Charles Munch the rest of the first half of the program.

This, however, was but one of eight or so events that began in the late afternoon with scenes of operas performed by members of Boris Goldovsky's opera department in the formal garden. The concluding opera called for a thunderstorm in its closing moment and the weather, always responsive in this regard in the Berkshire, obliged at the strategic moment with a brief but telling storm. It cleared in time to allow several thousand to aprawl all over the grounds for the lawn party and picnic.

At six o'clock the musical events continued with simultaneous concerts of chamber music, choral singing, orchestral music, a new opera by Jan Meyrowitz and a new canatata by Allen Sapp, all performed by the students of the music center. The audience wandered informally from one event to another, settling down at last in and about the shed for the main event at the Tanglewood bell.

Following the concert door prizes were given out by comedienne Anna Russell. Waltzing on the lawn brought the affair to a close at midnight. The all-time record for Tanglewood on parade, occurred in 1950 when 8800 people turned out for a special benefit affair. Last year rain held the attendance to 4400. The estimates for the final events of this week end put the total 1953 attendance near the 160,000 mark for the six-week music festival. This will be an all-time record for the 16-year-old Berkshire event.

---

ugust 13, 1953

DAY
S.

Memorial Convening was in-
ble program, it
major work was
No. 2 in C Minor
phony) per-
Boston Sym-
Berkshire Fes-
Jennie Tourel
, conducted by

The symphony has a world-shaking theme written in the magnificent complexity of polyrhythms and tonality. The music is sometimes ugly, sometimes beautifully melodic, it is always powerful and stirring. Leonard Bernstein's interpretation of the brilliant and beautiful work again proved the young conductor's mastery. The deep emotionalism of the symphony coupled with intelligence and aestheticism in its performance, created a brilliant panorama. Quick changes of mood and rhythm visibly stirred the audience was Moussorgsky's Prelude to Khovanstchina, a musical landscape rich in tone and color.

All in all it was a concert that was a fitting memorial to the great Serge Koussevitsky.

GFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIEL

ASS., FRID

glewood

From Page 1

a performance of l beauty, yet sturdy earthy. When Issac
he Beethoven violin
s something worth hear. Tonight, with conducting and the ony Orchestra pro-collaboration, one rmance of the great
s wholly rewarding.
was recalled innum-s to acknowledge plause.

Porgy and Bess Stars

The second portion of the program was turned over to Leonard Bernstein and was devoted to two scenes from "Porgy and Bess" with the distinguished proponents of the roles, Leontyne Price and Willian Warfield, as soloists. The Berkshire festival chorus was also on hand to make the evening complete.

William Warfield is one of the greatest singing-actors of the time. His delineation of "Porgy" was sensitive, strong and deeply moving. Miss Price, who was a student at Tanglewood a couple of years ago, has a beautiful voice, clear, strong and of extended range. When the two singers joined their voices the effect was thrilling. Mr. Bernstein conducted with an eye to every effect, and none was lost.

American premieres do not happen too often at Tanglewood and so there was particular significance in the two performed this afternoon. The first was a cantata with a text by William Blake. It was composed by Allen Sapp and received a splendid build up from Aaron Copland, who introduced the work to the audience. It was conducted by Ingolf Dahl. This work was written for the students of Department 5, a department which has amateur musicians as well as those on the professional threshold. It is a work which can be played and sung by relatively inexperienced performers. We did not find it particularly rewarding. It is not generally pleasant music, but there are two clever inventions, one for strings and the other for strings and woodwinds. The song portions are negligible.

Hilarious Stuff

The opera, written by Jan Meyerowitz from a play by Johann Nestroy, was also designed for use in schools or by semi-professional groups.

It is titled "Bad Boys in School" and it is hilarious from start to finish. The music is sprightly and humorous and entirely singable. The story is trite, but gives the youngsters plenty of opportunity to be real bad boys in school, to the consternation of the schoolmaster and the supervisor. this is an opera which should find its way into many schools and here's hoping it will.

Well, its been a big day and as soon as the music is over prizes will be drawn by the fabulous English comedienne, Anna Russell, who gave a show at the Stockbridge Theater this afternoon. Finally there will be dancing with Lukas Foss and Berkewitz at the pianos, playing waltzes. People will be tired when it's over but they have had a grand time.

Has Parade
oncert Stage

SUNDAY
By A. C. S.

Although an overcast sky kept the attendance down at the afternoon concert, it had no effect on a distinguished performance by the Boston Symphony and the eminent cellist, Gregor Piatigorski. The youthfully enthusiastic Fifth Symphony of Schubert opened the program and was followed by Samuel Barber's moving Adagio for Strings, originally the slow movement of his String Quartet in B Minor.

Richard Strauss' musical narrative of Cervantes' lunatic knight Don Quixote was the central work on the program. Mr. Piatigorski, as soloist, gave a wonderfully sympathetic characterization of the title role, clearly defining the moods of humor and incongruity with a variety of tonal production and a singing clarity in the upper register. Joseph de Pasquale, first violist of the symphony, demonstrated his artistry anew in the representation of the amiable squire, Sancho Panza.

Mr. Piatigorski returned after the intermission to play the Milhaud Concerto for Violincello No. 1, happily expounding the solo passages of this lyrical work. The concert was brought to a close with a spirited reading of Albert Roussel's Second Suite from "Bacchus and Ariane."

MONDAY
By A. C. S.

Andre Ernest Modeste Gretry, born in Liege, Belgium, in 1742, dominated the French operatic scene at the end of the eighteenth century, transmitting, as Henry Lang writes, "the lifelike vivacity and characterizing ability of the Italian opera buffa to the opera comique." One of Gretry's most famous operas, Richard the Lion-Hearted was presented in an English translation by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center under the direction of Boris Goldovsky.

With a full measure of farce, pleasing tunes and some bright dialogue, the opera concerns itself with the rescue from imprisonment of King Richard I by his faithful minstrel, Blondel. Both roles were admirably sung; the former by Richard Cassily, and the latter by John McCollum who, having appeared on several Festival programs, gave us a new facet of his artistic abilities. Rosalind Elias, as the boy guide Antonio, and Lee Cass, as a most amusing British nobleman, gave persuasive performances as did the entire ensemble.

Much credit for the success of the evening may be attributed to the imaginative sets of John Blankenchip and the colorful costumes by Leo Van Witsen. A capacity audience expressed hearty approval of the production which brought a bit of past greatness to our attention.

DOG B
Some Of Br

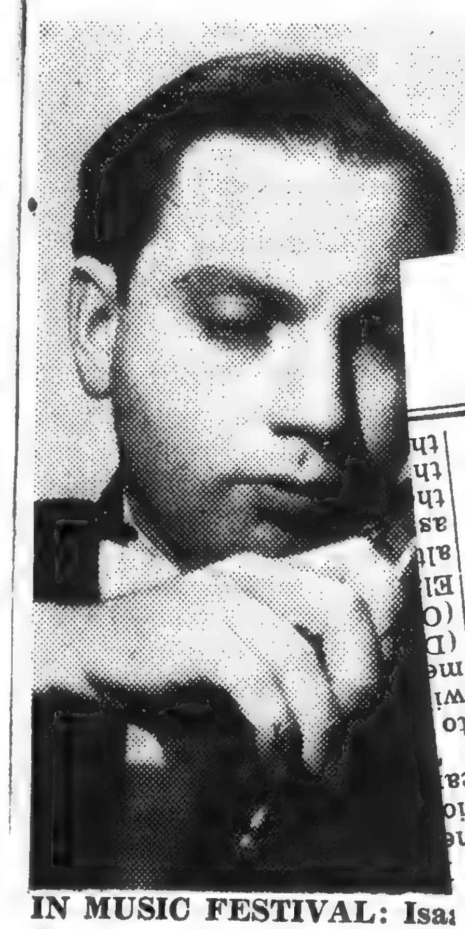
Volume 6

GARDEN
sentations whil
Center. Here.

THE NEW YORK TIMES

FRIDAY, AUGUST 14, 1953.



IN MUSIC FESTIVAL: Isaac Stern, violinist, who was heard last night in the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" concert at the Berkshire Music Festival.

TANGLEWOOD GIVES A GALA 'ON PARADE'

ograms nieres
ritif

FRIDAY, AUGUST

GFIELD, MASS., FRID

Tanglewood

Continued From Page 1

Music" suite; a performance of grace and tonal beauty, yet sturdy and sometimes earthy. When Issac Stern plays the Beethoven violin concerto it is something worth going far to hear. Tonight, with Mr. Munch conducting and the Boston Symphony Orchestra providing expert collaboration, one heard a performance of the great opus that was wholly rewarding. The violinist was recalled innumberable times to acknowledge tumultuous applause.

Porgy and Bess Stars

The second portion of the program was turned over to Leonard Bernstein and was devoted to two scenes from "Porgy and Bess" with the distinguished proponents of the roles, Leontyne Price and Willian Warfield, as soloists. The Berkshire festival chorus was also on hand to make the evening complete.

William Warfield is one of the greatest singing-actors of the time. His delineation of "Porgy" was sensitive, strong and deeply moving. Miss Price, who was a student at Tanglewood a couple of years ago, has a beautiful voice, clear, strong and of extended range. When the two singers joined their voices the effect was thrilling. Mr. Bernstein conducted with an eye to every effect, and none was lost.

American premieres do not happen too often at Tanglewood and so there was particular significance in the two performed this afternoon. The first was a cantata with a text by William Blake. It was composed by Allen Sapp and received a splendid build up from Aaron Copland, who introduced the work to the audience. It was conducted by Ingolf Dahl. This work was written for the students of Department 5, a department which has amateur musicians as well as those on the professional threshold. It is a work which can be played and sung by relatively inexperienced performers. We did not find it particularly rewarding. It is not generally pleasant music, but there are two clever inventions, one for strings and the other for strings and woodwinds. The song portions are negligible.

Hilarious Stuff

The opera, written by Jan Meyerowitz from a play by Johann Nestroy, was also designed for use in schools or by semi-professional groups.

It is titled "Bad Boys in School" and it is hilarious from start to finish. The music is sprightly and humorous and entirely singable. The story is trite, but gives the youngsters plenty of opportunity to be real bad boys in school, to the consternation of the schoolmaster and the supervisor. this is an opera which should find its way into many schools and here's hoping it will.

Well, its been a big day and as soon as the music is over prizes will be drawn by the fabulous English comedienne, Anna Russell, who gave a show at the Stockbridge Theater this afternoon. Finally there will be dancing with Lukas Foss and Berkewitz at the pianos, playing waltzes. People will be tired when it's over but they have had a grand time.

→

10 THE LAKEVILLE JOURNAL Thursday, August 13, 1953

GRACE NOTES

Tanglewood

(Continued from Page Six)

composer as stating that, on seeing Miss Smithson, Berlioz said: "I will marry Juliet (which he did), and write my greatest symphony on the play." Berlioz himself speaks of "floating into a halcyon of poetry, wafted onward by the sweet, soft breeze of imagination; warmed by the golden sun of love unveiled by

e ardor and y impressions
e symphony

reat care had presentation
oists: Jennie
and Nicola
ire Festival
gh Ross, and
An audience
preciation in us hope that
ue to bring s of Berlioz.

SATURDAY

By V. S.

The Koussevitsky Memorial Concert on Saturday evening was intended as a memorable program, it was all of that. The major work was Mahler's Symphony No. 2 in C Minor (Resurrection Symphony) performed by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Berkshire Festival Chorus, soloists Jennie Tourel and Theresa Green, conducted by Leonard Bernstein.

The symphony has a world-shaking theme written in the magnificent complexity of polyrhythms and tonality. The music is sometimes ugly, sometimes beautifully melodic, it is always powerful and stirring. Leonard Bernstein's interpretation of the brilliant and beautiful work again proved the young conductor's mastery. The deep emotionalism of the symphony coupled with intelligence and aestheticism in its performance, created a brilliant panorama. Quick changes of mood and rhythm visibly stirred the audience was Moussorgsky's Prelude to Khovanstchina, a musical landscape rich in tone and color.

All in all it was a concert that was a fitting memorial to the great Serge Koussevitsky.

SUNDAY

By A. C. S.

Although an overcast sky kept the attendance down at the afternoon concert, it had no effect on a distinguished performance by the Boston Symphony and the eminent cellist, Gregor Piatigorski, The youthfully enthusiastic Fifth Symphony of Schubert opened the program and was followed by Samuel Barber's moving Adagio for Strings, originally the slow movement of his String Quartet in B Minor.

Richard Strauss' musical narrative of Cervantes' lunatic knight Don Quixote was the central work on the program. Mr. Piatigorski, as soloist, gave a wonderfully sympathetic characterization of the title role, clearly defining the moods of humor and incongruity with a variety of tonal production and a singing clarity in the upper register. Joseph de Pasquale, first violist of the symphony, demonstrated his artistry anew in the representation of the amiable squire, Sancho Panza.

Mr. Piatigorski returned, after the intermission, to play the Milhaud Concerto for Violoncello, No. 1, happily expounding the solo passages of this lyrical work. The concert was brought to a close with a spirited reading of Albert Roussel's Second Suite from "Bacchus and Ariane."

MONDAY

By A. C. S.

Andre Ernest Modeste Gretry, born in Liege (Belgium) in 1742, dominated the French operatic scene at the end of the eighteenth century, transmitting, as Henry Lang writes, "the lifelike vivacity and characterizing ability of the Italian opera buffa to the opera comique." One of Gretry's most famous operas, Richard the Lion-Hearted, was presented in an English translation by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center under the direction of Boris Goldovsky.

With a full measure of farce, pleasing tunes and some bright dialogue, the opera concerns itself with the rescue from imprisonment of King Richard I by his faithful minstrel, Blondel. Both roles were admirably sung; the former by Richard Cassily, and the latter by John McCollum who, having appeared on several Festival programs, gave us a new facet of his artistic abilities. Rosalind Elias, as the boy guide Antonio, and Lee Cass, as a most amusing British nobleman, gave persuasive performances as did the entire ensemble.

Much credit for the success of the evening may be attributed to the imaginative sets of John Blankenchip and the colorful costumes by Leo Van Witsen. A capacity audience expressed hearty approval of the production which brought a bit of past greatness to our attention.

'Tanglewood on Parade' Draws 8400 Music Lovers

Bsn Herald By RUDOLPH ELIE 8/14

TANGLEWOOD, Aug. 13—The busiest day of he year for Tanglewood, an event known as "Tanglewood on Parade," brought out a near-record audience of 8400 tonight in threatening weather to hear a blue-ribbon series of musical events that began at 4 o'clock and lasted through until midnight.

The main event was, of course, a special concert in the shed offering the Boston Symphony in a program including Handel's "Water Music," Beethoven's D Major concerto for Violin, with Isaac Stern as soloist, and two scenes from Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess,' with William Warfield an Leontyne Price the soloists. Leonard Bernstein conducted the Gershwin; Charles Munch the rest of the first half of the program.

This, however, was but one of eight or so events that began in the late afternoon with scenes of operas performed by members of Boris Goldovsky's opera department in the formal garden. The concluding opera called for a thunderstorm in its closing moment and the weather, always responsive in this regard in the Berkshire, obliged at the strategic moment with a brief but telling storm. It cleared in time to allow several thousand to aprawl all over the grounds for the lawn party and picnic.

At six o'clock the musical events continued with simultaneous concerts of chamber music, choral singing, orchestral music, a new opera by Jan Meyrowitz and a new canatata by Allen Sapp, all performed by the students of the music center. The audience wandered informally from one event to another, settling down at last in and about the shed for the main event at the Tanglewood bell.

Following the concert door prizes were given out by comedienne Anna Russell. Waltzing on the lawn brought the affair to a close at midnight. The all-time record for Tanglewood on parade, occurred in 1950 when 8800 people turned out for a special benefit affair. Last year rain held the attendance to 4400. The estimates for the final events of this week end put the total 1953 attendance near the 160,000 mark for the six-week music festival. This will be an all-time record for the 16-year-old Berkshire event.

Has Parade
oncert Stage

DOG BU
Some
Of Bre

Volume 62

GARDEN
sentations whi
Center. Here,

Relatively Untried Unit Gains National Title and Right to Play for World Honors

By GEORGE RAPEE

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 12—A dramatic story spun to its conclusion his afternoon here when the outhful, relatively untried contract bridge team of William A. Rosen and Milton M. Ellenby, both of Chicago, Douglas Steen of Los Angeles, Donald Oakie of San Francisco, and Clifford Bishop of Detroit, clinched the 1953 United States team-of-four championship.

At the close of this afternoon's final matches in the three-day eight-team round robin contest the winners had clearly established heir right to represent the United States in the official world's championship scheduled to be held n Europe next February.

Following is the final standing of the teams in matches won and ost:

Rosen, Ellenby, Steen, Bishop, Oakie won 6, lost 1.
Mrs. Edith Kemp, Tobias Stone, New York; Waldemar von Zedtwitz, Harry Harkavy, Miami, and Alvin Roth, Washington, won 4, lost 3.
David Carter, St. Louis; F. Ayres Bombeck and John Hubbell, Kansas City; Arthur Kincaid Liberty, Mo., and George R. Nail, Wichita, won 4, lost 3.
Bertram Lebhar Jr., New York; Sam Katz, Miami; Albert Weiss, Chicago; David Clarren and Edward Burns, Minneapolis, won 4, lost 3.

Associated Press Wirephoto

baby monkey she "adopted"

with an offspring this morning. nly it isn't his baby at all, and he knows it.

Mrs. Baboon, better known as "Girlie," kidnapped a cute little monkey that escaped from his own cage and climbed up the bars of the baboon cage. "Girlie" whipped out a paw and gathered the 4-month-old monkey into her maternal arms. She murmured to it, groomed its fur and fussed over it as if it were her own. "Papa" Baboon was taken n completely.

After consultation, zoo officials decided to let the new "mother" get away with her fraud.

---

nce ticket racket nded jail sentenc
Judge Noonan p nce when notified
ple authorities wer
Carranza who g erm in the reforma
ssault and battery
Meanwhile, Edwa
47, of 63 Margar
Chickie's Lunch
t. was fined $200 f
lace to be used for leaded guilty.

THE NEW YORK TIMES

FRIDAY, AUGUST 14, 1953.

IN MUSIC FESTIVAL: Isa Stern, violinist, who w heard last night in the annu "Tanglewood on Parade concert at the Berkshire Musi Festival.

TANGLEWOOD GIVES A GALA 'ON PARADE'

ogram
nieres
ritif

FRIDAY, AUGUST

IGFIELD, MASS., FRID

Has Parade oncert Stage

Tanglewood

Continued From Page 1

Music" suite; a performance of grace and tonal beauty, yet sturdy and sometimes earthy. When Issac Stern plays the Beethoven violin concerto it is something worth going far to hear. Tonight, with Mr. Munch conducting and the Boston Symphony Orchestra providing expert collaboration, one heard a performance of the great opus that was wholly rewarding. The violinist was recalled innumberable times to acknowledge tumultuous applause.

Porgy and Bess Stars

The second portion of the pro-

---

10 THE LAKEVILLE JOURNAL Thursday, August 13, 1953

GRACE NOTES

Tanglewood

(Continued from Page Six)

composer as stating that, on seeing Miss Smithson, Berlioz said: "I will marry Juliet (which he did), and write my greatest symphony on the play." Berlioz himself speaks of "floating into a halcyon of poetry, wafted onward by the sweet, soft breeze of imagination; warmed by the golden sun of love unveiled by Shakespeare." All the ardor and warmth of these early impressions are embodied in the symphony written in 1839.

It was obvious that great care had been lavished on this presentation of the work by the soloists: Jennie Tourel, John McCollum and Nicola Mascona, the Berkshire Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross, and the Boston Symphony. An audience of 7500 expressed its appreciation in prolonged applause. Let us hope that Mr. Munch will continue to bring us such inspired readings of Berlioz.

SATURDAY

By V. S.

The Koussevitsky Memorial Concert on Saturday evening was intended as a memorable program, it was all of that. The major work was Mahler's Symphony No. 2 in C Minor (Resurrection Symphony) performed by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Berkshire Festival Chorus, soloists Jennie Tourel and Theresa Green, conducted by Leonard Bernstein.

The symphony has a world-shaking theme written in the magnificent complexity of polyrhythms and tonality. The music is sometimes ugly, sometimes beautifully melodic, it is always powerful and stirring. Leonard Bernstein's interpretation of the brilliant and beautiful work again proved the young conductor's mastery. The deep emotionalism of the symphony coupled with intelligence and aestheticism in its performance, created a brilliant panorama. Quick changes of mood and rhythm visibly stirred the audience and the great burst of cheers at the conclusion of the work was like an explosion of pent-up emotion.

The first three movements of the symphony are instrumental, the fourth movement introduces the simple, solemn melody sung by contralto Jennie Tourel. The fifth movement brings the lovely soprano voice of Theresa Green, the chorus, and the great blending of voices in the orchestra.

June Tourel was also soloist in Ravel's Sheherazade, Three Poems for Voice and Orchestra to the Verses of Tristan Klingsor. Miss Tourel was truly an enchantress in this work. Her voice, light and clear, gave the illusion of veiled oriental splendor and mistiness. She has the trick of growing in stature and conveys the feeling of fluid grace, as she stands quietly with hands tightly clasped.

The opening work of the concert was Moussorgsky's Prelude to Khovanstchina, a musical landscape rich in tone and color.

All in all it was a concert that was a fitting memorial to the great Serge Koussevitsky.

SUNDAY

By A. C. S.

Although an overcast sky kept the attendance down at the afternoon concert, it had no effect on a distinguished performance by the Boston Symphony and the eminent cellist, Gregor Piatigorski, The youthfully enthusiastic Fifth Symphony of Schubert opened the program and was followed by Samuel Barber's moving Adagio for Strings, originally the slow movement of his String Quartet in B Minor.

Richard Strauss' musical narrative of Cervantes' lunatic knight Don Quixote was the central work on the program. Mr. Piatigorski, as soloist, gave a wonderfully sympathetic characterization of the title role, clearly defining the moods of humor and incongruity with a variety of tonal production and a singing clarity in the upper register. Joseph de Pasquale, first violist of the symphony, demonstrated his artistry anew in the representation of the amiable squire, Sancho Panza.

Mr. Piatigorski returned, after the intermission, to play the Milhaud Concerto for Violincello, No. 1, happily expounding the solo passages of this lyrical work. The concert was brought to a close with a spirited reading of Albert Roussel's Second Suite from "Bacchus and Ariane."

MONDAY

By A. C. S.

Andre Ernest Modeste Gretry, born in Liege, Belgium, in 1742, dominated the French operatic scene at the end of the eighteenth century, transmitting, as Henry Lang writes, "the lifelike vivacity and characterizing ability of the Italian opera buffa to the opera comique." One of Gretry's most famous operas, Richard the Lion-Hearted, was presented in an English translation by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center under the direction of Boris Goldovsky.

With a full measure of farce, pleasing tunes and some bright dialogue, the opera concerns itself with the rescue from imprisonment of King Richard I by his faithful minstrel, Blondel. Both roles were admirably sung; the former by Richard Cassily, and the latter by John McCollum who, having appeared on several Festival programs, gave us a new facet of his artistic abilities. Rosalind Elias, as the boy guide Antonio, and Lee Cass, as a most amusing British nobleman, gave persuasive performances as did the entire ensemble.

Much credit for the success of the evening may be attributed to the imaginative sets of John Blankenchip and the colorful costumes by Leo Van Witsen. A capacity audience expressed hearty approval of the production which brought a bit of past greatness to our attention.

'Tangl Draw

TANC
The b
Tang
"Ta
br
er

"Wat
Major co
Isaac Stern a scenes from Gers and Bess,' with Wil field an Leontyne Price th ists. Leonard Bernstein co ducted the Gershwin; Charles Munch the rest of the first half of the program.

musi music, a n rowitz and a
Allen Sapp, all perf
students of the music
The audience wandered inf
ally from one event to another, settling down at last in and about the shed for the main event at the Tanglewood bell.

Following the concert door prizes were given out by comedienne Anna Russell. Waltzing on the lawn brought the affair to a close at midnight. The alltime record for Tanglewood on parade, occurred in 1950 when 8800 people turned out for a special benefit affair. Last year rain held the attendance to 4400. The estimates for the final events of this week end put the total 1953 attendance near the 160,000 mark for the six-week music festival. This will be an all-time record for the 16-yearold Berkshire event.

I·J·FOX
2·DAY
Sav

DOG BUYER BEWARE
Some of the Evil Effects
Of Breeding for Showing
(Hartwell)—Page 17

The Berkshire Evening Eag

Volume 62—No. 79 Pittsfield, Massachusetts, Friday, August 14, 1953.

7

ARDEN SCENE AT BENEFIT: This large crowd filled the Tanglewood garden last night for the ope ntations while others gathered elsewhere on the spacious grounds to witness other demonstrations by the students of Center. Here, John McCollum and Sara Mae Endich are appearing in Chabrier's "An Incomplete Education," one of t ances given for the benefit of the Tanglewood school.

Tanglewood 'Parade' Draws Crowd of 8300

LENOX — Some 8300 people scampered across the lawn at Tanglewood yesterday afternoon and evening, dodging isolated raindrops and attempting to pluck choice musical morsels from the cornucopia of talent that was offered them. The 11th annual "Tanglewood on Parade," put on for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, took in approximately $20,345 for a near-record gate.

2000 More Than Last Year

The crowd was nearly 2000 more than that attending last year's performance and it closely approached the 8800 mark that Dr. Koussevitzky attained in 1950. The threatening weather and showers might have kept the crowd down slightly but it did not dampen the enthusiasm of those who did attend.

The first event started at 4 PM when the opera department presented three productions for reserved seat holders in the formal gardens. A jammed crowd saw Scene 2 from "Cosi Fan Tutti," arias and duets from "Pagliacci" and Chabrier's naughty but charming "An Incomplete Education." It was at this point that the rain started falling and the audience was torn between finding out what happened to the honeymoon couple and getting wet. Most got wet.

Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department, started the main events rolling slightly before 6. After the usual fanfare of trumpets, Mr. Goldovsky, in his inimitable accent, explained to the crowd just what was available. It was then every man for himself.

Some went to the theatre to hear the world premieres of two operas, others walked into the main Shed to hear the student symphony perform under student conductors, many walked over to the chamber music hall for works by student composers and some sat right down on the lawn and went to work on their picnic suppers.

Other Tanglewood stories and photos will be found on Page 13.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 15, 1953

MUSIC

The Berkshire Festival

NYHT

By Jay S. Harrison

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 14.—The Berkshire Music Festival entered its last week end tonight with a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, in Tanglewood's Music Shed. Johannes Brahms' "Deutsches Requiem" was the program's only work, with Lois Marshall, soprano, and William Farfield, baritone, as soloists. The Berkshire Festival Chorus, prepared for the occasion by Hugh Ross, rounded out the list of participants.

Brahms' Requiem, based on a text selected from the Lutheran Bible, was composed in 1866 when the composer, as yet neither bearded nor famous, was thirty-three years old. Contemporary musicology is still at odds concerning the motive for its conception, one camp claiming to find its inspiration in the death of Robert Schumann, and another in the passing of Brahms' mother. The point, however, is not worth laboring, since the work, in essence, is deeply reflective and tells us of nothing but the personal qualities of Brahms himself.

Enormous Contrast

As music, the Requiem provided an enormous contrast to the closing number of last night's "Tanglewood on Parade" program, during which Leonard Bernstein conducted the Boston Symphony in the second act of Gershwin "Porgy and Bess," assisted by Mr. Warfield, Leontyne Price, soprano; Betty Lou Allen, mezzo-soprano, and McHenry Boatwright, bass. Previously, and with Mr. Munch in charge, the orchestra had been heard in Handel's "Water Music" suite and Beethoven's Concerto in D, featuring Isaac Stern as violinist.

Let it be admitted at once (and then forgotten) that the Boston Symphony is hardly the ideal orchestra for the performance of Gershwin's music. The bridge from Beethoven to Gershwin, after all is a long one, and more than an intermission is needed to cross it.

Apart from a certain stiffness of rhythm and a misplaced gentility in the woodwind sonority, the work churned like the sea in a storm. Mr. Bernstein is this music's master and Mr. Warfield and Miss Price are its prophets. They know its core—its vigor, its caresses, its exhibitionism. Between them, and without benefit of staging, they brought the alternating agonies and joys of Catfish Row into pin-point focus that pricked the hearts of 8,000 listeners and lifted them into a passion of enthusiasm.

So also had the Beethoven of Mr. Stern. And rightly—it was a glowing performance. Mr. Stern, in addition to his hair-raising talents as a fiddler, refuses as a musician to take tradition and copy it. Everything he plays seems newly studied, recently re-examined, so that its emotional aspect constantly changes and grows as music indeed must always change and grow to keep healthy and stay alive.

Sure Tread

Thus, it was a pleasure to revisit the violinist as he mounted and descended the steps of a phrase, cautiously so as not to lurch or stumble, yet with the sure feel of a man who has trod these steps before.

The program had begun with a clean and whittled reading of Handel's "Water Music," and earlier in the afternoon Allen Sapp's cantata on the words of William Blake and Jan Meyerowitz's opera, "Bad Boys in School" had their world premieres by Tanglewood's opera department.

Both are simple works. Mr. Sapp' work begins with an overture formally in the French style but of a dissonant counter-int construction and continues course with considerable lyphonic ingenuity but little lliance of theme. Mr. Meyero-
's opera is a light, chuckling
e, blithe in tune, varied in cy. Schools and amateur ups should love it. Certainly, erday's audience did.

---

prano, as soloists.
conductor, the chorus and the chestra received curtain call af curtain all as the audience refus to let them go. It was one of the most appreciative demonstrations ever seen at Tanglewood. (For complete details on the main concert see the review by Jay C.
Rosenfeld, music critic of The

8,400 Attend Tanglewood Benefit Show

Waterbury Am. 8/14

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 14 — An audience of 8,400 persons at the Tanglewood-on-Parade program here last evening paid $20,400 in admissions for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center and heard a varied program that began at 5:45 p. m. and lasted until the last dancer on the lawn stopped at midnight.

In between, the audience—4,000 more than a year ago—heard Charles Munch conduct Handel's "Water Music" and Beethoven's "Violin Concerto" with Isaac Stern as soloist. Stern, known to Water-
, was particularly st part of the con-
rd Bernstein, con-
ond half of the con-
sic Shed, had the
ound with his an-
the orchestra, fes-
nd two soloists in
two from the sec-
hwin's "Porgy and
e Price, soprano,
and William War-
was excellent.
only part of the tainment. Before welcome by Boris
45 all activities of
r were thrown open
In the shed, short
ks were presented
ra; in the theater
ad Boys in School"
y Johann Nestroy,
nd music by Jan
s being presented erformance of "A
t," by Allen Sapp.
ntata with text by
from "Songs of In-
Songs of Experi-

e wandered about
to place on the
ng for a while at
d then going on for another. It was an
tunity to see this ic Center in opera-
one took advantage
unity. There were
ung folk about the camps in the area
ver bus loads of this experience. It
to watch the faces
youngsters as they
feast of music and
presented under conditions.
red leisurely about joying the beautiful and walks, and he lawns or at the
a delightful evening
d as we had the
it with friends to
a new experience,
ing to hear their
see that our own
about Tanglewood
are shared by each
who sees it for the
really is an exper-

week-end of the val begins tonight
Munch conducts the chorus and soloists
equiem." Saturday
will conduct a pro-
lius, Chavez, and h will conduct the
the season on Sun-
m. with a program
gner and Ravel. By final note is sound-
fternoon all records
will have been shat-
ryone will begin to
to the concerts of

S. M.

—The Berkshire Evening Eagle, Friday, Aug. 14, 1953

Many Questions For Operator At Tanglewood

Kay Mealy Likes Job Which She Calls Summer Vacation

"I like the job. I wouldn't miss it for the world." Miss Kay Mealey of Boston was speaking of her position at the busy Tanglewood switchboard, where she has spent six or seven weeks for the past five summers. The rest of the year she is in charge of mailing at Symphony Hall.

Pleasant, quick and efficient, as a telephone operator should be, there is practically no question Miss Mealey hasn't been asked over the telephone. "Can we have two rooms for tonight?" anxiously asks a man who believes he is speaking to the Tanglewood Motel on the Pittsfield-Lenox road. "What do we do if it rains?" "How do I get into the concert?" or "How do I join the Friends?" are asked many times a day.

The confusion about the Friends and how to get into student concerts is understandable. No one yet has found a clear, concise way to say that all student performances are open to those who make voluntary contributions to the support of the school through membership in the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. When told that they may attend something like 38 concerts on their membership card they cannot believe it.

"Is there a charge for general admission?" is another frequent question meaning: Is there a charge in addition to the ticket price? Of course there is not.

Calls From Everywhere

Calls come from all over the country for information, ticket reservations and messages to students and faculty. A real task is to locate them. They may be anywhere on the Tanglewood estate, in the village of Lenox, or even having a swim in Stockbridge Bowl. The only thing Miss Mealey can do is to post a note on the bulletin board, which usually is ignored. Probably the cottage where a student is living has no telephone.

"What's going on today?" is another question. Kay keeps the programs for all Festival and student performances, and reads them when asked. She says there aren't as many calls for programs at Tanglewood as at Symphony Hall, for The Eagle publishes all of them.

Many tourists seem to believe that all entertainment in the Berkshires centers at Tanglewood, for there are countless calls for Jacob's Pillow, Festival House, Music Inn, and the Berkshire Playhouse, to mention a few.

Mails to Concert Subscribers

In Boston, Kay posts about 5000 pieces of mail a day. Her chief correspondents are the subscribers to the Boston Symphony Orchestra concert series in Boston, New York, Providence and Tanglewood, and the Friends of the Orchestra and the Music Center. She is in charge of 50,000 stencils, which she keeps up-to-date. Before joining the orchestra management she was a bookkeeper at a clothing company, which she didn't enjoy as much.

Every summer she spends at the Tucker Street home of Charles McCarty, retired postmaster, and Mrs. McCarty. She eats in restaurants and inns about Lenox, but mostly dinners at Chef Karl's and lunches at the Tanglewood cafeteria. When asked what she does in her leisure time, she said she hasn't any. "The first year I was here I used to knit, but now the switchboard is too busy. Often there are no free lines."

As for her taste in music, Kay said, "I don't like modern music, definitely. I'm afraid I don't like the choruses." Her favorite composer, she believes, is Brahms. At Tanglewood she has more opportunity to listen than in Boston.

Asked whether she goes on a vacation she said that she does have four weeks, but not all together. "My stay at Tanglewood is my vacation," she said. "This is my summer home."

[280

DOG BUYER BEWARE
Some of the Evil Effects
Of Breeding for Showing
(Hartwell)—Page 17

The Berkshire Evening Eag

Volume 62—No. 79

Pittsfield, Massachusetts, Friday, August 14, 1953.

7

RDEN SCENE AT BENEFIT: This large crowd filled the Tanglewood garden last night for the oper ations while others gathered elsewhere on the spacious grounds to witness other demonstrations by the students of ter. Here, John McCollum and Sara Mae Endich are appearing in Chabrier's "An Incomplete Education," one of t ances given for the benefit of the Tanglewood school.

Tanglewood 'Parade' Draws Crowd of 8300

LENOX — Some 8300 people scampered across the lawn at Tanglewood yesterday afternoon and evening, dodging isolated raindrops and attempting to pluck choice musical morsels from the cornucopia of talent that was offered them. The 11th annual "Tanglewood on Parade," put on for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, took in approximately $20,345 for a near-record gate.

Other Tanglewood stories and photos will be found on Page 13.

2000 More Than Last Year

The crowd was nearly 2000 more than that attending last year's performance and it closely approached the 8800 mark that Dr. Koussevitzky attained in 1950. The threatening weather and showers might have kept the crowd down slightly but it did not dampen the enthusiasm of those who did attend.

The first event started at 4 PM when the opera department presented three productions for reserved seat holders in the formal gardens. A jammed crowd saw Scene 2 from "Cosi Fan Tutti," arias and duets from "Pagliacci" and Chabrier's naughty but charming "An Incomplete Education." It was at this point that the rain started falling and the audience was torn between finding out what happened to the honeymoon couple and getting wet. Most got wet.

Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department, started the main events rolling slightly before 6. After the usual fanfare of trumpets, Mr. Goldovsky, in his inimitable accent, explained to the crowd just what was available. It was then every man for himself.

Some went to the theatre to hear the world premieres of two operas, others walked into the main Shed to hear the student symphony perform under student conductors, many walked over to the chamber music hall for works by student composers and some sat right down on the lawn and went to work on their picnic suppers.

Because of the cloudy weather, there was not as much picture taking this year as in the past but there were still many who were not to be deterred by lack of light. Prominent among these were the many students from foreign lands who shot their 35 mm. cameras at anything and anybody. People were ordered to smile in at least 16 different languages.

At 7.15 the regular picnic hour started and many of the visitors moved over in front of the main house where they could eat while looking over the lake and listening to the chorus sing on the porch. There were many family groups present this year and especially noticeable were a pair of tots in bright red sweaters who kept rolling down the hill in high glee until one came to grief against the wire fence and the other against the flat of his mother's hand.

Adler Draws Caricatures

At this time the camp counselors began calling the rolls of their numerous groups to make sure that everyone was around to hear the main concert. Many had drifted over to watch Wolfe Adler, the multi-talented music student, draw caricatures of the patrons for the benefit of the Music Center. Others were standing in line to get an orange drink or some ice cream to polish off their cream cheese sandwiches and oranges. And at last at 8.15 everybody was ready for the gala concert in the big Shed.

The big Shed was filled to capacity and the lawn outside was covered with listeners as the weather turned mild and pleasant after the threatening afternoon. There was just enough of a breeze to relieve the mugginess of the day as Conductor Charles Munch walked to the center of the stage to begin the first number, Handel's suite, "Water Music." Mr. Munch then conducted Beethoven's violin concerto, Opus 61, with Isaac Stern as soloist. Mr. Stern and Mr. Munch received a tremendous ovation for their efforts.

The second half of the program consisted of scenes from Act II from George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess" with Leonard Bernstein conducting and William Warfield, baritone, and Leontyne Price, soprano, as soloists. The soloists, the conductor, the chorus and the orchestra received curtain call after curtain all as the audience refused to let them go. It was one of the most appreciative demonstrations ever seen at Tanglewood. (For complete details on the main concert see the review by Jay C. Rosenfeld music critic of The

---

8,400 Attend Tanglewood Benefit Show

Waterbury Am. 8/14

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 14 — An audience of 8,400 persons at the Tanglewood-on-Parade program here last evening paid $20,400 in admissions for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center and heard a varied program that began at 5:45 p. m. and lasted until the last dancer on the lawn stopped at midnight.

In between, the audience—4,000 more than a year ago—heard Charles Munch conduct Handel's "Water Music" and Beethoven's "Violin Concerto" with Isaac Stern as soloist. Stern, known to Water-
particularly
of the con-
nstein, con-
f of the con-
ed, had the
with his an-chestra, fes-
soloists in rom the sec-
"Porgy and
ce, soprano,
William War-
excellent.
part of the
ent. Before me by Boris activities of thrown open shed, short re presented the theater
ys in School"
ann Nestroy,
usic by Jan
ng presented
nance of "A
Allen Sapp.
with text by
'Songs of In-
of Experi-

dered about ace on the
a while at going on for
r. It was an
to see this r in opera-
k advantage
There were k about the
in the area s loads of xperience. It ch the faces
sters as they
f music and nted under ons.
surely about the beautiful walks, and ns or at the htful evening
we had the
h friends to experience,
hear their hat our own
Tanglewood
ared by each es it for the
is an exper-

end of the gins tonight conducts the
and soloists n." Saturday nduct a pro-
Chavez, and
conduct the eason on Sun-
m. with a program
agner and Ravel. By
final note is sound-
afternoon all records
will have been shat-
ryone will begin to
to the concerts of

S. M.

K HERALD TRIBUN

Abbott, of Ozark, Ohio, happily
pl. William H. Abbott, freed this partment had reported him kille r had received payment of $10,00
children.

dy Insurance Pa

(AP).— ration overn covery
e men action

asked illiam
, who
Com-ng
on man Abbott, said yesterday t money had been applied towa paying off a mortgage on t family home. She said she c not know what the family wou do if it is called on to repay t money to the government.

A V. A. spokesman told a r porter the agency assumes t
Abbott family owes it the $1 000 but that before any dema for repayment is made a V.
committee on waivers and fo feitures will study the case

course with considerable phonic ingenuity but little iance of theme. Mr. Meyero-
s opera is a light, chuckling
e, blithe in tune, varied in
y. Schools and amateur ps should love it. Certainly,
erday's audience did.

—The Berkshire Evening Eagle, Friday, Aug. 14, 1953

Many Questions For Operator At Tanglewood

Kay Mealy Likes Job Which She Calls Summer Vacation

"I like the job. I wouldn't miss it for the world." Miss Kay Mealey of Boston was speaking of her position at the busy Tanglewood switchboard, where she has spent six or seven weeks for the past five summers. The rest of the year she is in charge of mailing at Symphony Hall.

Pleasant, quick and efficient, as a telephone operator should be, there is practically no question Miss Mealey hasn't been asked over the telephone. "Can we have two rooms for tonight?" anxiously asks a man who believes he is speaking to the Tanglewood Motel on the Pittsfield-Lenox road. "What do we do if it rains?" "How do I get into the concert?" or "How do I join the Friends?" are asked many times a day.

The confusion about the Friends and how to get into student concerts is understandable. No one yet has found a clear, concise way to say that all student performances are open to those who make voluntary contributions to the support of the school through membership in the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. When told that they may attend something like 38 concerts on their membership card they cannot believe it.

"Is there a charge for general admission?" is another frequent question meaning: Is there a charge in addition to the ticket price? Of course there is not.

Calls From Everywhere

Calls come from all over the country for information, ticket reservations and messages to students and faculty. A real task is to locate them. They may be anywhere on the Tanglewood estate, in the village of Lenox, or even having a swim in Stockbridge Bowl. The only thing Miss Mealey can do is to post a note on the bulletin board, which usually is ignored. Probably the cottage where a student is living has no telephone.

"What's going on today?" is another question. Kay keeps the programs for all Festival and student performances, and reads them when asked. She says there aren't as many calls for programs at Tanglewood as at Symphony Hall, for The Eagle publishes all of them.

Many tourists seem to believe that all entertainment in the Berkshires centers at Tanglewood, for there are countless calls for Jacob's Pillow, Festival House, Music Inn, and the Berkshire Playhouse, to mention a few.

Mails to Concert Subscribers

In Boston, Kay posts about 5000 pieces of mail a day. Her chief correspondents are the subscribers to the Boston Symphony Orchestra concert series in Boston, New York, Providence and Tanglewood, and the Friends of the Orchestra and the Music Center. She is in charge of 50,000 stencils, which she keeps up-to-date. Before joining the orchestra management she was a bookkeeper at a clothing company, which she didn't enjoy as much.

Every summer she spends at the Tucker Street home of Charles McCarty, retired postmaster, and Mrs. McCarty. She eats in restaurants and inns about Lenox, but mostly dinners at Chef Karl's and lunches at the Tanglewood cafeteria. When asked what she does in her leisure time, she said she hasn't any. "The first year I was here I used to knit, but now the switchboard is too busy. Often there are no free lines."

As for her taste in music, Kay said, "I don't like modern music, definitely. I'm afraid I don't like the choruses." Her favorite composer, she believes, is Brahms. At Tanglewood she has more opportunity to listen than in Boston.

Asked whether she goes on a vacation she said that she does have four weeks, but not all together. "My stay at Tanglewood is my vacation," she said. "This is my summer home."

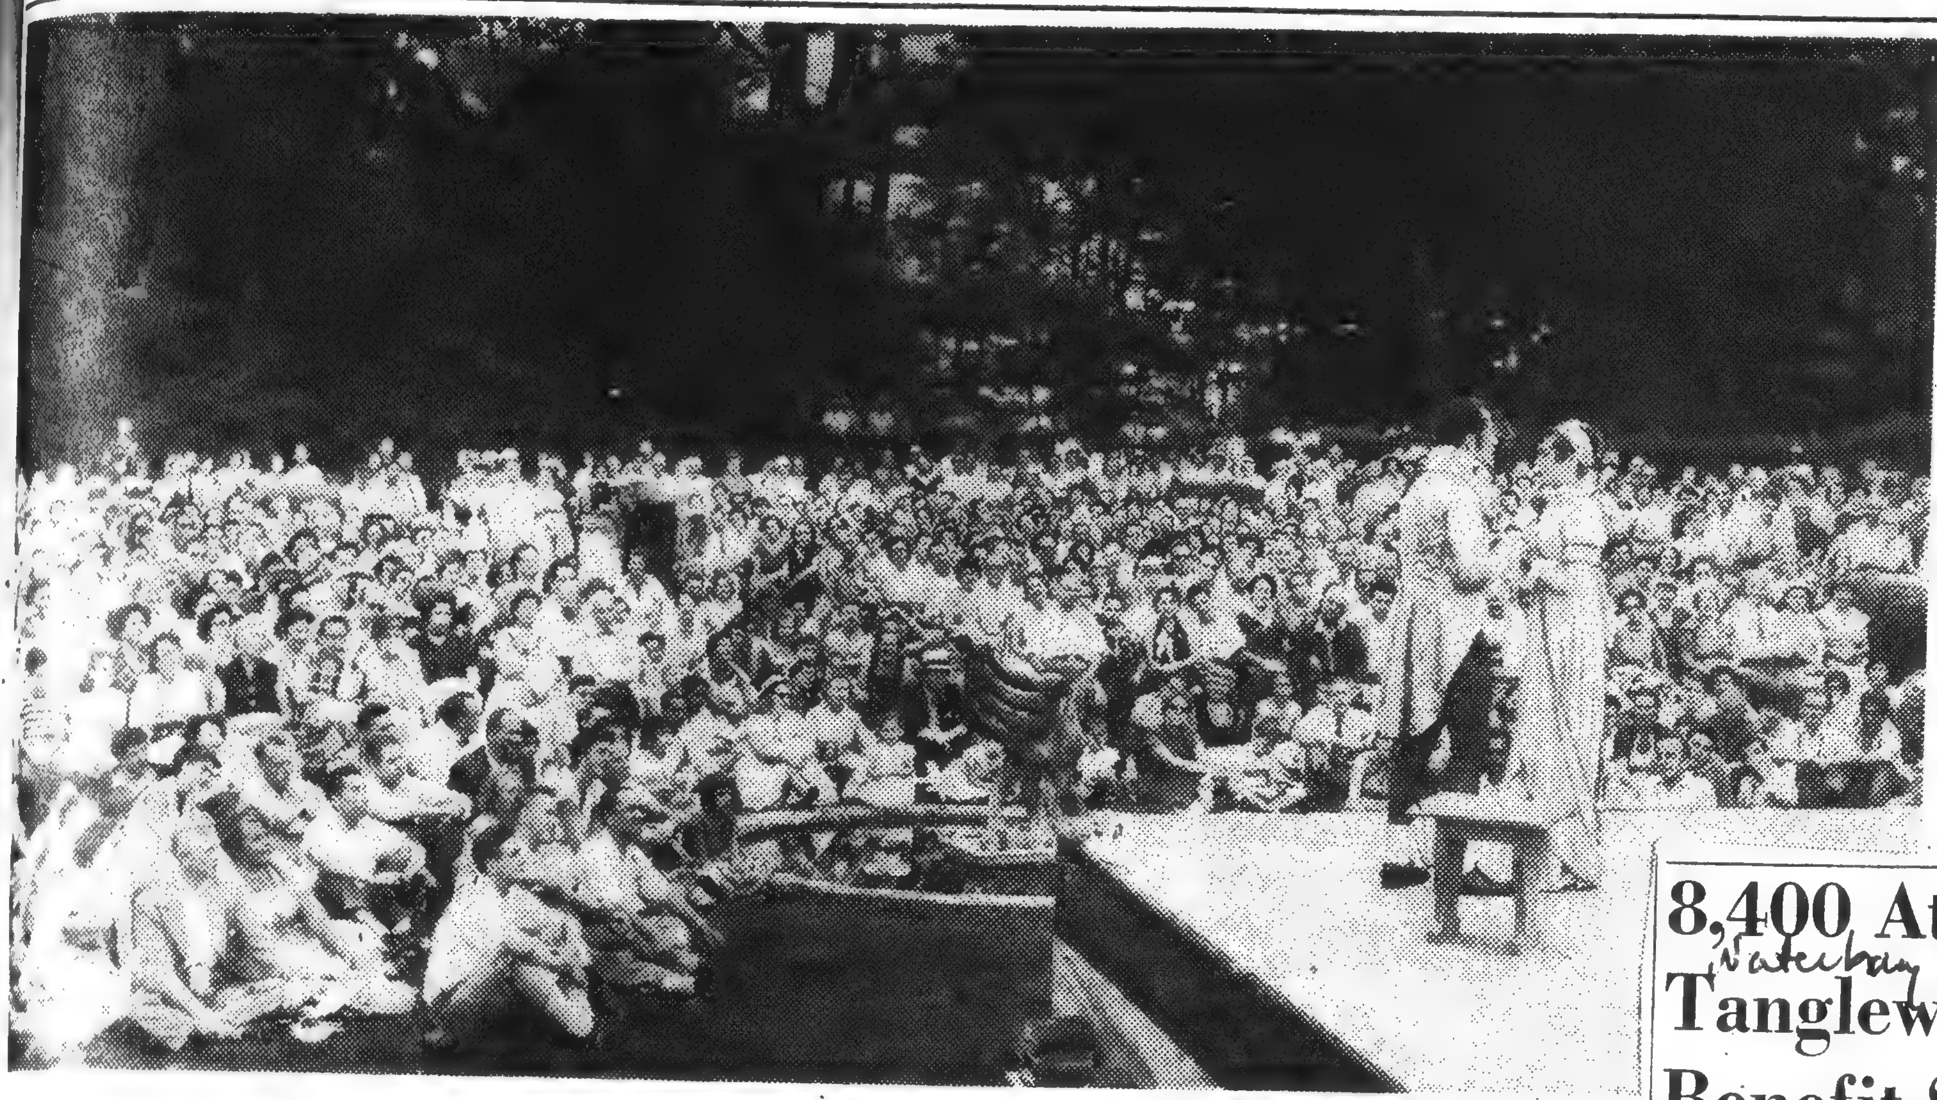
[28

DOG BUYER BEWARE
Some of the Evil Effects
Of Breeding for Showing
(Hartwell)—Page 17

The Berkshire Evening Eag

Volume 62—No. 79

Pittsfield, Massachusetts, Friday, August 14, 1953.



RDEN SCENE AT BENEFIT: This large crowd filled the Tanglewood garden last night for the oper ations while others gathered elsewhere on the spacious grounds to witness other demonstrations by the students of ter. Here, John McCollum and Sara Mae Endich are appearing in Chabrier's "An Incomplete Education," one of t ances given for the benefit of the Tanglewood school.

Tanglewood 'Parade' Draws Crowd of 8300

Other Tanglewood stories and photos will be found on Page 13.

LENOX — Some 8300 people scampered across the lawn at Tanglewood yesterday afternoon and evening, dodging isolated raindrops and attempting to pluck choice musical morsels from the cornucopia of talent that was offered them. The 11th annual "Tanglewood on Parade," put on for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, took in approximately $20,345 for a near-record gate.

2000 More Than Last Year

The crowd was nearly 2000 more than that attending last year's performance and it closely approached the 8800 mark that Dr. Koussevitzky attained in 1950. The threatening weather and showers might have kept the crowd down slightly but it did not dampen the enthusiasm of those who did attend.

The first event started at 4 PM when the opera department presented three productions for reserved seat holders in the formal gardens. A jammed crowd saw Scene 2 from "Cosi Fan Tutti," arias and duets from "Pagliacci" and Chabrier's naughty but charming "An Incomplete Education." It was at this point that the rain started falling and the audience was torn between finding out what happened to the honeymoon couple and getting wet. Most got wet.

Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department, started the main events rolling slightly before 6. After the usual fanfare of trumpets, Mr. Goldovsky, in his inimitable accent, explained to the crowd just what was available. It was then every man for himself.

Some went to the theatre to hear the world premieres of two operas, others walked into the main Shed to hear the student symphony perform under student conductors, many walked over to the chamber music hall for works by student composers and some sat right down on the lawn and went to work their picnic suppers.

Because of the cloudy weather, there was not as much picture taking this year as in the past but there were still many who were not to be deterred by lack of light. Prominent among these were the many students from foreign lands who shot their 35 mm. cameras at anything and anybody. People were ordered to smile in at least 16 different languages.

At 7.15 the regular picnic hour started and many of the visitors moved over in front of the main house where they could eat while looking over the lake and listening to the chorus sing on the porch. There were many family groups present this year and especially noticeable were a pair of tots in bright red sweaters who kept rolling down the hill in high glee until one came to grief against the wire fence and the other against the flat of his mother's hand.

Adler Draws Caricatures

At this time the camp counselors began calling the rolls of their numerous groups to make sure that everyone was around to hear the main concert. Many had drifted over to watch Wolfe Adler, the multi-talented music student, draw caricatures of the patrons for the benefit of the Music Center. Others were standing in line to get an orange drink or some ice cream to polish off their cream cheese sandwiches and oranges. And at last at 8.15 everybody was ready for the gala concert in the big Shed.

The big Shed was filled to capacity and the lawn outside was covered with listeners as the weather turned mild and pleasant after the threatening afternoon. There was just enough of a breeze to relieve the mugginess of the

Eagle.)

After the concert, the audience remained in their places while Anna Russell, who is appearing at the Stockbridge Playhouse this week, started the drawing for the 42 door prizes. Two members of the faculty played two pianos for dancing on the lawn south of the main house after the drawings.

8,400 Attend Tanglewood Benefit Show

Waterbury Am. 8/14

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 14 — An audience of 8,400 persons at the Tanglewood-on-Parade program here last evening paid $20,400 in admissions for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center and heard a varied program that began at 5:45 p. m. and lasted until the last dancer on the lawn stopped at midnight.

In between, the audience—4,000 more than a year ago—heard Charles Munch conduct Handel's "Water Music" and Beethoven's "Violin Concerto" with Isaac Stern as soloist. Stern, known to Water-
particularly
of the con-
nstein, con-
f of the con-
ied, had the
with his an-chestra, fes-
soloists in rom the sec-
"Porgy and
ce, soprano,
William War-
excellent.
part of the
ent. Before me by Boris activities of thrown open shed, short re presented the theater
ys in School"
ann Nestroy,
usic by Jan
ng presented
nance of "A
Allen Sapp.
with text by
"Songs of In-
of Experi-

dered about ace on the
a while at going on for
r. It was an
to see this r in opera-
k advantage
There were k about the
in the area
s loads of xperience. It ch the faces
sters as they
of music and ented under ons.
surely about the beautiful
walks, and ns or at the htful evening
we had the
h friends to experience,
hear their hat our own
Tanglewood
ared by each es it for the
is an exper-

end of the gins tonight
conducts the
and soloists
." Saturday
nduct a pro-
Chavez, and
conduct the eason on Sun-
m. with a program
agner and Ravel. By final note is sound-
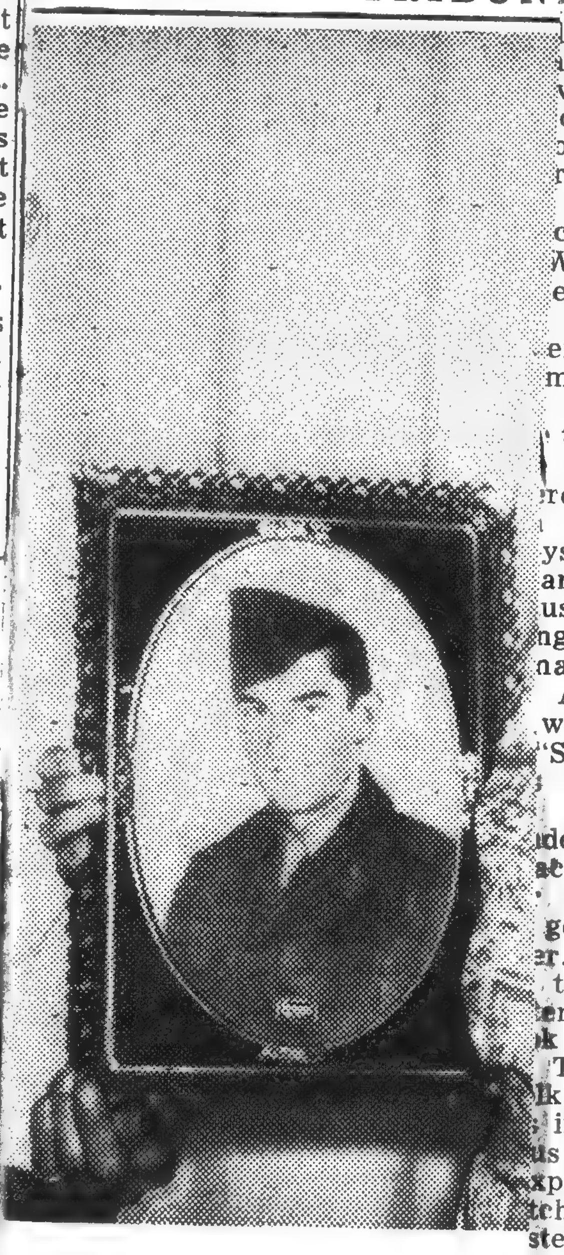
afternoon all records
will have been shat-
ryone will begin to
to the concerts of

S. M.

K HERALD TRIBUN



Abbott, of Ozark, Ohio, happily
pl. William H. Abbott, freed this artment had reported him kille r had received payment of $10,00
children.

dy Insurance Pa

(AP).— ration overn overy
e men
action

asked lliam
, who
Com-point

man Abbott, said yesterday t money had been applied towa paying off a mortgage on t family home. She said she c not know what the family wou do if it is called on to repay t money to the government.

A V. A. spokesman told a r porter the agency assumes t Abbott family owes it the $1 000 but that before any dema for repayment is made a V. committee on waivers and fo feitures will study the case its course with considerable polyphonic ingenuity but little brilliance of theme. Mr. Meyerowitz's opera is a light, chuckling piece, blithe in tune, varied in fancy. Schools and amateur groups should love it. Certainly, yesterday's audience did.

---

—The Berkshire Evening Eagle, Friday, Aug. 14, 1953

Many Questions For Operator At Tanglewood

Kay Mealy Likes Job Which She Calls Summer Vacation

"I like the job. I wouldn't miss it for the world." Miss Kay Mealey of Boston was speaking of her position at the busy Tanglewood switchboard, where she has spent six or seven weeks for the past five summers. The rest of the year she is in charge of mailing at Symphony Hall.

Pleasant, quick and efficient, as a telephone operator should be, there is practically no question Miss Mealey hasn't been asked over the telephone. "Can we have two rooms for tonight?" anxiously asks a man who believes he is speaking to the Tanglewood Motel on the Pittsfield-Lenox road. "What do we do if it rains?" "How do I get into the concert?" or "How do I join the Friends?" are asked many times a day.

The confusion about the Friends and how to get into student concerts is understandable. No one yet has found a clear, concise way to say that all student performances are open to those who make voluntary contributions to the support of the school through membership in the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. When told that they may attend something like 38 concerts on their membership card they cannot believe it.

"Is there a charge for general admission?" is another frequent question meaning: Is there a charge in addition to the ticket price? Of course there is not.

Calls From Everywhere

Calls come from all over the country for information, ticket reservations and messages to students and faculty. A real task is to locate them. They may be anywhere on the Tanglewood estate, in the village of Lenox, or even having a swim in Stockbridge Bowl. The only thing Miss Mealey can do is to post a note on the bulletin board, which usually is ignored. Probably the cottage where a student is living has no telephone.

"What's going on today?" is another question. Kay keeps the programs for all Festival and student performances, and reads them when asked. She says there aren't as many calls for programs at Tanglewood as at Symphony Hall, for The Eagle publishes all of them.

Many tourists seem to believe that all entertainment in the Berkshires centers at Tanglewood, for there are countless calls for Jacob's Pillow, Festival House, Music Inn, and the Berkshire Playhouse, to mention a few.

Mails to Concert Subscribers

In Boston, Kay posts about 5000 pieces of mail a day. Her chief correspondents are the subscribers to the Boston Symphony Orchestra concert series in Boston, New York, Providence and Tanglewood, and the Friends of the Orchestra and the Music Center. She is in charge of 50,000 stencils, which she keeps up-to-date. Before joining the orchestra management she was a bookkeeper at a clothing company, which she didn't enjoy as much.

Every summer she spends at the Tucker Street home of Charles McCarty, retired postmaster, and Mrs. McCarty. She eats in restaurants and inns about Lenox, but mostly dinners at Chef Karl's and lunches at the Tanglewood cafeteria. When asked what she does in her leisure time, she said she hasn't any. "The first year I was here I used to knit, but now the switchboard is too busy. Often there are no free lines."

As for her taste in music, Kay said, "I don't like modern music, definitely. I'm afraid I don't like the choruses." Her favorite composer, she believes, is Brahms. At Tanglewood she has more opportunity to listen than in Boston.

Asked whether she goes on a vacation she said that she does have four weeks, but not all together. "My stay at Tanglewood is my vacation," she said. "This is my summer home."

[28

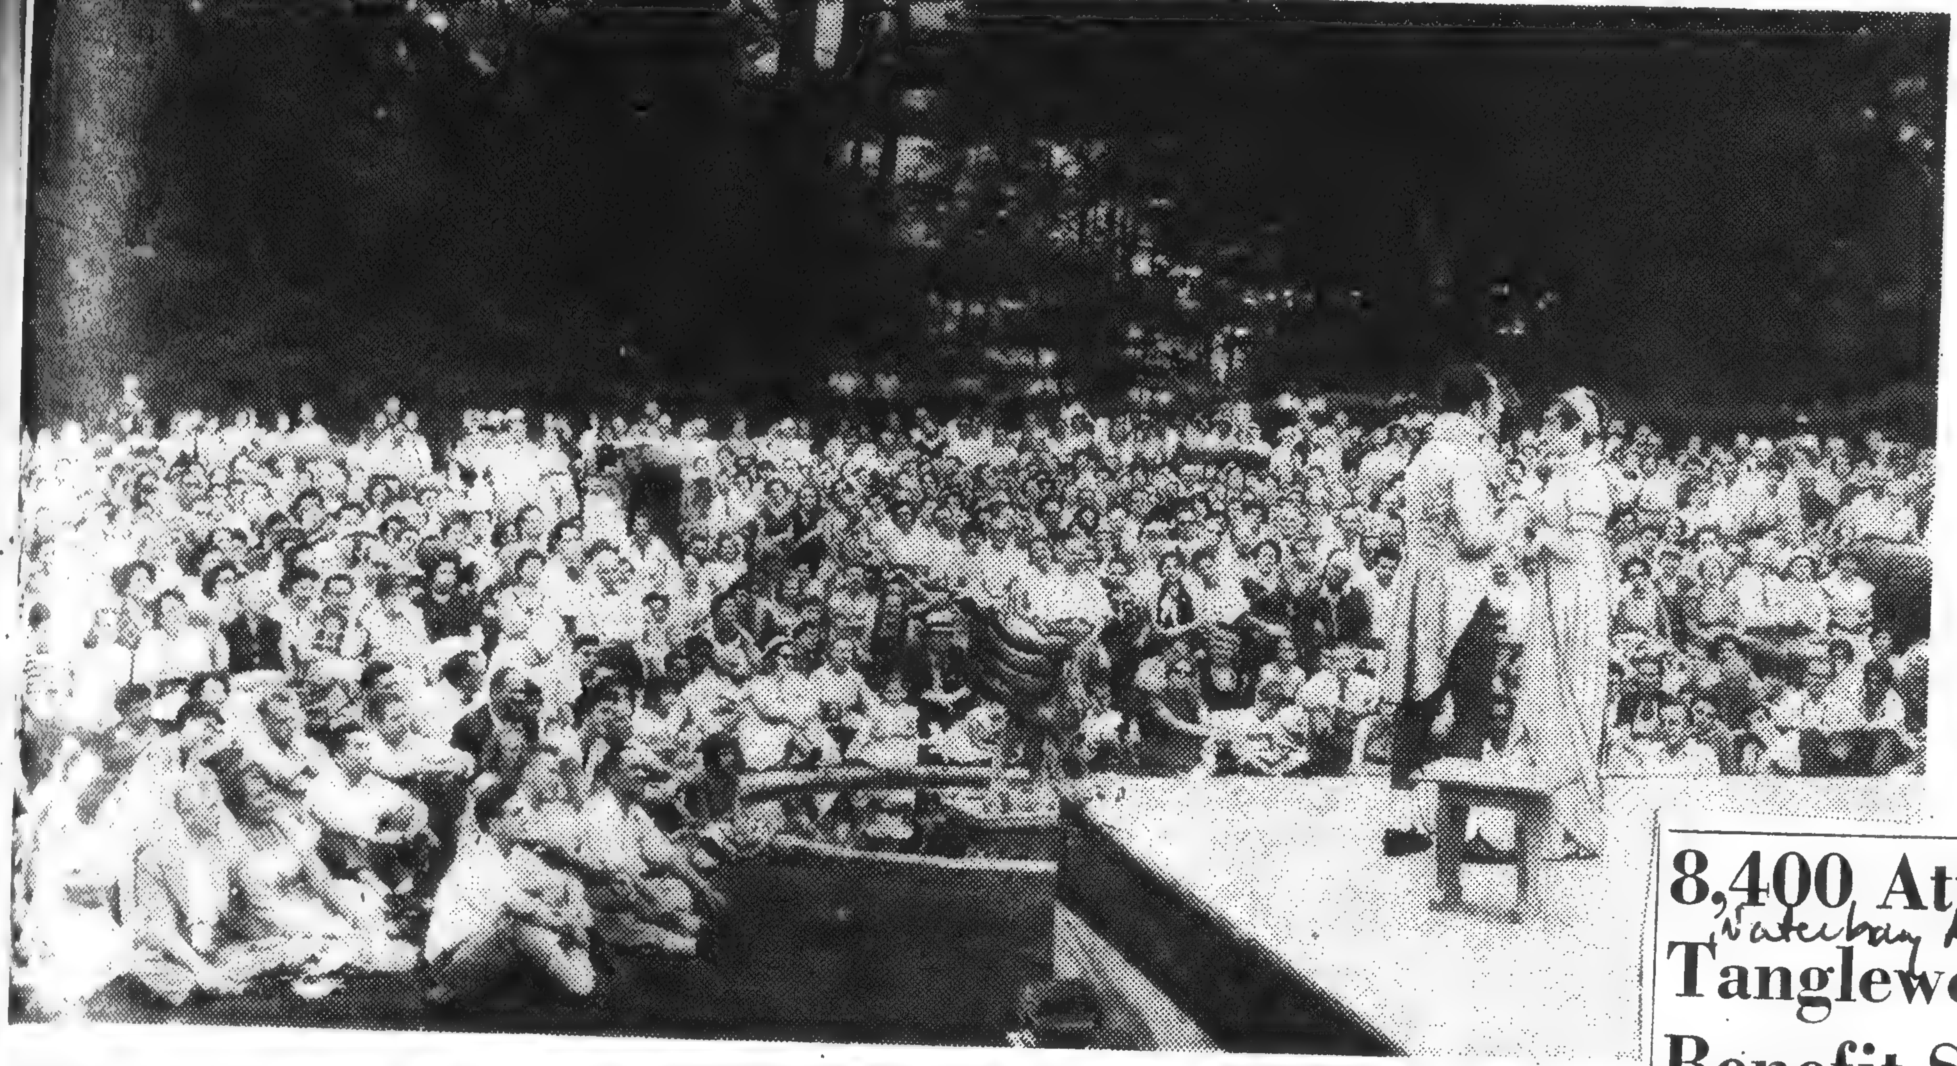
DOG BUYER BEWARE
Some of the Evil Effects
Of Breeding for Showing
(Hartwell)—Page 17

The Berkshire Evening Eag

Volume 62—No. 79

Pittsfield, Massachusetts, Friday, August 14, 1953.

7



RDEN SCENE AT BENEFIT: This large crowd filled the Tanglewood garden last night for the ope ations while others gathered elsewhere on the spacious grounds to witness other demonstrations by the students of ter. Here, John McCollum and Sara Mae Endich are appearing in Chabrier's "An Incomplete Education," one of t ances given for the benefit of the Tanglewood school.

Tanglewood 'Parade' Draws Crowd of 8300

LENOX — Some 8300 people scampered across the lawn at Tanglewood yesterday afternoon and evening, dodging isolated raindrops and attempting to pluck choice musical morsels from the cornucopia of talent that was offered them. The 11th annual "Tanglewood on Parade," put on for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, took in approximately $20,345 for a near-record gate.

2000 More Than Last Year

The crowd was nearly 2000 more than that attending last year's performance and it closely approached the 8800 mark that Dr. Koussevitzky attained in 1950. The threatening weather and showers might have kept the crowd down slightly but it did not dampen the enthusiasm of those who did attend.

The first event started at 4 PM when the opera department presented three productions for reserved seat holders in the formal gardens. A jammed crowd saw Scene 2 from "Cosi Fan Tutti," arias and duets from "Pagliacci" and Chabrier's naughty but charming "An Incomplete Education." It was at this point that the rain started falling and the audience was torn between finding out what happened to the honeymoon couple and getting wet. Most got wet.

Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department, started the main events rolling slightly before 6. After the usual fanfare of trumpets, Mr. Goldovsky, in his inimitable accent, explained to the crowd just what was available. It was then every man for himself.

Some went to the theatre to hear the world premieres of two operas, others walked into the main Shed to hear the student symphony perform under student conductors, many walked over to the chamber music hall for works by student composers and some sat right down on the lawn and went to work on their picnic suppers.

Other Tanglewood stories and photos will be found on Page 13.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 15, 1953

MUSIC

The Berkshire Festival

NYHT

By Jay S. Harrison

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 14.—The Berkshire Music Festival entered its last week end tonight with a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, in Tanglewood's Music Shed. Johannes Brahms' "Deutsches Requiem" was the program's only work, with Lois Marshall, soprano, and William Farfield, baritone, as soloists. The Berkshire Festival Chorus, prepared for the occasion by Hugh Ross, rounded out the list of participants.

Brahms' Requiem, based on a text selected from the Lutheran Bible, was composed in 1866 when the composer, as yet neither bearded nor famous, was thirty-three years old. Contemporary musicology is still at odds concerning the motive for its conception, one camp claiming to find its inspiration in the death of Robert Schumann, and another in the passing of Brahms' mother. The point, however, is not worth laboring, since the work, in essence, is deeply reflective and tells us of nothing but the personal qualities of Brahms himself.

Enormous Contrast

As music, the Requiem provided an enormous contrast to the closing number of last night's "Tanglewood on Parade" program, during which Leonard Bernstein conducted the Boston Symphony in the second act of Gershwin "Porgy and Bess," assisted by Mr. Warfield, Leontyne Price, soprano; Betty Lou Allen, mezzo-soprano, and McHenry Boatwright, bass. Previously, and with Mr. Munch in charge, the orchestra had been heard in Handel's "Water Music" suite and Beethoven's Concerto in D, featuring Isaac Stern as violinist.

Let it be admitted at once (and then forgotten) that the Boston Symphony is hardly the ideal orchestra for the performance of Gershwin's music. The bridge from Beethoven to Gershwin, after all is a long one, and more than an intermission is needed to cross it.

Apart from a certain stiffness of rhythm and a misplaced gentility in the woodwind sonority, the work churned like the sea in a storm. Mr. Bernstein is this music's master and Mr. Warfield and Miss Price are its prophets. They know its core—its vigor, its caresses, its exhibitionism. Between them, and without benefit of staging, they brought the alternating agonies and joys of Catfish Row into pin-point focus that pricked the hearts of 8,000 listeners and lifted them into a passion of enthusiasm.

So also had the Beethoven of Mr. Stern. And rightly—it was a glowing performance. Mr. Stern, in addition to his hair-raising talents as a fiddler, refuses as a musician to take tradition and copy it. Everything he plays seems newly studied, recently re-examined, so that its emotional aspect constantly changes and grows as music indeed must always change and grow to keep healthy and stay alive.

Sure Tread

Thus, it was a pleasure to revisit the violinist as he mounted and descended the steps of a phrase, cautiously so as not to lurch or stumble, yet with the sure feel of a man who has trod these steps before.

The program had begun with a clean and whittled reading of Handel's "Water Music," and earlier in the afternoon Allen Sapp's cantata on the words of William Blake and Jan Meyerowitz's opera, "Bad Boys in School" had their world premieres by Tanglewood's opera department.

Both are simple works. Mr. Sapp's work begins with an overture formally in the French style but of a dissonant counterpoint construction and continues its course with considerable polyphonic ingenuity but little brilliance of theme. Mr. Meyerowitz's opera is a light, chuckling piece, blithe in tune, varied in fancy. Schools and amateur groups should love it. Certainly, yesterday's audience did.

8,400 Attend Tanglewood Benefit Show

Waterbury Am. 8/14

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 14 — An audience of 8,400 persons at the Tanglewood-on-Parade program here last evening paid $20,400 in admissions for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center and heard a varied program that began at 5:45 p. m. and lasted until the last dancer on the lawn stopped at midnight.

In between, the audience—4,000 more than a year ago—heard Charles Munch conduct Handel's "Water Music" and Beethoven's "Violin Concerto" with Isaac Stern as soloist. Stern, known to Water-
, was particularly
st part of the con-
rd Bernstein, con-
ond half of the con-isic Shed, had the
ound with his an-
the orchestra, fes-
nd two soloists in
two from the sec-
hwin's "Porgy and
e Price, soprano,
and William War-
was excellent.
only part of the tainment. Before
welcome by Boris
45 all activities of
r were thrown open
In the shed, short
ks were presented
ra; in the theater
ad Boys in School"
y Johann Nestroy,
nd music by Jan
s being presented erformance of "A
t," by Allen Sapp.
ntata with text by
from "Songs of In-
Songs of Experi-

e wandered about
to place on the
ng for a while at
d then going on for another. It was an rtunity to see this ic Center in opera-
one took advantage
unity. There were
ung folk about the
camps in the area
ver bus loads of this experience. It
to watch the faces
youngsters as they
feast of music and
presented under conditions.
ered leisurely about
joying the beautiful
s and walks, and
he lawns or at the
a delightful evening
d as we had the
it with friends to
a new experience,
ing to hear their
see that our own
about Tanglewood
are shared by each
who sees it for the
really is an exper-

week-end of the ival begins tonight
Munch conducts the
chorus and soloists
equiem." Saturday
will conduct a pro-
ius, Chavez, and n will conduct the
the season on Sun-
m. with a program
gner and Ravel. By inal note is sound-
fternoon all records
will have been shat-
ryone will begin to
to the concerts of

S. M.

—The Berkshire Evening Eagle, Friday, Aug. 14, 1953

Many Questions For Operator At Tanglewood

Kay Mealy Likes Job Which She Calls Summer Vacation

"I like the job. I wouldn't miss it for the world." Miss Kay Mealey of Boston was speaking of her position at the busy Tanglewood switchboard, where she has spent six or seven weeks for the past five summers. The rest of the year she is in charge of mailing at Symphony Hall.

Pleasant, quick and efficient, as a telephone operator should be, there is practically no question Miss Mealey hasn't been asked over the telephone. "Can we have two rooms for tonight?" anxiously asks a man who believes he is speaking to the Tanglewood Motel on the Pittsfield-Lenox road. "What do we do if it rains?" "How do I get into the concert?" or "How do I join the Friends?" are asked many times a day.

The confusion about the Friends and how to get into student concerts is understandable. No one yet has found a clear, concise way to say that all student performances are open to those who make voluntary contributions to the support of the school through membership in the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. When told that they may attend something like 38 concerts on their membership card they cannot believe it.

"Is there a charge for general admission?" is another frequent question meaning: Is there a charge in addition to the ticket price? Of course there is not.

Calls From Everywhere

Calls come from all over the country for information, ticket reservations and messages to students and faculty. A real task is to locate them. They may be anywhere on the Tanglewood estate, in the village of Lenox, or even having a swim in Stockbridge Bowl. The only thing Miss Mealey can do is to post a note on the bulletin board, which usually is ignored. Probably the cottage where a student is living has no telephone.

"What's going on today?" is another question. Kay keeps the programs for all Festival and student performances, and reads them when asked. She says there aren't as many calls for programs at Tanglewood as at Symphony Hall, for The Eagle publishes all of them.

Many tourists seem to believe that all entertainment in the Berkshires centers at Tanglewood, for there are countless calls for Jacob's Pillow, Festival House, Music Inn, and the Berkshire Playhouse, to mention a few.

Mails to Concert Subscribers

In Boston, Kay posts about 5000 pieces of mail a day. Her chief correspondents are the subscribers to the Boston Symphony Orchestra concert series in Boston, New York, Providence and Tanglewood, and the Friends of the Orchestra and the Music Center. She is in charge of 50,000 stencils, which she keeps up-to-date. Before joining the orchestra management she was a bookkeeper at a clothing company, which she didn't enjoy as much.

Every summer she spends at the Tucker Street home of Charles McCarty, retired postmaster, and Mrs. McCarty. She eats in restaurants and inns about Lenox, but mostly dinners at Chef Karl's and lunches at the Tanglewood cafeteria. When asked what she does in her leisure time, she said she hasn't any. "The first year I was here I used to knit, but now the switchboard is too busy. Often there are no free lines."

As for her taste in music, Kay said, "I don't like modern music, definitely. I'm afraid I don't like the choruses." Her favorite composer, she believes, is Brahms. At Tanglewood she has more opportunity to listen than in Boston.

Asked whether she goes on a vacation she said that she does have four weeks, but not all together. "My stay at Tanglewood is my vacation," she said. "This is my summer home."

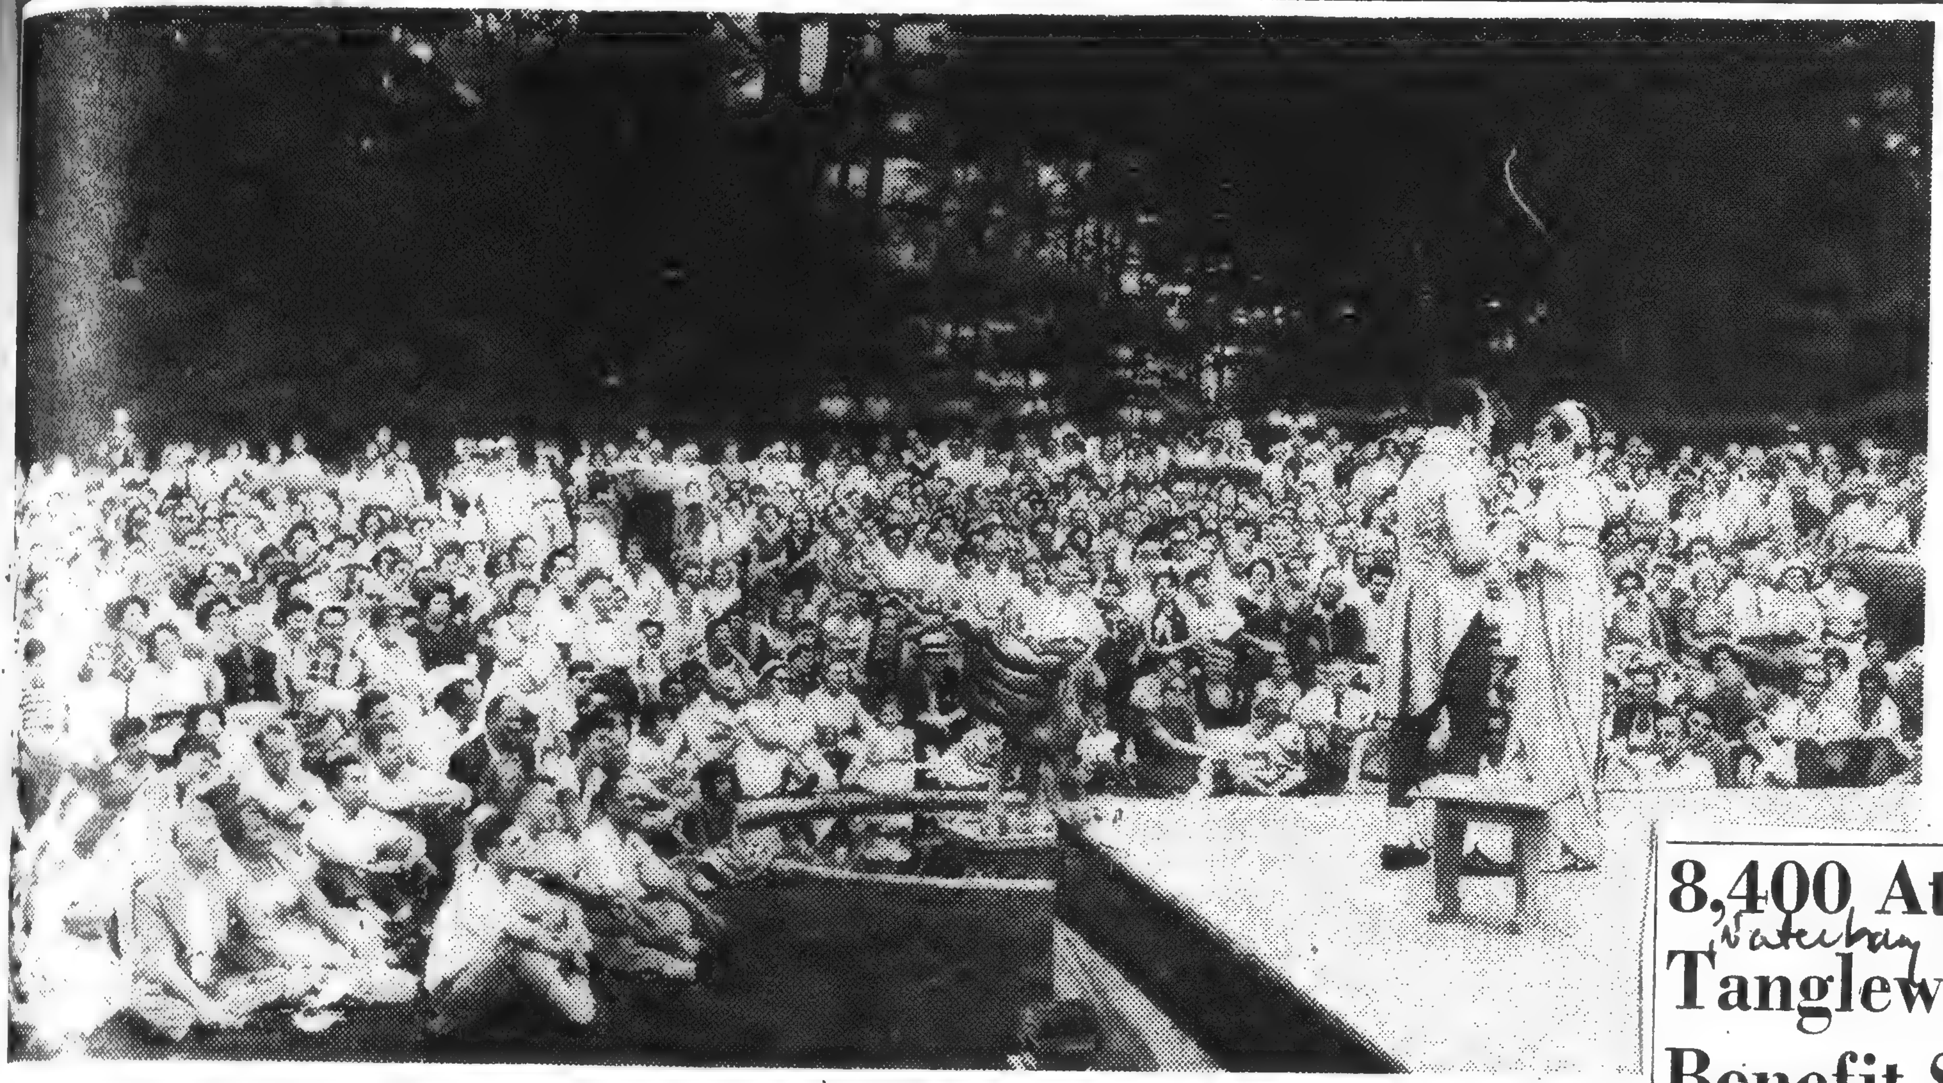
[2

DOG BUYER BEWARE
Some of the Evil Effects
Of Breeding for Showing
(Hartwell)—Page 17

The Berkshire Evening Eag

Volume 62—No. 79

Pittsfield, Massachusetts, Friday, August 14, 1953.



RDEN SCENE AT BENEFIT: This large crowd filled the Tanglewood garden last night for the ope ations while others gathered elsewhere on the spacious grounds to witness other demonstrations by the students of ter. Here, John McCollum and Sara Mae Endich are appearing in Chabrier's "An Incomplete Education," one of t ances given for the benefit of the Tanglewood school.

Tanglewood 'Parade' Draws Crowd of 8300

LENOX — Some 8300 people scampered across the lawn at Tanglewood yesterday afternoon and evening, dodging isolated raindrops and attempting to pluck choice musical morsels from the cornucopia of talent that was offered them. The 11th annual "Tanglewood on Parade," put on for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, took in approximately $20,345 for a near-record gate.

2000 More Than Last Year

The crowd was nearly 2000 more than that attending last year's performance and it closely approached the 8800 mark that Dr. Koussevitzky attained in 1950. The threatening weather and showers might have kept the crowd down slightly but it did not dampen the enthusiasm of those who did attend.

The first event started at 4 PM when the opera department presented three productions for reserved seat holders in the formal gardens. A jammed crowd saw Scene 2 from "Cosi Fan Tutti," arias and duets from "Pagliacci" and Chabrier's naughty but charming "An Incomplete Education." It was at this point that the rain started falling and the audience was torn between finding out what happened to the honeymoon couple and getting wet. Most got wet.

Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department, started the main events rolling slightly before 6. After the usual fanfare of trumpets, Mr. Goldovsky, in his inimitable accent, explained to the crowd just what was available. It was then every man for himself.

Some went to the theatre to hear the world premieres of two operas, others walked into the main Shed to hear the student symphony perform under student conductors, many walked over to the chamber music hall for works by student composers and some sat right down on the lawn and went to work on their picnic suppers.

Other Tanglewood stories and photos will be found on Page 13.

SATURDAY,

MUSIC

The Berl

By Jay S. Harrison

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 14.—Berkshire Music Festival en its last week end tonight a concert by the Boston phony Orchestra, Charles M conducting, in Tanglew Music Shed. Johannes Bra "Deutsches Requiem" was program's only work, with Marshall, soprano, and Will Farfield, baritone, as solo The Berkshire Festival Cho prepared for the occasion Hugh Ross, rounded out list of participants.

Brahms' Requiem, based text selected from the Luth Bible, was composed in when the composer, as neither bearded nor famous, thirty-three years old. Co temporary musicology is still odds concerning the motive its conception, one camp clai ing to find its inspiration in death of Robert Schumann, another in the passing Brahms' mother. The poin however, is not worth laboring since the work, in essence, is deeply reflective and tells us o nothing but the personal quali ties of Brahms himself.

Enormous Contrast

As music, the Requiem pr vided an enormous contrast the closing number of last night's "Tanglewood on Parade" program, during which Leonard Bernstein conducted the Boston Symphony in the second act o Gershwin "Porgy and Bess," assisted by Mr. Warfield, Leontyn Price, soprano; Betty Lou Allen mezzo-soprano, and McHenry Boatwright, bass. Previously and with Mr. Munch in charge, the orchestra had been heard in Handel's "Water Music" suite and Beethoven's Concerto in D, featuring Isaac Stern as violinist.

Let it be admitted at once (and then forgotten) that the Boston Symphony is hardly the ideal orchestra for the performance of Gershwin's music. The bridge

---

8,400 Attend Tanglewood Benefit Show

Waterbury Am. 8/14

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 14 — An audience of 8,400 persons at the Tanglewood-on-Parade program here last evening paid $20,400 in admissions for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center and heard a varied program that began at 5:45 p. m. and lasted until the last dancer on the lawn stopped at midnight.

In between, the audience—4,000 more than a year ago—heard Charles Munch conduct Handel's "Water Music" and Beethoven's "Violin Concerto" with Isaac Stern as soloist. Stern, known to Waterbury audiences, was particularly good in the last part of the concerto. Leonard Bernstein, conducting the second half of the concert in the Music Shed, had the audience spellbound with his antics as he led the orchestra, festival chorus, and two soloists in scenes one and two from the second act of Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess." Leontyne Price, soprano, sang beautifully and William Warfield, baritone, was excellent.

But that was only part of the evening's entertainment. Before that, from the welcome by Boris Goldovsky at 5:45 all activities of the Music Center were thrown open to the public. In the shed, short symphonic works were presented by the orchestra; in the theater concert hall, "Bad Boys in School" from a play by Johann Nestroy, with libretto and music by Jan Meyerowitz was being presented following the performance of "A Little Boy Lost," by Allen Sapp. This was a cantata with text by William Blake from "Songs of Innocence" and Songs of Experience."

The audience wandered about from place to place on the grounds, stopping for a while at one program and then going on for a brief taste of another. It was an excellent opportunity to see this wonderful Music Center in operation and everyone took advantage of the opportunity. There were hundreds of young folk about the grounds. Many camps in the area had brought over bus loads of youngsters for this experience. It was a pleasure to watch the faces of some of the youngsters as they reacted to this feast of music and musical talent presented under such informed conditions.

People wandered leisurely about the grounds, enjoying the beautiful formal gardens and walks, and picnicking on the lawns or at the tables. It was a delightful evening all around. And as we had the chance to see it with friends to whom this was a new experience, it was refreshing to hear their comments and see that our own enthusiasms about Tanglewood over the years are shared by each new individual who sees it for the first time. This really is an experience.

The closing week-end of the Berkshire Festival begins tonight when Charles Munch conducts the orchestra and chorus and soloists in Brahms' "Requiem." Saturday night Bernstein will conduct a program of Sibelius, Chavez, and Brahms. Munch will conduct the final concert of the season on Sunday at 2:30 p. m. with a program of Schubert, Wagner and Ravel. By the time the final note is sounded on Sunday afternoon all records for attendance will have been shattered and everyone will begin to look forward to the concerts of next summer.

S. M.

—The Berkshire Evening Eagle, Friday, Aug. 14, 1953

Many Questions For Operator At Tanglewood

Kay Mealy Likes Job Which She Calls Summer Vacation

"I like the job. I wouldn't miss it for the world." Miss Kay Mealey of Boston was speaking of her position at the busy Tanglewood switchboard, where she has spent six or seven weeks for the past five summers. The rest of the year she is in charge of mailing at Symphony Hall.

Pleasant, quick and efficient, as a telephone operator should be, there is practically no question Miss Mealey hasn't been asked over the telephone. "Can we have two rooms for tonight?" anxiously asks a man who believes he is speaking to the Tanglewood Motel on the Pittsfield-Lenox road. "What do we do if it rains?" "How do I get into the concert?" or "How do I join the Friends?" are asked many times a day.

The confusion about the Friends and how to get into student concerts is understandable. No one yet has found a clear, concise way to say that all student performances are open to those who make voluntary contributions to the support of the school through membership in the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. When told that they may attend something like 38 concerts on their membership card they cannot believe it.

"Is there a charge for general admission?" is another frequent question meaning: Is there a charge in addition to the ticket price? Of course there is not.

Calls From Everywhere

Calls come from all over the country for information, ticket reservations and messages to students and faculty. A real task is to locate them. They may be anywhere on the Tanglewood estate, in the village of Lenox, or even having a swim in Stockbridge Bowl. The only thing Miss Mealey can do is to post a note on the bulletin board, which usually is ignored. Probably the cottage where a student is living has no telephone.

"What's going on today?" is another question. Kay keeps the programs for all Festival and student performances, and reads them when asked. She says there aren't as many calls for programs at Tanglewood as at Symphony Hall, for The Eagle publishes all of them.

Many tourists seem to believe that all entertainment in the Berkshires centers at Tanglewood, for there are countless calls for Jacob's Pillow, Festival House, Music Inn, and the Berkshire Playhouse, to mention a few.

Mails to Concert Subscribers

In Boston, Kay posts about 5000 pieces of mail a day. Her chief correspondents are the subscribers to the Boston Symphony Orchestra concert series in Boston, New York, Providence and Tanglewood, and the Friends of the Orchestra and the Music Center. She is in charge of 50,000 stencils, which she keeps up-to-date. Before joining the orchestra management she was a bookkeeper at a clothing company, which she didn't enjoy as much.

Every summer she spends at the Tucker Street home of Charles McCarty, retired postmaster, and Mrs. McCarty. She eats in restaurants and inns about Lenox, but mostly dinners at Chef Karl's and lunches at the Tanglewood cafeteria. When asked what she does in her leisure time, she said she hasn't any. "The first year I was here I used to knit, but now the switchboard is too busy. Often there are no free lines."

As for her taste in music, Kay said, "I don't like modern music, definitely. I'm afraid I don't like the choruses." Her favorite composer, she believes, is Brahms. At Tanglewood she has more opportunity to listen than in Boston.

Asked whether she goes on a vacation she said that she does have four weeks, but not all together. "My stay at Tanglewood is my vacation," she said. "This is my summer home."

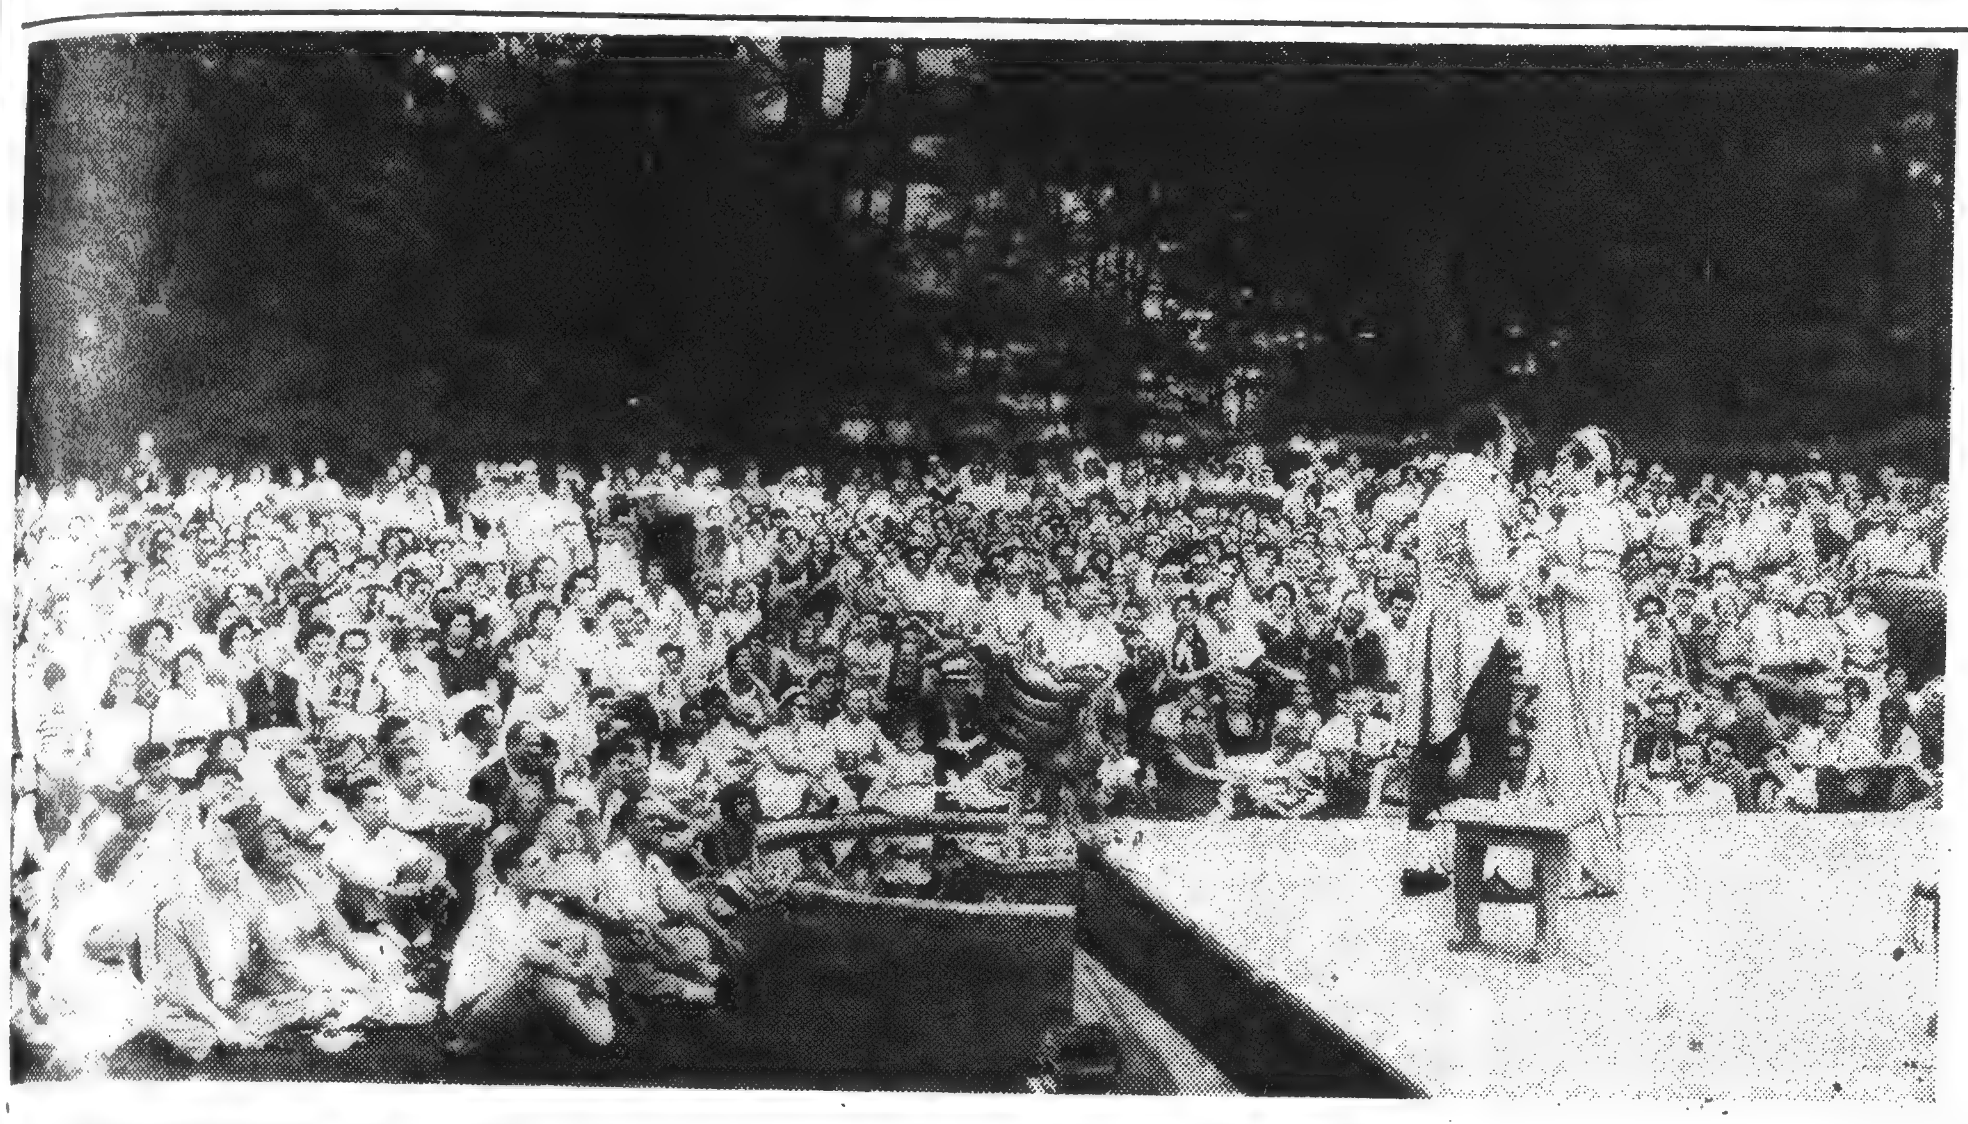
DOG BUYER BEWARE
Some of the Evil Effects
Of Breeding for Showing
(Hartwell)—Page 17

The Berkshire Evening Eag

7

Volume 62—No. 79

Pittsfield, Massachusetts, Friday, August 14, 1953.



Plouffe

GARDEN SCENE AT BENEFIT: This large crowd filled the Tanglewood garden last night for the opera department's presentations while others gathered elsewhere on the spacious grounds to witness other demonstrations by the students of the Berkshire Music Center. Here, John McCollum and Sara Mae Endich are appearing in Chabrier's "An Incomplete Education," one of three opera performances given for the benefit of the Tanglewood school.

Tanglewood 'Parade' Draws Crowd of 8300

LENOX — Some 8300 people scampered across the lawn at Tanglewood yesterday afternoon and evening, dodging isolated raindrops and attempting to pluck choice musical morsels from the cornucopia of talent that was offered them. The 11th annual "Tanglewood on Parade," put on for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, took in approximately $20,345 for a near-record gate.

2000 More Than Last Year

The crowd was nearly 2000 more than that attending last year's performance and it closely approached the 8800 mark that Dr. Koussevitzky attained in 1950. The threatening weather and showers might have kept the crowd down slightly but it did not dampen the enthusiasm of those who did attend.

The first event started at 4 PM when the opera department presented three productions for reserved seat holders in the formal gardens. A jammed crowd saw Scene 2 from "Cosi Fan Tutti," arias and duets from "Pagliacci" and Chabrier's naughty but charming "An Incomplete Education." It was at this point that the rain started falling and the audience was torn between finding out what happened to the honeymoon couple and getting wet. Most got wet.

Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department, started the main events rolling slightly before 6. After the usual fanfare of trumpets, Mr. Goldovsky, in his inimitable accent, explained to the crowd just what was available. It was then every man for himself.

Some went to the theatre to hear the world premieres of two operas, others walked into the main Shed to hear the student symphony perform under student conductors, many walked over to the chamber music hall for works by student composers and some sat right down on the lawn and went to work on their picnic suppers.

Other Tanglewood stories and photos will be found on Page 13.

SATURDAY,

MUSIC

The Berl

By Jay S. Harrison

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 14.—Berkshire Music Festival en its last week end tonight a concert by the Boston phony Orchestra, Charles M conducting, in Tanglew Music Shed. Johannes Bra "Deutsches Requiem" was program's only work, with Marshall, soprano, and Will Farfield, baritone, as soloi The Berkshire Festival Cho prepared for the occasion Hugh Ross, rounded out list of participants.

Brahms' Requiem, based on text selected from the Luther Bible, was composed in 1 when the composer, as neither bearded nor famous, thirty-three years old. Co temporary musicology is still odds concerning the motive f its conception, one camp clai ing to find its inspiration in t death of Robert Schumann, a another in the passing Brahms' mother. The poi however, is not worth laboring since the work, in essence, is deeply reflective and tells us of nothing but the personal quali ties of Brahms himself.

Enormous Contrast

As music, the Requiem pr vided an enormous contrast the closing number of last night' "Tanglewood on Parade" program, during which Leonard Bernstein conducted the Boston Symphony in the second act of Gershwin "Porgy and Bess," assisted by Mr. Warfield, Leontyne Price, soprano; Betty Lou Allen, mezzo-soprano, and McHenry Boatwright, bass. Previously, and with Mr. Munch in charge, the orchestra had been heard in Handel's "Water Music" suite and Beethoven's Concerto in D, featuring Isaac Stern as violinist.

Let it be admitted at once (and then forgotten) that the Boston Symphony is hardly the ideal orchestra for the performance of Gershwin's music. The bridge

---

"Vio as solo bury and good in the certo. Leon ducting the sec cert in the Mus audience spellboun tics as he led the tival chorus, and two scenes one and two from ond act of Gershwin's "Por Bess." Leontyne Price, sop sang beautifully and William W field, baritone, was excellent.

But that was only part of the evening's entertainment. Before that, from the welcome by Boris Goldovsky at 5:45 all activities of the Music Center were thrown open to the public. In the shed, short symphonic works were presented by the orchestra; in the theater concert hall, "Bad Boys in School" from a play by Johann Nestroy, with libretto and music by Jan Meyerowitz was being presented following the performance of "A Little Boy Lost," by Allen Sapp. This was a cantata with text by William Blake from "Songs of Innocence" and Songs of Experience."

The audience wandered about from place to place on the grounds, stopping for a while at one program and then going on for a brief taste of another. It was an excellent opportunity to see this wonderful Music Center in operation and everyone took advantage of the opportunity. There were hundreds of young folk about the grounds. Many camps in the area had brought over bus loads of youngsters for this experience. It was a pleasure to watch the faces of some of the youngsters as they reacted to this feast of music and musical talent presented under such informed conditions.

People wandered leisurely about the grounds, enjoying the beautiful formal gardens and walks, and picnicking on the lawns or at the tables. It was a delightful evening all around. And as we had the chance to see it with friends to whom this was a new experience, it was refreshing to hear their comments and see that our own enthusiasms about Tanglewood over the years are shared by each new individual who sees it for the first time. This really is an experience.

The closing week-end of the Berkshire Festival begins tonight when Charles Munch conducts the orchestra and chorus and soloists in Brahms' "Requiem." Saturday night Bernstein will conduct a program of Sibelius, Chavez, and Brahms. Munch will conduct the final concert of the season on Sunday at 2:30 p. m. with a program of Schubert, Wagner and Ravel. By the time the final note is sounded on Sunday afternoon all records for attendance will have been shattered and everyone will begin to look forward to the concerts of next summer.

S. M.

—The Berkshire Evening Eagle, Friday, Aug. 14, 1953

Many Questions For Operator At Tanglewood

Kay Mealy Likes Job Which She Calls Summer Vacation

"I like the job. I wouldn't miss it for the world." Miss Kay Mealey of Boston was speaking of her position at the busy Tanglewood switchboard, where she has spent six or seven weeks for the past five summers. The rest of the year she is in charge of mailing at Symphony Hall.

Pleasant, quick and efficient, as a telephone operator should be, there is practically no question Miss Mealey hasn't been asked over the telephone. "Can we have two rooms for tonight?" anxiously asks a man who believes he is speaking to the Tanglewood Motel on the Pittsfield-Lenox road. "What do we do if it rains?" "How do I get into the concert?" or "How do I join the Friends?" are asked many times a day.

The confusion about the Friends and how to get into student concerts is understandable. No one yet has found a clear, concise way to v that all student performances open to those who make vol contributions to the support chool through membership. iends of the Berkshire When told that they nething like 38 con membership card eve it.

charge for general is another frequent eaning: Is there a charge ion to the ticket price? rse there is not.

ils From Everywhere

Calls come from all over the country for information, ticket reservations and messages to students and faculty. A real task is to locate them. They may be anywhere on the Tanglewood estate, in the village of Lenox, or even having a swim in Stockbridge Bowl. The only thing Miss Mealey can do is to post a note on the bulletin board, which usually is ignored. Probably the cottage where a student is living has no telephone.

"What's going on today?" is another question. Kay keeps the programs for all Festival and student performances, and reads them when asked. She says there aren't as many calls for programs at Tanglewood as at Symphony Hall, for The Eagle publishes all of them.

Many tourists seem to believe that all entertainment in the Berkshires centers at Tanglewood, for there are countless calls for Jacob's Pillow, Festival House, Music Inn, and the Berkshire Playhouse, to mention a few.

Mails to Concert Subscribers

In Boston, Kay posts about 5000 pieces of mail a day. Her chief correspondents are the subscribers to the Boston Symphony Orchestra concert series in Boston, New York, Providence and Tanglewood, and the Friends of the Orchestra and the Music Center. She is in charge of 50,000 stencils, which she keeps up-to-date. Before joining the orchestra management she was a bookkeeper at a clothing company, which she didn't enjoy as much.

Every summer she spends at the Tucker Street home of Charles McCarty, retired postmaster, and Mrs. McCarty. She eats in restaurants and inns about Lenox, but mostly dinners at Chef Karl's and lunches at the Tanglewood cafeteria. When asked what she does in her leisure time, she said she hasn't any. "The first year I was here I used to knit, but now the switchboard is too busy. Often there are no free lines."

As for her taste in music, Kay said, "I don't like modern music, definitely. I'm afraid I don't like the choruses." Her favorite composer, she believes, is Brahms. At Tanglewood she has more opportunity to listen than in Boston.

Asked whether she goes on a vacation she said that she does have four weeks, but not all together. "My stay at Tanglewood is my vacation," she said. "This is my summer home."

[2 –

Music

'On Parade' Entertainment Called 'Best Ever' by Critic

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

The Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Berkshire Music Center, the school established by the late Serge Koussevitzky, set them up in all alleys at Tanglewood last night and scored a 10-strike in every box. The annual "Tanglewood on Parade" was the most successful ever from an entertainment viewpoint and from an attendance angle even more so; considering that, at late afternoon, it was either threatening or already raining a trifle here and there.

Events started late in the afternoon when, after a brass fanfare, Boris Goldovsky, head of the school's opera department, and personally a master of ceremonies nonpareil, welcomed the swarms of visitors. And swarms they seemed to be in trying to decide which of the three rings they would elect to attend. Due to certain basic laws of physics and to human limitations everyone was afraid he was missing something, and it was true, for no matter where you went, there was something important and attractive going on in another spot.

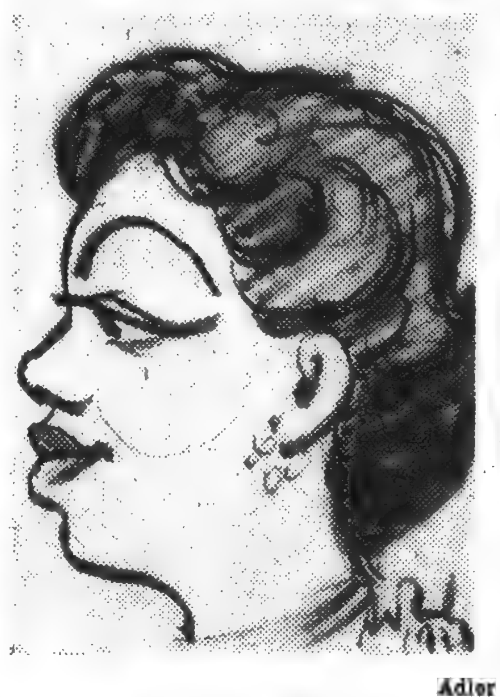
The orchestra of the Berkshire Music Center gave a fine program in the big Shed, with Uziahu Wiesel, an Israeli cello student, featured as soloist in the first movement of the Dvorak concerto; the opera scenes in the theatre-concert hall featured a new cantata by Allen Sapp and the premiere of Jan Meyerowitz' opera "Bad Boys in School" prepared by Laura and Ludwig Zirner; the chamber music department organized a program which did credit to the faculty as well as to the young artists. Every attraction was attended by an audience beyond the capacity of the respective hall. Then while picnic lunches and their avid devourers were spread on the wide lawns, the choral groups of the school held forth with excellent testimony of their short six-week term.

Among the many objects of this annual day of gala music-making is the one which amounts to graduation exercises of the school and an opportunity is presented to allow as many as possible from the brilliant student body to demonstrate their ability and exhibit their program in this unique venture, which, it becomes more evident every year, is one of the most important functions of this important enterprise.

The culmination of the evening came in the concert at 8.30 in which all stops were thrown out and the Boston Orchestra "shot the works," (if no one is checking metaphors). Never has there been a more lavish display of talent on any such evening. Charles Munch opened the evening with a delightful rendition of the Handel "Water Music," a piece contrived to show the string and woodwind sections of the orchestra at their best and Mr. Munch's manipulation of them at his most subtle. Then came Isaac Stern as soloist in the Beethoven violin concerto, again a performance to treasure in the safe-deposit section of one's mind. It was exemplary playing, marked by severe purity and ascetic classicism. Stern seemed to have studiously planned to avoid all show for its own sake and to allow Beethoven to rise in his own might. Munch gave him beautifully flexible support with the orchestra.

* * *

After intermission came an innovation for Tanglewood and one not soon forgotten. Leontyne Price, soprano, and William Warfield, baritone, aided by McHenry Boatright, bass, and Betty Allen, contralto, the latter two from the Center enrollment, gave a concert performance of two scenes from "Porgy and Bess," with the assistance of the Festival chorus, a group selected from the school vocalists. Here Leonard Bernstein took over the orchestra, and, if it were not an unfair comparison by implication, it could be stated that he was indeed in his element. The pathos of Gershwin's music, the compelling rhythm, and all the factors which have made it a candidate for musical immortality were grasped with marvelous perception for a performance which absolutely enchanted every one within hearing distance.

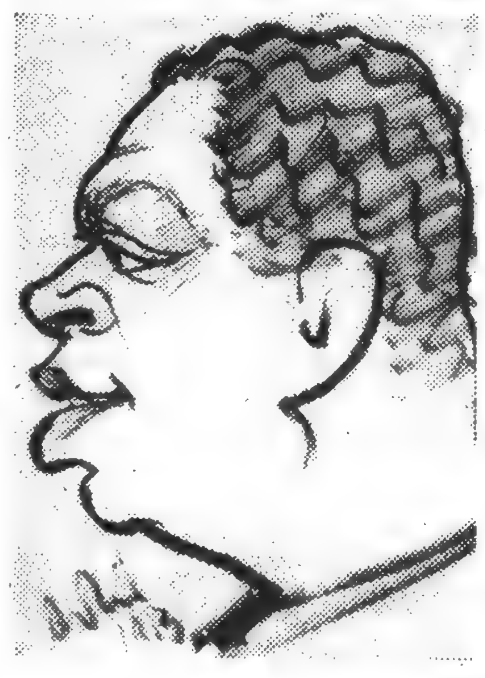


Adler

Leontyne Price

Miss Price's and Mr. Warfield's voices were superlatively projected from their seats in the chorus at the back of the huge stage. The ovation which followed was overwhelming as the jubilant audience moved, like a swift glacier, toward the stage to better observe and more intimately convey their enthusiasm. Mr. Bernstein included Hugh Ross who trained the chorus among the artists recalled to acknowledge the insistent applause. Never has a performance given higher enjoyment and greater entertainment than that of the two soloists, and their entire assisting cast.

Immediately after the concert came the drawing of door prizes in which Anna Russell, the international concert comedienne, took a quickly raised microphone. Then, for a finale, there was waltzing on the lawn. On these latter two events your reviewer is reporting only from the printed program for he was in the very small minority which apparently thinks they know when they've had enough. The vast majority was contrary-minded and stayed on eagerly and zestfully enjoying the show to the last drop.



Adler

William Warfield

Plouffe

'I KISS YOUR HAND, MADAME' Leonard Bernstein, who appeared as guest conductor with the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the second half of last night's benefit program, shows his appreciation to the soloists in scenes from "Porgy and Bess," William Warfield and his wife, Leontyne Price. The orchestra joined the audience in the ovation given the soloists and conductor.

Plouffe

PHONORAMA WINNER: Mrs. Grace Minty of New York and Oakland, Cal., left, beams with happiness after winning this high fidelity Phonorama radio-phonograph donated for the Tanglewood on Parade benefit by the Philco Corporation. Actress Anna Russell takes the winning ticket as Boris Goldovsky, head of the Tanglewood opera department, stands by.

CARICATURES

Plouffe

A POPULAR STUDENT: Wolfe Adler, a student at the Berkshire Music Center, whose sketches of Tanglewood personalities have been appearing in The Eagle this season, aided the school last night by contributing his services to make sketches of people attending Tanglewood on Parade. His attractive subject is Miss Helene Reiback, a student of scenic art in the opera department of the Music Center.

Mexican Composer To Hear Work At Festival Concert Tomorrow

When the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Leonard Bernstein, plays "Sinfonia India" in tomorrow evening's Berkshire Festival concert the composer will be in the audience. Carlos Chavez is guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center.

Mr. Chavez, who is director of Mexico's National Conservatory of Music in Mexico City and head of the Mexican Department of Fine Arts of the Secretariat of Public Education, is a leader in the country's awakening to musical consciousness. Aaron Copland, head of Tanglewood's composition department and assistant director of the school wrote of him, "Single-handed he has created a tradition which no future Mexican composer can afford to ignore."

"Sinfonia India" was written during the composer's visit to the United States in 1936. He used three Indian melodies from the northern Pacific coast of his country. He has written "The indigenous music of Mexico is a reality of contemporary life. It is not, as might be thought, a relic to satisfy mere curiosity on the part of intellectuals, or to supply more or less important data for ethnology. The indigenous art of Mexico is, in our day, the only living manifestation of the race which makes up approximately four-fifths of the country's racial stock."

The program will open with Sibelius' Symphony No. 4 and close with Brahms' Second Symphony.

Tanglewood

Tonight

8.30—Opening of third Berkshire Festival series with concert by Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting Brahms' "Requiem." Music Shed.

Tomorrow

10.00 AM — Public rehearsal of Boston Symphony Orchestra for benefit of pension fund. Music Shed.

*3.00 PM—Symphony concert by student orchestra.

*Open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Closed-Circuit TV Concerts May Be Another BSO 'First'

The Stadium Television Network, a newly organized theatre-TV company, is offering to theatres a series of five concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The programs would be broadcast from Symphony Hall over telephone lines on a closed circuit arrangement, similar to that by which last season the Metropolitan Opera Company presented "Carmen" in theatres with proper equipment. The contract would provide for the appearance of a guest soloist for each program, which would be presented on Mondays or Tuesdays, when film audiences are slim.

The Stadium Company, headed by Edward L. Dorfman, formerly vice-president of United World Films, offers to go into a city to pre-sell the entire event on a subscription basis. If they cannot sell at least half the house, theatres may withdraw without obligation. Theatres signing for the series are asked to give a guarantee of about $200.

Reporting the details, Variety, newspaper of show business, states that the interest on the part of local managers varies from city to city. Detroit, for example, where the orchestra played in April, has shown tremendous interest. Circuit executives indicate that they might try it on an experimental basis, since the Boston Symphony is rated as "a hot attraction."

George E. Judd BSO manager, this morning at Tanglewood stated that the Variety article is considerably ahead of the facts which are that two companies have made proposals for the participation of the orchestra on closed-circuit TV, but that no commitments have been made to either group.

Attention was called to the fact that the Boston orchestra has been a leader in new ventures, making the first orchestral recordings in this country, being the first to broadcast widely, and the first to have a radio staton of its own. The station is the FM educational WGBH, which it shares with other non-commercial institutions of Boston, and which has recently been assigned TV channel No. 2.

Cir. (D 96,447)

This Clipping From
HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES
AUG 15 1953

Problems of Success Those of Tanglewood

By CARL E. LINDSTRÖM

TOMORROW'S concert ends another Tanglewood season. It has been enormously successful as the Berkshire Symphonic Festival has been progressively successful since its very beginning. Success of this sort naturally brings the problems of traffic, parking, overnight accommodations and food. One way or another, these have been managed. Not the least of the problems have been seats and ticket handling, especially for the student concerts which are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, students, faculty and the press. Because of misunderstandings and a few ruffled feelings, it might not be amiss to explain the problem and its solutions.

For the opera performances several methods have been tried looking toward an equitable distribution of the limited number of seats. First, the distribution was on the first-come-first-served basis. This proved unsatisfactory. Later on the house was reserved, applications were filled as conscientiously as possible and the management discovered that a "free ticket" was often asked for and not used. There were occasions when 20 per cent of the seats were not occupied because the ticket holder neither used his ticket nor returned it to be passed on to someone else.

This year, Friends who wished to reserve a seat were asked to make the nominal supplementary gift of a dollar, not as a purchase price of a ticket, but as a service charge — a very small one, in view of the fact that correspondence and personal calls kept a secretary occupied full time for several weeks.

The new plan resulted in 99 per cent of the people using the tickets instead of 80 per cent.

There was an additional limitation which caused the difficulty this year. People were asked to be in their seats by 8:20 or they forfeited their right to the seat. It has already been decided that next year this experiment will be repeated with the difference that unoccupied seats would be available only after the first break in the performance.

Too, there was a misunderstanding about the concerts which were moved from the small hall to the big Shed. As ticket holders know, there were alternate seat numbers. Obviously there were a great many unoccupied seats in the Big Shed when all of the thousand-odd ticket holders had been seated.

It was the intention of the management that those persons who had grounds admission only would be free to take over the unoccupied seats. This they did not do but it was only because there was no convenient means of letting the lawn-sitters know that they could move in.

It is gratifying anyway to know that Tanglewood's problems are the problems of success.

MUSIC CALENDAR

SUNDAY

2:30 p. m. — Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

4 p. m.—Berkshire Quartet, Music Mountain, Falls Village.

THURSDAY

8:15 p. m. — Opening performances of the American Dance Festival, premieres and repertoire by Jose Limon, Pauline Koper, Doris Humphrey, Sophie Maslow, John Butler, Ronne Aul and others, through Sunday afternoon, Connecticut College, New London.

FRIDAY

4 and 9 p. m.—Ted Shawn and Shivaram, Jacob's Pillow, Lee, Mass.

8:30 p. m.—American Dance Festival, as above.

SATURDAY

8:30 p. m.—American Dance Festival, as above.

This Clipping From
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
NEWS
AUG 15 1953

Popular and classical music take ver the radio spotlight tomorrow aftrnoon and evening.

On World Music Festivals at 1:30 'clock on WFBM-CBS, Charles Muench conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire music festival. They will perform Schubert's "Unfinished" symphony and three works by Wagner. At 4 o'clock on WIRE-NBC, Wilfrid Pelletier will conduct the NBC Summer Symphony orchestra. The Canadian conductor will play Symphony No. 8 by Beethoven and three of the five movements of Berlioz's Symphonie Fantastique. Tonight at 9 o'clock Soprano Margaret Roberts and Baritone Raymond Sharp headline the broadcast of the Chicago Theater of the Air on WIBC-Mutual.

Cir. (D 143,029)

This Clipping From
CLEVELAND, OHIO
NEWS
AUG 15 1953

Offers 'Live' Conc

WGAR's Music Festivals show offers a "live" concert once again at 2:30 with Charles Munch direct ng the Boston Symphony Orchesra at the Bershire Music Festival n Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony," and three works by Wager.

Franz List's "Les Preludes" is layed by the Cleveland Municipal Band in the third concert of the eries broadcast on WGAR at 4:30. The program also includes Sousa's 'Stars and Stripes Forever," and Schubert's "Serenade."

Morley and Gearhart the duopianists who have made many appearances in Cleveland with the Pop Concerts, are the soloists Sunday afternoon at 4 on WTAM with he Hollywood Bowl Concerts, with Arthur Fiedler as guest conductor.

Summer Symphony

At 5 p. m. Sunday afternoon Wilfred Pelletier conducts the NBC Summer Symphony in Beethoven's Eighth Symphony, portions of Berlioz' "Fantastic" Symphony and Ibert's "Les Escales."

Music is plentiful Sunday evening too. Tony Martin's disk show features Eddie Fisher recordings, including "With These Hands," and Martin's own "Tenement Symphony." WTAM at 8. Martin's show gives way at 8:30 to the Best Plays' drama, "Detective Story," with Wendell Corey in the role of Detective McLeod and an excellent supporting cast.

WHK picks up the musical theme at 8:30 with excerpts from MacDowell's popular "Woodland Sketches" on Enchanted Hour at 8:30.

Sophie Tucker picks up the musical ball at 10 when she visits the Robert Q. Lewis show and helps Lewis with his appraisal of record favorites of the day.

FINAL CONCERTS AT TANGLEWOOD

Munch to Conduct Tonight, Tomorrow

Berkshire Evening Ea e, Saturday, Au 15, 1953

Prize Winners At Tanglewood Are Announced

One of the two top door prizes of the 42 for Tanglewood on Parade was won by a member of the audience who came the farthest to atten. The Philco Phonorama went to Mrs. Grace Minty of California, on a visit to her daughter in New York. The other top prize, an RCA-Victor console was won by Mrs. Harold Berman of Buffalo.

Announced third by Miss Anna Russell, concert comedienne, was the winning of a pair of 1954 Berkshire Festival tickets by Gene B. Abrams of Forest Hills; two tickets to Jacob's Pillow by Mrs. Sara Mead of Pittsburgh, Pa.; the RCA Victor record player, by Bettye Ackerman of New York; and the GE radio alarm clock by Henry Blank of Brooklyn, N.Y.

Two prizes went to campers at the Stockbridge School. Only Pittsfield winner was Reginald G. Williams of 280 West Street, who received the pair of dinners at Blantyre, Lenox.

Veterans Group To Be Guests At Tanglewood

Eagle 8/15

Eighteen patients from the Veterans Hospital in Northampton will be guests of the Berkshire Music Center at tomorrow afternoon's concert at Tanglewood.

The patients are members of the music appreciation class that meets every Wednesday night at the hospital under the direction of Miss Margaret Harrison, Pittsfield Red Cross volunteer.

The veterans and four aides from the hospital will be driven to Tanglewood by the Berkshire County Red Cross entertainment and supply corps. Quentin N. Thompson of Pittsfield is in charge of the group.

After the concert, the group will have a picnic supper at the home of Ralph M. O'Connell.

Cir. (D 131,670) (S 258,529)

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD
AUG 15 1953

LEONARD BERNSTEIN, who will conduct tonight's program at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, at which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will play works by Sibelius, Chavez and Brahms.

Cir. (D 98,282)

This Clipping From
WORCESTER, MASS.
GAZETTE
AUG 15 1953

TV'S FIRST SUMMER STOCK COMPANY

The Robert Montgomery Players—with (from left) Elizabeth Montgomery, Vaughn Taylor, Margaret Hayes and John Newland as stars—are television's first permanent Summer stock company. Elizabeth is producer Montgomery's daughter. The series is a Summer feature making its premiere this year.

RADIO AND TELEVISION

Pair Band, Boxer On New TV Show

By JAMES A. GOURGOURAS

SATURDAY SMATTERINGS — How does this sound for a new TV show? Sugar Ray Robinson and Count Basie's band—being packaged at the moment . . . And another fighter, Brown Bomber Louis (yes, Joe) has shed more than 20 pounds, readying for television work . . . Watch "Bride and Groom" Monday. The soldier being married to Beverly Jeanne Tucker will be Tom Breneman Jr., son of the late "Breakfast in Hollywood" emcee . . . Just discovered that Dennis James was taken ill in Denver recently after doing a 16-hour telethon there for the Cerebral Palsy Foundation. When rushed to the hospital, his doctor turned out to be Garry Moore's brother, George Morfit, M. D. . . . Staffers at WTAG report that the morning following the Dick Haymes deportation story broke in the papers, Bob Haymes, his brother, opened his CBS radio show with announcement that he had just heard of Dick's plight—and paused two seconds before uttering a deeply sighed: "Oh, brother!"

★

WAAB DROPPING AFFILIATION—George Wilson, WAAB's president, tells me that station will cancel affiliation with the ABC network, effective Oct. 15. He says reason is proposed change in "program content". And to that, I hazard we'll be hearing "Play ball!" banter soon . . . It'll be Walter Pidgeon in the "Edward, My Son" lead at 9 p. m. Monday on WTAG's "Summer Theater" . . . Charles Munch on the podium before the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Great Shed at Berkshire's Music Festival tomorrow — WTAG carries the broadcast, too . . . And Canada's Wilfrid Pelletier conducts the NBC Summer Symphony Orchestra tomorrow on WBZ . . . Oops, CBS wants Ed Wynn to do a children's show . . . Always thought the Jane Froman "Canteen" show was too slow-paced, so glad to hear she'll drop that this Fall for a quick-moving music-comedy setup.

★

CATCH SULLIVAN'S "TOAST" tomorrow night for a top-flight package of variety in voices—Frankie Laine, concert soprano Anne Marie Alberghatti and boy singer Jimmy Boyd . . . If you enjoyed reading stories by Richard Harding Davis, see Charles Ruggles in "The Consul" at 10 tonight on Channel 7—it's an adaptation of a Davis tale . . . Oh, yes, Ed Sullivan flies to Boston a week from this Monday to be toastmaster of the Welcome Home banquet to Ted Williams in Hotel Statler. All proceeds of the $100-a-plate dinner slugged for Children's Cancer Research of Children's Hospital in Boston . . . Jayne (Audrey's sister) Meadows has a featured role in a racketeer rumpus on "The Web" tomorrow night at 10 on Channel 7 . . . Don't forget: teletime for the resuming U. N. telecasts will be 4.30 p. m. starting Monday on a Monday-through-Friday schedule.

Cir. (D 96,447)

This Clipping From
HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES

AUG 15 1953

Problems of Success Those of Tanglewood

By CARL E. LINDSTROM

TOMORROW'S concert ends another Tanglewood season. It has been enormously successful as the Berkshire Symphonic Festival has been progressively successful since its very beginning. Success of this sort naturally brings the problems of traffic, parking, overnight accommodations and food. One way or another, these have been managed. Not the least of the problems have been seats and ticket handling, especially for the student concerts which are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, students, faculty and the press. Because of misunderstandings and a few ruffled feelings, it might not be amiss to explain the problem and its solutions.

For the opera performances several methods have been tried looking toward an equitable distribution of the limited number of seats. First, the distribution was on the first-come-first-served basis. This proved unsatisfactory. Later on the house was reserved, applications were filled as conscientiously as possible and the management discovered that a "free ticket" was often asked for and not used. There were occasions when 20 per cent of the seats were not occupied because the ticket holder neither used his ticket nor returned it to be passed on to someone else.

This year, Friends who wished to reserve a seat were asked to make the nominal supplementary gift of a dollar, not as a purchase price of a ticket, but as a service charge — a very small one, in view of the fact that correspondence and personal calls kept a secretary occupied full time for several weeks.

The new plan resulted in 99 per cent of the people using the tickets instead of 80 per cent.

There was an additional limitation which caused the difficulty this year. People were asked to be in their seats by 8:20 or they forfeited their right to the seat. It has already been decided that next year this experiment will be repeated with the difference that unoccupied seats would be available only after the first break in the performance.

Too, there was a misunderstanding about the concerts which were moved from the small hall to the big Shed. As ticket holders know, there were alternate seat numbers. Obviously there were a great many unoccupied seats in the Big Shed when all of the thousand-odd ticket holders had been seated.

It was the intention of the management that those persons who had grounds admission only would be free to take over the unoccupied seats. This they did not do but it was only because there was no convenient means of letting the lawn-sitters know that they could move in.

It is gratifying anyway to know that Tanglewood's problems are the problems of success.

MUSIC CALENDAR

SUNDAY

2:30 p. m. — Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

4 p. m.—Berkshire Quartet, Music Mountain, Falls Village.

THURSDAY

8:15 p. m. — Opening performances of the American Dance Festival, premieres and repertoire by Jose Limon, Pauline Koper, Doris Humphrey, Sophie Maslow, John Butler, Ronne Aul and others, through Sunday afternoon, Connecticut College, New London.

FRIDAY

4 and 9 p. m.—Ted Shawn and Shivaram, Jacob's Pillow, Lee, Mass.

8:30 p. m.—American Dance Festival, as above.

SATURDAY

8:30 p. m.—American Dance Festival, as above.

This Clipping From
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
NEWS

AUG 15 1953

Popular and classical music take ver the radio spotlight tomorrow aftrnoon and evening.

On World Music Festivals at 1:30 'clock on WFBM-CBS, Charles Muench conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berksshire music festival. They will perform Schubert's "Unfinished" symphony and three works by Wagner. At 4 o'clock on WIRE-NBC, Wilfrid Pelletier will conduct the NBC Summer Symphony orchestra. The Canadian conductor will play Symphony No. 8 by Beethoven and three of the five movements of Berlioz's Symphonie Fantastique. Tonight at 9 o'clock Soprano Margaret Roberts and Baritone Raymond Sharp headline the broadcast of the Chicago Theater of the Air on WIBC-Mutual.

Cir. (D 143,029)

This Clipping From
CLEVELAND, OHIO
NEWS

AUG 15 1953

Offers 'Live' Conce

WGAR's Music Festivals show offers a "live" concert once again at 2:30 with Charles Munch direct ng the Boston Symphony Orchesra at the Bershire Music Festival n Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony," and three works by Wager.

Franz List's "Les Preludes" is layed by the Cleveland Municipal Band in the third concert of the eries broadcast on WGAR at 4:30. The program also includes Sousa's 'Stars and Stripes Forever," and Schubert's "Serenade."

Morley and Gearhart the duoianists who have made many apearances in Cleveland with the Pop Concerts, are the soloists Sunlay afternoon at 4 on WTAM with he Hollywood Bowl Concerts, with Arthur Fiedler as guest conductor.

Summer Symphony

At 5 p. m. Sunday afternoon Wilfred Pelletier conducts the NBC Summer Symphony in Beethoven's Eighth Symphony, portions of Berlioz' "Fantastic" Symphony and Ibert's "Les Escales."

Music is plentiful Sunday evening too. Tony Martin's disk show features Eddie Fisher recordings, including "With These Hands," and Martin's own "Tenement Symphony," WTAM at 8. Martin's show gives way at 8:30 to the Best Plays' drama, "Detective Story," with Wendell Corey in the role of Detective McLeod and an excellent supporting cast.

WHK picks up the musical theme at 8:30 with excerpts from MacDowell's popular "Woodland Sketches" on Enchanted Hour at 8:30.

Sophie Tucker picks up the musical ball at 10 when she visits the Robert Q. Lewis show and helps Lewis with his appraisal of record favorites of the day.

FINAL CONCERTS AT TANGLEWOOD

Munch to Conduct Tonight, Tomorrow

Berkshire Evening Eagle, Saturday, Aug. 15, 1953

Prize Winners At Tanglewood Are Announced

One of the two top door prizes of the 42 for Tanglewood on Parade was won by a member of the audience who came the farthest to atten. The Philco Phonorama went to Mrs. Grace Minty of California, on a visit to her daughter in New York. The other top prize, an RCA-Victor console was won by Mrs. Harold Berman of Buffalo.

Announced third by Miss Anna Russell, concert comedienne, was the winning of a pair of 1954 Berkshire Festival tickets by Gene B. Abrams of Forest Hills; two tickets to Jacob's Pillow by Mrs. Sara Mead of Pittsburgh, Pa.; the RCA Victor record player, by Bettye Ackerman of New York; and the GE radio alarm clock by Henry Blank of Brooklyn, N.Y.

Two prizes went to campers at the Stockbridge School. Only Pittsfield winner was Reginald G. Williams of 280 West Street, who received the pair of dinners at Blantyre, Lenox.

Veterans Group To Be Guests At Tanglewood

Eagle 8/15

Eighteen patients from the Veterans Hospital in Northampton will be guests of the Berkshire Music Center at tomorrow afternoon's concert at Tanglewood.

The patients are members of the music appreciation class that meets every Wednesday night at the hospital under the direction of Miss Margaret Harrison, Pittsfield Red Cross volunteer.

The veterans and four aides from the hospital will be driven to Tanglewood by the Berkshire County Red Cross entertainment and supply corps. Quentin N. Thompson of Pittsfield is in charge of the group.

After the concert, the group will have a picnic supper at the home of Ralph M. O'Connell.

Cir. (D 131,670) (S 258,529)

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD

AUG 15 1953

LEONARD BERNSTEIN, who will conduct tonight's program at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, at which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will play works by Sibelius, Chavez and Brahms.

Cir. (D 98,282)

This Clipping From
WORCESTER, MASS.
GAZETTE

AUG 15 1953

TV'S FIRST SUMMER STOCK COMPANY

The Robert Montgomery Players—with (from left) Elizabeth Montgomery, Vaughn Taylor, Margaret Hayes and John Newland as stars—are television's first permanent Summer stock company. Elizabeth is producer Montgomery's daughter. The series is a Summer feature making its premiere this year.

RADIO AND TELEVISION

Pair Band, Boxer On New TV Show

By JAMES A. GOURGOURAS

SATURDAY SMATTERINGS — How does this sound for a new TV show? Sugar Ray Robinson and Count Basie's band—being packaged at the moment . . . And another fighter, Brown Bomber Louis (yes, Joe) has shed more than 20 pounds, readying for television work . . . Watch "Bride and Groom" Monday. The soldier being married to Beverly Jeanne Tucker will be Tom Breneman Jr., son of the late "Breakfast in Hollywood" emcee . . . Just discovered that Dennis James was taken ill in Denver recently after doing a 16-hour telethon there for the Cerebral Palsy Foundation. When rushed to the hospital, his doctor turned out to be Garry Moore's brother, George Morfit, M. D. . . . Staffers at WTAG report that the morning following the Dick Haymes deportation story broke in the papers, Bob Haymes, his brother, opened his CBS radio show with announcement that he had just heard of Dick's plight—and paused two seconds before uttering a deeply sighed: "Oh, brother!"

★

WAAB DROPPING AFFILIATION—George Wilson, WAAB's president, tells me that station will cancel affiliation with the ABC network, effective Oct. 15. He says reason is proposed change in "program content". And to that, I hazard we'll be hearing "Play ball!" banter soon . . . It'll be Walter Pidgeon in the "Edward, My Son" lead at 9 p. m. Monday on WTAG's "Summer Theater" . . . Charles Munch on the podium before the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Great Shed at Berkshire's Music Festival tomorrow — WTAG carries the broadcast, too . . . And Canada's Wilfrid Pelletier conducts the NBC Summer Symphony Orchestra tomorrow on WBZ . . . Oops, CBS wants Ed Wynn to do a children's show . . . Always thought the Jane Froman "Canteen" show was too slow-paced, so glad to hear she'll drop that this Fall for a quick-moving music-comedy setup.

★

CATCH SULLIVAN'S "TOAST" tomorrow night for a top-flight package of variety in voices—Frankie Laine, concert soprano Anne Marie Alberghatti and boy singer Jimmy Boyd . . . If you enjoyed reading stories by Richard Harding Davis, see Charles Ruggles in "The Consul" at 10 tonight on Channel 7—it's an adaptation of a Davis tale . . . Oh, yes, Ed Sullivan flies to Boston a week from this Monday to be toastmaster of the Welcome Home banquet to Ted Williams in Hotel Statler. All proceeds of the $100-a-plate dinner slugged for Children's Cancer Research of Children's Hospital in Boston . . . Jayne (Audrey's sister) Meadows has a featured role in a racketeer rumpus on "The Web" tomorrow night at 10 on Channel 7 . . . Don't forget: teletime for the resuming U. N. telecasts will be 4.30 p. m. starting Monday on a Monday-through-Friday schedule.

Cir. (D 96,447)

This Clipping From
HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES

AUG 15 1953

Problems of Success Those of Tanglewood

By CARL E. LINDSTRÓM

TOMORROW'S concert ends another Tanglewood season. It has been enormously successful as the Berkshire Symphonic Festival has been progressively successful since its very beginning. Success of this sort naturally brings the problems of traffic, parking, overnight accommodations and food. One way or another, these have been managed. Not the least of the problems have been seats and ticket handling, especially for the student concerts which are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, students, faculty and the press. Because of misunderstandings and a few ruffled feelings, it might not be amiss to explain the problem and its solutions.

For the opera performances several methods have been tried looking toward an equitable distribution of the limited number of seats. First, the distribution was on the first-come-first-served basis. This proved unsatisfactory. Later on the house was reserved, applications were filled as conscientiously as possible and the management discovered that a "free ticket" was often asked for and not used. There were occasions when 20 per cent of the seats were not occupied because the ticket holder neither used his ticket nor returned it to be passed on to someone else.

This year, Friends who wished to reserve a seat were asked to make the nominal supplementary gift of a dollar, not as a purchase price of a ticket, but as a service charge — a very small one, in view of the fact that correspondence and personal calls kept a secretary occupied full time for several weeks.

The new plan resulted in 99 per cent of the people using the tickets instead of 80 per cent.

There was an additional limitation which caused the difficulty this year. People were asked to be in their seats by 8:20 or they forfeited their right to the seat. It has already been decided that next year this experiment will be repeated with the difference that unoccupied seats would be available only after the first break in the performance.

Too, there was a misunderstanding about the concerts which were moved from the small hall to the big Shed. As ticket holders know, there were alternate seat numbers. Obviously there were a great many unoccupied seats in the Big Shed when all of the thousand-odd ticket holders had been seated.

It was the intention of the management that those persons who had grounds admission only would be free to take over the unoccupied seats. This they did not do but it was only because there was no convenient means of letting the lawn-sitters know that they could move in.

It is gratifying anyway to know that Tanglewood's problems are the problems of success.

MUSIC CALENDAR

SUNDAY

2:30 p. m. — Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

4 p. m.—Berkshire Quartet, Music Mountain, Falls Village.

THURSDAY

8:15 p. m. — Opening performances of the American Dance Festival, premieres and repertoire by Jose Limón, Pauline Koper, Doris Humphrey, Sophie Maslow, John Butler, Ronne Aul and others, through Sunday afternoon, Connecticut College, New London.

FRIDAY

4 and 9 p. m.—Ted Shawn and Shivaram, Jacob's Pillow, Lee, Mass.

8:30 p. m.—American Dance Festival, as above.

SATURDAY

8:30 p. m.—American Dance Festival, as above.

This Clipping From
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
NEWS

AUG 15 1953

Popular and classical music take ver the radio spotlight tomorrow aft-rnoon and evening.

On World Music Festivals at 1:30 'clock on WFBM-CBS, Charles Muench conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire music festival. They will perform Schubert's "Unfinished" symphony and three works by Wagner. At 4 o'clock on WIRE-NBC, Wilfrid Pelletier will conduct the NBC Summer Symphony orchestra. The Canadian conductor will play Symphony No. 8 by Beethoven and three of the five movements of Berlioz's Symphonie Fantastique. Tonight at 9 o'clock Soprano Margaret Roberts and Baritone Raymond Sharp headline the broadcast of the Chicago Theater of the Air on WIBC-Mutual.

FINAL CONCERTS AT TANGLEWOOD

Munch to Conduct Tonight, Tomorrow

Lenox, August 14—The final in the series of current summer concerts will be held this week end at Tanglewood with Charles Munch conducting.

The program:

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL CONCERT C-1
Charles Munch, Conductor
BRAHMS . . . Requiem, with Festival Chorus and Soloists.
Soloists: Lois Marshall, soprano; William Warfield, baritone.
Saturday, August 15, 10.00 a. m.
Music Shed
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
Charles Munch, Conductor
Public Rehearsal (Benefit, Pension Fund)
—Music Shed
Concert by Students of De-
(Guest Composer Carlos Cha-
nduct his "Sinfonia de Baile," ymphony, "H. P." 1932)
—Music Shed
IRE FESTIVAL CONCERT C-2
nard Bernstein, Conductor — Symphony No. 4, in A minor
— Sinfonia India
— Symphony No. 2, in D major y, August 16, 10.00 a. m.
Theater-Concert Hall
Music Concert by Students of nt I.
— Music Shed
IRE FESTIVAL CONCERT C-3
arles Munch, Conductor
— Symphony in B minor ("Un-
— Prelude and Love-Death,
n und Isolde"
ner — A Siegfried Idyll
Wagner — "Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg," Excerpts from Act III
Broadcast coast-to-coast by CBS Radio
James Fassett, Commentator
Ravel — Piano Concerto for the Left Hand
Soloist: Seymour Lipkin
Ravel — "La Valse"

Veterans Group To Be Guests At Tanglewood

Eagle 8/15

Eighteen patients from the Veterans Hospital in Northampton will be guests of the Berkshire Music Center at tomorrow afternoon's concert at Tanglewood.

The patients are members of the music appreciation class that meets every Wednesday night at the hospital under the direction of Miss Margaret Harrison, Pittsfield Red Cross volunteer.

The veterans and four aides from the hospital will be driven to Tanglewood by the Berkshire County Red Cross entertainment and supply corps. Quentin N. Thompson of Pittsfield is in charge of the group.

After the concert, the group will have a picnic supper at the home of Ralph M. O'Connell.

Cir. (D 143,029)

This Clipping From
CLEVELAND, OHIO
NEWS

AUG 15 1953

Offers 'Live'

WGAR's Music Festivals show offers a "live" concert once again at 2:30 with Charles Munch direct ng the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Bershire Music Festival n Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony," and three works by Wagner.

Franz List's "Les Preludes" is played by the Cleveland Municipal Band in the third concert of the series broadcast on WGAR at 4:30. The program also includes Sousa's 'Stars and Stripes Forever," and Schubert's "Serenade."

Morley and Gearhart the duo-pianists who have made many appearances in Cleveland with the Pop Concerts, are the soloists Sunday afternoon at 4 on WTAM with he Hollywood Bowl Concerts, with Arthur Fiedler as guest conductor.

Summer Symphony

At 5 p. m. Sunday afternoon Wilfred Pelletier conducts the NBC Summer Symphony in Beethoven's Eighth Symphony, portions of Berlioz' "Fantastic" Symphony and Ibert's "Les Escales."

Music is plentiful Sunday evening too. Tony Martin's disk show features Eddie Fisher recordings, including "With These Hands," and Martin's own "Tenement Symphony," WTAM at 8. Martin's show gives way at 8:30 to the Best Plays' drama, "Detective Story," with Wendell Corey in the role of Detective McLeod and an excellent supporting cast.

WHK picks up the musical theme at 8:30 with excerpts from MacDowell's popular "Woodland Sketches" on Enchanted Hour at 8:30.

Sophie Tucker picks up the musical ball at 10 when she visits the Robert Q. Lewis show and helps Lewis with his appraisal of record favorites of the day.

Cir. (D 131,670) (S 258,529)

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD

AUG 15 1953

LEONARD BERNSTEIN, who will conduct tonight's program at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, at which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will play works by Sibelius, Chavez and Brahms.

Cir. (D 98,282)

This Clipping From
WORCESTER, MASS.
GAZETTE

AUG 15 1953

TV'S FIRST SUMMER STOCK COMPANY

The Robert Montgomery Players—with (from left) Elizabeth Montgomery, Vaughn Taylor, Margaret Hayes and John Newland as stars—are television's first permanent Summer stock company. Elizabeth is producer Montgomery's daughter. The series is a Summer feature making its premiere this year.

RADIO AND TELEVISION

Pair Band, Boxer On New TV Show

By JAMES A. GOURGOURAS

SATURDAY SMATTERINGS — How does this sound for a new TV show? Sugar Ray Robinson and Count Basie's band—being packaged at the moment . . . And another fighter, Brown Bomber Louis (yes, Joe) has shed more than 20 pounds, readying for television work . . . Watch "Bride and Groom" Monday. The soldier being married to Beverly Jeanne Tucker will be Tom Breneman Jr., son of the late "Breakfast in Hollywood" emcee . . . Just discovered that Dennis James was taken ill in Denver recently after doing a 16-hour telethon there for the Cerebral Palsy Foundation. When rushed to the hospital, his doctor turned out to be Garry Moore's brother, George Morfit, M. D. . . . Staffers at WTAG report that the morning following the Dick Haymes deportation story broke in the papers, Bob Haymes, his brother, opened his CBS radio show with announcement that he had just heard of Dick's plight—and paused two seconds before uttering a deeply sighed: "Oh, brother!"

★

WAAB DROPPING AFFILIATION—George Wilson, WAAB's president, tells me that station will cancel affiliation with the ABC network, effective Oct. 15. He says reason is proposed change in "program content". And to that, I hazard we'll be hearing "Play ball!" banter soon . . . It'll be Walter Pidgeon in the "Edward, My Son" lead at 9 p. m. Monday on WTAG's "Summer Theater" . . . Charles Munch on the podium before the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Great Shed at Berkshire's Music Festival tomorrow — WTAG carries the broadcast, too . . . And Canada's Wilfrid Pelletier conducts the NBC Summer Symphony Orchestra tomorrow on WBZ . . . Oops, CBS wants Ed Wynn to do a children's show . . . Always thought the Jane Froman "Canteen" show was too slow-paced, so glad to hear she'll drop that this Fall for a quick-moving music-comedy setup.

★

CATCH SULLIVAN'S "TOAST" tomorrow night for a top-flight package of variety in voices—Frankie Laine, concert soprano Anne Marie Alberghatti and boy singer Jimmy Boyd . . . If you enjoyed reading stories by Richard Harding Davis, see Charles Ruggles in "The Consul" at 10 tonight on Channel 7—it's an adaptation of a Davis tale . . . Oh, yes, Ed Sullivan flies to Boston a week from this Monday to be toastmaster of the Welcome Home banquet to Ted Williams in Hotel Statler. All proceeds of the $100-a-plate dinner slugged for Children's Cancer Research of Children's Hospital in Boston . . . Jayne (Audrey's sister) Meadows has a featured role in a racketeer rumpus on "The Web" tomorrow night at 10 on Channel 7 . . . Don't forget: teletime for the resuming U. N. telecasts will be 4.30 p. m. starting Monday on a Monday-through-Friday schedule.

[290]

Cir. (D 96,447)

This Clipping From
HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES

AUG 15 1953

Problems of Success Those of Tanglewood

By CARL E. LINDSTRÓM

TOMORROW'S concert ends another Tanglewood season. It has been enormously successful as the Berkshire Symphonic Festival has been progressively successful since its very beginning. Success of this sort naturally brings the problems of traffic, parking, overnight accommodations and food. One way or another, these have been managed. Not the least of the problems have been seats and ticket handling, especially for the student concerts which are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, students, faculty and the press. Because of misunderstandings and a few ruffled feelings, it might not be amiss to explain the problem and its solutions.

For the opera performances several methods have been tried looking toward an equitable distribution of the limited number of seats. First, the distribution was on the first-come-first-served basis. This proved unsatisfactory. Later on the house was reserved, applications were filled as conscientiously as possible and the management discovered that a "free ticket" was often asked for and not used. There were occasions when 20 per cent of the seats were not occupied because the ticket holder neither used his ticket nor returned it to be passed on to someone else.

This year, Friends who wished to reserve a seat were asked to make the nominal supplementary gift of a dollar, not as a purchase price of a ticket, but as a service charge — a very small one, in view of the fact that correspondence and personal calls kept a secretary occupied full time for several weeks.

The new plan resulted in 99 per cent of the people using the tickets instead of 80 per cent.

There was an additional limitation which caused the difficulty this year. People were asked to be in their seats by 8:20 or they forfeited their right to the seat. It has already been decided that next year this experiment will be repeated with the difference that unoccupied seats would be available only after the first break in the performance.

Too, there was a misunderstanding about the concerts which were moved from the small hall to the big Shed. As ticket holders know, there were alternate seat numbers. Obviously there were a great many unoccupied seats in the Big Shed when all of the thousand-odd ticket holders had been seated.

It was the intention of the management that those persons who had grounds admission only would be free to take over the unoccupied seats. This they did not do but it was only because there was no convenient means of letting the lawn-sitters know that they could move in.

It is gratifying anyway to know that Tanglewood's problems are the problems of success.

MUSIC CALENDAR

SUNDAY

2:30 p. m. — Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

4 p. m.—Berkshire Quartet, Music Mountain, Falls Village.

THURSDAY

8:15 p. m. — Opening performances of the American Dance Festival, premieres and repertoire by Jose Limon, Pauline Koper, Doris Humphrey, Sophie Maslow, John Butler, Ronne Aul and others, through Sunday afternoon, Connecticut College, New London.

FRIDAY

4 and 9 p. m.—Ted Shawn and Shivaram, Jacob's Pillow, Lee, Mass.

8:30 p. m.—American Dance Festival, as above.

SATURDAY

8:30 p. m.—American Dance Festival, as above.

This Clipping From
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
NEWS

AUG 15 1953

Popular and classical music take ver the radio spotlight tomorrow aft-rnoon and evening.

On World Music Festivals at 1:30 'clock on WFBM-CBS, Charles Muench conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berksshire music festival. They will perform Schubert's "Unfinished" symphony and three works by Wagner. At 4 o'clock on WIRE-NBC, Wilfrid Pelletier will conduct the NBC Summer Symphony orchestra. The Canadian conductor will play Symphony No. 8 by Beethoven and three of the five movements of Berlioz's Symphonie Fantastique. Tonight at 9 o'clock Soprano Margaret Roberts and Baritone Raymond Sharp headline the broadcast of the Chicago Theater of the Air on WIBC-Mutual.

Cir. (D 143,029)

This Clipping From
CLEVELAND, OHIO
NEWS

AUG 15 1953

Offers 'Live

WGAR's Music Festivals show offers a "live" concert once again at 2:30 with Charles Munch direct ng the Boston Symphony Orchesra at the Bershire Music Festival n Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony," and three works by Wagner.

Franz List's "Les Preludes" is played by the Cleveland Municipal Band in the third concert of the series broadcast on WGAR at 4:30. The program also includes Sousa's 'Stars and Stripes Forever," and Schubert's "Serenade."

Morley and Gearhart the duo-pianists who have made many appearances in Cleveland with the Pop Concerts, are the soloists Sunday afternoon at 4 on WTAM with the Hollywood Bowl Concerts, with Arthur Fiedler as guest conductor.

Summer Symphony

At 5 p. m. Sunday afternoon Wilfred Pelletier conducts the NBC Summer Symphony in Beethoven's Eighth Symphony, portions of Berlioz' "Fantastic" Symphony and Ibert's "Les Escales."

Music is plentiful Sunday evening too. Tony Martin's disk show features Eddie Fisher recordings, including "With These Hands," and Martin's own "Tenement Symphony," WTAM at 8. Martin's show gives way at 8:30 to the Best Plays' drama, "Detective Story," with Wendell Corey in the role of Detective McLeod and an excellent supporting cast.

WHK picks up the musical theme at 8:30 with excerpts from MacDowell's popular "Woodland Sketches" on Enchanted Hour at 8:30.

Sophie Tucker picks up the musical ball at 10 when she visits the Robert Q. Lewis show and helps Lewis with his appraisal of record favorites of the day.

FINAL CONCERTS AT TANGLEWOOD

Munch to Conduct Tonight, Tomorrow

E SPRINGFLD, MASS. S

August 14—The final in of current summer con-be held this week end at od with Charles Munch
g.
ogram:
RE FESTIVAL CONCERT C-1
arles Munch, Conductor
S . . . Requiem, with Festival
d Soloists.
Lois Marshall, soprano; Wil-ield, baritone.
ay, August 15, 10.00 a. m.
Music Shed
N SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
arles Munch, Conductor
earsal (Benefit, Pension Fund)
—Music Shed
Concert by Students of De-
(Guest Composer Carlos Cha-
nduct his "Sinfonia de Baile,"
ymphony, "H. P." 1932)
—Music Shed
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL CONCERT C-2
Leonard Bernstein, Conductor
Sibelius — Symphony No. 4, in A minor
Chavez — Sinfonia India
Brahms — Symphony No. 2, in D major
Sunday, August 16, 10.00 a. m.
Theater-Concert Hall
Chamber Music Concert by Students of Department I.
2.30 p. m.- Music Shed
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL CONCERT C-3
Charles Munch, Conductor
Schubert — Symphony in B minor ("Unfinished")
Wagner — Prelude and Love-Death, "Tristan und Isolde"
Wagner — A Siegfried Idyll
Wagner — "Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg," Excerpts from Act III
Broadcast coast-to-coast by CBS Radio
James Fassett, Commentator
Ravel — Piano Concerto for the Left Hand
Soloist: Seymour Lipkin
Ravel — "La Valse"

Veterans Group To Be Guests At Tanglewood

Eagle 8/15

Eighteen patients from the Veterans Hospital in Northampton will be guests of the Berkshire Music Center at tomorrow afternoon's concert at Tanglewood.

The patients are members of the music appreciation class that meets every Wednesday night at the hospital under the direction of Miss Margaret Harrison, Pittsfield Red Cross volunteer.

The veterans and four aides from the hospital will be driven to Tanglewood by the Berkshire County Red Cross entertainment and supply corps. Quentin N. Thompson of Pittsfield is in charge of the group.

After the concert, the group will have a picnic supper at the home of Ralph M. O'Connell.

Cir. (D 131,670) (S 258,529)

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD

AUG 15 1953

LEONARD BERNSTEIN, who will conduct tonight's program at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, at which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will play works by Sibelius, Chavez and Brahms.

Cir. (D 98,282)

This Clipping From
WORCESTER, MASS.
GAZETTE

AUG 15 1953

TV'S FIRST SUMMER STOCK COMPANY

The Robert Montgomery Players—with (from left) Elizabeth Montgomery, Vaughn Taylor, Margaret Hayes and John Newland as stars—are television's first permanent Summer stock company. Elizabeth is producer Montgomery's daughter. The series is a Summer feature making its premiere this year.

RADIO AND TELEVISION

Pair Band, Boxer On New TV Show

By JAMES A. GOURGOURAS

SATURDAY SMATTERINGS — How does this sound for a new TV show? Sugar Ray Robinson and Count Basie's band—being packaged at the moment . . . And another fighter, Brown Bomber Louis (yes, Joe) has shed more than 20 pounds, readying for television work . . . Watch "Bride and Groom" Monday. The soldier being married to Beverly Jeanne Tucker will be Tom Breneman Jr., son of the late "Breakfast in Hollywood" emcee . . . Just discovered that Dennis James was taken ill in Denver recently after doing a 16-hour telethon there for the Cerebral Palsy Foundation. When rushed to the hospital, his doctor turned out to be Garry Moore's brother, George Morfit, M. D. . . . Staffers at WTAG report that the morning following the Dick Haymes deportation story broke in the papers, Bob Haymes, his brother, opened his CBS radio show with announcement that he had just heard of Dick's plight—and paused two seconds before uttering a deeply sighed: "Oh, brother!"

★

WAAB DROPPING AFFILIATION—George Wilson, WAAB's president, tells me that station will cancel affiliation with the ABC network, effective Oct. 15. He says reason is proposed change in "program content". And to that, I hazard we'll be hearing "Play ball!" banter soon . . . It'll be Walter Pidgeon in the "Edward, My Son" lead at 9 p. m. Monday on WTAG's "Summer Theater" . . . Charles Munch on the podium before the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Great Shed at Berkshire's Music Festival tomorrow — WTAG carries the broadcast, too . . . And Canada's Wilfrid Pelletier conducts the NBC Summer Symphony Orchestra tomorrow on WBZ . . . Oops, CBS wants Ed Wynn to do a children's show . . . Always thought the Jane Froman "Canteen" show was too slow-paced, so glad to hear she'll drop that this Fall for a quick-moving music-comedy setup.

★

CATCH SULLIVAN'S "TOAST" tomorrow night for a top-flight package of variety in voices—Frankie Laine, concert soprano Anne Marie Alberghatti and boy singer Jimmy Boyd . . . If you enjoyed reading stories by Richard Harding Davis, see Charles Ruggles in "The Consul" at 10 tonight on Channel 7—it's an adaptation of a Davis tale . . . Oh, yes, Ed Sullivan flies to Boston a week from this Monday to be toastmaster of the Welcome Home banquet to Ted Williams in Hotel Statler. All proceeds of the $100-a-plate dinner slugged for Children's Cancer Research of Children's Hospital in Boston . . . Jayne (Audrey's sister) Meadows has a featured role in a racketeer rumpus on "The Web" tomorrow night at 10 on Channel 7 . . . Don't forget: teletime for the resuming U. N. telecasts will be 4.30 p. m. starting Monday on a Monday-through-Friday schedule.

[290]

Tanglewood's Music Shed Is an Acoustical Eccentric

By JOSEPH FRANZ

Thousands flock to Tanglewood from many states and foreign countries to enjoy music superbly played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Music Shed with its unique surroundings and perfect acoustics.

There is no amplification used in this auditorium; the faintest notes can be heard not only within the Shed, but also some distance outside its confines. The casual listener sometimes wonders if this condition is due to just an accident or if perhaps some study and thought preceded its accomplishment.

It is true that all available technical information was obtained before the plans for the shed were made, but no guarantee could be given as to what the results would be. The problem to fill with sound a hall 40 feet high and one and one-third acres in area was new and unprecedented.

Echo Disappeared

One factor that could have ruined the acoustics was discovered at the time the foundations for the steel columns that support the huge structure were laid out. The first layout was made 50 feet nearer to the woods that flank the sides of the Shed. When the survey stakes were driven a distinct echo could be heard on the stage end of the layout. As this work progressed towards the great arc, the echo disappeared.

This would perhaps have passed unnoticed had it not been for the fact that during the early concerts given at the Dan Hanna estate in 1934 and 1935 (now the Stockbridge School), an annoying echo of this sort plagued the performances. Therefore the layout was shifted some 50 feet away from the woods. This echo can still be heard if one claps his hands at the end of what is now the tuning room. Had the stage been at this point it would have been disastrous to the acoustic results.

Another interesting feature is the design and material used in the building of the so-called shell in which the orchestra plays. Accepted theories for shell construction are to use a material that has no resonance such as solid concrete. Examples of such shells are the Hollywood Bowl in Los Angeles and the Esplanade Shell in Boston. Both of these are fitted with amplifiers.

Built of Plywood

The idea underlying this principle is that no resonator could be designed that would be in synchronism with all the tonal qualities used in an orchestra such as percussion, brass, woodwinds, and string instruments. The shell at the Music Shed is built of three-eighths-inch plywood supported on wood uprights and joists and is very resonant. One can feel the vibration of the shell by laying his hand on the walls during a concert.

The requirements of a successful shell are first, the musicians must be able to hear themselves so that they may all play together at the same concert pitch. Secondly, the shell must act as a mixing bowl for all the sounds and blend them together. Thirdly, it must send the entire volume of sounds out to the audience in increasing volume.

Wetting the Shell

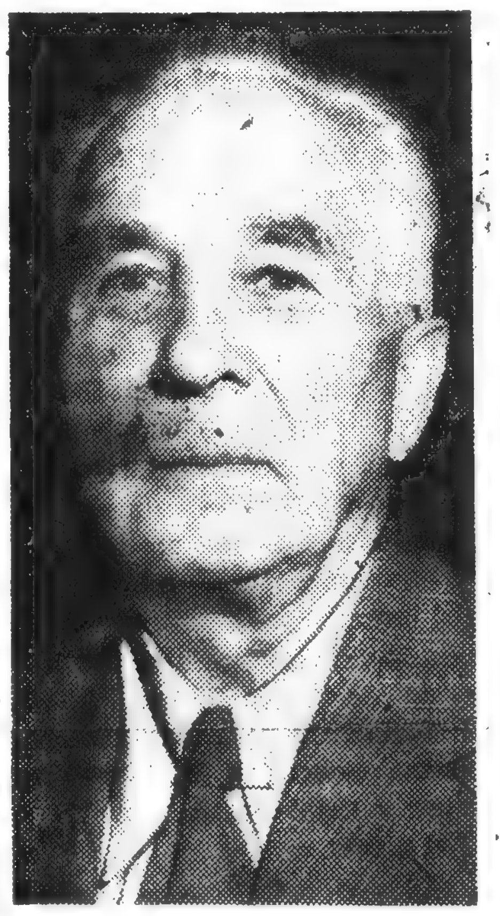
Years of experimentation produced the present shell. It was found during concerts given at the Hanna estate that a rain which wetted the exposed shell before a concert had profound beneficial effects on the accoustics. Therefore, for several concerts the shell was given a good wetting before hand.

This practice was discontinued and the acoustics were still good. During the wetting and drying, the layers of plywood opened as well as the grain in the wood. This gives a mellowness to the music similar to that found in old instruments.

For economic reasons the old plywood and other lumber of the former shell was used again in the Shed. It was to be just a temporary expedient until a more pretentious one could be built from future funds. It has worked out so well that no one would want to risk a change.

Limited Funds Helped

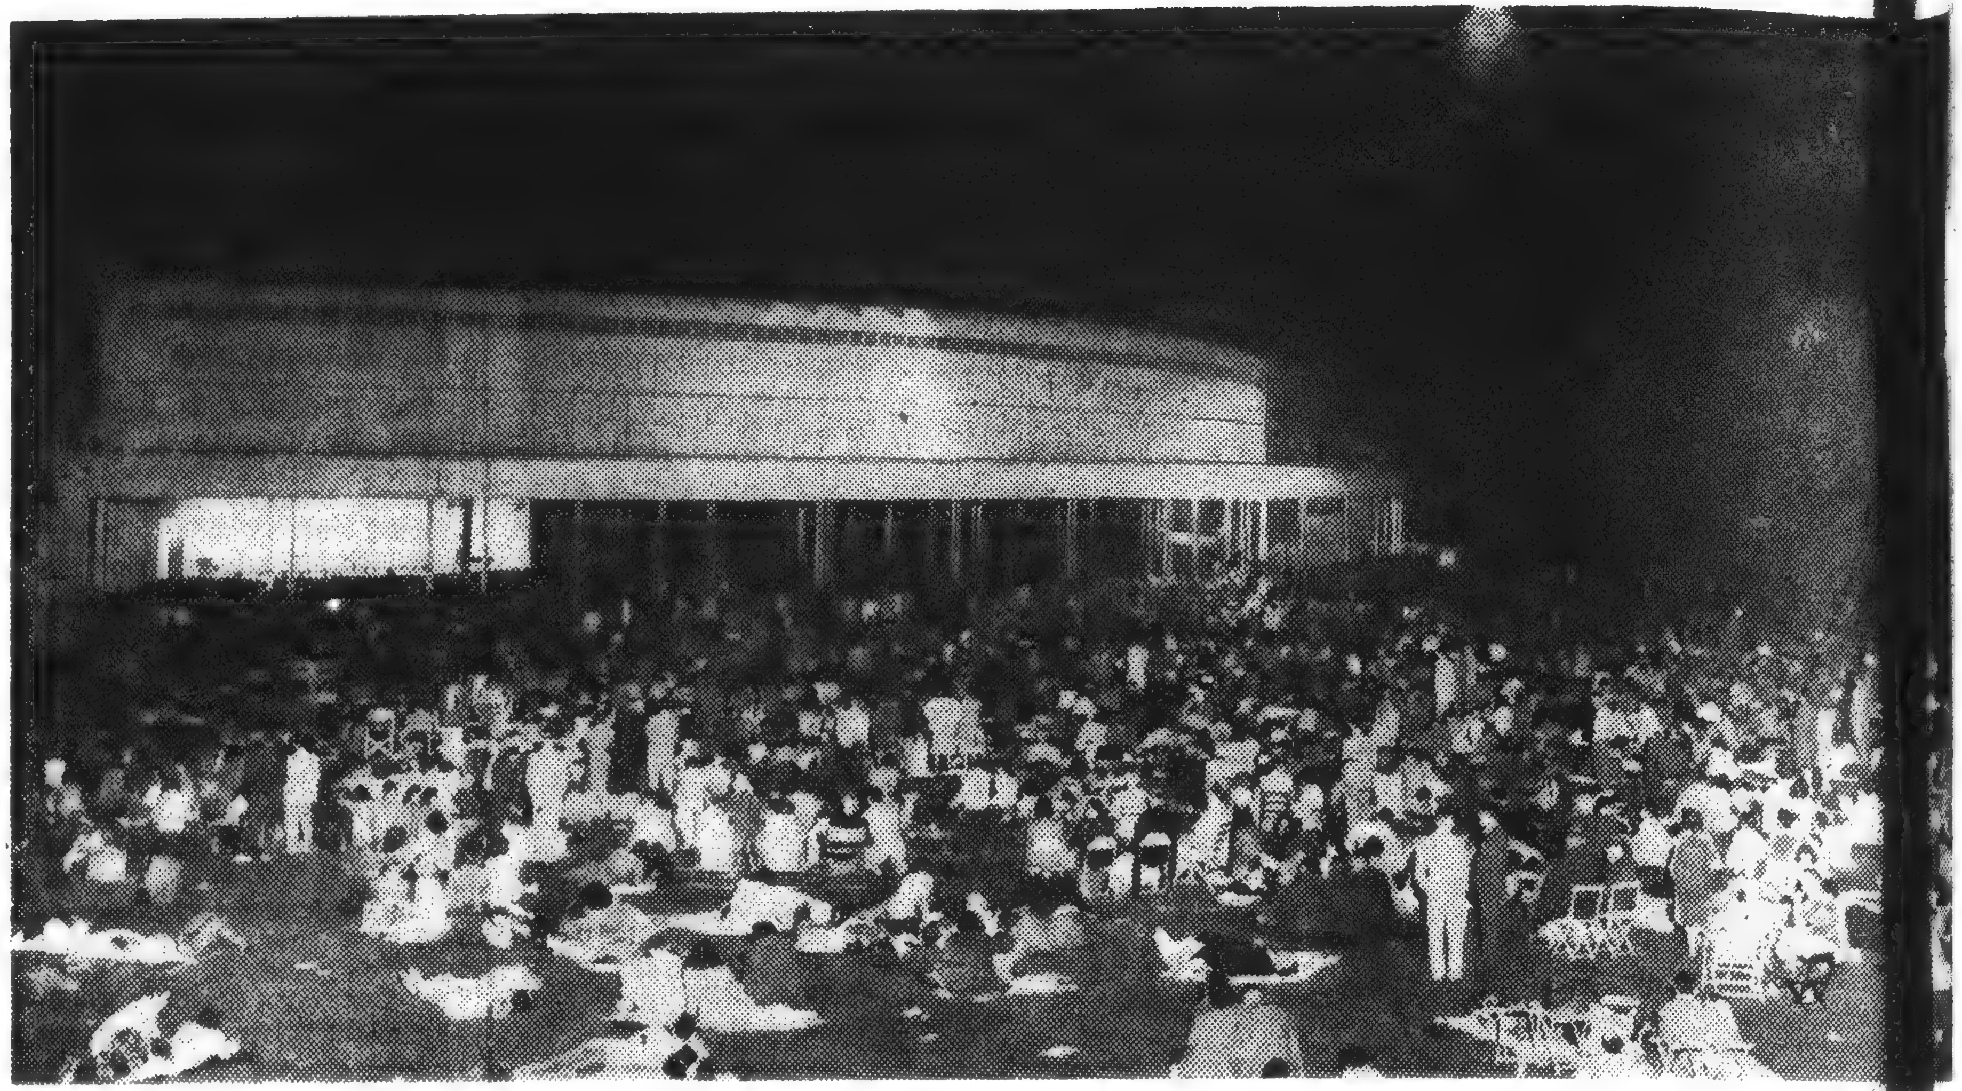
Limited funds also left the building unfinished inside. The sounds are sent out into a maze of steel which so well breaks up the surfaces that there are no large reflecting areas which may create an echo, with its resulting dead spots so often found in some of our finest auditoriums.



Joseph Franz

Just what takes place when sounds are reflected back from such broken up surfaces is still not thoroughly understood. Concert halls must have resonance—they must reverberate for a certain period before dying out. The musicians call it a live hall as compared to a dead one not suitable for musical performances.

It can be said that the exceptional acoustical qualities of the Shed are at least partly due to the fact that it had to be realized on very limited funds.



IT SOUNDS GOOD: A midsummer's night crowd overflows the Tanglewood Music Shed and enjoys the Boston Symphony's ings from under the stars. Acoustics in the Shed are so good that persons can hear the music equally as good inside or ou the 6000-capacity Shed.

The Berkshire Evening Eagle, Saturday, Aug. 15, 1953—9

Joseph Franz Changed Design To Fit Pocketbook

Joseph Franz of Stockbridge, 71-year-old German-born engineer, is the man who made famed architect Eliel Saarinen's designs for the Tanglewood Music Shed fit the Tanglewood pocketbook.

Saarinen's original design in 1937 provided for no supporting columns in the center of the Shed. Cost of building the Shed to that design was estimated at about $240,000. Mr. Franz recalls that only $80,000 was available.

When Saarinen refused to compromise his design, he withdrew from the project and Mr. Franz was assigned to amend the plans and specifications to come within the budget.

The main change, and the one to which Saarinen strongly objected, was the erection of three columns in the center of the Shed to reduce the steel costs by one-third.

Berkshire Festival Concludes Today

The most successful Berkshire Festival in the 16 summers concerts have been performed in the hills of Western Massachusetts, the fourteenth since the Boston Symphony Orchestra participated, concludes its activities today with all attendance records shattered. More than 150,000 music lovers have attended the 15 Festival concerts; the 40 demonstrations of student symphony, chamber music, choral music, opera and study group departments of the Berkshire Music Center (the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony); and Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade" gala, the annual benefit for the school.

This afternoon Mr. Munch will have Seymour Lipkin, pianist who is assistant to Mr. Bernstein in the summer school's conducting department and to BSO concertmaster Richard Burgin in its chamber music department, as soloist in the Ravel Concerto for the Left Hand, a Tanglewood premiere.

The portion of today's concert, 2:30 to 4:00 p. m., will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as com-

AUGUST 16, 1953

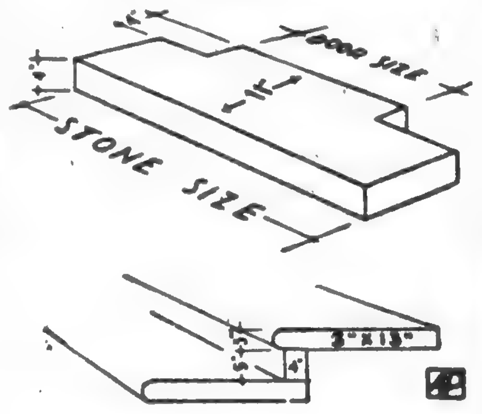
Piano Concerto for the ... Ravel
Soloist: Seymour Lipkin
"La Valse" ... Ravel

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS

TODAY, 2:30 P. M., the Shed. Boston Symphony conducted by Charles Munch. Seymour Lipkin, pianist. Final concert.
Symphony in B minor .... Schubert
Bourree Fantasque .... Chabrier
Excerpts from Tristan und Isolde and Die Meistersinger; A Siegfried Idyll .... Wagner
Piano Concerto for the Left Hand; La Valse ....

SUNDAY, AUGUST 16, 1953

Cut Stone Slabs Help Keep Steps In Safe Repair



Serious accidents, inside and out, can result from neglecting stairways and steps. Loose treads should be repaired without delay; worn ones must be replaced.

Cut stone slabs offer the most permanent treads for outside steps. They can be obtained in standard sizes from masonry dealers.

r safe and easy use, any flight airs should have risers (the ht boards between steps) no than 7½ inches high. Treads part you step on) should be s than 10 inches wide. This adequate footing.

Treads are allowed to overlap risers by an inch or so to provide toe room.

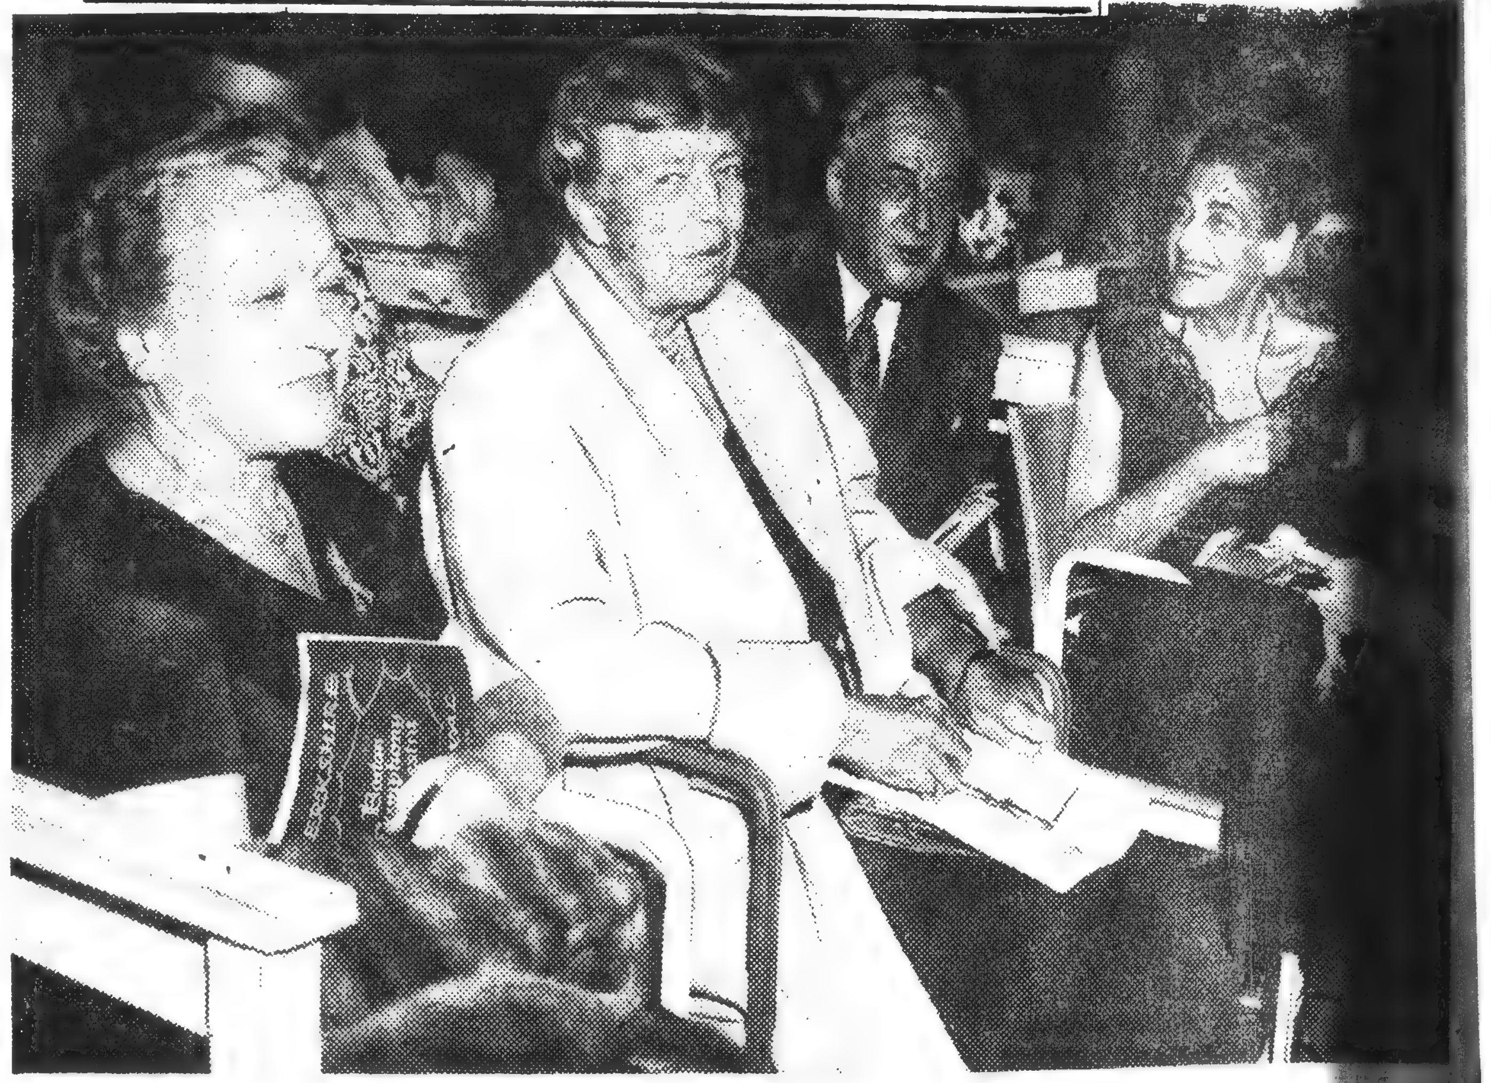
TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
Orchestra

YORK TIMES, SUN

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
Orchestra
CHARLES MUNCH, Musical Director

BOSTON SUNDAY HERA

20—The Berkshire Evening Eagle, Saturday, Aug. 15, 1953 ★ ★



EMINENT GUEST: Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt listens to Brahms' "Requiem" from box of Mrs. Beatrice Fox Auerbach, right, of Hartford. The famous visitor arrived with her niece, unannounced. At intermission she asked to be taken to the Tanglewood Green Room, where she chatted with the conductor, met Miss Lois Marshall, and gave a message from a mutual friend to William Warfield, baritone soloist. She told the usher that the Berkshire Festival is one of the things to which she looks forward with pleasure and wishes to attend every season. She has appeared there many times.

Only 7600 At Brahms Concert

Mrs. Roosevelt And Fritz Kreisler Hear Program

The audience for Brahms' "Requiem" performed last night in the Tanglewood Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, with soloists Lois Marshall, soprano, and William Warfield, baritone, and the Festival Chorus, was 7600.

The opening concert of the final 1952 series, on a Thursday evening, attracted 10,250. That program consisted of Brahms' Second Piano Concerto, with Artur Rubinstein as soloist; Howard Swanson's Short Symphony and Robert Schumann's First Symphony.

In last night's audience was Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, in the box with her friend, Mrs. Beatrice Fox Auerbach of Hartford, whose guest she often has been at Tanglewood. Also seen for the first time at this season's concerts was the violinist, Fritz Kreisler.

The Concerts

AUGUST 16, 1953

TODAY

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass Symphony Orchestra, Charles ducting. Final concert. Schu finished" Symphony. Chabr Fantasque, Wagner-Prelude Death from Tristan und Isol fried Idyll, "Die Meister Nurnberg." Ravel-Piano C Left Hand, La Valse, Solois Lipkin. 2:30 p. m.

* * *

Southern Vermont Art C ester, Vt. Grant Johann 4 p. m.

* * *

WEDNESDAY

Plymouth Rock Centre fo bury Playhouse, Duxbury. tra concert. George Poina Stephan Manes, pianist. tinues nightly at 8:30 p Saturday.

* * *

FRIDAY

Castle Hill, Ipswich, M and Field, duo-pianists. tra conducted by Frank Bach, Milhaud and Bartok.

* * *

SATURDAY

Castle Hill, Ipswich, Mass. Repeat program.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the

S., AUGUST 16, 1953

REPUB

Tanglewood's Music Shed Is an Acoustical Eccentric

By JOSEPH FRANZ

Thousands flock to Tanglewood from many states and foreign countries to enjoy music superbly played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Music Shed with its unique surroundings and perfect acoustics.

There is no amplification used in this auditorium; the faintest notes can be heard not only within the Shed, but also some distance outside its confines. The casual listener sometimes wonders if this condition is due to just an accident or if perhaps some study and thought preceded its accomplishment.

It is true that all available technical information was obtained before the plans for the shed were made, but no guarantee could be given as to what the results would be. The problem to fill with sound a hall 40 feet high and one and one-third acres in area was new and unprecedented.

Echo Disappeared

One factor that could have ruined the acoustics was discovered at the time the foundations for the steel columns that support the huge structure were laid out. The first layout was made 50 feet nearer to the woods that flank the sides of the Shed. When the survey stakes were driven a distinct echo could be heard on the stage end of the layout. As this work progressed towards the great arc, the echo disappeared.

This would perhaps have passed unnoticed had it not been for the fact that during the early concerts given at the Dan Hanna estate in 1934 and 1935 (now the Stockbridge School), an annoying echo of this sort plagued the performances. Therefore the layout was shifted some 50 feet away from the woods. This echo can still be heard if one claps his hands at the end of what is now the tuning room. Had the stage been at this point it would have been disastrous to the acoustic results.

Another interesting feature is the design and material used in the building of the so-called shell in which the orchestra plays. Accepted theories for shell construction are to use a material that has no resonance such as solid concrete. Examples of such shells are the Hollywood Bowl in Los Angeles and the Esplanade Shell in Boston. Both of these are fitted with amplifiers.

Built of Plywood

The idea underlying this principle is that no resonator could be designed that would be in synchronism with all the tone qualities used in an orchestra such as percussion, brass, woodwinds, and string instruments. The shell at the Music Shed is built of three-eighths-inch plywood supported on wood uprights and joists and is very resonant. One can feel the vibration of the shell by laying his hand on the walls during a concert.

The requirements of a successful shell are first, the musicians must be able to hear themselves so that they may all play together at the same concert pitch. Secondly, the shell must act as a mixing bowl for all the sounds and blend them together. Thirdly, it must send the entire volume of sounds out to the audience in increasing volume.

Wetting the Shell

Years of experimentation produced the present shell. It was found during concerts given at the Hanna estate that a rain which wetted the exposed shell before a concert had profound beneficial effects on the accoustics. Therefore, for several concerts the shell was given a good wetting before hand.

This practice was discontinued and the acoustics were still good. During the wetting and drying, the layers of plywood opened as well as the grain in the wood. This gives a mellowness to the music similar to that found in old instruments.

For economic reasons the old plywood and other lumber of the former shell was used again in the Shed. It was to be just a temporary expedient until a more pretentious one could be built from future funds. It has worked out so well that no one would want to risk a change.

Limited Funds Helped

Limited funds also left the building unfinished inside. The sounds are sent out into a maze of steel which so well breaks up the surfaces that there are no large reflecting areas which may create an echo, with its resulting dead spots so often found in some of our finest auditoriums.

Just what takes place when sounds are reflected back from such broken up surfaces is still not thoroughly understood. Concert halls must have resonance—they must reverberate for a certain period before dying out. The musicians call it a live hall as compared to a dead one not suitable for musical performances.

It can be said that the exceptional acoustical qualities of the Shed are at least partly due to the fact that it had to be realized on very limited funds.

IT SOUNDS GOOD: A midsummer's night crowd overflows the Tanglewood Music Shed and enjoys the Boston Symphony's offerings from under the stars. Acoustics in the Shed are so good that persons can hear the music equally as good inside or outside the 6000-capacity Shed.

Joseph Franz

The Berkshire Evening Eagle, Saturday, Aug. 15, 1953—9

Joseph Franz Changed Design To Fit Pocketbook

Joseph Franz of Stockbridge, 71-year-old German-born engineer, is the man who made famed architect Eliel Saarinen's designs for the Tanglewood Music Shed fit the Tanglewood pocketbook.

Saarinen's original design in 1937 provided for no supporting columns in the center of the Shed. Cost of building the Shed to that design was estimated at about $240,000. Mr. Franz recalls that only $80,000 was available.

When Saarinen refused to compromise his design, he withdrew from the project and Mr. Franz was assigned to amend the plans and specifications to come within the budget.

The main change, and the one to which Saarinen strongly objected, was the erection of three columns in the center of the Shed to reduce the steel costs by one-third.

20—The Berkshire Evening Eagle, Saturday, Aug. 15, 1953 ★★

Brool

EMINENT GUEST: Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt listens to Brahms' "Requiem" from box of Mrs. Beatrice Fox Auerbach, right, of Hartford. The famous visitor arrived with her niece, unannounced. At intermission she asked to be taken to the Tanglewood Green Room, where she chatted with the conductor, met Miss Lois Marshall, and gave a message from a mutual friend to William Warfield, baritone soloist. She told the usher that the Berkshire Festival is one of the things to which she looks forward with pleasure and wishes to attend every season. She has appeared there many times.

Berkshire Festival Concludes Today

The most successful Berkshire Festival in the 16 summers concerts have been performed in the hills of Western Massachusetts, the fourteenth since the Boston Symphony Orchestra participated, concludes its activities today with all attendance records shattered. More than 150,000 music lovers have attended the 15 Festival concerts; the 40 demonstrations of student symphony, chamber music, choral music, opera and study group departments of the Berkshire Music Center (the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony); and Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade" gala, the annual benefit for the school.

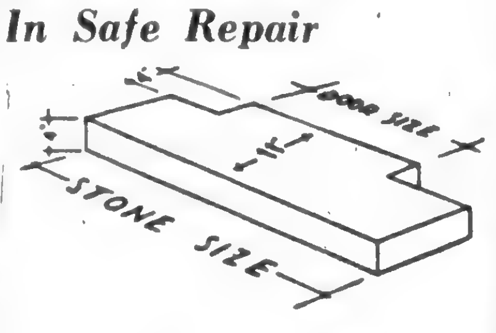
This afternoon Mr. Munch will have Seymour Lipkin, pianist who is assistant to Mr. Bernstein in the summer school's conducting department and to BSO concertmaster Richard Burgin in its chamber music department, as soloist in the Ravel Concerto for the Left Hand, a Tanglewood premiere.

The portion of today's concert, 2:30 to 4:00 p. m., will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as com-

AUGUST 16, 1953

Piano Concerto for the ... Soloist: Seymour Lipkin — Ravel
"La Valse" — Ravel

Cut Stone Slabs Help Keep Steps In Safe Repair



Serious accidents, inside and out, can result from neglecting stairways and steps. Loose treads should be repaired without delay; worn ones must be replaced.

Cut stone slabs offer the most permanent treads for outside steps. They can be obtained in standard sizes from masonry dealers.

For safe and easy use, any flight of stairs should have risers (the upright boards between steps) no more than 7½ inches high. Treads (the part you step on) should be no less than 10 inches wide. This [illegible] adequate footing.

Treads are allowed to overlap risers by an inch or so to provide toe room.

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS

TODAY, 2:30 P. M., the Shed. Boston Symphony conducted by Charles Munch, Seymour Lipkin, pianist. Final concert.

Symphony in B minor .... Schubert
Bourree Fantasque .... Chabrier
Excerpts from Tristan und Isolde and Die Meistersinger; A Siegfried Idyll .... Wagner
Piano Concerto for the Left Hand; La Valse........

SUNDAY, AUGUST 16, 1953

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY

NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
Orchestra
CHARLES MUNCH, Musical Director

BOSTON SUNDAY HERALD

Only 7600 At Brahms Concert

Mrs. Roosevelt And Fritz Kreisler Hear Program

The audience for Brahms' "Requiem" performed last night in the Tanglewood Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, with soloists Lois Marshall, soprano, and William Warfield, baritone, and the Festival Chorus, was 7600.

The opening concert of the final 1952 series, on a Thursday evening, attracted 10,250. That program consisted of Brahms' Second Piano Concerto, with Artur Rubinstein as soloist; Howard Swanson's Short Symphony and Robert Schumann's First Symphony.

In last night's audience was Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, in the box with her friend, Mrs. Beatrice Fox Auerbach of Hartford, whose guest she often has been at Tanglewood. Also seen for the first time at this season's concerts was the violinist, Fritz Kreisler.

Tanglewood

BSO Recordings To Be Released in Fall

Recordings by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be released in September by Victor Records. Music recorded, which was heard at Tanglewood this season, includes the entire Berlioz dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," complete with soloists, which will occupy three LP sides; Roussel's "Bacchus and Ariane" suite; and Arthur Honegger's "Symphony No. 5."

The Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler conductor, is releasing a new version of Prokofieff's "Peter and the Wolf," with Alec Guinness, English stage and screen actor, as narrator. Mr. Guinness recorded his commentary in London, and it was "dubbed" with the music.

Another "Pops" album, expected to excite comment, is labeled "Classical Music for People Who Hate Classical Music."

Munch Leaves Tuesday For Home in Paris

The Boston Symphony Orchestra and its director, Charles Munch, will go to Boston immediately after the final Berkshire Festival concert tomorrow afternoon. They will spend Monday at Symphony Hall, making records.

The following day Mr. Munch will fly to Nice, France, for a holiday until the week ending Oct. 9, when the Boston Symphony will open its 1953-54 season.

Fiedler Returning East

Arthur Fiedler will interrupt a season of conducting on the West Coast to fly to Boston, Aug. 23, for a concert on the Esplanade, when he will conduct three-quarters of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the national convention of the American Bar Association.

The Concerts

AUGUST 16, 1953

TODAY

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass ... Symphony Orchestra, Charles ... ducting. Final concert. Schu... finished" Symphony. Chabri... Fantasque. Wagner-Prelude ... Death from Tristan und Isol... fried Idyll. "Die Meister... Nurnberg." Ravel-Piano C... Left Hand, La Valse. Solois... Lipkin. 2:30 p. m.

Southern Vermont Art ... ...chester, Vt. Grant Johann... ... p. m.

WEDNESDAY

Plymouth Rock Centre ... bury Playhouse, Duxbury. ... tra concert. George Poin... Stephan Manes, pianist. ... tinees nightly at 8:30 p. ... Saturday.

FRIDAY

Castle Hill, Ipswich ... and Field, duo-pianists ... tra conducted by Frank ... Bach, Milhaud and Bartok.

SATURDAY

Castle Hill, Ipswich, Mass. Repeat program.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the

[29]

S., AUGUST 16, 1953 SUNDAY REPUB

Tanglewood's Music Shed Is an Acoustical Eccentric

By JOSEPH FRANZ

Thousands flock to Tanglewood from many states and foreign countries to enjoy music superbly played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Music Shed with its unique surroundings and perfect acoustics.

There is no amplification used in this auditorium; the faintest notes can be heard not only within the Shed, but also some distance outside its confines. The casual listener sometimes wonders if this condition is due to just an accident or if perhaps some study and thought preceded its accomplishment.

It is true that all available technical information was obtained before the plans for the shed were made, but no guarantee could be given as to what the results would be. The problem to fill with sound a hall 40 feet high and one and one-third acres in area was new and unprecedented.

Echo Disappeared

One factor that could have ruined the acoustics was discovered at the time the foundations for the steel columns that support the huge structure were laid out. The first layout was made 50 feet nearer to the woods that flank the sides of the Shed. When the survey stakes were driven a distinct echo could be heard on the stage end of the layout. As this work progressed towards the great arc, the echo disappeared.

This would perhaps have passed unnoticed had it not been for the fact that during the early concerts given at the Dan Hanna estate in 1934 and 1935 (now the Stockbridge School), an annoying echo of this sort plagued the performances. Therefore the layout was shifted some 50 feet away from the woods. This echo can still be heard if one claps his hands at the end of what is now the tuning room. Had the stage been at this point it would have been disastrous to the acoustic results.

Another interesting feature is the design and material used in the building of the so-called shell in which the orchestra plays. Accepted theories for shell construction are to use a material that has no resonance such as solid concrete. Examples of such shells are the Hollywood Bowl in Los Angeles and the Esplanade Shell in Boston. Both of these are fitted with amplifiers.

Built of Plywood

The idea underlying this principle is that no resonator could be designed that would be in synchronism with all the tone qualities used in an orchestra such as percussion, brass, woodwinds, and string instruments. The shell at the Music Shed is built of three-eighths-inch plywood supported on wood uprights and joists and is very resonant. One can feel the vibration of the shell by laying his hand on the walls during a concert.

The requirements of a successful shell are first, the musicians must be able to hear themselves so that they may all play together at the same concert pitch. Secondly, the shell must act as a mixing bowl for all the sounds and blend them together. Thirdly, it must send the entire volume of sounds out to the audience in increasing volume.

Wetting the Shell

Years of experimentation produced the present shell. It was found during concerts given at the Hanna estate that a rain which wetted the exposed shell before a concert had profound beneficial effects on the accoustics. Therefore, for several concerts the shell was given a good wetting before hand.

This practice was discontinued and the acoustics were still good. During the wetting and drying, the layers of plywood opened as well as the grain in the wood. This gives a mellowness to the music similar to that found in old instruments.

For economic reasons the old plywood and other lumber of the former shell was used again in the Shed. It was to be just a temporary expedient until a more pretentious one could be built from future funds. It has worked out so well that no one would want to risk a change.

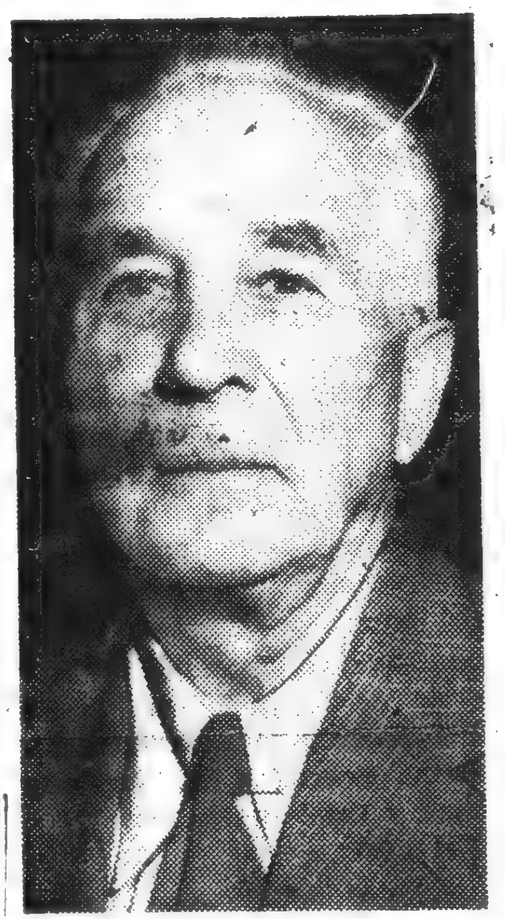
Limited Funds Helped

Limited funds also left the building unfinished inside. The sounds are sent out into a maze of steel which so well breaks up the surfaces that there are no large reflecting areas which may create an echo, with its resulting dead spots so often found in some of our finest auditoriums.

Just what takes place when sounds are reflected back from such broken up surfaces is still not thoroughly understood. Concert halls must have resonance—they must reverberate for a certain period before dying out. The musicians call it a live hall as compared to a dead one not suitable for musical performances.

It can be said that the exceptional acoustical qualities of the Shed are at least partly due to the fact that it had to be realized on very limited funds.

IT SOUNDS GOOD: A midsummer's night crowd overflows the Tanglewood Music Shed and enjoys the Boston Symph[illegible] ings from under the stars. Acoustics in the Shed are so good that persons can hear the music equally as good inside o[illegible] the 6000-capacity Shed.



Joseph Franz

The Berkshire Evening Eagle, Saturday, Aug. 15, 1953—9

Joseph Franz Changed Design To Fit Pocketbook

Joseph Franz of Stockbridge, 71-year-old German-born engineer, is the man who made famed architect Eliel Saarinen's designs for the Tanglewood Music Shed fit the Tanglewood pocketbook.

Saarinen's original design in 1937 provided for no supporting columns in the center of the Shed. Cost of building the Shed to that design was estimated at about $240,000. Mr. Franz recalls that only $80,000 was available.

When Saarinen refused to compromise his design, he withdrew from the project and Mr. Franz was assigned to amend the plans and specifications to come within the budget.

The main change, and the one to which Saarinen strongly objected, was the erection of three columns in the center of the Shed to reduce the steel costs by one-third.

Berkshire Festival Concludes Today

The most successful Berkshire Festival in the 16 summers concerts have been performed in the hills of Western Massachusetts, the fourteenth since the Boston Symphony Orchestra participated, concludes its activities today with all attendance records shattered. More than 150,000 music lovers have attended the 15 Festival concerts; the 40 demonstrations of student symphony, chamber music, choral music, opera and study group departments of the Berkshire Music Center (the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony); and Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade" gala, the annual benefit for the school.

This afternoon Mr. Munch will have Seymour Lipkin, pianist who is assistant to Mr. Bernstein in the summer school's conducting department and to BSO concertmaster Richard Burgin in its chamber music department, as soloist in the Ravel Concerto for the Left Hand, a Tanglewood premiere.

The portion of today's concert, 2:30 to 4:00 p. m., will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as com-

---

AUGUST 16, 1953

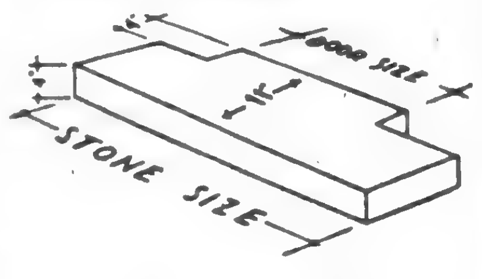
Piano Concerto for the Left Hand
Soloist: Seymour Lipkin ..... Ravel
"La Valse" ..... Ravel

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS

TODAY, 2:30 P. M., the Shed. Boston Symphony conducted by Charles Munch Seymour Lipkin, pianist. Final concert.
Symphony in B minor ..... Schubert
Bourree Fantasque ..... Chabrier
Excerpts from Tristan und Isolde and Die Meistersinger; A Siegfried Idyll ..... Wagner
Piano Concerto for the Left Hand; La Valse .....

SUNDAY, AUGUST 16, 1953

Cut Stone Slabs Help Keep Steps In Safe Repair



Serious accidents, inside and out, can result from neglecting stairways and steps. Loose treads should be repaired without delay; worn ones must be replaced.

Cut stone slabs offer the most permanent treads for outside steps. They can be obtained in standard sizes from masonry dealers.

For safe and easy use, any flight of stairs should have risers (the height boards between steps) no more than 7½ inches high. Treads (the part you step on) should be no less than 10 inches wide. This gives adequate footing.

Treads are allowed to overlap risers by an inch or so to provide toe room.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
Orchestra

NEW YORK TIMES, SUN

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
Orchestra
CHARLES MUNCH, Musical Director

BOSTON SUNDAY HERA

20—The Berkshire Evening Eagle, Saturday, Aug. 15, 1953 ★★

EMINENT GUEST: Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt listens to Brahms' "Requiem" from box of Mrs. Beatrice Fox Auerbach, right, of Hartford. The famous visitor arrived with her niece, unannounced. At intermission she asked to be taken to the Tanglewood Green Room, where she chatted with the conductor, met Miss Lois Marshall, and gave a message from a mutual friend to William Warfield, baritone soloist. She told the usher that the Berkshire Festival is one of the things to which she looks forward with pleasure and wishes to attend every season. She has appeared there many times.

Only 7600 At Brahms Concert

Mrs. Roosevelt And Fritz Kreisler Hear Program

The audience for Brahms' "Requiem" performed last night in the Tanglewood Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, with soloists Lois Marshall, soprano, and William Warfield, baritone, and the Festival Chorus, was 7600.

The opening concert of the final 1952 series, on a Thursday evening, attracted 10,250. That program consisted of Brahms' Second Piano Concerto, with Artur Rubinstein as soloist; Howard Swanson's Short Symphony and Robert Schumann's First Symphony.

In last night's audience was Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, in the box with her friend, Mrs. Beatrice Fox Auerbach of Hartford, whose guest she often has been at Tanglewood. Also seen for the first time at this season's concerts was the violinist, Fritz Kreisler.

Tanglewood

BSO Recordings To Be Released in Fall

Recordings by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be released in September by Victor Records. Music recorded, which was heard at Tanglewood this season, includes the entire Berlioz dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," complete with soloists, which will occupy three LP sides; Roussel's "Bacchus and Ariane" suite; and Arthur Honegger's "Symphony No. 5."

The Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler conductor, is releasing a new version of Prokofieff's "Peter and the Wolf," with Alec Guinness, English stage and screen actor, as narrator. Mr. Guinness recorded his commentary in London, and it was "dubbed" with the music.

Another "Pops" album, expected to excite comment, is labeled "Classical Music for People Who Hate Classical Music."

Munch Leaves Tuesday For Home in Paris

The Boston Symphony Orchestra and its director, Charles Munch, will go to Boston immediately after the final Berkshire Festival concert tomorrow afternoon. They will spend Monday at Symphony Hall, making records.

The following day Mr. Munch will fly to Nice, France, for a holiday until the week ending Oct. 9, when the Boston Symphony will open its 1953-54 season.

Fiedler Returning East

Arthur Fiedler will interrupt a season of conducting on the West Coast to fly to Boston, Aug. 23, for a concert on the Esplanade, when he will conduct three-quarters of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the national convention of the American Bar Association.

The Concerts

TODAY

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. [illegible] Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Final concert. Schubert—"Unfinished" Symphony. Chabrier - Bourree Fantasque. Wagner-Prelude and Love Death from Tristan und Isolde. A Siegfried Idyll. "Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg." Ravel-Piano Concerto for Left Hand. La Valse. Soloist: Seymour Lipkin. 2:30 p. m.

* * *

Southern Vermont Art Centre, Manchester, Vt. Grant Johannesen, pianist. 4 p. m.

* * *

WEDNESDAY

Plymouth Rock Centre for Music, Duxbury Playhouse, Duxbury, Mass. Orchestra concert, George Poinar conducting, Stephan Manes, pianist. Program [illegible] times nightly at 8:30 p. m. through Saturday.

* * *

FRIDAY

Castle Hill, Ipswich, Mass. Appleton and Field, duo-pianists. Chamber orchestra conducted by Frank Brieff. Vivaldi, Bach, Milhaud and Bartok.

* * *

SATURDAY

Castle Hill, Ipswich, Mass. [illegible] program [illegible]

BOSTON SUNDAY POST

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

THE SPRINGFIELD SUNDAY REPUBLICAN

[29]

Tanglewood's Music Shed Is an Acoustical Eccentric

By JOSEPH FRANZ

Thousands flock to Tanglewood from many states and foreign countries to enjoy music superbly played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Music Shed with its unique surroundings and perfect acoustics.

There is no amplification used in this auditorium; the faintest notes can be heard not only within the Shed, but also some distance outside its confines. The casual listener sometimes wonders if this condition is due to just an accident or if perhaps some study and thought preceded its accomplishment.

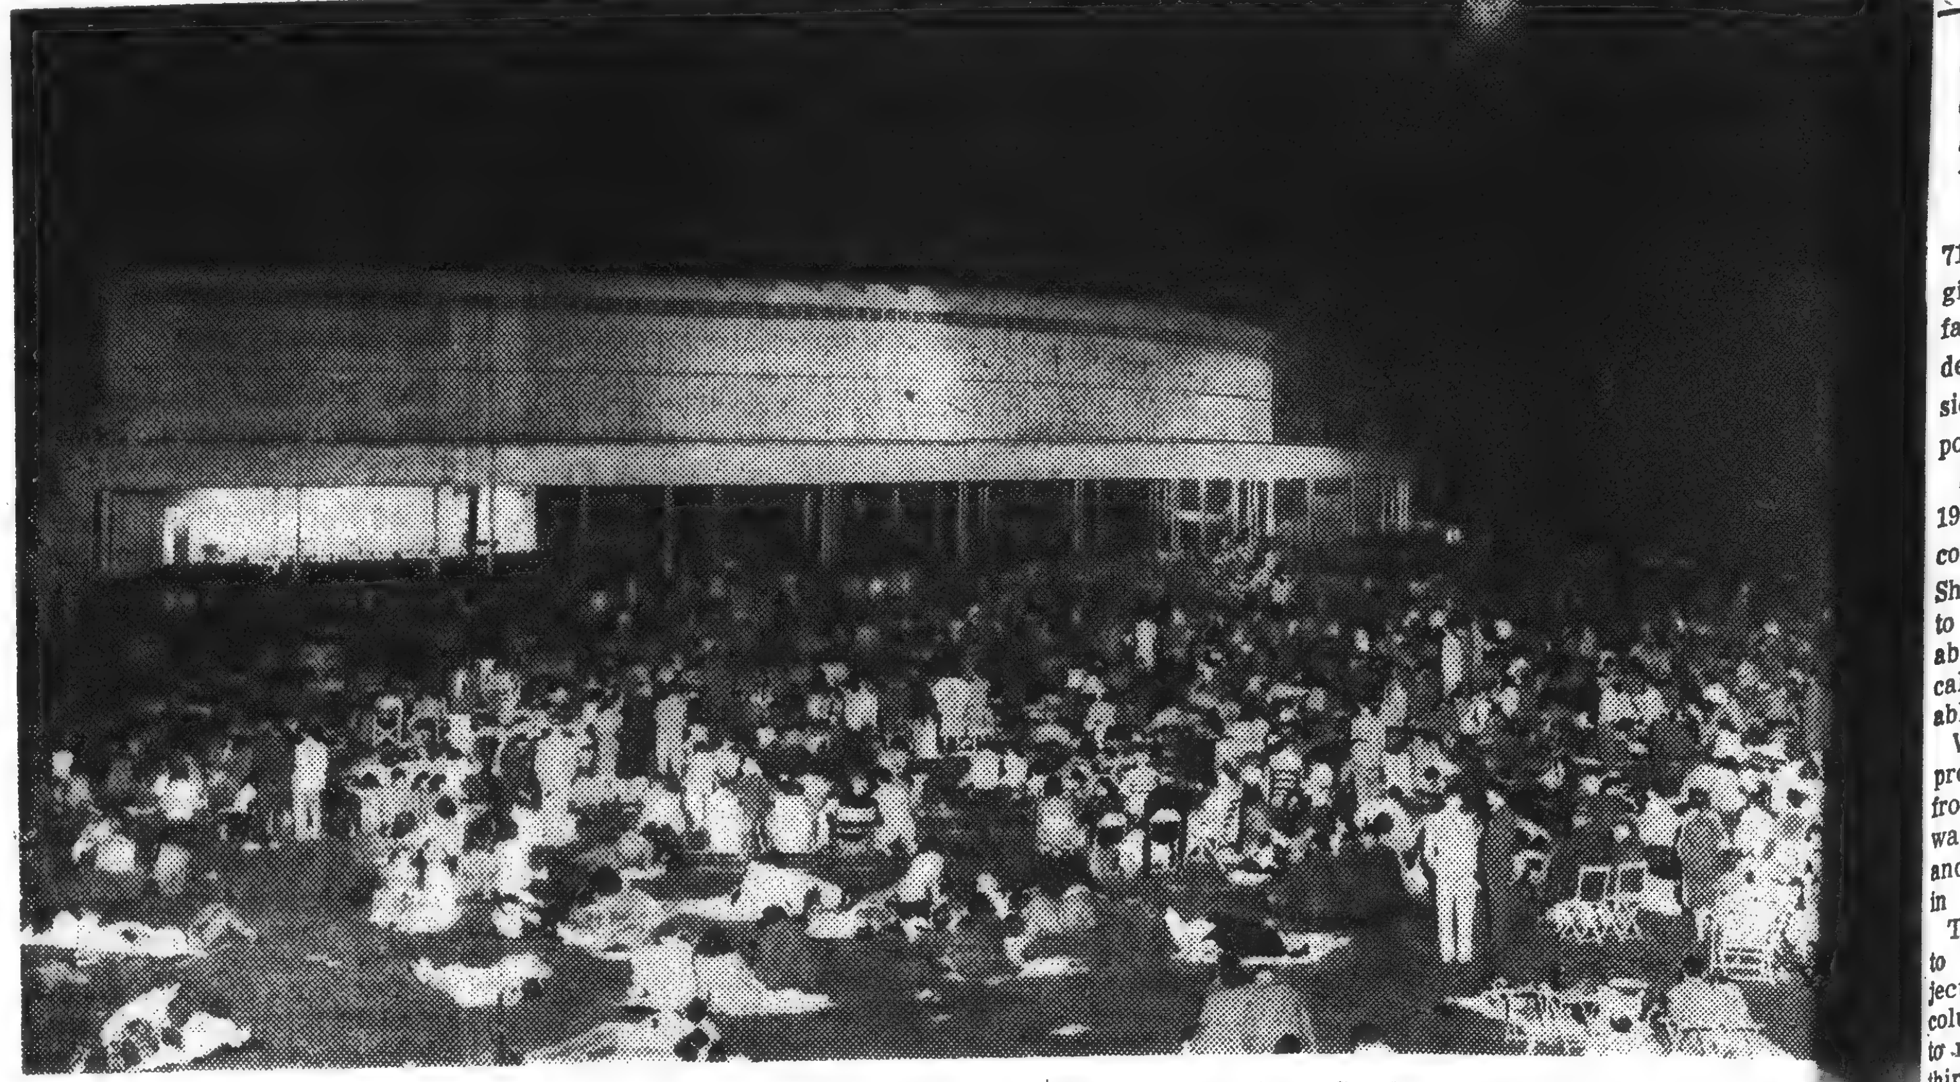
It is true that all available technical information was obtained before the plans for the shed were made, but no guarantee could be given as to what the results would be. The problem to fill with sound a hall 40 feet high and one and one-third acres in area was new and unprecedented.

Echo Disappeared

One factor that could have ruined the acoustics was discovered at the time the foundations for the steel columns that support the huge structure were laid out. The first layout was made 50 feet nearer to the woods that flank the sides of the Shed. When the survey stakes were driven a distinct echo could be heard on the stage end of the layout. As this work progressed towards the great arc, the echo disappeared.

This would perhaps have passed unnoticed had it not been for the fact that during the early concerts given at the Dan Hanna estate in 1934 and 1935 (now the Stockbridge School), an annoying echo of this sort plagued the performances. Therefore the layout was shifted some 50 feet away from the woods. This echo can still be heard if one claps his hands at the end of what is now the tuning room. Had the stage been at this point it would have been disastrous to the acoustic results.

Another interesting feature is the design and material used in the building of the so-called shell in which the orchestra plays. Accepted theories for shell construction are to use a material that has no resonance such as solid concrete. Examples of such shells are the Hollywood Bowl in Los Angeles and the Esplanade Shell in Boston. Both of these are fitted with amplifiers.



IT SOUNDS GOOD: A midsummer's night crowd overflows the Tanglewood Music Shed and enjoys the Boston Symph… …ings from under the stars. Acoustics in the Shed are so good that persons can hear the music equally as good inside o… the 6000-capacity Shed.

Built of Plywood

The idea underlying this principle is that no resonator could be designed that would be in synchronism with all the tone qualities used in an orchestra such as percussion, brass, woodwinds, and string instruments. The shell at the Music Shed is built of three-eighths-inch plywood supported on wood uprights and joists and is very resonant. One can feel the vibration of the shell by laying his hand on the walls during a concert.

The requirements of a successful shell are first, the musicians must be able to hear themselves so that they may all play together at the same concert pitch. Secondly, the shell must act as a mixing bowl for all the sounds and blend them together. Thirdly, it must send the entire volume of sounds out to the audience in increasing volume.

Wetting the Shell

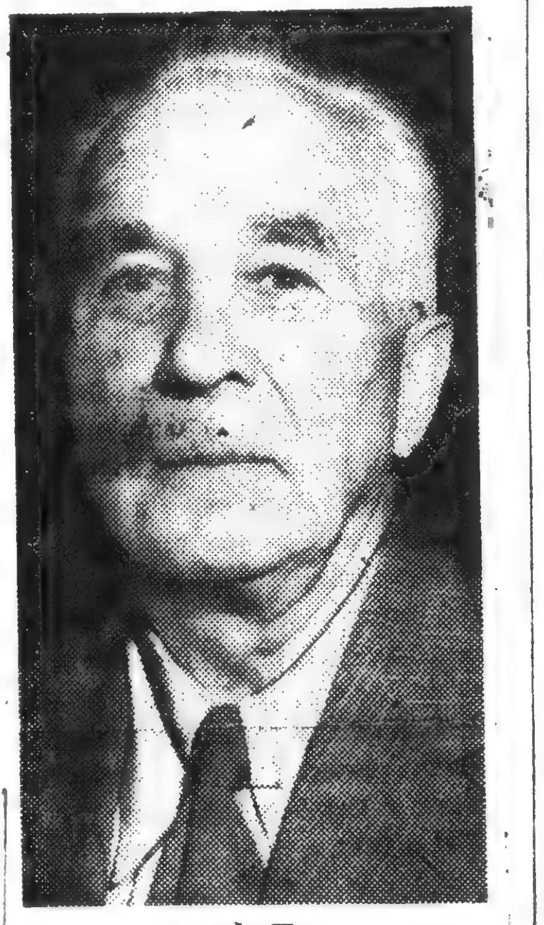
Years of experimentation produced the present shell. It was found during concerts given at the Hanna estate that a rain which wetted the exposed shell before a concert had profound beneficial effects on the accoustics. Therefore, for several concerts the shell was given a good wetting before hand.

This practice was discontinued and the acoustics were still good. During the wetting and drying, the layers of plywood opened as well as the grain in the wood. This gives a mellowness to the music similar to that found in old instruments.

For economic reasons the old plywood and other lumber of the former shell was used again in the Shed. It was to be just a temporary expedient until a more pretentious one could be built from future funds. It has worked out so well that no one would want to risk a change.

Limited Funds Helped

Limited funds also left the building unfinished inside. The sounds are sent out into a maze of steel which so well breaks up the surfaces that there are no large reflecting areas which may create an echo, with its resulting dead spots so often found in some of our finest auditoriums.



Joseph Franz

Just what takes place when sounds are reflected back from such broken up surfaces is still not thoroughly understood. Concert halls must have resonance—they must reverberate for a certain period before dying out. The musicians call it a live hall as compared to a dead one not suitable for musical performances.

It can be said that the exceptional acoustical qualities of the Shed are at least partly due to the fact that it had to be realized on very limited funds.

The Berkshire Evening Eagle, Saturday, Aug. 15, 1953—9

Joseph Franz Changed Design To Fit Pocketbook

Joseph Franz of Stockbridge, 71-year-old German-born engineer, is the man who made famed architect Eliel Saarinen's designs for the Tanglewood Music Shed fit the Tanglewood pocketbook.

Saarinen's original design in 1937 provided for no supporting columns in the center of the Shed. Cost of building the Shed to that design was estimated at about $240,000. Mr. Franz recalls that only $80,000 was available.

When Saarinen refused to compromise his design, he withdrew from the project and Mr. Franz was assigned to amend the plans and specifications to come within the budget.

The main change, and the one to which Saarinen strongly objected, was the erection of three columns in the center of the Shed to reduce the steel costs by one-third.

Berkshire Festival Concludes Today

The most successful Berkshire Festival in the 16 summers concerts have been performed in the hills of Western Massachusetts, the fourteenth since the Boston Symphony Orchestra participated, concludes its activities today with all attendance records shattered. More than 150,000 music lovers have attended the 15 Festival concerts; the 40 demonstrations of student symphony, chamber music, choral music, opera and study group departments of the Berkshire Music Center (the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony); and Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade" gala, the annual benefit for the school.

This afternoon Mr. Munch will have Seymour Lipkin, pianist who is assistant to Mr. Bernstein in the summer school's conducting department and to BSO concertmaster Richard Burgin in its chamber music department, as soloist in the Ravel Concerto for the Left Hand, a Tanglewood premiere.

The portion of today's concert, 2:30 to 4:00 p. m., will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as com-

AUGUST 16, 1953

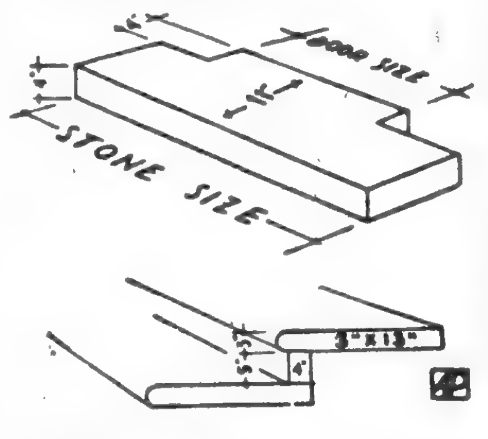
Piano Concerto for the … Ravel
Soloist: Seymour Lipkin
"La Valse" Ravel

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS

TODAY, 2:30 P. M., the Shed. Boston Symphony conducted by Charles Munch. Seymour Lipkin, pianist. Final concert.
Symphony in B minor……Schubert
Bourree Fantasque……Chabrier
Excerpts from Tristan und Isolde and Die Meistersinger; A Siegfried Idyll……Wagner
Piano Concerto for the Left Hand; La Valse……

SUNDAY, AUGUST 16, 1953

Cut Stone Slabs Help Keep Steps In Safe Repair



Serious accidents, inside and out, can result from neglecting stairways and steps. Loose treads should be repaired without delay; worn ones must be replaced.

Cut stone slabs offer the most permanent treads for outside steps. They can be obtained in standard sizes from masonry dealers.

…or safe and easy use, any flight …tairs should have risers (the …ght boards between steps) no … than 7½ inches high. Treads …part you step on) should be …ss than 10 inches wide. This …s adequate footing.

Treads are allowed to overlap risers by an inch or so to provide toe room.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
Orchestra

…YORK TIMES, SUN…

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
Orchestra
CHARLES MUNCH, Musical Director

BOSTON SUNDAY HERA…

20—The Berkshire Evening Eagle, Saturday, Aug. 15, 1953 ★★

EMINENT GUEST: Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt listens to Brahms' "Requiem" from box of Mrs. Beatrice Fox Auerbach, right, of Hartford. The famous visitor arrived with her niece, unannounced. At intermission she asked to be taken to the Tanglewood Green Room, where she chatted with the conductor, met Miss Lois Marshall, and gave a message from a mutual friend to William Warfield, baritone soloist. She told the usher that the Berkshire Festival is one of the things to which she looks forward with pleasure and wishes to attend every season. She has appeared there many times.

Only 7600 At Brahms Concert

Mrs. Roosevelt And Fritz Kreisler Hear Program

The audience for Brahms' "Requiem" performed last night in the Tanglewood Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, with soloists Lois Marshall, soprano, and William Warfield, baritone, and the Festival Chorus, was 7600.

The opening concert of the final 1952 series, on a Thursday evening, attracted 10,250. That program consisted of Brahms' Second Piano Concerto, with Artur Rubinstein as soloist; Howard Swanson's Short Symphony and Robert Schumann's First Symphony.

In last night's audience was Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, in the box with her friend, Mrs. Beatrice Fox Auerbach of Hartford, whose guest she often has been at Tanglewood. Also seen for the first time at this season's concerts was the violinist, Fritz Kreisler.

The Concerts

TODAY

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. … Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Final concert. Schubert—… finished" Symphony. Chabrier-B… Fantasque. Wagner-Prelude and … Death from Tristan und Isolde, A S… fried Idyll. "Die Meistersinger … Nurnberg." Ravel-Piano Concerto … Left Hand, La Valse. Soloist: Seymo… Lipkin. 2:30 p. m.

* * *

Southern Vermont Art Centre, Manchester, Vt. Grant Johannesen, pianist. 4 p. m.

* * *

WEDNESDAY

Plymouth Rock Centre for Music, Duxbury Playhouse, Duxbury, Mass. Orchestra concert, George Poinar conducting; Stephan Manes, pianist. Program continues nightly at 8:30 … through Saturday.

* * *

FRIDAY

Castle Hill, Ipswich, … and Field, duo-pianists, … tra conducted by Fran… Bach, Milhaud and Ba…

* * *

SATURDAY

Castle Hill, Ipsw… program…

…NGFD., MASS., AUGUST 16, 19…

SUNDAY REPUBLICAN, SPR…

[29]

Tanglewood

BSO Recordings To Be Released in Fall

Recordings by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be released in September by Victor Records. Music recorded, which was heard at Tanglewood this season, includes the entire Berlioz dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," complete with soloists, which will occupy three LP sides; Roussel's "Bacchus and Ariane" suite; and Arthur Honegger's "Symphony No. 5."

The Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler conductor, is releasing a new version of Prokofieff's "Peter and the Wolf," with Alec Guinness, English stage and screen actor, as narrator. Mr. Guinness recorded his commentary in London, and it was "dubbed" with the music.

Another "Pops" album, expected to excite comment, is labeled "Classical Music for People Who Hate Classical Music."

Munch Leaves Tuesday For Home in Paris

The Boston Symphony Orchestra and its director, Charles Munch, will go to Boston immediately after the final Berkshire Festival concert tomorrow afternoon. They will spend Monday at Symphony Hall, making records.

The following day Mr. Munch will fly to Nice, France, for a holiday until the week ending Oct. 9, when the Boston Symphony will open its 1953-54 season.

Fiedler Returning East

Arthur Fiedler will interrupt a season of conducting on the West Coast to fly to Boston, Aug. 23, for a concert on the Esplanade, when he will conduct three-quarters of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the national convention of the American Bar Association.

Tanglewood's Music Shed Is an Acoustical Eccentric

By JOSEPH FRANZ

Thousands flock to Tanglewood from many states and foreign countries to enjoy music superbly played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Music Shed with its unique surroundings and perfect acoustics.

There is no amplification used in this auditorium; the faintest notes can be heard not only within the Shed, but also some distance outside its confines. The casual listener sometimes wonders if this condition is due to just an accident or if perhaps some study and thought preceded its accomplishment.

It is true that all available technical information was obtained before the plans for the shed were made, but no guarantee could be given as to what the results would be. The problem to fill with sound a hall 40 feet high and one and one-third acres in area was new and unprecedented.

Echo Disappeared

One factor that could have ruined the acoustics was discovered at the time the foundations for the steel columns that support the huge structure were laid out. The first layout was made 50 feet nearer to the woods that flank the sides of the Shed. When the survey stakes were driven a distinct echo could be heard on the stage end of the layout. As this work progressed towards the great arc, the echo disappeared.

This would perhaps have passed unnoticed had it not been for the fact that during the early concerts given at the Dan Hanna estate in 1934 and 1935 (now the Stockbridge School), an annoying echo of this sort plagued the performances. Therefore the layout was shifted some 50 feet away from the woods. This echo can still be heard if one claps his hands at the end of what is now the tuning room. Had the stage been at this point it would have been disastrous to the acoustic results.

Another interesting feature is the design and material used in the building of the so-called shell in which the orchestra plays. Accepted theories for shell construction are to use a material that has no resonance such as solid concrete. Examples of such shells are the Hollywood Bowl in Los Angeles and the Esplanade Shell in Boston. Both of these are fitted with amplifiers.

Built of Plywood

The idea underlying this principle is that no resonator could be designed that would be in synchronism with all the tonal qualities used in an orchestra such as percussion, brass, woodwinds, and string instruments. The shell at the Music Shed is built of three-eighths-inch plywood supported on wood uprights and joists and is very resonant. One can feel the vibration of the shell by laying his hand on the walls during a concert.

The requirements of a successful shell are first, the musicians must be able to hear themselves so that they may all play together at the same concert pitch. Secondly, the shell must act as a mixing bowl for all the sounds and blend them together. Thirdly, it must send the entire volume of sounds out to the audience in increasing volume.

Wetting the Shell

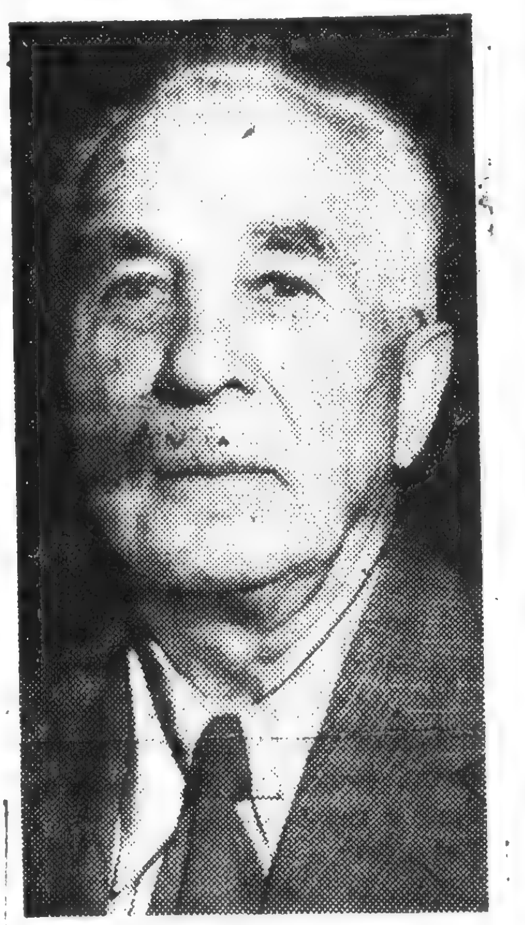
Years of experimentation produced the present shell. It was found during concerts given at the Hanna estate that a rain which wetted the exposed shell before a concert had profound beneficial effects on the accoustics. Therefore, for several concerts the shell was given a good wetting before hand.

This practice was discontinued and the acoustics were still good. During the wetting and drying, the layers of plywood opened as well as the grain in the wood. This gives a mellowness to the music similar to that found in old instruments.

For economic reasons the old plywood and other lumber of the former shell was used again in the Shed. It was to be just a temporary expedient until a more pretentious one could be built from future funds. It has worked out so well that no one would want to risk a change.

Limited Funds Helped

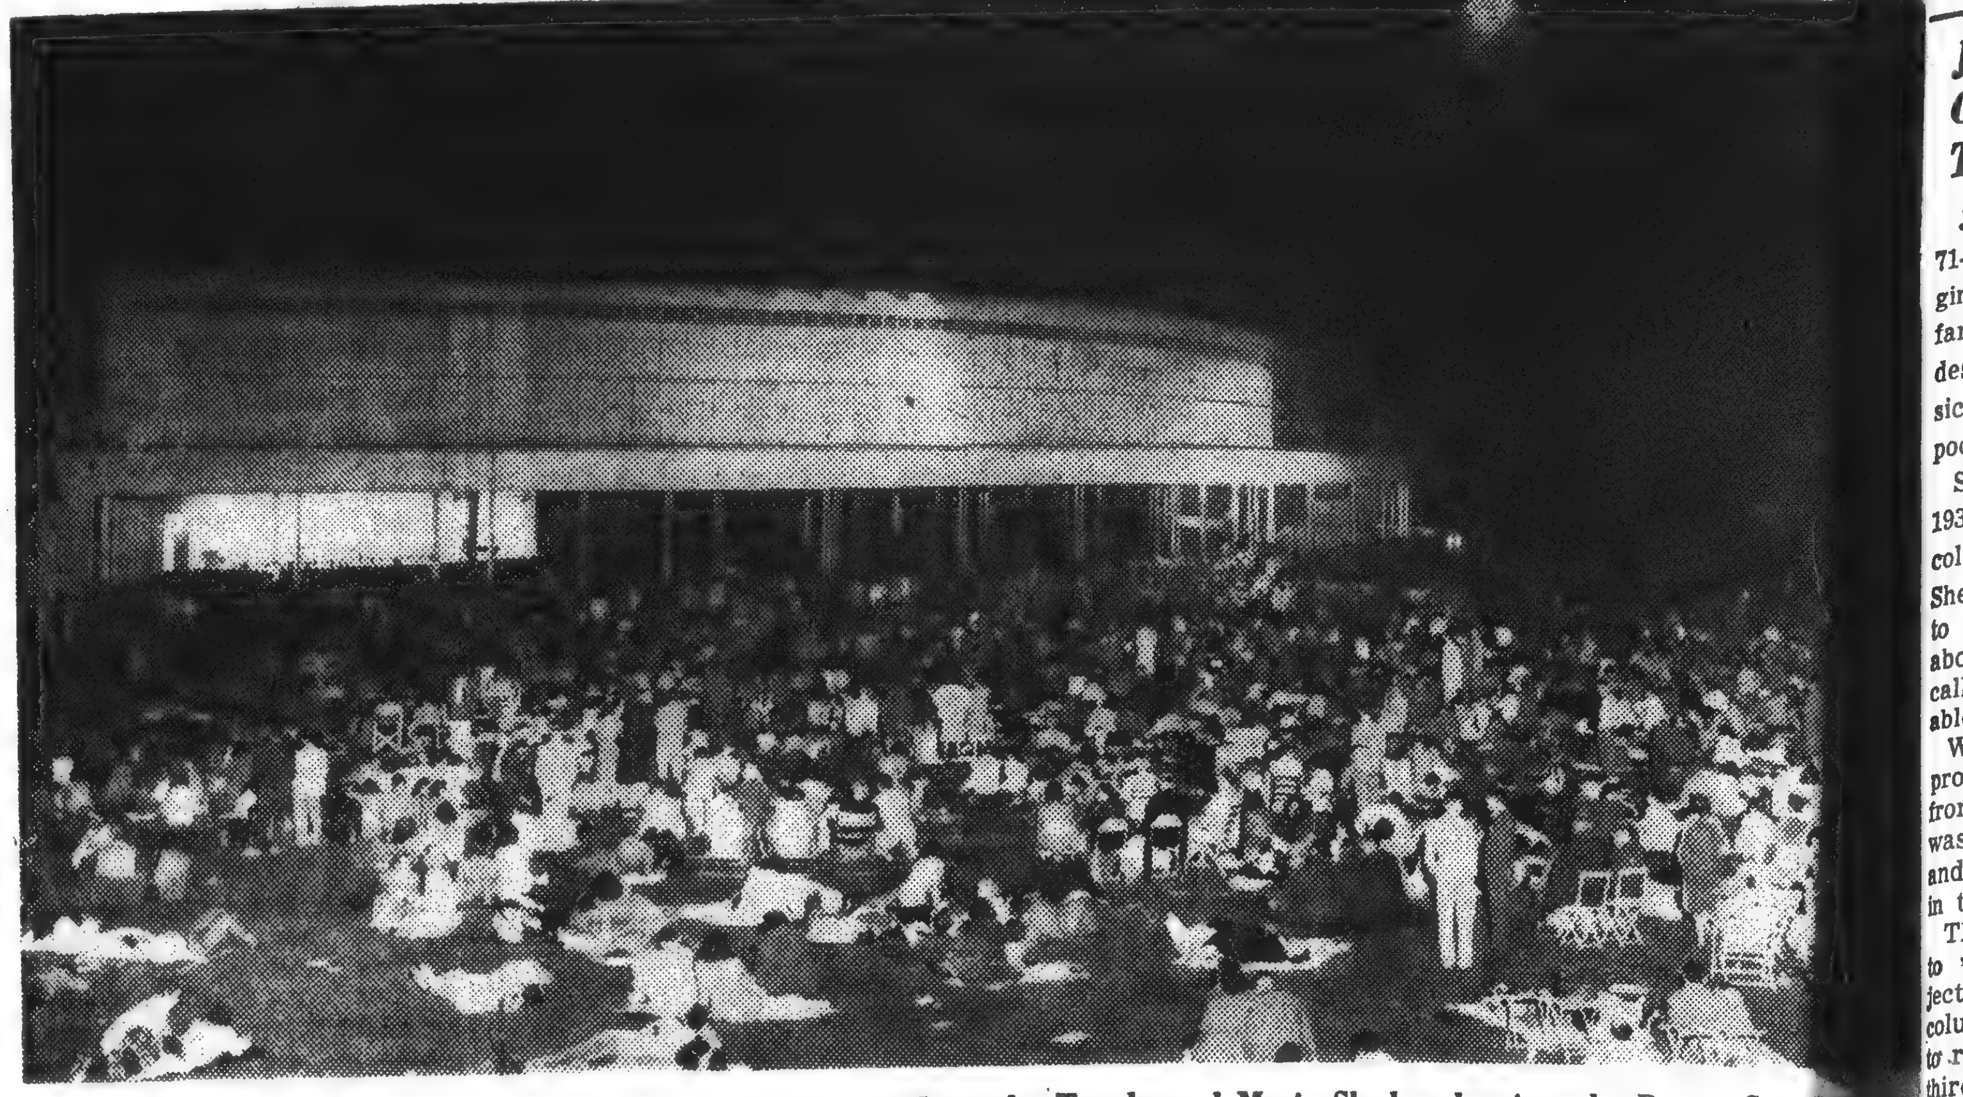
Limited funds also left the building unfinished inside. The sounds are sent out into a maze of steel which so well breaks up the surfaces that there are no large reflecting areas which may create an echo, with its resulting dead spots so often found in some of our finest auditoriums.



Joseph Franz

Just what takes place when sounds are reflected back from such broken up surfaces is still not thoroughly understood. Concert halls must have resonance—they must reverberate for a certain period before dying out. The musicians call it a live hall as compared to a dead one not suitable for musical performances.

It can be said that the exceptional acoustical qualities of the Shed are at least partly due to the fact that it had to be realized on very limited funds.



IT SOUNDS GOOD: A midsummer's night crowd overflows the Tanglewood Music Shed and enjoys the Boston Symph ings from under the stars. Acoustics in the Shed are so good that persons can hear the music equally as good inside o the 6000-capacity Shed.

The Berkshire Evening Eagle, Saturday, Aug. 15, 1953—9

Joseph Franz Changed Design To Fit Pocketbook

Joseph Franz of Stockbridge, 71-year-old German-born engineer, is the man who made famed architect Eliel Saarinen's designs for the Tanglewood Music Shed fit the Tanglewood pocketbook.

Saarinen's original design in 1937 provided for no supporting columns in the center of the Shed. Cost of building the Shed to that design was estimated at about $240,000. Mr. Franz recalls that only $80,000 was available.

When Saarinen refused to compromise his design, he withdrew from the project and Mr. Franz was assigned to amend the plans and specifications to come within the budget.

The main change, and the one to which Saarinen strongly objected, was the erection of three columns in the center of the Shed to reduce the steel costs by one-third.

Berkshire Festival Concludes Today

The most successful Berkshire Festival in the 16 summers concerts have been performed in the hills of Western Massachusetts, the fourteenth since the Boston Symphony Orchestra participated, concludes its activities today with all attendance records shattered. More than 150,000 music lovers have attended the 15 Festival concerts; the 40 demonstrations of student symphony, chamber music, choral music, opera and study group departments of the Berkshire Music Center (the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony); and Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade" gala, the annual benefit for the school.

This afternoon Mr. Munch will have Seymour Lipkin, pianist who is assistant to Mr. Bernstein in the summer school's conducting department and to BSO concertmaster Richard Burgin in its chamber music department, as soloist in the Ravel Concerto for the Left Hand, a Tanglewood premiere.

The portion of today's concert, 2:30 to 4:00 p. m., will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as com-

AUGUST 16, 1953

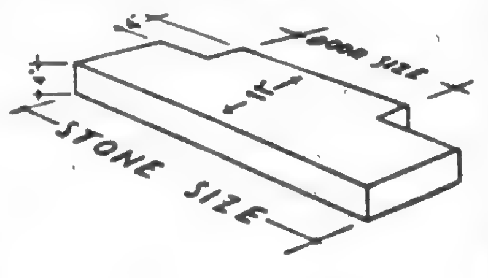
Piano Concerto for the
Soloist: Seymour Lipkin ... Ravel
"La Valse" ... Ravel

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS

TODAY, 2:30 P. M., the Shed. Boston Symphony conducted by Charles Munch Seymour Lipkin, pianist. Final concert.
Symphony in B minor ... Schubert
Bourree Fantasque ... Chabrier
Excerpts from Tristan und Isolde and Die Meistersinger; A Siegfried Idyll ... Wagner
Piano Concerto for the Left Hand; La Valse

SUNDAY, AUGUST 16, 1953

Cut Stone Slabs Help Keep Steps In Safe Repair



Serious accidents, inside and out, can result from neglecting stairways and steps. Loose treads should be repaired without delay; worn ones must be replaced.

Cut stone slabs offer the most permanent treads for outside steps. They can be obtained in standard sizes from masonry dealers.

or safe and easy use, any flight tairs should have risers (the ght boards between steps) no than 7½ inches high. Treads part you step on) should be ss than 10 inches wide. This s adequate footing.

Treads are allowed to overlap risers by an inch or so to provide toe room.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
Orchestra

YORK TIMES, SUN

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
Orchestra
CHARLES MUNCH, Musical Director

BOSTON SUNDAY HERA

20—The Berkshire Evening Eagle, Saturday, Aug. 15, 1953 ★ ★

EMINENT GUEST: Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt listens to Brahms' "Requiem" from box of Mrs. Beatrice Fox Auerbach, right, of Hartford. The famous visitor arrived with her niece, unannounced. At intermission she asked to be taken to the Tanglewood Green Room, where she chatted with the conductor, met Miss Lois Marshall, and gave a message from a mutual friend to William Warfield, baritone soloist. She told the usher that the Berkshire Festival is one of the things to which she looks forward with pleasure and wishes to attend every season. She has appeared there many times.

Only 7600 At Brahms Concert

Mrs. Roosevelt And Fritz Kreisler Hear Program

The audience for Brahms' "Requiem" performed last night in the Tanglewood Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, with soloists Lois Marshall, soprano, and William Warfield, baritone, and the Festival Chorus, was 7600.

The opening concert of the final 1952 series, on a Thursday evening, attracted 10,250. That program consisted of Brahms' Second Piano Concerto, with Artur Rubinstein as soloist; Howard Swanson's Short Symphony and Robert Schumann's First Symphony.

In last night's audience was Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, in the box with her friend, Mrs. Beatrice Fox Auerbach of Hartford, whose guest she often has been at Tanglewood. Also seen for the first time at this season's concerts was the violinist, Fritz Kreisler.

The Concerts

TODAY

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Bos Symphony Orchestra, Charles Mun ducting. Final concert. Schubert-finished" Symphony. Chabrier- Fantasque, Wagner-Prelude and Death from Tristan und Isolde, A fried Idyll. "Die Meistersinger Nurnberg." Ravel-Piano Concerto Left Hand, La Valse. Soloist: Seymo Lipkin. 2:30 p. m.

Southern Vermont Art Center, Manchester, Vt. Grant Johannesen, pianist. 4 p. m.

WEDNESDAY

Plymouth Rock Centre for Music, Duxbury Playhouse, Duxbury, Mass. Orchestra concert. George Poinar conducting, Stephan Manes, pianist. Program continues nightly at 8:30 p. m. through Saturday.

FRIDAY

Castle Hill, Ipswich, Mass. Appleton and Field, duo-pianists. Chamber orchestra conducted by Frank Brieff. Vivaldi, Bach, Milhaud and Bartok.

SATURDAY

Castle Hill, Ipswich, Mass. Re program

REPUB

LICAN, SPRINGFIELD, MAS

Orches
CHARLES MUNCH, Music
CLOSING CONCERT
Today at 2:30
Soloist - SEYMOUR LIPKIN,
Reserved seats from $2.50, Gen'l. A 29

Tanglewood

BSO Recordings To Be Released in Fall

Recordings by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be released in September by Victor Records. Music recorded, which was heard at Tanglewood this season, includes the entire Berlioz dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," complete with soloists, which will occupy three LP sides; Roussel's "Bacchus and Ariane" suite; and Arthur Honegger's "Symphony No. 5."

The Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler conductor, is releasing a new version of Prokofieff's "Peter and the Wolf," with Alec Guinness, English stage and screen actor, as narrator. Mr. Guinness recorded his commentary in London, and it was "dubbed" with the music.

Another "Pops" album, expected to excite comment, is labeled "Classical Music for People Who Hate Classical Music."

Munch Leaves Tuesday For Home in Paris

The Boston Symphony Orchestra and its director, Charles Munch, will go to Boston immediately after the final Berkshire Festival concert tomorrow afternoon. They will spend Monday at Symphony Hall, making records.

The following day Mr. Munch will fly to Nice, France, for a holiday until the week ending Oct. 9, when the Boston Symphony will open its 1953-54 season.

Fiedler Returning East

Arthur Fiedler will interrupt a season of conducting on the West Coast to fly to Boston, Aug. 23, for a concert on the Esplanade, when he will conduct three-quarters of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the national convention of the American Bar Association.

Tanglewood's Music Shed Is an Acoustical Eccentric

By JOSEPH FRANZ

Thousands flock to Tanglewood from many states and foreign countries to enjoy music superbly played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Music Shed with its unique surroundings and perfect acoustics.

There is no amplification used in this auditorium; the faintest notes can be heard not only within the Shed, but also some distance outside its confines. The casual listener sometimes wonders if this condition is due to just an accident or if perhaps some study and thought preceded its accomplishment.

It is true that all available technical information was obtained before the plans for the shed were made, but no guarantee could be given as to what the results would be. The problem to fill with sound a hall 40 feet high and one and one-third acres in area was new and unprecedented.

Echo Disappeared

One factor that could have ruined the acoustics was discovered at the time the foundations for the steel columns that support the huge structure were laid out. The first layout was made 50 feet nearer to the woods that flank the sides of the Shed. When the survey stakes were driven a distinct echo could be heard on the stage end of the layout. As this work progressed towards the great arc, the echo disappeared.

This would perhaps have passed unnoticed had it not been for the fact that during the early concerts given at the Dan Hanna estate in 1934 and 1935 (now the Stockbridge School), an annoying echo of this sort plagued the performances. Therefore the layout was shifted some 50 feet away from the woods. This echo can still be heard if one claps his hands at the end of what is now the tuning room. Had the stage been at this point it would have been disastrous to the acoustic results.

Another interesting feature is the design and material used in the building of the so-called shell in which the orchestra plays. Accepted theories for shell construction are to use a material that has no resonance such as solid concrete. Examples of such shells are the Hollywood Bowl in Los Angeles and the Esplanade Shell in Boston. Both of these are fitted with amplifiers.

Built of Plywood

The idea underlying this principle is that no resonator could be designed that would be in synchronism with all the tone qualities used in an orchestra such as percussion, brass, woodwinds, and string instruments. The shell at the Music Shed is built of three-eighths-inch plywood supported on wood uprights and joists and is very resonant. One can feel the vibration of the shell by laying his hand on the walls during a concert.

The requirements of a successful shell are first, the musicians must be able to hear themselves so that they may all play together at the same concert pitch. Secondly, the shell must act as a mixing bowl for all the sounds and blend them together. Thirdly, it must send the entire volume of sounds out to the audience in increasing volume.

Wetting the Shell

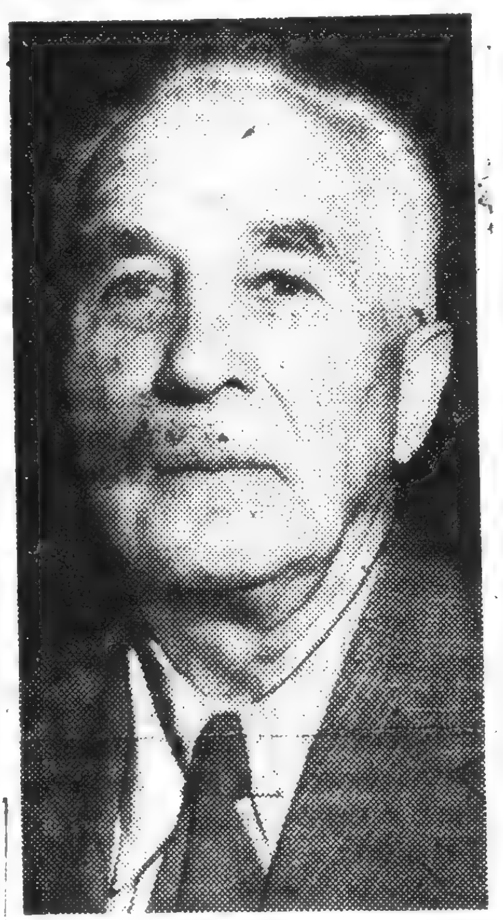
Years of experimentation produced the present shell. It was found during concerts given at the Hanna estate that a rain which wetted the exposed shell before a concert had profound beneficial effects on the accoustics. Therefore, for several concerts the shell was given a good wetting before hand.

This practice was discontinued and the acoustics were still good. During the wetting and drying, the layers of plywood opened as well as the grain in the wood. This gives a mellowness to the music similar to that found in old instruments.

For economic reasons the old plywood and other lumber of the former shell was used again in the Shed. It was to be just a temporary expedient until a more pretentious one could be built from future funds. It has worked out so well that no one would want to risk a change.

Limited Funds Helped

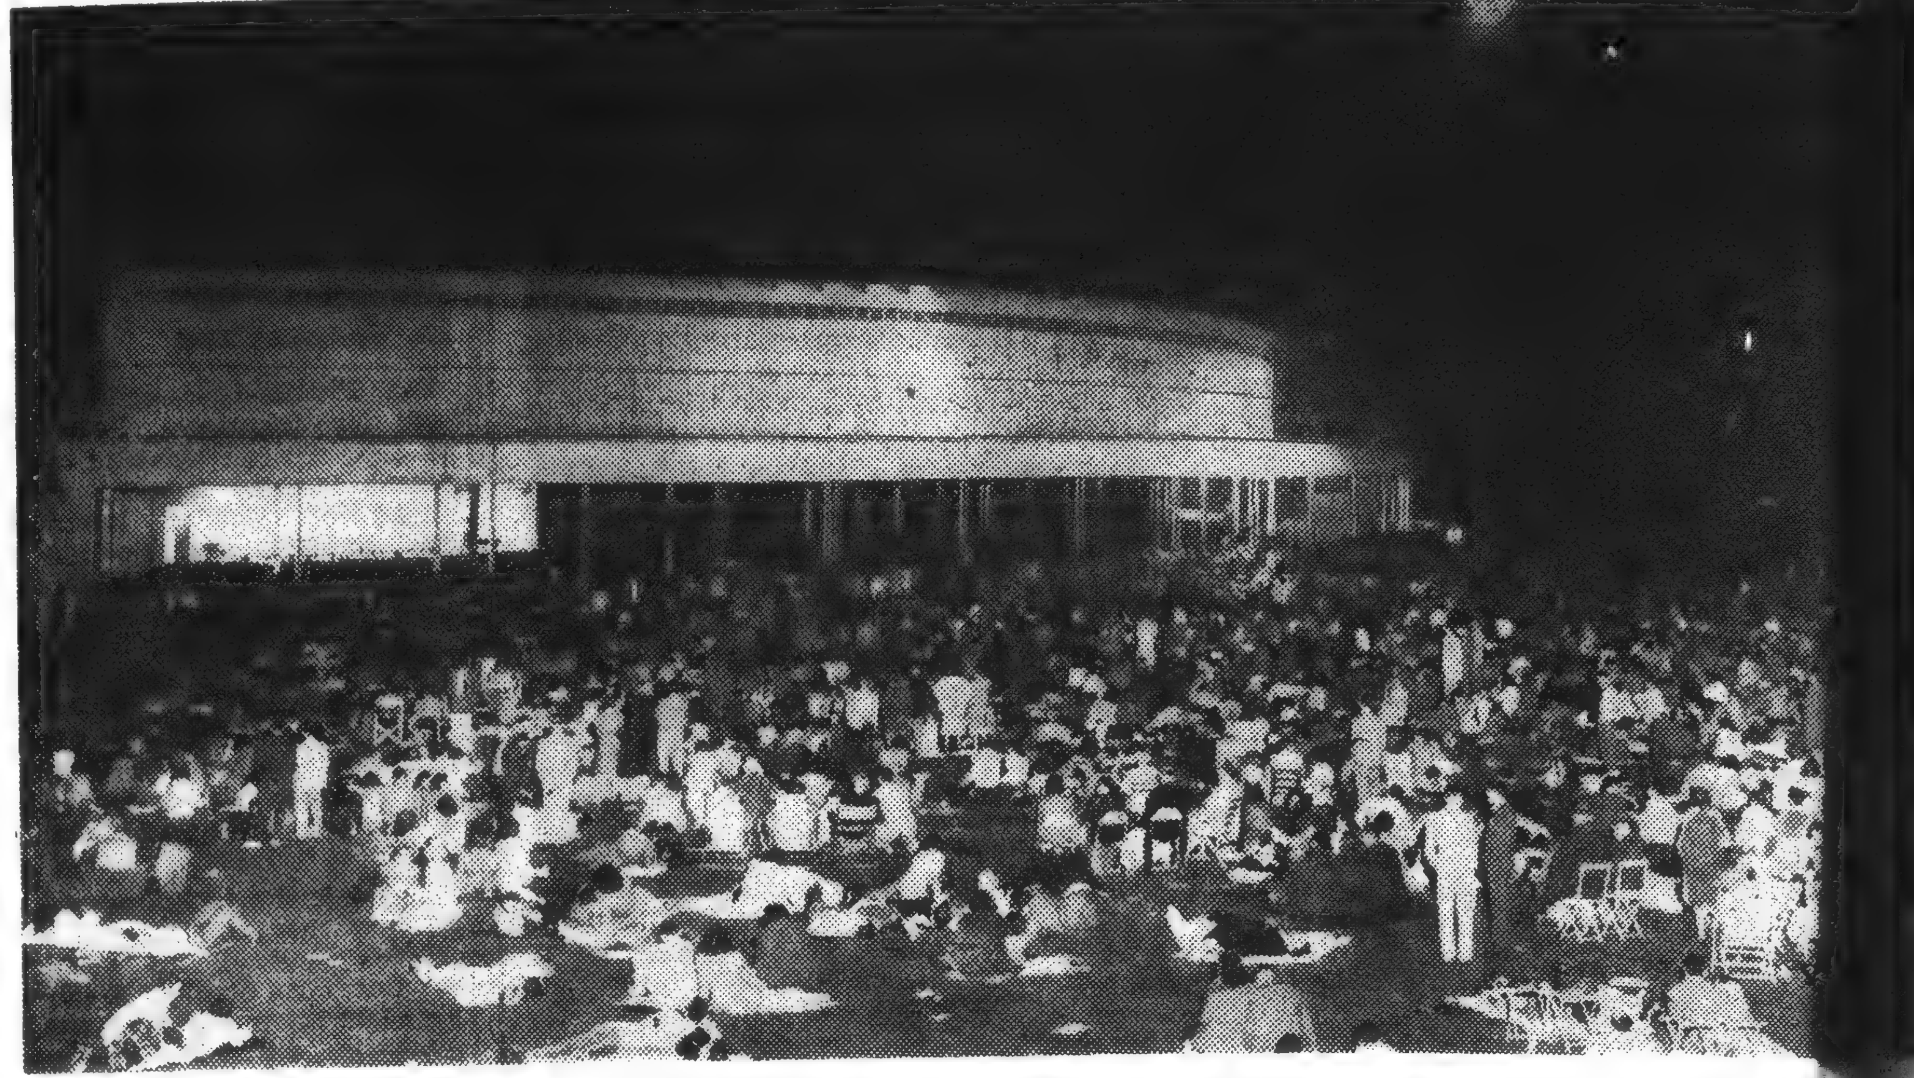
Limited funds also left the building unfinished inside. The sounds are sent out into a maze of steel which so well breaks up the surfaces that there are no large reflecting areas which may create an echo, with its resulting dead spots so often found in some of our finest auditoriums.



Joseph Franz

Just what takes place when sounds are reflected back from such broken up surfaces is still not thoroughly understood. Concert halls must have resonance—they must reverberate for a certain period before dying out. The musicians call it a live hall as compared to a dead one not suitable for musical performances.

It can be said that the exceptional acoustical qualities of the Shed are at least partly due to the fact that it had to be realized on very limited funds.



IT SOUNDS GOOD: A midsummer's night crowd overflows the Tanglewood Music Shed and enjoys the Boston Symph... ings from under the stars. Acoustics in the Shed are so good that persons can hear the music equally as good inside o... the 6000-capacity Shed.

The Berkshire Evening Eagle, Saturday, Aug. 15, 1953—9

Joseph Franz Changed Design To Fit Pocketbook

Joseph Franz of Stockbridge, 71-year-old German-born engineer, is the man who made famed architect Eliel Saarinen's designs for the Tanglewood Music Shed fit the Tanglewood pocketbook.

Saarinen's original design in 1937 provided for no supporting columns in the center of the Shed. Cost of building the Shed to that design was estimated at about $240,000. Mr. Franz recalls that only $80,000 was available.

When Saarinen refused to compromise his design, he withdrew from the project and Mr. Franz was assigned to amend the plans and specifications to come within the budget.

The main change, and the one to which Saarinen strongly objected, was the erection of three columns in the center of the Shed to reduce the steel costs by one-third.

Berkshire Festival Concludes Today

The most successful Berkshire Festival in the 16 summers concerts have been performed in the hills of Western Massachusetts, the fourteenth since the Boston Symphony Orchestra participated, concludes its activities today with all attendance records shattered. More than 150,000 music lovers have attended the 15 Festival concerts; the 40 demonstrations of student symphony, chamber music, choral music, opera and study group departments of the Berkshire Music Center (the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony); and Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade" gala, the annual benefit for the school.

This afternoon Mr. Munch will have Seymour Lipkin, pianist who is assistant to Mr. Bernstein in the summer school's conducting department and to BSO concertmaster Richard Burgin in its chamber music department, as soloist in the Ravel Concerto for the Left Hand, a Tanglewood premiere.

The portion of today's concert, 2:30 to 4:00 p. m., will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as com-

---

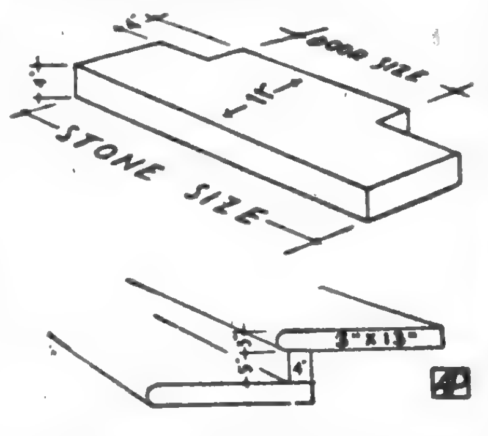
AUGUST 16, 1953

Piano Concerto for the ... Soloist: Seymour Lipkin	Ravel
"La Valse"	Ravel

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS
TODAY, 2:30 P. M., the Shed. Boston Symphony conducted by Charles Munch. Seymour Lipkin, pianist. Final concert.
Symphony in B minor .... Schubert
Bourree Fantasque .... Chabrier
Excerpts from Tristan und Isolde and Die Meistersinger; A Siegfried Idyll .... Wagner
Piano Concerto for the Left Hand; La Valse ....

SUNDAY, AUGUST 16, 1953

Cut Stone Slabs Help Keep Steps In Safe Repair



Serious accidents, inside and out, can result from neglecting stairways and steps. Loose treads should be repaired without delay; worn ones must be replaced.

Cut stone slabs offer the most permanent treads for outside steps. They can be obtained in standard sizes from masonry dealers.

For safe and easy use, any flight of stairs should have risers (the upright boards between steps) no more than 7½ inches high. Treads (the part you step on) should be no less than 10 inches wide. This gives adequate footing.

Treads are allowed to overlap risers by an inch or so to provide toe room.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the

...DAY, AUGUST 16, 1953.

TODAY at 2:30
Soloist—SEYMOUR LIPKIN, Piano
Reserved seats from $2.50, Gen'l Adm. $2

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
Orchestra
CHARLES MUNCH, Musical Director
CLOSING CONCERT
TODAY at 2:30 — Soloist — SEYMOUR

20—The Berkshire Evening Eagle, Saturday, Aug. 15, 1953 ★ ★

EMINENT GUEST: Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt listens to Brahms' "Requiem" from box of Mrs. Beatrice Fox Auerbach, right, of Hartford. The famous visitor arrived with her niece, unannounced. At intermission she asked to be taken to the Tanglewood Green Room, where she chatted with the conductor, met Miss Lois Marshall, and gave a message from a mutual friend to William Warfield, baritone soloist. She told the usher that the Berkshire Festival is one of the things to which she looks forward with pleasure and wishes to attend every season. She has appeared there many times.

Only 7600 At Brahms Concert

Mrs. Roosevelt And Fritz Kreisler Hear Program

The audience for Brahms' "Requiem" performed last night in the Tanglewood Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, with soloists Lois Marshall, soprano, and William Warfield, baritone, and the Festival Chorus, was 7600.

The opening concert of the final 1952 series, on a Thursday evening, attracted 10,250. That program consisted of Brahms' Second Piano Concerto, with Artur Rubinstein as soloist; Howard Swanson's Short Symphony and Robert Schumann's First Symphony.

In last night's audience was Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, in the box with her friend, Mrs. Beatrice Fox Auerbach of Hartford, whose guest she often has been at Tanglewood. Also seen for the first time at this season's concerts was the violinist, Fritz Kreisler.

The Concerts

TODAY

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Final concert. Schubert-"Unfinished" Symphony. Chabrier-Bourree Fantasque. Wagner-Prelude and Love Death from Tristan und Isolde, A Siegfried Idyll, "Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg." Ravel-Piano Concerto for the Left Hand, La Valse. Soloist: Seymour Lipkin. 2:30 p. m.

Southern Vermont Art Center, Manchester, Vt. Grant Johannesen, pianist. 4 p. m.

WEDNESDAY

Plymouth Rock Center for Music, Duxbury Playhouse, Duxbury, Mass. Orchestra concert, George [illegible] [illegible], Stephan Manes, pianist. Program continues nightly at 8:30 p. m. through Saturday.

FRIDAY

Castle Hill, Ipswich, Mass. Appleton and Field, duo-pianists. Chamber orchestra conducted by Frank Booth. Vivaldi, Bach, Milhaud and Bartok.

SATURDAY

Castle Hill, Ipswich, Mass. [illegible] program.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
...'SHIRE FESTIVAL
by the

S., AUGUST ... GFIELD SUNDAY REPUB

Tanglewood

BSO Recordings To Be Released in Fall

Recordings by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be released in September by Victor Records. Music recorded, which was heard at Tanglewood this season, includes the entire Berlioz dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," complete with soloists, which will occupy three LP sides; Roussel's "Bacchus and Ariane" suite; and Arthur Honegger's "Symphony No. 5."

The Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler conductor, is releasing a new version of Prokofieff's "Peter and the Wolf," with Alec Guinness, English stage and screen actor, as narrator. Mr. Guinness recorded his commentary in London, and it was "dubbed" with the music.

Another "Pops" album, expected to excite comment, is labeled "Classical Music for People Who Hate Classical Music."

Munch Leaves Tuesday For Home in Paris

The Boston Symphony Orchestra and its director, Charles Munch, will go to Boston immediately after the final Berkshire Festival concert tomorrow afternoon. They will spend Monday at Symphony Hall, making records.

The following day Mr. Munch will fly to Nice, France, for a holiday until the week ending Oct. 9, when the Boston Symphony will open its 1953-54 season.

Fiedler Returning East

Arthur Fiedler will interrupt a season of conducting on the West Coast to fly to Boston, Aug. 23, for a concert on the Esplanade, when he will conduct three-quarters of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the national convention of the American Bar Association.

Tanglewood's Music Shed Is an Acoustical Eccentric

By JOSEPH FRANZ

Thousands flock to Tanglewood from many states and foreign countries to enjoy music superbly played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Music Shed with its unique surroundings and perfect acoustics.

There is no amplification used in this auditorium; the faintest notes can be heard not only within the Shed, but also some distance outside its confines. The casual listener sometimes wonders if this condition is due to just an accident or if perhaps some study and thought preceded its accomplishment.

It is true that all available technical information was obtained before the plans for the shed were made, but no guarantee could be given as to what the results would be. The problem to fill with sound a hall 40 feet high and one and one-third acres in area was new and unprecedented.

Echo Disappeared

One factor that could have ruined the acoustics was discovered at the time the foundations for the steel columns that support the huge structure were laid out. The first layout was made 50 feet nearer to the woods that flank the sides of the Shed. When the survey stakes were driven a distinct echo could be heard on the stage end of the layout. As this work progressed towards the great arc, the echo disappeared.

This would perhaps have passed unnoticed had it not been for the fact that during the early concerts given at the Dan Hanna estate in 1934 and 1935 (now the Stockbridge School), an annoying echo of this sort plagued the performances. Therefore the layout was shifted some 50 feet away from the woods. This echo can still be heard if one claps his hands at the end of what is now the tuning room. Had the stage been at this point it would have been disastrous to the acoustic results.

Another interesting feature is the design and material used in the building of the so-called shell in which the orchestra plays. Accepted theories for shell construction are to use a material that has no resonance such as solid concrete. Examples of such shells are the Hollywood Bowl in Los Angeles and the Esplanade Shell in Boston. Both of these are fitted with amplifiers.

Built of Plywood

The idea underlying this principle is that no resonator could be designed that would be in synchronism with all the tone qualities used in an orchestra such as percussion, brass, woodwinds, and string instruments. The shell at the Music Shed is built of three-eighths-inch plywood supported on wood uprights and joists and is very resonant. One can feel the vibration of the shell by laying his hand on the walls during a concert.

The requirements of a successful shell are first, the musicians must be able to hear themselves so that they may all play together at the same concert pitch. Secondly, the shell must act as a mixing bowl for all the sounds and blend them together. Thirdly, it must send the entire volume of sounds out to the audience in increasing volume.

Wetting the Shell

Years of experimentation produced the present shell. It was found during concerts given at the Hanna estate that a rain which wetted the exposed shell before a concert had profound beneficial effects on the accoustics. Therefore, for several concerts the shell was given a good wetting before hand.

This practice was discontinued and the acoustics were still good. During the wetting and drying, the layers of plywood opened as well as the grain in the wood. This gives a mellowness to the music similar to that found in old instruments.

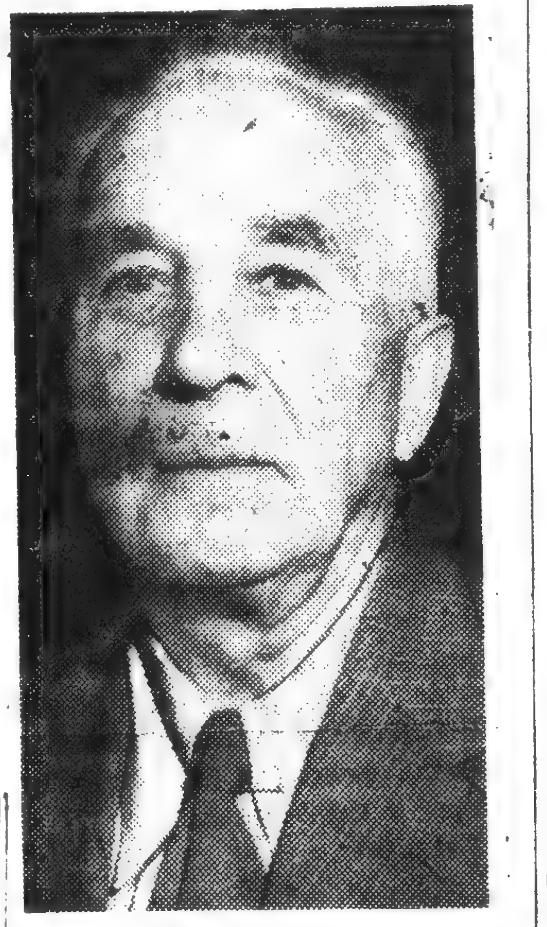
For economic reasons the old plywood and other lumber of the former shell was used again in the Shed. It was to be just a temporary expedient until a more pretentious one could be built from future funds. It has worked out so well that no one would want to risk a change.

Limited Funds Helped

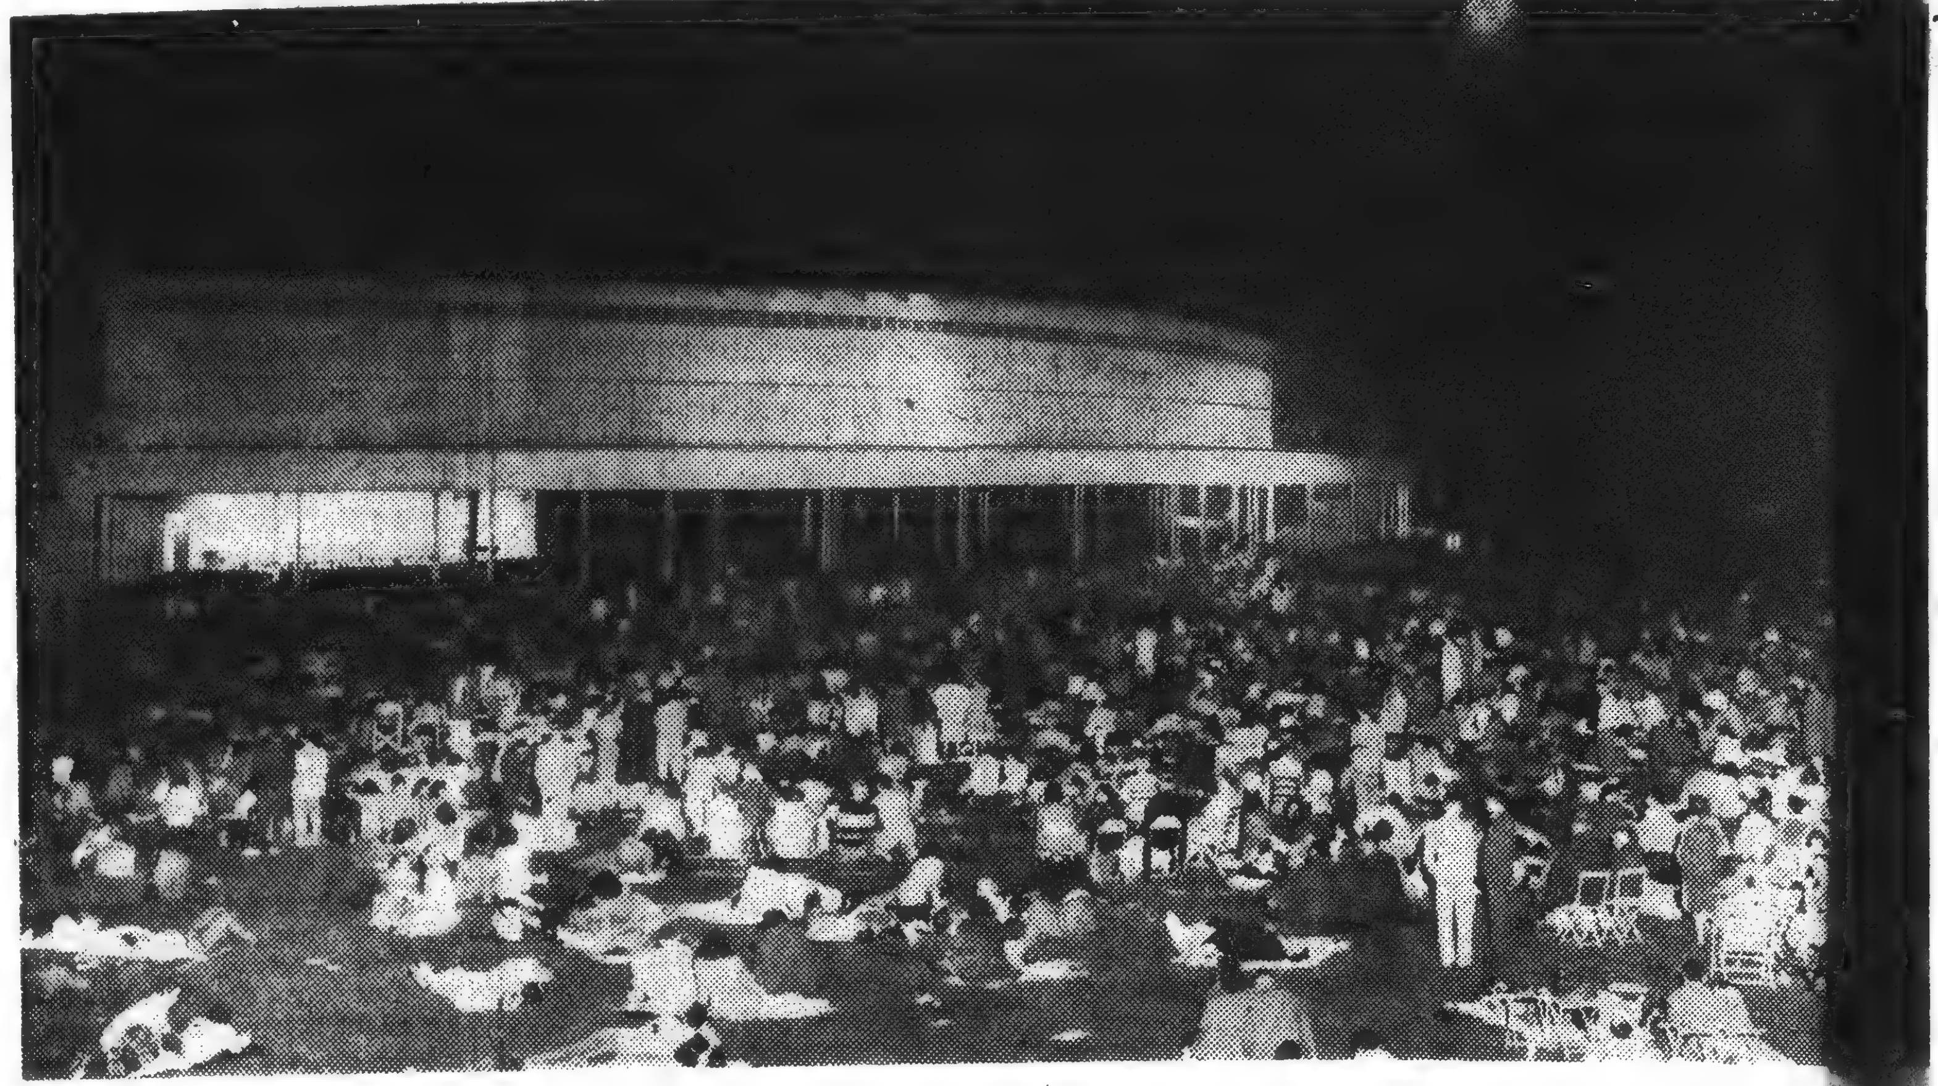
Limited funds also left the building unfinished inside. The sounds are sent out into a maze of steel which so well breaks up the surfaces that there are no large reflecting areas which may create an echo, with its resulting dead spots so often found in some of our finest auditoriums.

Just what takes place when sounds are reflected back from such broken up surfaces is still not thoroughly understood. Concert halls must have resonance—they must reverberate for a certain period before dying out. The musicians call it a live hall as compared to a dead one not suitable for musical performances.

It can be said that the exceptional acoustical qualities of the Shed are at least partly due to the fact that it had to be realized on very limited funds.



Joseph Franz



IT SOUNDS GOOD: A midsummer's night crowd overflows the Tanglewood Music Shed and enjoys the Boston Symph[illegible] ings from under the stars. Acoustics in the Shed are so good that persons can hear the music equally as good inside or [illegible] the 6000-capacity Shed.

Joseph Franz Changed Design To Fit Pocketbook

Joseph Franz of Stockbridge, 71-year-old German-born engineer, is the man who made famed architect Eliel Saarinen's designs for the Tanglewood Music Shed fit the Tanglewood pocketbook.

Saarinen's original design in 1937 provided for no supporting columns in the center of the Shed. Cost of building the Shed to that design was estimated at about $240,000. Mr. Franz recalls that only $80,000 was available.

When Saarinen refused to compromise his design, he withdrew from the project and Mr. Franz was assigned to amend the plans and specifications to come within the budget.

The main change, and the one to which Saarinen strongly objected, was the erection of three columns in the center of the Shed to reduce the steel costs by one-third.

Berkshire Festival Concludes Today

The most successful Berkshire Festival in the 16 summers concerts have been performed in the hills of Western Massachusetts, the fourteenth since the Boston Symphony Orchestra participated, concludes its activities today with all attendance records shattered. More than 150,000 music lovers have attended the 15 Festival concerts; the 40 demonstrations of student symphony, chamber music, choral music, opera and study group departments of the Berkshire Music Center (the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony); and Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade" gala, the annual benefit for the school.

This afternoon Mr. Munch will have Seymour Lipkin, pianist who is assistant to Mr. Bernstein in the summer school's conducting department and to BSO concertmaster Richard Burgin in its chamber music department, as soloist in the Ravel Concerto for the Left Hand, a Tanglewood premiere.

The portion of today's concert, 2:30 to 4:00 p. m., will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as com-

AUGU. BOSTO[N], 1953

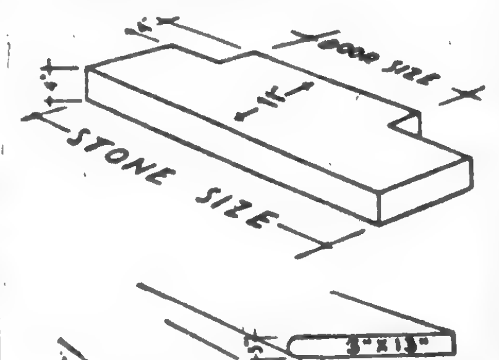
Piano Concerto [illegible] Ravel
Soloist: Seymou[r] [illegible]
"La Valse." Ravel

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS

TODAY, 2:30 P. M., the Shed. Boston Symphony conducted by Charles Munch. Seymour Lipkin, pianist. Final concert.
Symphony in B minor .... Schubert
Bourree Fantasque .... Chabrier
Excerpts from Tristan und Isolde and Die Meistersinger; A Siegfried Idyll .... Wagner
Piano Concerto for the Left Hand; La Valse .... Ravel

SUNDA THE NE

Cut Stone Slabs Help Keep Steps In Safe Repair



Serious accidents, inside and out, can result from neglecting stairways and steps. Loose treads should be repaired without delay; worn ones must be replaced.

Cut stone slabs offer the most permanent treads for outside steps. They can be obtained in standard sizes from masonry dealers.

For safe and easy use, any flight of stairs should have risers (the upright boards between steps) no more than 7½ inches high. Treads (the part you step on) should be no less than 10 inches wide. This affords adequate footing.

Treads are allowed to overlap risers by an inch or so to provide toe room.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
Orchestra

YORK TIMES, SUN

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
Orchestra
CHARLES MUNCH, Musical Director

BOSTON SUNDAY HERA

EMINENT GUEST: Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt listens to Brahms' "Requiem" from box of Mrs. Beatrice Fox Auerbach, right, of Hartford. The famous visitor arrived with her niece, unannounced. At intermission she asked to be taken to the Tanglewood Green Room, where she chatted with the conductor, met Miss Lois Marshall, and gave a message from a mutual friend to William Warfield, baritone soloist. She told the usher that the Berkshire Festival is one of the things to which she looks forward with pleasure and wishes to attend every season. She has appeared there many times.

Only 7600 At Brahms Concert

Mrs. Roosevelt And Fritz Kreisler Hear Program

The audience for Brahms' "Requiem" performed last night in the Tanglewood Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, with soloists Lois Marshall, soprano, and William Warfield, baritone, and the Festival Chorus, was 7600.

The opening concert of the final 1952 series, on a Thursday evening, attracted 10,250. That program consisted of Brahms' Second Piano Concerto, with Artur Rubinstein as soloist; Howard Swanson's Short Symphony and Robert Schumann's First Symphony.

In last night's audience was Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, in the box with her friend, Mrs. Beatrice Fox Auerbach of Hartford, whose guest she often has been at Tanglewood. Also seen for the first time at this season's concerts was the violinist, Fritz Kreisler.

Tanglewood

BSO Recordings To Be Released in Fall

Recordings by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be released in September by Victor Records. Music recorded, which was heard at Tanglewood this season, includes the entire Berlioz dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," complete with soloists, which will occupy three LP sides; Roussel's "Bacchus and Ariane" suite; and Arthur Honegger's "Symphony No. 5."

The Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler conductor, is releasing a new version of Prokofieff's "Peter and the Wolf," with Alec Guinness, English stage and screen actor, as narrator. Mr. Guinness recorded his commentary in London, and it was "dubbed" with the music.

Another "Pops" album, expected to excite comment, is labeled "Classical Music for People Who Hate Classical Music."

Munch Leaves Tuesday For Home in Paris

The Boston Symphony Orchestra and its director, Charles Munch, will go to Boston immediately after the final Berkshire Festival concert tomorrow afternoon. They will spend Monday at Symphony Hall, making records.

The following day Mr. Munch will fly to Nice, France, for a holiday until the week ending Oct. 9, when the Boston Symphony will open its 1953-54 season.

Fiedler Returning East

Arthur Fiedler will interrupt a season of conducting on the West Coast to fly to Boston, Aug. 23, for a concert on the Esplanade, when he will conduct three-quarters of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the national convention of the American Bar Association.

The Concerts

TODAY

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Final concert. Schubert—"Unfinished" Symphony. Chabrier—Bourree Fantasque. Wagner—Prelude and Death from Tristan und Isolde, A Siegfried Idyll, "Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg." Ravel—Piano Concerto for Left Hand, La Valse. Soloist: Seymour Lipkin. 2:30 p. m.

Southern Vermont Art Center, Manchester, Vt. Grant Johannesen, pianist. 4 p. m.

WEDNESDAY

Plymouth Rock Centre for Music, Duxbury Playhouse, Duxbury, Mass. Orchestra concert, George Poinar conducting; Stephan Manes, pianist. Program continues nightly at 8:30 p. m. through Saturday.

FRIDAY

Castle Hill, Ipswich, Mass. Appleton and Field, duo-pianists. Chamber orchestra conducted by Frank Brieff. Vivaldi, Bach, Milhaud and Bartok.

SATURDAY

Castle Hill, Ipswich, Mass. Repeat program.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
[illegible]KSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the

S., AUGUS[illegible] THE S[illegible]NGFIELD SUNDAY REPUB

[291]

Tanglewood's Music Shed Is an Acoustical Eccentric

By JOSEPH FRANZ

Thousands flock to Tanglewood from many states and foreign countries to enjoy music superbly played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Music Shed with its unique surroundings and perfect acoustics.

There is no amplification used in this auditorium; the faintest notes can be heard not only within the Shed, but also some distance outside its confines. The casual listener sometimes wonders if this condition is due to just an accident or if perhaps some study and thought preceded its accomplishment.

It is true that all available technical information was obtained before the plans for the shed were made, but no guarantee could be given as to what the results would be. The problem to fill with sound a hall 40 feet high and one and one-third acres in area was new and unprecedented.

Echo Disappeared

One factor that could have ruined the acoustics was discovered at the time the foundations for the steel columns that support the huge structure were laid out. The first layout was made 50 feet nearer to the woods that flank the sides of the Shed. When the survey stakes were driven a distinct echo could be heard on the stage end of the layout. As this work progressed towards the great arc, the echo disappeared.

This would perhaps have passed unnoticed had it not been for the fact that during the early concerts given at the Dan Hanna estate in 1934 and 1935 (now the Stockbridge School), an annoying echo of this sort plagued the performances. Therefore the layout was shifted some 50 feet away from the woods. This echo can still be heard if one claps his hands at the end of what is now the tuning room. Had the stage been at this point it would have been disastrous to the acoustic results.

Another interesting feature is the design and material used in the building of the so-called shell in which the orchestra plays. Accepted theories for shell construction are to use a material that has no resonance such as solid concrete. Examples of such shells are the Hollywood Bowl in Los Angeles and the Esplanade Shell in Boston. Both of these are fitted with amplifiers.

Built of Plywood

The idea underlying this principle is that no resonator could be designed that would be in synchronism with all the tone qualities used in an orchestra such as percussion, brass, woodwinds, and string instruments. The shell at the Music Shed is built of three-eighths-inch plywood supported on wood uprights and joists and is very resonant. One can feel the vibration of the shell by laying his hand on the walls during a concert.

The requirements of a successful shell are first, the musicians must be able to hear themselves so that they may all play together at the same concert pitch. Secondly, the shell must act as a mixing bowl for all the sounds and blend them together. Thirdly, it must send the entire volume of sounds out to the audience in increasing volume.

Wetting the Shell

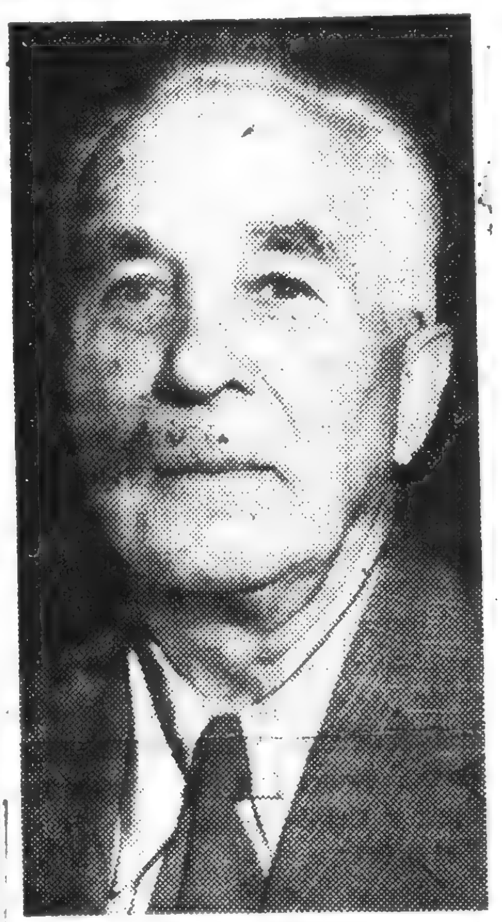
Years of experimentation produced the present shell. It was found during concerts given at the Hanna estate that a rain which wetted the exposed shell before a concert had profound beneficial effects on the accoustics. Therefore, for several concerts the shell was given a good wetting before hand.

This practice was discontinued and the acoustics were still good. During the wetting and drying, the layers of plywood opened as well as the grain in the wood. This gives a mellowness to the music similar to that found in old instruments.

For economic reasons the old plywood and other lumber of the former shell was used again in the Shed. It was to be just a temporary expedient until a more pretentious one could be built from future funds. It has worked out so well that no one would want to risk a change.

Limited Funds Helped

Limited funds also left the building unfinished inside. The sounds are sent out into a maze of steel which so well breaks up the surfaces that there are no large reflecting areas which may create an echo, with its resulting dead spots so often found in some of our finest auditoriums.



Joseph Franz

Just what takes place when sounds are reflected back from such broken up surfaces is still not thoroughly understood. Concert halls must have resonance—they must reverberate for a certain period before dying out. The musicians call it a live hall as compared to a dead one not suitable for musical performances.

It can be said that the exceptional acoustical qualities of the Shed are at least partly due to the fact that it had to be realized on very limited funds.

IT SOUNDS GOOD: A midsummer's night crowd overflows the Tanglewood Music Shed and enjoys the Boston Symph[illegible] ings from under the stars. Acoustics in the Shed are so good that persons can hear the music equally as good inside or [illegible] the 6000-capacity Shed.

Joseph Franz Changed Design To Fit Pocketbook

Joseph Franz of Stockbridge, 71-year-old German-born engineer, is the man who made famed architect Eliel Saarinen's designs for the Tanglewood Music Shed fit the Tanglewood pocketbook.

Saarinen's original design in 1937 provided for no supporting columns in the center of the Shed. Cost of building the Shed to that design was estimated at about $240,000. Mr. Franz recalls that only $80,000 was available.

When Saarinen refused to compromise his design, he withdrew from the project and Mr. Franz was assigned to amend the plans and specifications to come within the budget.

The main change, and the one to which Saarinen strongly objected, was the erection of three columns in the center of the Shed to reduce the steel costs by one-third.

Berkshire Festival Concludes Today

The most successful Berkshire Festival in the 16 summers concerts have been performed in the hills of Western Massachusetts, the fourteenth since the Boston Symphony Orchestra participated, concludes its activities today with all attendance records shattered. More than 150,000 music lovers have attended the 15 Festival concerts; the 40 demonstrations of student symphony, chamber music, choral music, opera and study group departments of the Berkshire Music Center (the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony); and Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade" gala, the annual benefit for the school.

This afternoon Mr. Munch will have Seymour Lipkin, pianist who is assistant to Mr. Bernstein in the summer school's conducting department and to BSO concertmaster Richard Burgin in its chamber music department, as soloist in the Ravel Concerto for the Left Hand, a Tanglewood premiere.

The portion of today's concert, 2:30 to 4:00 p. m., will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as commentator.

The complete
Symphony in C
Prelude and Love
Isolde"
A Siegfried Idyll
"Die Meistersing
Excerpts from (Broadcast coast-
James Fasse
Piano Concerto for the Soloist: Seymour Lipkin ... Ravel
"La Valse" ... Ravel

AY HERAL

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS

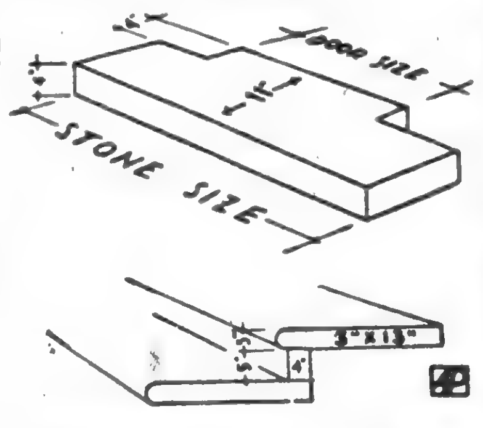
TODAY, 2:30 P. M., the Shed. Boston Symphony conducted by Charles Munch Seymour Lipkin, pianist. Final concert.

Symphony in B minor ... Schubert
Bourree Fantasque ... Chabrier
Excerpts from Tristan und Isolde and Die Meistersinger; A Siegfried Idyll ... Wagner
Piano Concerto for the Left Hand; La Valse ...

K TIMES,

1953

Cut Stone Slabs Help Keep Steps In Safe Repair



Serious accidents, inside and out, can result from neglecting stairways and steps. Loose treads should be repaired without delay; worn ones must be replaced.

Cut stone slabs offer the most permanent treads for outside steps. They can be obtained in standard sizes from masonry dealers.

For safe and easy use, any flight [illegible] stairs should have risers (the [illegible]ght boards between steps) no [illegible] than 7½ inches high. Treads [illegible] part you step on) should be [illegible]s than 10 inches wide. This [illegible] adequate footing.

Treads are allowed to overlap risers by an inch or so to provide toe room.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
Orchestra

YORK TIMES, SUN

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
Orchestra
CHARLES MUNCH, Musical Director

BOSTON SUNDAY HERA

Bro

EMINENT GUEST: Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt listens to Brahms' "Requiem" from box of Mrs. Beatrice Fox Auerbach, right, of Hartford. The famous visitor arrived with her niece, unannounced. At intermission she asked to be taken to the Tanglewood Green Room, where she chatted with the conductor, met Miss Lois Marshall, and gave a message from a mutual friend to William Warfield, baritone soloist. She told the usher that the Berkshire Festival is one of the things to which she looks forward with pleasure and wishes to attend every season. She has appeared there many times.

Only 7600 At Brahms Concert

Mrs. Roosevelt And Fritz Kreisler Hear Program

The audience for Brahms' "Requiem" performed last night in the Tanglewood Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, with soloists Lois Marshall, soprano, and William Warfield, baritone, and the Festival Chorus, was 7600.

The opening concert of the final 1952 series, on a Thursday evening, attracted 10,250. That program consisted of Brahms' Second Piano Concerto, with Artur Rubinstein as soloist; Howard Swanson's Short Symphony and Robert Schumann's First Symphony.

In last night's audience was Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, in the box with her friend, Mrs. Beatrice Fox Auerbach of Hartford, whose guest she often has been at Tanglewood. Also seen for the first time at this season's concerts was the violinist, Fritz Kreisler.

The Concerts

TODAY

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. [illegible] Symphony Orchestra, Charles Mun[illegible] ducting. Final concert. Schubert-[illegible] finished" Symphony. Chabrier-B[illegible] Fantasque. Wagner-Prelude and Death from Tristan und Isolde. A [illegible] fried Idyll. "Die Meistersinger Nurnberg." Ravel-Piano Concerto Left Hand. La Valse. Soloist: Seymo[illegible] Lipkin. 2:30 p. m.

Southern Vermont Art Center, Manchester, Vt. Grant Johannesen, [illegible] 4 p. m.

WEDNESDAY

Plymouth Rock Centre for Music, Duxbury Playhouse, Duxbury, Mass. Orchestra concert. George Poinar conducting. Stephan Manes, pianist. Program continues nightly at 8:30 p. m. through Saturday.

FRIDAY

Castle Hill, Ipswich, Mass. Appleton and Field, duo-pianists. [illegible] orchestra conducted by [illegible]. Vivaldi, Bach, Milhaud and Bartok.

SATURDAY

Castle Hill, Ipswich, Mass. [illegible] program.

SUN

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
SHIRE FESTIV
by the [29]

S., AUGUS

THE SPRINGFIELD SUNDAY REPUBLICAN,

Tanglewood

BSO Recordings To Be Released in Fall

Recordings by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be released in September by Victor Records. Music recorded, which was heard at Tanglewood this season, includes the entire Berlioz dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," complete with soloists, which will occupy three LP sides; Roussel's "Bacchus and Ariane" suite; and Arthur Honegger's "Symphony No. 5."

The Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler conductor, is releasing a new version of Prokofieff's "Peter and the Wolf," with Alec Guinness, English stage and screen actor, as narrator. Mr. Guinness recorded his commentary in London, and it was "dubbed" with the music.

Another "Pops" album, expected to excite comment, is labeled "Classical Music for People Who Hate Classical Music."

Munch Leaves Tuesday For Home in Paris

The Boston Symphony Orchestra and its director, Charles Munch, will go to Boston immediately after the final Berkshire Festival concert tomorrow afternoon. They will spend Monday at Symphony Hall, making records.

The following day Mr. Munch will fly to Nice, France, for a holiday until the week ending Oct. 9, when the Boston Symphony will open its 1953-54 season.

Fiedler Returning East

Arthur Fiedler will interrupt a season of conducting on the West Coast to fly to Boston, Aug. 23, for a concert on the Esplanade, when he will conduct three-quarters of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the national convention of the American Bar Association.

Final Note Tomorrow

Schubert, Ravel and Wagner Featured on Closing Program

Seymour Lipkin
Festival Soloist

TANGLEWOOD—Charles Munch has chosen for the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 15th and final program of the 1953 Berkshire Festival season Schubert's Unfinished Symphony, three Wagner numbers and two by Ravel. Soloist for the latter's Pianoforte Concerto for the left hand will be Seymour Lipkin, a former Berkshire Music Center student currently on its conducting faculty.

Mr. Lipkin, who many times has soloed with the Boston Orchestra, began the study of piano at the age of 11 with Rudolf Serkin at the Curtis Institute, Philadelphia. He studied conducting under the late Serge Koussevitzky and became apprentice conductor and guest soloist with George Szell and the Cleveland Orchestra. In 1948 he won the Rachmaninoff Award in a nation-wide contest. He has appeared with more than 15 major orchestras in this country, as well as in annual recital tours in the United States, and last summer in Europe. He was one of two artists in the Rachmaninoff 10th anniversary memorial concert at Sedgwick Hall, Lenox, in May. His sister, Eleanor, teaches music at Foxhollow School, Lenox.

Wrote Symphony in 1822

Franz Schubert's Unfinished Symphony was written in 1822 and first performed in Vienna 37 years after the composer's death. It is not known why he abandoned work on it, but musicologists, including the late Alfred Einstein have written many articles on the question.

Richard Wagner wrote the poem, "Tristan and Isolde," in Zurich in the summer of 1857. He completed the music in Lucerne two years later. The article was first performed at the Hoftheater in Munich in 1856. "A Siegfried Idyll" was written in 1870 and performed a month later at Tribschen. It was a birthday gift to Cosima in the first year of their marriage, and was performed as a surprise to her on Christmas Day in their villa on Lake Lucerne at 7.30 in the morning. Elaborate secret preparations included the copying of the parts, the engaging of musicians from Zurich, rehearsals in the foyer of the old theatre and at the Hotel du Lac in Lucerne. The musicians tuned in the kitchen and assembled quietly on the stairs. There were 15 players, and Wagner conducted from the top of the stairs.

Possible Opera Subject

"Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg" was first sketched by Wagner as a possible opera subject at Dresden in 1845. He wrote the libretto in Paris in 1861 and completed the score in 1867. The first performance was at the Royal Court Theatre in Munich the next year. The excerpts to be played tomorrow are the Introduction, the "Dance of the Apprentices" and the "Entrance of the Mastersingers."

Maurice Ravel wrote his Piano Concerto for the left hand in 1931. It was first performed in 1932 in Vienna by soloist Paul Wittgenstein, who had lost his right arm in World War I. Written in 1920, "La Valse," choreographic poem, was first performed in Paris in the same year from the manuscript.

With the direction, "Movement of a Viennese waltz," Ravel wrote the following paragraph on the score: "At first the scene is dimmed by a kind of swirling mist, through which one discerns, vaguely and intermittently, the waltzing couples. Little by little the vapors disperse, the illumination grows brighter, revealing an immense ballroom filled with dancers; the blaze of the chandeliers comes to full splendor. An Imperial Court about 1855."

From 2.30 to 4 the program will be broadcast over the CBS network, with commentary by James Fassett. It will be the last American concert in the current World Festival series.

Seats for the concert, as for that of tonight, are on sale at the Tanglewood box office. General admission tickets for listening from the lawn, will be available two hours before the opening.

CROWD OF 12,100 AT TANGLEWOOD

By WILLARD CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 15 — There was excitement in the air at Tanglewood tonight as there always is when Leonard Bernstein is conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

12,100 On Hand

An estimated 12,100 persons was on hand, and this makes him the biggest drawing card of the festival. Much has been written about his pechant for an understanding of contemporary music, sometimes to the detriment of his interpretations of the so-called classics. But Leonard Bernstein has matured in spite of the laurels he has gained and tonight he showed his true stature as a conductor as he provided arresting interpretations of the fourth symphony of Sibelius. The "Sinfonia India" of Chavez, who was present to share in the applause, and the second symphony of Johannes Brahms.

When and if final evaluation of the cymphones of Jan Sibelius is made, it is highly possible that the fourth symphony will emerge as his most rewarding work. Its very

(Continued On Page 8A)

Leonard Bernstein (left) and Lukas Foss, faculty members at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, who will appear at the first annual concert to benefit the Stockbridge Bowl Association which will be held at Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky's residence, Serenak, in Lenox, on Tuesday, August 11, at 3:30 p.m. Messrs. Bernstein and Foss, who will make their first public appearance as a piano-duo, will be joined on the program by Richard Dyer-Bennet, ballad singer, Mac Morgan, bass, and Boris Goldovsky, will be master-of-ceremonies.

Tanglewood

FRIDAY

By A. C. S.

Music lovers can be grateful to Charles Munch for presenting the seldom heard larger works of Hector Berlioz. Visitors to Tanglewood last season were privileged to hear the Requiem. This year the Dramatic Symphony, Romeo and Juliet was given its first Tanglewood performance. While portions of the orchestral score have been in the standard repertory for years, complete performances, calling for a chorus and soloists, are a rarity. Toscanini gave the last complete New York presentation in 1942, and the Boston Symphony played it for the first time at home last winter.

The attraction of Berlioz to Shakespeare's drama was heightened by the appearance of the English actress, Henrietta Smithson, as the heroine in a production he attended. An English critic is quoted by the

(Continued on Page Ten)

Berkshire Festival To Conclude At Tanglewood

With an anticipated attendance at its fifteen concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra of 100,000 including 10,000 at "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center (the summer school of music maintained by the symphony); and a predictable 40,000 patrons at the 38 concerts and demonstrations of the school's departments, the 16th Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. concludes it 1953 program this weekend. 150,000 persons will have helped shatter all existing records.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony, conducts the concluding concerts on Friday night (August 14) and Sunday afternoon (August 16), and Leonard Bernstein will be on the great Music Shed's podium for the concert of Saturday night (August 15).

The Friday evening program will be given over in its entirety to Brahms' "German Requiem," for chorus and soloists. Canadian soprano Lois Marshall and baritone William Warfield will make their Tanglewood debuts as soloists, with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students participating.

On the Saturday night program Leonard Bernstein will feature the "Sinfonia India" of Carlos Chavez, which had its premiere by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1936, the composer conducting. The symphony will be in honor of the distinguished Mexican composer-conductor who is guest teacher of composition at the Tanglewood this summer.

Seymour Lipkin, pianist, will be soloist in the Ravel Concerto for the Left Hand, which will have its first Tanglewood performance at the concluding concert. Other Tanglewood premieres of the weekend are Sibelius' Symphony No. 4, (Saturday evening), and Chabrier's Bourrée Fantasque (Sunday afternoon).

The portion of the Sunday concert, 2:30 to 4:00 p.m., will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as commentator.

The Series C programs are:

Friday, August 14, at 8:30 p.m.: Charles Munch, Brahms, German Requiem, Soloists: Lois Marshall, Soprano; William Warfield, Baritone and the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

Saturday, August 15, at 8:30 p.m.: Leonard Bernstein, Sibelius, Symphony No. 4, in A minor; Chavez, Sinfonia India; Brahms, Symphony No. 2, in D major.

Sunday, August 16, at 2:30 p.m.: Charles Munch, Schubert, Symphany in B minor ("Unfinished"); Chabrier, Bourrée Fantasque; Wagner, Prelude and Love-Death, "Tristan and Isolde"; Wagner, A Siegfield Idyll; Wagner, "Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg," Excerpts from Act III; Ravel, Piano Concerto for the Left Hand, Soloist: Seymour Lipkin; Ravel, La Valse.

World Music Festivals—Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Charles Munch, conducting

2:30 p. m.—WEEI. Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, with Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Post 8/16

Troy Observer-Bud. 8/16

—Tanglewood Closes Today

The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood closing today with the Boston Symphony Orchestra directed by Charles Munch as the final program, has shattered all attendance records this season. In spite of this fact the festival will close in the red and will be obliged to appeal for funds as was necessary by the Metropolitan Opera and New York City Center. This should meet with popular response because not only do these concerts bring cultural enjoyment to music lovers but an opportunity for students of music to associate with the greatest men in the musical world. Not only the concerts in the shed, but students of the Center presenting 38 concerts of chamber music, choir and operas have drawn large and appreciative audiences. It's one of the joys of living in this part of the country to be able to go to Tanglewood.

[292]

This Clipping From
SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN

AUG 16 1953

Betty Ann Busch, left, recently arrived from a European tour, will be starred in "Carousel" in the Lyric Circus, starting Tuesday night. Playing opposite Miss Busch is Robert Shafer, like Miss Busch with wide experience in musical comedies and operettas.

'Carousel' Opens Aug. 18 In Lyric Circus Tent; 'Tanglewood' Concert

This date in music: 1876, in Bayreuth, as part of The Ring's performance, the world premiere of Wagner's "Siegfried."

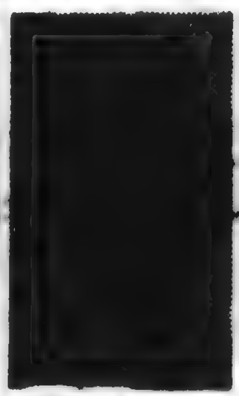
By E. V. W.

BETTY ANN BUSCH, lovely young soprano, remembered in the Lyric Circus opening and closing shows last season, returns to the Theater-in-the-Round near Skaneateles in "Carousel," opening Tuesday night. She will play opposite Robert Shafer, who starred in "Song of Norway on Broadway" and who was a featured artist in Manhattan with Beatrice Lillie.

"CAROUSEL" will give Lyric Circus dancer Leslie Franzos, the first role of her theatrical career. Vivienne Bauer, who has appeared under baton of Toscanini, also on Broadway, is a featured singer in the last cast of the Rodgers and Hammerstein hit show. Miss Busch comes to Skaneateles directly from a European tour. Shafer is in the Lyric from Louisville, Ky. and from other starring engagements including Washington, D. C. and in Toronto's Melody Fair. "Sweethearts," closes tonight in the Lyric with show time set for 7:30 o'clock.

• • •

Berkshire Festival Program Today Under Munch



Chavez

Lipkin

THIS AFTERNOON the final concert of Series C in the Berkshire Music Festival ~~will take~~ place in The Shed in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., Charles Munch, musical director, conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The program will include the Schubert Symphony in B Minor ("Unfinished"), excerpts from "Tristan and Isolde" and "Der Meistersinger" by Wagner; "La Valse" by Ravel, and, with Seymour Lipkin, soloist, Ravel's Piano Concerto for Left Hand. Lipkin played here a few seasons ago with the Buffalo Philharmonic Orchestra.

LEONARD BERNSTEIN conducted last night's concert, the programs including the Sibelius Fourth Symphony in A Minor, the Sinfonia India by Carlos Chavez and the Brahms Symphony No. 2 in D Major. Chavez, distinguished Mexican composer, joined Aaron Copland this summer as teacher of composition in Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in "Tanglewood." Chavez organized the Symphony Orchestra of Mexico in 1928, building it into one of the fine musical ensembles on this continent. He is known for compositions deeply imbued with music of the Mexican Indians.

• • •

Cir. (D 449,449) (S 473,004)

This Clipping From
DETROIT, MICH.
FREE PRESS

AUG 16 1953

IN ANN ARBOR

26 Concerts Are Set For Jubilee Season

ANN ARBOR — Twenty-six major concerts by famed artists and organizations have been arranged for the observance of the Diamond Jubilee season of the University Musical Society.

The Choral Union will provide 10 concerts in its 75th annual series, beginning with Roberta Peters, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, on Oct. 7. she will be followed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch, Oct. 22.

Virtuosi di Roma, consisting of 14 leading Italian instrumentalists, will be heard for the first time in Ann Arbor on Nov. 2, and Leonard de Paur will present his Infantry Chorus for the second time on Nov. 24.

* * *

ON SUNDAY, Dec. 13, the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, directed by its new permanent conductor, Fritz Reiner, will play. Sir Ernest MacMillan will bring the Toronto Symphony, Feb. 10, for its Ann Arbor debut.

Paul Badura-Skoda, whose debut with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra was a sensation of last season, will be presented Feb. 17, and George London American basso, on Feb. 28. The Ann Arbor debut of the Greek soprano, Elena Nikolaidi, is set for March 12. Dame Myra Hess, English pianist, will close the series March 17.

The Eighth Annual Extra Concert Series will consist of Guiomar Novaes in piano recital Oct. 12; the Cleveland Orchestra under George Szell, Nov. 8; the Guard Republican Band under Francois-Julien Brun, Nov. 30; Marian Anderson, Jan. 10, and the Boston Pops, March 4.

* * *

ANNUAL performances of "The Messiah" are set for Dec. 5 (night) and Dec. 6 (matinee), with a distinguished quartet consisting of Maud Nosler, soprano; Carol Smith, contralto; Walter Fredericks, tenor, and Norman Scott, bass.

The Chamber Music Festival will present two groups . . . the Griller Quartet on Feb. 19 and 21, and the Reginald Kell Players on Feb. 20 at the Rackham Auditorium. The May Festival of six concerts is set for April 29, 30 and May 1 and 2 at Hill Auditorium.

Cir. (S 22,518)

This Clipping From
WILMINGTON, DEL.
STAR
AUG 16 1953

Final Festival Program Today At Tanglewood

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston ~~Symphony~~ Orchestra today on the "World Music Festivals" broadcast from the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass. in performances of the Schubert Symphony No. 8 in B minor ("Unfinished") and three works by Richard Wagner, the Prelude and Love Death from "Tristan and Isolde," "A Siegfried Idyl" and excerpts from Act III of "Die Meistersinger."

In the radio premiere of the contemporary Allan Hovhaness' "Jhala," pianist William Masselos will be guest in "The Music Room."

The E. Power Biggs organ program offers the radio premiere of Allen Sapp's Chaconne for Violin and Organ, with guest organist Daniel Pinkham and guest violinist Robert Brink.

Details of CBS Radio music programs follow:

Elinor 8/16

Lois Marshall, Warfield Soloists at Tanglewood

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 14—It is rare these days to listen to a performance which seems to emerge from the heart and in which there is no superficiality or striving for effect. There have been two such performances here at Tanglewood. The first was the performance of the "Resurrection" symphony conducted by Leonard Bernstein.

Crowd of 7600

The second was the performance tonight of the Brahms "Requiem" conducted by Charles Munch. To an even greater degree than the Mahler symphony, the Brahms work emerged with an assurance and purity to endear itself to the audience of 7600 people. It was a musical conviction and assurance of eternal life.

Brahms completed this work in 1865, thought written in memory

Continued On Page 7

of Robert Schumann who died in 1856. Brahms gave the title of the "German Requiem" to distinguish it from the liturgical mass for the dead as written by Mozart, Palestrina and others. Unlike the liturgical compositions, the Brahms "Requiem" offers no prayers for the dead and its text, selected by Brahms, is from the Bible. It is sung in German, rather than in Latin.

The performance tonight brought forth two superb soloists, Lois Marshall, soprano and William Warfield, baritone. Mr. Warfield continues to impress us as perhaps the finest baritone now singing. Tonight he sang with sonorous tones, with deeply moving conviction. Each phrase emerged as was intended. Miss Marshall's voice is lovely and she sang, with impressive sincerity, one of the loveliest airs in the work, "Ye Now Are Sorrowful."

Tribute to Chorus

The festival chorus this season is the finest we have heard here in several years and under the splendid leadership of Hugh Ross it is a magnificent singing ensemble. The tenor section is above average and there is a clarity and lift to the soprano voices which makes for excitement. Whether the music demanded somber tones, tenderness or the lilting uplift in the words, "Worthy art Thou to be praised, Lord of honor and might" the chorus delivered wonderfully.

Mr. Munch and the orchestra were as one in this superb perusal of the score. There was an intensity and understanding.

Leonard Bernstein, conducting Saturday night, has programmed the fourth symphony of Jan Sibelius; the "Sinfonia India" by Carlos Chavez, who is teaching composition here this season, and the second symphony of Johannes Brahms.

Cir. (D 57,751) (S 49,376)

This Clipping From
NEW BEDFORD, MASS.
STANDARD-TIMES

AUG 16 1953

s Soloist

~~SEYMOUR~~ LIPKIN

Record Season Ends Today At Tanglewood

Special to The Standard-Times

LENOX, Aug. 15 — The most successful Berkshire Festival in the 16 Summers ~~concerts~~ have been performed in the hills of Western Massachusetts, the 14th since the Boston Symphony Orchestra participated, concludes its activities tomorrow with all attendance records shattered.

More than 150,000 music lovers have attended the 15 Festival concerts; the 40 demonstrations of student symphony, chamber music, choral music, opera and study group departments of the Berkshire Music Center (the Summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony), and Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade" gala, the annual benefit for the school.

The weekend's concluding concerts by the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 6,000-seat Shed at Tanglewood here are shared by Charles Munch, the symphony's music director, and Leonard Bernstein, who heads the orchestra conducting department of the Berkshire Music Center.

Tonight, Mr. Bernstein's proprogram will comprise symphonies by Sibelius, Chavez and Brahms. Both the Sibelius "Symphony No. 4 in A minor," and the "Sinfonia India" of Carlos Chavez will be new to Tanglewood audiences. The distinguished Mexican composer-conductor, guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center this Summer, will be in the audience.

Tomorrow afternoon Mr. Munch will have Seymour Lipkin, pianist who is assistant to Mr. Bernstein in the Summer school's conducting department, and to Boston Symphony Orchestra concertmaster Richard Burgin in its chamber music department, as soloist in the Ravel "Concerto for the Left Hand," a Tanglewood premiere.

[292]

This Clipping From
SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN

AUG 16 1953

Betty Ann Busch, left, recently arrived from a European tour, will be starred in "Carousel" in the Lyric Circus, starting Tuesday night. Playing opposite Miss Busch is Robert Shafer, like Miss Busch with wide experience in musical comedies and operettas.

'Carousel' Opens Aug. 18 In Lyric Circus Tent; 'Tanglewood' Concert

This date in music: 1876, in Bayreuth, as part of The Ring's performance, the world premiere of Wagner's "Siegfried."

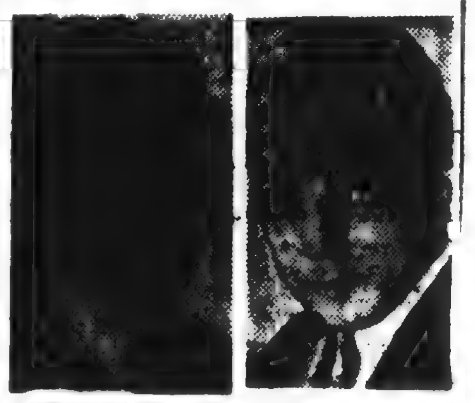
By E. V. W.

BETTY ANN BUSCH, lovely young soprano, remembered in the Lyric Circus opening and closing shows last season, returns to the Theater-in-the-Round near Skaneateles in "Carousel," opening Tuesday night. She will play opposite Robert Shafer, who starred in "Song of Norway on Broadway" and who was a featured artist in Manhattan with Beatrice Lillie.

"CAROUSEL" will give Lyric Circus dancer Leslie Franzos, the first role of her theatrical career. Vivienne Bauer, who has appeared under baton of Toscanini, also on Broadway, is a featured singer in the last cast of the Rodgers and Hammerstein hit show. Miss Busch comes to Skaneateles directly from a European tour. Shafer is in the Lyric from Louisville, Ky. and from other starring engagements including Washington, D. C. and in Toronto's Melody Fair. "Sweethearts," closes tonight in the Lyric with show time set for 7:30 o'clock.

• • •

Berkshire Festival Program Today Under Munch



Chavez Lipkin

THIS AFTERNOON the final concert of Series C in the Berkshire Music Festival ~~will take~~ place in The Shed in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., Charles Munch, musical director, conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The program will include the Schubert Symphony in B Minor ("Unfinished"), excerpts from "Tristan and Isolde" and "Der Meistersinger" by Wagner; "La Valse" by Ravel, and, with Seymour Lipkin, soloist, Ravel's Piano Concerto for Left Hand. Lipkin played here a few seasons ago with the Buffalo Philharmonic Orchestra.

LEONARD BERNSTEIN conducted last night's concert, the programs including the Sibelius Fourth Symphony in A Minor, the Sinfonia India by Carlos Chavez and the Brahms Symphony No. 2 in D Major. Chavez, distinguished Mexican composer, joined Aaron Copland this summer as teacher of composition in Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in "Tanglewood." Chavez organized the Symphony Orchestra of Mexico in 1928, building it into one of the fine musical ensembles on this continent. He is known for compositions deeply imbued with music of the Mexican Indians.

• • •

Cir. (D 449,449) (S 473,004)

This Clipping From
DETROIT, MICH.
FREE PRESS

AUG 16 1953

IN ANN ARBOR

26 Concerts Are Set For Jubilee Season

ANN ARBOR—Twenty-six major concerts by famed artists and organizations have been arranged for the observance of the Diamond Jubilee season of the University Musical Society.

The Choral Union will provide 10 concerts in its 75th annual series, beginning with Roberta Peters, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, on Oct. 7. she will be followed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch, Oct. 22.

Virtuosi di Roma, consisting of 14 leading Italian instrumentalists, will be heard for the first time in Ann Arbor on Nov. 2, and Leonard de Paur will present his Infantry Chorus for the second time on Nov. 24.

* * *

ON SUNDAY, Dec. 13, the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, directed by its new permanent conductor, Fritz Reiner, will play. Sir Ernest MacMillan will bring the Toronto Symphony, Feb. 10, for its Ann Arbor debut.

Paul Badura-Skoda, whose debut with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra was a sensation of last season, will be presented Feb. 17, and George London American basso, on Feb. 28. The Ann Arbor debut of the Greek soprano, Elena Nikolaidi, is set for March 12. Dame Myra Hess, English pianist, will close the series March 17.

The Eighth Annual Extra Concert Series will consist of Guiomar Novaes in piano recital Oct. 12; the Cleveland Orchestra under George Szell, Nov. 8; the Guard Republican Band under Francois-Julien Brun, Nov. 30; Marian Anderson, Jan. 10, and the Boston Pops, March 4.

* * *

ANNUAL performances of "The Messiah" are set for Dec. 5 (night) and Dec. 6 (matinee), with a distinguished quartet consisting of Maud Nosler, soprano; Carol Smith, contralto; Walter Fredericks, tenor, and Norman Scott, bass.

The Chamber Music Festival will present two groups . . . the Griller Quartet on Feb. 19 and 21, and the Reginald Kell Players on Feb. 20 at the Rackham Auditorium. The May Festival of six concerts is set for April 29, 30 and May 1 and 2 at Hill Auditorium.

Cir. (S 22,515)

This Clipping From
WILMINGTON, DEL.
STAR
AUG 16 1953

Final Festival Program Today At Tanglewood

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston ~~Symphony~~ Orchestra today on the "World Music Festivals" broadcast from the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass. in performances of the Schubert Symphony No. 8 in B minor ("Unfinished") and three works by Richard Wagner, the Prelude and Love Death from "Tristan and Isolde," "A Siegfried Idyl" and excerpts from Act III of "Die Meistersinger."

In the radio premiere of the contemporary Allan Hovhaness' "Jhala," pianist William Masselos will be guest in "The Music Room."

The E. Power Biggs organ program offers the radio premiere of Allen Sapp's Chaconne for Violin and Organ, with guest organist Daniel Pinkham and guest violinist Robert Brink.

Details of CBS Radio music programs follow:

Union 8/15

Lois Marshall, Warfield Soloists at Tanglewood

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 14—It is rare these days to listen to a performance which seems to emerge from the heart and in which there is no superficiality or striving for effect. There have been two such performances here at Tanglewood. The first was the performance of the "Resurrection" symphony conducted by Leonard Bernstein.

Crowd of 7600

The second was the performance tonight of the Brahms "Requiem" conducted by Charles Munch. To an even greater degree than the Mahler symphony, the Brahms work emerged with an assurance and purity to endear itself to the audience of 7600 people. It was a musical conviction and assurance of eternal life.

Brahms completed this work in 1865, thought written in memory

Continued On Page 7

of Robert Schumann who died in 1856. Brahms gave the title of the "German Requiem" to distinguish it from the liturgical mass for the dead as written by Mozart, Palestrina and others. Unlike the liturgical compositions, the Brahms "Requiem" offers no prayers for the dead and its text, selected by Brahms, is from the Bible. It is sung in German, rather than in Latin.

The performance tonight brought forth two superb soloists, Lois Marshall, soprano and William Warfield, baritone. Mr. Warfield continues to impress us as perhaps the finest baritone now singing. Tonight he sang with sonorous tones, with deeply moving conviction. Each phrase emerged as was intended. Miss Marshall's voice is lovely and she sang, with impressive sincerity, one of the loveliest airs in the work, "Ye Now Are Sorrowful."

Tribute to Chorus

The festival chorus this season is the finest we have heard here in several years and under the splendid leadership of Hugh Ross it is a magnificent singing ensemble. The tenor section is above average and there is a clarity and lift to the soprano voices which makes for excitement. Whether the music demanded somber tones, tenderness or the lilting uplift in the words, "Worthy art Thou to be praised, Lord of honor and might" the chorus delivered wonderfully.

Mr. Munch and the orchestra were as one in this superb perusal of the score. There was an intensity and understanding.

Leonard Bernstein, conducting Saturday night, has programmed the fourth symphony of Jan Sibelius; the "Sinfonia India" by Carlos Chavez, who is teaching composition here this season, and the second symphony of Johannes Brahms.

Cir. (D 57,751) (S 49,376)

This Clipping From
NEW BEDFORD, MASS.
STANDARD-TIMES

AUG 16 1953

Is Soloist

SEYMOUR LIPKIN

Record Season Ends Today At Tanglewood

Special to The Standard-Times

LENOX, Aug. 15—The most successful Berkshire Festival in the 16 Summers ~~concerts~~ have been performed in the hills of Western Massachusetts, the 14th since the Boston Symphony Orchestra participated, concludes its activities tomorrow with all attendance records shattered.

More than 150,000 music lovers have attended the 15 Festival concerts; the 40 demonstrations of student symphony, chamber music, choral music, opera and study group departments of the Berkshire Music Center (the Summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony), and Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade" gala, the annual benefit for the school.

The weekend's concluding concerts by the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 6,000-seat Shed at Tanglewood here are shared by Charles Munch, the symphony's music director, and Leonard Bernstein, who heads the orchestra conducting department of the Berkshire Music Center.

Tonight, Mr. Bernstein's proprogram will comprise symphonies by Sibelius, Chavez and Brahms. Both the Sibelius "Symphony No. 4 in A minor," and the "Sinfonia India" of Carlos Chavez will be new to Tanglewood audiences. The distinguished Mexican composer-conductor, guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center this Summer, will be in the audience.

Tomorrow afternoon Mr. Munch will have Seymour Lipkin, pianist who is assistant to Mr. Bernstein in the Summer school's conducting department, and to Boston Symphony Orchestra concertmaster Richard Burgin in its chamber music department, as soloist in the Ravel "Concerto for the Left Hand," a Tanglewood premiere.

This Clipping From
SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN

AUG 16 1953

Betty Ann Busch, left, recently arrived from a European tour, will be starred in "Carousel" in the Lyric Circus, starting Tuesday night. Playing opposite Miss Busch is Robert Shafer, like Miss Busch with wide experience in musical comedies and operettas.

'Carousel' Opens Aug. 18 In Lyric Circus Tent; 'Tanglewood' Concert

This date in music: 1876, in Bayreuth, as part of The Ring's performance, the world premiere of Wagner's "Siegfried."

By E. V. W.

BETTY ANN BUSCH, lovely young soprano, remembered in the Lyric Circus opening and closing shows last season, returns to the Theater-in-the-Round near Skaneateles in "Carousel," opening Tuesday night. She will play opposite Robert Shafer, who starred in "Song of Norway on Broadway" and who was a featured artist in Manhattan with Beatrice Lillie.

"CAROUSEL" will give Lyric Circus dancer Leslie Franzos, the first role of her theatrical career. Vivienne Bauer, who has appeared under baton of Toscanini, also on Broadway, is a featured singer in the last cast of the Rodgers and Hammerstein hit show. Miss Busch comes to Skaneateles directly from a European tour. Shafer is in the Lyric from Louisville, Ky. and from other starring engagements including Washington, D. C. and in Toronto's Melody Fair. "Sweethearts," closes tonight in the Lyric with show time set for 7:30 o'clock.

• • •

Berkshire Festival Program Today Under Munch

Chavez

Lipkin

THIS AFTERNOON the final concert of Series C in the Berkshire Music Festival ~~will take~~ place in The Shed in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., Charles Munch, musical director, conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The program will include the Schubert Symphony in B Minor ("Unfinished"), excerpts from "Tristan and Isolde" and "Der Meistersinger" by Wagner; "La Valse" by Ravel, and, with Seymour Lipkin, soloist, Ravel's Piano Concerto for Left Hand. Lipkin played here a few seasons ago with the Buffalo Philharmonic Orchestra.

LEONARD BERNSTEIN conducted last night's concert, the programs including the Sibelius Fourth Symphony in A Minor, the Sinfonia India by Carlos Chavez and the Brahms Symphony No. 2 in D Major. Chavez, distinguished Mexican composer, joined Aaron Copland this summer as teacher of composition in Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in "Tanglewood." Chavez organized the Symphony Orchestra of Mexico in 1928, building it into one of the fine musical ensembles on this continent. He is known for compositions deeply imbued with music of the Mexican Indians.

• • •

Cir. (D 449,449) (S 473,004)

This Clipping From
DETROIT, MICH.
FREE PRESS

AUG 16 1953

IN ANN ARBOR

26 Concerts Are Set For Jubilee Season

ANN ARBOR — Twenty-six major concerts by famed artists and organizations have been arranged for the observance of the Diamond Jubilee season of the University Musical Society.

The Choral Union will provide 10 concerts in its 75th annual series, beginning with Roberta Peters, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, on Oct. 7. she will be followed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch, Oct. 22.

Virtuosi di Roma, consisting of 14 leading Italian instrumentalists, will be heard for the first time in Ann Arbor on Nov. 2, and Leonard de Paur will present his Infantry Chorus for the second time on Nov. 24.

* * *

ON SUNDAY, Dec. 13, the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, directed by its new permanent conductor, Fritz Reiner, will play. Sir Ernest MacMillan will bring the Toronto Symphony, Feb. 10, for its Ann Arbor debut.

Paul Badura-Skoda, whose debut with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra was a sensation of last season, will be presented Feb. 17, and George London American basso, on Feb. 28. The Ann Arbor debut of the Greek soprano, Elena Nikolaidi, is set for March 12. Dame Myra Hess, English pianist, will close the series March 17.

The Eighth Annual Extra Concert Series will consist of Guiomar Novaes in piano recital Oct. 12; the Cleveland Orchestra under George Szell, Nov. 8; the Guard Republican Band under Francois-Julien Brun, Nov. 30; Marian Anderson, Jan. 10, and the Boston Pops, March 4.

* * *

ANNUAL performances of "The Messiah" are set for Dec. 5 (night) and Dec. 6 (matinee), with a distinguished quartet consisting of Maud Nosler, soprano; Carol Smith, contralto; Walter Fredericks, tenor, and Norman Scott, bass.

The Chamber Music Festival will present two groups . . . the Griller Quartet on Feb. 19 and 21, and the Reginald Kell Players on Feb. 20 at the Rackham Auditorium. The May Festival of six concerts is set for April 29, 30 and May 1 and 2 at Hill Auditorium.

Cir. (S 22,515)

This Clipping From
WILMINGTON, DEL.
STAR
AUG 16 1953

Final Festival Program Today At Tanglewood

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston ~~Symphony~~ Orchestra today on the "World Music Festivals" broadcast from the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass. in performances of the Schubert Symphony No. 8 in B minor ("Unfinished") and three works by Richard Wagner, the Prelude and Love Death from "Tristan and Isolde," "A Siegfried Idyl" and excerpts from Act III of "Die Meistersinger."

In the radio premiere of the contemporary Allan Hovhaness' "Jhala," pianist William Masselos will be guest in "The Music Room."

The E. Power Biggs organ program offers the radio premiere of Allen Sapp's Chaconne for Violin and Organ, with guest organist Daniel Pinkham and guest violinist Robert Brink.

Details of CBS Radio music programs follow:

Lo
S

SHERATON HOTEL

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 14—It is rare these days to listen to a performance which seems to emerge from the heart and in which there is no superficiality or striving for effect. There have been two such performances here at Tanglewood. The first was the performance of the "Resurrection" symphony conducted by Leonard Bernstein.

Crowd of 7600

The second was the performance tonight of the Brahms "Requiem" conducted by Charles Munch. To an even greater degree than the Mahler symphony, the Brahms work emerged with an assurance and purity to endear itself to the audience of 7600 people. It was a musical conviction and assurance of eternal life.

Brahms completed this work in 1865, thought written in memory

Continued On Page 7

of Robert Schumann who died in 1856. Brahms gave the title of the "German Requiem" to distinguish it from the liturgical mass for the dead as written by Mozart, Palestrina and others. Unlike the liturgical compositions, the Brahms "Requiem" offers no prayers for the dead and its text, selected by Brahms, is from the Bible. It is sung in German, rather than in Latin.

The performance tonight brought forth two superb soloists, Lois Marshall, soprano and William Warfield, baritone. Mr. Warfield continues to impress us as perhaps the finest baritone now singing. Tonight he sang with sonorous tones, with deeply moving conviction. Each phrase emerged as was intended. Miss Marshall's voice is lovely and she sang, with impressive sincerity, one of the loveliest airs in the work, "Ye Now Are Sorrowful."

Tribute to Chorus

The festival chorus this season is the finest we have heard here in several years and under the splendid leadership of Hugh Ross it is a magnificent singing ensemble. The tenor section is above average and there is a clarity and lift to the soprano voices which makes for excitement. Whether the music demanded somber tones, tenderness or the lilting uplift in the words, "Worthy art Thou to be praised, Lord of honor and might" the chorus delivered wonderfully.

Mr. Munch and the orchestra were as one in this superb perusal of the score. There was an intensity and understanding.

Leonard Bernstein, conducting Saturday night, has programmed the fourth symphony of Jan Sibelius; the "Sinfonia India" by Carlos Chavez, who is teaching composition here this season, and the second symphony of Johannes Brahms.

Cir. (D 57,751) (S 49,376)

This Clipping From
NEW BEDFORD, MASS.
STANDARD-TIMES

AUG 16 1953

Is Soloist

SEYMOUR LIPKIN

Record Season Ends Today At Tanglewood

Special to The Standard-Times

LENOX, Aug. 15 — The most successful Berkshire Festival in the 16 Summers concerts have been performed in the hills of Western Massachusetts, the 14th since the Boston Symphony Orchestra participated, concludes its activities tomorrow with all attendance records shattered.

More than 150,000 music lovers have attended the 15 Festival concerts; the 40 demonstrations of student symphony, chamber music, choral music, opera and study group departments of the Berkshire Music Center (the Summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony), and Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade" gala, the annual benefit for the school.

The weekend's concluding concerts by the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 6,000-seat Shed at Tanglewood here are shared by Charles Munch, the symphony's music director, and Leonard Bernstein, who heads the orchestra conducting department of the Berkshire Music Center.

Tonight, Mr. Bernstein's pro-program will comprise symphonies by Sibelius, Chavez and Brahms. Both the Sibelius "Symphony No. 4 in A minor," and the "Sinfonia India" of Carlos Chavez will be new to Tanglewood audiences. The distinguished Mexican composer-conductor, guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center this Summer, will be in the audience.

Tomorrow afternoon Mr. Munch will have Seymour Lipkin, pianist who is assistant to Mr. Bernstein in the Summer school's conducting department, and to Boston Symphony Orchestra concertmaster Richard Burgin in its chamber music department, as soloist in the Ravel "Concerto for the Left Hand," a Tanglewood premiere.

FINAL PROGRAM AT TANGLEWOOD THIS AFTERNOON

Seymour Lipkin Soloist in Ravel Concerto for nost suc- al in the ave been Western since the stra par- activities ance rec- n 150,000 nded the 0 demon- mphony, usic, op- artments nter (the ic main- nphony); wood on l benefit

y ing con- on Sym- 6000-seat shared nphony's rd Bern- rchestra he Berk- e latter nch will nist who in the ting de- concert- in its ent, as erto for ood pre-ay con- will be S Radio, r of mu- sic, James Fassett, as commentator. The complete program:

Schubert .... Symphony in C minor ("Unfinished")
Wagner .... Prelude and Love-Death, "Tristan und Isolde"
Wagner ....A Siegfried Idyll
Wagner ....."Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg," Excerpts from Act III
Ravel ......Piano Concerto for the Left Hand
Soloist: SEYMOUR LIPKIN
Ravel ...."La Valse"

Final activities of the Berkshire Music Center, to whose concerts are admitted those friends whose contributions help to support it, consist of orchestra concert (Dept. I students,) including "H. P.," 1932 ballet-symphony by Carlos Chavez, led by the composer, who is the school's guest teacher of composition, Music Shed, this afternoon and a chamber music concert (Dept. I students), Theater-Concert Hall, tomorrow morning.

43 STUDENT EVENTS HELD AT TANGLEWOOD

Lenox, Aug. 15—Activities of the Berkshire Music Center, currently in its 11th six-week season, come to a close this weekend, with the culmination of the 1953 Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, at Tanglewood. When the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Berkshires—the only such school operated by a symphony anywhere in the world closes its doors tomorrow, it will have given 43 concerts and demonstrations of the work of its students.

The student concerts, which are open to all those who contribute to the Society of Friends of the summer school, their contributions helping to support its activities, have proven increasingly popular. Membership in the Friends numbers well over 4000, of which some 1500 or about 35 per cent are from Berkshire County, which means that Tanglewood's summer neighbors have found growing pleasure in observing the work of its students in orchestra playing and conducting, chamber music, choir, opera, composers' forums, and Tanglewood Study Group departments.

CASH AWARDS GO TO FOUR STUDENTS

Lenox, Aug. 15—Three special cash prizes named for their donors were announced today by the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the annual Berkshire Festival which concludes tomorrow. They are the Jascha Heifetz Award, the Gregor Piatigorsky Award and the Samuel Wechsler Commission.

On the basis of talent, co-operative spirit and future promise the prizes have been awarded to the following: the Heifetz Award $150 each to two violinists, Barbara Lieberman, of 602 Cortelyou Rd., Brooklyn, N. Y., and Barbara Sorlien, of 315 13th St. South, Fargo, N. D.; the Piatigorsky Award, of $200 to cellist Uziahu Wiesel, of Israel; the Wechsler Commission $300 to Juan Orrego, of the Facultad de Belles Artes, Augustinas 620, Santiago, Chile; a former Tanglewood student, for a chamber music composition scored for three violins, one viola, one cello and piano. Mr. Wechsler is himself a former student at Tanglewood.

The awards were announced by Aaron Copland, assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center since its founding in 1940, at a concert this afternoon by the student orchestra.

Cir. (D 324,268) (S 435,939)

This Clipping From
MILWAUKEE, WIS.
JOURNAL

AUG 16 1953

World Music Festivals, 1:30 p.m., WISN; Charles Munch conducts the Boston symphony at the Berkshire music festival.

* * *

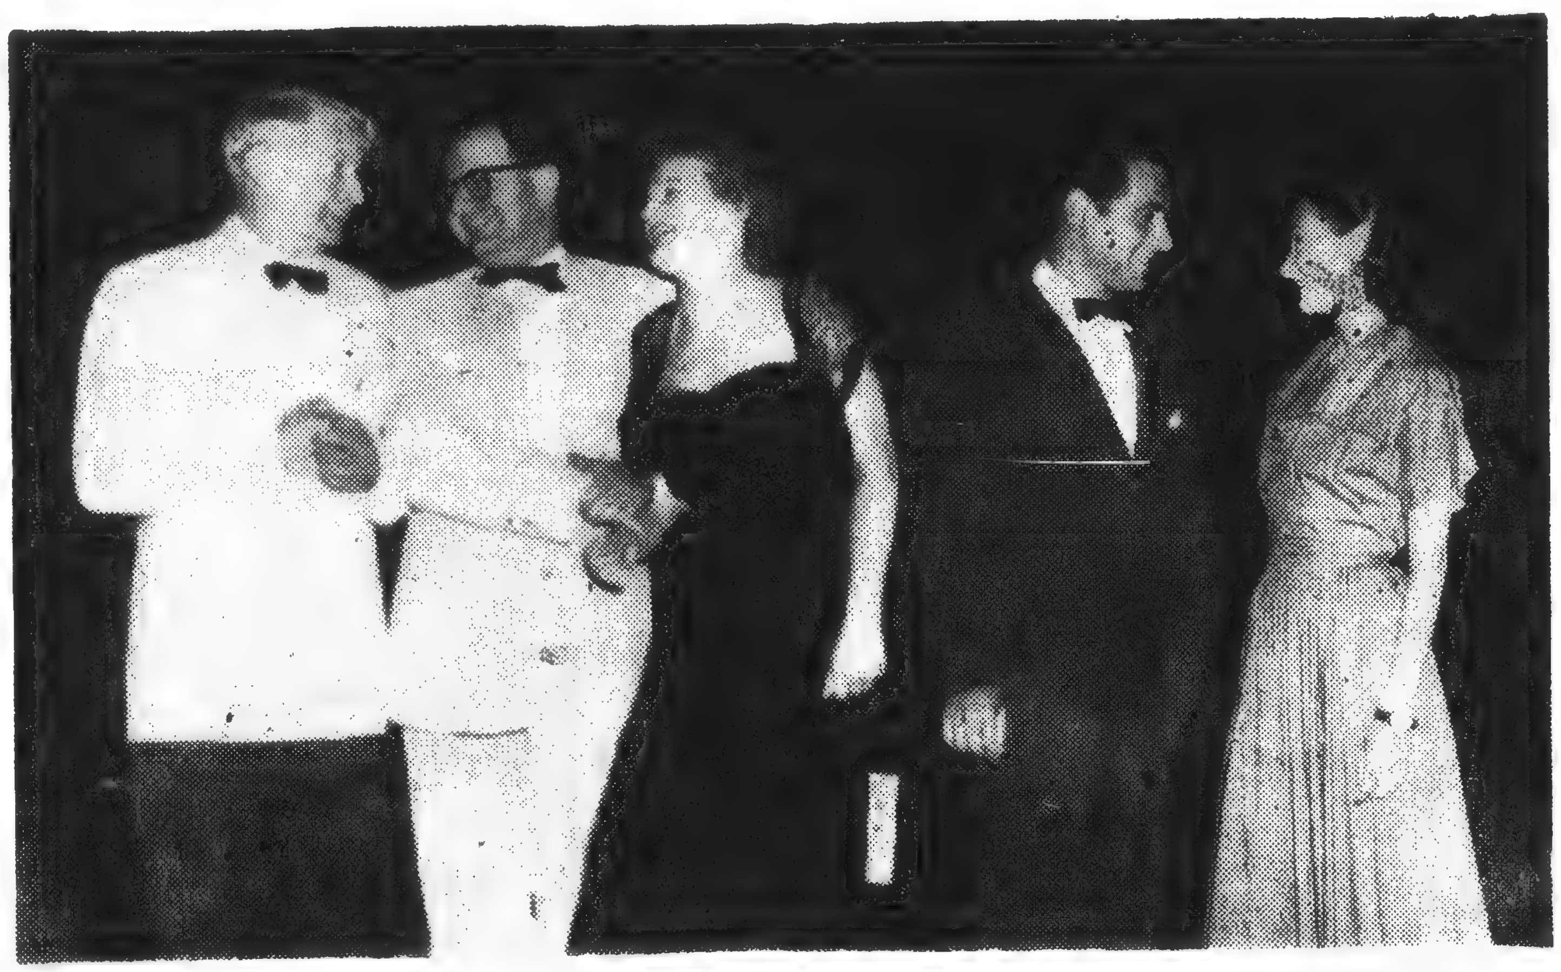
Fine Music Concert, 8 p.m., WEMP-FM; two hour concert program featuring high fidelity recordings.

* * *

NBC Summer Symphony, 10:15 p.m., WTMJ, under the direction of Wilfrid Pelletier.

Symphony No. 8 .... Beethoven
Symphonie Fantastique .. Berlioz
Escales .... Ibert

Stars Meet at Tanglewood On Parade



Left to right — Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; director Billy Miles of the Berkshire Playhouse; Anna Russell, concert comedienne; Leonard Bernstein, conductor; and Deirdre Owens, star of "Gigi" this week at the Playhouse.

Wallingford Post

Munch, Bernstein Conduct Programs At Tanglewood

8/16

---

erkshire rizes Are warded

y Francis D. Perkins

NOX, Mass., Aug. 15.— ers of cash prizes donated Jascha Heifetz, Gregor orsky and Samuel Wech- were announced today by Copland, assistant direc- the Berkshire Music Cen- at the afternoon student stra concert which closed enter's six-week session at lewood.

two Heifetz Awards, of each, went to Barbara berman, 602 Cortelyou Road, oklyn, and Barbara Sorlien, Fargo, N. D., both violinists. hu Wiesel, cellist, from el, won the Piatigorsky rd of $200, and Juan Orrego, e Facultad de Bellas Artes, stinas 620, Santiago, Chile, ved the Wechsler Commis- for a chamber music work three violins, viola, cello and o. Mr. Wechsler is a former shire Center student. The rds were made on the basis lent, co-operative spirit and ise.

s Lieberman, who is twen- e years old, was graduated Sarah Lawrence College in and from the Juilliard ol of Music in the spring. Sorlien, nineteen, is a stu- at the Curtis Institute of c in Philadelphia. Mr. el, twenty-six, studied at Israeli Academy of Music e coming to the United s in 1944, and is now olled at the Juilliard School. He received his B. A. degree from City College in the spring. Mr. Orrego, thirty-four, studied composition with Mr. Copland at Tanglewood in 1946. He is a graduate of the Conservatorio Nacional de Musica in Chile and conductor of the National University Choir and University Glee Club of Santiago.

During this session, the Berkshire Music Center has presented forty-three concerts and demonstrations of work by its five departments.

Cir. (D 193,011) (S 222,310)

This Clipping From
MIAMI, FLA.
HERALD

AUG 16 1953

SCHUBERT'S Unfinished Symphony and three works by Wagner will make up the program for Boston Symphony Orchestra in its broadcast from the Great Shed at Berkshire Music Festival at 9 p.m. through CBS-WGBS. Charles Munch will conduct.

* * *

Talent Pays Off Eagle 8/15

3 Students Awarded Prizes As Tanglewood Starts To Close

Three special cash prizes, named for their donors, this afternoon were announced by the Berkshire Music Center at the final concert by the student orchestra. Presented annually, the prizes are: The Jascha Heifitz award, the Gregor Piatigorsky Award and the Samuel Wechsler Commission.

On the basis of talent, co-operative spirit and future promises, the awards have been made to the following: The Heifitz award of $150 each to two violinists, Barbara Lieberman of Brooklyn, N.Y. and Barbara Sorlien of Fargo, N.D.; the Piatigorsgy award of $200 to cellist Usiahu Wiesel of Israel; and the Wechsler Commission of $300 by Juan Orrego of Santiago, Chile, a former Tanglewood student, for a chamber music composition scored for three violins, viola, cello and piano. Mr. Wechsler himself is a former Tanglewood student.

The prizes were announced by Aaron Copland, assistant director of the school since its founding in 1940. They are in addition to other special scholarships announced earlier in the year, including the Margaret Lee Crofts scholarships for composition students Robert Barney Childs of Reno, Nev., and Alvin Epstein of Hartford.

First Year Students

Other awards of this nature are in the form of tuition payments, cancelling a student's scholarship indebtedness, which come from the Fredrich R. Mann and Sally A. Eisemann scholarship fund, the Parrish award and the Dreyfus award.

Today's winners are advanced in their musical careers. The Heifitz winners are first year students at Tanglewood. Miss Lieberman, 21; graduated from Sarah Lawrence College in 1952 and from the Juilliard School of Music, New York, last spring. Miss Sorlien, 19, studies at the Curtis Institute of Music, Philadelphia. Mr. Wiesel, 26, also at Tanglewood for the first time, came to the United States in 1944 after study at the Israeli Academy of Music. With a B. A. degree from the College of the City of New York last spring, he is enrolled at Juilliard. He is a member of the Israeli Quartet and has performed for the League of Composers and in the Israeli Radio Orchestra.

Mr. Orrego, 34, was a composition student of Mr. Copland at Tanglewood, in 1946. A graduate of the Universidad Catolica, where he studied architecture, and the Conservatorio Nacional de Musica of Chile, he is on leave of absence as conductor of the National University Choir and the University Glee Club of Santiago. He has studied at Columbia, Princeton and Virgina Universities, and holds a Guggenheim Fellowship.

Miss Lieberman and Miss Sorlien have been concertmistresses of the student orchestra this summer, and at today's concert were soloists in the Bach Double Violin Concerto. Mr. Wiesel had the solo role in the Dvorak Cello Concerto at Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade" student concert.

Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD
TONIGHT

8.30—Berkshire Festival Concert, Leonard Bernstein conducting Sibelius' Symphony No. 4, Chavez' Sinfonia India and Brahms' Symphony No. 2. Music Shed.

TOMORROW

0—Chamber music concert. Chamber Music Hall.

Septet, Op. 20 .... Beethoven
Helen Smith and Alan Iglitzin, violins; Jean Moore, cello; Robert Ciccarelli, contrabass; Kenneth Moore, clarinet; Robert Martenson, bassoon; Barbara Bloomer, French horn.
Overture on Hebrew Themes. Prokofieff
Lynne Hartman and Allyn Otnes, violins; Endel Kalam, viola; Norma Marcus, cello; George Townsend, clarinet; Betsy Moyer, piano.
Sextet No. 2 .... Brahms
Serge Blanc and Marion Bloom, violins; Barbara Kroll and James Fawcett, violins; Uziahu Wiesel and Camilla Heller, cellos.

2.30—Final 1953 Berkshire Festival concert, Charles Munch conducting. Music Shed.

*Open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center by voluntary contribution.

Town Helps Student

The presence at Tanglewood this season of one of the chorus leaders was made possible by her native community. Miss Lillian Simmons, who was soprano soloist in the "Magnificat" by Johann Pachelbel at the choral concert of Aug. 4, plays the piano for the men's Bible class of St. John's Methodist Church, Rock Hill, S.C., where she is soloist. When the men heard of her plan to attend the Berkshire Music Center they presented her a check. The Elks' Club and a committee of merchants of the town of 2600 subscribed to her tuition and board.

For the next two weeks she will continue her opera studies under Boris Goldovsky at the Oglebay Opera Workshop in Wheeling, W. Va. When she graduates from Winthrop College, Rock Hill, next June, she plans to return to Tanglewood.

Cantata Was Commissioned

"A Little Boy Lost," the cantata produced at Tanglewood on Parade, was written this year on commission for the Tanglewood Study Group, by whom it was performed. The composer, Allen Sapp, was awarded a cash prize a year ago by the Samuel Wechsler Commission. Assistant professor and acting head of the music department at Harvard University, Mr. Sapp won the Knight Prize for a sonata for violin and piano and the New York Philharmonic Society Competition. He has had his music performed in London, Paris, Belgium and Germany.

During World War II he was a cryptographer with the U.S. Army, and for two years worked with the civilian government in Germany. He prepares music programs and serves as commentator for the Boston Symphony Orchestra on WGBH, a non-commercial radio station.

Chabrier Work Omitted

"Bourree Fantasque" by Emmanuel Chabrier, originally listed on tomorrow's program, will be omitted because of the necessity to keep within a time limit, due to the fact that the first hour and a half will be broadcast over CBS's World Festivals Program.

Music Center Will Close Tomorrow

401 Students Give 43 Concerts At Friends Events

The Berkshire Music Center, the school conducted at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will close its 11th six-week season tomorrow afternoon with the final Berkshire Festival concert.

With 401 students, representing 41 states and 12 foreign countries, the school gave 43 concerts and demonstrations, open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, who helped to support it through voluntary contributions.

Membership in the Friends society has increased by 1500 over that of 1952. About 35 per cent of the more than 4000 members are permanent or summer residents of Berkshire County.

The total attendance at symphony, choral and chamber music concerts and opera performances by students and faculty is expected to pass 40,000, compared to 34,400 in 1952.

The students will disperse tomorrow to continue their musical study, to teach, to play in orchestras or concert, to sing in churches, or to return to work not connected with music. A large percentage will return for the 1954 season.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., AUGUST 16, 1953 THE SPRINGFIELD SUNDAY REPUBLICAN

FINAL PROGRAM AT TANGLEWOOD THIS AFTERNOON

Seymour Lipkin Soloist in Ravel Concerto for Left Hand

Lenox, Aug. 15—The most successful Berkshire Festival in the 16 summer concerts have been performed in the hills of Western Massachusetts, the 14th since the Boston Symphony Orchestra participated, concludes its activities tomorrow with all attendance records shattered. More than 150,000 music lovers have attended the 15 festival concerts; the 40 demonstrations of student symphony, chamber music, choral music, opera and study group departments of the Berkshire Music Center (the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony); and Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade" gala, the annual benefit for the school.

Last Concert Today

The week end's concluding concerts by the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 6000-seat Shed at Tanglewood, are shared by Charles Munch, the symphony's music director, and Leonard Bernstein, who heads the orchestra conducting department of the Berkshire Music Center. The latter conducted tonight.

Tomorrow afternoon Munch will have Seymour Lipkin, pianist who is assistant to Bernstein in the summer school's conducting department, and to BSO concertmaster Richard Burgin in its chamber music department, as soloist in the Ravel Concerto for the Left Hand, a Tanglewood preview.

The portion of the Sunday concert, 2.30 to 4.00 p. m., will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as commentator. The complete program:

Schubert .... Symphony in C minor ("Unfinished")
Wagner .... Prelude and Love-Death, "Tristan und Isolde"
Wagner ....A Siegfried Idyll
Wagner ...."Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg," Excerpts from Act III
Ravel ......Piano Concerto for the Left Hand
Soloist: SEYMOUR LIPKIN
Ravel .... "La Valse"

Final activities of the Berkshire Music Center, to whose concerts are admitted those friends whose contributions help to support it, consist of orchestra concert (Dept. I students,) including "H. P.," 1932 ballet-symphony by Carlos Chavez, led by the composer, who is the school's guest teacher of composition, Music Shed, this afternoon and a chamber music concert (Dept. I students), Theater-Concert Hall, tomorrow morning.

CASH AWARDS GO TO FOUR STUDENTS

Lenox, Aug. 15—Three special cash prizes named for their donors were announced today by the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the annual Berkshire Festival which concludes tomorrow. They are the Jascha Heifetz Award, the Gregor Piatigorsky Award and the Samuel Wechsler Commission.

On the basis of talent, co-operative spirit and future promise the prizes have been awarded to the following: the Heifetz Award $150 each to two violinists, Barbara Lieberman, of 602 Cortelyou Rd., Brooklyn, N. Y., and Barbara Sorlien, of 315 13th St. South, Fargo, N. D.; the Piatigorsky Award, of $200 to cellist Uziahu Wiesel, of Israel; the Wechsler Commission $300 to Juan Orrego, of the Facultad de Belles Artes, Augustinas 620, Santiago, Chile; a former Tanglewood student, for a chamber music composition scored for three violins, one viola, one cello and piano. Mr. Wechsler is himself a former student at Tanglewood.

The awards were announced by Aaron Copland, assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center since its founding in 1940, at a concert this afternoon by the student orchestra.

Cir. (D 324,268) (S 435,939)

This Clipping From
MILWAUKEE, WIS.
JOURNAL

AUG 16 1953

World Music Festivals, 1:30 p.m., WISN; Charles Munch conducts the Boston symphony at the Berkshire music festival.

* * *

Fine Music Concert, 8 p.m., WEMP-FM; two hour concert program featuring high fidelity recordings.

* * *

NBC Summer Symphony, 10:15 p.m., WTMJ, under the direction of Wilfrid Pelletier.

Symphony No. 8 ....Beethoven
Symphonie Fantastique ..Berlioz
Escales ....Ibert

13

4-H Clubs
Shape Lea

Rural Members Be Comprehensive

By BRIAN F. KIN

"I pledge:
My head to clearer th
My heart to greater l
My hands to larger s
My health to better
For my club,
My community,
And my country."

Nearly two million you young men and women, the ages of ten to 21, liv and play with the pledge club membership indell graved on their minds and

Leaders of Tomorr

They are the leaders o row—the farmers, the men, the lawmakers and th makers—pledged to the ten 4-H Club constitution whic cates and encourages the ment of skills, clean, wh living and the preservatio

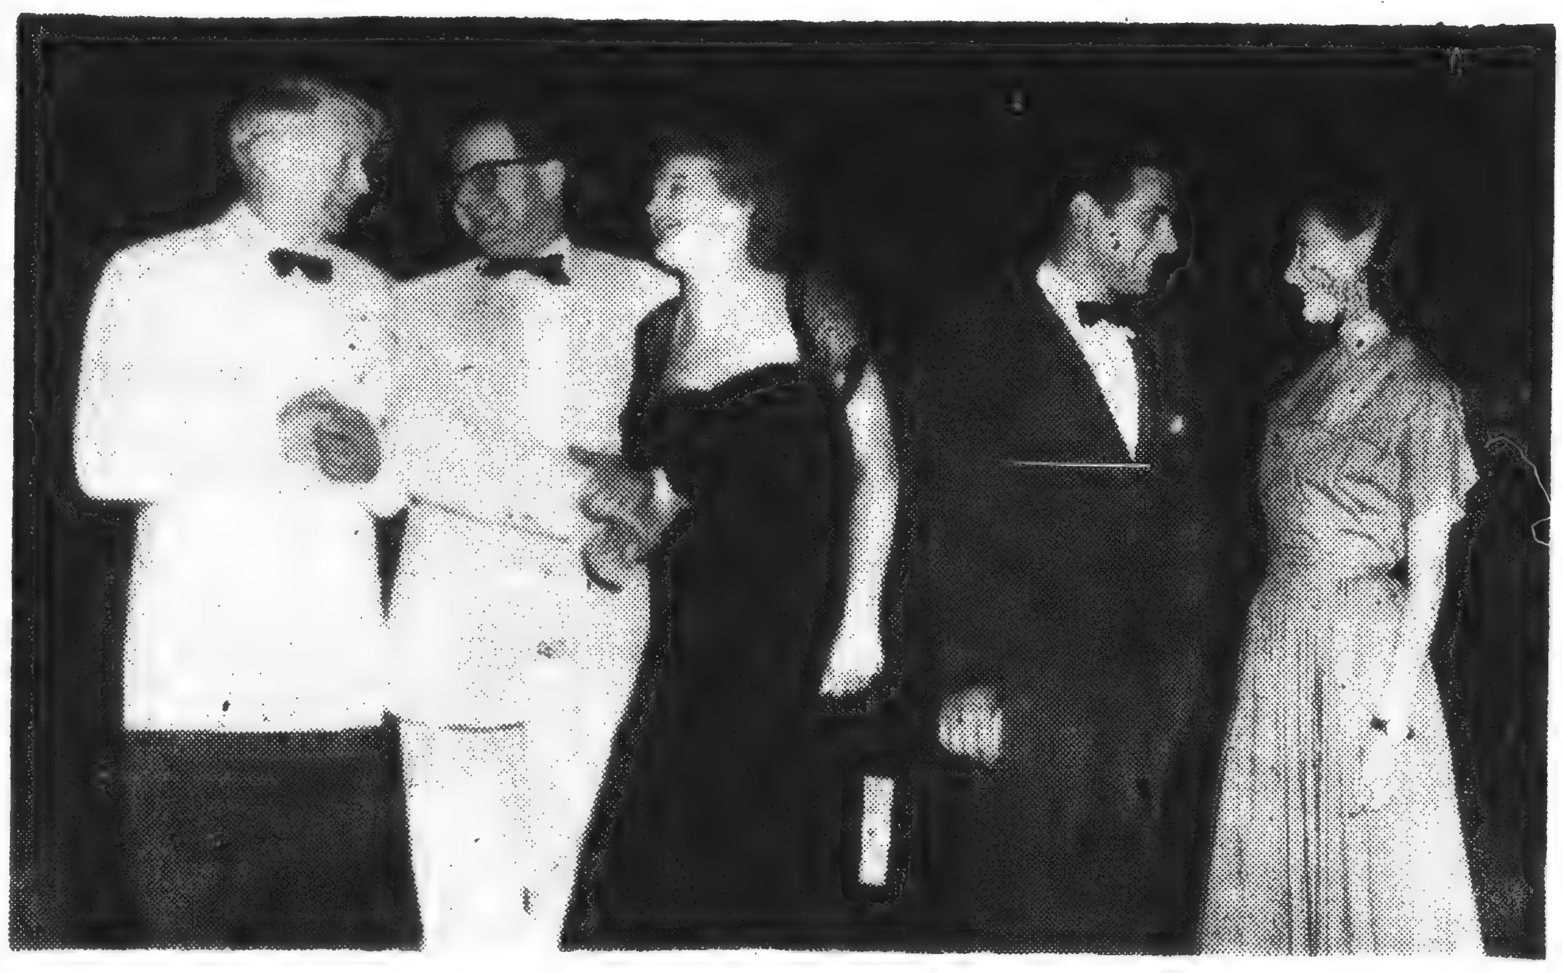
Stars Meet at Tanglewood On Parade



Left to right — Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; director Billy Miles of the Berkshire Playhouse; Anna Russell, concert comedienne; Leonard Bernstein, conductor; and Deirdre Owens, star of "Gigi" this week at the Playhouse.

Cir. (D 193,011) (S 222,31

This Clipping From
MIAMI, FLA.
HERALD

AUG 16 1953

SCHUBERT'S Unfinished Symphony and three works by Wagner will make up the program for Boston Symphony Orchestra in its broadcast from the Great Shed at Berkshire Music Festival at 9 p.m. through CBS-WGBS. Charles Munch will conduct.

★ ★ ★

Wallingf'd Post

Munch, Bernstein Conduct Programs At Tanglewood

8/16

NEW YORK HERALD TRI

AY, AUGUST 16, 1953

p 38

Berkshire Prizes Are Awarded

By Francis D. Perkins

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 15.—Winners of cash prizes donated by Jascha Heifetz, Gregor Piatigorsky and Samuel Wechsler were announced today by Aaron Copland, assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, at the afternoon student orchestra concert which closed the center's six-week session at Tanglewood.

The two Heifetz Awards, of $150 each, went to Barbara Lieberman, 602 Cortelyou Road, Brooklyn, and Barbara Sorlien, of Fargo, N. D., both violinists. Uziahu Wiesel, cellist, from Israel, won the Piatigorsky Award of $200, and Juan Orrego, of the Facultad de Bellas Artes, Augustinas 620, Santiago, Chile, received the Wechsler Commission for a chamber music work for three violins, viola, cello and piano. Mr. Wechsler is a former Berkshire Center student. The awards were made on the basis of talent, co-operative spirit and promise.

Miss Lieberman, who is twenty-one years old, was graduated from Sarah Lawrence College in 1952 and from the Juilliard School of Music in the spring. Miss Sorlien, nineteen, is a student at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia. Mr. Wiesel, twenty-six, studied at the Israeli Academy of Music before coming to the United States in 1944, and is now enrolled at the Juilliard School. He received his B. A. degree from City College in the spring. Mr. Orrego, thirty-four, studied composition with Mr. Copland at Tanglewood in 1946. He is a graduate of the Conservatorio Nacional de Musica in Chile and conductor of the National University Choir and University Glee Club of Santiago.

During this session, the Berkshire Music Center has presented forty-three concerts and demonstrations of work by its five departments.

Talent Pays Off Eagle 8/15

3 Students Awarded Prizes As Tanglewood Starts To Close

Three special cash prizes, named for their donors, this afternoon were announced by the Berkshire Music Center at the final concert by the student orchestra. Presented annually, the prizes are: The Jascha Heifitz award, the Gregor Piatigorsky Award and the Samuel Wechsler Commission.

On the basis of talent, co-operative spirit and future promises, the awards have been made to the following: The Heifitz award of $150 each to two violinists, Barbara Lieberman of Brooklyn, N.Y. and Barbara Sorlien of Fargo, N.D.; the Piatigorsgy award of $200 to cellist Usiahu Wiesel of Israel; and the Wechsler Commission of $300 by Juan Orrego of Santiago, Chile, a former Tanglewood student, for a chamber music composition scored for three violins, viola, cello and piano. Mr. Wechsler himself is a former Tanglewood student.

The prizes were announced by Aaron Copland, assistant director of the school since its founding in 1940. They are in addition to other special scholarships announced earlier in the year, including the Margaret Lee Crofts scholarships for composition students Robert Barney Childs of Reno, Nev., and Alvin Epstein of Hartford.

First Year Students

Other awards of this nature are in the form of tuition payments, cancelling a student's scholarship indebtedness, which come from the Fredrich R. Mann and Sally A. Eisemann scholarship fund, the Parrish award and the Dreyfus award.

Today's winners are advanced in their musical careers. The Heifitz winners are first year students at Tanglewood. Miss Lieberman, 21; graduated from Sarah Lawrence College in 1952 and from the Juilliard School of Music, New York, last spring. Miss Sorlien, 19, studies at the Curtis Institute of Music, Philadelphia. Mr. Wiesel, 26, also at Tanglewood for the first time, came to the United States in 1944 after study at the Israeli Academy of Music. With a B. A. degree from the College of the City of New York last spring, he is enrolled at Juilliard. He is a member of the Israeli Quartet and has performed for the League of Composers and in the Israeli Radio Orchestra.

Mr. Orrego, 34, was a composition student of Mr. Copland at Tanglewood in 1946. A graduate of the Universidad Catolica, where he studied architecture, and the Conservatorio Nacional de Musica of Chile, he is on leave of absence as conductor of the National University Choir and the University Glee Club of Santiago. He has studied at Columbia, Princeton and Virgina Universities, and holds a Guggenheim Fellowship.

Miss Lieberman and Miss Sorlien have been concertmistresses of the student orchestra this summer, and at today's concert were soloists in the Bach Double Violin Concerto. Mr. Wiesel had the solo role in the Dvorak Cello Concerto at Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade" student concert.

Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD
TONIGHT

8.30—Berkshire Festival Concert. Leonard Bernstein conducting Sibelius' Symphony No. 4, Chavez' Sinfonia India and Brahms' Symphony No. 2. Music Shed.

TOMORROW

*0—Chamber music concert. Chamber Music Hall.
Septet, Op. 20 .... Beethoven
Helen Smith and Alan Iglitzin, violins; Jean Moore, cello; Robert Ciccarelli, contrabass; Kenneth Moore, clarinet; Robert Martenson, bassoon; Barbara Bloomer, French horn.
Overture on Hebrew Themes. Prokofieff
Lynne Hartman and Allyn Otnes, violins; Endel Kalam, viola; Norma Marcus, cello; George Townsend, clarinet; Betsy Moyer, piano.
Sextet No. 2 .... Brahms
Serge Blanc and Marion Bloom, violins; Barbara Kroll and James Fawcett, violins; Uziahu Wiesel and Camilla Heller, cellos.
2.30—Final 1953 Berkshire Festival concert, Charles Munch conducting. Music Shed.

*Open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center by voluntary contribution.

Town Helps Student

The presence at Tanglewood this season of one of the chorus leaders was made possible by her native community. Miss Lillian Simmons, who was soprano soloist in the "Magnificat" by Johann Pachelbel at the choral concert of Aug. 4, plays the piano for the men's Bible class of St. John's Methodist Church, Rock Hill, S.C., where she is soloist. When the men heard of her plan to attend the Berkshire Music Center they presented her a check. The Elks' Club and a committee of merchants of the town of 2600 subscribed to her tuition and board.

For the next two weeks she will continue her opera studies under Boris Goldovsky at the Oglebay Opera Workshop in Wheeling, W. Va. When she graduates from Winthrop College, Rock Hill, next June, she plans to return to Tanglewood.

Cantata Was Commissioned

"A Little Boy Lost," the cantata produced at Tanglewood on Parade, was written this year on commission for the Tanglewood Study Group, by whom it was performed. The composer, Allen Sapp, was awarded a cash prize a year ago by the Samuel Wechsler Commission. Assistant professor and acting head of the music department at Harvard University, Mr. Sapp won the Knight Prize for a sonata for violin and piano and the New York Philharmonic Society Competition. He has had his music performed in London, Paris, Belgium and Germany.

During World War II he was a cryptographer with the U.S. Army, and for two years worked with the civilian government in Germany. He prepares music programs and serves as commentator for the Boston Symphony Orchestra on WGBH, a non-commercial radio station.

Chabrier Work Omitted

"Bourree Fantasque" by Emmanuel Chabrier, originally listed on tomorrow's program, will be omitted because of the necessity to keep within a time limit, due to the fact that the first hour and a half will be broadcast over CBS's World Festivals Program.

Music Center Will Close Tomorrow

401 Students Give 43 Concerts At Friends Events

The Berkshire Music Center, the school conducted at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will close its 11th six-week season tomorrow afternoon with the final Berkshire Festival concert.

With 401 students, representing 41 states and 12 foreign countries, the school gave 43 concerts and demonstrations, open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, who helped to support it through voluntary contributions.

Membership in the Friends society has increased by 1500 over that of 1952. About 35 per cent of the more than 4000 members are permanent or summer residents of Berkshire County.

The total attendance at symphony, choral and chamber music concerts and opera performances by students and faculty is expected to pass 40,000, compared to 34,400 in 1952.

The students will disperse tomorrow to continue their musical study, to teach, to play in orchestras or concert, to sing in churches, or to return to work not connected with music. A large percentage will return for the 1954 season.

[299]

HERALD TRIBUNE, SUNDAY, AUGUST 16, 1953

'The Tuscan Players'

Carlos Chavez Discusses His Opera

By ARTHUR BERGER

It is somehow consistent with a neat and simplified order of things that a Mexican composer should, if he writes an opera, write a Mexican opera—Mexican to the extent of local color in its story and folk evocation in its music. Accordingly, when I took advantage of the presence of Carlos Chavez at Tanglewood to question him on the stage-work he has been commissioned to write by Lincoln Kirstein, I promptly broached the matter of whether he intended to use native folk tunes. Chavez is best known in this country through such works as "Sinfonia India" in which the indigenous element is very strong, indeed. Even if it were not for the fact that all composers of Hispanic origin, like Scandinavians, Russians and Israelites, are oddly expected, as a matter of course, to wear native garb when they appear before us in their music, there would still be many listeners who would expect in an opera from Chavez some allusion to his native source material, if only on the basis of those of his works that are most familiar.

On this point, however, the composer gave assurance at once—almost as if he were on the alert for the question—that there would be no occasion to make deliberate reference to such material since nothing in the libretto would call for it.

The plan for this libretto, Chavez explained, grew out of an idea that has been revolving in his mind for a few years now. The notion to write an opera had come to him as many as twenty years ago, but it long remained what he describes as a "Platonic" notion, since the desire was there, but no libretto to consummate it. Still, he did not abandon the hope of one turning up. His thoughts dwelt, from time to time, on the problem of what type of plot he should find most congenial and suitable, until he finally came up with a dramatic device that would make for a libretto "not too realistic, but not fantastic either."

Kallman as Librettist

It would be about a troupe of actors who would pass, at times imperceptibly, from their real life to the imaginary life of the stage. There would be no obligation to fix the action rigorously in time and place. He conveyed
February
managing York City interest a gether wi
co-librettis
of "The Stravinsky
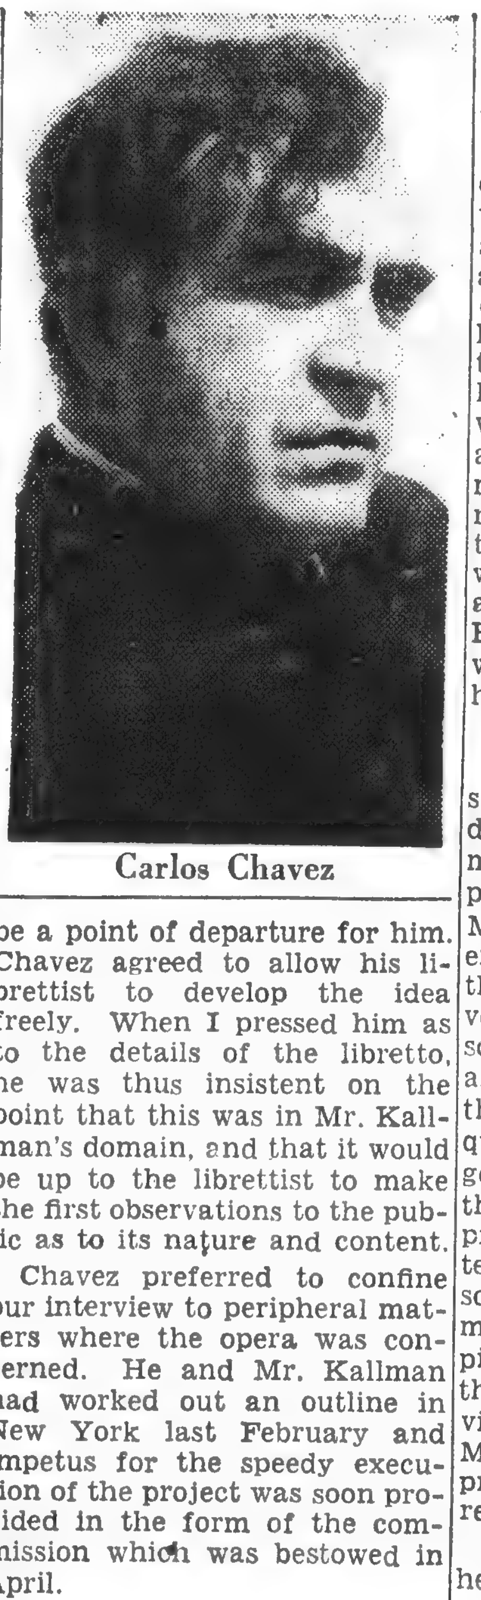
The idea
man. It



Carlos Chavez

be a point of departure for him. Chavez agreed to allow his librettist to develop the idea freely. When I pressed him as to the details of the libretto, he was thus insistent on the point that this was in Mr. Kallman's domain, and that it would be up to the librettist to make the first observations to the public as to its nature and content.

Chavez preferred to confine our interview to peripheral matters where the opera was concerned. He and Mr. Kallman had worked out an outline in New York last February and impetus for the speedy execution of the project was soon provided in the form of the commission which was bestowed in April.

"The Tuscan Players"

According to the terms of the commission, Chavez further stated, he was to have two years for its completion. This would mean that he may be expected to deliver it April, 1955. It is further stipulated that at that time the New York City Opera Company will have the privilege of giving the first performance. There is a likelihood, then, that it would be mounted in the fall of 1955. It will be in three acts and it now has the tentative title, "The Tuscan Players." Chavez is keeping abreast of the librettist and setting each section as it is submitted to him. The composer has received to sarily have any set-pieces, but should the occasion for them arise, he would not be opposed to the idea.

Chavez belongs to the ranks of those predominantly intuitive composers who are understandably reluctant to theorize about their own music. As a critic he has shown himself lucid and perceptive in his articles for the musical periodical he established in Mexico. As visiting instructor this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, moreover, his chief aim has been not so much to teach composition as to fill the role of critic with regard to the creative achievements of his students. But it is quite another thing when it comes to the music he himself writes.

The Elusive Folk Influence

Thus, even if Chavez, at this stage of his work on his opera, denies any intention to use folk music deliberately, it would not preclude the elusive effect that Mexican music has had on his eminently personal style. For this is something he should be very unlikely to discuss. It is something he has left to others, and they have often observed that even when he does not quote folk songs or evoke its general style he inevitably shows that he has absorbed a certain primative austerity, a stark intensity into his eminently personal style. Instances of this may be found in his many piano pieces, and I was reminded of them when I found him, on my visit to his studio in Lenox, Mass., practicing his book of ten preludes which he intends to record presently.

In addition to the preludes he has written etudes, a set of seven pieces and other short piano works, and he expects this year to finish his fourth sonata. It is odd, with pianists constantly scurrying around to find worthwhile contemporary music for their programs, that one almost never hears these pieces. In my memory such little works as "Unidad" and "36" from the seven pieces have held a particularly fond place over the years.

It seems important for musicographers and listeners to know whether a composer quotes folk tunes and what they are. They find it comforting to have something concrete to grasp in the abstract world of music, some easier
also ng a pre-cul-avez atwell less.
olid

Berkshire Festival Features Mozart This Week End

THURSDAY, JULY 16, 1953
THE LITCHFIELD ENQUIRER

weekend of Berk-concerts in the rt Hall at Tangle-
Mass. on Saturday
18, at 8:30 P.M.
fternoon, July 19,
will be devoted to Mozart. Charles
d members o the phony Orchestra, tern, violinist, as ll be soloist in the Violin, in G (K.

day evening, and
h Joseph de Pas-
f the Boston Symstra, on Sunday
the Sinfonia Con-
, for Violin and Viola

Another feature of the weekend will be the first performance anywhere by the Boston Symphony Orchestra of the Divertimento in D, for Strings (K. 136), with which Mr. Munch will open the Sunday afternoon program.

The complete programs are: Saturday: Mozart, Divertimento in D, for Strings (K. 136); Concerto for Violin, in G (K. 216); (Soloist: ISAAC STERN); Serenade for Thirteen Winds (K. 361); and Symphony in D ("Prague") (K. 504).

Sunday: Mozart, Overture to "The Marriage of Figaro;" Sinfonia Concertante, for Violin and Viola (K. 364); (Soloists: ISAAC STERN and JOSEPH DE PASQUALE) Eine kleine Nachtmusik (K. 525); Symphony in D major ("Jupiter") (K. 551).

Through the generosity of Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, a sonata recital will be given on Wednesday evening, (July 22), by Ruth Posselt, violinist, and Gary Graffman, pianist. Miss Posselt is a member of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival. The program will include music of Hindemith, Faure, Bach and Prokofieff.

Charles Munch

Berkshire Footlights

Theatergoers are in for anothe treat at the Berkshire Playhouse i Stockbridge this week as Directo William Miles stages the comed "Gigi". The title role will b played by talented Deirdre Owens and opposite her, from Tyringhan Valley, William Roerick. All told there will be seven Broadway pe formers in the cast. Viola Roach and Janet Fox will add lustre t this hit play. Also to be seen Dori Patston who originated the role o Gigi's mother in the Anita Loo adaptation of the novel by Colette

At Jacob's Pillow still another fine program of the Dance Festival will be presented. Topping the bill will be Ted Shawn. He will do his famous "Whirling Dervish" and "Invocation to the Thunderbird" along with other numbers. In addition, there will be the only United States appearance of Shivaram, authentic Hindu Temple dancer. Again his week there will be the presentation of a world premiere. This will be of the new ballet, "The Shropshire Lad," choreographed by Gilbert Reed, with music by John Hawkins.

The Berkshire Music Festiva concludes its most successful sea son at Tanglewood in Lenox thi afternoon. From the outset, whe the Bach-Mozart-Haydn concert opened in the Theater-Concert Hall right on through the main pro grams in the Shed, records have been broken at each succeeding concert. Everyone who has fol lowed the Festival from the "ten era" up to the present-day glamor ous surroundings on the forme Tappan estate are in wholehearted accord that the lion's share of the credit for the record attendance figures must be accorded to the popular conductor, Charles Munch.

The warm smile and ever-present charm of Charles Munch have become trade-marks of the Festival. Not only has he won the hearts of the thousands of music lovers, but he has also endeared himself to the personnel of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Together with George Judd, manager of the group, Mr. Munch gives Tanglewood and the Berkshire Hills the finest team of ambassadors of good will that they could ever hope to have.

CHARLES MUNCH

GEORGE JUDD

Boris Goldovsky of the Opera Department at Tanglewood for the splendid presentation of Andre Ernest Modeste Gretry's "Richard the Lion-Hearted" in the Theater-Concert Hall. Staged by Sarah Caldwell, with settings, lighting and projections by John Blankenchip it was a memorable occasion. The roles filled by John McCollum, Theresa Green and Lois Cauley were tremendous in their scope and presentation. The costumes by Leo Van Witsen were admirable.

A unique and delightful informal concert, was enjoyed at Serank, summer home of Mrs. Serge Koussivitzky in Lenox this past week. The members and friends of the Stockbridge Bowl Association were treated to a rare pleasure. First there was the "premiere-presentation" of Leonard Bernstein and Lukas Foss at the keyboard of twin pianos. Assisting them, as page-turners', were their wives. Their duo-piano performances of Mozart's D-major sonata and Aaron Copeland's "Human Dance" were thrilling. The flute solos by Doriot Anthony were rare in beauty. Adding greatly to the program were the solos by Mac Morgan and Richard Dyer-Bennet.

S., AUGUST 16, 1953

Tanglewood Tales

Lenox, Aug. 15—Among the notables at the closing concerts of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood this week end will be the following: Irving Brown, of New York City, Chappel, Inc., music publishers; Dr. Lewis Perry, Boston trustee of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and President of the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, the orchestra's summer school of music in the Berkshires; Anna Russell, the concert comedienne, and her manager, Eastman Bloomer, of New York City; Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Howatson, of the Montreal, Canada Symphony Orchestra; Larney Goodkind, personal manager of William Warfield and Leontyne Price, soloists at the "Tanglewood on Parade" concert; and Miss Nelly Walter of Columbia Artists Management.

Leis Marshall, young Canadian soprano who made her Tanglewood debut in the Brahms' "Requiem" with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival last Friday night, is a week end visitor at the Village Inn, Lenox, with her accompanist and music teacher, Weldon Kilburn, of Toronto, Ont.

William Warfield, the concert baritone who sang with Miss Marshall at the Friday night Festival concert, is at the Curtis Hotel, Lenox, with his wife, Leontyne Price, star of BrRoadway's "Porgy and Bess." Miss Price was a Berkshire Music Center opera student in 1951.

Miss Katie Clare Roys, secretary to John N. Burk, press representative for the Boston Symphony Orchestra, flew to Mexico City on Wednesday, after spending the summer at Tanglewood. In addition to her office duties, Miss Roys, of Seattle and Boston, is a concert pianist, and performed the Bach "Sonata in A major for Violin and Piano" with Stanley Dombrowski, violin student, at the Berkshire Music Center's student chamber music concert last Monday.

One of Tanglewood's most interesting students this summer has been Warrant Officer John Norris, U. S. N., of Arlington, Va., the first Armed Services representative the Berkshire Music Center has had on its student rolls in its 11 years. Mr. Norris is assistant conductor of the U. S. Navy Band, which officiates at all Washington ceremonial occasions, and gives summer concerts on the steps of the Capitol, winter concerts in the Navy Department Auditorium, also performs at Watergate open-air amphitheater on the banks of the Potomac. The Navy Band tours annually through different regions of the U. S.

Marcelle Hammond, of New York City a student in the Associate Division of the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center, who sang the comic role of the charwoman Bertha in the Jan Meyerowitz short opera, "Bad Boys in School," at Tanglewood on Parade last Thursday, is publisher and managing editor of two weekly newspapers, "Seaside Topics" published during the summer at Watch Hill, R. I., and "Winter Park Topics," published winters at Winter Park, Fla.

When the Berkshire Festival concludes at Tanglewood tomorrow with attendance figures expecting to top the all-time record of 157,000 established in 1950 when the late Serge Koussevitzky performed there for the last time, the entire Boston Symphony Orchestra will return directly to Boston, for a recording session in Symphony Hall on Monday afternoon Aug. 17. The following day, Music Director Charles Munch flies to Nice, via Air France, for vacation until the BSO commences its 73d season, Oct. 9-May 1, in Boston. Three-quarters of the orchestra will remain in Boston for a concert in the Shell on the Esplanade Sunday night Aug. 23, for the National Convention of the American Bar Association, which "Pops" conductor Arthur Fiedler will conduct. Mr. Fiedler will interrupt his current West Coast season to fly to Boston for the engagement.

Victor Records is releasing in the early autumn the latest pressings by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, some of which Tanglewood has heard this summer, including the entire Berlioz dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," complete with soloists, which will occupy three LP sides; Roussel's "Bacchus and Ariane" suite; and Arthur Honegger's "Symphony No. ." The "Pops" orchestra, Arthur Fiedler conductor, is releasing a new version of Prokofieff's "Peter and the Wolf," with the celebrated English stage and screen actor Alec Guinness as narrator. Mr. Guinness recorded his commentary in London, and clever engineering "dubbed" it with the music. Another "Pops" BSO album sure to excite comment is one provacatively labeled "Classical Music For People Who Hate Classical Music," with selections from Beethoven, Schubert and several other "long-hair" composers.

HERALD TRIBUNE, SUNDAY, AUGUST 16, 1953

'The Tuscan Players'

Carlos Chavez Discusses His Opera

By ARTHUR BERGER

It is somehow consistent with a neat and simplified order of things that a Mexican composer should, if he writes an opera, write a Mexican opera—Mexican to the extent of local color in its story and folk evocation in its music. Accordingly, when I took advantage of the presence of Carlos Chavez at Tanglewood to question him on the stagework he has been commissioned to write by Lincoln Kirstein, I promptly broached the matter of whether he intended to use native folk tunes. Chavez is best known in this country through such works as "Sinfonia India" in which the indigenous element is very strong, indeed. Even if it were not for the fact that all composers of Hispanic origin, like Scandinavians, Russians and Israelites, are oddly expected, as a matter of course, to wear native garb when they appear before us in their music, there would still be many listeners who would expect in an opera from Chavez some allusion to his native source material, if only on the basis of those of his works that are most familiar.

Carlos Chavez

On this point, however, the composer gave assurance at once—almost as if he were on the alert for the question—that there would be no occasion to make deliberate reference to such material since nothing in the libretto would call for it.

The plan for this libretto, Chavez explained, grew out of an idea that has been revolving in his mind for a few years now. The notion to write an opera had come to him as many as twenty years ago, but it long remained what he describes as a "Platonic" notion, since the desire was there, but no libretto to consummate it. Still, he did not abandon the hope of one turning up. His thoughts dwelt, from time to time, on the problem of what type of plot he should find most congenial and suitable, until he finally came up with a dramatic device that would make for a libretto "not too realistic, but not fantastic either."

Kallman as Librettist

It would be about a troupe of actors who would pass, at times imperceptibly, from their real life to the imaginary life of the stage. There would be no obligation to fix the action rigorously in time and place. He conveyed February

managing
York City interest a gether wi
co-librettis
of "The Stravinsky

be a point of departure for him. Chavez agreed to allow his librettist to develop the idea freely. When I pressed him as to the details of the libretto, he was thus insistent on the point that this was in Mr. Kallman's domain, and that it would be up to the librettist to make the first observations to the public as to its nature and content.

Chavez preferred to confine our interview to peripheral matters where the opera was concerned. He and Mr. Kallman had worked out an outline in New York last February and impetus for the speedy execution of the project was soon provided in the form of the commission which was bestowed in April.

"The Tuscan Players"

According to the terms of the commission, Chavez further stated, he was to have two years for its completion. This would mean that he may be expected to deliver it April, 1955. It is further stipulated that at that time the New York City Opera Company will have the privilege of giving the first performance. There is a likelihood, then, that it would be mounted in the fall of 1955. It will be in three acts and it now has the tentative title, "The Tuscan Players." Chavez is keeping abreast of the librettist and setting each section as it is submitted to him. The composer has received to sarily have any set-pieces, but should the occasion for them arise, he would not be opposed to the idea.

Chavez belongs to the ranks of those predominantly intuitive composers who are understandably reluctant to theorize about their own music. As a critic he has shown himself lucid and perceptive in his articles for the musical periodical he established in Mexico. As visiting instructor this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, moreover, his chief aim has been not so much to teach composition as to fill the role of critic with regard to the creative achievements of his students. But it is quite another thing when it comes to the music he himself writes.

The Elusive Folk Influence

Thus, even if Chavez, at this stage of his work on his opera, denies any intention to use folk music deliberately, it would not preclude the elusive effect that Mexican music has had on his eminently personal style. For this is something he should be very unlikely to discuss. It is something he has left to others, and they have often observed that even when he does not quote folk songs or evoke its general style he inevitably shows that he has absorbed a certain primative austerity, a stark intensity into his eminently personal style. Instances of this may be found in his many piano pieces, and I was reminded of them when I found him, on my visit to his studio in Lenox, Mass., practicing his book of ten preludes which he intends to record presently.

In addition to the preludes he has written etudes, a set of seven pieces and other short piano works, and he expects this year to finish his fourth sonata. It is odd, with pianists constantly scurrying around to find worthwhile contemporary music for their programs, that one almost never hears these pieces. In my memory such little works as "Unidad" and "36" from the seven pieces have held a particularly fond place over the years.

It seems important for musicographers and listeners to know whether a composer quotes folk tunes and what they are. They find it comforting to have something concrete to grasp in the abstract world of music, some easier
also ng a pre-cul-avez atwell less.
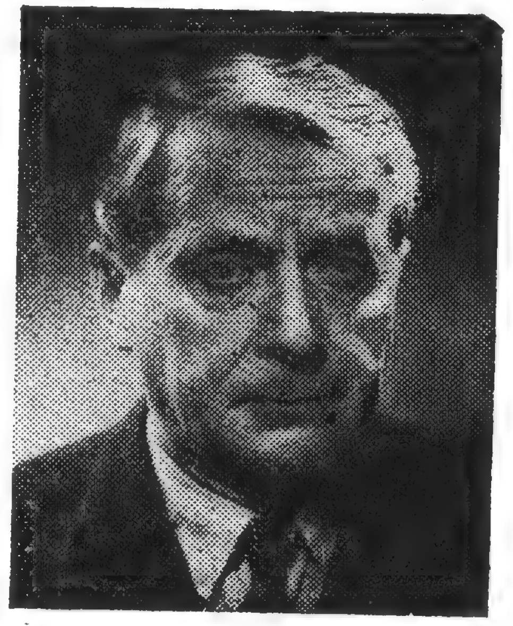
solid

FIELD ENQUIRER

Berkshire Festival Features Mozart This Week End

The second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. on Saturday evening, July 18, at 8:30 P.M. and Sunday afternoon, July 19, at 2:30 P.M. will be devoted to the works of Mozart. Charles Munch will lead members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Isaac Stern, violinist, as soloist.



Charles Munch

Mr. Stern will be soloist in the Concerto for Violin, in G (K. 216) on Saturday evening, and will team with Joseph de Pasquale, violist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, on Sunday afternoon in the Sinfonia Concertante, for Violin and Viola (K. 364).

Another feature of the weekend will be the first performance anywhere by the Boston Symphony Orchestra of the Divertimento in D, for Strings (K. 136), with which Mr. Munch will open the Sunday afternoon program.

The complete programs are:

Saturday: Mozart, Divertimento in D, for Strings (K. 136); Concerto for Violin, in G (K. 216); (Soloist: ISAAC STERN); Serenade for Thirteen Winds (K. 361); and Symphony in D ("Prague") (K. 504).

Sunday: Mozart, Overture to "The Marriage of Figaro;" Sinfonia Concertante, for Violin and Viola (K. 364); (Soloists: ISAAC STERN and JOSEPH DE PASQUALE) Eine kleine Nachtmusik (K. 525); Symphony in D major ("Jupiter") (K. 551).

Through the generosity of Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, a sonata recital will be given on Wednesday evening, (July 22), by Ruth Posselt, violinist, and Gary Graffman, pianist. Miss Posselt is a member of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival. The program will include music of Hindemith, Faure, Bach and Prokofieff.

Berkshire Footlights

Theatergoers are in for anothe treat at the Berkshire Playhouse i Stockbridge this week as Directo William Miles stages the comed "Gigi". The title role will b played by talented Deirdre Owens and opposite her, from Tyringhan Valley, William Roerick. All told there will be seven Broadway performers in the cast. Viola Roach and Janet Fox will add lustre t this hit play. Also to be seen Dori Patston who originated the role o Gigi's mother in the Anita Loo adaptation of the novel by Colette

At Jacob's Pillow still another fine program of the Dance Festival will be presented. Topping the bill will be Ted Shawn. He will do his famous "Whirling Dervish" and "Invocation to the Thunderbird" along with other numbers. In addition, there will be the only United States appearance of Shivaram, authentic Hindu Temple dancer. Again his week there will be the presentation of a world premiere. This will be of the new ballet, "The Shropshire Lad," choreographed by Gilbert Reed, with music by John Hawkins.

The Berkshire Music Festiva concludes its most successful season at Tanglewood in Lenox thi afternoon. From the outset, whe the Bach-Mozart-Haydn concert opened in the Theater-Concert Hall right on through the main programs in the Shed, records have been broken at each succeeding concert. Everyone who has followed the Festival from the "ten era" up to the present-day glamorous surroundings on the forme Tappan estate are in wholehearted accord that the lion's share of the credit for the record attendance figures must be accorded to the popular conductor, Charles Munch.

The warm smile and ever-present charm of Charles Munch have become trademarks of the Festival. Not only has he won the hearts of the thousands of music lovers, but he has also endeared himself to the personnel of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Together with George Judd, manager of the group, Mr. Munch gives Tanglewood and the Berkshire Hills the finest team of ambassadors of good will that they could ever hope to have.

CHARLES MUNCH

GEORGE JUDD

Boris Goldovsky of the Opera Department at Tanglewood for the splendid presentation of Andre Ernest Modeste Gretry's "Richard the Lion-Hearted" in the Theater-Concert Hall. Staged by Sarah Caldwell, with settings, lighting and projections by John Blankenchip it was a memorable occasion. The roles filled by John McCollum, Theresa Green and Lois Cauley were tremendous in their scope and presentation. The costumes by Leo Van Witsen were admirable.

A unique and delightful informal concert, was enjoyed at Serank, summer home of Mrs. Serge Koussivitzky in Lenox this past week. The members and friends of the Stockbridge Bowl Association were treated to a rare pleasure. First there was the "premiere-presentation" of Leonard Bernstein an Lukas Foss at the keyboard o twin pianos. Assisting them, a page-turners', were their wives Their duo-piano performances o Mozart's D-major sonata a n Aaron Copeland's "Human Dance were thrilling. The flute solos b Doriot Anthony were rare in beauty. Adding greatly to the progran were the solos by Mac Morgan an Richard Dyer-Bennet.

S., AUGUST 16, 1953

Tanglewood Tales

Lenox, Aug. 15—Among the notables at the closing concerts of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood this week end will be the following: Irving Brown, of New York City, Chappel, Inc., music publishers; Dr. Lewis Perry, Boston trustee of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and President of the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, the orchestra's summer school of music in the Berkshires; Anna Russell, the concert comedienne, and her manager, Eastman Bloomer, of New York City; Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Howatson, of the Montreal, Canada Symphony Orchestra; Larney Goodkind, personal manager of William Warfield and Leontyne Price, soloists at the "Tanglewood on Parade" concert; and Miss Nelly Walter of Columbia Artists Management.

Leis Marshall, young Canadian soprano who made her Tanglewood debut in the Brahms' "Requiem" with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival last Friday night, is a week end visitor at the Village Inn, Lenox, with her accompanist and music teacher, Weldon Kilburn, of Toronto, Ont.

William Warfield, the concert baritone who sang with Miss Marshall at the Frida night Festival concert, is at the Curtis Hotel, Lenox, with his wife, Leontyne Price, star of BrRoadway's "Porgy and Bess." Miss Price was a Berkshire Music Center opera student in 1951.

Miss Katie Clare Roys, secretary to John N. Burk, press representative for the Boston Symphony Orchestra, flew to Mexico City on Wednesday, after spending the summer at Tanglewood. In addition to her office duties, Miss Roys of Seattle and Boston, is a concert pianist, and performed the Bach "Sonata in A major for Violin and Piano" with Stanley Dombrowski, violin student, at the Berkshire Music Center's student chamber music concert last Monday.

One of Tanglewood's most interesting students this summer has been Warrant Officer John Norris, U. S. N., of Arlington, Va., the first Armed Services representative the Berkshire Music Center has had on its student rolls in its 11 years. Mr. Norris is assistant conductor of the U. S. Navy Band, which officiates at all Washington ceremonial occasions, and gives summer concerts on the steps of the Capitol, winter concerts in the Navy Department Auditorium, also performs at Watergate open-air amphitheater on the banks of the Potomac. The Navy Band tours annually through different regions of the U. S.

Marcelle Hammond, of New York City a student in the Associate Division of the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center, who sang the comic role of the charwoman Bertha in the Jan Meyerowitz short opera, "Bad Boys in School," at Tanglewood on Parade last Thursday, is publisher and managing editor of two weekly newspapers, "Seaside Topics published during the summer at Watch Hill, R. I., and "Winter Park Topics," published winters at Winter Park, Fla.

When the Berkshire Festival concludes at Tanglewood tomorrow with attendance figures expecting to top the all-time record of 157,000 established in 1950 when the late Serge Koussevitzky performed there for the last time, the entire Boston Symphony Orchestra will return directly to Boston, for a recording session in Symphony Hall on Monday afternoon Aug. 17. The following day, Music Director Charles Munch flies to Nice, via Air France, for vacation until the BSO commences its 73d season, Oct. 9-May 1, in Boston. Three-quarters of the orchestra will remain in Boston for a concert in the Shell on the Esplanade Sunday nigh Aug. 23, for the National Convention of the American Bar Association, which "Pops" conductor Arthur Fiedler will conduct. Mr. Fiedler will interrupt his current West Coast season to fly to Boston for the engagement.

Victor Records is releasing in the early autumn the latest pressings by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, some of which Tanglewood has heard this summer, including the entire Berlioz dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," complete with soloists, which will occupy three LP sides; Roussel's "Bacchus and Ariane" suite; and Arthur Honegger's "Symphony No. 5." The "Pops" orchestra, Arthur Fiedler conductor, is releasing a new version of Prokofieff's "Peter and the Wolf," with the celebrated English stage and screen actor Alec Guinness as narrator. Mr. Guinness recorded his commentary in London, and clever engineering "dubbed" it with the music. Another "Pops" BSO album sure to excite comment is one provacatively labeled "Classical Music For People Who Hate Classical Music," with selections from Beethoven, Schubert and several other "longhair" composers.

HERALD TRIBUNE, SUNDAY, AUGUST 16, 1953

'The Tuscan Players'

Carlos Chavez Discusses His Opera

By ARTHUR BERGER

It is somehow consistent with a neat and simplified order of things that a Mexican composer should, if he writes an opera, write a Mexican opera—Mexican to the extent of local color in its story and folk evocation in its music. Accordingly, when I took advantage of the presence of Carlos Chavez at Tanglewood to question him on the stage-work he has been commissioned to write by Lincoln Kirstein, I promptly broached the matter of whether he intended to use native folk tunes. Chavez is best known in this country through such works as "Sinfonia India" in which the indigenous element is very strong, indeed. Even if it were not for the fact that all composers of Hispanic origin, like Scandinavians, Russians and Israelites, are oddly expected, as a matter of course, to wear native garb when they appear before us in their music, there would still be many listeners who would expect in an opera from Chavez some allusion to his native source material, if only on the basis of those of his works that are most familiar.

Carlos Chavez

On this point, however, the composer gave assurance at once—almost as if he were on the alert for the question—that there would be no occasion to make deliberate reference to such material since nothing in the libretto would call for it.

The plan for this libretto, Chavez explained, grew out of an idea that has been revolving in his mind for a few years now. The notion to write an opera had come to him as many as twenty years ago, but it long remained what he describes as a "Platonic" notion, since the desire was there, but no libretto to consummate it. Still, he did not abandon the hope of one turning up. His thoughts dwelt, from time to time, on the problem of what type of plot he should find most congenial and suitable, until he finally came up with a dramatic device that would make for a libretto "not too realistic, but not fantastic either."

Kallman as Librettist

It would be about a troupe of actors who would pass, at times imperceptibly, from their real life to the imaginary life of the stage. There would be no obligation to fix the action rigorously in time and place. He conveyed these thoughts last February to Lincoln Kirstein, managing director of the New York City Center, who expressed interest and brought him together with Chester Kallman, co-librettist, with W. H. Auden, of "The Rake's Progress" of Stravinsky.

The idea appealed to Mr. Kallman. It was, however, only to be a point of departure for him. Chavez agreed to allow his librettist to develop the idea freely. When I pressed him as to the details of the libretto, he was thus insistent on the point that this was in Mr. Kallman's domain, and that it would be up to the librettist to make the first observations to the public as to its nature and content.

Chavez preferred to confine our interview to peripheral matters where the opera was concerned. He and Mr. Kallman had worked out an outline in New York last February and impetus for the speedy execution of the project was soon provided in the form of the commission which was bestowed in April.

"The Tuscan Players"

According to the terms of the commission, Chavez further stated, he was to have two years for its completion. This would mean that he may be expected to deliver it April, 1955. It is further stipulated that at that time the New York City Opera Company will have the privilege of giving the first performance. There is a likelihood, then, that it would be mounted in the fall of 1955. It will be in three acts and it now has the tentative title, "The Tuscan Players." Chavez is keeping abreast of the librettist and setting each section as it is submitted to him. The composer has received to date about a third of Act I, and he has written the music for the first two scenes.

As to the nature of his music and style of the word-setting Chavez was willing to say nothing more than that he believed an opera should be singable and that he did not believe in "formulae." As far as he knows now, he said, his opera will not necessarily have any set-pieces, but should the occasion for them arise, he would not be opposed to the idea.

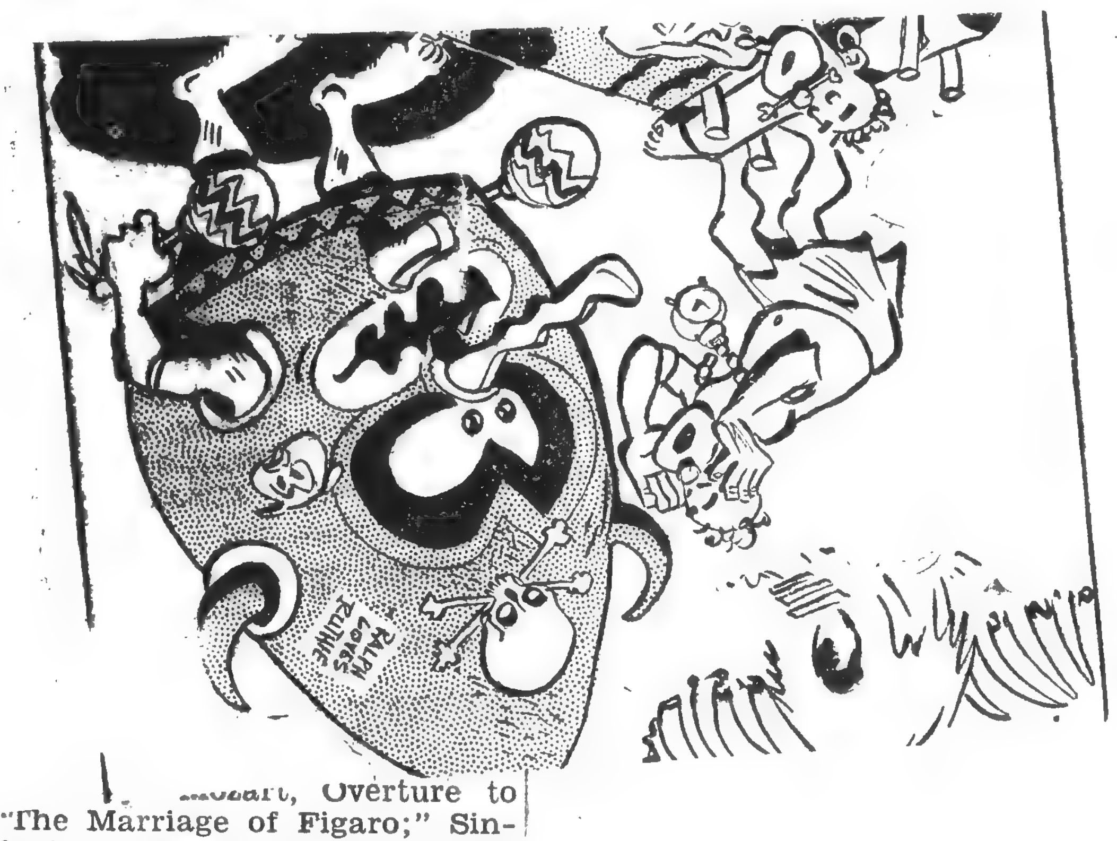
Chavez belongs to the ranks of those predominantly intuitive composers who are understandably reluctant to theorize about their own music. As a critic he has shown himself lucid and perceptive in his articles for the musical periodical he established in Mexico. As visiting instructor this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, moreover, his chief aim has been not so much to teach composition as to fill the role of critic with regard to the creative achievements of his students. But it is quite another thing when it comes to the music he himself writes.

The Elusive Folk Influence

Thus, even if Chavez, at this stage of his work on his opera, denies any intention to use folk music deliberately, it would not preclude the elusive effect that Mexican music has had on his eminently personal style. For this is something he should be very unlikely to discuss. It is something he has left to others, and they have often observed that even when he does not quote folk songs or evoke its general style he inevitably shows that he has absorbed a certain primative austerity, a stark intensity into his eminently personal style. Instances of this may be found in his many piano pieces, and I was reminded of them when I found him, on my visit to his studio in Lenox, Mass., practicing his book of ten preludes which he intends to record presently.

In addition to the preludes he has written etudes, a set of seven pieces and other short piano works, and he expects this year to finish his fourth sonata. It is odd, with pianists constantly scurrying around to find worthwhile contemporary music for their programs, that one almost never hears these pieces. In my memory such little works as "Unidad" and "36" from the seven pieces have held a particularly fond place over the years.

It seems important for musicographers and listeners to know whether a composer quotes folk tunes and what they are. They find it comforting to have something concrete to grasp in the abstract world of music, some landmark that makes it easier to get their bearings. It also simplifies the task of labeling a composer as a genuine representative of his nationalist culture. The piano works of Chavez do not, I realize, offer these attractions. But they are very well worth looking into, nonetheless. They offer far more solid rewards.



ozart, Overture to "The Marriage of Figaro;" Sinfonia Concertante, for Violin and Viola (K. 364); (Soloists: ISAAC STERN and JOSEPH DE PASQUALE) Eine kleine Nachtmusik (K. 525); Symphony in D major ("Jupiter") (K. 551).

Through the generosity of Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, a

Berkshire Footlights

Theatergoers are in for another treat at the Berkshire Playhouse in Stockbridge this week as Director William Miles stages the comedy "Gigi". The title role will be played by talented Deirdre Owens and opposite her, from Tyringham Valley, William Roerick. All told there will be seven Broadway performers in the cast. Viola Roach and Janet Fox will add lustre to this hit play. Also to be seen Doris Patston who originated the role of Gigi's mother in the Anita Loos adaptation of the novel by Colette.

At Jacob's Pillow still another fine program of the Dance Festival will be presented. Topping the bill will be Ted Shawn. He will do his famous "Whirling Dervish" and "Invocation to the Thunderbird" along with other numbers. In addition, there will be the only United States appearance of Shivaram, authentic Hindu Temple dancer. Again his week there will be the presentation of a world premiere. This will be of the new ballet, "The Shropshire Lad," choreographed by Gilbert Reed, with music by John Hawkins.

The Berkshire Music Festival concludes its most successful season at Tanglewood in Lenox this afternoon. From the outset, when the Bach-Mozart-Haydn concerts opened in the Theater-Concert Hall right on through the main programs in the Shed, records have been broken at each succeeding concert. Everyone who has followed the Festival from the "tent era" up to the present-day glamorous surroundings on the former Tappan estate are in wholehearted accord that the lion's share of the credit for the record attendance figures must be accorded to the popular conductor, Charles Munch.

The warm smile and ever-present charm of Charles Munch have become trademarks of the Festival. Not only has he won the hearts of the thousands of music lovers, but he has also endeared himself to the personnel of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Together with George Judd, manager of the group, Mr. Munch gives Tanglewood and the Berkshire Hills the finest team of ambassadors of good will that they could ever hope to have.

CHARLES MUNCH

GEORGE JUDD

Boris Goldovsky of the Opera Department at Tanglewood for the splendid presentation of Andre Ernest Modeste Gretry's "Richard the Lion-Hearted" in the Theater-Concert Hall. Staged by Sarah Caldwell, with settings, lighting and projections by John Blankenchip it was a memorable occasion. The roles filled by John McCollum, Theresa Green and Lois Cauley were tremendous in their scope and presentation. The costumes by Leo Van Witsen were admirable.

A unique and delightful informal concert, was enjoyed at Serank, summer home of Mrs. Serge Koussivitzky in Lenox this past week. The members and friends of the Stockbridge Bowl Association were treated to a rare pleasure. First there was the "premiere-presentation" of Leonard Bernstein and Lukas Foss at the keyboard of twin pianos. Assisting them, as page-turners', were their wives. Their duo-piano performances of Mozart's D-major sonata and Aaron Copeland's "Human Dance" were thrilling. The flute solos by Doriot Anthony were rare in beauty. Adding greatly to the program were the solos by Mac Morgan and Richard Dyer-Bennet.

S., AUGUST 16, 1953

Tanglewood Tales

Lenox, Aug. 15—Among the notables at the closing concerts of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood this week end will be the following: Irving Brown, of New York City, Chappel, Inc., music publishers; Dr. Lewis Perry, Boston trustee of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and President of the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, the orchestra's summer school of music in the Berkshires; Anna Russell, the concert comedienne, and her manager, Eastman Bloomer, of New York City; Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Howatson, of the Montreal, Canada Symphony Orchestra; Larney Goodkind, personal manager of William Warfield and Leontyne Price, soloists at the "Tanglewood on Parade" concert; and Miss Nelly Walter of Columbia Artists Management.

Leis Marshall, young Canadian soprano who made her Tanglewood debut in the Brahms' "Requiem" with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival last Friday night, is a week end visitor at the Village Inn, Lenox, with her accompanist and music teacher, Weldon Kilburn, of Toronto, Ont.

William Warfield, the concert baritone who sang with Miss Marshall at the Friday night Festival concert, is at the Curtis Hotel, Lenox, with his wife, Leontyne Price, star of BrRoadway's "Porgy and Bess." Miss Price was a Berkshire Music Center opera student in 1951.

Miss Katie Clare Roys, secretary to John N. Burk, press representative for the Boston Symphony Orchestra, flew to Mexico City on Wednesday, after spending the summer at Tanglewood. In addition to her office duties, Miss Roys, of Seattle and Boston, is a concert pianist, and performed the Bach "Sonata in A major for Violin and Piano" with Stanley Dombrowski, violin student, at the Berkshire Music Center's student chamber music concert last Monday.

One of Tanglewood's most interesting students this summer has been Warrant Officer John Norris, U. S. N., of Arlington, Va., the first Armed Services representative the Berkshire Music Center has had on its student rolls in its 11 years. Mr. Norris is assistant conductor of the U. S. Navy Band, which officiates at all Washington ceremonial occasions, and gives summer concerts on the steps of the Capitol, winter concerts in the Navy Department Auditorium, also performs at Watergate open-air amphitheater on the banks of the Potomac. The Navy Band tours annually through different regions of the U. S.

Marcelle Hammond, of New York City a student in the Associate Division of the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center, who sang the comic role of the charwoman Bertha in the Jan Meyerowitz short opera, "Bad Boys in School," at Tanglewood on Parade last Thursday, is publisher and managing editor of two weekly newspapers, "Seaside Topics" published during the summer at Watch Hill, R. I., and "Winter Park Topics," published winters at Winter Park, Fla.

When the Berkshire Festival concludes at Tanglewood tomorrow with attendance figures expecting to top the all-time record of 157,000 established in 1950 when the late Serge Koussevitzky performed there for the last time, the entire Boston Symphony Orchestra will return directly to Boston, for a recording session in Symphony Hall on Monday afternoon Aug. 17. The following day, Music Director Charles Munch flies to Nice, via Air France, for vacation until the BSO commences its 73d season, Oct. 9-May 1, in Boston. Three-quarters of the orchestra will remain in Boston for a concert in the Shell on the Esplanade Sunday night Aug. 23, for the National Convention of the American Bar Association, which "Pops" conductor Arthur Fiedler will conduct. Mr. Fiedler will interrupt his current West Coast season to fly to Boston for the engagement.

Victor Records is releasing in the early autumn the latest pressings by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, some of which Tanglewood has heard this summer, including the entire Berlioz dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," complete with soloists, which will occupy three LP sides; Roussel's "Bacchus and Ariane" suite; and Arthur Honegger's "Symphony No. 5." The "Pops" orchestra, Arthur Fiedler conductor, is releasing a new version of Prokofieff's "Peter and the Wolf," with the celebrated English stage and screen actor Alec Guinness as narrator. Mr. Guinness recorded his commentary in London, and clever engineering "dubbed" it with the music. Another "Pops" BSO album sure to excite comment is one provacatively labeled "Classical Music For People Who Hate Classical Music," with selections from Beethoven, Schubert and several other "longhair" composers.

PASTE OVER

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, SUNDAY, AUGUST 16, 1953

PROGRAM NOTES TODAY

Opera: "Thais," by Massenet, 10:30 a. m.; "Carmen," by Bizet, (FM), 12:05 p. m.; "Fidelio," by en, WOR, 1:30; "Don Giovanni," y Mozart, WQXR, 8:05.

to Learning: Harvey Breit and ite Richards discuss Stendahl's fe of Henri Brulard," WCBS, 11:35.

American Story—Bill Costello in- J. Rafael Oreamuno, Costa Rican ador to the U. S., WCBS, noon.

nal Light: Mark Van Doren and Samuel discuss "Egypt and the of Israel—part 2," in their dia- n Thomas Mann's "Joseph and His s," WNBC, 12:30 p. m.

-Jewish Caravan of Stars, with Oysher, Marlin Sisters, Shoshana n and Georgia Kaye, WMGM, 12:30.

Out: "Can the Democrats Capture rsey This Year?" Robert B. Meyner, ratic candidate for Governor of N. J., ewed by Earl Mazo, of the Herald e, and others, WCBS, 1.

: Yankees-Athletics, WINS, 1; Phil- lants, WMCA, 1:55; Pirates-Dodgers, M, 2. All are doubleheaders.

S. Riegelman, Republican candidate ayor, is today's guest on "Citizen's Searchlight," WNBC, 1:30.

Hour celebrates the fiftieth anni- of Papal pronouncement on sacred with choral groups, WNBC, 2.

unday Afternoon—String Serenade, cted by Alfredo Antonini, WCBS, 2.

Munch conducts the Boston Sym- in a concert at the Berkshire Festi- Tanglewood, WCBS, 2:30.

per and public opinion, WNBC, 2:45.

Large—Leon Pearson's views on books and entertainment, WNBC, 3.

of Books with a survey of the writ- Mark Twain, WNBC, 3:15.

lantic Briefing—five-way conversa- mong correspondents stationed in apitals of the world, WNBC, 3:30.

d Bowl Concert—Arthur Fiedler ts; duo-pianists Morley and Gear- e guest artists, WNBC, 4.

heater: Robert Louis Stevenson's Mystery of the Empty Ship," pt. 3, based on "The Wrecker," WNYC, 4.

On a Sunday Afternoon, with Jane Harvey, Stuart Foster, host Eddie Gallagher and the Russ Case Orchestra, WCBS, 4:30.

Fordham University Lecture: James J. Flynn discusses "Little Known Facts About Presidents," WFUV (FM), 4:30.

Wilfrid Pelletier conducts NBC Summer Symphony in a program of works by Beethoven, Berlioz and Ibert, WNBC, 5.

On the Line, with Bob Considine, with news, views and interviews, WNBC, 6.

Alben W. Barkley and Earl Godwin invite you to "Meet the Veep," WNBC, 6:15.

American Musical Hall in a musical tribute to composer Vincent Youmans, WABC, 7:05.

American Forum: "Is Communism Threatening the Church?" Very Rev. James A. Pike, dean of St. John the Divine, and Rep. Kit Clardy, R., Mich., WNBC, 7:30.

Richard Diamond, Private Detective: Dick Powell in "The Hatpin Case" visits an Oklahoma rancher to solve the mystery of his brother's death, WCBS, 7:30.

Junior Miss, teen-age family comedy series featuring Barbara Whiting, WCBS, 8.

Best Plays: Wendell Corey, Alexander Scourby, Elspeth Eric, Leon Janney, James Westerfield and Mandel Kramer in Sidney Kingsley's "Detective Story," telling of a day in the detective squad-room of a New York precinct police station, WNBC, 8:30.

Guggenheim Memorial Concert, from the Mall in Central Park, WNYC, 8:30.

Escape: "The Thirteenth Truck," story of a famous World War II exploit in which desert commandoes smuggled themselves aboard a German truck to dynamite a Nazi airfield, WCBS, 9:30.

Couchiching Conference on "Defense and Diplomacy." Alister Buchan, Elmer Davis and Edgar McInnis, WNYC, 10.

Robert Q. Lewis plays records and talks with his guest, Sophie Tucker, WCBS, 10.

Alistair Cooke takes his listeners on a "Cooke's Tour" of the U. S., WABC, 10:15.

Walter S. Robertson, Assistant Secretary of State, who was the President's representative at the pre-truce negotiations in Korea, guest on "Meet the Press," WNBC, 10:30.

Fire—a dramatic documentary, WNBC, 11:30.

USIC PROGRAMS ON THE RADIO

Today

ROOM: William Masselos, oist. 9 a. m., WCBS.

as; E minor, G major...Scarlatti

Lune....Debussy

....Hovhaness

E. POWER BIGGS. 9:30, WCBS.

Chorale Preludes....Walther

Three Correnti for Violin and Organ....Uccellini

Chaconne for Violin and Organ (radio premiere)....Sapp

Three Chorale Preludes....Bach

CHARLES MUNCH conducts the Boston Symphony at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood. 2:30, WCBS.

Symphony No. 8 in B minor......Schubert

Prelude and Love Death....Wagner

A Siegfried Idyl....Wagner

Excerpts from Act III, "Die Meistersinger," ....Wagner

OPERA MUSIC. 2:30, WQXR.

Der Freischutz: Overture ....Weber

Peter Grimes: Four Sea Interludes..Britten

SYMPHONY MUSIC. 8:05 WQXR.

Symphony No. 3 in E flat ("Rhenish

GOLDMAN BAND, 8:30, WNYC.

International Accord March..E. F. Goldman

Overture to "Joan of Arc"....Verdi

Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring; Bouree....Bach

Introduction to Act III and Bridal Chorus from "Lohengrin"....Wagner

Overture to "Romeo and Juliet" ....Tchaikovsky

Carnival of Venice ....J. B. Arban

Italian Polka....arr. by Rachmaninov

Illinois March ....

Finale from Symphony No. 4

SERENADE. 8:35. WH

Beatrice and Benedict Overtu

Concerto No. 1 in B Flat M

WEEK'S RADIO CONCERTS

SUNDAY, AUGUST 16, 1953.

TODAY, AUG. 16

9:30-10 A. M., WCBS—DANIEL PINK- organist; Robert Brink, violin- Cambridge, Mass.:

ale Preludes: O God, Give My Sighing; O God, Deal ercifully; Praise to the Almighty King of Cre- ....Walther

r Violin & Organ..Ucellini

or Violin & Organ....Sapp

eludes: Deck Thyself, My th Gladness; In Dulci We All Believe in One ....Bach

M., WHLI—MUSIC HALL:

Algiers, Overture...Rossini

Excerpts) ....Puccini

, Prelude, Act 3 ....

rfly (Aria)....Puccini

e Cammorists..Wolf-Ferrari

ance....de Falla

....Rachmaninoff

he Dwarfs....Grieg

Wish....Chopin-Liszt

Militaire....Chopin

2-3, WHLI—OPERA BITS:

Fra Diavolo: Overture....Auber

La Traviata (aria)....Verdi

Werther: Letter Scene ......Massenet

Cavalleria Rusticana (aria)...Mascagni

Tales of Hoffman: Bacarolle.Offenbach

Louise: Depuis le jour....Charpenteir

Manon Lescaut: Intermezzo....

Madame Butterfly: Love Duet..Puccini

2:30-4, WCBS—WORLD MUSIC FESTIVALS—Boston Symphony Orchestra, at Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Mass.; Charles Munch, conductor; James Fasset, comments:

Symphony No. 8....Schubert

Prelude & Love Death; A Siegfried Idyl; Die Meistersinger (excerpts), Wagner

3-3, WQXR—OPERA FROM THE PIT:

....Weber

Peter Grimes: Sea Interludes..Britten

4:05-5, WQXR—SYMPHONY:

Symphony No. 3 (Rhenish)..Schumann

Piano Concerto No. 1....Chopin

Symphony No. 2....Sibelius

3:30-3:55, WNYC—NEW CHAMBER MUSIC SOCIETY: Paul Wolfe and Fred Manzella, Violinists:

Sonata ....Leclair

Vier Leichte Stucke....Hindemith

Sonatina in C major....Mozart

Vorstiel und Kanon....Bartok

Chacconne ....Auerbt

5, WNBC—NBC SUMMER SYMPHONY; Wilfrid Pelletier, conductor:

Symphony No. 8 in F....Beethoven

Fantastic Symphony: A Ball; March to the Scaffold; Witches' Sabbath, Berlioz

TURE — Janet Schumacher, mezzo-soprano; Betty Fischer, pianist:

Ave Maria; Liebesbotschaft; Der Tod und das Madchen....Schubert

Nicolette ....Ravel

C'est l'extase langoureuse....Debussy

Adieu, forets....Tchaikovsky

Little Red Lark....arr. Fischer

Tell Me Where I'm Goin'...Irish Song

I Heard in Night the Pigeons....arr.

Kerry Dance....Molloy

6:05-7, WQXR—FAMOUS BALLETS: Sleeping Beauty: Prologue, Act II, Tchaikovsky

6:30-7, WCBS — SUMMER IN ST. LOUIS — Priscilla Gillette, soprano; David Poleri, tenor; KMOX Orchestra; Edwin MacArthur, conductor:

Bittersweet (Excerpts) ....Coward

6:30-6:45, WNYC—SONG CLASSICS—Alice Weeks, soprano, Marienka Michna, pianist:

Un moto di gioja....Mozart

Vola Farfalletta ....Chopin-Sandoval

A une fontaine ....Milhaud

A des Oiseaux ....Hue

Mignon: Je suis Titania....Thomas

Mother Dear ....Polish Song

7-8:30, WNYC—MASTERWORK:

Symphony No. 41 ....Mozart

Triple Concerto in C, Symphony No. 8 ....Beethoven

7:05-8, WQXR—SYMPHONY HALL:

Elegiac Melody for Strings....Gruner

Symphonia Domestica ....Strauss

8-8:30, WHLI-FM—MUSIC FROM THE NETHERLANDS:

Concerto for Violin & Orchestra (Theo Olef, violinist; Utrecht Municipal Orchestra) Oscar Van Hemel

---

Cir. (D 57,751) (S 49,376)

This Clipping From

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.
STANDARD-TIMES

AUG 16 1953

FRANCOIS CHARLES-ROUX, French consul-general in Boston, right, makes awards to three outstanding men of Massachusetts. Named chevaliers of the Legion of Honor were, from left, Dr. Edward Churchill, chief of general surgical services at Massachusetts General Hospital; George E. Judd, manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which toured France last year, and Henry R. Shepley, Essex architect.

(Photo Courtesy of Boston Globe)

Cir. (D 113,811) (S 168,042)

This Clipping From

ROCHESTER, N. Y.
DEMOCRAT & CHRONICLE

AUG 16 1953

Summer Music Jottings

Those Outdoor Melodies Linger

By HARVEY W. SOUTHGATE

MUSIC out of doors must be something like a picnic sandwich—it seems tastier to many people when absorbed in the open air with the sky arching overhead and the green meadows rolling into the distance. At least many persons go to outdoor musical events who are not ordinarily seen in the concert halls, and this applies to events where an admission is charged as well as those given for free. All over the country outdoor music seems to be attracting more people, whether under the reliable starlight of California or under the fickle skies of Western New York.

bly there is something human nature that asso the outdoor world with Have not some of our composers turned to na- some of their most in- hemes? Is not musical li filled with moonlight dust and mountains and and lightning? Are not d horns and drums asso- ith the outdoors?

are right, then there is extraordinary about the hat turn out for outdoor including "Opera Under " in Rochester. Not that take the place of the in- cert or opera. The point o many people it is dif- ad being outdoors, seems a special appeal. The n seems clear: We need but more of this attrac- which so many people

for Lincoln College. The program of music, James Fassett, as commentator.

Kay Choral Work Broadcast

remiere performance of

Concerts Today End Berkshire Season

The most successful Berkshire Festival in the 16 summers' concerts have been performed in the hills of Western Massachusetts the 14th since the Boston Symphony Orchestra participated, concludes its activities today with all attendance records shattered.

More than 150,000 music lovers have attended the 15 Festival concerts; the 40 demonstrations of student symphony, chamber music, choral music, opera and study group departments of the Berkshire Music Center (the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony); and Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade" gala, the annual benefit for the school.

The weekend's concluding concerts by the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 6,000-seat Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. are shared by Charles Munch, the symphony's music director, and Leonard Bernstein, who heads the orchestra conducting department of the Berkshire Music Center.

This afternoon Mr. Munch will have Seymour Lipkin, pianist who is assistant to Mr. Bernstein in the summer school's conducting department, and to BSO concertmaster Richard Burgin in its chamber music department, as soloist in the Ravel Concerto for the Left Hand, a Tanglewood premiere.

The portion of the Sunday concert, 2:30 to 4 p. m., will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director

---

Cir. (D 46,046) (S 173,079)

This Clipping From

PROVIDENCE, R. I.
JOURNAL

AUG 16 1953

Will Air Tanglewood's Last Concert of Season

THE last concert of the season at Tanglewood will be broadcast this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, with Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony and three works by Richard Wagner. It will be carried here by WPRO.

The second of three concerts broadcast from the eighth annual Brevard Music Festival at the Transylvania Music Camp, Brevard, N.C., will also be heard on WPRO next Saturday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock.

Details of the week's concerts follow:

TODAY

WPRO—2:30-4 p.m.—World Music Festivals. Charles Munch conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Mass.

Symphony No. 8 in B minor .. Schubert

Prelude and Love Death .... Wagner

A Siegfried Idyl .... Wagner

Excerpts from Act III, "Die Meistersinger" .... Wagner

WJAR—5-6 p.m.—NBC Summer Symphony Orchestra, Wilfrid Pelletier guest conductor.

Symphony No. 8 in F ...... Beethoven

Three Movements from "Fantastic" Symphony ...... Berlioz
"A Ball"
"March to the Scaffold"
"Witches' Sabbath"

Les Escales (Ports of Call) ...... Ibert

WBZ-TV—5-5:30 p.m.—Television Recital Hall, Jeanne Mitchell violin soloist.

Fugue in A .... Tartini-Kreisler

Rondo in G .... Mozart-Kreisler

Ipanema .... Milhaud

Le Printemps .... Milhaud

Ritournel .... Haieff

Vocalise .... Rachmaninoff

La Vide Breve ...... DeFalla-Kreisler

WEAN—8:30-9 p.m.—Enchanted Hour. Henry Weber conducts; Margaret Roberts, soloist.

Selections from 'Woodland Sketches' .... MacDowell

La Morte di Margarita .... Boito

My Johann .... Greig

TOMORROW

WPJB—8:30-10 p.m.—Chautauqua Symphony Orchestra, Louis Krasner is violin soloist.

Overture to 'The Magic Flute' ..Mozart

Symphony No. 7, C Major ....Schubert

Violin Concerto ....Berg

WJAR and WBZ-TV—8:30-9 p.m.—Chorus and orchestra conducted by Howard Barlow. Mildred Miller, mezzo-soprano, is soloist.

S'Wonderful, S'Marvelous ... Gershwin
Chorus and Orchestra

It's a Grand Night for Singing...... .... Rodgers
Miss Miller

Chorus of the Flower Girls from "Samson et Delilah" .....Saint-Saens
Chorus and Orchestra

Printemps qui commence from "Samson et Delilah" .....Saints-Saens
Miss Miller

Angels of Mercy ....Berlin
Miss Miller and Chorus

Ballet Music from "Faust" ....Gounod
Orchestra

In the Still of the Night ....Porter
Miss Miller and Chorus

WJAR—9-9:30 p.m.—Orchestra conducted by Donald Voorhees. Michael Rabin, violin, is soloist.
Rabin, violin, is solist.

Hungarian Dance No. 4. .... Brahms
Orchestra

Sea Shell .... Engel-Arr.-Zimbalist

The Old Refrain .... Kreisler

Etude in Thirds... Scriabin-Arr.-Szigeti
Rabin and Orchestra

Scherzo from "A Midsummer Night's Dream" .... Mendelsoshn
Orchestra

Concerto No. 5 in A Minor-Last Part (Beginning with the cadenza) .... Vieuxtemps
Rabin and Orchestra

SATURDAY

WPRO—4:30-5 p.m.—Brevard Music Festival. James Christian Pfhol conductor.

Academic Festival Overture .... Brahms

Romeo and Juliet .... Tschaikowski

RECORDED CONCERTS

WICE—today at 11 a.m.—Music of the Masters.

'Oberon' overture .... Von Weber
Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra
Wilhelm Furtwangler conducting

Concerto No. 2 in C Minor .... Rachmaninoff
Robin Hood Dell Orchestra
William Steinberg

William Kapell, piano soloist

Mazurkas .... Chopin
Kapell

WPRO—today from 9 to 10 p.m.—Masterworks of Music.

Swan Lake Ballet ...... Tschaikowski
Andre Kostelanetz' Orchestra

Don Juan .... Strauss
New York Philharmonic-Symphony
Bruno Walter conducting

Love Walked In .... Gershwin

Embraceable You .... Gershwin

Variations On I Got Rhythm Gershwin
Dorothy Kirsten, Oscar Levant
Morton Gould's Orchestra

WPTL-fm—today through Saturday, at 9 p.m.—Symphony Hall. Today—Beethoven, Concerto in D Major for violin and orchestra; Mozart, Eine Kleine Nachtmusik. Tomorrow—Mozart, Symphony No. 34 in C Major; Chausson, Concerto in D for Violin, Piano and String Quartet. Tuesday—Delius, Eventyr; R. Strauss, Ein Heldenlehen. Wednesday—Beethoven, Symphony No. 9 in D Minor. Thursday—Saint-Saens, Carnival of the Animals; Gruenberg, Concerto for Violin and Orchestra. Friday—Mehul, Overture to Les Deux Avengles di Toledo; Berlioz, Symphonic Fantastique. Saturday—Haydn, Symphony No. 88 in G Major; Chopin, Concerto No. 1 in E Minor.

WPRO—Friday, 8:30 to 10 p.m. Friday Night Concert. Notes by Morton Blender.

Variations on a Theme by Haydn .... Brahms
Amsterdam Concertgebouw Orchestra
Eduard van Beinum, conductor

Violin Concerto in D Major, Tchaikovsky
Isaac Stern, soloist
Philadelphia Orchestra
Alexander Hillsberg, conductor

Suite: Three Cornered Hat .... DeFalla
London Symphony Orchestra
Enrique Jorda, conductor

Overture: Cyrano De Bergerac, Wagenaar
Utrecht Municipal Orchestra
Paul Hupperts, conductor.

WPJB—Saturday at 2:05 p.m.—At the Opera.

Rigoletto .... Verdi

PASTE OVER

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, SUNDAY, AUGUST 16, 1953

PROGRAM NOTES TODAY

Opera: "Thais," by Massenet, 10:30 a. m.; "Carmen," by Bizet, (FM), 12:05 p. m.; "Fidelio," by en, WOR, 1:30; "Don Giovanni," by Mozart, WQXR, 8:05.

to Learning: Harvey Breit and ite Richards discuss Stendahl's fe of Henri Brulard," WCBS, 11:35.

American Story—Bill Costello in- J. Rafael Oreamuno, Costa Rican ador to the U. S., WCBS, noon.

nal Light: Mark Van Doren and Samuel discuss "Egypt and the of Israel—part 2," in their dia- n Thomas Mann's "Joseph and His s," WNBC, 12:30 p. m.

-Jewish Caravan of Stars, with Oysher, Marlin Sisters, Shoshana n and Georgia Kaye, WMGM, 12:30.

l Out: "Can the Democrats Capture rsey This Year?" Robert B. Meyner, ratic candidate for Governor of N. J., ewed by Earl Mazo, of the Herald ne, and others, WCBS, 1.

: Yankees-Athletics, WINS, 1; Phil- iants, WMCA, 1:55; Pirates-Dodgers, M, 2. All are doubleheaders.

S. Riegelman, Republican candidate ayor, is today's guest on "Citizen's Searchlight," WNBC, 1:30.

Hour celebrates the fiftieth anni- of Papal pronouncement on sacred with choral groups, WNBC, 2.

unday Afternoon—String Serenade, cted by Alfredo Antonini, WCBS, 2.

Munch conducts the Boston Sym- in a concert at the Berkshire Festi- Tanglewood, WCBS, 2:30.

per and public opinion, WNBC, 2:45.

Large—Leon Pearson's views on books and entertainment, WNBC, 3.

of Books with a survey of the writ- Mark Twain, WNBC, 3:15.

lantic Briefing—five-way conversa- mong correspondents stationed in apitals of the world, WNBC, 3:30.

d Bowl Concert—Arthur Fiedler ts; duo-pianists Morley and Gear- e guest artists, WNBC, 4.

heater: Robert Louis Stevenson's Mystery of the Empty Ship," pt. 3, based on "The Wrecker," WNYC, 4.

On a Sunday Afternoon, with Jane Harvey, Stuart Foster, host Eddie Gallagher and the Russ Case Orchestra, WCBS, 4:30.

Fordham University Lecture: James J. Flynn discusses "Little Known Facts About Presidents," WFUV (FM), 4:30.

Wilfrid Pelletier conducts NBC Summer Symphony in a program of works by Beethoven, Berlioz and Ibert, WNBC, 5.

On the Line, with Bob Considine, with news, views and interviews, WNBC, 6.

Alben W. Barkley and Earl Godwin invite you to "Meet the Veep," WNBC, 6:15.

American Musical Hall in a musical tribute to composer Vincent Youmans, WABC, 7:05.

American Forum: "Is Communism Threatening the Church?" Very Rev. James A. Pike, dean of St. John the Divine, and Rep. Kit Clardy, R., Mich., WNBC, 7:30.

Richard Diamond, Private Detective: Dick Powell in "The Hatpin Case" visits an Oklahoma rancher to solve the mystery of his brother's death, WCBS, 7:30.

Junior Miss, teen-age family comedy series featuring Barbara Whiting, WCBS, 8.

Best Plays: Wendell Corey, Alexander Scourby, Elspeth Eric, Leon Janney, James Westerfield and Mandel Kramer in Sidney Kingsley's "Detective Story," telling of a day in the detective squad-room of a New York precinct police station, WNBC, 8:30.

Guggenheim Memorial Concert, from the Mall in Central Park, WNYC, 8:30.

Escape: "The Thirteenth Truck," story of a famous World War II exploit in which desert commandoes smuggled themselves aboard a German truck to dynamite a Nazi airfield, WCBS, 9:30.

Couchiching Conference on "Defense and Diplomacy." Alister Buchan, Elmer Davis and Edgar McInnis, WNYC, 10.

Robert Q. Lewis plays records and talks with his guest, Sophie Tucker, WCBS, 10.

Alistair Cooke takes his listeners on a "Cooke's Tour" of the U. S., WABC, 10:15.

Walter S. Robertson, Assistant Secretary of State, who was the President's representative at the pre-truce negotiations in Korea, guest on "Meet the Press," WNBC, 10:30.

Fire—a dramatic documentary, WNBC, 11:30.

Cir. (D 57,751) (S 49,376)

This Clipping From
NEW BEDFORD, MASS.
STANDARD-TIMES

AUG 16 1953

FRANCOIS CHARLES-ROUX, French consul-general in Boston; right, makes awards to three outstanding men of Massachusetts. Named chevaliers of the Legion of Honor were, from left, Dr. Edward Churchill, chief of general surgical services at Massachusetts General Hospital; George E. Judd, manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which toured France last year, and Henry R. Shepley, Essex architect.
(Photo Courtesy of Boston Globe)

USIC PROGRAMS ON THE RADIO

Today

ROOM: William Masselos, oist. 9 a. m., WCBS.
as; E minor, G major ... Scarlatti
de Lune ... Debussy
... Hovhaness

E. POWER BIGGS. 9:30, WCBS.
Chorale Preludes ... Walther
Three Correnti for Violin and Organ ... Uccellini
Chaconne for Violin and Organ (radio premiere) ... Sapp
Three Chorale Preludes ... Bach

CHARLES MUNCH conducts the Boston Symphony at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood. 2:30, WCBS.
Symphony No. 8 in B minor ... Schubert
Prelude and Love Death ... Wagner
A Siegfried Idyl ... Wagner
Excerpts from Act III, "Die Meistersinger," ... Wagner

OPERA MUSIC. 2:30, WQXR.
Der Freischutz: Overture ... Weber
Peter Grimes: Four Sea Interludes .. Britten

SYMPHONY MUSIC. 3:05, WQXR.
Symphony No. 3 in E flat ("Rhenish

GOLDMAN BAND, 8:30, WNYC.
International Accord March ... E. F. Goldman
Overture to "Joan of Arc" ... Verdi
Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring; Bouree .... Bach
Introduction to Act III and Bridal Chorus from "Lohengrin" ... Wagner
Overture to "Romeo and Juliet" ... Tchaikovsky
Carnival of Venice ... J. B. Arban
Italian Polka ... arr. by Rachmaninov
Illinois March ...
Finale from Symphony No. 4

SERENADE. 8:35. WH
Beatrice and Benedict Overtu
Concerto No. 1 in B Flat M

WEEK'S RADIO CONCERTS

NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, AUGUST 16, 1953

TODAY, AUG. 16

9:30-10 A. M., WCBS—DANIEL PINK- organist; Robert Brink, violin- Cambridge, Mass.:
ale Preludes: O God, Give My Sighing; O God, Deal ercifully; Praise to the e Almighty King of Cre- ... Walther
r Violin & Organ .. Ucellini
or Violin & Organ. .. Sapp
eludes: Deck Thyself, My th Gladness; In Dulci We All Believe in One ... Bach
M., WHLI—MUSIC HALL:
Algiers, Overture ... Rossini
Excerpts) ... Puccini
, Prelude, Act 3 ...
rfly (Aria) ... Puccini
e Cammorists .. Wolf-Ferrari nce ... de Falla
... Rachmaninoff
he Dwarfs ... Grieg
Wish ... Chopin-Liszt
Militaire ... Chopin
, WFUV—AT THE OPERA:
... Bizet
R — ZINO FRANCESCATTI
minor ... Vitali
20 in D; No. 21 in A ... Paganini
... Ravel
YC—BROOKLYN MUSEUM Marienka Michna, Pianist; er, Violinist; with Leopold ccompanist:
major ... Bach
West Wind Saw; Nocturne, ... Debussy ashore ... Smetana minor ... Albinoni
D for Violin ... Prokofieff
iolin & Piano: Waltz, ... Britten orme de Habanera ... Ravel
4: Chaconne ... Bach
Nocturne, C sharp minor ... Chopin
Caprice No. 24 ... Paganini

2-3, WHLI—OPERA BITS:
Fra Diavolo: Overture ... Auber
La Traviata (aria) ... Verdi
Werther: Letter Scene ... Massenet
Cavalleria Rusticana (aria) ... Mascagni
Tales of Hoffman: Bacarolle. Offenbach
Louise: Depuis le jour ... Charpenteir
Manon Lescaut: Intermezzo ...
Madame Butterfly: Love Duet .. Puccini
2:30-4, WCBS—WORLD MUSIC FESTIVALS—Boston Symphony Orchestra, at Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Mass.; Charles Munch, conductor; James Fasset, comments:
Symphony No. 8 ... Schubert
Prelude & Love Death; A Siegfried Idyl; Die Meistersinger (excerpts), ... Wagner
2:30-3, WQXR—OPERA FROM THE PIT:
Der Freischutz: Overture ... Weber
Peter Grimes: Sea Interludes .. Britten
3:05-5, WQXR—SYMPHONY:
Symphony No. 3 (Rhenish) .. Schumann
Piano Concerto No. 1 ... Chopin
Symphony No. 2 ... Sibelius
3:30-3:55, WNYC—NEW CHAMBER MUSIC SOCIETY: Paul Wolfe and Fred Manzella, Violinists:
Sonata ... Leclair
Vier Leichte Stucke ... Hindemith
Sonatina in C major ... Mozart
Vorstiel und Kanon ... Bartok
Chacconne ... Auerbt
5-6, WNBC—NBC SUMMER SYMPHONY; Wilfrid Pelletier, conductor:
Symphony No. 8 in F ... Beethoven
Fantastic Symphony: A Ball; March to the Scaffold; Witches' Sabbath, ... Berlioz
Les Escales (Ports of Call) ... Ibert
5-6, WNYC— RANDOLPH:
Clarinet Con ... Mozart
Der Hirt auf dem Felsen ... Schubert
Clarinet Trio, Op. 114 ... Brahms
Rhapsody, No. 1 ... Debussy
5:05-5:30, WQXR—CONCERT HALL:
Trumpet Voluntary .. Clarke-Stokowski
Larghetto—Horn & Orchestra. Chabrier
Die Meistersinger: Prelude ...
5:30-6, WFUV—CONCERT

TURE — Janet Schumacher, mezzo-soprano; Betty Fischer, pianist:
Ave Maria; Liebesbotschaft; Der Tod und das Madchen ... Schubert
Nicolette ... Ravel
C'est l'extase langoureuse ... Debussy
Adieu, forets ... Tchaikovsky
Little Red Lark ... arr. Fischer
Where I'm Goin' ... Irish Song
I Heard in Night the Pigeons ... arr.
Kerry Dance ... Molloy
6:05-7, WQXR—FAMOUS BALLETS:
Sleeping Beauty: Prologue, Act II, ... Tchaikovsky
6:30-7, WCBS — SUMMER IN ST. LOUIS — Priscilla Gillette, soprano; David Poleri, tenor; KMOX Orchestra; Edwin MacArthur, conductor:
Bittersweet (Excerpts) ... Coward
6:30-6:45, WNYC—SONG CLASSICS— Weeks, soprano, Marienka Michna, pianist:
Un moto di gioja ... Mozart
Vola Farfalletta ... Chopin-Sandoval
A une fontaine ... Milhaud
A des Oiseaux ... Hue
Mignon: Je suis Titania ... Thomas
Mother Dear ... Polish Song
7-8:30, WNYC—MASTERWORK:
Symphony No. 41 ... Mozart
Triple Concerto in C, Symphony No. 8 ... Beethoven
7:05-8, WQXR—SYMPHONY HALL:
Elegiac Melody for Strings ... Gruner
Symphonia Domestica ... Strauss
8-8:30, WHLI-FM—MUSIC FROM THE NETHERLANDS:
Concerto for Violin & Orchestra (Theo Olef, violinist; Utrecht Municipal Orchestra) ... Oscar Van Hemel
8:05-10, WQXR—OPERA HOUSE:
Don Giovanni (Part II) ... Mozart
8:30-10, WNYC (To 10:30 on FM) — GUGGENHEIM MEMORIAL CONCERT —The Goldman Band; Edwin Franko Goldman, conductor; James Burke, cornet soloist, from Central Park:
International Accord ... Goldman
: Overture ... Verdi

Cir. (D 113,811) (S 168,042)

This Clipping From
ROCHESTER, N. Y.
DEMOCRAT & CHRONICLE

AUG 16 1953

Summer Music Jottings

Those Outdoor Melodies Linger

By HARVEY W. SOUTHGATE

MUSIC out of doors must be something like a picnic sandwich—it seems tastier to many people when absorbed in the open air with the sky arching overhead and the green meadows rolling into the distance. At least many persons go to outdoor musical events who are not ordinarily seen in the concert halls, and this applies to events where an admission is charged as well as those given for free. All over the country outdoor music seems to be attracting more people, whether under the reliable starlight of California or under the fickle skies of Western New York.

Possibly there is something deep in human nature that associates the outdoor world with music. Have not some of our greatest composers turned to nature for some of their most inspired themes? Is not musical literature filled with moonlight and stardust and mountains and thunder and lightning? Are not pipes and horns and drums associated with the outdoors?

If we are right, then there is nothing extraordinary about the ds that turn out for outdoor including "Opera Under " in Rochester. Not that take the place of the in- cert or opera. The point o many people it is dif- nd being outdoors, seems a special appeal. The n seems clear: We need but more of this attrac- which so many people

Kay Choral Work Broadcast

emiere performance of for Lincoln College. The program also will feature the presentation of honorary degrees to Thomas, author of the b biography "Abraham and to Carl Haverlin, Kay's work is dedicate the nation's outstandi and Civil War author

Biggest Chau Season Ne

Chautauqua its final two recreational emphasis

Symph weekly Tuesd day vo ay's "Tanglewood on Pa e" gala, the annual benefit for the school.

The weekend's concluding concerts by the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 6,000-seat Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. are shared by Charles Munch, the symphony's music director, and Leonard Bernstein, who heads the orchestra conducting department of the Berkshire Music Center.

This afternoon Mr. Munch will have Seymour Lipkin, pianist who is assistant to Mr. Bernstein in the summer school's conducting department, and to BSO concertmaster Richard Burgin in its chamber music department, as soloist in the Ravel Concerto for the Left Hand, a Tanglewood premiere.

The portion of the Sunday concert, 2:30 to 4 p. m., will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as commentator.

Freedom's Bo

THE NEGRO IN TH WAR, by Benj 379 pages. L

Bi on W noon at

Details o follow:

TODA

WPRO—2:30-4 p.m.—Wo vals. Charles Munch cond ton Symphony Orchestra at shire Festival, Tanglewood, Symphony No. 8 in B minor ..
Prelude and Love Death ....
A Siegfried Idyl ... Wagner
Excerpts from Act III, "Die Meistersinger" ... Wagner
WJAR—5-6 p.m.—NBC Summer Symphony Orchestra, Wilfrid Pelletier guest conductor.
Symphony No. 8 in F ... Beethoven
Three Movements from "Fantastic" Symphony ... Berlioz
"A Ball"
"March to the Scaffold"
"Witches' Sabbath"
Les Escales (Ports of Call) ... Ibert
WBZ-TV—5-5:30 p.m.—Television Recital Hall, Jeanne Mitchell violin soloist.
Fugue in A ... Tartini-Kreisler
Rondo in G ... Mozart-Kreisler
Ipanema ... Milhaud
Le Printemps ... Milhaud
Ritournel ... Haieff
Vocalise ... Rachmaninoff
La Vide Breve ... DeFalla-Kreisler
WEAN—8:30-9 p.m.—Enchanted Hour. Henry Weber conducts; Margaret Roberts, soloist.
Selections from 'Woodland Sketches' ... MacDowell

mbalist
Kreisler
rr.-Szigeti Dream"
Mendelsoshn
Concerto Minor-Last Part (Beginning the cadenza) ... Vieuxtemps
Rabin and Orchestra

SATURDAY

WPRO—4:30-5 p.m.—Brevard Music Festival. James Christian Pfhol conductor.
Academic Festival Overture ... Brahms
Romeo and Juliet ... Tschaikowski

RECORDED CONCERTS

WICE—today at 11 a.m.—Music of the Masters.
'Oberon' overture ... Von Weber
Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra
Wilhelm Furtwangler conducting
Concerto No. 2 in C Minor ... Rachmaninoff
Robin Hood Dell Orchestra
William Stei

Eine ow—Mo- C Major; D for Violin, Quartet, Tuesday— R. Strauss, Ein Hel- dnesday—Beethoven, Sym- 9 in D Minor, Thursday— -Saens, Carnival of the Animals; Gruenberg, Concerto for Violin and Orchestra. Friday—Mehul, Overture to Les Deux Avengles di Toledo; Berlioz, Symphonic Fantastique. Saturday—Haydn, Symphony No. 88 in G Major; Chopin, Concerto No. 1 in E Minor.

WPRO—Friday, 8:30 to 10 p.m. Friday Night Concert. Notes by Morton Blender.
Variations on a Theme by Haydn ... Brahms
Amsterdam Concertgebouw Orchestra
Eduard van Beinum, conductor
Violin Concerto in D Major. Tchaikovsky
Isaac Stern, soloist
Philadelphia Orchestra
Alexander Hillsberg, conductor
Suite: Three Cornered Hat ... DeFalla
London Symphony Orchestra
Enrique Jorda, conductor
Overture: Cyrano De Bergerac, Wagenaar
Utrecht Municipal Orchestra
Paul Hupperts, conductor
WPJB—Saturday at 2:05 p.m.—At the Opera.
Rigoletto ... Verdi

[216]

PASTE OVER

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, SUNDAY, AUGUST 16, 1953

PROGRAM NOTES TODAY

Opera: "Thais," by Massenet, 10:30 a. m.; "Carmen," by Bizet, (FM), 12:05 p. m.; "Fidelio," by en, WOR, 1:30; "Don Giovanni," y Mozart, WQXR, 8:05.

to Learning: Harvey Breit and ite Richards discuss Stendahl's fe of Henri Brulard," WCBS, 11:35.

American Story—Bill Costello in- J. Rafael Oreamuno, Costa Rican ador to the U. S., WCBS, noon.

nal Light: Mark Van Doren and Samuel discuss "Egypt and the of Israel—part 2," in their dia- n Thomas Mann's "Joseph and His s," WNBC, 12:30 p. m.

-Jewish Caravan of Stars, with Oysher, Marlin Sisters, Shoshana n and Georgia Kaye, WMGM, 12:30.

l Out: "Can the Democrats Capture rsey This Year?" Robert B. Meyner, ratic candidate for Governor of N. J., ewed by Earl Mazo, of the Herald e, and others, WCBS, 1.

: Yankees-Athletics, WINS, 1; Phil- ants, WMCA, 1:55; Pirates-Dodgers, M, 2. All are doubleheaders.

S. Riegelman, Republican candidate ayor, is today's guest on "Citizen's Searchlight," WNBC, 1:30.

Hour celebrates the fiftieth anni- of Papal pronouncement on sacred with choral groups, WNBC, 2.

unday Afternoon—String Serenade, cted by Alfredo Antonini, WCBS, 2.

Munch conducts the Boston Sym- in a concert at the Berkshire Festi- Tanglewood, WCBS, 2:30.

per and public opinion, WNBC, 2:45.

Large—Leon Pearson's views on books and entertainment, WNBC, 3.

of Books with a survey of the writ- Mark Twain, WNBC, 3:15.

lantic Briefing—five-way conversa- mong correspondents stationed in apitals of the world, WNBC, 3:30.

d Bowl Concert—Arthur Fiedler ts; duo-pianists Morley and Gear- e guest artists, WNBC, 4.

heater: Robert Louis Stevenson's Mystery of the Empty Ship," pt. 3, based on "The Wrecker," WNYC, 4.

On a Sunday Afternoon, with Jane Harvey, Stuart Foster, host Eddie Gallagher and the Russ Case Orchestra, WCBS, 4:30.

Fordham University Lecture: James J. Flynn discusses "Little Known Facts About Presidents," WFUV (FM), 4:30.

Wilfrid Pelletier conducts NBC Summer Symphony in a program of works by Beethoven, Berlioz and Ibert, WNBC, 5.

On the Line, with Bob Considine, with news, views and interviews, WNBC, 6.

Alben W. Barkley and Earl Godwin invite you to "Meet the Veep," WNBC, 6:15.

American Musical Hall in a musical tribute to composer Vincent Youmans, WABC, 7:05.

American Forum: "Is Communism Threatening the Church?" Very Rev. James A. Pike, dean of St. John the Divine, and Rep. Kit Clardy, R., Mich., WNBC, 7:30.

Richard Diamond, Private Detective: Dick Powell in "The Hatpin Case" visits an Oklahoma rancher to solve the mystery of his brother's death, WCBS, 7:30.

Junior Miss, teen-age family comedy series featuring Barbara Whiting, WCBS, 8.

Best Plays: Wendell Corey, Alexander Scourby, Elspeth Eric, Leon Janney, James Westerfield and Mandel Kramer in Sidney Kingsley's "Detective Story," telling of a day in the detective squad-room of a New York precinct police station, WNBC, 8:30.

Guggenheim Memorial Concert, from the Mall in Central Park, WNYC, 8:30.

Escape: "The Thirteenth Truck," story of a famous World War II exploit in which desert commandoes smuggled themselves aboard a German truck to dynamite a Nazi airfield, WCBS, 9:30.

Couchiching Conference on "Defense and Diplomacy." Alister Buchan, Elmer Davis and Edgar McInnis, WNYC, 10.

Robert Q. Lewis plays records and talks with his guest, Sophie Tucker, WCBS, 10.

Alistair Cooke takes his listeners on a "Cooke's Tour" of the U. S., WABC, 10:15.

Walter S. Robertson, Assistant Secretary of State, who was the President's representative at the pre-truce negotiations in Korea, guest on "Meet the Press," WNBC, 10:30.

Fire—a dramatic documentary, WNBC, 11:30.

Cir. (D 57,751) (S 49,376)

This Clipping From
NEW BEDFORD, MASS.
STANDARD-TIMES

AUG 16 1953

FRANCOIS CHARLES-ROUX, French consul-general in Boston, right, makes awards to three outstanding men of Massachusetts. Named chevaliers of the Legion of Honor were, from left, Dr. Edward Churchill, chief of general surgical services at Massachusetts General Hospital; George E. Judd, manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which toured France last year, and Henry R. Shepley, Essex architect.
(Photo Courtesy of Boston Globe)

USIC PROGRAMS ON THE RADIO

Today

ROOM: William Masselos, oist. 9 a. m., WCBS.
s; E minor, G major...Scarlatti
Lune...Debussy
...Hovhaness

E. POWER BIGGS. 9:30, WCBS.
Chorale Preludes...Walther
Three Correnti for Violin and Organ...Uccellini
Chaconne for Violin and Organ (radio premiere)...Sapp
Three Chorale Preludes...Bach

SERENADE. 10:30, WFUV.
Selections...Kreisler
Waltzes...Strauss

MR. & MRS. OPERA. 10:30, WNYC.
Thais...Massenet

MUSIC HALL. 11, WHLI.
Overture to "Italians in Algiers"...Rossini
Love and Music from "La Tosca"...Puccini
Prelude to Act 3 from "La Traviata"..Verdi
Ancora Un Passo or Via from "Mme Butterfly"...Puccini
Dance of the Cammorists from "Jewels of the Madonna"....Wolf-Ferrari
Spanish Dance from "La Vida Breve"...De Falla
Polka De W. R...Rachmaninov
March of the Dwarfs...Grieg
The Maiden's Wish...Chopin-Liszt
Polonaise Militaire in A major...Chopin

SALT LAKE CHOIR. 11, WCBS.
Allelula...Mozart
Oh God Thy Bounty Reaches Wide...Beethoven-Holmes
Shepherd, Lead Me...Miles
The Morning Breaks...Careless
Achieved Is the Glorious Work...Haydn
Concerto to the Cuckoo and Nightingale...Handel ic Interlude...Schreiner

RENCH MUSIC. Noon, WNYC.
ere des Saints
...Henry Barraud

BOX. 12:05, WFUV.
...Bizet

MUSEUM: Marienka Irving Becker, vio-
...Bach
...Debussy
...Smetana
..Albinoni
rckofiev tter

CHARLES MUNCH conducts the Boston Symphony at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood. 2:30, WCBS.
Symphony No. 8 in B minor...Schubert
Prelude and Love Death...Wagner
A Siegfried Idyl...Wagner
Excerpts from Act III, "Die Meistersinger,"...Wagner

OPERA MUSIC. 2:30, WQXR.
Der Freischutz: Overture...Weber
Peter Grimes: Four Sea Interludes..Britten

SYMPHONY MUSIC. 3:05, WQXR.
Symphony No. 3 in E flat ("Rhenish")...Schumann
Piano Concerto No. 1 in E minor...Chopin
Symphony No. 2 in D...Sibelius

NEW CHAMBER MUSIC SOCIETY: Paul Wolfe and Fred Manzella, violinists. 3:30, WNYC.
Sonata...Leclair
Vier Leichte Stucke...Hindemith
Sonatina in C major...Mozart
Vorstiel und Kanon...Bartok
Chaconne...Aubert

WILFRID PELLETIER conducts the NBC Summer Symphony. 5, WNBC.
Symphony No. 8 in F...Beethoven
Three Movements from "Fantastic" Symphony...Berlioz
Les Escales...Ibert

RANDOLPH CONCERT. 5, WNYC.
Clarinet Concerto...Mozart
Der Hirt auf dem Felsen...Schubert
Clarinet Trio, Op. 114...Brahms
Rhapsody, No. 1...Debussy

CONCERT HALL. 5:05, WQXR.
Trumpet Voluntary...Clarke-Stokowski
Larghetto for Horn and Orchestra..Chabrier
"Die Meistersinger": Prelude...Wagner

MINIATURE. 5:30, WFUV.
Ave Maria...Schubert
Liebesbotschaft...Schubert
Der Tod und das Madchen...Schubert
Nicolette...Ravel
C'est l'extase langoureuse...Debussy
Adieu, forets...Tchaikovsky
The Little Red Lark...arr. Fischer
I Know Where I'm Goin'....Country Antrim
I Heard in the Night the Pigeons, arr. Fischer
The Kerry Dance...Molloy

FAMOUS BALLETS. 6:05, WQXR.
The Sleeping Beauty...Tchaikovsky

SONG CLASSICS: Anne Weeks, soprano. 6:30, WNYC.
Un moto di gioa...Mozart
Vola Farfalletta...Chopin-Sandoval
A une fontaine...Milhaud
A des Oiseaux...Hue
Je suis Titania, from "Mignon"....Thomas
Mother Dear...Polish folk song

RECORDED MUSIC. 7, WNYC.
ony No. 41...Mozart
ncerto in C...Beethoven
No. 8...Beethoven

NY HALL. 7:05, WQXR.
for Strings....Gruner-Hegge
tica...Richard Strauss

S MUSIC. 8, WHLI-
Orchestra
Van Hemel

GOLDMAN BAND. 8:30, WNYC.
International Accord March..E. F. Goldman
Overture to "Joan of Arc"...Verdi
Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring; Bouree....Bach
Introduction to Act III and Bridal Chorus from "Lohengrin"...Wagner
Overture to "Romeo and Juliet"...Tchaikovsky
Carnival of Venice...J. B. Arban
Italian Polka...arr. by Rachmaninov
Illinois March
Finale from Symphony No. 4

SERENADE. 8:35. WH
Beatrice and Benedict Overtu
Concerto No. 1 in B Flat M
movement
Classical Symphony in D Maj
Scherzo Capriccioso Op.66
Emporer Waltz

ETELKA FREUND, pi WNYC-FM.
Organ — Chorale — Prelude Thee, Lord"—transcribed fo Busoni
Sonata, Op. 10, No. 3 in D Ma

CHAMBER MUSIC. 11,
Symphonic Etudes
Quartet No. 2

WORLD OF MUSIC. 11
Violin Concerto in G Minor.
Suite for Orchestra, Op. 19.

CITY SLEEPS. 12 m.,
Magnificat

AT MIDNIGHT. 12:05
Symphony No. 6 in F ("Pastor
My Country: The Moldau

Monday

NOON CONCERT. 12
L'Arlesienne Suite No. 1
Belshazzar's Feast

MUSIC THAT LIVES. 2, WH
Symphony No. 41 in C major...Mo
Symphony No. 99 in E flat major...Ha

BALLET MUSIC. 5, WNYC.
Les Biches...Poulenc

GUIOMAR NOVAES, piano. WNYC.
Symphony in B Flat...Chausson
Piano Concerto No. 2...Chopin
Billy the Kid: Ballet Music...Copland

SERENADE. 8, WHLI-FM.
Overture to "An Italian Comedy"..Benjamin
Concerto No. 2 in D Minor...Wieniawski
Poeme d'Extase Op. 54...Scriabin
Cagliostro Waltz...Strauss

SYMPHONY HALL. 8:05, WQXR.
The Ruler of the Spirits: Overture..Weber
Symphony No. 3 in D ("Polish")...Tchaikovsky

MILDRED MILLER, soprano, 8:30, WNBC.
S'Wonderful, S'Marvelous...Gershwin
It's a Grand Night for Singing....Rodgers
Chorus of the Flower Girls from "Samson et Delilah"...Saint-Saens
Printemps qui commence from "Samson et Delilah"...Saint-Saens
Angels of Mercy...Berlin
Ballet Music from "Faust"...Gounod
In the Still of the Night...Porter

CHAMBER MUSIC on Washington Square. 9, WNYC.
Concerto Grosso in D Minor...Vivaldi

Cir. (D 113,811) (S 168,042)

This Clipping From
ROCHESTER, N. Y.
DEMOCRAT & CHRONICLE

AUG 16 1953

Summer Music Jottings

Those Outdoor Melodies Linger

RVEY W. SOUTHGATE

out of doors must be like a picnic sand- tastier to many orbed in the open rching overhead adows rolling least many or musical ordinarily and this n ad those un-

for Lincoln College. The program

of music, James Fassett, as commentator.

Concerts Today End Berkshire Season

The most successful Berkshire Festival in the 16 summers' concerts have been performed in the hills of Western Massachusetts the 14th since the Boston Symphony Orchestra participated, concludes its activities today with all attendance records shattered.

More than 150,000 music lovers have attended the 15 Festival concerts; the 40 demonstrations of student symphony, chamber music, choral music, opera and y group departments of the hire Music Center (the sum hool of music maintained Boston Symphony); and "Tanglewood on Pa he annual benefit for

's concluding con- 104-piece Boston ra in the 6,000- nglewood, shared by ymphony's Leonard orches- of the will ot

r- part- Ravel Hand, a e.

the Sunday con- 4 p. m., will be ationally by CBS Ra- the network's director

---

WNYC 830 KC
WNYC-FM 93.9 MEG.
MONDAY THRU FRIDAY FOR TWO WEEKS STARTING AUGUST 17th At 2:00 PM
Based on the Recordings Originally Prepared for The U.S. Armed Forces Now Available in HO SPOKEN

Symphony

SCHUMANN
Symphony No. 3 in E flat ("Rhenish")
Bruno Walter conducts the New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra.

CHOPIN
Piano Concerto No. 1 in E minor
Artur Rubinstein, soloist, with the London Symphony Orchestra, Sir John Barbirolli conducting.

SIBELIUS
Symphony No. 2 in D
Performed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Serge Koussevitzky.

WQXR
1560 on AM dial
Radio Station

Details of follow:

TOD

WPRO—2:30-4 p.m.—W vals. Charles Munch co ton Symphony Orchestra shire Festival, Tanglewoo
Symphony No. 8 in B minor
Prelude and Love Death
A Siegfried Idyl
Excerpts from Act III, "Die Meistersinger"...Wa

WJAR—5-6 p.m.—NBC Summer Symphony Orchestra, Wilfrid Pelletier guest conductor.
Symphony No. 8 in F ...... Beethoven
Three Movements from "Fantastic" Symphony ...... Berlioz
"A Ball"
"March to the Scaffold"
"Witches' Sabbath"
Les Escales (Ports of Call) ...... Ibert

WBZ-TV—5-5:30 p.m.—Television Recital Hall, Jeanne Mitchell violin soloist.
Fugue in A .... Tartini-Kreisler
Rondo in G .... Mozart-Kreisler
Ipanema .... Milhaud
Le Printemps .... Milhaud
Ritournel .... Haieff
Vocalise .... Rachmaninoff
La Vide Breve ...... DeFalla-Kreisler

WEAN—8:30-9 p.m.—Enchanted Hour. Henry Weber conducts; Margaret Roberts, soloist.
Selections from 'Woodland Sketches'... .... MacDowell

rahms
-Zimbalist
Kreisler
n-Arr.-Szigeti
estra
t's Dream"
..... Mendelssohn
estra
n A Minor-Last Part with the cadenza)
..... Vieuxtemps
abin and Orchestra

SATURDAY

WPRO—4:30-5 p.m.—Brevard Music Festival. James Christian Pfhol conductor.
Academic Festival Overture .... Brahms
Romeo and Juliet .... Tschaikowski

RECORDED CONCERTS

WICE—today at 11 a.m.—Music of the Masters.
'Oberon' overture .... Von Weber
Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra
Wilhelm Furtwangler conducting
Concerto No. 2 in C Minor .... Rachmaninoff
Robin Hood Dell Orchestra
William Steinberg

violin and Friday—Mehul, Overture to Les Deux Avengles di Toledo; Berlioz, Symphonic Fantastique. Saturday—Haydn, Symphony No. 88 in G Major; Chopin, Concerto No. 1 in E Minor.

WPRO—Friday, 8:30 to 10 p.m. Friday Night Concert. Notes by Morton Blender.
Variations on a Theme by Haydn .... Brahms
Amsterdam Concertgebouw Orchestra
Eduard van Beinum, conductor
Violin Concerto in D Major, Tchaikovsky
Isaac Stern, soloist
Philadelphia Orchestra
Alexander Hillsberg, conductor
Suite: Three Cornered Hat .... DeFalla
London Symphony Orchestra
Enrique Jorda, conductor
Overture: Cyrano De Bergerac, Wagenaar
Utrecht Municipal Orchestra
Paul Hupperts, conductor.

WPJB—Saturday at 2:05 p.m.—At the Opera.
Rigoletto .... Verdi

PASTE OVER

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, SUNDAY, AUGUST 16, 1

PROGRAM NOTES TODAY

Recorded Opera: "Thais," by Massenet, WNYC, 10:30 a. m.; "Carmen," by Bizet, WFUV (FM), 12:05 p. m.; "Fidelio," by Beethoven, WOR, 1:30; "Don Giovanni," part 2, by Mozart, WQXR, 8:05.

Invitation to Learning: Harvey Breit and Marguerite Richards discuss Stendahl's "The Life of Henri Brulard," WCBS, 11:35.

The Latin American Story—Bill Costello interviews J. Rafael Oreamuno, Costa Rican Ambassador to the U. S., WCBS, noon.

The Eternal Light: Mark Van Doren and Maurice Samuel discuss "Egypt and the Destiny of Israel—part 2," in their dialogues on Thomas Mann's "Joseph and His Brothers," WNBC, 12:30 p. m.

American-Jewish Caravan of Stars, with Moishe Oysher, Marlin Sisters, Shoshana Shoshan and Georgia Kaye, WMGM, 12:30.

Let's Find Out: "Can the Democrats Capture New Jersey This Year?" Robert B. Meyner, Democratic candidate for Governor of N. J., interviewed by Earl Mazo, of the Herald Tribune, and others, WCBS, 1.

Baseball: Yankees-Athletics, WINS, 1; Phillies-Giants, WMCA, 1:55; Pirates-Dodgers, WMGM, 2. All are doubleheaders.

Harold S. Riegelman, Republican candidate for Mayor, is today's guest on "Citizen's Union Searchlight," WNBC, 1:30.

Catholic Hour celebrates the fiftieth anniversary of Papal pronouncement on sacred music, with choral groups, WNBC, 2.

On a Sunday Afternoon—String Serenade, conducted by Alfredo Antonini, WCBS, 2.

Charles Munch conducts the Boston Symphony in a concert at the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, WCBS, 2:30.

Elmo Roper and public opinion, WNBC, 2:45.

Critic at Large—Leon Pearson's views on plays, books and entertainment, WNBC, 3.

Carnival of Books with a survey of the writings of Mark Twain, WNBC, 3:15.

Trans-Atlantic Briefing—five-way conversation among correspondents stationed in news capitals of the world, WNBC, 3:30.

Hollywood Bowl Concert—Arthur Fiedler conducts; duo-pianists Morley and Gearhart are guest artists, WNBC, 4.

World Theater: Robert Louis Stevenson's "The Mystery of the Empty Ship," pt. 3, based on "The Wrecker," WNYC, 4.

On a Sunday Afternoon, with Jane Harvey, Stuart Foster, host Eddie Gallagher and the Russ Case Orchestra, WCBS, 4:30.

Fordham University Lecture: James J. Flynn discusses "Little Known Facts About Presidents," WFUV (FM), 4:30.

Wilfrid Pelletier conducts NBC Summer Symphony in a program of works by Beethoven, Berlioz and Ibert, WNBC, 5.

On the Line, with Bob Considine, with news, views and interviews, WNBC, 6.

Alben W. Barkley and Earl Godwin invite you to "Meet the Veep," WNBC, 6:15.

American Musical Hall in a musical tribute to composer Vincent Youmans, WABC, 7:05.

American Forum: "Is Communism Threatening the Church?" Very Rev. James A. Pike, dean of St. John the Divine, and Rep. Kit Clardy, R., Mich., WNBC, 7:30.

Richard Diamond, Private Detective: Dick Powell in "The Hatpin Case" visits an Oklahoma rancher to solve the mystery of his brother's death, WCBS, 7:30.

Junior Miss, teen-age family comedy series featuring Barbara Whiting, WCBS, 8.

Best Plays: Wendell Corey, Alexander Scourby, Elspeth Eric, Leon Janney, James Westerfield and Mandel Kramer in Sidney Kingsley's "Detective Story," telling of a day in the detective squad-room of a New York precinct police station, WNBC, 8:30.

Guggenheim Memorial Concert, from the Mall in Central Park, WNYC, 8:30.

Escape: "The Thirteenth Truck," story of a famous World War II exploit in which desert commandoes smuggled themselves aboard a German truck to dynamite a Nazi airfield, WCBS, 9:30.

Couchiching Conference on "Defense and Diplomacy." Alister Buchan, Elmer Davis and Edgar McInnis, WNYC, 10.

Robert Q. Lewis plays records and talks with his guest, Sophie Tucker, WCBS, 10.

Alistair Cooke takes his listeners on a "Cooke's Tour" of the U. S., WABC, 10:15.

Walter S. Robertson, Assistant Secretary of State, who was the President's representative at the pre-truce negotiations in Korea, guest on "Meet the Press," WNBC, 10:30.

Fire—a dramatic documentary, WNBC, 11:30.

MUSIC PROGRAMS ON THE RADIO

Today

MUSIC ROOM: William Masselos, piano soloist. 9 a. m., WCBS.
Sonatas; E minor, G major...Scarlatti
...de Lune...Debussy
...Hovhaness

E. POWER BIGGS. 9:30, WCBS.
Three Chorale Preludes...Walther
Three Correnti for Violin and Organ...Uccellini
Chaconne for Violin and Organ (radio premiere)...Sapp
Three Chorale Preludes...Bach

SERENADE. 10:30, WFUV.
Selections...Kreisler
Waltzes...Strauss

MR. & MRS. OPERA. 10:30, WNYC.
Thais...Massenet

MUSIC HALL. 11, WHLI.
Overture to "Italiana in Algiers"...Rossini
Love and Music from "La Tosca"...Puccini
Prelude to Act 3 from "La Traviata"..Verdi
Ancora Un Passo or Via from "Mme Butterfly"...Puccini
Dance of the Cammorists from "Jewels of the Madonna"....Wolf-Ferrari
Spanish Dance from "La Vida Breve"...De Falla
Polka De W. R...Rachmaninov
March of the Dwarfs...Grieg
The Maiden's Wish...Chopin-Liszt
Polonaise Militaire in A major...Chopin

SALT LAKE CHOIR. 11, WCBS.
Allelula...Mozart
Oh God Thy Bounty Reaches Wide...Beethoven-Holmes
Shepherd, Lead Me...Miles
...Morning Breaks...Careless
...ed Is the Glorious Work...Haydn
...to the Cuckoo
...Nightingale...Handel
...lude...Schreiner

...MUSIC. Noon, WNYC.
...Saints
...Henry Barraud

...12:05, WFUV.
...Bizet

...UM: Marienka ...Becker, vio-
...Bach
...ebussy

CHARLES MUNCH conducts the Boston Symphony at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood. 2:30, WCBS.
Symphony No. 8 in B minor...Schubert
Prelude and Love Death...Wagner
A Siegfried Idyl...Wagner
Excerpts from Act III, "Die Meistersinger,"...Wagner

OPERA MUSIC. 2:30, WQXR.
Der Freischutz: Overture...Weber
Peter Grimes: Four Sea Interludes..Britten

SYMPHONY MUSIC. 3:05, WQXR.
Symphony No. 3 in E flat ("Rhenish")...Schumann
Piano Concerto No. 1 in E minor....Chopin
Symphony No. 2 in D...Sibelius

NEW CHAMBER MUSIC SOCIETY: Paul Wolfe and Fred Manzella, violinists. 3:30, WNYC.
Sonata...Leclair
Vier Leichte Stucke...Hindemith
Sonatina in C major...Mozart
Vorstiel und Kanon...Bartok
Chaconne...Aubert

WILFRID PELLETIER conducts the NBC Summer Symphony. 5, WNBC.
Symphony No. 8 in F...Beethoven
Three Movements from "Fantastic" Symphony...Berlioz
Les Escales...Ibert

RANDOLPH CONCERT. 5, WNYC.
Clarinet Concerto...Mozart
Der Hirt auf dem Felsen...Schubert
Clarinet Trio, Op. 114...Brahms
Rhapsody, No. 1...Debussy

CONCERT HALL. 5:05, WQXR.
Trumpet Voluntary...Clarke-Stokowski
Larghetto for Horn and Orchestra..Chabrier
"Die Meistersinger": Prelude...Wagner

MINIATURE. 5:30, WFUV.
Ave Maria...Schubert
Liebesbotschaft...Schubert
Der Tod und das Madchen...Schubert
Nicolette...Ravel
C'est l'extase langoureuse...Debussy
Adieu, forets...Tchaikovsky
The Little Red Lark...arr. Fischer
I Know Where I'm Goin'...Country Antrim
I Heard in the Night the Pigeons...arr. Fischer
The Kerry Dance...Molloy

FAMOUS BALLETS. 6:05, WQXR.
The Sleeping Beauty...Tchaikovsky

SONG CLASSICS: Anne Weeks, soprano. 6:30, WNYC.
...moto di gioa...Mozart
...la Farfalletta...Chopin-Sandoval
...e fontaine...Milhaud
...Oiseaux...Hue
...Titania, from "Mignon"...Thomas
...ar...Polish folk song

...DED MUSIC. 7, WNYC.
...41...Mozart
...C...Beethoven
...Beethoven

...ALL. 7:05, WQXR.
...Gruner-Hegge
...Richard Strauss
...TC. 8, WHLI-
...Hemel

GOLDMAN BAND. 8:30, WNYC.
International Accord March...E. F. Goldman
Overture to "Joan of Arc"...Verdi
Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring; Bouree...Bach
Introduction to Act III and Bridal Chorus from "Lohengrin"...Wagner
Overture to "Romeo and Juliet"...Tchaikovsky
Carnival of Venice...J. B. Arban
Italian Polka...arr. by Rachmaninov
Illinois March
Finale from Symphony No. 4

SERENADE. 8:35. WH
Beatrice and Benedict Overtu
Concerto No. 1 in B Flat M
Movement
Classical Symphony in D Maj
Scherzo Capriccioso Op.66
Emporer Waltz

ETELKA FREUND, pi
WNYC-FM.
Organ — Chorale — Prelude
Thee, Lord"—transcribed fo
Busoni
Sonata, Op. 10, No. 3 in D Ma

CHAMBER MUSIC. 11,
Symphonic Etudes
Quartet No. 2

WORLD OF MUSIC. 11
Violin Concerto in G Minor.
Suite for Orchestra, Op. 19,

CITY SLEEPS. 12 m.,
Magnificat

AT MIDNIGHT. 12:05
Symphony No. 6 in F ("Pastor
My Country: The Moldau

Monday

NOON CONCERT. 12
L'Arlesienne Suite No. 1
Belshazzar's Feast

MUSIC THAT LIVES
Symphony No. 41 in C major
Symphony No. 99 in E flat

BALLET MUSIC. 5
Les Biches

GUIOMAR NOVAES, WNYC.
Symphony in B Flat
Piano Concerto No. 2
Billy the Kid: Ballet

SERENADE. 8, WHLI
Overture to "An Italian Com
Concerto No. 2 in D Minor
Poeme d'Extase Op. 54
Cagliostro Waltz

SYMPHONY HALL
The Ruler of the Spirits
Symphony No. 3 in D ("

MILDRED MILLER, so
WNBC.
S'Wonderful, S'Marvelous
It's a Grand Night for Sing
Chorus of the Flower Girls fr
"Samson et Delilah"
Printemps qui commence fro
"Samson et Delilah"
Angels of Mercy
Ballet Music from "Faust"
In the Still of the Night

CHAMBER MUSIC on Square. 9, WNYC.
Concerto Grosso in D Minor

A New Public Service Program ... in Co-operation with the ... American Societies by

WNYC 830 KC
WNYC-FM 93.9 MEG.
MONDAY THRU FRIDAY
FOR TWO WEEKS
STARTING AUGUST 17th
At 2:00 PM

Based on the Record... Originally Prepare... The U.S. Armed F... Now Availab...

Symphony

SCHUMANN
Symphony No. 3 in E flat ("Rhenish")
Bruno Walter conducts the New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra.

CHOPIN
Piano Concerto No. 1 in E minor
Artur Rubinstein, soloist, with the London Symphony Orchestra, Sir John Barbirolli conducting.

SIBELIUS
Symphony No. 2 in D
Performed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Serge Koussevitzky.

1560 on A... Radio

PIANO! CLASSICAL practice ... Progress" Street ... 71st ... 2-8788 ENdicott ... for booklet.

...ARTINO ...INENT SINGERS

...LLER ... a Singer" ... CI 6-3051

VOCAL EXPERT Singer & Coach ... repertoire, ... Concert-TV & ... CONcert professionals. ... EN 2-3720 ... 71 St.

VEDAL TENOR on voice building ... TR. 7-5781

... Rimsky-Korsa... ... and Liadov ... chestration Form. ... cle 6-6517

Free ... SHOP TENOR ... 11, N. Y.

THE NE... WAR, 379 pa...

THE contrib... to the C... all the...

"Since t... thinks, tru...

...on WP... noon at 4... Details of ... follow:

TOD...

WPRO—2:30-4 p.m.—...vals. Charles Munch co... ton Symphony Orchestra ... shire Festival, Tanglewood.
Symphony No. 8 in B minor
Prelude and Love Death
A Siegfried Idyl
Excerpts from Act III, "Die Meistersinger"...Wagn...

WJAR—5-6 p.m.—NBC Summer Symphony Orchestra, Wilfrid Pelletier guest conductor.
Symphony No. 8 in F...Beethoven
Three Movements from "Fantastic" Symphony...Berlioz
"A Ball"
"March to the Scaffold"
"Witches' Sabbath"
Les Escales (Ports of Call)...Ibert

WBZ-TV—5-5:30 p.m.—Television Recital Hall, Jeanne Mitchell violin soloist.
Fugue in A...Tartini-Kreisler
Rondo in G...Mozart-Kreisler
Ipanema...Milhaud
Le Printemps...Milhaud
Ritournel...Haieff
Vocalise...Rachmaninoff
La Vide Breve...DeFalla-Kreisler

WEAN—8:30-9 p.m.—Enchanted Hour. Henry Weber conducts; Margaret Roberts, soloist.
Selections from 'Woodland Sketches'...MacDowell

...rahms
...Zimbalist
...Kreisler
...-Arr.-Szigeti
...estra
...t's Dream"
...Mendelsoshn
...estra
Co... ...A Minor-Last Part
(B... ...ith the cadenza)
...Vieuxtemps
...bin and Orchestra

SATURDAY

WPRO—4:30-5 p.m.—Brevard Music Festival. James Christian Pfhol conductor.
Academic Festival Overture...Brahms
Romeo and Juliet...Tschaikowski

RECORDED CONCERTS

WICE—today at 11 a.m.—Music of the Masters.
'Oberon' overture...Von Weber
Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra
Wilhelm Furtwangler conducting
Concerto No. 2 in C Minor...Rachmaninoff
Robin Hood Dell Orchestra
William Stein...

...esday—Beethov... ...No. 9 in D Minor; Th... Saint-Saens, Carnival of the A... Gruenberg, Concerto for Vi... Orchestra. Friday—Mehul, Ove... Les Deux Avengles di Toledo; ... Symphonic Fantastique. Sat... Haydn, Symphony No. 88 in G... Chopin, Concerto No. 1 in E...

WPRO—Friday, 8:30 to 10 p.m. Night Concert. Notes by Morton... der.
Variations on a Theme by Haydn
Amsterdam Concertgebouw O...
Eduard van Beinum, conduc...
Violin Concerto in D Major, Tcha...
Isaac Stern, soloist
Philadelphia Orchestra
Alexander Hillsberg, conductor
Suite: Three Cornered Hat...DeFalla
London Symphony Orchestra
Enrique Jorda, conductor
Overture: Cyrano De Bergerac, Wagenaar
Utrecht Municipal Orchestra
Paul Hupperts, conductor.

WPJB—Saturday at 2:05 p.m.—At the Opera.
Rigoletto...Verdi

Cir. (D 57,751) (S 49,376)

This Clipping From
NEW BEDFORD, MASS.
STANDARD-TIMES

AUG 16 1953

FRANCOIS CHARLES-ROUX, French consul-general in Boston, right, makes awards to three outstanding men of Massachusetts. Named chevaliers of the Legion of Honor were, from left, Dr. Edward Churchill, chief of general surgical services at Massachusetts General Hospital; George E. Judd, manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which toured France last year, and Henry R. Shepley, Essex architect.
(Photo Courtesy of Boston Globe)

Cir. (D 113,811) (S 168,042)

This Clipping From
ROCHESTER, N. Y.
DEMOCRAT & CHRONICLE

AUG 16 1953

Summer Music Jottings

Those Outdoor Melodies Linger

By HARVEY W. SOUTHGATE

MUSIC out of doors must be something like a picnic sandwich—it seems tastier to many people when absorbed in the open air with the sky arching overhead and the green meadows rolling into the distance. At least many persons go to outdoor musical events who are not ordinarily seen in the concert halls, and this applies to events where an admission is charged as well as those given for free. All over the country outdoor music seems to be attracting more people, whether under the reliable starlight of California or under the fickle skies of Western New York.

Possibly there is something deep in human nature that associates the outdoor world with music. Have not some of our greatest composers turned to nature for some of their most inspired themes? Is not musical literature filled with moonlight and stardust and mountains and thunder and lightning? Are not pipes and horns and drums associated with the outdoors?

If we are right, then there is nothing extraordinary about the crowds that turn out for outdoor music, including "Opera Under the Stars" in Rochester. Not that this can take the place of the indoor concert or opera. The point is that to many people it is different and being outdoors, seems to have a special appeal. The conclusion seems clear: We need not less but more of this attractive fare which so many people like.

New Kay Choral Work To Be Broadcast

The premiere performance of

for Lincoln College. The program

of music, James Fassett, as commentator.

Concerts Today End Berkshire Season

The most successful Berkshire Festival in the 16 summers' concerts have been performed in the hills of Western Massachusetts the 14th since the Boston Symphony Orchestra participated, concludes its activities today with all attendance records shattered.

More than 150,000 music lovers have attended the 15 Festival concerts; the 40 demonstrations of student symphony, chamber music, choral music, opera and study group departments of the Berkshire Music Center (the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony); and Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade" gala, the annual benefit for the school.

The weekend's concluding concerts by the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 6,000-seat Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. are shared by Charles Munch, the symphony's music director, and Leonard Bernstein, who heads the orchestra conducting department of the Berkshire Music Center.

This afternoon Mr. Munch will have Seymour Lipkin, pianist who is assistant to Mr. Bernstein in the summer school's conducting department, and to BSO concertmaster Richard Burgin in its chamber music department, as soloist in the Ravel Concerto for the Left Hand, a Tanglewood premiere.

The portion of the Sunday concert, 2:30 to 4 p. m., will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director

THE NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, AUGUST 16, 1953.

AWARDS ARE GIVEN AT BERKSHIRE FETE

Two Violinists, 'Cellist and Composer Honored at Last Concert by Students

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MASTER AND STUDENT: Uziahu Wiesel, right, 26-year-old Israeli 'cellist and student at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., with Gregor Piatigorsky, faculty member and famed solo 'cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Wiesel has been given the center's annual Piatigorsky award.

LENOX, Mass., Aug., 15—The Berkshire Music Center, which has been providing an intensive workshop in music each summer since 1940, ended its annual six-week session today. Although the center is not a formal school and grants no diplomas, the final concert this afternoon by the student orchestra served as a kind of commencement exercise.

Prizes were awarded to outstanding students at the center by Aaron Coplan, assistant director. The Heifetz Award—$150 to each of two winners this year—went to Barbara Lieberman of Brooklyn and Barbara Sorlien of Fargo, N. D., both violinists. The Piatigorsky Award of $200 went to Uziahu Wiesel, 'cellist from Israel. Thest prizes were given on the basis of talent, cooperative spirit and future promise.

The Samuel Wechsler commission of $300 went to Juan Orrego of the Facultad de Belles Artes in Santia[illegible]hile. Senor Orrego, who

---

Greatest Tanglewood Festival in History Ends With 13,100 at Finale

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 16—As I sit here in the crowded pressroom I can hear the shouts, bravos and applause of the 13,100 people who are bidding farewell to Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra and farewell also to this Tanglewood season. It's been a great season with many records broken.

126,350 Admissions

An estimated 126,350 people have attended the theater shed and shed concerts and the gross ticket sale is estimated at $311,600 for the 15 concerts plus "Tanglewood On Parade" and the three orchestra pension fund rehearsals. Nature helped a lot, for only two days were really unpleasant.

There was much to admire in the program and the performance thereof this afternoon. Seymour Lipkin, pianist, was the bright star of the program, offering a fabulous performance of the Ravel Piano Concerto for Left Hand. The program opened with a rugged performance of Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony. It was a finely integrated, sensitive reading Charles Munch provided, one of almost necessary if one is to believe what one hears. It is a formidable work, one which makes demonaic demands on the pianist. Seymour Lipkin made a tremendous sensation here last season and he made an equally impressive appearance this year. A pianist of rare sensitivity and prodigious technique, the concerto this afternoon became expressive, meaningful and brilliant. All this was accomplished in that unassuming manner which is particularly Lipkin's.

Continued On Page 7

The program concluded with one of Mr. Munch's finest efforts, Ravel's "La Valse." It was a highly colored, scintillating performance which rose and fell, only to return to a superb conclusion.

Artistically this Tanglewood season has been one of the best. Programs have been diversified and not restricted to the familiar works. Several performances were unforgettable, notably Leonard Bernstein's reading of the Mahler "Resurrection" Symphony and the Fourth Symphony of Sibelius and Mr. Munch's reading of the Brahms "A German Requiem" and the "Tristan and Isolde" excerpts heard today. We look forward to next season.

MONDAY, AUGUST 17, 1953. AMUSEMENTS

TANGLEWOOD ENDS ANNUAL FESTIVAL

Lipkin Is Piano Soloist in Ravel Concerto as Munch Conducts —Attendance Record Set

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

was soloist in Ravel's Piano Concerto for the left hand, and the festival ended with one of Mr. Munch's fiery specialties—Ravel's "La Valse."

Mr. Lipkin is one of the many Tanglewood alumni. He has worked here as one of the late Serge Koussevitzky's young conducting talents and was the winner of the nation-wide Rachmaninoff Prize for pianists some years ago. He handled the difficult Ravel concerto with consummate ease as far as its technical promlems were concerned, and he made terpretation of Brahms indicated that he had advanced a great deal in the field of the classical repertoire.

Señor Chavez, who has been this year's guest composer at the Berkshire Music Center, was in the audience when his work was played, and the roaring tribute of the crowd caused him to join Mr. Bernstein on the stage in acknowledgment. Señor Chavez, of course, is a first-rate conductor, and it is a pity he was not invited to display this facet of his gifts in the course of the festival.

E, MONDAY, AUGUST 17, 1953

MUSIC

The Berkshire Festival

Season's Finale

By Jay S. Harrison

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 16.—The Berkshire Music Festival, 1953, came to an end this afternoon in a burst of orchestral fireworks and with a record breaking attendance. Today's audience numbered 13,100, the largest of the summer, and the biggest ever to attend the final concert. It brought the week end's total to 32,800 and the season's to 117,900, thereby smashing all previous attendance figures in Tanglewood's history. The program, with Charles Munch directing the Boston Symphony Orchestra, listed Ravel's "La Valse" and piano concerto for the left hand, with Seymour Lipkin a soloist; Shubert's "Unfinished" Symphony, and Wagner's Prelude and "Love-Death" from Tristan und Isolde, "A Siegfried Idyll" and three excerpts from the third act of "Die Meistersinger."

The concert came to an end in a whirl of flying fingers and provocative sounds. The incredible difficulties of the Ravel concerto were surmounted by Mr. Lipkin admirably and cleanly with scarcely a hint of the usual inaccuracies that pursue all who undertake this demonic work. It is in his favor, moreover, that the concerto emerged as a piece of music rather than the trick or stunt it can easily become. In short, music was made by Mr. Lipkin and well made, too.

Munch in Fine Form

The remainder of the program saw Mr. Munch in fine form. His "La Valse" spun like a dervish, stamped its beat forcefully and echoed throughout the hall. Previously, Mr. Munch had conducted the Tristan with due turbulence, the Idyll with some eccentricity, and the Meistersinger excerpts with great understanding and majesty. His Schubert, taken as a whole, was a performance which placed the dramatic foremost and allowed the lyric to shift for itself. But since Mr. Munch's sense of drama is brave and forthright, it made for a tidy presentation but quite avoided the excess sentimentality which many conductors inevitably take to be the Schubert ideal.

Last night an audience of 12,100 heard Leonard Bernstein conducting the Boston Symphony in a program that included Sibelius' Fourth Symphony, Carlos Chavez' "Sinfonia India" and Brahms' Symphony No. 2. All told, it was a field day for Mr. Bernstein and, for his admirers, an occasion for rejoicing.

Bernstein's Statue Grows

Concerning Mr. Bernstein, the truth is plain—he has grown immensely in stature and has become, in fact, a masterful conductor. For every fault he possesses there are fifteen virtues. For every indiscretion he commits there are untold miracles he works in tying together the loose ends of the orchestral score. And for these seasons his program of the evening, a long one and full of pitfalls, was in most instances a roaring success.

By what manner of alchemy Mr. Bernstein is able to get to the heart of a contemporary score, the present writer hesitates to guess. But there is no denying that the conductor's performance of Chavez' "Sinfonia," a minor master work of huge complexity, reflected the music's profile in a mirror of perfection. The work itself, based for the most on Mexican Indian themes, is exotic but not perfumed, hypnotic but not bizarre. It is a twelve-minute concentrated study in the development of folk material and its underlying rhythem. Setting it forth as he did, Mr. Bernstein permitted the work to speak for itself without urging and demonstrate the sophistication and knowledge that had gone into its making.

Rare Reading of Brahms

The Brahms Symphony, another matter entirely, was also accorded a vigorous and monumental reading. As played, it was a Brahms with his nerve endings exposed, a Brahms to whom fury and passion were no secret things. Mr. Bernstein lifted the work up, made tempests where they rarely are and gave us a musical portrait of uncommon boldness and power.

It was only in the Sibelius Fourth, a wintry and solitary work, that Mr. Bernstein came to grief. The piece is lean and spare and based on the play of isolated motives. By overheating them they do not fuse, but melt nstead and tautness disappears. Mr. Bernstein, in dramaticizing each simple phrase, dissipated the score tension and caused it to grow flabby. And that is death is a wiry work.

Cir. (D 94,031) (S 88,22

This Clipping Fr
MIAMI, FLA.
NEWS

AUG 16 1953

Israeli Pianist Makes U. S. Debut At Pop Concert On Beach Tonight

By EDWARD IRELAND
Miami Daily News Staff Writer

Ora Rottenberg

The young Israeli pianist Ora Rottenberg will make her first concert appearance in this country tonight with the University of Miami Summer Symphony Orchestra at the Miami Beach Municipal Auditorium.

It will be the 9th Pop program of the season and the third and last for guest conductor Izler Solomon. John Bitter will return to the podium for the final concert of the summer next Sunday.

Miss Rottenberg, who is the first Israeli artist to come to the United States for a concert tour, will play Edvard Grieg's Concerto in A-minor, Op. 16. Written just 75 years ago, this major work of the Norwegian master still ranks among the most popular piano concertos of all time.

Born In Jerusalem

Tonight's guest star, who celebrated her 20th birthday on Aug. 2, was born in Jersalem and received most of her musical training at the Conservatory of Music there under a scholarship.

For the last three years she has been studying with Henriette Michelson, who retired from the New York Julliard School of Music after 40 years of teaching to devote all her time to the young gifted musicians of Israel.

Miss Rottenberg made her concert debut on June 9 with the Orchestra of the Voice of Jerusalem, playing Prokofiev's Third Piano Concerto.

Occupying a feature spot on tonight's program will be Tschaikovsky's ever-popular Nutcracker Suite. Originally written as a ballet, it was so produced for the first time in 1892, along with the composer's one-act opera "Iolanthe." Both were complete failures.

Successful As Suite

But when the composer strung together the best numbers be Rimsky-Korsakoff's Caprice Espagnol, Op. 34. Next to the Scheherazade Suite, this is probably the famed Russian master's most popular work. It was written in 1886 and first performed in the following year by the Russian Symphony Orchestra at St. Petersburg.

It was intended originally as a Fantasia on Spanish themes for violin and orchestra, and the solo violin still has some striking passages, although the piece has become a tour-de-force of orchestral virtuosity in general.

There are five parts to this work. It begins with an Alborada, which corresponds to the French Aubade, or serenade at dawn. Next come five variations on a theme introduced by the horns.

The Alborada is then repeated, and a fourth section represents a "Scene and Gypsy Song," with cadenzas by the trumpets, solo violin, flute and harp. Finally comes a "Fandango of the Asturian," with suggestions of the tpyical guitar and castanets.

Concert time will be 8 p.m.

Villa-Lobos Coming

Heitor Villa-Lobos, celebrated Brazilian contemporary composer, will conduct an entire program of the University of Miami Symphony Orchestra this winter, Mrs. Marie Volpe, manager, announced today.

Villa-Lobos will replace the pianist Horowitz, who has been obliged to cancel most of his 1952-53 season because of illness.

Villa-Lobos is the most prominent of all Latin American composers, and his works to date number more than 1,400 for all media.

Music At Noon

The Miami Public Library, 1 Biscayne Blvd., will present the following programs of recorded music at its noon-time series this week:

TOMORROW: Rachmanioff—"Isle of the Dead." Serge Koussevitzky conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Brahms—Symphony No. 3 in F-major. Eugene Ormandy conducting the Philadelphia Orchestra.

TUESDAY: Brahms-Symphony No. 1 in C-minor. Arturo Toscanini conducting the NBC Symphony Orchestra.

Johann Strauss — Waltzes. Robert Stoltz and Orchestra.

THURSDAY—Hanson - Symphony No. 2 (Romantic). Howard Hanson conducting the Eastman-Rochester Symphony Orchestra.

Wagner — Orchestral Excerpts. Arturo Toscanini and the Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra of New York.

FRIDAY: Dvorak — Quartet No. 3 in E-flat major. Busch Quartet.

De Falla—"El Amor Brujo." Pedro Morales and Symphony Orchestra.

THE NEW YORK TIMES,

AWARDS ARE GIVEN AT BERKSHIRE FETE

Two Violinists, 'Cellist and Composer Honored at Last Concert by Students

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LENOX, Mass., Aug., 15—The Berkshire Music Center, which has been providing an intensive workshop in music each summer since 1940, ended its annual six-week session today. Although the center is not a formal school and grants no diplomas, the final concert this afternoon by the student orchestra served as a kind of commencement exercise.

Prizes were awarded to outstanding students at the center by Aaron Coplan, assistant director. The Heifetz Award—$150 to each of two winners this year—went to Barbara Lieberman of Brooklyn and Barbara Sorlien of Fargo, N. D., both violinists. The Piatigorsky Award of $200 went to Uziahu Wiesel, 'cellist from Israel. Thest prizes were given on the basis of talent, cooperative spirit and future promise.

The Samuel Wechsler commission of $300 went to Juan Orrego of the Facultad de Belles Artes in Santiago, Chile. Senor Orrego, who

MASTER AND STUDENT: Uziahu Wiesel, right, 26-year-old Israeli 'cellist and student at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., with Gregor Piatigorsky, faculty member and famed solo 'cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Wiesel has been given the center's annual Piatigorsky award.

MONDAY, AUGUST 17, 1953. AMUSEMENTS

TANGLEWOOD ENDS ANNUAL FESTIVAL

Lipkin Is Piano Soloist in Ravel Concerto as Munch Conducts —Attendance Record Set

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 16—The sun shone brilliantly on Tanglewood and on the overflow thousands on the lawns around the music shed this afternoon, and as a result the Berkshire Music Festival came to an end with a new attendance record for the season.

The previous high of 124,100 set in 1950, was surpassed this summer when today's audience of 13,100 brought the season's total to a grand 126,350. The season's gross of $303,800 also was a new high.

These festivals in the Berkshires, begun almost twenty years ago, seem to be in the ascendant on every front. The first three weekends of programs in the theatre-concert hall this year drew 26,150 persons as against the 1950 record of 23,500, and it may be that by next season these concerts will have to be moved into the music shed. As for the three main festival weeks in the shed, this year's attendance of 91,800 beat out the 1950 record of 89,800.

A Program of Favorites

To wind up this year's festival, Charles Munch conducted the Boston Symphony today in a program made up largely of perennial favorites. He began with Schubert's "Unfinished" and continued with a number of Wagner works—the Prelude and Liebestod from "Tristan und Isolde," the "Siegfried Idyll" and excerpts from the third act of "Die Meistersinger." After the intermission, Seymour Lipkin was soloist in Ravel's Piano Concerto for the left hand, and the festival ended with one of Mr. Munch's fiery specialties—Ravel's "La Valse."

Mr. Lipkin is one of the many Tanglewood alumni. He has worked here as one of the late Serge Koussevitzky's young conducting talents and was the winner of the nation-wide Rachmaninoff Prize for pianists some years ago. He handled the difficult Ravel concerto with consummate ease as far as its technical promlems were concerned, and he made his mechanical command subservient to the essential needs of the music.

Mr. Munch and the orchestra were very much in the vein for the Schubert and Wagner works, and he and the orchestra gave Mr. Lipkin sensitive support. At the end of "La Valse," the throng burst out into a thunderous ovation by way of au revoir to the musicians and Tanglewood.

At last night's concert, Leonard Bernstein was the conductor, and he gave a satisfying account of his maturing musicianship. In a testing program that embraced Sibelius' Fourth Symphony, Carlos Chavez' "Sinfonia India" and Brahams' Second Symphony, Mr. Bernstein proved that he was equipped emotionally and intellectually to voyage in three widely different musical worlds.

Sibelius Symphony Heard

The Sibelius Symphony, one of the Finnish master's deepest and finest, had breadth and dignity. Mr. Bernstein and the Boston Symphony made it clear how Sibelius' concise ideas germinate into an immense entity; details were neatly etched but they were part of the large draughtsmanship.

The Chavez symphony, which is as brilliant and imaginative as one of the great modern Mexican murals, had tremendous pace and color. Possibly the composer might have been able to bring additional values to the slow sections, but Mr. Bernstein did a good job. His interpretation of Brahms indicated that he had advanced a great deal in the field of the classical repertoire.

Señor Chavez, who has been this year's guest composer at the Berkshire Music Center, was in the audience when his work was played, and the roaring tribute of the crowd caused him to join Mr. Bernstein on the stage in acknowledgment. Señor Chavez, of course, is a first-rate conductor, and it is a pity he was not invited to display this facet of his gifts in the course of the festival.

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUN

U.N. Starts

On Korea;

Debate Today

llies Agreed

Whether Mr. Vishinsky has other ideas was unknown. Even his views on Russian acceptance of a U. N. invitation to attend the conference are shrouded in mystery, as a British spokesman who has had recent conversations with Mr. Vishinsky pointed out tonight.

It has not been determined whether Mr. Vishinsky views the political conference as a meeting of two "sides"; the opponents of the Korean War, or if he views the forthcoming talks

---

Henry Butler of th
ed Earl Cook, also a playoff for Class B hon won six and lost one.

Second place in the Class to George Comeau of Lynn.
Brinkman of West Springf placed third, with five wins, two losses and a ringer percentage of 57.2.

In Class B third place went to Joe Fairbanks of Willimansett, last year's champ. He won five, lost two and had a ringer percentage of 40.7.

The matches were sponsored by the River Valley Horseshoe Pitching League. Landry will defend his New England championship at the local field during the Labor Day week end.

Entertaining TONITE? SHOP MELDRUM'S LIQUOR and WINE

ELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD,

---

atest

from Page 1

corded portion of cluded with three the Prelude and om "Tristan and gfried Idyll" and
Dance of the Ap-
Entrance of the om "Die Meister-
nberg." The Preleath" from "Tris-was played mag-n has Mr. Munch
re profound and reading as of this
c. Oh, to hear lde" with the Bos-Orchestra in the s from "The Mas-
e equally impres-
d majestic when unutterably gay en that mood was

Ravel's Piano Concerto for Left Hand is a work where seeing is almost necessary if one is to believe what one hears. It is a formidable work, one which makes demonaic demands on the pianist. Seymour Lipkin made a tremendous sensation here last season and he made an equally impressive appearance this year. A pianist of rare sensitivity and prodigious technique, the concerto this afternoon became expressive, meaningful and brilliant. All this was accomplished in that unassuming manner which is particularly Lipkin's.

The program concluded with one of Mr. Munch's finest efforts, Ravel's "La Valse." It was a highly colored, scintillating performance which rose and fell, only to return to a superb conclusion.

Artistically this Tanglewood season has been one of the best. Programs have been diversified and not restricted to the familiar works. Several performances were unforgettable, notably Leonard Bernstein's reading of the Mahler "Resurrection" Symphony and the Fourth Symphony of Sibelius and Mr. Munch's reading of the Brahms "A German Requiem" and the "Tristan and Isolde" excerpts heard today. We look forward to next season.

Cir. (D 94,031) (S 88,22

This Clipping Fr
MIAMI, FLA.
NEWS

AUG 16 1953

Israeli Pianist Makes U. S. Debut At Pop Concert On Beach Tonight

By EDWARD IRELAND
Miami Daily News Staff Writer

The young Israeli pianist Ora Rottenberg will make her first concert appearance in this country tonight with the University of Miami Summer Symphony Orchestra at the Miami Beach Municipal Auditorium.

It will be the 9th Pop program of the season and the third and last for guest conductor Izler Solomon. John Bitter will return to the podium for the final concert of the summer next Sunday.

Miss Rottenberg, who is the first Israeli artist to come to the United States for a concert tour, will play Edvard Grieg's Concerto in A-minor, Op. 16. Written just 75 years ago, this major work of the Norwegian master still ranks among the most popular piano concertos of all time.

Born In Jerusalem

Tonight's guest star, who celebrated her 20th birthday on Aug. 2, was born in Jersalem and received most of her musical training at the Conservatory of Music there under a scholarship.

For the last three years she has been studying with Henriette Michelson, who retired from the New York Julliard School of Music after 40 years of teaching to devote all her time to the young gifted musicians of Israel.

Miss Rottenberg made her concert debut on June 9 with the Orchestra of the Voice of Jerusalem, playing Prokofiev's Third Piano Concerto.

Occupying a feature spot on tonight's program will be Tschaikovsky's ever-popular Nutcracker Suite. Originally written as a ballet, it was so produced for the first time in 1892, along with the composer's one-act opera "Iolanthe." Both were complete failures.

Successful As Suite

But when the composer strung together the best num-

Ora Rottenberg

be Rimsky-Korsakoff's Caprice Espagnol, Op. 34. Next to the Scheherazade Suite, this is probably the famed Russian master's most popular work. It was written in 1886 and first performed in the following year by the Russian Symphony Orchestra at St. Petersburg.

It was intended originally as a Fantasia on Spanish themes for violin and orchestra, and the solo violin still has some striking passages, although the piece has become a tour-de-force of orchestral virtuosity in general.

There are five parts to this work. It begins with an Alborada, which corresponds to the French Aubade, or serenade at dawn. Next come five variations on a theme introduced by the horns.

The Alborada is then repeated, and a fourth section represents a "Scene and Gypsy Song," with cadenzas by the trumpets, solo violin, flute and harp. Finally comes a "Fandango of the Asturian," with suggestions of the typical guitar and castanets.

Concert time will be 8 p.m.

Villa-Lobos Coming

Heitor Villa-Lobos, celebrated Brazilian contemporary composer, will conduct an entire program of the University of Miami Symphony Orchestra this winter, Mrs. Marie Volpe, manager, announced today.

Villa-Lobos will replace the pianist Horowitz, who has been obliged to cancel most of his 1952-53 season because of illness.

Villa-Lobos is the most prominent of all Latin American composers, and his works to date number more than 1,400 for all media.

Music At Noon

The Miami Public Library, 1 Biscayne Blvd., will present the following programs of recorded music at its noon-time series this week:

TOMORROW: Rachmanioff—"Isle of the Dead." Serge Koussevitzky conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Brahms—Symphony No. 3 in F-major. Eugene Ormandy conducting the Philadelphia Orchestra.

TUESDAY: Brahms-Symphony No. 1 in C-minor. Arturo Toscanini conducting the NBC Symphony Orchestra.

Johann Strauss — Waltzes. Robert Stoltz and Orchestra.

THURSDAY—Hanson - Symphony No. 2 (Romantic). Howard Hanson conducting the Eastman-Rochester Symphony Orchestra.

Wagner — Orchestral Excerpts. Arturo Toscanini and the Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra of New York.

FRIDAY: Dvorak — Quartet No. 3 in E-flat major. Busch Quartet.

De Falla—"El Amor Brujo." Pedro Morales and Symphony Orchestra.

PASTE OVER

AWARDS ARE GIVEN AT BERKSHIRE FETE

Two Violinists, 'Cellist and Composer Honored at Last Concert by Students

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LENOX, Mass., Aug., 15—The Berkshire Music Center, which has been providing an intensive workshop in music each summer since 1940, ended its annual six-week session today. Although the center is not a formal school and grants no diplomas, the final concert this afternoon by the student orchestra served as a kind of commencement exercise.

Prizes were awarded to outstanding students at the center by Aaron Coplan, assistant director. The Heifetz Award—$150 to each of two winners this year—went to Barbara Lieberman of Brooklyn and Barbara Sorlien of Fargo, N. D., both violinists. The Piatigorsky Award of $200 went to Uziahu Wiesel, 'cellist from Israel. Thest prizes were given on the basis of talent, cooperative spirit and future promise.

The Samuel Wechsler commission of $300 went to Juan Orrego of the Facultad de Belles Artes in Santiago, Chile. Senor Orrego, who was a student in composition for 1946, was invited to write a chamber music composition for three violins, viola, 'cello and piano. This prize was set up by Samuel Wechsler of New York, who was once a student at the center.

Miss Lieberman and Miss Sorlien served as concert masters of the student orchestra at Tanglewood this summer. Today they were soloists in the Bach Concerto for two violins. Miss Lieberman is a graduate of Sarah Lawrence College and the Juilliard School. Miss Sorlien is a student at Curtis Institute.

The prizes announced today are not the only ones granted [illegible] Tanglewood. Others were ma[illegible] earlier in the season. Ro[illegible] Barney Childs of Reno, Nev. [illegible] Alvin Epstein of Hartford, [illegible] received Margaret Lee [illegible] scholarships that enabled [illegible] attend this summer's se[illegible] composition students. T[illegible] R. Mann and Sally A[illegible] Scholarship Fund, [illegible] Award and the Dr[illegible] made possible tuiti[illegible] for other students.

The guest cond[illegible] final student orch[illegible] Carlos Chavez, [illegible] can composer [illegible] has been th[illegible] teacher in [illegible] Chavez, wh[illegible] term recer[illegible] country's [illegible] Berkshires, [illegible] years ago, [illegible] ascendant on [illegible] first three week[illegible]rams in the theatre[illegible] this year drew 26,150 as against the 1950 record [illegible],500, and it may be that by [illegible] season these concerts will have to be moved into the music shed. As for the three main festival weeks in the shed, this year's attendance of 91,800 beat out the 1950 record of 89,800.

A Program of Favorites

To wind up this year's festival, Charles Munch conducted the Boston Symphony today in a program made up largely of perennial favorites. He began with Schubert's "Unfinished" and continued with a number of Wagner works—the Prelude and Liebestod from "Tristan und Isolde," the "Siegfried Idyll" and excerpts from the third act of "Die Meistersinger." After the intermission, Seymour Lipkin was also represented in his capacity as a composer at tonight's concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. His "Sinfonia India" was on the program, conducted bv Leonard Bernstein.

MASTER AND STUDENT: Uziahu Wiesel, right, 26-year-old Israeli 'cellist and student at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., with Gregor Piatigorsky, faculty member and famed solo 'cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Wiesel has been given the center's annual Piatigorsky award.

BIG CU[illegible] IN FAVORS [illegible] BUDGET

Continued From Page 1

[illegible]ds of [illegible] orchestra [illegible]e vein for the [illegible]ner works, and [illegible]stra gave Mr. Lipkin support. At the end [illegible]else," the throng burst [illegible] a thunderous ovation by [illegible] of au revoir to the musicians and Tanglewood.

At last night's concert, Leonard Bernstein was the conductor, and he gave a satisfying account of his maturing musicianship. In a testing program that embraced Sibelius' Fourth Symphony, Carlos Chavez' "Sinfonia India" and Brahams' Second Symphony, Mr. Bernstein proved that he was equipped emotionally and intellectually to voyage in three widely different musical worlds.

Sibelius Symphony Heard

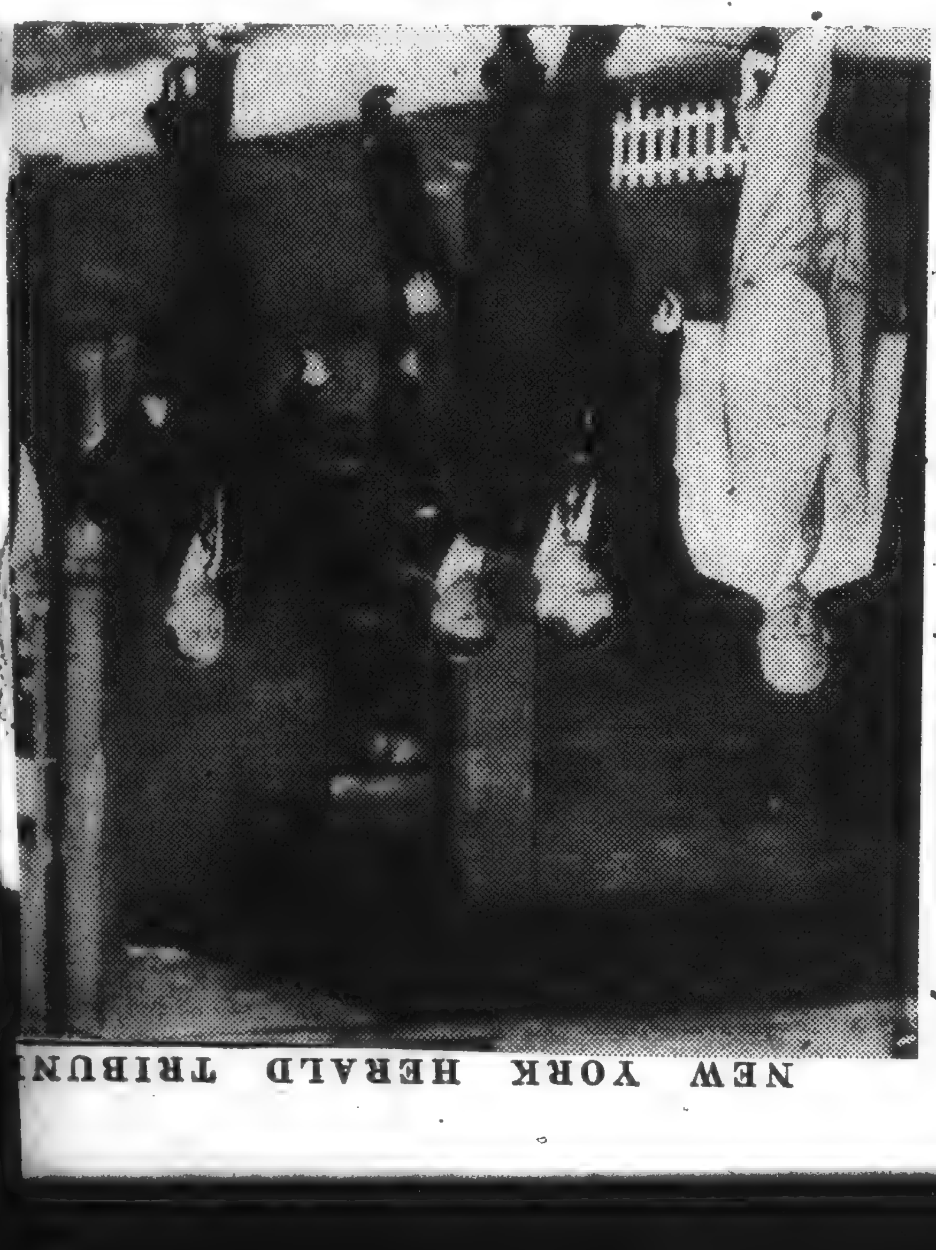
The Sibelius Symphony, one of the Finnish master's deepest and finest, had breadth and dignity. Mr. Bernstein and the Boston Symphony made it clear how Sibelius' concise ideas germinate into an immense entity; details were neatly etched but they were part of the large draughtsmanship.

The Chavez symphony, which is as brilliant and imaginative as one of the great modern Mexican murals, had tremendous pace and color. Possibly the composer might have been able to bring additional values to the slow sections, but Mr. Bernstein did a good job. His in-

[illegible]ENTS

[illegible]etation of Brahms indicated [illegible]t he had advanced a great deal [illegible] the field of the classical repertoire.

Señor Chavez, who has been this year's guest composer at the Berk[illegible]ire Music Center, was in the au[illegible]nce when his work was played, [illegible] the roaring tribute of the [illegible] caused him to join Mr. Bern[illegible] the stage in acknowledg[illegible] [illegible]or Chavez, of course, is [illegible]ce conductor, and it is a [illegible] was not invited to display [illegible] facet of his gifts in the course [illegible] the festival.



MASS., MONDAY, AUGUST

[illegible]eatest

[illegible]nued From Page 1

[illegible]est. The recorded portion of [illegible] program concluded with three Wagner works, the Prelude and "Love Death" from "Tristan and Isolde"; the "Siegfried Idyll" and the Introduction, Dance of the Apprentices, and Entrance of the Mastersingers from "Die Meistersingers Von Nurnberg." The Prelude and "Love Death" from "Tristan and Isolde" was played magnificently. Seldom has Mr. Munch provided a more profound and communicative reading as of this wonderful music. Oh, to hear "Tristan and Isolde" with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the pit. The excerpts from "The Mastersingers" were equally impressive, broad and majestic when called for, and unutterably gay and rhythmic when that mood was foremost.

Ravel's Piano Concerto for Left Hand is a work where seeing is almost necessary if one is to believe what one hears. It is a formidable work, one which makes demonaic demands on the pianist. Seymour Lipkin made a tremendous sensation here last season and he made an equally impressive appearance this year. A pianist of rare sensitivity and prodigious technique, the concerto this afternoon became expressive, meaningful and brilliant. All this was accomplished in that unassuming manner which is particularly Lipkin's.

The program concluded with one of Mr. Munch's finest efforts, Ravel's "La Valse." It was a highly colored, scintillating performance which rose and fell, only to return to a superb conclusion.

Artistically this Tanglewood season has been one of the best. Programs have been diversified and not restricted to the familiar works. Several performances were unforgettable, notably Leonard Bernstein's reading of the Mahler "Resurrection" Symphony and the Fourth Symphony of Sibelius and Mr. Munch's reading of the Brahms "A German Requiem" and the "Tristan and Isolde" excerpts heard today. We look forward to next season.

Cir. (D 94,031) (S 88,22[illegible]

This Clipping Fr[illegible]
MIAMI, FLA.
NEWS

AUG 16 1953

Israeli Pianist Makes U. S. Debut At Pop Concert On Beach Tonight

By EDWARD IRELAND
Miami Daily News Staff Writer

The young Israeli pianist Ora Rottenberg will make her first concert appearance in this country tonight with the University of Miami Summer Symphony Orchestra at the Miami Beach Municipal Auditorium.

It will be the 9th Pop program of the season and the third and last for guest conductor Izler Solomon. John Bitter will return to the podium for the final concert of the summer next Sunday.

Miss Rottenberg, who is the first Israeli artist to come to the United States for a concert tour, will play Edvard Grieg's Concerto in A-minor, Op. 16. Written just 75 years ago, this major work of the Norwegian master still ranks among the most popular piano concertos of all time.

Born In Jerusalem

Tonight's guest star, who celebrated her 20th birthday on Aug. 2, was born in Jersalem and received most of her musical training at the Conservatory of Music there under a scholarship.

For the last three years she has been studying with Henriette Michelson, who retired from the New York Julliard School of Music after 40 years of teaching to devote all her time to the young gifted musicians of Israel.

Miss Rottenberg made her concert debut on June 9 with the Orchestra of the Voice of Jerusalem, playing Prokofiev's Third Piano Concerto.

Occupying a feature spot on tonight's program will be Tschaikovsky's ever-popular Nutcracker Suite. Originally written as a ballet, it was so produced for the first time in 1892, along with the composer's one-act opera "Iolanthe." Both were complete failures.

Successful As Suite

But when the composer strung together the best num-

Ora Rottenberg

be Rimsky-Korsakoff's Caprice Espagnol, Op. 34. Next to the Scheherazade Suite, this is probably the famed Russian master's most popular work. It was written in 1886 and first performed in the following year by the Russian Symphony Orchestra at St. Petersburg.

It was intended originally as a Fantasia on Spanish themes for violin and orchestra, and the solo violin still has some striking passages, although the piece has become a tour-de-force of orchestral virtuosity in general.

There are five parts to this work. It begins with an Alborada, which corresponds to the French Aubade, or serenade at dawn. Next come five variations on a theme introduced by the horns.

The Alborada is then repeated, and a fourth section represents a "Scene and Gypsy Song," with cadenzas by the trumpets, solo violin, flute and harp. Finally comes a "Fandango of the Asturian," with suggestions of the tpyical guitar and castanets.

Concert time will be 8 p.m.

Villa-Lobos Coming

Heitor Villa-Lobos, celebrated Brazilian contemporary composer, will conduct an entire program of the University of Miami Symphony Orchestra this winter, Mrs. Marie Volpe, manager, announced today.

Villa-Lobos will replace the pianist Horowitz, who has been obliged to cancel most of his 1952-53 season because of illness.

Villa-Lobos is the most prominent of all Latin American composers, and his works to date number more than 1,400 for all media.

Music At Noon

The Miami Public Library, 1 Biscayne Blvd., will present the following programs of recorded music at its noon-time series this week:

TOMORROW: Rachmanioff—"Isle of the Dead." Serge Koussevitzky conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Brahms—Symphony No. 3 in F-major. Eugene Ormandy conducting the Philadelphia Orchestra.

TUESDAY: Brahms-Symphony No. 1 in C-minor. Arturo Toscanini conducting the NBC Symphony Orchestra.

Johann Strauss — Waltzes. Robert Stoltz and Orchestra.

THURSDAY—Hanson - Symphony No. 2 (Romantic). Howard Hanson conducting the Eastman-Rochester Symphony Orchestra.

Wagner — Orchestral Excerpts. Arturo Toscanini and the Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra of New York.

FRIDAY: Dvorak — Quartet No. 3 in E-flat major. Busch Quartet.

De Falla—"El Amor Brujo." Pedro Morales and Symphony Orchestra.

This Week
MAGAZINE

NEW YORK
Herald Tribune

(Copyright, 1953, New York Herald Tribune Inc.)

SECTION 7 AUGUST 16 1953

MICHELE MORGAN: SEE "MOVIES ON THE MOVE," PAGE 26

BACKSTAGE AT TANGLEWOOD

by Herbert Kupferberg . . . Page 8

This Week
MAGAZINE

NEW YORK
Herald Tribune
(Copyright, 1953, New York Herald Tribune Inc.)

SECTION 7 AUGUST 16 1953

MICHELE MORGAN: SEE "MOVIES ON THE MOVE," PAGE 26

BACKSTAGE AT TANGLEWOOD

by Herbert Kupferberg . . . Page 8

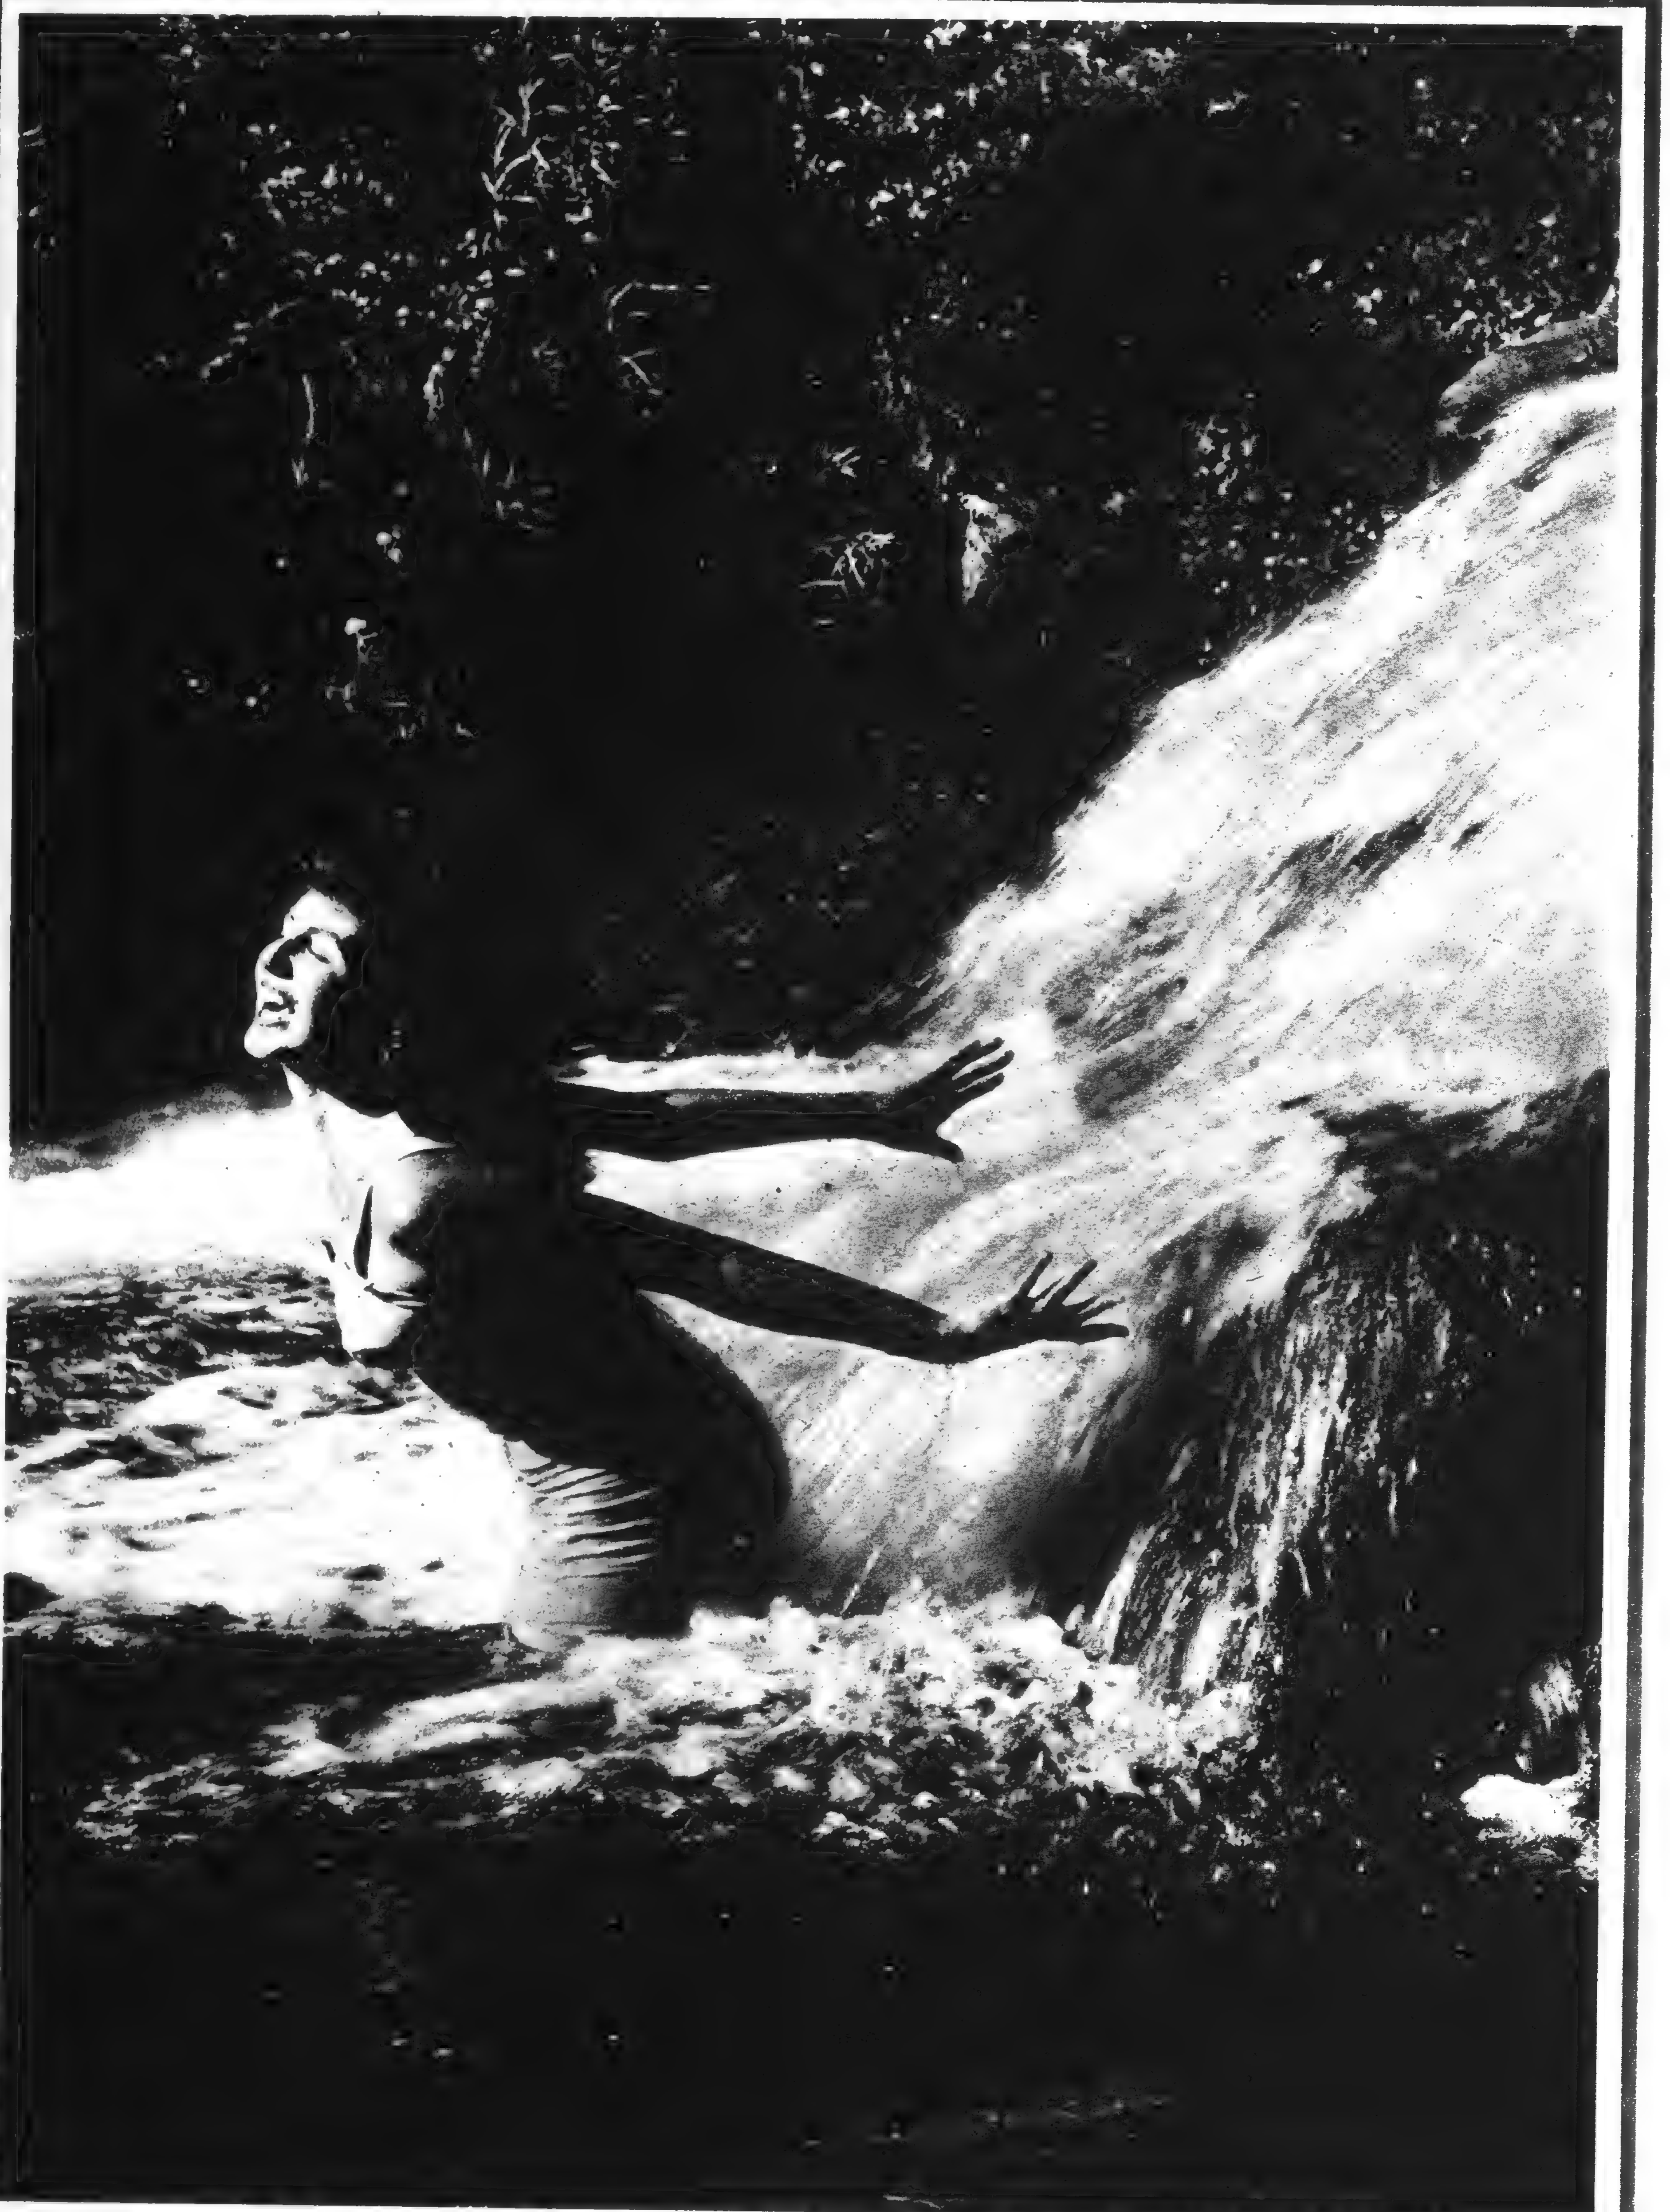


PHOTO BY HY PESKIN . . . PLACE: MT. RAINIER, WASH. . . GIRL: MOLLIE O'DELL

EDITORIAL FOR A SUMMER SUNDAY

SOMETIMES editorials can be written with a camera as well as with a typewriter. Take the picture above, for example. We think it's one you will enjoy all month long, especially when the thermometer climbs over 90.

— THE EDITORS

Sidelines

OUT OF THE MOUTHS . . . Most of t world's successful writers consider one go literary agent perfectly adequate to represe them. But we know of a four-year-old b who has not one, but two topflight ager peddling his wares. The little boy is the s of literary agent Harold Matson, who to the following story to his friend, literary age George T. Bye, who passed it on to us.

One recent morning the youngster escor Mr. Matson, a daily commuter to New Yo City, from his house to his car. Suddenly thr or four soldiers passed by and the boy citedly shouted, "Look, Men Scouts!" suspect this is the shortest short-short eith agent has ever marketed.

NOW HEAR THIS! We sensed a note quiet distress in the following "persona item which we spotted in a recent issue the "New Hope (Pa.) Gazette":

"Dear Folks: I am not advertising for young ladies to share my apartment over r Buick Agency. The lady in the other apa ment is the one [who advertised]. Yours tru Don Kimmell."

KEEP THEM COMING! Can we encoura more Red flyers to escape from behind t Iron Curtain? Yes, says former Polish Li tenant Frank Jarecki, first MiG pilot to se his Soviet jet screaming into Allied han But right now, he adds, we're going abou the wrong way! In next week's issue Jare makes this amazing revelation in an imp tant article, as told to A. E. Hotchner. explains how the West is actually discour ing hundreds of others like him to follow su and tells in detail what he thinks we m do in the future to "Help Them Escape!"

Also next week: an article that sho interest every member of the family, "W Do You Want Most Out Of Life?" by Jo E. Gibson; a suspenseful fiction story Arthur Gordon, "They Met At Midnigh plus many other features. — THE EDITO

This Week
THE SUNDAY MAGAZINE
WILLIAM I. NICHOLS, Editor
Editorial offices: 420 Lexington Avenue, New York 17, New York

THE CERFBOARD....................
"WHY I STOOD ALONE"....................
by Syngman Rhee
BACKSTAGE AT TANGLEWOOD............
by Herbert Kupferberg
TRIPLE ENIGMA....................
by Emily Genauer
HOW TO BEAT VANDALISM.............
by Fairfield Osborn
MOVIES ON THE MOVE!....................
by Louis Berg
FOR THE SIMPLE LIFE....................
Eugenia Sheppard, Women's Feature Editor
THE HOME INSTITUTE....................
FASHION FIND....................
FROM CLEMENTINE'S KITCHEN...............
by Clementine Paddleford
PUZZLES....................

Names and descriptions of all characters in fiction st and semi-fiction articles in this magazine are w imaginary. Any name which happens to be the sam that of any person, living or dead, is entirely coincide The title "This Week" is registered in the U.S. Patent O

FOR A BETTER AMERI

This Week MAGAZINE

"WHY I STOOD ALONE"

by Syngman Rhee

President of South Korea

What will history say of Syngman Rhee? To many he is the obstinate man who delayed peace in Korea. To others he is a lonely and heroic figure opposing a Munich-like appeasement of the Communist enemy.

Here THIS WEEK Magazine presents exclusively Mr. Rhee's personal statement of why he acted as he did. Whatever your verdict, whatever has happened since he wrote this article, you will want to read it as part of the unfolding history of our time. — The Editors

WIDE WORLD

RHEE'S CLAIM: "I am only doing what the world praised Churchill for doing in 1940" [rejecting an appeasement peace]

SEOUL, KOREA

IN THE ebb tide of my life I have been compelled to take a stand against Communist aggression in Asia that has provoked much criticism. Korea's recent attitude and actions during the truce negotiations have even been labeled "treacherous" by so eminent a statesman as Winston Churchill. Yet I am convinced that Korea's stiff attitude will serve historically to turn the tide against the tyranny of Communist imperialism even as Churchill's own decision in 1940 to fight on alone against Hitler meant the beginning of the end of Nazism and black tyranny.

As a great orator, Churchill was able to convey to the world why it was better to risk a nation's temporary destruction rather than give up the fight. I have never heard him described as "suicidal" or "reckless" — current favorites in describing my leadership of Korea.

Yet my country today, like Great Britain in 1940, believes that rather than accept a truce of appeasement — the kind of truce we truly believe to be suicidal — it is best to fight on. Our continued resistance will gain time for the pressure of events and the actions

OLLIE O'DELL

Sidelines

OUT OF THE MOUTHS . . . Most of t world's successful writers consider one go literary agent perfectly adequate to represe them. But we know of a four-year-old b who has not one, but two topflight agen peddling his wares. The little boy is the s of literary agent Harold Matson, who to the following story to his friend, literary age
George T. Bye, who passed it on to us.

One recent morning the youngster escort
Mr. Matson, a daily commuter to New Yo City, from his house to his car. Suddenly thr or four soldiers passed by and the boy e citedly shouted, "Look, Men Scouts!" W suspect this is the shortest short-short eith agent has ever marketed.

NOW HEAR THIS! We sensed a note quiet distress in the following "persona item which we spotted in a recent issue
the "New Hope (Pa.) Gazette":

"Dear Folks: I am not advertising for young ladies to share my apartment over r Buick Agency. The lady in the other apa ment is the one [who advertised]. Yours tru
Don Kimmell."

KEEP THEM COMING! Can we encoura more Red flyers to escape from behind t
Iron Curtain? Yes, says former Polish Lie tenant Frank Jarecki, first MiG pilot to se his Soviet jet screaming into Allied han
But right now, he adds, we're going about the wrong way! In next week's issue Jare makes this amazing revelation in an imp tant article, as told to A. E. Hotchner.
explains how the West is actually discour
ing hundreds of others like him to follow su and tells in detail what he thinks we m do in the future to "Help Them Escape!"

Also next week: an article that shou interest every member of the family, "Wh
Do You Want Most Out Of Life?" by Jo
E. Gibson; a suspenseful fiction story
Arthur Gordon, "They Met At Midnigh
plus many other features. — THE EDITO

This Week
THE SUNDAY MAGAZINE
WILLIAM I. NICHOLS, Editor

Editorial offices: 420 Lexington Avenue, New York 17, New York

THE CERFBOARD..............................
"WHY I STOOD ALONE"....................
by Syngman Rhee
BACKSTAGE AT TANGLEWOOD............
by Herbert Kupferberg
TRIPLE ENIGMA..............................
by Emily Genauer
HOW TO BEAT VANDALISM....... ....
by Fairfield Osborn
MOVIES ON THE MOVE!......................
by Louis Berg
FOR THE SIMPLE LIFE.........................
Eugenia Sheppard, Women's Feature Editor
THE HOME INSTITUTE.........................
FASHION FIND.................................
FROM CLEMENTINE'S KITCHEN..............
by Clementine Paddleford
PUZZLES...

Names and descriptions of all characters in fiction st and semi-fiction articles in this magazine are wh imaginary. Any name which happens to be the sam that of any person, living or dead, is entirely coincide
The title "This Week" is registered in the U.S. Patent Of

FOR A BETTER AMERI

This Week MAGAZINE

"WHY I STOOD ALONE"

by Syngman Rhee

President of South Korea

HANS MALMBERG

SYNGMAN RHEE: For 58 years he has fought for his country's freedom

What will history say of Syngman Rhee? To many he is the obstinate man who delayed peace in Korea. To others he is a lonely and heroic figure opposing a Munich-like appeasement of the Communist enemy.

Here THIS WEEK Magazine presents exclusively Mr. Rhee's personal statement of why he acted as he did. Whatever your verdict, whatever has happened since he wrote this article, you will want to read it as part of the unfolding history of our time. — The Editors

SEOUL, KOREA

IN THE ebb tide of my life I have been compelled to take a stand against Communist aggression in Asia that has provoked much criticism. Korea's recent attitude and actions during the truce negotiations have even been labeled "treacherous" by so eminent a statesman as Winston Churchill. Yet I am convinced that Korea's stiff attitude will serve historically to turn the tide against the tyranny of Communist imperialism even as Churchill's own decision in 1940 to fight on alone against Hitler meant the beginning of the end of Nazism and black tyranny.

WIDE WORLD

RHEE'S CLAIM: "I am only doing what the world praised Churchill for doing in 1940" [rejecting an appeasement peace]

As a great orator, Churchill was able to convey to the world why it was better to risk a nation's temporary destruction rather than give up the fight. I have never heard him described as "suicidal" or "reckless" — current favorites in describing my leadership of Korea.

Yet my country today, like Great Britain in 1940, believes that rather than accept a truce of appeasement — the kind of truce we truly believe to be suicidal — it is best to fight on. Our continued resistance will gain time for the pressure of events and the actions of the Reds themselves to convince the rest of the free nations that their own self interest is involved in sending the Communist Chinese monster back to his own border. The alternative is that this monster, by feeding on its new conquests, will develop power and appetite for all Asia.

"I Never Lost Confidence"

I HAVE been a long-time scholar of both Christian and Confucian ethics. Deeply imbedded in these two philosophies is the maxim that America expresses in the phrase: "Right will prevail." After all it took nearly 58 years of my lifetime to achieve the liberation of even South Korea from the reactionary rule of the Korean kings and of the Japanese. Yet I never lost confidence that right would ultimately prevail.

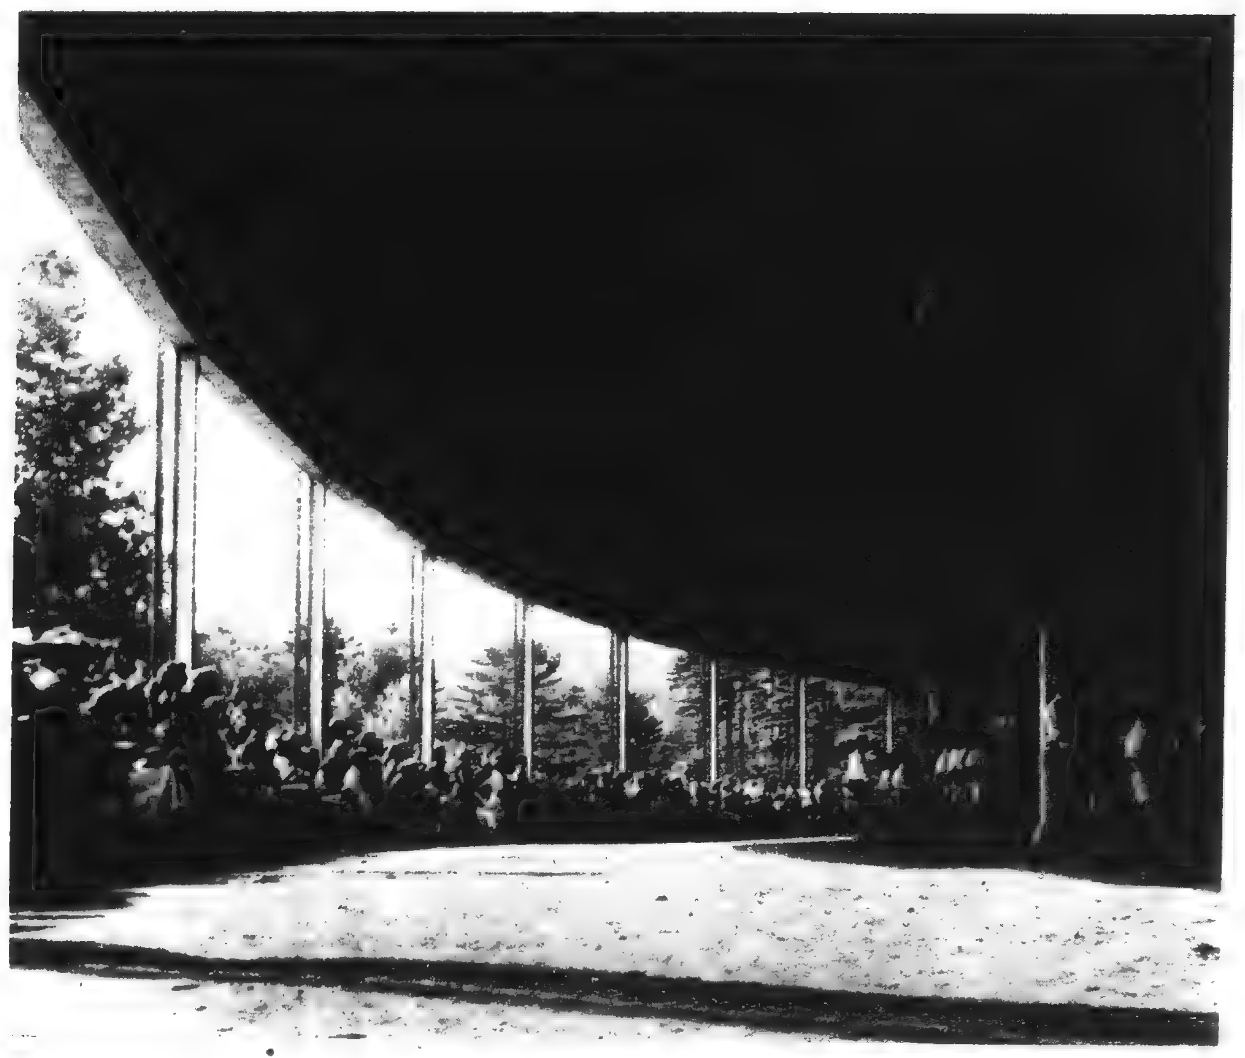
This was true even in the dark days when I was condemned to life imprisonment and it seemed as if the principles for which I had fought would be realized only after my death.

It is deeply regrettable to me that there appears to have been such serious misunderstanding in the Western world about Korean motives in rejecting an armistice we considered equivalent in our time to a Far Eastern Munich.

On the specific issue of the original truce proposals, it is incredible that anyone can seriously assert that Communist aggression has been repulsed so long as millions of Chinese troops retain the North Korean territory seized by force of arms or so long as the armistice contains no time limit on the Red enemy's continued illegal presence in our country.

Back in 1950 my country faced a North Korean foe of some half million men. In 1953 we are confronted with the presence of a combined Chinese-North Korean force of three times the numerical strength of the original

Continued on page 45



CLEMENS KALISCHER

INSIDE THE SHED: Boston Symphony's week-end concerts at Tanglewood, given in this fan-shaped structure are required listening for resident students

SHOP TALK: Charles Münch, Boston Symphony's conductor, chats with members of Tanglewood's class of '53 from Hungary, China, Canada, Korea and Sweden

TASK: Soprano Sara Mae Endich irons dress she will wear in appearance with Symphony

TEST: Sara Mae is a soloist in a c
One critic's verdict: "A very bri

BACKSTAGE AT TANGLEWOOD:

THE PRESCRIPTIONIS WORK

COACHING: Boris Goldovsky, head of opera department, expounds the "geography of the stage" for a scene from the "Marriage of Figaro"

To visitors, Tanglewood means relaxing open-air concerts. But it's no vacation spot for the 400 young musicians there — they're taking music's post-postgraduate course

by Herbert Kupferberg

Photographs by Ted Kell

LENOX, MASS.

WHEN Tanglewood, scene of America's great Berkshire Music Festival, ends its summer season today, the drugstore here puts away the pictures of composers that have decorated its showcases, the restaurant on U.S. 7 empties its juke box of the Chopin and Tchaikovsky records, the traffic turns away from the Berkshire Hills.

For the last six weeks Tanglewood has been the musical capital of America. More than 150,000 people have visited it to hear the Boston Symphony Orchestra in its famous fan-shaped shed. They have wandered the grounds of the 210-acre estate that houses Tanglewood, and sprawled under its elm trees as rarely-heard operatic and chamber works were performed. And yet very few of them have seen the real Tanglewood, the Tanglewood that is gradually changing the musical face of America.

The real Tanglewood might be called the festival of the working girl, if the working girl is taken as a symbol of the serious young musician of today. When Charles Münch, the tall, gray-haired conductor of the Boston Symphony, opened Tanglewood this summer he told his audience that they were there for "work, work and more work."

His audience consisted not of the great crowds that travel to Tanglewood for a single evening or perhaps a week end of music, but of 400 young men and women who are there throughout the season. They are the members of the Berkshire Music Center, the pick of 1,100 applicants from the world over.

One is the conductor of a Korean symphony orchestra. Another is a secretary in a New York office. A third is a resort newspaper publisher from Florida. A fourth is a piano teacher from Scarsdale, N. Y. They come from 40 states and 10 foreign countries. They are there for what George E. Judd, the veteran manager of the orchestra, calls "the last step to a successful professional career."

They're Already Pros

TO GET into the Berkshire school you have to be a skilled musician. Boris Goldovsky, the Metropolitan Opera radio commentator, who runs Tanglewood's opera department, auditions 500 eager applicants a year. He accepts 50. Half of these receive scholarships; the others pay the $150 tuition.

At Tanglewood no one is taught to sing, to play the bassoon or to read music — they already know how. Those who come are all professionals, or at least semi-pros.

What the late Serge Koussevitsky, who established the Berkshire music school in 1940, wanted to create was a place where the young professional could make music with older hands and where the most proficient could appear as soloists with the eat Boston Symphony Orchestra. Famous names ive been uncovered here — Dorothy Maynor and onard Bernstein, for example.

Typical of this year's musicians is Sara Mae ndich, a soprano from Steubenville, Ohio. Miss ndich works the year round as a part-time secretary a New York office to supplement her income from nging engagements. She has come to Tanglewood r two seasons.

Her first summer here brought her one of the great rills of her life, for although she had never sung th an orchestra before, she was singled out from e chorus to be soloist with the Boston Symphony a Schubert Mass and a Mozart Litany. Last onth, after hearing her performance at Tanglewood in a Bach cantata, one New York critic wrote: Miss Endich is a soprano with a very bright future, r she is endowed with a voice of truly beautiful d rich texture."

But press clippings don't mean too much at Tanewood, because there's little time to read them. a student misses three classes or practice sessions, is politely asked to leave.

Hugh Ross, the conductor of New York's Schola ntorum and the head of the choral department at nglewood, says: "These are very serious young ople who haven't much time to get set in a highly mpetitive profession. They want to learn every inute. How many are asked to leave for not attend- to their work? Well, say, less than one a year."

Sara Mae Endich and her colleagues at Tangleod work an eight-hour, six-day week on the spaus "campus." On Sunday, which is their day f," they attend the Boston Symphony concerts. Two-thirds of the young Tanglewood musicians e in dormitories at schools near the grounds. The hers live in private homes here in Lenox, two miles ay. Miss Endich is among these, sharing a fourm attic with three other girls.

The four, all in their 20's, are a microcosm of the nglewood student body. In addition to Sara Mae, re are Mary de Csepel, born in Hungary and now an American citizen, who teaches pian in Scarsdale; Lois McCauley, a soprano Hill, N. C., just returned from a year i Fulbright fellowship; and Marcelle H mezzo-soprano who owns two weekly but would rather learn to sing "Carmen

The girls maintain a schedule that office routine almost seem a pleasure. sufferer whose turn it is to make coffe 8:15 breakfast is ready, and at 8:45 eve into Mary's car for the work day, which st

"We Grid Together Well"

THREE or four coaching sessions for op or chamber music parts consume the m one o'clock the three sopranos march off sky's opera class. This takes up the tim o'clock, after which there are more coachi

When the girls get back to Lenox at they have to shop for their evening meal, — sometimes most trying of all — eat it. ner they clean up the house, do their w ironing — most of the time with an ope by — and at 10 or 10:30 they are in bed.

"We grid together well," says Lois "gridding" being a term concocted by Go denote a common denominator of tempo musicians can synchronize their performa girls find it helps in living together, as playing music together.

Even the girls' landlady, Mrs. Philip Ba started to "grid." The morning before was to sing her Bach cantata, Mrs. Ba peared at her door with a beautiful green "I heard you were singing with the Bos phony this afternoon," she said. "My h in the dress business, and we wanted yo this to wear."

When the girls attend classes at Tanglew sing and play their music in barns, ga lofts. The main orchestral shed seats 6,00

Continued

HOP TALK: Charles Münch, Boston Symphc ny's conductor, chats with members f Tanglewood's class of '53 from Hungary, C ina, Canada, Korea and Sweden

ASK: Soprano Sara Mae Endich irons dress he will wear in appearance with Symphony

TEST: Sara Mae is a soloist in a choral work. One critic's verdict: "A very bright future"

REHEARSAL: It's part of Sara Mae's eight-hour, six-day week at Tanglewood. During rest of year, she works as a part-time secretary

SCRIPTIONIS WORK

s, Tanglewood means relaxing open-air concerts.
no vacation spot for the 400 young musicians hey're taking music's post-postgraduate course

by Herbert Kupferberg

Photographs by Ted Kell

LENOX, MASS.

, scene of America's great Festival, ends its summer tore here puts away the pic- t have decorated its show- U.S. 7 empties its juke box aikovsky records, the traffic erkshire Hills.

s Tanglewood has been the ica. More than 150,000 peo- hear the Boston Symphony fan-shaped shed. They have of the 210-acre estate that nd sprawled under its elm peratic and chamber works yet very few of them have od, the Tanglewood that is musical face of America.

might be called the festival he working girl is taken as a ung musician of today. When ll, gray-haired conductor of , opened Tanglewood this dience that they were there ore work."

ed not of the great crowds ood for a single evening or music, but of 400 young men and women who are there throughout the season. They are the members of the Berkshire Music Center, the pick of 1,100 applicants from the world over.

One is the conductor of a Korean symphony orchestra. Another is a secretary in a New York office. A third is a resort newspaper publisher from Florida. A fourth is a piano teacher from Scarsdale, N. Y. They come from 40 states and 10 foreign countries. They are there for what George E. Judd, the veteran manager of the orchestra, calls "the last step to a successful professional career."

They're Already Pros

To GET into the Berkshire school you have to be a skilled musician. Boris Goldovsky, the Metropolitan Opera radio commentator, who runs Tanglewood's opera department, auditions 500 eager applicants a year. He accepts 50. Half of these receive scholarships; the others pay the $150 tuition.

At Tanglewood no one is taught to sing, to play the bassoon or to read music — they already know how. Those who come are all professionals, or at least semi-pros.

What the late Serge Koussevitsky, who established the Berkshire music school in 1940, wanted to create was a place where the young professional could make music with older hands and where the most proficient could appear as soloists with the at Boston Symphony Orchestra. Famous names ve been uncovered here — Dorothy Maynor and onard Bernstein, for example.

Typical of this year's musicians is Sara Mae dich, a soprano from Steubenville, Ohio. Miss dich works the year round as a part-time secretary a New York office to supplement her income from ging engagements. She has come to Tanglewood two seasons.

Her first summer here brought her one of the great ills of her life, for although she had never sung h an orchestra before, she was singled out from chorus to be soloist with the Boston Symphony a Schubert Mass and a Mozart Litany. Last nth, after hearing her performance at Tangleod in a Bach cantata, one New York critic wrote: iss Endich is a soprano with a very bright future, she is endowed with a voice of truly beautiful rich texture."

But press clippings don't mean too much at Tanwood, because there's little time to read them. student misses three classes or practice sessions, is politely asked to leave.

Hugh Ross, the conductor of New York's Schola ntorum and the head of the choral department at nglewood, says: "These are very serious young ple who haven't much time to get set in a highly npetitive profession. They want to learn every ute. How many are asked to leave for not attendto their work? Well, say, less than one a year."

ara Mae Endich and her colleagues at Tangled work an eight-hour, six-day week on the spas "campus." On Sunday, which is their day ," they attend the Boston Symphony concerts. wo-thirds of the young Tanglewood musicians in dormitories at schools near the grounds. The ers live in private homes here in Lenox, two miles y. Miss Endich is among these, sharing a fourm attic with three other girls.

The four, all in their 20's, are a microcosm of the glewood student body. In addition to Sara Mae, e are Mary de Csepel, born in Hungary and now an American citizen, who teaches piano at a school in Scarsdale; Lois McCauley, a soprano from Chapel Hill, N. C., just returned from a year in Italy on a Fulbright fellowship; and Marcelle Hammond, a mezzo-soprano who owns two weekly newspapers, but would rather learn to sing "Carmen."

The girls maintain a schedule that would make office routine almost seem a pleasure. At 7:30 the sufferer whose turn it is to make coffee arises. At 8:15 breakfast is ready, and at 8:45 everybody piles into Mary's car for the work day, which starts at nine.

"We Grid Together Well"

THREE or four coaching sessions for operatic roles or chamber music parts consume the morning. At one o'clock the three sopranos march off to Goldovsky's opera class. This takes up the time until four o'clock, after which there are more coaching sessions.

When the girls get back to Lenox at 5:30 or so, they have to shop for their evening meal, cook it and — sometimes most trying of all — eat it. After dinner they clean up the house, do their washing and ironing — most of the time with an open score near by — and at 10 or 10:30 they are in bed.

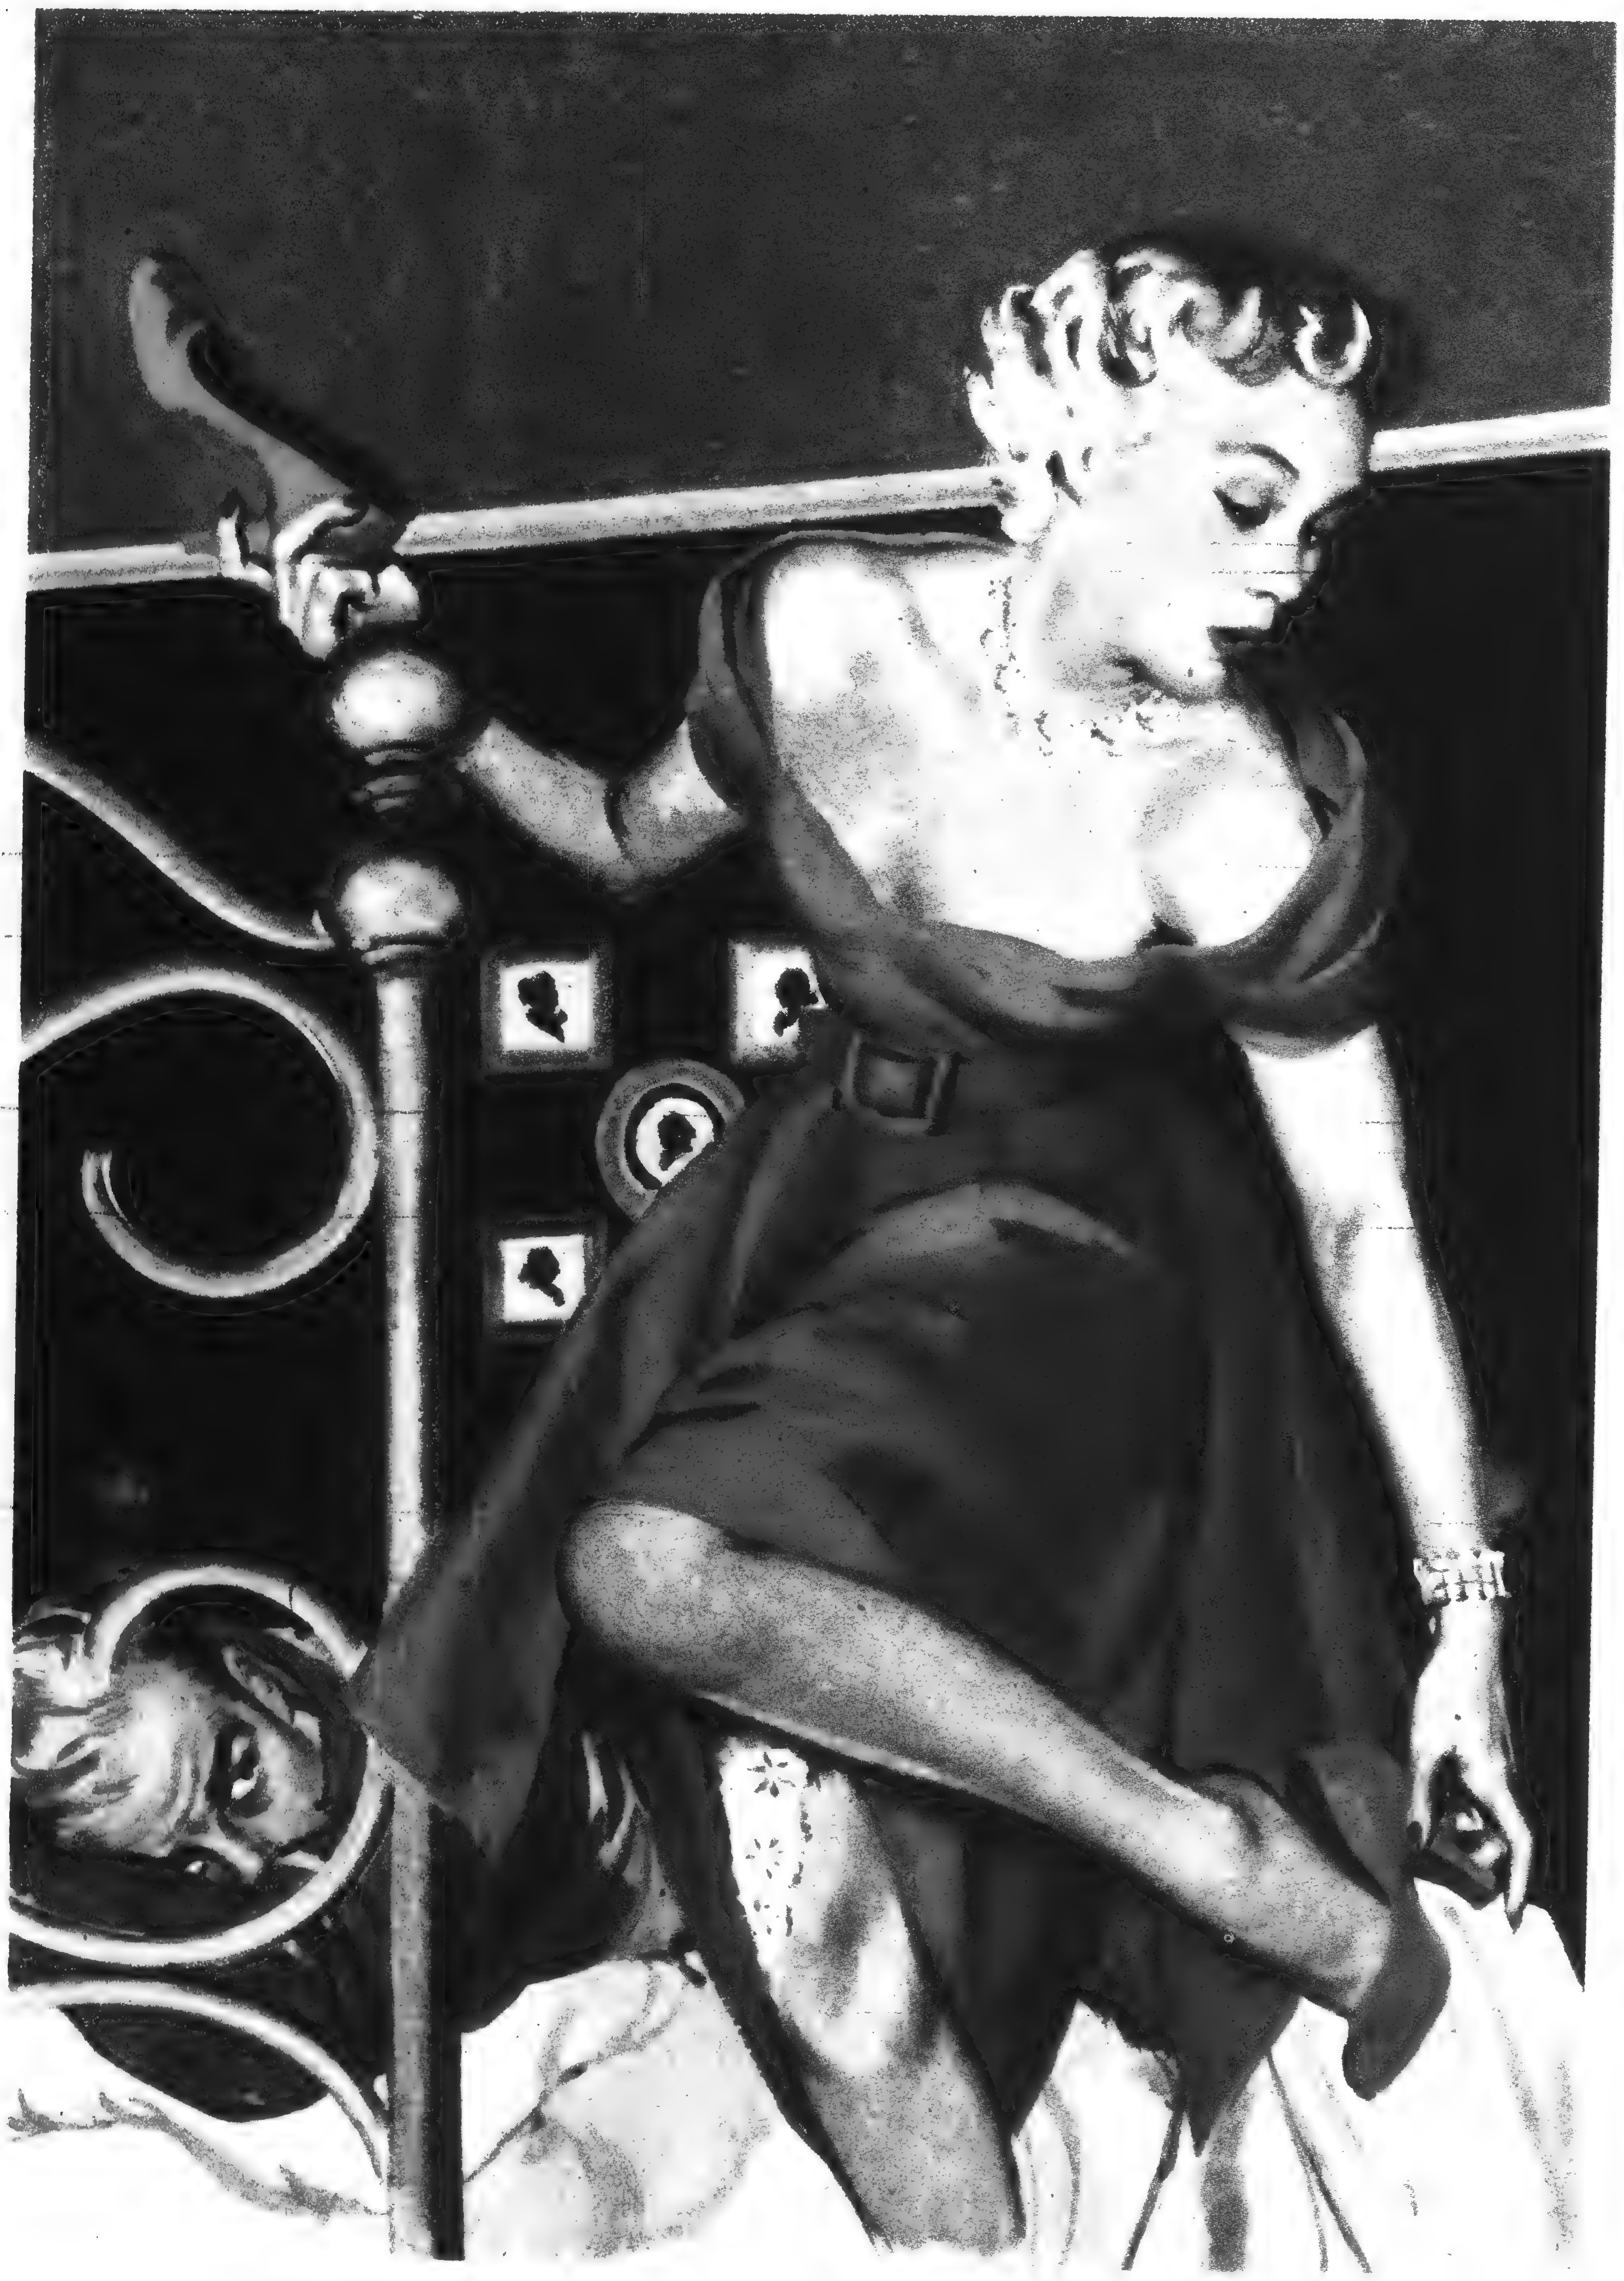
"We grid together well," says Lois McCauley, "gridding" being a term concocted by Goldovsky to denote a common denominator of tempo by which musicians can synchronize their performances. The girls find it helps in living together, as well as in playing music together.

Even the girls' landlady, Mrs. Philip Bashara, has started to "grid." The morning before Sara Mae was to sing her Bach cantata, Mrs. Bashara appeared at her door with a beautiful green net gown. "I heard you were singing with the Boston Symphony this afternoon," she said. "My husband is in the dress business, and we wanted you to have this to wear."

When the girls attend classes at Tanglewood, they sing and play their music in barns, garages and lofts. The main orchestral shed seats 6,000 persons.

Continued on page 40

THEIR SEVENTH ANNIVERSARY — AND MOLLY ADMITTED SHE WAS IN LOVE WITH SOMEONE ELSE! ALL JIM'S SUCCESS IN BUSINESS HAD



When Molly tiptoed into the room Jim kept his breathing regular and opened his eyes

THE

FEATURE FICTION

ONE week before his seventh wedding anniversary, Jim Hathaway's secretary alerted him. The day before, she had placed on his desk a jeweler's box, small and smartly wrapped. And on the morning of the day itself, he came down to breakfast to find Molly sitting at the table, an open letter in her hand. She was staring off into space.

"Good morning," he said. "Happy August Eighteenth!"

Molly didn't answer. She hadn't heard him.

"Good morning!" he repeated. She didn't move. He looked at her with some concern. "I said — " he began, drawing a deep breath.

"Hello, dear." Molly looked up. "How are you?"

"I'm fine," he said, and placed the little package on the table. "Happy anniversary."

Molly's startled eyes looked from him to the pretty little package.

"It's August eighteenth," Jim said. "You married me. Remember?"

"Yes — " The word was a whisper. She reached for the gift.

Jim watched while she unwrapped it. The jeweler's instructions were to use his own judgment in selecting presents for Molly. It had become a routine. Of course, Jim's secretary always told him what had been chosen, but he almost always forgot —

"Oh, Jim!" Molly's voice was hushed before the brilliance of the diamond bracelet in the box. "It's lovely!"

It was lovely. To slip it on her wrist, she put the letter on the table, and Jim caught a glimpse of the signature. It was "Ted."

Molly turned the bracelet so the light accented its fiery sparkle, admiring it. Then she stood up, her dark-blue eyes shining. Without a word, she threw her arms around Jim's neck.

OVER her shoulder, Jim could see the signature on the letter even better. It was "Ted" all right.

When they were seated again, Molly kept her eyes on the bracelet while she ate.

Jim said, "I'd wanted to go out to dinner tonight — maybe a show, and dance afterward — "

Molly looked at him; her eyes wide with something that was not delight. It was an alarmed expression.

"But Philip Benson's going to be in town," Jim said quietly.

"Philip Benson." Molly nodded.

"Well, you know — " he went on. "It's a nice account. Any advertising man in New

---

THE SHOP WINDOW

AIR MOVES FROM HEEL TO TOE WHEN WALKING ALBINS

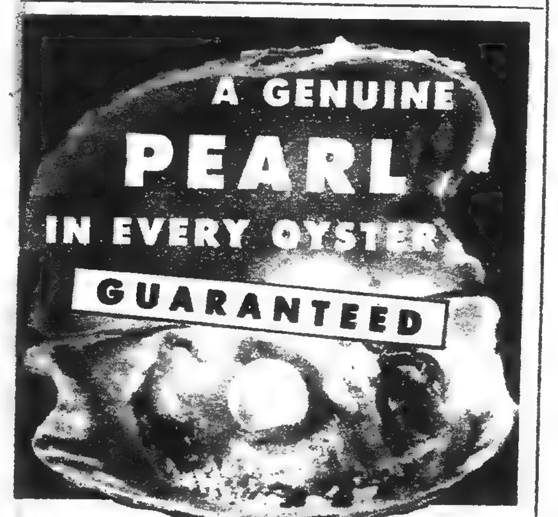
Walk on Air

Here's quick relief for anyone suffering from calluses, blisters, spur or bruised heels, or general foot fatigue. Albin Air Cush'n Innersoles give your feet immediate comfort. Just place in your shoes and walk. Air moves thru a small channel, gently massaging feet. Odorless, non-absorbent, almost weightless. Order by men's or women's shoe size. Only $2.95 a pair. (No COD's, please. Money back if not delighted.) Albin of California, Room 108-B, 1403-17 W. 8th St., Los Angeles 17, Calif.



Thrill to opening a mother-oyster and being first to discover a genuine pearl inside. A lustrous, iridescent gem, with 3 years growth within the oyster. Perfect for mounting in rings or pins. Terrific surprise gift or party favor. Comes sealed in can. Guaranteed 3/16" diameter, or a new pearl, or money back. Only $2.65. We pay postage. Order one or more today

FRED ROBERTS CO., Importers, Dept. A
1578 Howard Street, San Francisco, Calif.

SHORTHAND IN 4 DAYS

Learn Shorthand in 4 Days

It's a pattern to take notes quickly

An amazingly simple shorthand, using the regular alphabet, is explained in these four easy-to-understand lessons. Not a correspondence course — all lessons contained in one book. Fine for school and office work. 4th large reprinting. $1.50 postpaid. Published by the FINELINE CO., 303(86) Fifth Avenue, New York 16, N. Y., which guarantees full refund if not completely satisfied.

FUN FOR THE WHOLE FAMILY!
REAL HORSESHOE
Pitching sets with stakes — Make the grand old sport of backyard horseshoe pitching a family affair.
Real Horseshoes. Not Heavy "Quoits" are the right size and weight for Mom and the kids too, and they are authentic. Bright Aluminum finish — packed in sturdy corrugated box with real hay and interesting educational literature.
$3.95 postage prepaid check or M. O. BEATMAN, PO Box 397 So. Norwalk, Conn.

NOW! TENDER, JUICY STEAKS and ROASTS
...from toughest, cheapest grades of meat with 3V Papaya Meat Tenderizer
Best by test with professional chefs since 1941. A tasteless liquid fruit extract. CONTAINS NO SALT, SUGAR or FILLERS. Leaves no messy paste on meat surfaces like Johnny-Come-Lately powders. ORDER DIRECT. Long lasting 5 oz. bottle $1 postpaid. Free circular. 3V CO., Dept. H29, 165 Water St. N.Y. 38
ACCEPTED FOR ADVERTISING IN PUBLICATIONS OF AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

and there are two smaller ones, but these are used mostly for actual performances. Every other structure on the grounds is employed for instruction, and one may stroll along and listen to a bass rehearsing Masetto's song from "Don Giovanni" while Amneris is berating Aïda in the next stable and off in the distance Desdemona is being smothered by Otello, all to a background of a Beethoven sonata in the main house.

Paul Ulanowsky, accompanist for Lotte Lehmann and many other famous singers, sits outside of what is known as "the thin barn," in which a small upright piano stands among the tractors and plows. Three young men who have been rehearsing a trio from Mozart's "Cosi fan Tutte" are just leaving. As they depart, Miss Endich and a young tenor from Coalinga. Calif., named John McCollum approach for some coaching in a "La Bohème" duet.

"I feel like a dentist," Ulanowsky sighs. "Always saying 'Next!' "

"Just Nervous"

FEW schools offer the kind of advanced coaching that Tanglewood can. One faculty member estimates that six weeks at Tanglewood, with concentrated, almost continuous work, are the equivalent of two years' study elsewhere, even under the same teachers. Two hours after Miss Endich and McCollum have ended their "Bohème" session, they are back at the thin barn for some work on a rarely heard opera of Chabrier, "An Incomplete Education," one of three presented this summer.

"Rehearsals and preparation are so thorough here," says Miss Endich, "that even when I sang for the first time with the Boston Symphony, I wasn't really frightened — just nervous."

Aaron Copland, one of America's

BACKSTA

Conti

leading co ant direct Center si says that tional act to the fac
"It keep younger g see the mo
over the sessions cl back and in their ow

T

THE direc
happy to s idea is be Europe. T time, the Austria, hi established talists, had
The stud glewood is joys; this y playing th
Festival, p shed under student co
Bernstein, w ing departm
Among t
the student were half American s tions. They ented playe orchestras, a
No less tha musicians n can sympho glewood alu age is even organization
As if to em
ousness, Tar visitors to i guided tours laxed only w
phony gives i Even the gently remind

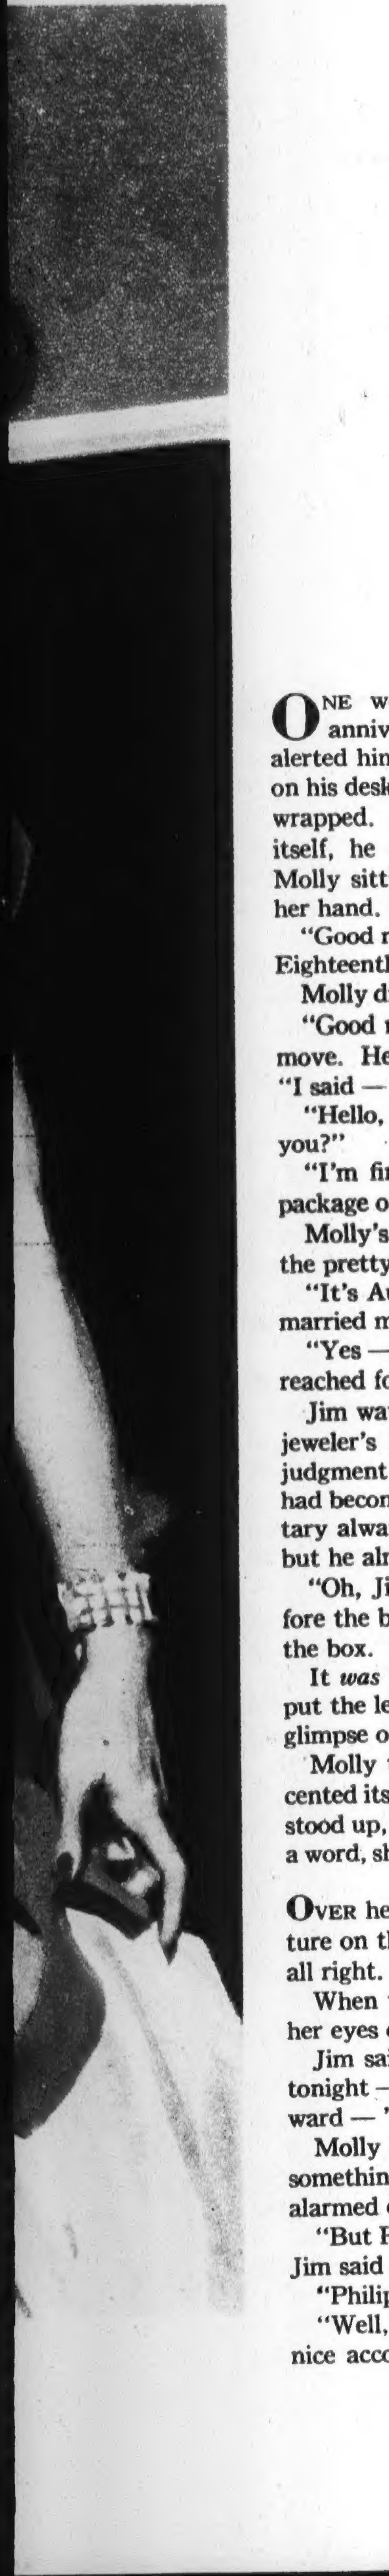
SHORTS FORBIDDEN: Tanglewood supplie

DMITTED SHE WAS IN LOVE

IM'S SUCCESS IN BUSINESS HAD



THE

FEATURE FICTION

ONE week before his seventh wedding anniversary, Jim Hathaway's secretary alerted him. The day before, she had placed on his desk a jeweler's box, small and smartly wrapped. And on the morning of the day itself, he came down to breakfast to find Molly sitting at the table, an open letter in her hand. She was staring off into space.

"Good morning," he said. "Happy August Eighteenth!"

Molly didn't answer. She hadn't heard him.

"Good morning!" he repeated. She didn't move. He looked at her with some concern. "I said — " he began, drawing a deep breath.

"Hello, dear." Molly looked up. "How are you?"

"I'm fine," he said, and placed the little package on the table. "Happy anniversary."

Molly's startled eyes looked from him to the pretty little package.

"It's August eighteenth," Jim said. "You married me. Remember?"

"Yes — " The word was a whisper. She reached for the gift.

Jim watched while she unwrapped it. The jeweler's instructions were to use his own judgment in selecting presents for Molly. It had become a routine. Of course, Jim's secretary always told him what had been chosen, but he almost always forgot —

"Oh, Jim!" Molly's voice was hushed before the brilliance of the diamond bracelet in the box. "It's lovely!"

It was lovely. To slip it on her wrist, she put the letter on the table, and Jim caught a glimpse of the signature. It was "Ted."

Molly turned the bracelet so the light accented its fiery sparkle, admiring it. Then she stood up, her dark-blue eyes shining. Without a word, she threw her arms around Jim's neck.

OVER her shoulder, Jim could see the signature on the letter even better. It was "Ted" all right.

When they were seated again, Molly kept her eyes on the bracelet while she ate.

Jim said, "I'd wanted to go out to dinner tonight — maybe a show, and dance afterward — "

Molly looked at him; her eyes wide with something that was not delight. It was an alarmed expression.

"But Philip Benson's going to be in town," Jim said quietly.

"Philip Benson." Molly nodded.

"Well, you know — " he went on. "It's a nice account. Any advertising man in New

THE SHOP WINDOW

AIR MOVES FROM HEEL TO TOE WHEN WALKING

Walk on Air

Here's quick relief for anyone suffering from calluses, blisters, spur or bruised heels, or general foot fatigue. Albin Air Cush'n Innersoles give your feet immediate comfort. Just place in your shoes and walk. Air moves thru a small channel, gently massaging feet. Odorless, non-absorbent, almost weightless. Order by men's or women's shoe size. Only $2.95 a pair. (No COD's, please. Money back if not delighted.) Albin of California, Room 108-B, 1403-17 W. 8th St., Los Angeles 17, Calif.

A GENUINE PEARL IN EVERY OYSTER GUARANTEED

Thrill to opening a mother-oyster and being first to discover a genuine pearl inside. A lustrous, iridescent gem, with 3 years growth within the oyster. Perfect for mounting in rings or pins. Terrific surprise gift or party favor. Comes sealed in can. Guaranteed 3/16" diameter, or a new pearl, or money back. Only $2.65. We pay postage. Order one or more today

FRED ROBERTS CO., Importers, Dept. A
1578 Howard Street, San Francisco, Calif.

SHORTHAND IN 4 DAYS

Learn Shorthand in 4 Days

It's a pattern to take notes quickly

An amazingly simple shorthand, using the regular alphabet, is explained in these four easy-to-understand lessons. Not a correspondence course — all lessons contained in one book. Fine for school and office work. 4th large reprinting. $1.50 postpaid. Published by the FINELINE CO., 303(86) Fifth Avenue, New York 16, N. Y., which guarantees full refund if not completely satisfied.

FUN FOR THE WHOLE FAMILY!
REAL HORSESHOE
Pitching sets with stakes — Make the grand old sport of backyard horseshoe pitching a family affair.
Real Horseshoes. Not Heavy "Quoits" are the right size and weight for Mom and the kids too, and they are authentic. Bright Aluminum finish — packed in sturdy corrugated box with real hay and interesting educational literature.
$3.95 postage prepaid check or M. O. BEATMAN, PO Box 397 So. Norwalk, Conn.

NOW! TENDER, JUICY STEAKS and ROASTS
...from toughest, cheapest grades of meat with 3V Papaya Meat Tenderizer
Best by test with professional chefs since 1941. A tasteless liquid fruit extract. CONTAINS NO SALT, SUGAR or FILLERS. Leaves no messy paste on meat surfaces like Johnny-Come-Lately powders. ORDER DIRECT. Long lasting 5 oz. bottle $1 postpaid. Free circular.
ACCEPTED FOR ADVERTISING IN PUBLICATIONS OF AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION
3V CO., Dept. H29, 165 Water St. N.Y.38

BACKSTAGE AT TANGLEWOOD

Continued from page nine

and there are two smaller ones, but these are used mostly for actual performances. Every other structure on the grounds is employed for instruction, and one may stroll along and listen to a bass rehearsing Masetto's song from "Don Giovanni" while Amneris is berating Aïda in the next stable and off in the distance Desdemona is being smothered by Otello, all to a background of a Beethoven sonata in the main house.

Paul Ulanowsky, accompanist for Lotte Lehmann and many other famous singers, sits outside of what is known as "the thin barn," in which a small upright piano stands among the tractors and plows. Three young men who have been rehearsing a trio from Mozart's "Cosi fan Tutte" are just leaving. As they depart, Miss Endich and a young tenor from Coalinga, Calif., named John McCollum approach for some coaching in a "La Bohème" duet.

"I feel like a dentist," Ulanowsky sighs. "Always saying 'Next!' "

"Just Nervous"

FEW schools offer the kind of advanced coaching that Tanglewood can. One faculty member estimates that six weeks at Tanglewood, with concentrated, almost continuous work, are the equivalent of two years' study elsewhere, even under the same teachers. Two hours after Miss Endich and McCollum have ended their "Bohème" session, they are back at the thin barn for some work on a rarely heard opera of Chabrier, "An Incomplete Education," one of three presented this summer.

"Rehearsals and preparation are so thorough here," says Miss Endich, "that even when I sang for the first time with the Boston Symphony, I wasn't really frightened — just nervous."

Aaron Copland, one of America's leading composers, has been assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center since the 1945 season. He says that its expanding educational activities are as important to the faculty as to the students.

"It keeps us in contact with the younger generation," he says. "We see the most talented kids from all over the country. And when the sessions close, we watch them go back and become musical leaders in their own communities."

Talent Scouts

THE directors of the Festival are happy to see that the Tanglewood idea is being taken up now in Europe. This year, for the first time, the Salzburg Festival in Austria, hitherto confined to long-established singers and instrumentalists, had a youth orchestra.

The student orchestra at Tanglewood is one of its prides and joys; this year it had the honor of playing the first concert of the Festival, performing in the big shed under the batons of two student conductors and Leonard Bernstein, who heads the conducting department.

Among those who listened to the student orchestra this summer were half a dozen leaders of American symphonic organizations. They were looking for talented players to hire for their orchestras, and they found them. No less than 10 per cent of all musicians now playing in American symphony orchestras are Tanglewood alumni, and the percentage is even higher among choral organizations.

As if to emphasize its basic seriousness, Tanglewood permits no visitors to its grounds except on guided tours, a policy that is relaxed only when the Boston Symphony gives its weekend concerts.

Even the visitors on tour are gently reminded of their New England surroundings by a strict rule barring entry to the grounds of anyone clad in shorts. A supply of paper wrap-around skirts is maintained for distribution to visitors, male and female alike.

The closest that Tanglewood comes to opening its gates wide to all who wish to enter is the Study Group, a body of students who may enroll for two, four or six weeks and sit in on many classes and rehearsals. But even these students must be able to read music and sing in the student chorus.

To run Tanglewood costs money, of course, and the yearly deficit it adds to the Boston Symphony's budget averages $40,000. Scholarship students are asked to repay their grants as soon as they are able, and more than $10,000 has been recouped in this way.

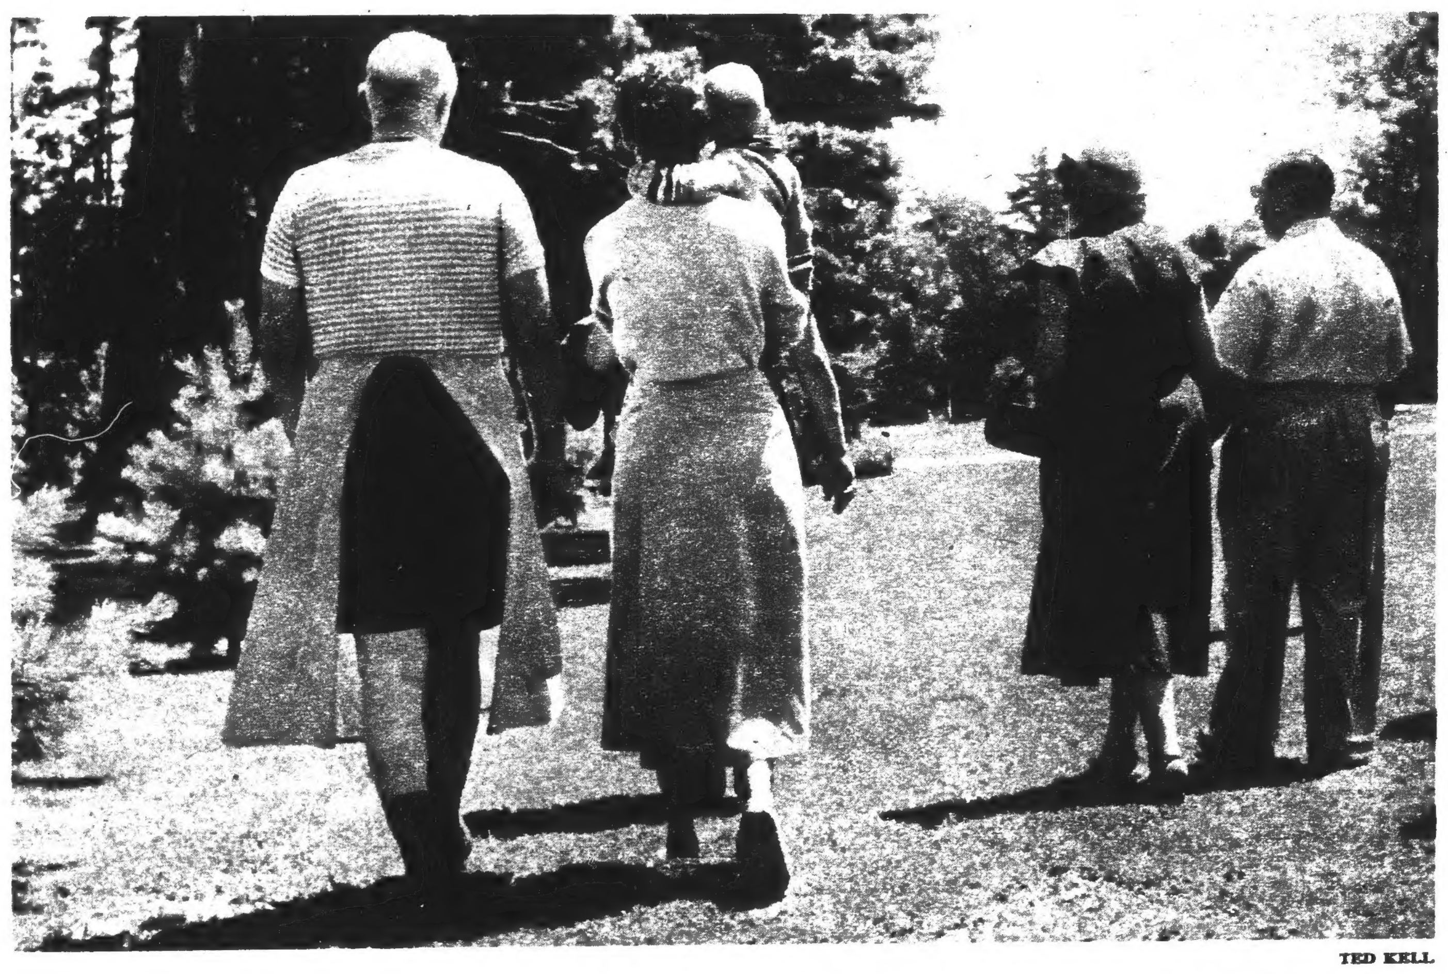
More money will be coming in later on as the Sara Mae Endichs, the Lois McCauleys and the John McCollums win increasing artistic and fiscal success in the musical world. But to turn out musicians who can amass fortunes is not the intention of Tanglewood, even though it would offer no objections.

More Than Success

"THE gospel of Tanglewood," says Boris Goldovsky, "is artistry and the cultural good of the nation. Those are big words, but they mean something. Here at Tanglewood we love success, we adore success. But we have a strong feeling that we are training some very important world workers. That was Dr. Koussevitsky's idea when he selected his faculty, and that is the idea that guides us today."

That, too, is the idea which is now traveling with 400 young men and women along the roads that lead across America from Tanglewood, as the Berkshire hills fall silent.

The End



TED KELL

SHORTS FORBIDDEN: Tanglewood supplies paper skirts for visitors — male and female

SCHOOLS

BOYS

NYMA
The School of Distinction develops your boy's mind, body, character, leadership. Graduates successful in all leading colleges. Experienced faculty; individual attention. Varsity and intramural sports; swimming pool, tennis, golf. Infantry, Cavalry, Artillery, Band. Junior School. Send for illustrated catalogue and View Book.
Established 1889 • ROTC
New York Military Academy
32 Academy Avenue
Cornwall-on-Hudson, N. Y.

Carteret
Superior College Preparation. Accredited. 1st Grade to College entrance. Small classes. Proper study habits stressed. Personal guidance. Remedial reading. Shops. Homelike dormitory. Large gym. 40 acres atop Orange Mt. Trips to N.Y. 20 miles. Moderate rate. Booklet.
CARTERET SCHOOL, Box 8, W. Orange, N. J.

McDONOGH
"Moulding Men for Useful Lives"
One of the Nation's leading prep schools. Grades 1-12. Accredited; 90% of graduates enter college. Small classes. Art, dramatics, music. Manual skills, dairy and animal husbandry. Business courses. Guidance, semi-military. Modern bldgs. and eqpt. 835 acres, 80 horses, 3 gyms. All sports. Visitors welcome. 12 miles from Baltimore. Catalog.
Robert L. Lamborn, Ed.D., Box 105, McDonogh, Md.

LA SALLE
MILITARY ACADEMY
Foremost Catholic military school under Christian Brothers. Accredited college prep. Grades 8-12. Small classes. Senior ROTC. Beautiful 160-acre campus. 70th year. 50 miles N.Y.C. Catalog.
Box F, Oakdale, L.I., N.Y.

Tilton SCHOOL
College prep for boys
Grades 7-12. Fully accredited. Graduates now in 40 colleges. 1 master to 10 boys. Extensive sports program. Friendly, homelike atmosphere. Established 1845. Moderate rate. Summer tutoring for full credit. Catalog.
J. Rolland Crompton, D. D., Hdm.
Box T, Tilton, N. H.

St. Paul's School
Garden City, L. I. Episcopal school. Boys 5th grade thru high school. Est. 1877. Small class plan, sound scholastic work. College preparation. Boarding & day depts. Sports & cultural activities. Phone GA 7-1144.
Box H, Garden City, N.Y.

MILLER SCHOOL of Albemarle
Industrial arts plus college preparation at moderate rates, made possible by endowment. Boys study auto mechanics, electricity, machine shop, woodworking while taking academic subjects. Grades 5-12. Sports. 1500 acres near Charlottesville. 75th yr. Catalog.
James W. Lapsley,
Dept. T, Miller School P.O., Va.

LANGUAGES

FRENCH • SPANISH
ITALIAN • GERMAN
ENGLISH • LEARN ANY LANGUAGE
630 Fifth Ave. (at 50th St.) Circle 6-0110
BERLITZ

PROFESSIONAL

QUALIFIED TECHNICIANS IN DEMAND
DAY AND EVENING COURSES
Next Class Oct. 1st
ST. SIMMONDS SCHOOL
FOR LABORATORY TECHNIQUE
133 East 54th Street EL 5-3688

END OF VOLUME

END OF REEL

PLEASE
REWIND